PROGRESS OF THE YEAR IN CITY AND COUNTY

A Story of Unprecedented Development, Holding Forth Every Promise of an Exceedingly Prosperous New Year.

A new era in Port Angeles, so far as the improvement of the business district and streets leading thereto is concerned, was ushered in on the 6th day of January, when the contract was awarded Lewis, Wiley & Morse, Seattle, for the regrade of Front, First, North Lincoln, and sections of cross streets lying between, and a street and railroad trestle on Railroad avenue, the whole to cost $194,229. The work included the sluicing of First and Front street hills, giving a very low grade, and the raising of streets in the business section from six to twelve feet. The work on North Lincoln meant the cutting thru of a 100-foot hill, building a concrete sewer to carry the waters of "Peabody creek," cutting Lincoln down some thirty feet, with a low grade up Third to Laurel. The contract also included the planking of business streets and Lincoln to Laurel.

Exceptional heavy rains occurred during the week, it being figured that we received a quarter of the entire amount of rainfall due us in a year; little damage was done, beyond the washing out of three old bridges in the eastern part of the county. While there was considerable anxiety over the Elwha dam, where the water rose very high, it withstood the pressure, proving that the $1,500,000 power plant just completed by the Olympic Power Co., could be depended upon by the cities and industries of the Peninsula for all time to come.

Juice from the Olympic Power Co's plant was turned on in Bremerton the 14th, following the next day with service to the navy yard, thus completing a chain of seven towns and forts supplied with Elwha light and power.

Practical completion of securing right-of-way for the Milwaukee railroad was announced at the January meeting of the Commercial Club, by Ex-President Lauridsen. $72,865 had been subscribed, in promissory notes, by the people of Port Angeles for the purchase of right-of-way in those cases where owners could not afford to give the same across their lands, and all but a few pieces had been secured. $400,000 had already been expended by Contractor Erickson in grading some thirty-five miles of road, which was ready for the steel.

The Parent-Teachers' Association was organized and constitution adopted January 12, the question of manual training and domestic science being discussed by the enthusiastic members present, the latter particularly being urged as a much needed addition to the school course.

Formal Opening of the Olympic Hotel with banquet and dance Wednesday, January 21st.

January 23rd the city decided on the extension of its electric light plant, furnishing service to all parts of the town where not absolutely impracticable. This policy has resulted in Port Angeles becoming, within the year, the best lighted town of its size on the Sound country.

FEBRUARY

County commissioners awarded Ferch & Gass contract for 1½ miles of road at $32,000, the most expensive on the Olympic peninsula. The job was almost entirely rock work, the blasting out of a shelf along the Soleduck river on the Beaver-Lake Crescent section of the new Olympic Highway. Contract was also let to McKee for the graveling of nine miles of the Highway from Morse creek east.

A Buick hose truck was ordered purchased for the Fire Department, the firemen displaying a full measure of the true Angeles spirit by volunteering to pay $500 of the total cost, $1,400.

Oil struck on the Burrows farm at Sequim was the cause of great excitement for a few days. The well, being drilled by a cooperative creamery, had reached a depth of 265 feet when a hard stratum was encountered; this was found to be twenty feet thick and when pierced the mud brought up was found impregnated with crude oil.

Opera House remodeled and seating capacity greatly increased in order to keep pace with growth of city.

Two fires started in a store building occupied by the Athletic Club gave every evidence of incendiarism.

Another fire on Front street burned out the Wolf Photo Studio and damaged the Harris stock below before being extinguished by the fire department aided by a detail from the revenue cutter Snohomish. The new hose truck having just arrived was run from the wharf to the fire, affording material aid.

Lincoln's birthday and the Birthday of New Hopes for Port Angeles celebrated by 400 Port Angeles Builders who united in expression of appreciation of work accomplished by Messrs. Aldwell of the Power Company, Earles of the Big Mill and Sol Duc Springs, and Erickson, contractor who had undertaken the building and financing of the railroad. Fitting tributes were paid by Governor Lister and Senator Troy at an afternoon meeting, and in the evening, at a banquet at the Olympic Hotel, presided over by President Julius Kirschberg, addresses were made by Messrs. Lister, Troy, Aldwell, Erickson, Cain, G. W. Morrow, McInnes, Rettling, representing the Seattle Chamber of Commerce and Pearce, secretary of the Port Angeles Commercial Club, and Mrs. E. B. Webster, as secretary of the Ladies Auxiliary to the Angeles Club. Entertainment was afforded by Asahel Curtis of Seattle, who exhibited many views of the Olympic peninsula, and by dances at the Opera House and hotel in the evening.

Ladies Auxiliary created a separate organization to handle the public library which it had established, to be hereafter known as the Port Angeles Public Library; Mesdames Willson, Webster, Hopkins, Rice, McGillivray, Thompson and Charles Filion being elected the board of trustees.

Banquet given by the Congregational Brotherhood, to their wives and lady friends, after which Mr. Lewis of the street contracting firm gave an illustrated lecture showing the way they had handled big contracts in Seattle and Portland.

Ten cars of new rails for the Milwaukee and a "Tacoma Eastern" engine were landed at the Little River Railroad dock Tuesday, the 17th. Estimated sufficient to lay about two miles of track.

Officers elected for the Trust & Savings Bank Company and the new bank opened for business the 16th.

Mrs. Madge Nailor suggested by the Olympic-Leader as a candidate for school director; her election followed as a matter of course, giving the city school district its first woman director.

Citizens National Bank compelled to put new manganese safe to handle the increasing business.

Ordinance passed directing the issuance of bonds for the Third street improvement, costing some $13,000. This new street, now completed, affords access from Tumwater to the Cannery and the Earles Mill and to Ediz Hook Spit.

Port Angeles Humane Society organized with G. M. Lauridsen, Mrs. McGillivray, Mrs. Hickok, D. W. Morse, James Stewart, A. A. Smith and Judge Cochran, trustees.

Dann Brother's commenced the construction of a two story concrete building on Peabody to be occupied by the steam laundry.

MARCH

Ninety-nine year lease to two miles of water front on Ediz Hook spit secured to the city for manufacturing sites on Monday, March 2nd, by the passage of the Falconer-Poindexter bill by the senate. The lease provides that the city shall maintain a roadway thirty feet wide the length of the spit, to be made of such material as shall be approved by the Secretary of Commerce.

One hundred buildings reported in course of construction, which would indicate a much greater development in that line than in 1913, when one hundred and twenty were built during the entire year.

Samuel Oakes, an experienced structural steel worker, plunged to his death from the Elwha bridge, the only accident occuring on that undertaking.

The Board of Commissioners let several contracts on the Olympic Highway at their March meeting. Sloan Bros. were awarded the three and half miles from the rock cut to the Fairservice contract at $14,936; Al Fairservice secured the 100-foot high bridge across Bear creek at $5,700, the most expensive wooden bridge of its size in the county because of its long haul from lumber mills; all the spikes and bolts for the structure were shipped in by parcels post. Dave Govan was given the contract to complete the slashing and grubbing of the first six miles of road west of Lake Crescent at $7,000, been done thereon.

Work commenced on the new Post Office block, a concrete building, 50 x56, two stories, being built by Chas. Morse at the corner of First and Oak.

A family of elk, bull, cow and calf, secured by Pike and Edwards a short distance above the Upper Elwha bridge for exhibition in the state building at the San Francisco exposition.

Sol Duc Hot Springs leased to a company of Seattle capitalists headed by Jacob Furth and L. Schoenfeld. A mineral water company organized with Earles, McElroy, Schubach, Furth, Chilberg and others as trustees. 100,000 cases of the water were already placed.

Announcements by the local milliners on the 6th heralded the arrival of spring.

Madison and Son start their new saw mill south of town.

Bishop & McCowan begin construction of the Motor Inn, an up-to-date garage of large size on Peabody street, near the bridge.

City hall set on fire and building partially destroyed, but no valuable papers or records lost.

Fred Farmer started his automobile supply house and garage on the 16th, the building, of sheet steel 50 x110, being located on the Laurel street wharf.

Council agreed with Mr. Morse to settle damages due to street regrade, necessitating the raising of his three story concrete building, at $6,800.

