PORT ANGELES WILL ALWAYS HAVE TERMINAL FREIGHT RATES

Twice As Much Lumber Would Go Over Angeles Dock as Will Ever Go Over the $500,000 Lumber Wharf Seattle Has Built.

"It is surely a great pleasure to return to Port Angeles; every time I come to see further improvement. I don't know of any place on our railroad that is showing the growth and improvement that you are," said R. W. Calkins, of the Milwaukee, addressing a meeting of the business men of the city in the Commercial Club rooms Tuesday afternoon. "We were discussing, some of us, the subject of business the other day, and we couldn't call to mind an institution, outside of the agricultural pursuits, that is making any money today. They are just breaking even—getting along conservatively; those that can operate are operating merely to keep their help employed. And so you cannot expect to be a world-beater at the present time. But if you can do as well in 1915 as you have done in 1914, and can keep on, you will have a city here—no doubt about that.

"The railroad work has been a little slow during the bad weather. But Mr. Erickson estimates it will be completed about June 1st. We will then be able to give you thru service and you may depend upon it, that while you will not have transcontinental trains here at first, the railroad will always keep a little in advance of the demands of business. You have had evidence of this within the last day or so, and you may be assured the equipment will always be ample for the business. The lumber business is very quiet and yet within the last two weeks one party has made arrangements to put in a track west of the Elwha and one or two are arranging for tracks in the east end of the county. If we can do anything at all in these dull times we ought to be satisfied.

Mr. Kelly, who proposes to put in the very best oil drilling outfit it is possible to purchase, and to continue operations until he has demonstrated beyond a doubt whether there is oil in the country tributary to Port Crescent, has told me he would never have put a dollar into it if it hadn't been for the railroad. Nine carloads of machinery and pipe have been ordered from Pittsburg for the drilling operations.

"Other and larger plans in sight for the Peninsula are held in abeyance now until financial affairs are cleared up. The results of the railroad have been very satisfactory—in fact, the railroad is in a very prosperous state. As to rates, you may be assured they will be rates you can do business on. We are here to put Port Angeles on the map. We have got to do it. If we can't make you a rate with which you can compete with Seattle, Tacoma and Aberdeen we won't do business. I want to settle the question of terminal rates for all time. There is no question of your having a square deal on freight; you must be able to compete with any place in the Northwest. We will make every effort to work with you as you have worked with us.

"You have your new street grades; they have improved Port Angeles immensely. Your city creates an entirely different impression upon the strangers now. Now Port Angeles has long boasted the finest harbor on the Pacific, and there is none I can recall, that can claim to be its equal. Yet you might as well not have a harbor for you can't make use of it. Something must be done; the city must be started right. Other cities have studied the problem from all angles. San Francisco has spent millions on her self-governed municipal docks. Victoria has spent a large amount; Vancouver is also spending money on harbor improvements and has other projects in sight which will cost several million dollars or more. Seattle is going to have a magnificent layout of docks. Mr. Peterson, here, has just completed a lumber dock at Smith Cove that is 2,500 feet long and cost $500,000. It is only one out of five; Seattle has built others that cost five times as much. But if you will spend 30 or 40 per cent as much on a lumber dock and cold storage plant here I will guarantee to put double the lumber over it that will ever go over the Seattle dock. Such a dock is an actual necessity; it will pay the community many times in actual development. For illustration, there are two or three billion feet of timber between Port Angeles and Port Townsend which must be manufactured somewhere. It is going where there are dockage facilities. There is a certain amount of export business we could handle over a dock at Port Angeles, aside from the lumber. Last week we had 125 tons we might have shipped on a steamer leaving Vancouver, but we couldn't deliver in British Columbia waters and Angeles had no dock at which the steamer could berth. Of course that is only a little thing in itself, but we must bring down here every day, empty cars for shingles and lumber and we could build up a nice little business with B. C. vessels. And then, it would help to build up the tourist business to have those big steamers calling here.

"A big dock is one of the next moves you will have to make. Did you ever stop to consider how the timber of the West End must be taken out? It can't be done thru Clallam nor thru the Sol Duc Valley. It must come this way; it will be a big business for 100 years. Thirty to thirty-five miles is the maximum

$20,000 FOR START ON OZETTE ROAD

David Govan Successful Bidder on Mile of Permanent Highway West of Elwha.

The sum of $20,000 was set aside out of the General Road and Bridge Fund levy for the year 1914, to be used to build a road to Ozette Lake, the county engineer to investigate and determine the route to be selected.

David Govan was the successful bidder on the mile of Permanent Highway to be constructed west of Elwha bridge just beyond the Eden Valley road, his figure of $4495, being $652 less than that of Ferch & Gass; there were four bidders.

The Board adopted a resolution stating that necessity demands that the road from Joyce (formerly known as Joetown) to Piedmont on Lake Crescent, two trade centers, be improved under the provisions of Chapter 35, Laws of 1911, and resolving that the road be so improved.

A number of official bonds were approved prior to the meeting of next Monday, when the new officials will be sworn in. In the Auditor s office Auditor-elect Warren will retain Wm. B. Smith and R. D. McLaughlin as deputies; Assessor Prickett will be assisted by Frank Thompson and Sheriff Bishop by Mr. Cooper; Treasurer Wood has not decided upon his assistants, further than that he will retain Mr. D. J. Kelly.

The Board ordered a call for bids (published in another column) for the gravelling of the bonded road from Sequim to Blyn.

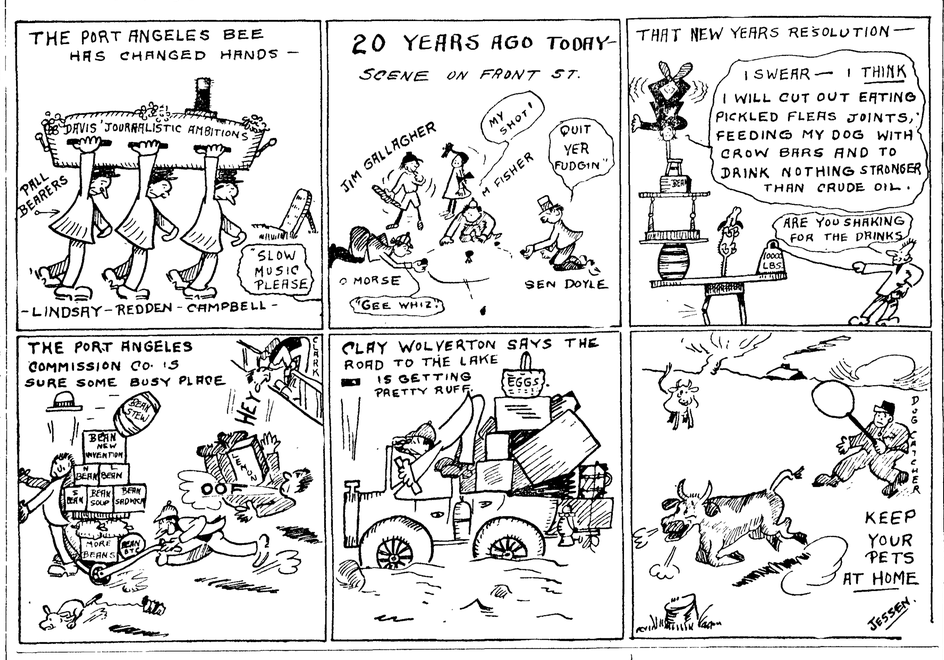
THE WEEKLY BULL



BASKET BALL LEAGUE PROPOSED TO COMMERCIAL CLUB

Prof. Failor, the High School's Athletic Enthusiast, Advocates Organization to Provide Entertainment for Young Men of City.

Mr. Failor, teacher of science at the Central High School, and athletic enthusiast, created quite a sensation amongst the crowd in attendance at the Commercial Club meeting Monday evening, in a short talk he made proposing that the Commercial Club take steps to organize several city basketball teams. He stated it would not only would be good for the boys of the town, but if properly handled, would be of material benefit to the city. He thought two good teams could be gotten together from the mill and two more from the boys of the Alumni, still living in Angeles, and a fifth one from the boys now attending school.

Two months would be required to play off the games and decide which team was entitled to the city's championship. He further proposed that the Commercial Club buy a silver cup from the proceeds of admission fees, that it be inscribed with the name of the winning team and left in the Commercial Club rooms and from year to year be properly inscribed with the name of the winning team. Mr. Failor was confident, that from the door receipts alone, a good sum could be saved to set aside for other athletic purposes.