Another fire, the fourth within a few days, was discovered in the Levy building in the exact center of town and scarcely extinguished before an alarm was sent in from the old bowling alley. Circumstantial evidence tending to show that this last fire had been incendiary, it was believed the same person had been responsible for all the recent attempts to burn down the town and an arrest

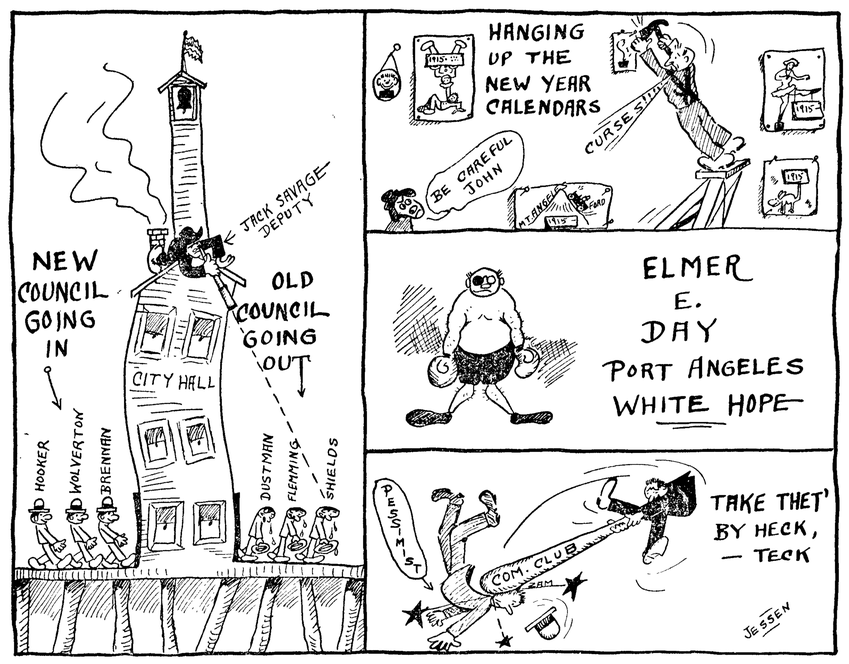
THE WEEKLY BULL—"HAPPY NEW YEAR"



BIG EAST END IMPROVEMENT

Milwaukee Officials Anxious to Have Work Started at Early Date; Bidder Guaranteed.

The big East End improvement is again to be submitted by the city council to the public for bids. This was decided at Tuesday night's meeting, attended by all members. The district petitioned council through Attorney Brumfield that this be done, guaranteeing that bidders for the work would be forthcoming. The council were convinced of this fact by a letter shown them beforehand from S. M. Earling of the Milwaukee, in which he states that the contractor, if awarded the bid for the entire work, will accept the bonds of the district in payment, and will sub-let the work, supervising the whole.

The proposed improvement as outlined in the petition calls for the clearing, grubbing and surface grading of the following streets:

Albert, Eunice, Race, Washington and Chambers, from Fifth to top of bluff on north.

Carolina, Georgiana, Second, Fourth and Fifth from Albert to Liberty.

First from Race to Liberty; Third from Albert to east city limits, necessitating bridging of White creek.

Liberty street entire length from Boulevard to water front, this to be along steeper grades than last proposition limiting yardage to 70,000, some 10,000 yards less.

Plank walks on many of the streets mainly Third and Liberty, four miles in all.

Cement walks on Francis street Fourth to "Depot" together with 1000 feet of 44-in sewer for Francis street.

The engineer stated that this was practically the former proposition with some streets added and a simplifying of the work on Liberty St. It will take considerable time to get the data in shape for bidders to figure on.

The city attorney was instructed to prepare necessary resolution of intention of construction cdb arth intention for consideration of council at next weeks' meeting.

The engineer and street superintendent submitted an estimate for the raising of the Oak street sidewalk at $350. This includes a good substantial walk commencing at grade at Oak and First, and running south at an angle of 15 degrees striking the bluff at a point eliminating the lower two bents of the Zigzag. Upon motion of Mr. Shields the clerk was directed to call for bids for the work.

Sidewalk assessments reported by street superintendent were OK'd by the street committee and the clerk directed to certify same to the treasurer for collection.

Permits were granted to Walton Lumber Company to build an office and wareroom on lot 1. block 50, and a warehouse on lot 2 to cost $1,800.

Mr. Fleming of Cemetery committee reported that Caretaker at Cemetery desired to be relieved of his job by January 10.

Mr. Dustman of special committee reported that his committee had met with Mr. Davidson of the Star Theatre and agreed on $50 damages being allowed, same to be credited on future light bills. A motion by him approving report was adopted.

City Marshal Grierson reported that he had notified all owners north of Front street in business section to extend their sewers to low water and make them sanitary.

Mr. Bishop of the Motor Inn addressed council in a communication asking that a crossing be put in at Second and Peabody, and that Peabody street be put in passable condition immediately. The crossing was granted. Engineer and street superintendent reported that planking for Peabody street had been ordered some time ago, but could not be delivered until next week sometime.

G. V. Smith was bowed in grief

G. V. Smith has bowed in grief over the crossing being put in at Second. He expressed his grief to council. He had petitioned for a cross walk at Fourth and Peabody time and again, but nary a walk did he get. He did not think the people would object to him getting a walk simply because he was city attorney. While he was yet grieving Mr. Bigelow dried his tears by moving that a crossing be also put in at Fourth. It was so ordered.

Other crossings on East Hill were ordered cleaned of mud.

Attorney T. F. Trumbull representing City Dock appeared before council and asked reason why wharfage bill of $51 balance was not paid. The bill is for lumber brought over dock and put in Eighth St. bridges. City attorney said was not a lienable bill. Upon suggestion of Mr, Trumbull was again referred to city attorney, with instructions to look up a late decision of the Supreme court, wherein money loaned contractor was held to be lienable claim.

Petitions signed by the Timber Workers Union and about 200 citizens protesting against the payment of the special police bills were read and filed. The bills were referred to the Commercial Club for payment last week, but were read upon second reading of claims by request of some one in authority and paid with the

JUDITH OF BETHULIA HERE ON TUESDAY

Tuesday, January 5th, the famous five reel story of Judith of Bethulia will be shown at the Dream Theater. This remarkable picture, taken from the book of Judith, pictures the miraculous triumph of Judith's beauty and strategy over the barbarous general of the Assyrian army. Also, among the stupendous and striking scenes of this remarkable picture is the great battle outside of the massive city walls. The admission is 5 and 10 cents.

WILL DEVELOP RESOURCES

A Storage Plant Suggests Greater Expansion in Business Lines than Any Other Industry.

Here is the remainder of the interesting communication to the Port Angeles Commercial Club from Frank M. Misner, builder of cold storage plants, now at San Bernardino, California. In the portion of the communication published in a preceeding issue Mr. Meisner gave some convincing examples of cold storage as a facility for holding produce such as butter, eggs and potatoes for the most favorable market conditions. Continuing, he says:

"My purpose in directing this communication to you is to set before you the possibilities and the benefits of a modern cold storage plant in your city or county. It is a business proposition that will greatly develop the resources of your surrounding country, and it is a business whose official records prove it to be one of the most prosperous and beneficial of all industries.

"In the foregoing I have not referred to the fish industry, one of the most important in the Northwest and one that can be handled successfully only by the aid of cold storage. Are you aware of the fact that last three years halibut crop in that part of the country amounted to thirteen million dollars? You have thousands of tons in the immediate waters and are not deriving a dollar of revenue from this source. You have no fishing fleet; what few fish are caught in that locality are marketed in the larger cities on the Sound. Freezing rooms in the plant will take care of these fish for an indefinite time and the revenue derived from this industry, if encouraged, would grow into enormous proportions, and with fisheries established a great expansion of the canning industry is sure to follow, thus adding another asset to the storage plant. In fact, a storage plant suggests a greater expansion in business lines than any other industry.

"A storage plant such as you would be justified in starting would require about 300,000 cubic feet of room space. This would accommodate approximately 150 cars of merchandise and would require an outlay of approximately $60,000. This estimate is based upon a modern fire-proof building, 100-horse power plant, to be driven by electricity or steam, and with a 75-ton refrigerating equipment and rooms properly insulated to hold the various required temperatures.

"A water supply of 100,000 gallons daily would be required to run the plant at full capacity, and you would require or employ about ten men to operate the establishment. The approximate cost of operation cannot be stated with any degree of accuracy before determining at least approximately the relative amounts of high and low temperatures that would be required. I think it best not to estimate the costs of this item, as it might be quite misleading.

"However it is very probable in your locality, with the many advantages you have for the handling of the product directly from the sources of production, the operating expense would be decidedly lower than in the larger cities. Indeed, it is safe to assume that a plant can be operated at Port Angeles far cheaper than in the larger cities of the Pacific Northwest, becuse the overhead expense could not possibly be as great, and as you seldom hear of a cold storage plant failing to declare dividends.

"If these remarks will be of interest value to you, I will feel that my time has been well spent in furthering a good cause.

"FRANK M. MEISNER."