The games could be written up for the Seattle papers, which would help to advertise our city and let outsiders know that we are wide awake.

The Commercial Club will take Mr. Failor's proposition under consideration and will undoubtedly start the ball a rolling.

This would be a good idea, if only in the interests of the young men of the city, who have few places to go for recreation except the saloons. We doubt if there is a city the size of Port Angeles in the state, where so little is being done to raise the moral standard of the young men, or to provide for them proper places of amusement and entertainment.

The Entertainment Committee will meet next week in preparation for the starting of the Club. The officers on this committee are Fred C Farmer, Chairman; J. Lloyd Aldwell, Dr. D. McGillivray, Frank R. Heron, Cecil C. McNutt.

City Attorney Smith, reporting on the claim of the City Dock Co., $51.57, for wharfage for material furnished for construction of Eighth street bridges, stated that he could not advise the council with any certanity as to what the courts might decide and therefore left the matter to the council without recommendation. Placed on file.

PORT ANGELES FOR MINE

By O. Stockmar.

My wisdom teeth I think I've cut,
I'm wiser day by day,
No more for me a paradise
Three thousand miles away.

I'm sneaking back to Angeles—
Give me your hottest roast,
I'll take the worst that you can say,
But not the Atlantic Coast.
For me no ice and blizzards mixed,
No winds that sigh and moan;
When every night they bring a chill
That cuts me to the bone.

I'm sneaking back to Angeles,
In hopes that I may find
The Paradise I sought so far,
But surely left behind.
O, Gem of the broad Peninsula,
Gate City of the Sound,
Take back the weary erring child,
I'll roam no more around.

I'm sneaking back to Angeles,
You may jeer me if you will—
But in the role of Prodigal,
I think I've had my fill.
You may boast about your Thousand Isles,
The shimmer of the Lakes—
The shadow of your skyscrapers—
But Angeles I'll take.

I'm sneaking back to Angeles,
I'm tired of husks and chaff,
I wonder if some friend for me
Would kill the fatted calf.
I do not shun to seek hard work,
I care not much for ease—
But Heaven defend me from the pest
Of all those Eastern fleas.

I'm sneaking back to Angeles;
My heart and feet are sore,
Let me reach that favorite spot—
Sure, I will roam no more.

CASKEY CASE IN COURT

Court Allowed J. R. Smith $734 for Extra Work on Olympic Highway Near Forks.

Wednesday and part of Thursday the Court's attention was occupied with the case of J. R. Smith vs. Clallam county for additional work done on the Forks-Quillayute road on his contract finished last year. Smith alleges that the $2000 or $2600 claimed by him in addition to the $8000 add allowed by the Board is for work done by direction of the engineers in charge and by Commissioner Clark. A settlement has been in progress several times but the parties cannot come together. The Court finds that the plaintiff was entitled to the sum of $734.58, finding that the extra work done was at the direction of the engineers but that the estimate of the gravel and fills were erroneous and awarded the above sum in addition to the amount allowed in the final estimate of the county.

The case of Wm. Caskey vs. Emma Caskey and Howard Breece took up the attention of the court about all day Tuesday and along until 10 p. m. and finally judgment was held until the 19th, to give parties a chance to get together. This, seemingly, is one of the cases which should never have reached the court, but stubbornness generally loses sight of best interests and overrules judgment. Caskey seven years ago lost one arm and since has been considerably incapacitated. He and his family, however, got along very nicely, accumulating a home valued at from $3000 to $6000, and found by the court at $4000, without any debts,

Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry, for active co-operation with this Club the preparation and distribution effective descriptive literature exploiting Port Angeles and Clallam county, and the Immigration department of that company is kept supplied with Clallam county folders for direct distribution. While in Seattle on December 24, I visited numerous important publicity mediums of the Pacific Northwest and succeeded in making arrangements for desirable special representation of Port Angeles and Clallam county during the present year.. Among leading publications to whom specially prepared articles descriptive of this district will be available are: Sunset Magazine, San Francisco; The Bellman, Minneapolis; Railway & Marine News, Seattle; The Town Crier, Seattle; and the Seattle Times and Post-Intelligencer. Two general state news bureaus have also agreed to accept short articles to be served to the press throughout the state.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway also has in preparation a Washington folder and map including an article of 600 words descriptive of this city and county, and is also preparing a booklet descriptive of the Olympic peninsula for the publication of which for general circulation advertising agent J. C. Thomson anticipates special authorization at an early date.

It will be necessary for this club to issue some up-to-date descriptive literature very soon and a large amount of accurate data has been collected for that purpose.

New Members.

Three applicants were added to the active membership roll in December, as follows:

James Chenaur, James W. Hooker and E. L. Ware.

Mail Service

The Club acted upon three different mail service projects in December.. One was the petition of 143 patrons of the postoffice of Mora, 'orks and Beaver, asking for the 'uting of mail for those offices by of Port Angeles and Lake Cres- 'nstead of Clallam Bay. This was forwarded to the Fourth Postmaster General by the sec on December 21, together with tter explaining the situation in deta l. Another was the petition of 108 residents of the Lower Elwha and Indian Creek district asking for a 32 mile rural free delivery route out of Port Angeles. This has been in charge of the committee on city and county affairs and is progressing satisfactorily under unusually delayed preliminaries, the matter having been taken up with the department originally without the co-operation of the Club.

The other mail subject was the effort of the Sequim Commercial Club to have the class of the Sequim postoffice raised from the fourth to the third. Upon request of the Sequim Club, our Board of Directors on December 28 directed the secretary to obtain the necessary information and actively support the Sequim petition. Before any of this work had been accomplished, however, Secretary Mortland of the Sequim Commercial Club informed us that he had information that Sequim had been or was about to be raised to the third class.

Industries.

There are several industrial projects, definite information for which is being collected by the secretary and the committee on industries. One of these is a proposition from mill men of Eastern Puget Sound to establish here a shingle mill of six upright machines and a cedar siding mill. The head man of this concern spent December 15 and 16 here going over the local situation with the secretary, and is expected here again within the present week to make final investigations with his associates. The chief difficulties encountered are the site question and the availability of cedar timber constantly at market prices. This gentleman was much interested in the proposed free sites on the Ediz Hook reserve, but that property has yet been surveyed and platted, a matter that Mayor White has promised to urge upon the city council tomorrow night.

With the cooperation of a large Seattle association this office is facilitating the investigations of a large Eastern starch manufacturing concern with a view to establishing a factory here or at some other logical point in Western Washington.

Thorough data relative to hemlock bark for the manufacture of tannic acid has been compiled for a large Eastern tannery and leather company.

Forest Service Conference.

On December 21, Assistant District Forester C. H. Flory of Portland, Oregen, held a Conference in the Club rooms with members of the board of directors, and a committee of five was appointed to cooperate with the county commissioners in selecting the route for the road considered most needed for the upbuilding and settlement of the county, this to be recommended to the Forest Service for construction with funds proposed to be advanced by the national treasury and to be paid back out of funds accruing from the sale of timber in the Olympic National Forest. On December 29 Chairman T. T. Aldwell, W. J. Ware and L. J. Leonard of this committee, Forest Ranger Chris Morgenroth, President Craig and the secretary, went to Port Townsend and conferred with the special committees of the Port Townsend Commercial Club relative to the selection of such road or roads. It was decided to hold a final conference in Port Angeles within the following three weeks, to which Mason and Chehalis counties are also to be invited.

Holiday Business Interferes.

Many imortant matters are in the hands of several standing committees, including the house and property committees, local trades committee, industries committee and legislative committee. Much of the month of December was lost to this community effort work by the annual holiday trading, which demanded all the time of many indispensible members of these committees.

There is much to be done within the next month, however, and all the committees are now ready to give vigorous attention to the upbuilding work of the club.

Collection of Dues

The time lost in making the rounds to personally collect dues each month is a quite serious handicap to this office. All members who can do so can very materially increase the efficiency of the Club by paying their dues semi-annually in advance. The monthly fee is $2, or $10 for six months if paid in advance.

A number of members are delinquent beyond the period allowed by the bylaws and it hoped that they will pay their dues before the next meeting of the board of directors.

COUNTY SCHOOLS HOLD INSTITUTE MARCH 31

Teachers please report the number of sets 8th grade examination questions wanted for the January 21, 22 examinations.

Part two of the Champion Spelling book, the edition to be used at the Clallam county spelling contest next April, may be purchased at the Mathewson Drug store at the price of 20 cents. This will be a convenience to those who wish to purchase a few copies and do not care to send away for same.

The attention of teachers is called again to the following in regard to eighth grade examinations from state superintendent: "Each pupil in the eighth grade examinations for a state diploma is required to read only one Reading Circle Book. Those taking manual training should read Carpenter's 'How the World is Clothed.' Those writing on domestic science, Carpenter's 'How the World is Fed.' A review of the whole book will not be required as a part of the written test, but two questions from each book will be asked in the subjects, 'Domestic Science and Manual Training."

Two interesting numbers of the Clallam County Institute, March 31, April 1st and 2nd, will be the lecture by Dr. Gray, Friday evening, April 2nd, and a lecture by Dr. Eugene R. Kelley,state commissioner of public health, Thursday evening, April 1st. The subject of the last named lecture will be "The Movement to Lengthen Life."

In reply to teachers who are new in the State of Washington to questions in regard to the 8th grade examination, it may here be stated that teachers are not required to read the manuscripts of pupils but the papers should be sent at once at the conclusion of the examination to the County Superintendent, to be read by the County Board of Education.

The Olympic-Leader is a good paper.

DEVELOPMENT IN CLALLAM BAY COUNTRY

The Merrill-Bliss-Ring Lumber Company, owners of 40,000 acres of timber lands at Pysht, have completed a thoro survey of their holdings and are ready now to begin logging operations. Work will start in February on the building of a wharf in Pysht bay, a wharf being the first thing necessary for the landing of supplies, camp outfit and railroad equipment. The wharf will be a quarter of a mile long, on account of the tide flats at Pysht. Six miles of railroad will be constructed from the wharf back into the timber. This road goes on the east side of the Pysht river. Logging will be done on a big scale, with several hundred men employed. The company will expend a quarter of a million dollars in development work. The S. P. A. & L. C. railroad now at the Lyle river, 10 miles distant, is very likely to be extended to Pysht.

The Goodyear Logging Co. is now investing $200,000 in getting ready to log their 20,000 acre timber tract, at Clallam Bay. They have two miles of standard guage railroad finished and a locomotive and flatcars on the track. The railroad starts at the west side of Clallam Bay and will run over six miles east and south into the timber tributary to the Clallam river. The company will employ over two hundred men and has fifteen years' logging of timber now owned by them. The railroad will be extended further into other timber holdings later on. It is a well built road, on a water level grade. There is a possibility of an export saw mill at Clallam Bay and an extension of the peninsula railroad here to take out the lumber the same as from Earles mill at Port Angeles.

Dairy farmers around Clallam Bay are clearing up their farms and increasing their herds. James Keltner has just finished stumping forty of his acres of the additional cleared land upon his farm. A crew of men has been at work on the job, with a donkey engine, for four months. George Lamb, on the Hoko river, has contracted for the clearing of an additional ten acres on his farm. Geo. Talbut is also getting more land cleared. The stumps on all of those places are huge ones, the remnants of big trees on fertile river meadows.—Sequim Press.

SOCIAL AND CLUB NEWS

Mesdames Lutz and Day At Home to Two Hundred Lady Friends on New Years Day.

About two hundred ladies accepted the hospitality of Mesdames Day and Lutz on New Years Day and called at the home of the latter during the afternoon. The hostesses were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Abbott, Mrs. A. A. Smith and Miss Ruth Smith, while the charming little daughters of the hostesses, the Miss Marion Day and Miss Olive Lutz, opened the door for the guests and took their cards. The rooms were beautiful in their holiday decorations and festoons of evergreen, smilax and holly were artistically arranged; a touch of brilliancy being added by the many lovely poinsetta blossoms. Several branches of the real plant were sent to Mrs. Lutz by a neice and called forth great admiration from the guests. The dining room, where the dainty refreshments were served, was very attractive, the tea and coffee urns being presided over in turn by Mesdames Butler, W. M. Clark, Zeigler and McGillivray. Assisting in serving were the Misses Verna Wolverton, Zella Brown, Margurite Sullivan, Marcella Schweitzer and little Miss Regina Lutz. Delightful music was furnished during the entire afternoon by the Jensen orchestra.

Complimentary to Senator and Mrs. A. A. Smith, Mrs. S. J. Lutz and Mrs. E. E. Day entertained the members of the Silent Thimble Club and their husbands at the Lutz home Tuesday evening. It was a delightfully pleasant affair, cards, dancing and music making the hours fly by so quickly that the guests almost forgot to go home. The prize winners at cards were Mrs. Grace Moore, Mr. Julius Kirschberg, Miss Haswell, and Mr. Willis Mathewson, a guest prize going to Mr. and Mrs. Smith.

It seems that the "watch party" at the Kirschberg home New Year's eve was a most happy affair and the New Year was welcomed in amidst all sorts of merriment and gaiety. When the fun was at its highest, someone proposed a wedding as there was present an eligible bride and bridegroom. It being agreeable to all parties concerned, matters were soon arranged and Mr. Mullertyme and Miss Sadie Robertson have since been receiving the congratulations of their friends and all sorts of good wishes for 1915.

Miss Florence Pettit very pleasantly entertained a few of her friends with a watch party at her home. Games, songs and music were enjoyed until a late hour when a delicious lunch was served. All enjoyed themselves to the fullest extent. Those present were: Misses Florence Gehrke, May Forsburg, Berniece Campbell and Marcella Schweitzer; Messrs. Lawrence Mason of Ellensburg, Louie Johnson, Clarence Forsburg and John Schweitzer.

A very pretty party was given at the home of Mrs. J. C. Tucker on the evening of January 2nd. About thirty guests were present and a general good time was had. The feature of the evening was the Santa Claus, no other than Andrew Severyns. Each person received a present from the Santa and had do to all sorts of "hard work" to earn them.

Dr. and Mrs. F. E. Warner entertained at dinner Monday evening in in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Kirschberg, Sr., who will leave this week for their home in California. Covers were laid for eight; the guests being, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Kirschberg, Mr. and Mrs. Kirschberg, Sr., Mrs. Grace Morse, and Mr. Mullertyme.

CHORAL CLUB TO GIVE CONCERT

R. Festyn Davies, the famous Welsh tenor and musical director of the Port Angeles Choral Club, will give a concert in the Opera House the evening of January 29th, under the patronage of the Musical Club and the Women's Auxiliary to the Commercial Club. Prof. Davies will bring his own pianist from Seattle and will also be assisted by the Choral Club, who make their initial bow to a Port Angeles audience. Before the winter is over they expect to give something quite pretentious in a musical way, so hope to receive the encouragement of the public with a full house at this first performance.

Mr. Davies is well known all over the coast and his services as director are in great demand, so the Choral Club feel they were indeed fortunate to secure his services as director for the winter. Prof. Davies was born in North Wales and comes from a noted musical family. His father and mother both were the most noted singers of their day and his father was also a famous director. Young Festyn at an early age showed a voice of wonderful possibilities and at the age of 18 and 19 was constantly winning first prizes for the tenor solos at the different Eisteddfodoe (musical festivals) which are held so frequently in Wales. He was sent to London to receive his musical education under the best masters, and soon held his own among the leading tenors of that great city. Mr. Davies excells as a director and since coming to Seattle, he has done much to elevate the musical standard of that city. The Shubert Club has done more under his direction than at any time before in its history of thirteen years.

At the present time Mr. Davies is the musical director of the First Presbyterian church of Tacoma and this choir is considered the best on the coast. A clipping from a Tacoma paper speaks very highly of him as he appeared there in concert:

"Mr. Davies received such a greeting as showed clearly that his first appearance was grateful to the club. He gave the lovely aria, "Celeste Aida," in splendid form and the rarely beautiful quality of his voice was a delight. It is one of the velvet tenors, with no lack of power and a remarkable range, and in the use of it, Mr. Davies is artistic and satisfying in the extreme. He was enthusiastically recalled and sang very tenderly "A Farewell," by Fisher.

IMMIGRATION BILL PASSED

Washington, Jan. 2.—The immigration bill, containing the restrictive literacy test for admission of aliens which has been the obstacle in immigration reform legislation for the greater part of two national administrations, passed the senate late today by a vote of 50 to 7. The overwhelming majority was recorded despite the fact that President Wilson had indicated he would veto the measure, as did former President Taft, if it should come to him with the educational test included.

The bill passed the house on February 4 last by a vote of 241 to 126.

Although the senate amended the house bill in several particulars, the literacy test was unaltered, save for an additional exemption to Belgian subjects, which was adopted today after prolonged debate. House leaders probably will ask for a conference on senate amendments on Monday, but administration leaders were confident the senate amendments would be accepted and the bill sent to the president by the middle of next week.