It added much to our enjoyment of Christmas to know that a kind donor had so quickly responded to the suggestion in the Olympic-Leader of the preceding week, by giving to the old men in the county home the much wished for music machine and records.

The Yoemen will meet next Tuesday evening, January 5th, at the large I. O. O. F. Hall.

was made, effectually putting a stop to further efforts in that line.

"Opening Day" of the new Elwha bridge celebrated Saturday, March 28th. The new structure, an engineering triumph which, with its ideal approaches, practically eliminates the mighty Elwha insofar as traffic is concerned, was built by a Portland contractor at a cost of over $20,000. It is 625 feet long, including the curved trestle at the western end, or 422 feet of steel work supported by three piers, one at either end and one in the center, a steel skyscraper laid on its side across the river. The roadway, which runs along the top of the structure is 75 feet above the river bed. New approaches, one 4,900 and the other 3,500 feet in length, give an ideal grade up which an auto can spin on the high gear.

New Lake Crescent fish hatchery starts up with 300,000 Beardslee trout eggs.

Gravelling completed up east side of Morse creek and road opened for travel with the close of the month. Affording maximum grade of 5.00 to 5.85 per cent, the new road completed the greatest improvement on the old order of things that had been made between Dungeness and Port Angeles. The grade itself, put in the preceeding fall by Sloan Bros., cost, including that section of the Olympic Highway from Morse to Seibert's creek, approximately $22,000. Grading, under contract with N. O. McKee, cost another $10,000 from Morse creek to Long Prairie.

APRIL

LINCOLN HEIGHTS

Another Christmas is numbered with the past and very soon the year 1914 will be ended. How short the years seem. Christmas trees, dinners and entertainments were many on the Heights. At Ernest Harding's a beautiful tree was laden, not with costly gifts, but with those which were useful, given and received with the Christmas spirit which does not estimate values in dollars and cents. The evening was spent socially, eating fruits, nuts and candies and listening to recitations and songs by the children and instrumental music by Mrs. Hattie Harding.

Santa Claus must have had some trouble hunting his beneficiaries as he called one lady by the phone near midnight to assist him in locating a family.

The family dinners were too numerous to mention all, therefore, will only say that we feel sure everyone was well provided for.

Mr. Peter secured a job at Chehalis and his family went to that place last Saturday.

Mrs. Godfrey has recovered and her sister, who was with her, returned home Monday.

Mrs. Ketzenberg is getting along nicely.

A little boy arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Krouse last week to gladden their hearts.

Mr. Bean erected a fine tent on Mr. Faherty's lot where his family will live while he is absent at work.

Mrs. Kerrihardt spent Xmas with the Harding's and Fleming's.

Miss Mabel Jackson of Blue Mountain, spent Xmas with her cousin, Mrs. Opher Meredith and now is at Eden Valley visiting with her uncle Ansel Jackson and family.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Fleming and daughter visited relatives at Mount Pleasant from Sunday until Tuesday.

On and after the 10th of October, we will sell wood only when paid for cash on delivery. E. N. Eagle.

NEWS OF THE COUNTY

ELWHA

Thursday, December 24.

The "Priscilla Circle" met last Saturday at the home of Mrs. Thos. Lauridsen. The afternoon was spent in making candy bags and preparing for the Christmas entertainment.

Mrs. Culverwell and daughter Elenora spent several weeks visiting friends in Seattle. They returned home Saturday.

Rev. Weaver of Seattle, has been visiting the country districts in this county and organizing Sunday schools. A Sunday school was organized at Elwha with Mr. A. R. Smith as superintendent, Mrs. Thos. Lauridsen, assistant superintendent, Mrs. E. R. MacNamarra, secretary, Mr. H. S. Hansen, treasurer, Miss Goldie MacNamarra, organist.

Mr. H. B. Herrick spent last week in Seattle.

Alice Coleman spent Wednesday and Thursday with Port Angeles folks.

A Christmas program and entertainment was given at the school house last Tuesday evening. The program consisted of: Invocation, Rev. Weaver; Song, "Joy to the World," all. Song, "Happy Greetings," school. Exercise, "Christmas Greeting," Henry Hansen, Mildred Lauridsen, Oscar Hansen. Dialogue, "Just Like Papa," Reggie Smith, Wilda Lauridsen, Aggie Smith. Christmas Acrostic, School. Recitation, "Christmas," Mildred Hansen. Song, "Jolly Old Saint Nicholas," school. Recitation, "A Present for Mamma," Carl Hansen. Duet, "Beautiful Christmas Eve," Miss Coleman, Mrs. MacNamarra. Recitation, "The Marriage of Santa Claus," Floyd Anderson. Song, "Evening Hymn," school. Play, "King of the Holidays," school.

Ralph Davis, Antone Smith, Herbert Wood, and Irene Wood were out Tuesday evening to the entertainment. Ralph came out to see the Christmas tree and Santa Claus.

Dorothy Coventon and Marie Broughton visited friends at Elwha during Christmas week.

Thursday, December 24.

Do not imagine because there are no items that we are asleep. Every one seems to be busy. Your correspondent has been absent a few weeks.

Our carpenter, Chas. Lewis, has built two fine looking hen-houses, one for Frank Broughton, and one for Henry Maybe.

Mr. King is kept busy hauling wood to town and bringing back hay, feed and provisions for the neighbors.

Mrs. Charley Lewis returned on Tuesday from a few days stay in Port Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson and mother, Mrs. J. E. Campbell, have returned to the ranch after an extended stay in Angeles.

Nat Broughton came home Saturday from the Dungeness logging camp, for a two week's vacation.

Jeannette Broughton returned home on Thursday from Seattle, for the holiday vacation.

We are about to realize a long felt desire and crying need; Sequim people are talking of circulating a petition for a R. F. D. route thru here.

Jilson White and sister made a flying visit at Geo. F. King's.

MT. PLEASANT.

Mr. Milfred Eacrett and family left Wednesday to spend a week or ten days with relatives in Eden Valley and Dry Creek.

Glenn Westbrook and daughter of Mt. Vernon arrived Thursday in Mt. Pleasant to visit old acquaintances. Mr. Holbrook returned home Sunday, leaving his daughter with Mrs. Lee.

Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Fleming and daughter arrived at the home of Mr. Hall Sunday and visited until Tuesday, leaving their daughter Helen to visit a few days longer.

Mrs. Copoto, who spent a few days with her sons and daughters in the city, returned home Sunday accompanied by her daughter from Raymond, Wash.

Guy McLaughlin and wife arrived Sunday to spend a week visiting at the McLaughlin ranch. Mrs. Mullen, formerly Miss Theo. McLaughlin, accompanied by her husband, arrived Friday to spend the week at the McLaughlin ranch also, together making a very merry party. Mr. and Mrs. Mullen were married November 25, 1914, at Mt. Vernon, and did not announce it to their many friends until they came home at Christmas. The young folks of the neighborhood gave the two newly wed couples a royal serenade and were invited into the house, where games were enjoyed for a while and refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs. McLaughlin will be at home to their many friends at 2701 Madrona St., Bellingham, where Mr. Mullen has a lovely new home built for his bride.

Mrs. Hall and daughter visited in Angeles from Thursday until Saturday.

Mrs. Minnie Sutherland and two daughters visited a few days at the home of her mother, Mrs. Dietsch.

Miss Josie Vitale is visiting a few days with her cousin Nellie Boyd.

Mrs. Harris and son, who were visiting a few days at the Burns' ranch, returned home Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lundgren and children visited a few days at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harrington.

Written for last week.

Mrs. Albert Draper came out to the ranch Thursday to care for Mr. Draper, who has been quite sick, returning to town Sunday, accompanied by Mr. Draper. Sam is spending his Christmas vacation on the ranch during his fathers convalesence.

Mr. A. H. Hall went to Angeles last Wednesday to assist in doing some carpenter work.

Arthur Glass received quite a gash on his knee while slashing for Mr. J. C. Harlow, consequently is laid up for awhile.

Milford Eacrett enjoyed a visit from his mother and aunt, Mrs. Lizzie Bull, for a few days last week; they returned to Angeles Sunday.

Mrs. Partridge arrived from Everett Saturday morning to visit her daughter, returning home Sunday afternoon, accompanied by her daughter, who will visit at home for three weeks.

Mrs. Lettie Race of Vancouver, arrived in Mt. Pleasant Monday and will visit with her many friends in this vicinity; she is making her headquarters with Mrs. Stevens.

Mr. Arthur Cook of Vancouver, made a short visit to Mt. Pleasant Monday.