The literacy test as finally approved by the senate is practically as it passed the house, all amendments to enlarge the exemptions to admit persons fleeing from political or racial as well as religious persecution having been rejected. The section follows:

Text of Section

"That after four months from the approval of this act, in addition to the aliens who are by law now excluded from admission into the United States, the following persons shall also be excluded from admission thereto, towit:

"All aliens over 16 years old, physically capable of reading, who cannot read the English language, or some other language or dialect, including Hebrew and Yiddish.

"Provided, that any admissable alien or any alien heretofore or hereafter legally admitted, or any citizen of the United states, may bring in or send for his father or grandfather, over 55 years of age; his wife, his mother, his grandmother, or his unmarried or widowed daughter, if otherwise admissible, whether such relative can read or not, and such relative shall be permitted to enter."

One reason why cities have so many idle folk is that the country has too much idle land. Nature made it practicable for almost all men to obtain subsistance from the soil, but man cannot provide enough office jobs to supply all who want them.—Spokesman Review.

Yakima—$500,000 will be spent this winter on irrigation ditches in this valley.

The Columbia river is to get $1,986,000 in the new Rivers and Harbors bill.

In spite of quiet times the Bellingham mills have been employing 1,000 men, who draw approximately $8,000 a day wages.

The Seattle Brewing & Malting Co. will establish a plant in San Francisco.

The "Full Crew" bill forces the railroads of Washington to pay $160,000 a year tribute with no benefit to the public or the railroads. This is a sample of legislation that keeps capital out of Washington and retards its industries.

"PICK-UPS"

BY OTTO J. STOCKMAR.

Two big "mouguls" have recently been brot up from Seattle for use on the Milwaukee railroad. They are of the latest type, being in the same class as the ones that are used by the same company on the Cascade mountains. The engines weigh close to 300 tons. A first class passenger coach was also put into use the past week.

20-inch steel beams are being used in the new Morse building. Four of these monsters are 20 feet long. A new derrick had to be built to handle them.

Did you know that the Milwaukee people are slowing building a great breakwater for this city? Sundays, week days and nights will find a train crew, engine and six cars hauling dirt for the big fill from Francis street to Valley.

The complete mechanism for the big clock in the new court house arrived on Tuesday last and was at once taken to the place of construction. The bell arrived on Thursday morning. It is constructed of 77 per cent pure copper and 23 per cent pure tin. It weighs 2000 pounds and it is evident it will be a difficult task to raise it to its lofty height above the ground.

Hello! Hello! Hello! Did you hear the band? It happened at that new place below Shields' Cigar store on Monday evening last. They call it a barber shop—it is a palace—dedicated to those few or many who believe that cleanliness is next to godliness. A few weeks ago it was fully described in this column, so another outline would be monotonous for you to read. But anyhow, the band played, the onlookers gaped around in awe and the slap of the razor on the strop kept time with the music. Ladies' day was dedicated—so was the men's. It is for us all—all that care about our appearance. The time passed by quickly and many wished they had a two-bit piece to try the new glide made by the razor, as they were taken thru the white enameled tonsorial parlor and made acquainted with the mysteries of Mr. Pettit's new barber shop. All were bent on shaking hands with Mr. Pettit, but the master hand was busy handing out, to the ladies a bottle of hair tonic—and to the men—a good peaceful smoke.

Pete Fisher, postmaster and druggist, inclined to be a little bald, tells us a story upon the growth of hair. A short time ago, a middle aged man came into the drugstore and asked for a hair restorer. Pete promptly replied that he manufactured a certain kind himself and had just recently tried it on his own scalp, but the said tonic had not had time to take action. The man bought a bottle and went home. He tried it for three days. The fourth day, a little red pimple showed plainly on the bald spot. The fifth day another one appeared. The sixth day, the man took the bottle back to Mr. Druggist. Pete looked at the label, and then replied, "Why, my dear sir, no wonder you have found no improvement on your noodle. I gave you a preparation for taking corns off the feet."

Happy New Year to All.

One hundred in all enjoyed the fine Christmas program given at the school house on the evening of December 23rd. The decorations were very pretty and the tree was very handsome when the candles were lit among the many brightly decorated branches. Both old and young took equal parts in the program which was made up of pretty comic dialogues, recitations, singing and music, and last of all was the merry jingle of sleigh bells and old Santa with his heavy pack came bounding thru the door. He presented all present with a bag of nuts, candy and oranges. Then with a "Good bye all, 'till next Christmas," he disappeared as suddenly as he came. It was indeed a happy evening and one that will linger in our minds for many a day.

CHAPTER XLIII.

Camp-for-the-Night.

"Well, gents!" the driver observed cheerfully, withdrawing head and hands from long and intimate communion with the stubborn genius beneath the hood. "I reckon you-all may's well make up yore minds to christen this hyeh salubrious spot Camp-for-the-Night. You won't be goin' no fartheh—not just 't present. Pulling this old wagon through them desert sands back yondeh has just naturally broke' the heart of that engine!"

"What, precisely, is the trouble?" Alan Law inquired, rousing from anxious preoccupation.

"Plumb bust' all to hell," the chauffeur explained tersely.

"Nothing could be fairer, more exact and comprehensive than that," Tom Barcus commented.

Law nodded a head too weary to respond to the other's humor. His worried eyes reviewed the scene of the breakdown.

"What's to be done?" Mr. Law wondered aloud.

"Take it calm," the affable chauffeur advised. "Frettin' won't get you-all nothin'. If it was me, I'd call it a day, make a fire, get them cushions out of the cyah, and get some rest. You can't do nothin' till I get back, anyway, and that won't be much before sunup."

"Where are you going?" Barcus demanded.

"Walkin', friend; just walkin'—"

"What for?"

"To fetch help—leastways, onless yo've got some kick comin' and 'ud ruther stop hyeh permanent'—"

He turned off and busied himself with preparations against his journey.

"It's simply things like this make me believe this isn't, after all, nothing more nor less than a long-drawn-out nightmare," Barcus observed pensively.

But Mr. Law was no more attending: he had turned away and was just then standing by the running-board of the motor car and civilly explaining to Miss Judith Trine the purpose of the chauffeur's expedition.

Discovery of this circumstance worked a deep wrinkle between the brows as well as into the humor of Mr. Barcus.

Here, he promised himself, was a situation to titillate the Comic Muse itself. He pointed out in turn the several component parts: the motor car derelict in the hollow of those awful and silent hills—for all the world like a mouse petrified with fright at finding itself in the midst of a herd of elephants; in the car, that aged monomaniac, Mr. Seneca Trine, author of all their woes and misadventures, gnashing his teeth in impotent rage to find himself in close juxtaposition to and helpless to injure the man for whose life he lusted with an insatiate passion; the latter standing outside the car, in polite conversation with Mr. Trine's mutinous Judith—talking to her in the friendliest fashion imaginable, precisely as if she had not fallen little short of compassing his death, not once, but half a dozen times; Judith herself poised on the running-board and smiling down at her victim with a warmth patently even more than the warmth of friendship; and at some little distance, Rose, Mr. Law's fiancee and Judith's sister, eating her heart out with jealousy of this new-sprung intimacy between her sister and her lover!

"Bad business, my friend!" Barcus mentally apostrophized the unwitting Alan Law.

He interrupted himself to nod knowingly and with profound conviction: "I knew it. Now it begins again!"

For Rose had abruptly taken a hand in the affair, a gesture of exasperation prefacing her call: "Alan!"

To her Mr. Law turned instantly, with such alacrity that none who watched might doubt which of the two women came first in his esteem.

Nor was this wasted upon the understanding of Judith. Eyeing her narrowly though furtively, Mr. Barcus saw her handsome face darken ominously.

And her father was as quick to recognize these portents of trouble and to seek to advantage himself of them.

His head craned out horribly on his long, wasted neck as he pitched a sibilant whisper for her ears, and his face in the moonlight seemed to glow with the reflection of that inferno which smouldered in his evil bosom. . . .

But one was silenced, the other quenched, all in a twinkling. His daughter turned on him in a flash of imperial rage.

Barcus caught snatches of the woman's tirade.

"Be silent!" he heard her say. "Be silent, do you hear? Don't ever speak to me again unless you want me to replace that gag. I say, don't speak to me! . . . I am finished with you once and for all time; never again shall you pervert my nature to your damnable purposes—never again shall word or wish of yours drive me to lift my hand against a man who has never done you the least harm, though your persecution of him would have acquitted him of a charge of manslaughter in any court—on grounds of self-defense! . . . Understand me!" she raged. "I'm through. Henceforth I go my way, and you yours . . ."