The entertainment in the school house by the school children was a decided success. The house was nicely decorated with evergreens, flags, and crepe paper. Each child was treated to a bag of candy, nuts and oranges. A pretty Christmas tree stood in one corner, on which was a present for each child. After the program the floor was cleared and dancing was enjoyed by the older ones for several hours.

Tony Krajewski killed a bear Saturday, having fell into a hole near the bear den and woke the old fellow up.

Chas. Watts, who was visiting his brother for a few days, returned to his home Thursday.

Wm. Smith is going over to Victoria Sunday to see his old friend, John McDonald, who has undergone a number of serious operations, under Dr. Jones. We hope that Mr. McDonald will soon be able to return to his home strong and well.

The Misses Grace and Lucetta MacKechnie leave Saturday for Bremerton, where they both teach school. Miss Tirzah also leaves for her return trip to Dakota. Ross goes to resume his work at the U, and Miss Abbie to spend the week-end with them in Seattle. It has been a happy family reunion, all the children being home for Christmas.

The merchants and banks are all sending out such beautiful calendars this year that we cannot speak of them all, but must say a word about the beauty Al Fairservice, the Clallam merchant, has sent to his many friends and patrons. It is a water color about 18x20 and pictures a beautiful woman and her little babe just taken up from its cradle. Mr. Fairservice has become known all over the county by the unusually handsome calendars he sends out each year. The Olympic-Leader extends thanks for theirs.

Mrs. Hilda Bey, one of the early pioneers of Port Angeles and a native of Denmark, passed away at her home on the corner of Fifth and Francis street Sunday night, December 27, at the age of 62. Deceased had been a long patient sufferer from tuberculosis, but finally had to give up the fight. She leaves to mourn her death a husband and two children. The son Fred Bey, lives at Vancouver, B. C. and the daughter, Mrs. O. J. Steadman, lives at Bremerton and arrived Monday morning shortly after her mother died. Funeral services were conducted by Mr. Fulmer at the chapel of the undertaking parlors, Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock. Mrs. Bey was an intelligent woman, and a kind and gentle neighbor and friend as well as a devoted wife and mother and will be sadly missed in the home.

NEWS FROM THE CAPITOL

Olympia, Wash., Jan. 1.—Governor Ernest Lister is hard at work upon his forthcoming message to the Fourteenth Washington legislature, which convenes here January 11, 1915. The necessity for economy in public expenditures, not only by the state, but by counties, municipalities and school districts, is expected to be one of the dominant notes of the governor's address.

Since legislative leaders are all pledged to an economical program, it is the hope of Governor Lister that he will not be forced to use the veto power to curb legislative extravagance, as was the case two years ago. From present indications the coming session will start with harmony between the legislature and the governor, a condition that promises to continue if the economy pledges of the legislature are kept.

The total appropriations asked for the state institutions by the board of control are considerably less than the amounts appropriated two years ago, in spite of increasing populations at all institutions. Sufficient money will be required, however, to give moderate comforts to the state's 6,000 wards, and in this connection it is pointed out that appropriations do not necessarily mean expenditures, under this administration.

Departments and institutions under the governor will turn back at the end of the present biennium unused balances of from $450,000 to $500,000. If similar savings can be made from the amounts appropriated for the institutions during the next biennium, it is Governor Lister's promise that these savings will be made and the additional money returned to the state treasury.

The advisory board of the state department of agriculture met here this week with leading orchardists to decide to upon proposed changes in the horticultural laws, designed to give the state more power in dealing with epidemics such as fire blight.

Seven girls, found working in two Walla Walla stores at less than the minimum wage rates, received back pay totalling $204 for the difference between the wages received by them and the legal minimum since the minimum became effective, as the result of action taken by Labor Commissioner E. W. Olson last week. Following discovery of this violation Mr. Olson announced that future violators might expect to be prosecuted under the penal provisions of the minimum wage law.

Up to the present time the labor department had not pressed criminal charges against employers but has insisted that they recompense the girls in full for back wages. By this time, however, all employers should have informed themselves of all provisions of the law, Mr. Olson states, announcing his intention of enforcing the criminal provisions.

By order of the public service commission interurban rates between Seattle and Everett must be reduced to two cents a mile. The Pacific Northwest Traction company, the commission found as the result of recent hearings and valuation proceedings, is now making a trifle more than thirteen per cent. profit on the fair value of the Everett-Seattle line, the valuation being placed at $1,150,000.

Governor Lister's first aid commission is meeting here this week to reach final agreement on the terms of the medical attendance amendment to the compensation act, to be presented to he coming legislature. Employers who were members of the commission contended at first that employes should be assessed to pay the entire cost of medical attendance, since employers bore the entire cost of pensions and time loss. The members of the industrial insurance commission lined up with the labor representatives on the first aid commission in opposition to this proposal, however, and the entire commission, by a vote of seven to two, finally declared for a division of medical attendance cost between employer and employe.

Minimum wage rates in office work have been fixed by the industrial welfare commission, to become effective February 20, 1915, as follows:

Women and girls 18 years of age and over, $10 per week.

Girls or boys, aged 16 or 17, $7.50 per week.

Girls or boys, under 16, $6 per week.

Governor Lister has announced the appointment of Bert Linn of Prosser as superior judge of the district comprising Adams, Franklin and Benton counties, to succeed Judge O. R. Holcomb when the latter becomes a member of the supreme bench January 11. Mr. Linn is one of the leading attorneys of this district, has practiced law at Prosser since 1905 and for three years previously at Ritzville.

The pen of which President Benjamin Harrison twenty-five years ago signed the proclamation admitting Washington to statehood has been received by Governor Lister, on behalf of the state, from Mrs. John L. Wilson, and placed among other historical relics in the exhibit case in the capitol.

Several of the state departments have moved into smaller quarters to provide additional room for the legislature for committee meetings during the coming session.

The state of Washington is approximately $1,000,000 better off at the end of this year than was the case one year ago, having a balance of bout $400,000 in the general fund in place of an overdraft of $600,000.

SEE WASHINGTON CAMPAIGN

Bright Possibilities Offered by the "Last Big" Exposition, at San Francisco.

To the Citizens of Washington:

The last "best" chance for the proper exploitation of "See Washington" is presented for acceptance and it would be a short-sighted policy to neglect the golden opportunity.

The magnificent Panama-Pacific Exposition will not only be ready on ime but will prove a revelation to the world-at-large and, more particularly, it will open the eyes of Americans living east of the Rockies to the wonderful country lying along the Pacific. This applies with especial force to the state of Washington.

A relief map, constructed on the cycloramic plan, is being prepared, showing the whole state. Its valleys and hills; its lakes and rivers; its primeval forests and barren sagebrush; its wheat fields and orchards; a farm in its making and the finished task of bringing it into productive use; its grazing lands and dairy plants; its glorious mountains, more beautiful and picturesque than the Swiss Alps; its "Inland Empire" and great inland sea; its cities and towns of magic growth, which, in a score of years, have sprung from little trading posts to places of world-wide importance. Let the eye see and the brain must comprehend and the heart yearn for.

This display will be made in the transportation building at the exposition, showing the automatically moving trains over the railway trackage and automobiles over the superb highway system. The result must be of inestimable value to our state for it will create and stimulate a desire on the part of all beholders to see in actuality that which is thus shown them in miniature imitation.

A comprehensive lecture is to be delivered on the resources, opportunities and beauties of the state; its famous educational facilities; its perfect fitness for home-making and the establishment of business enterprises. Literature, descriptive of every locality, will be intelligently distributed by the State Bureau of Statistics and Immigration, and every honest effort made to turn the tide of travel northward through Washingon.

There is, in immediate prospect, the construction of the Washington Highway which will furnish an all winter route for motor vehicles between the "Evergreen State," across Oregon to the heart of California, practically along the ocean for the whole distance.

The Washington State Fair Commission will assist in every particular in this wholesome, truthful exploitation and the good results which will accrue from a campaign of this character are beyond computation.

A commissioner has been appointed, by the Exposition Association, for the purpose of interesting the commercial organizations as well as corporations and individuals thruout the state. I hope all will see the importance and feasibility of this plan and aid in every possible way in making it a success. When you are helping your state you are helping yourself.

Very respectfully yours,
I. M. HOWELL,
Secretary of State.

A GREAT GAIN

Banks are rapidly retiring—or have already retired—the clearing-house loan certificates issued in August, and in all probability we have seen the last of that unique American device for meeting a financial crisis.

Heretofore every sharp shock to confidence has put a deadlock on bank credit. Now every bank with sound assets in the form of commercial paper can always convert those assets into currency by rediscounting the paper at a Federal reserve bank; so no solvent bank need fear a sudden drain on its cash. No sound merchant need fear that he will be unable to borrow for his actual needs, because his paper is always convertible into money.

This is a great gain for the country. No credit system can be panic-proof, as Europe discovered when this war-earthquake happened; but against a collapse of credit from any such causes as those of 1893 or 1907 we should now be secure—which is worth more to the nation than all the battleships that have ever been constructed.—Saturday Post.

BAIT MISERS

(A frivolous poem with a serious moral.)

I used to go a-fishing, with a chap 'twas always wishing, that with one small, anemic worm he'd catch a bully string. He'd let one slender wriggler act as his chief inveigler, 'till it was soaked so thin and small you couldn't see a thing.

We other boys beside him, would bullyrag and chide him, and pack our hooks as full of worms as ever they would stick. While we went home well laden, with fish, he'd be upbraidin', and growling 'round about his luck—he'd even cuss the "crick."

That fellow's now in trade, and the record he has made, recalls the saw that says, "The boy is father to the man." He tries to see how small he can make his ad to call the public's loose attention—and he's just where he began!

Perhaps he'll never know, that when times and streams are low, and trade and fish are scarce, he can't afford, hook-bare, to wait! For folks are fond of dealing, where ads are most appealing, and seldom with the miser who is stingy with his bait.—Judge.

CHAPTER XL.

The Man in the Shadow.

Two hundred feet, if one, Hopi Jim fell from the lip of the cliff. Then suddenly the thing that had been Hopi Jim Slade was checked in its headlong descent by the outstanding trunk of a tree, over which it remained, doubled up, limp, horrible . . .

The miniature landslide that had been caused by his fall went on, settling gradually as the slope became less sheer. Only part of it, a double handful of pebbles, gained the bottom of the canyon.

Its muffled impact on the ground round his feet roused the man who had compassed the bandit's death from the pose he had unconsciously assumed on the instant of firing.

He stepped back, and snatched up a case containing binoculars.

Not before the glasses were adjusted to his vision did he find time to respond absently to the alarmed and insistent inquiries of his two companions, a man of his own age and a girl of some years less, who had been wakened from their sleep by the report of the rifle.

Now the latter plucked his sleeve, momentarily deflecting the glasses from the object which they were following so sedulously as it moved along the heights; a wildly running horse with a woman bound helpless upon its back, both sharply in silhouette against the burning blue.

"Alan!" the girl demanded, "what is it? Why did you fire? Why won't you answer me? What is it?"

"Judith," Alan replied tersely, again picking up with the glasses the runaway horse that fled so madly along the perilous and narrow track of the hill trail.

The name was echoed from two throats as Alan swung sharply and thrust the glasses into the hands of the girl.

"Judith," he affirmed with a look of poignant solicitude. "She's roped to the back of that crazy broncho—helpless! See for yourself; one false step—suppose a stone turns beneath its hoof—she'll be killed!"

While the girl focused her glasses upon that speck that flew against the sky Alan turned to the two horses hobbled near by and seizing a saddle threw it over the back of one.

At this the other man turned to his side and dropping a detaining hand upon his arm asked:

"What are you going to do?"

Alan shook the hand off and went on with his self-appointed task.

"Go after her, Tom, of course," he replied. "What else? That animal is crazy, I tell you—"

"Even so," Tom Barcus argued, "you can't climb that hillside on horseback—and if you could, you'd be too late to catch up, much less prevent an accident—"

"I know it. But suppose it doesn't fall . . . You know what's beyond these hills—deserts! And the girl is helpless, I tell you, bound hand and foot. Think of her being carried that way—all day, perhaps—face up to this brutal sun! She'll go mad if something isn't done—"

"You've gone mad yourself already," Mr. Barcus contended darkly. "What's it to you if she does? Suppose you do succeed in rescuing her: what then? As soon as she gets on her pins she'll try to stick a knife into you—like as not What's she been chasing you for, all over this land of the brave and home of the free, but to take your fool life? And now you want to sacrifice yourself to her, out of sheer, downright foolishness in the head! I suppose you'll like me to call it chivalry: I'll tell you what I call it—lunacy!"

"Don't be an ass!" Alan responded temperately, gathering the reins together and instinctively lifting a foot to the stirrup. "Who warned us yesterday in time to prevent our being crushed by that rock? Judith! Why was she separated from Marrophat and the others—alone up there when that beast sneaked up behind her—O, I saw him—I saw it all—and grabbed her and roped her to that broncho—if it wasn't because she had broken with them for good and all and started to fight on our side?"

"You're raving," Barcus commented in a hopeless tone. He looked to the girl. "Rose—Miss Trine—reason with this madman—"

Dropping the glasses, the girl came swiftly and confidently to her lover's side, lifting her lips to his.

"Go, sweetheart!" she told him. "Save her if you can!"

With a look of triumph for the benefit of Mr. Barcus Alan Law gathered Rose Trine into his arms.

"Did you dream for an instant Rose would see her own sister carried to her death if anything could be done to avert it—no matter what we may have suffered at Judith's hands?"

With an indignant grunt, but considerate none the less, Mr. Barcus caught up the glasses and turned his back. . . .

"Go on!" he grumbled, pretending to ignore the hand Alan offered him from the saddle. "I've got no patience with you . . . But go!" he insisted, of a sudden seizing the hand and pressing it fervently. "And God go with you, my friend!"

Then hoofbeats drumming on the hard-packed earth of the canyon trail struck a hundred echoes from its rugged, rocky walls.

Mr. Barcus showed Rose Trine a face almost ludicrous with its anguished smile that was intended to seem reassuring.

"Let's look sharp and follow him as quick as may be," he urged. "Lightning will never strike us so long as we stick to Mr. Law of the charmed life—but I don't mind telling you, once out of his company, I'm just naturally afraid of the dark!"

CHAPTER XLI.

The Trail of Flying Hoof-Prints.

In the still air of that young day the chill of night lingered stubbornly—and would until the shadow of the eastern rampart had crept slowly down the canyon's western wall, telescoped upon itself and vanished, letting in the sun to make the place a pit of torment and of burning.

Refreshed from rest and exhilarated by this grateful coolness, his horse responded willingly to the first light touch of Alan's spur. In a twinkling the overnight camp dropped from view behind the rounded shoulder of a hillside, mesquite-cloaked.

Then from its first spirited flight the horse settled down to steady going, lengthened its stride, and ran for leagues with the long, apparently effortless and tireless lope of the plains-bred broncho, ventre-à-terre.

Alan's departure from camp had anticipated by a round quarter-hour the appearance on the upper trail of friends of the slain bandit, to the number of four or five, who had both discovered and recovered his body, called his death murder and pledged themselves to its avengement—laying responsibility for the putative crime at the door of the man and woman to be seen in the canyon, immediately below the scene of Hopi Jim's fall.

Between the moment when discovery of the men on the ridge trail interrupted their simple and hurried breakfast and that which found Rose and Barcus mounted on the back of their own horse and making the best of their way down the canyon in pursuit of Alan, but little time had elapsed.

And even with its double burden, their horse made better time upon the broad lower level than those who followed the ridge trail. By mid-morning, when they approached the foothills that ran down to the desert, the pursuit was more than a mile in the rear and shut off to boot by a monolithic hill, while Alan was many a weary mile in advance.

He sat upon his horse, just then, at standstill upon the summit of a rounded knoll, the Painted hills lifting up behind him, the desert before unfolding like a map—but like a map all blurred.

Only in the near foreground was anything definite to be distinguished in the aspect of that sunbitten waste—bleached earth patterned in almost orderly arrangement by sagebrush and gnarled cacti. At the distance of half a mile all blended into one vast plain of glaring gray that stretched over the round of the world to a broken wall of purple hills that reeled drunkenly in the haze-veiled southwest.

Was Judith out there, somewhere, lost, defenseless, forlorn, impotent to lift a hand to shield her face from the blast of that savage sun?

Staring beneath a shading hand, he discerned nothing that moved upon the surface of the desert but its myriad heat-devils jigging monotonously their infernal danse macabre.

Or—as seemed more probable—was she back there among the Painted hills, lying still and lifeless, crushed beneath the weight of that fallen horse?

No rest for Alan till he knew . . .

Descending the knoll he reined his lagging mount back into the trail, following its winding course through the foothills and round the base of that monolithic mountain toward the junction with the ridge trail, miles away.

It approached the hour of noon before he gained the point where the two trails joined and struck out across the desert. And here he discovered what he thought indisputable indication that the fright of Judith's horse had persisted.

Abandoning immediately all notion of returning through the hills by the ridge-trail, he turned and swung away at the best pace he could spur from his broncho, delivering himself into the pitiless embrace of that implacable wilderness of sun and sand.

At long intervals he would check the broncho and, reeling in his saddle, endeavor to sweep the desert with his binoculars.