Her voice broke. She clenched her hands into two tight fists with the effort at self-control, and lifted a writhen face to the moonlight.

"God help us both!" she cried.

CHAPTER XLIV.

As in a Glass, Darkly.

Thoughtfully Mr. Barcus returned his attention to the lovers.

If the evidence of his senses did not mislead him, he was witnessing their first difference of opinion. It was not an argument acute enough to deserve the name of quarrel; but undoubtedly the two were at odds upon some question—Rose insistent, Alan reluctant.

The last gave way in the end, shrugged, returned to the car.

"I'm going back up the trail," he announced, and hesitated oddly.

"Feeling the need of some little exercise, no doubt," Barcus suggested.

"Rose thinks it's dangerous to stop here," Alan began to explain, ignoring the interruption.

"Miss Rose is right—eh, Miss Judith?" Barcus interpolated.

Judith nodded darkly.

"So I'm going to see if I can't buy burros from the prospector back there. Rose says he has some—doesn't know how many—"

"Three will be enough," Judith interposed. "I mean, don't get one for me. I'm staying here."

"But—" Alan started to protest.

She gave him pause with a weary gesture.

"Please! It's no good arguing, Mr. Law: I've made up my mind; I can be most helpful here, by my father's side," she asserted, and nodded at Trine with a significant smile that maddened him. "He needs me—and no harm can come to me; I'm pretty well able to take care of myself!"

At this the innocent bystander breathed an unheard but fervent little prayer of thanksgiving, whose spirit he doubted not was shared by Alan.

For it stuck in the memory of Barcus that their friend, the prospector (whose shack had sheltered Rose and Barcus after their transit of the desert and prior to the man-made avalanche, which had afforded this temporary immunity from pursuit) had mentioned in the hearing of Rose the fact that his string of burros was limited to three.

This, then, must have been the nub of the lovers' quarrel: Rose's insistance that Judith be left behind, Alan's reluctance to consent to this lest he convict himself of the charge of rank ingratitude, remembering the great service his erstwhile antagonist had done him.

If only Judith might not find cause to change her mind!

He set himself sedulously to divert Judith with the magic of his conversational powers—an offering indifferently received. He was still blithely gossiping when Judith flung away to her sister's side.

The burning quarrel seemed but the more portentous in view of the restraint imposed upon themselves by both parties thereto.

He believed, however, that a crisis impended when the tinkle of mule-bells sounded down the canyon road; and at this he threw discretion to the winds and ran toward the two with hands upheld in mock horror and a manner of humorous protest.

"Ladies, ladies!" he pleaded. "I beg of you both, let dogs delight to bark and bite—"

He got no farther: Judith's ears were as quick as his own; she, too, had caught the sound of bells behind the base of the hill. And of a sudden, without another word, she turned and flung away into the heavy thickets of undergrowth that masked all the canyon, to either side of the wagon-trail. In a twinkling she had lost herself to view in their labyrinthine shadows.

The remainder of that business was transacted rapidly enough. There were no preparations to be made; once Alan had ridden up with his three burros, nothing remained but to mount and make off without delay.

Before morning they were all riding like so many hypnotized subjects, fatigue bearing so heavily on all their senses that none spoke or cared to speak.

Broad daylight surprised them in this state, still stubbornly traveling; and shortly afterward showed them one place so perilous that it shocked them temporarily awake.

This was simply a spot where the trail came abruptly to an end on one side of a cleft in the hills quite thirty feet wide and several hundred in depth, and was continued on the farther side, the chasm being spanned by a bridge of the simplest character—no more than a footway of boards bound together with ropes none too substantial in seeming, with another rope, breast-high, to serve as a hand-rail.

Alan tested the bridge cautiously. It bore him. He returned, helped Rose to cross, and with her once safely landed on the other side, took his life in his hands and, aided by a Barcus unaffectedly afflicted with qualms, somehow or other (neither of them knew precisely how) persuaded the burros to cross.

After that, though the way grew more broad and easy and even showed symptoms of a decline, they had not enough strength left to sustain through another hour.

And what they thought good fortune, opportunely at this pass, brought them to a clearing dotted with the buildings of an abandoned copper mine. Not a soul was in evidence there, but the rude structures offered shelter for beast as well as man.

Barely had they made Rose as comfortable as might be upon the rough plank flooring of one of the sheds and tethered the burros out of sight, when Alan collapsed as if drugged, while Barcus, who had elected himself to keep the first watch and purposed doing it in a sitting position, with his back against the door-jamb, felt sleep overcoming him like a dense, dark cloud.

CHAPTER XLV.

The Bowels of the Earth.

Awaking befell Mr. Barcus in a fashion sufficiently sharp and startling to render him indifferent to the beneficial effects of some eight hours of dreamless slumber.

He discovered himself lying flat on his face, with somebody's inconsiderate, heavy hand purposely grinding the said face into the aged and splintery planks of the shed flooring. At the same time other hands were busy binding his own together by the wrists and lashing the same to the small of his back by means of a cord passed around his middle, while his natural if somewhat spasmodic efforts to kick were sadly hampered by the fact that his ankles had already been secured by means of half a dozen half-hitches and a square knot.

His hands attended to, his head was released. Promptly he lifted it and essayed to yell; an effort rendered abortive by the gag that was thrust between his teeth the instant his jaws opened. .

Then he heard a laugh, a cold, mirthless chuckle.

Now the blood of Thomas Barcus ran cold (or he thought it did; which amounts to much the same thing). For if his senses had played fair, the laugh he had heard was the laugh of Mr. Marrophat, head-devil in the service of Seneca Trine.

He twisted his head to one side and glancing along the floor, saw nothing but the wall. Twisted the other way, at the cost of a splinter in his nose, the effort was repaid by the discovery of Rose Trine in a plight like his own—wrists and ankles bound, gagged into the bargain—the width of the shed between them.

But of Alan Law, no sign. . . .

The heart of Mr. Barcus checked momentarily; he shut his eyes and shivered in an uncontrollable seizure of dread.

Then, tormented beyond endurance by the fears he suffered for the safety of his friend, he began to wriggle and squirm like a crippled snake, painfully inching his way across the floor toward Rose—with what design, heaven alone knows! Dimly his mental vision comprehended the bare possibility of his being able, with his fast-numbing fingers, to work loose the knots at Rose's wrists; but deep in his heart he knew this to be nothing but forlornest hope. . . .

With infinite pains he had contrived to bridge the distance by half, or possibly not quite so much, when a dark body put the sunlight of the open doorway into temporary eclipse. Another followed it. Boots clumped heavily on the flooring. The laugh sounded again, apparently in ironic appreciation of Mr. Barcus' efforts. Two pairs of hands seized him, one beneath the shoulders, the other beneath the knees, and he was lugged laboriously out into the sunlight, carried a considerable distance, and deposited unceremoniously within a few feet of the mouth of the abandoned mine just at the moment when he had satisfied himself that the purpose of his captors was simply to throw him into the black well.

He wasted a lock of appeal on the frozen mask of villainy that was Marrophat's (who bore the burden of Barcus' head and shoulders) and got laughed at for all his pains.

Then he was left to himself once more, but only for a few moments;

THE TREY O' HEARTS

the interval ended when the two appeared again, this time bringing Rose, in similar fashion.

Not until she had been put down beside him did he discover that Alan was likewise a captive—trussed to a tree at some distance.

The remaining arrangements of their captors were swiftly and deftly consummated, though their design remained obscure to Mr. Barcus until he, after Rose, was dumped like a bale into a huge bucket, and therein by means of rope and windlass lowered to the bottom of the shaft—a descent, he estimated shrewdly, of something like a hundred feet.

A hideous screeching followed, the protests of rusty and greaseless machinery. Twisting his neck, Barcus saw the dim opening of the shaft slowly closing, as if a curtain were being drawn down over it. Jimmy was closing the bulkhead door, leaving them definitely prisoners, beyond human aid, there in that everlasting black hole. . . .

With a final squeal and thump the bulkhead settled into place. A confusion of remote sounds thereafter indicated that Jimmy (with, perhaps, Marrophat's assistance) was making the bulkhead fast beyond question—wedging and blocking it with timbers.

These ceased—and the silence was broken by Alan's voice.

"Barcus!"

The latter grunted soulfully by way of answer: he could do no more.

"I've worked my gag loose," Alan pursued in a hurried whisper, "but my hands are tied behind my back. Are yours? Grunt once for 'yes'."