And toward the middle of the afternoon he fancied that something rewarded one such effort; something for an instant swam athwart the field of the glasses: something that seemed to move like a weary horse with a human figure bound to its back.

But now the phenomena were discernible which, had he been more desert wise, would have made him pause and think before he ventured farther from those hills, already beyond reach as they were.

His first appreciated warning came when the surface of the desert seemed to lift and shake like the top of a canvas tent in a gale. At the same time a mighty gust of wind swept athwart the waste, hot as a furnace-blast. In a trice dust enveloped man and horse, a stifling cloud of superheated particles that stung the flesh like a myriad needles. And then darkness fell, the twilight of hades, a copper-colored pall. Nothing remained visible beyond arm's length.

Blinded, half suffocated, unspeakably dismayed and bewildered, the broncho swung round, back to the blast, and refused to budge another inch.

Himself more than half-dazed, but still hounded by his nightmare vision of Judith, Alan dismounted to escape being torn bodily from the saddle by that hellish sand-blast, and seizing the bridle sought to draw the horse on with him.

He wasted his strength in that endeavor: the animal balked, planted its hoofs deep in the sand, stiffened its legs and resisted with the stubbornness of a rock; then, of a sudden, jerked his head smartly, snapped the bridle from his grasp and flung away, scudding before the storm.

Pursuit was out of the question: indeed, the bridle was barely torn from his hand before Alan lost sight of the broncho.

For a moment he stood rooted in consternation as in a bog—with an arm upthrown across his face.

Then the thought of Judith recurred. . . .

Head bended and shoulders rounded, he began to forge a way into the teeth of the sandstorm.

How long he fought on, pitting his strength against the elements, cannot be reckoned.

In the end he stumbled blindly down a slight decline and was abruptly conscious that he had in some way found shelter from the full force of the wind.

He staggered on another yard or two, breathing more freely, and blundered into a rough-ribbed wall of rock—some sporadic outcrop, he understood, whose bulk stood between him and the storm.

He thought to rest for a time, until the storm had spent its greatest strength; but as he laid his shoulder gratefully against the rock and scrubbed the dust from his smarting eyes he saw what he at first conceived to be a hallucination: Judith Trine standing within a yard of him, alive, strong, free.

He stared incredulously, saw her recognize him, open her mouth to utter a wondering cry that was inaudible, and come quickly nearer.

"Alan! You came for me! You followed me, through all this!"

He threw off her hand with a bitter laugh—that was like the croaking of a raven as it issued from his bone-dry throat—and in momentary possession of hysteric madness, reeled away from the woman and the shelter of the rock and delivered himself anew to the mercy of the dust-storm.

CHAPTER XLII.

Open Mutiny.

Though she had been schooled to hold the very name of Law in loathing unspeakable and to think of Alan as a mortal enemy and as one whose death alone could properly requite the cruel injury that had been done her father; and though the man himself had laughed to scorn her first involuntary confession of that love for him which now consumed her being with its insatiable fires, she swallowed her chagrin and followed him with the solicitude of one whose love can recognize no wrong in its object. Through all the remainder of that day of terror she was never far from his side.

With the meekness of the strong, she made herself his shadow. And she was now the stronger, for she had had more than an hour's rest beside the waterhole, which he had missed on the way of that rocky windbreak. Sooner or later his strength must fail him and he would need her; till then she was content to bide her hour.

It befell presently in startling fashion; she was not a yard behind him when he vanished abruptly.

But the next moment Judith herself was trembling on the crumbling brink of an arroyo of depth and width indeterminable in the obscurity of the duststorm. Down this, evidently, Alan had fallen in his dizzy blindness.

She found him insensible, lying with an arm bent under him in a pose frightfully suggestive of dislocation. Yet when she turned him on his back and released the arm, he made no sign to indicate that the movement had caused him the slightest pain.

There was a slight cut upon his brow, a bruise about his left temple. She tore linen from her bosom, beneath her coarse flannel shirt, and with sparing aid from the canteen, washed the cut clean and bandaged it.

Then seeing that the storm held with fury unabated, she rose, reconnoitered and returned to exert all her strength and drag the unconscious man across the dry bed of that ancient water-course and under the lee of its farther bank.

There, sitting, she pillowed his head upon her lap, and bending over him made her body an additional shelter to him from the swirling clouds of dust.

And for hours on end Judith nursed him there, scarce daring to move save to minister to his needs, bathing his fevered brow and moistening his parched lips and throat.

In the course of the first hour she was once startled by the spectral vision through the driving sheets of dust of a horse that plodded up the arroyo, bearing two riders on its back.

Weary with the weight of its double burden, it went slowly and passed so near to Judith that she was able to recognize the features of her sister and Tom Barcus.

Be sure she made never a sign to catch their attention.

Within the next succeeding hour the coppery light lost something of its hot brillance, took on a darker shade, and then one darker still. Twilight stole athwart the desert, turning its heat to chill, its light to violet.

Growing more intense, the cold eventually roused the sleeping man.

And hardly had his eyes unclosed and looked up into the eyes of Judith bending over him than he started up and out of her embrace, got unsteadily upon his feet and after a moment of pause, watching her rise in turn, strode away—or, rather, staggered—with the gesture of exorcism.

Uncomplaining, hugging her newborn humility to her with the ecstasy of the anchorite his horse-hair shirt, Judith followed him patiently, at a little distance.

Not far from where he had rested there was a break in the overhanging wall of the arroyo. Through this he scrambled painfully, reaching the level of the desert only after cruel effort, the unheeded woman at his heels.

A brief pause there afforded both time to regain their breath and survey the desert for signs of assistance: it offered none, other than what they might accomplish through their own exertions. For leagues in any quarter it stretched without a break other than the black cleft of the arroyo, gleaming a bleached and deathly white in the moonshine—like the face of a frozen world.

With tacit consent both turned that way, Alan leading, Judith his pertinacious shadow, with never a word or sign between them to prove that either was aware of the other's company.

But this was a state of affairs that could not long endure. Judith had the price to pay for her own trials, suffering and privation: the strain began to tell sorely upon her. She reeled slightly as she walked, weaving a winding trail across and across the straighter line of footprints that marked Alan's course through the ordered pattern of the powdered sagebrush.

And of a sudden she collapsed.

Instinct alone made Alan glance over-shoulder: for she had made no sound whatever.

He turned and came directly back to her, knelt beside her, lifted her head, pillowed it gently on his arm and plied her in turn with the dregs of the canteen.

With a sigh, a stifled moan and a little shiver, she revived.

He helped her gently to regain her feet, passed an arm round her.

In this fashion they struggled on in strange, dumb companionship of misery and wonder.

Thus an hour passed; and for all their desperate struggles neither could see that the light on the mountainside was a yard the nearer.

Behind them other lights appeared, two staring yellow eyes that peered up over the horizon, seemed to pause a time in search of the two, then leaped out directly toward them.

Of this they were altogether ignorant; and when a deep, droning sound disturbed the desert silence, like the purring of some gigantic cat, both ascribed it to the drumming of their laboring pulses.

The two lights were not a mile behind them when, silently, without a sign to warn the girl, Alan released her, took a step apart and dropped as if shot.

Instantly she was kneeling by his side. But in the act of bending over him she drew back and remained for several moments motionless, staring at those twin glaring eyes, sweeping down upon them with all the speed attainable by a six-cylinder touring car negotiating a trackless desert.

When Judith did move it was not to comfort Alan. On the contrary, her first act was to draw from her pocket a heavy, blunt-nosed revolver, break it at the breech and blow its barrel clear of dust. Her hand went next to the holster on Alan's hip. From this she extracted his Colt's .45, treating it as she had the other. Then she crouched low above the man she loved, as if thinking perhaps to escape notice from the occupants of the motorcar.

If that were her thought, it was bred of an idle hope. Alan had chosen to fall in the middle of a wide space so arid that not even sagebrush had ventured to take root there. When the glare of the headlights fell upon them it was inevitable that discovery should follow. The motor car stopped within twenty feet. Three men jumped out and ran toward the pair, leaving two in the car—the chauffeur and one who occupied a corner of the rear seat: an aged man with the face of a damned soul, doomed for a little time to live upon this earth in the certain knowledge of his damnation.

As this happened, Judith Trine leaned to her feet and stood over the body of Alan, a revolver poised in either hand.

"Halt!" she ordered imperatively. "Hands up!"

The three who had alighted obeyed without a moment's hesitation; her father's creatures, they knew the daughter's temper far too well to dream of opposing her will.

In the six hands that were silhouetted against the headlights' radiance, three revolvers glimmered; but at her command all three dropped harmlessly to the earth.

Then, sharply, "Stand back two paces!" she required.

They humored her unanimously.

Darting forward, she picked up and pocketed the three weapons, then with one of her own singled out the men she named.

"Now, Marrophat—and you, Hicks—pick Mr. Law up and carry him into the car. And treat him gently, mind! If one of you lifts a finger to harm him, that one shall answer to me."

Still none ventured to dispute her. The two men designated, without a sign of disinclination, stepped forward. One lifted Alan Law by the shoulders; the other took the legs. Between them they bore him with every care toward the motor car.

But now a second will manifested itself. The man in the rear seat lifted up a weirdly sonorous voice:

"Stop!" he cried. "Stop this nonsense! Drop that man! Judith, I command you—"

"Be silent!" the girl cut in sharply. "I command here—if it's necessary to tell you."

There was a pause of astonishment. Then the old man broke out in exasperation that threatened to wax into fury: "Judith! What do you mean by this? Has it indeed come to this that my own daughter defies me to my face?"

"Apparently!" she shot back, with a short laugh. "Judge for yourself!"

"Have you forgotten your vow to me?"

"No. But I take it back and cancel it: that is my privilege, I believe. . . . Silence!" she stormed as he strove to gainsay her. "Silence—do you hear?—or it will be the worse for you!"

As well command the sea to still its voice: her father raged like a madman that he was, for the time being divested of his habitual mask of frigid heartlessness.

And seeing that there was no other way of quieting him, the girl turned to the third man.

"Now Jimmy!" she said crisply. "Into that car—and be quick about it—and gag him!"

"If you do," her father foamed, "I'll have your life—"

A flourish of her weapons gained instant obedience.

She stepped up on the running board and shot a quick, searching glance at the face of the chauffeur.

"Straight ahead, my man!" she said. "Make for the nearest pass through those hills yonder, and don't delay unless you are anxious for trouble. Off you go!"

The car began to move. She swept the three men in the desert a mocking bow, jumped into the body of the car and slammed the door.

They made no effort to plead their cause and secure passage even as far as the edge of the desert; doubtless they knew too well the futility of that, she thought, as she settled back in a seat, chuckling with the memory of those three masks of dismay unmitigated.

It was not until five minutes later, when she straightened up from making Alan comfortable that she realized what had made them so content to abide by her will.

Then she heard their voices lifted together in a long, shrill howl that was quickly answered by fainter yells from a distant quarter of the desert, then by pistols popping and flashing some two miles away, then by a growing rumble of galloping hoofs.

The night glasses in the car afforded her flashes of a body of several horsemen—some six or seven, she judged—making at top speed toward the spot where Marrophat, Hicks and Jimmy waited beside a beacon which they had built and lighted.

Half a dozen sentences exchanged with the chauffeur advised her that these were horsemen from the town of Mesa who had charged themselves with the duty of avenging the death of Hopi Jim Slade.

A sardonic chuckle from within Trine's gag goaded the girl into a sullen fury.

Exacting his utmost speed from the chauffeur, under penalty of her displeasure, she set herself to revive Alan.

With the aid of such stores of food and drink as the car carried, this was quickly enough accomplished.

Strangling with an overdose of brandy too little diluted with water, Alan sat up, grasped the conditions in a flash, and gained further information as he devoured sandwiches and emptied a canteen.

The mountain pass was now, he judged, a mile distant. The light on the hillside, according to the chauffeur, was that of a prospector who had camped there temporarily. There was nothing, then, to be feared from that quarter, but solely from the rear—where the horsemen, having picked up Marrophat and his companions, had instituted hot pursuit, and were now strung out in a long, straggling line, three horses carrying double the farthermost—perhaps a mile and a half away—one with a single rider the nearest, well within three-quarters of a mile.

Nobly mounted, this last came on like the wind, gaining on the motor car with every stride; for his horse was trained to such going, whereas the car at best could only labor heavily in dust and sand.

None the less, it had won to a point within a quarter of a mile from the pass before the horseman got within what he esteemed the proper range, and opened fire.

He fired thrice. His first shot winged wide, his second by ill-chance ripped through a rear tire of the car, thus placing upon it an additional handicap, while his third sought the zenith as his hands flew up and he dropped from the saddle, drilled through the body by Alan's only shot.

A long-range pistol duel was in progress before the car had covered half the remaining distance to the pass.

By the time it entered this last, which proved to be a narrow ravine with towering side of crumbly earth and shale and broken rock, the pursuit was not a hundred yards behind, while the firing was well-nigh continuous.

Two hundred feet above the trail two men were working with desperate haste at some mysterious business—though none noticed them.

Only the chauffeur was aware of a woman running down the hillside at an angle, to intercept the car several hundred yards from the mouth of the pass.

"Straight Ahead, My Man!" She Said.

As it drew near the spot where she paused, waving both hands frantically, the head of the pursuing party swept into the mouth of the ravine.

At the same time the chauffeur noticed that the two men on the hillside were following the woman pellmell, throwing themselves down the slope with gigantic leaps and bounds.

And then a great explosion rent the peaceful hush of night—that till then had been profaned by the pattering cracks of the revolver fusillade.

As the roar of dynamite subsided the entire side of the hill shifted and slid ponderously down, choking the ravine with debris to the depth of some thirty or forty feet, burying the leaders of the pursuit beyond hope of rescue.

Only a instant later the motor car jolted to a halt and Alan pulled himself together to find that Rose and Barcus were standing beside the door and jabbering joyful greetings, mixed with more or less incoherent explanations of the manner in which they had come to seek shelter for the night in the prospector's shack and, roused by the noise of firing and recognizing Alan in the car by the aid of spyglasses, had with the prospector's aid hit upon this scheme of shooting a landslide in between the pursuit and its devoted quarry.

OLD GUARD MEET AT AT HOME OF MR. I. FILION

Last Wednesday evening, December 30th, 1914, at the home of Mr. I. Filion, there was a meeting of the old guard, those who used to attend the High School of Port Angeles in the days when some people's fathers were boys. Those who were of a younger or of a different crowd, and who, by some means, legitimate or otherwise, chanced to sneak in, felt as one of the lowlanders of Scotland might feel had he squeezed himself into a company composed of one of the Alpine Clans. Just to show the younger ones that they were not out of date or that they have not in any way lost any of the old time spryness, some of those (now fathers and mothers) showed them how to do all of the latest steps of the modern dance and reveled in the newest inventions of the Goddess Terpsicore. So happy an atmosphere did these create that all those who had been fortunate enough to be present awoke the following morning with a smile and remembered what a dandy good time they had had the evening before.

Grand Chancellor, Mr. Kuhn, of Tacoma, paid an official visit to the Angeles K. P. Lodge on Wednesday evening. Ernest Harding was initiated into the second rank, after which a social session with good eats was enjoyed. The Grand Chancellor expects to pay an official visit to every K. P. Lodge in the state, during his term of office which will make 124 visits.

THE CITY COUNCIL

rest. Mr. Fleming sought to have a separate vote on these special police claims but lost out, Shields alone supporting him; Dustman explained that he did not think the incurring of the bills necessary, but the work was done and voted to pay for it.

Mr. Bigelow then rose to ask how many special police are now on roll, and was advised that there were none.

Mr. Shields called attention to lax control of newly leased spit and necessity of protecting same if city is not held responsible by government under city's lease. He moved street superintendent post signs along leased ground warning parties to remove nothing therefrom. City attorney stated city had no authority outside city limits. The lease was called for and read. It recites among other things that nothing shall be removed from said leased premises. Attorney still held that state alone could extend city's police powers The motion carried. The suggestion was made by the mayor that a special committee be named to determine what size lots will be made for sub leases as a basis for engineer to survey same. Matter went over to new council.

Mr. Fleming reported First street west of Oak and Valley street hard for pedestrians to navigate. Upon his motion same was ordered washed off.

Upon motion of Mr. Bigelow, street superintendent was instructed to place few loads of gravel in bad places in Valley street at Barr's and at 8th street.

Mr. Fowler called attention to uncompleted walk on south side of Fifth between Laurel and Lincoln. Street superintendent was directed to notify parties to put in walk at once.

Bad places on Fifth at I and G, were referred to street commissioner with power to act.

Saloon licenses were granted following: P. J. O'Brien, Olympic Hotel; Mettler & Polanz, City Hotel; L. H. Kempton, Gate City Buffet; Peter Grubb, Commercial Hotel; Day & Abbot, Merchants' Hotel.

Mr. Dustman voted against all of these, and Mr. Fleming joined him on one just to show his respects to Mr. Day.

City council chamber was ordered fixed up. Council adjourned.