Dutifully Bracus grunted a solitary grunt.

"Then roll over on your face and give me a chance to work them free that way, given time . . ."

"Time!" was the mirthless thought of Barcus. "Haven't we got all eternity?"

For all that, he wasted no time whatever in obeying Alan's suggestion—then lay for upward of ten minutes with his face in the mold of the tunnel while Alan chewed and spat and chewed and spat and chewed again at the ropes round the wrists of his friend.

If it were in truth no more than ten minutes it seemed upward of an hour before the bonds grew slack and Barcus with an effort that cost him much of the skin on one wrist worried a hand free, then loosed the other, removed and spat out his gag, and set hastily about freeing his friend. That took but a few instants—little more than was needed to rid Rose of her bonds.

That much accomplished, a pause of profound consternation followed. The darkness was absolute in the tunnel, Jimmy having taken the candle away with him; and its silence was rendered uncanny by the sobs and murmurs of the lovers, that sounded somehow fearfully remote and inhuman to Barcus—who had turned immediately to the bulkhead and was, without the slightest hope, groping about its joints and crevices in search of some way of forcing it. . . .

"Barcus—old man!"

"Yes?"

"Have you any idea—"

"Devil a one!"

A pause . . .

"Did you notice what that blackguard had fixed up?"

"What do you mean?"

"Why—at the bottom of the shaft—I got only a glimpse coming in—the door of the powder room was open, and I saw a fuse set to the top of a keg of blasting powder . . ."

"What's the good of that? We're fast enough as it is!"

"Simply to make assurance doubly sure by causing a cave-in . . ."

"I seem to remember hearing or reading, some place, that tunnels have two ends. If that's true, the far end of this ought to be about the safest place when that explosion happens—if it ever does."

"Something in that!"

"Got any matches?" Barcus inquired, as Alan hurriedly helped Rose to her feet.

"Never one."

"Nor I. We'll have to feel our way along. Let me lead. If I step over the brink of a pit or anything, I'll try to yell and warn you in time."

Alan caught his friend's hand in passing and pressed it warmly—a caress eloquent of his gratitude to Barcus for taking their peril lightly, or pretending to, for the sake of Rose.

A ticklish business, that—groping their way through blackness so opaque that it seemed as palpable as a pool of ink. And haste was indicated; they stumbled on with what caution was possible against pitfalls—a gingerly scramble. Then an elbow in the tunnel—sensed rather than felt or seen—cut them off from direct communication with the bulkhead, and at the same time opened up a shaft of daylight, striking down through that pitchy darkness like a column of fine gold.

Cries of joy, amazement, incredulity choking in their throats, they stumbled forward, gained the spot immediately below the shaft, looked upward, dazzled, to see blue sky like a coin of heaven's minting far above them at the end of a long and almost perpendicular tunnel, wide enough to permit the passage of a man's body, and lined with wooden ladders.

The end of the lowermost ladder hung within easy reach from the floor of the tunnel.

But even as Alan lifted his hands to grasp the bottom rung the opening at the top of the shaft was temporarily obscured.

Thrilled with apprehension, he hesitated: Marrophat was up there, he little doubted; hardly like that one to overlook the ladder-shaft in preparing the tunnel to be a living tomb.

"What is it?" Rose demanded at his elbow, in a shaken whisper.

"Nothing," he lied instantly, and seizing the bottom rung, swung himself up. "But wait for me till I signal the coast's clear," he warned before committing himself finally to the ascent.

Marrophat or no Marrophat at the top, there was nothing for him to do but to grasp the nettle danger with a steady hand, unflinching. Even though he were shot dead on emerging from the shaft, it were better than to die down there, like a rat in a trap. . . .

He had climbed not more than half a dozen rungs when a voice hailed from above:

"Law—Oh, Mister Law. I say—don't come up—here's a present for you."

Pausing without answer, he looked up. A few drops of water splattered his face, like heavy rain. Almost immediately the blue sky was permanently eclipsed: a heavy cascade of water, almost a solid column, shot down the shaft with terrific force.

Half-drowned and wholly dazed, he felt himself picked up and dragged away from the waterfall.

Then, as his senses cleared, he comprehended the fact that the tunnel was already filling; that where they stood it was already ankle deep; while the water continued to fall without hint of letup.

CHAPTER XLVI.

Flood and Fire.

Screaming to make himself heard above the roar of the deluge, Barcus yammered in Alan's ear:

"That devil! He's found the reservoir—opened the sluicegates—turned it into that shaft! We're done for!" Alan had no argument with which to gainsay him. Silently getting on his feet, silently he groped for Rose in the darkness, momentarily becoming more dense as the fall of water shut out the light, and drew her away with him, up the slight incline that led back to the bulkhead. . . .

The hour that followed lived ever in his memory as an hour in hell. No ray of hope lightened its impenetrable blackness. He could say nothing to comfort the girl; bravely though she strove to keep up her heart, time and again she shook in his arms like a mad thing, when panic dread caught her by the neck as a terrier catches a rat.

To die there, in the darkness, like so many noxious animals trapped in a well! . . .

The water mounted rapidly. Within five minutes it drove them back to the elbow in the tunnel; within ten it lapped their ankles as they lingered there, doubting which was the greater peril, to advance or to stand fast and let the flooding tide snuff out the fires of life. To return to the neighborhood of the bulkhead was to court the death indicated by the fuse and the keg of blasting powder . . .

Of a sudden the thought crossed Alan's mind that Marrophat had arranged the latter solely to keep them away from the bulkhead. Now that he thought of it, he felt certain that the powder room had been deliberately disclosed to him by Jimmy.

Probably, then, the keg and fuse were but stage properties—or possibly . . .

Whether or no, was death in one form preferable to the other?

He was decidedly of the opinion that it were better to be extinguished once and for all time, in the space of a second, annihilated by an explosion, than to die thus lingeringly.

On this consideration, he drew Rose with him back to the bulkhead.

When they had been some fifteen minutes beside the bulkhead, the water mounted the head of a slight rise perhaps ten feet behind them, and poured down in ever deeper volume to back up against the barrier.

It was waist deep, however, before they retreated to the head of that rise.

Half an hour later it was waist deep there, on the highest spot in the tunnel.

In fifteen minutes more it had reached their chins. And they stood with head against the roof of the tunnel.

Holding Rose close to him, Alan kissed her lips, that were as cold as death.

Then fumbling under water, he found the hand of the man at his side.

The water lapped his lips like a blind hand . . .

* * * * * * *

In the tunnel that branched off from the main shaft, beyond the bulkhead, some thirty minutes before this juncture, a candle had guttered in its stick, left carelessly thrust into the wall by Marrophat's lieutenant, and guttering, had drowned a flaming wick into a little heap of tone-dry debris. This last flamed, and hungrily attacked the timbering the falls in the tunnel. The timbering caught fire without delay, and in incredibly brief time were burning right and the tunnel was a vault of blazing out in the bottom of the shaft and invaded the powder room.

Alan had guessed aright at Marrophat's design; the keg of blasting powder was less than an eighth full; its explosion could not possibly have effected the cave-in Alan had at first feared.

But what Marrophat had overlooked was the proximity to the keg of some several sticks of dynamite, masked by a film of earth that had fallen from the crumbling walls.

When the blazing fuse dropped sparks into the blasting powder this last exploded right willingly and the dynamite took its cue without the least delay.

The resultant detonation was terrific. The bulkhead was crushed in like an eggshell barrier. Part of the walls fell in, but the tunnels and shaft remained intact. The released flood streamed out and spread swiftly to the farthest recesses of the burning tunnel. Dense clouds of steam filled that place of terror as the fires were extinguished.

Swept with the stream as it poured out of the tunnel, Alan contrived throughout to retain his hold round the waist of Rose. Barcus shot past him unseen in the darkness. It was not until Alan had contrived to catch an unburned timber and stay himself and his almost witless burden beneath the mouth of the shaft that he discovered Barcus alive, if almost unrecognizable in his mask of mold and soot, battling back toward the shaft against the kneedeep tide.

Half-blinded and stifled as he was by the reek of steam and powder fumes, Alan struggled with himself until his wits were passably clear.

Immediately before him dangled the hoisting bucket and rope.

Surrendering the care of Rose to Barcus, Alan climbed into the bucket and stared upward, examining the walls of the shaft for a way to the top.

There was none other than the most difficult; gaps too great to be bridged by climbing showed in the wooden ladders.

The one feasible route was via the rope. And there was nobody at the top to work the windlass—and Alan hoped there would be nobody to oppose his essay.