COMMERCIAL CLUB MEETING

The first regular meeting of the Port Angeles Commercial Club in the new year will be held at the Club rooms on Monday evening, January 4, 1915, and it is apparent that there will be plenty of important business to warrant the attendance of all really active members.

The Club has been doing a lot of good constructive work in the last few months and there is a strong spirit for more forceful and aggressive activity with the beginning of the new year, which all observers regard as the most promising development year for the Pacific Northwest that ever invited intelligent promotion enterprises.

Several of the standing committees of the organization have been at work upon important projects and it is hoped that they will all have much of vital interest to report at this meeting, next Monday evening.

The Happiest and Most Prosperous New Year You Have Ever Known

We thank the public for the splendid patronage given us during the past year and hope we will merit your continued patronage for 1915.

IMPRESSIVE FUNERAL OF LATE C. W. BREWSTER

Funeral services of the late C. W. Brewster, who passed away at his home Thursday morning, December 24, were held at the Fulmer Chapel Sunday afternoon, and were largely attended by many old friends who came to pay their last respects to one of the oldest pioneers of Port Angeles, and one of God's true, noble men. Services were conducted by Rev. Stephen Smith of the Congregational church, whose address was particularly fine. No higher tribute could be paid to any man than Mr. Smith paid to this old friend, who lived to the ripe old age of 86. To his temperate habits in all things he contributed the cause of his long life, which was entirely free from any physical ailments. The life forces gave out, and he simply sank into the long sleep from which there is no earthly awakening.

Mr. Brewster was a descendant of one of the good old Puritan families of New England, and like them, he had strong convictions of truth and honor, to which he was always loyal. He had made a fortune in his younger days, but met with reverses which had swept it away, but he bore this misfortune with the fortitude and patience of his ancestors. His courteous manner, bespeaking gentleness and culture, won for him many dear friends and was a prominent figure in the social and church circles of Port Angeles twenty years ago. He leaves besides a widow, two children, the son, Theodore, and daughter, Mrs. Leonard Raymond of Seattle, both of whom were with him at the time of his death. The many beautiful flowers which adorned the casket were tokens of love and sympathy sent by clubs and friends with whom the family were associated. The choir from the Congregational church sang several beautiful hymns which were favorites of the deceased.

CARD OF THANKS

To the dear friends who have come so tenderly near to us in our bereavement, we wish to express our gratitude and most earnestly hope that the dear heavenly Father of us all may bless them richly and help us all to be loyal in His service and believe in His word and appreciate and use the gifts that He offers and honor him in our lives.

With love for you all,
Marietta A. Brewster.
Theodore Hawley Brewster.
Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Raymond.

What will be remembered as one of the prettiest and most enjoyable parties of the year, was the Holiday Ball, given in the opera house Monday evening under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary to the Commercial Club. The decorating committee, under the supervision of Mrs. McCarthy, had done their work well and the bright red and green colors so artistically arranged, added warmth and cheer to the hall. While the attendance was not as large as was expected, it was just right for comfort and a good time, and everybody made the most of it. It was a young peoples' party, and it was perfect enjoyment to sit and look on at the many sweet attractive young faces, with all thought of studies and cares forgotten for the time being. A pleasing feature of the evening was the vocal solos given by Miss Robertson. By request she sang "Tipperary," for an encore, all joining in the chorus. Much credit is due Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fisher and Mrs. E. E. Hopkins for the splendid success of the party.

Two interesting games of basket ball were those played at the A. A. A. Hall, Tuesday evening, between the boys and girls of the high school and alumni which they broke even. Owing to unfamiliarity with the rules, the Alumni girls played a rather rough game but superior handling of the ball gave the H. S. the game—8 to 0. The lineup follows: High School—Full, Irene Best, Mary Brown; Center, Margaret Porter; Guards, Mildred Doran, Mamie Thompson. Alumni—Full, Athelene Fisher, Georgia Hooker; Center, Tirza MacKechnie; Guards, Ethel Welch, Clara Smith. The boys game was a nip and tuck affair with the final issue always in doubt. The game ended with the Alumni on the long end of a 25-21 score. Dodge and L. MacKechnie featured in this game with clever shooting. Lineup: High School Full, Dodge, Mitchell; Center, Nelson; Guards, Fitzgerald, Dickenson, Anderson. Alumni—Full, Hooker, Guernsey; Center, L. MacKechnie; Guards, R. MacKechnie, Gould.

Mr. and Mrs. E.E. Getchell and little daughter of Mt. Vernon have been spending the holiday vacation visiting their parents in Angeles. Mr. Getchell is superintendent and instructor of the commercial department in the Union High School at Mt. Vernon. He has 161 pupils enrolled and many have had to be turned away on account of lack of accommodations.

Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Haynes had a most pleasant family re-union at their home Christmas day. All the children and grandchildren were with them, making a party of sixteen. After an excellent Christmas dinner at the Bungalow Inn they had a theater party, enjoying the special Christmas pictures at the Dream. Returning to the Haynes' home, they visited and talked over the many happy Christmas days of their childhood, when the "movies" were the pleasures still undreamed of and made the further acquaintance of the new member of their family, Mr. Stewart Mullen, who was recently married to Miss Theo. McLaughlin, grand daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Haynes. She and her husband arrived Christmas morning but return to their home in Bellingham, today.

Roy Darnell and Thos. King, two of the Dungeness boys, who went to Alberta to locate four years ago, are spending the holidays with Mr. Darnell's mother, Mrs. Jno. Dickenson, of Dungeness. They are well pleased with their venture, as there is a flourishing railroad town just two and one-half miles from their section, whereas it was forty-five miles to the nearest station when they settled. They will return to their Canadian home in the early spring.

Complimentary to Mr. and Mrs. Henderson, house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Mack Clark, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Walton entertained a few friends last Saturday evening with a Christmas party, which was one of the prettiest and most perfect in all its appointments of any party of the year.

The Choral Club, under Professor Davies, are getting ready to give a concert in the opera house, the evening of January 29, which promises to be a musical treat for the music lovers of Port Angeles. In addition to our local talent, Prof. Davies will have the assistance of some of the best musical talent in Seattle.

Lawrence Culver of St. Louis, is here this week looking into business prospects for his father, who is proprietor of a pressed brick and pottery works in St. Louis and who is contemplating coming to Port Angeles. The young man is very favorably impressed and feels confident that his parents will come here in the spring.

C. J. Farmer was accompanied o Angeles this week by Dr. Bonffluer, chief surgeon of the Chicago, and Milwaukee railroad, and his assistant Dr. Narrowmore. Both the gentlemen have considerable capital invested in Port Angeles and were here on a business trip.

Miss Ada Mahewson spent Christmas with her father and brother's family in Angeles, returning to Portland Sunday. Doris Mathewson accompanied her to Seattle and visited there until Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Beam entertained a party of young people at their home Tuesday evening in honor of their son Leland, who is spending the holiday vacation at home. It was in the nature of a re-union of old classmates and school friends and everybody had a jolly good time.

Miss Watson, on Tuesday entertained in honor of Miss Sophia Albers of Northfield. The guests were friends and teachers from Minnesota. On sitting down to dinner, one lady exclaimed: "Such a dinner." Nuff said. Everybody knows the rest.

Mr. and Mrs. Willis Mathewson are entertaining this evening with a New Years dinner party, to which sixteen guests are bidden. After dinner, cards will furnish the evening's entertainment.

Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Mitchell have been spending a pleasant week in Seattle visiting friends and taking in the sights of the city. They went up last Saturday and expected to return today.

Robert Madland, a former Angeles boy, has been a guest at the Polhamus home this week.

Lyman Johnson returned the first of the week from a holiday visit with a friend in Yakima.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Filion go to Seattle today for a few days visit.

Any passenger who witnessed the accident of the steamer Sioux on October 6th, on Dungeness spit, please communicate with W. B. Allen, attorney, 523 Lyon Building, Seattle.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Donovan entertained the Auction Bridge Club at their home Thursday evening and watched the old year out and merrilly welcomed in the new.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Lutz and Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Day will entertain the members of the Silent Thimble Club and their husbands next Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Julius Kirschberg had a few friends in New Years eve to watch with them the departure of the old year and properly welcome in the new.

Mr. J. C. Hansen returned from Port Townsend Thursday where he was called by the illness and death of his father, who was laid to rest Wednesday.

Miss Sophia Albers returned to Seattle on Wednesday, after spending a week with her sister Mrs. Darnell, and Mrs. Jno. Dickenson.

There will be communion services and a special New Year sermon and music at the Congregational church Sunday morning.

Mr. E. T. Morris of Riverside, Cal., is visiting at the residence of his brother-in-law, John Dickenson.