He addressed himself to the task without murmuring—lifted himself upon the rope, wound it round one leg, and began that heartbreaking climb.

How he accomplished it he never knew. That it must be accomplished was his one, all-absorbing thought. And somehow, by some almost superhuman effort, it was eventually accomplished.

He arrived at the top of the shaft far too exhausted to show surprise when, falling in half-fainting condition within two feet of the brink, he saw Judith Trine running like mad across the clearing.

But without her aid he would not within hours have been able to work the windlass and lift Rose and Barcus to the surface.

PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION'S WORK REVIEWED FOR YEAR

Governor Lister's Forthcoming Message Will Be Based Upon Thorough Knowledge of Conditions in the State.

Olympia, Jan. 4. —The work of the Public Service Commission of Washington in the past two years, under the administration of Governor Lister, has nearly doubled as compared with the previous two years, according to the Fourth Annual Report of the commission just from the press. The period November 1st, 1910, to November 30th, 1912, showed 898 cases acted upon. This included the informal complaints disposed of and orders disposed of in formal cases. From December 1st, 1912, to November 30th, 1914, the report shows 1698 of such cases acted upon. The report consists of 335 printed pages, reviewing in detail the work of the Commission for the past 12 months and giving a summary of the reports of the electric and steam roads for the past year. There are listed 798 public utilities of all kinds which file tariffs with the Commission and render annual reports. Copies of the report will be furnished without charge on application to the Commission at Olympia.

Employers of the state will do well to advise themselves of the provisions of the minimum wage act. Every employee who has been working for less than the minimum wages can recover from the employer, and State Labor Commissioner E. W. Olson says he will vigorously prosecute suit for such recovery whenever it is brought to his attention. He has already collected $204 in back salaries for seven female employes. Many employers are under the impression that they may pay less than the minimum scale if they designate their employes as apprentices. However, the law does not recognize any apprentices except such as have secured proper permit from the labor department and that department has no power to date back a permit.

Calvin W. Stewart of Tacoma, who has been secretary of the State Board of Control, has resigned, effective January 1st. He has been succeeded by E. S. Emigh of Walla Walla, who has been employed by the Board for some months past as accountant. Mr. Stewart has such general endorsements from the members of his party in the state and others that it is predicted in Olympia that he will be appointed postmaster at Tacoma.

Ignorance of the powers and duties of the state examiner of banks has led to some unfounded criticism of State Examiner Walter E. Hanson. To begin with the law does not permit Mr. Hanson to select the receivers for failed state banks. All he can do is to take charge of the bank temporarily and straighten up its books and affairs so far as possible until the receiver has been appointed by the state court. But few of the receivers so far named by the courts have been recommended by Mr. Hanson. The department has been criticized for not making public the result of its investigations into the failed banks. The critics lose sight of the fact that section 3308 of Remington & Ballinger's code provides that if an examiner or any of his employes make public any such information they are subject to a fine of $1000 and imprisonment in jail until the fine has been paid, and to forfeiture of office.

Governor Lister has appointed E. T. Coman of Spokane and Wm. A. Ritz of Walla Walla, as members of the Board of Regents of the State College at Pullman, to fill the positions formerly held by Lee A. Johnson of Sunnyside and Peter McGregor of Hooper. The other members of the Board are J.C. Cunningham of Spokane, R. C. McCrosky of Garfield and Senator David S. Troy of Chimacum.

With reports received from all of the departments under his control and suggestions for legislation from each of them, Governor Lister is devoting practically all of his time to preparation of his message to the forthcoming legislature. Many weeks ago the Governor sent a circular letter to his appointees calling upon them for estimates of appropriations required and details and suggestions with respect to new legislation. This was for the purpose of securing thoro consideration of all proposed measures before they were incorporated into the message. These recommendations and suggestions have been assembled and are being studied and weighed by the Executive in preparation for the message. Following the usual custom the details of the message are not to be given out prior to the time it is read at the joint session of the House and Senate.

CASKEY CASE IN COURT THIS WEEK

until last May when the daughter, and son came and took charge of the place upon a verbal lease of five years. The crops the past year have been very poor (possibly nobody to blame) Mr. Caskey and his son-in-law had a set-to and three days later, Caskey left and refused to return while Breece was on the place, and has practically been a beggar since. He was later arrested upon complaint of Breece and put under bonds to keep the peace. The present difficulty is fast piling up debts against the homestead. The Court indicated what might be his decision if forced to make one but hopes that an amicable arrangement of the difficulty might be made between the parties.

Elizabeth Cranwell was granted a decree of divorce and $5 weekly maintenance against Louis R. Cranwell, on grounds of cruelty and nonsupport, and was awarded her maiden name of Douglas. Here is another case of marry in haste and repent at leisure. Cranwell has been arrested many times in the short space of their married life and has had a spectacular career, getting out very easily in all. He is out on suspended sentence from Judge Humphries court for grand larency, stole $500 of furs here, and other things, put up at the nabob hotels of San Francisco, Oakland and Portland and skipped his bills, etc. Mrs. Cranwell is but 17 years of age now.

Petition of Olga Thorsen for support of her child by her former husband, Gus Thorsen, was granted in the sum of $25 monthly. Mrs. Thorsen recently was divorced and at that time refused to accept alimony, but her health has failed to the extent that she must have a rest or become permanently disabled. The husband refuses to assist in the support of their child, though well able to do so.

Demurrer of defendant in case of Alden Goodwin, was overruled with consent of defendant's counsel and 10 days given to answer.

Motion to make complaint more definite and certain in Johnston vs. Priest, damage case, was likewise overruled.

Attorney Trumbull presented a somewhat sensational petition in behalf of Swedish Vice Consul Chilberg, in re the estate of Pehr Peterson, a former resident of the Ozette country, in which charges of gross fraud and mismanagement on the part of the administrator, John H. Blom of Everett, are made. The funeral expenses are fixed at nearly $400 and doctor's bills at about $500, and other items nearly eating up the estate. The administrator is cited to show cause why he should not be removed on January 20th.

Anna McKee was granted a decree of divorce from Eugene McKee on grounds of desertion, and awarded the custody of her minor child. She has been compelled to support herself and children for the past eight years. McKee is in the East somewhere.

Demurrer of defendants in Nelson and Merrill Co. vs. Batz & Larkin, and A. J. Laird, overruled, and case set for trial on its merits, January 19.

Defendants V. L. Trumbull and daughter were given until Febuary 10 to file briefs in action brought by Wm. Ritchie, trustee, involving water front property, and on appeal by former.

Motion of defendants in Wells Butcher Supply Co. vs. Garrison for cost bond was denied, defendants having waived rights by previously answering.

Motion to dissolve attachment in Dungeness Trading Co. vs. J. L. Weekly was taken under advisement by Court.

Knut Knutsen, coxswain of the Snohomish, was admitted to citizenship after examination by Hon. John Speed Smith, chief naturalization examiner, who came down from Seattle to hear this and other cases.

Ole Boe was granted letters on the estate of his brother, who was shot at Ozette some weeks ago.

The final hearing in re the welfare of Bessie Gates coming on and the parents failing to appear or to further communicate to the Washington Children's Home to find a permanent home for her.

Jos. Bernier was arrested last week charged with gambling. He pleaded guilty on Tuesday before the Judge Ralston and was assessed $100 and costs.

In the matter of the claim of Cochran & Plummer for $75 attorney's fees in the case of Railway vs. Henry McGerr, court allowed $50. McGerr denied he owed anything, alleging that he had employed Seattle attorneys. This makes four different attorneys he has paid in this case, occasioned by constant changing.

Motion to dismiss D. M. Talbot from crimnal charges filed against him for illegally taking timber from the lands of Minerva Duncan, being resisted by counsel for Mrs. Duncan, Court advised all parties that he has fully made up his mind in matter and would have to call in another judge to impartially try out the issue.

Petition of August Carlson for change of name to August Thors, his family name, was granted, Mrs. Carlson agreeing thereto.

New cases, besides those above noted: Johnson & Bork vs. W. B. Ross, on account.

L. J. Leonard vs. Steele and Needham, to quiet title to waterfront.

John Solf vs. L. J. Leonard, replevin of horse.

Slack's Cash Store, Dungeness, assignment to J. N. Squire.

National Grocery Co. vs. H. J. Bugge, already in default.

Central Bank of Toppenish vs. J. H. Chenaur and D. P. McDonald, garnishment on account of note.

He made the trip in one and a quarter hours with four people in the car, whereas under the old conditions three and a half hours used to be necessary in the summer months, the only time the road was fit for travel.

SEATTLE AND NORTHWEST NEWS LETTER

Seattle, Jan. 4.—A general realization of the extremes to which the lawmakers of this state have gone in the enactment of freak and vicious laws, and a growing sentiment against their further continuance and for remedial measures, is indicated in a large meeting held a short time ago at Aberdeen, between the chamber of commerce in that city and the legislators from that county to discuss pending legislation. The legislators were unanimously urged to stand for strict economy and the Aberdeen business men believed that this could best be done by the elimination of many useless commissions, which abound on every side and hamper industry, commerce and make the burden of taxation almost unbearable. The most severe criticism of all was directed at the "Full Train Crew" law which forces trains of all sorts, even lone engines, to carry a complete train crew. The chamber asked the legislators to do their utmost to repeal this law, and which imposes $600,000 annually of needless expenditure on the railroad companies. It was shown that the unnecessary cost was in the end paid by the manufacturers and people of the state.

According to an announcement by Secretary of Agriculture Houston, all records for farm production were beaten during 1914, with crops and farm animals totalling nearly $10,000,000,000 in value, or about $83,000,000 more than in 1913. The crop value was $6,044,480,000, and that of animals and their products $3,828,456,000. The corn and the wheat crops were the most valuable ever produced in the United States.

One of the matters that is to come before the state legislature this session is the question of whether public service corporations in cities should be under local or under state control. A start has been made in this direction and efforts are being exerted by some communities to regain supervision of these utilities. Both experience and the opinions of the country's foremost economists incline to the belief that state regulation is the proper way. With many confusing local issues that arise, and where judgment is clouded by the passions of factions, justice to the public and to service corporations can only be secured when there is a fair and disinterested tribunal to consider problems as they arise.

With the advent of the new year there is every prospect that one of the state's big industries, that of lumber, will enter on a new era of prosperity. Inquiries, since the Interstate Commerce Commission allowed a rate increase, have begun to pour in and lumbermen believe that in a short time the railroads will begin to place orders for lumber and ties. Labor conditions, as they affect this industry, have also improved, and the open shop generally prevails. The big strike at Centralia mills, fathered by leaders of the International Timber Worker's Union, who would not permit workers to accept a reduction in wages during the dull period in order to keep the mills going, has collapsed, particularly because the big union withdrew its strike benefits and left the laborers to shift for themselves. There is, of course, a plentitude of labor that is being hired as fast as orders for lumber come to justify the reopening of the mills.

The signed contract for the exchange of 600,000 acres of land between the state and government has been received at Olympia from Secretary of Agriculture Houston. Secretary Houston says he will ask Congress for $50,000 to carry out the provisions of the agreement. the agreement was drawn by Attorney General Tanner and the Department of the Interior at Washington and was recently approved by the state land board.

ANGELES NEEDS TO HAVE A PORT COMMISSION

The president of the Port Angeles Commercial Club has just received a bulletin recently issued by the Directors of the Port of Boston, which should be enlightening to all who are doubtful as to the availiability of the establishment of a Port Commission in Port Angeles and Clallam County.

It must be borne in mind that Boston had an established fish business many years before a Port Commission was created, and yet it has considered it worth while to invest millions of dollars in its Port Commission projects almost entirely in behalf of the fish industry. Why?

Because Gloucester and Provincetown were, either or both, more advantageously located than Boston for this industry—each able to supply both ice and bait. and both having excellent harbor facilities.

Can we not see a very direct parallel in the establishment of a Port Commission at Seattle to overcome the natural, geographical advantages of Port Angeles? Can we not see that Port Angeles without a storage warehouse and ice plant, because of the mild, delightful climate, is far more handicapped than Gloucester or Provincetown, because of their long, cold winters, in the prime essential of supplying ice and bait for the fisheries?

Moreover, it is always a good axiom to strike while the iron is hot. Seattle's fisheries and her Port Commission are, the one in its infancy, the other in its inception. Therefore, now is the time for us to start on an equal footing. We neither need nor desire to rob Seattle of her fisheries. All we require is our logical share of the fishing business, and unless we intelligently safeguard our interests by meeting the demand for facilities, we are not going to retain our shares any better than Provincetown has done, which place, from being the foremost fishing port in Massachusetts, has settled down complacently as a third or fourth rate summer resort.

But, we quote a little from the Bulletin of the Directors of the Port of Boston:

"Already the commonwealth has invested $1,000,000 on the state's lands in South Boston, in the biggest and best fishing pier in the world, on which the fishing interests of this port have erected $2,000,000 worth of buildings for stores, ice-making plant and cold storage plant—a total investment combined of $3,000,000.

"During just one year (1913) the fish catch brought to this port alone was 17,000,000 pounds, worth $7,500,000, the first price obtained. Last year more than 528,000,000 pounds of fish were taken from the waters of New England."

With the prevalence of "hoof and mouth disease," with the propaganda for fish-eating as a means of reducing the high cost of living, and with our fishing banks, far greater, better supplied, in fact almost untouched in comparison with the old Atlantic banks, far more accessible and in reality right at our doors—in view of these vital advantages, can we, still boasting our reputation of "western hustle," afford to let such an example pass without emulation?

We wish that space permitted our publication of this Bulletin is full, but anyone desiring further knowledge of its contents will find it on file at the Commercial Club.

O'CONNOR BUILDING UP A FINE BUSINESS

The Peninsula Piano Company, under the excellent management of J. D. O'Connor, is working up a splendid business, not only in Angeles, but all thru the county. A home today is not considered quite complete without a piano and is one of the attractions that helps to keep young people in the home. Mr. O'Connor is a piano man of many years experience and you would do well to consult him if you are thinking of buying a piano. He has a nice line of pianos in his music house on the corner of Front and Oak, opposite Lutz & Co's Clothing Store.

distance for hauling logs. It requires three cars of logs to make one car of lumber. Mills must be built and the lumber cut in the interior in order to reduce the weight from 12,000 pounds per 1,000 feet to 3,000 pounds. You say you have a magnificent harbor but you can't touch a cargo of lumber here today. A dock must be built before we can get the mills to locate in the interior. The sooner you get in shape, the sooner we can afford facilities to build up the country.

"There is one thing more I want to speak about. I don't want to criticize, but to give you a friendly pointer. No man will put his money into Port Angeles unless he knows he is going to be protected; you must maintain law and order if you will succeed. Your community and your business men must see to this. Nothing can hurt Port Angeles more than to have the report go out that the city is unable to handle its local affairs.

"I have taken great satisfaction in my part of the work in connection with the railroad, and I want to congratulate you and wish you a happy new year."

President Craig after thanking Mr. Calkins, on behalf of the Club, most heartily for his assistance and for the information just given, called on Contractor Erickson.

Mr. Erickson said he was somewhat proud to be counted one of the "Milwaukee fellows," and he had always found it a great help to be received with an open hand and heart in Port Angeles; it had helped him thru many difficulties. He had been surprised at the amount of business already done on the road. Nine hundred cars of shingles already shipped over it; he had no such expectations. As early as last June they had begun to send shingles East by rail. Every little mill west of Angeles loaded cars right at their door.

"I met a man today," said Mr. Erickson, "who reached out his hand to me and it looked as if it was twelve feet long. It meant a great deal to me. A deep water dock is a necessity; it will accommodate the country both east and west. You can't get along without it. No individual can build it. The cost must be borne by the whole county. The railroad proved a heavy load to start with on small capital and the times turned against us, but it is coming out all right. We have paid as we have gone, even if we haven't gone as fast as we would have liked to. And we are going to continue until we have made connections as agreed."

President Craig, replying for the members of the Club, said that if a 12-foot hand looked good to Mr. Erickson he could be assured we were all holding out mental 24-foot hands to him; that we appreciated the work he has done and the information given.

"I have been astonished to see the progress the city has made in two years," said Mr. Peterson, next called upon for a few words. "It is self-evident you have a deep water port, but ships cannot be gotten in here without docks. You may not entirely realize how much your whole community will profit from yourfine new streets as the results will come indirectly, and so it will be with the docks. They will result in the building up of the country and will benefit every citizen, east and west."

A standing vote of thanks was then given Messrs. Calkins, Erickson and Peterson for their kindness and courtesy in meeting with the Club while in the city, and in setting forth so clearly the next step necessary in the development of our county.

A pocket purse containing a small amount of money was picked up in the dressing room of the Opera house at the dance Monday evening. Owner can get same by calling at the Olympic-Leader office, describing the purse and paying for this notice.
