INDIRECT BENEFIT OF PORT COMMISSION IS ENORMOUS

A Powerful Aid in Development of the Country; With Ideal Harbor at Port Angeles Great Investment Not Necessary.

"You are a young city, a boosting city. I felt it in the air as soon as I landed here. You are going some. I don't find a man here who isn't a booster and that's something unusual nowadays. Usually every second man has a grouch on." Such were the opening remarks of Judge Remsberg, member of Seattle's Port Commission who had kindly accepted the invitation extended by the Congregational Brotherhood to come down to Angeles and give our people a few pointers on the practical workings of municipal docks.

"I have been looking over your harbor today," continued Mr. Remsberg. It is the grandest on the coast; you have 60 feet of water close up to the shore, a wonderful thing.

"Has the Port Commission of Seattle been a success so far?" Is a question we are frequently asked. It has not been, so far as paying interest on the investment is concerned, but it must be remembered we are only started. Two years ago wharfage was 50 cents a ton; now it is 25. The people are getting the benefit. We are running the Leshi ferry at a loss of $1,000 a month, and we are proud of it. We are developing one of the finest portions of the country tributary to Seattle. The ferry takes the place of the paved road, which would have been built had there been no lake. The ferry is a road. You get no direct return from a wagon when it goes over a paved road. You don't expect to make money out of a road. We merely try to keep the expense of the ferry within bounds. All over the country the public is taking over and controlling the necessities. We us own our public utilities.

I have been living in Seattle 25 years. Twenty years ago we paid the Seattle Lighting Company 20c per kilowatt. We continually asked for a reduction; they couldn't possibly reduce it. They asked us to look at their books which showed that they were losing money, yet in 1895 when we voted on acquiring a municipal plant we had the hardest fight of our lives. About ten days before the city turned on the juice the company cut the price right in two. The county may not get any direct returns as a corporation, but it has saved the citizens a million dollars a year.

"You have reached a point where you must have larger facilities. You have 60,000,000 feet of lumber to be marketed—untold wealth. You must have some way to market it. The time has come when you must reduce the cost to the minimum. You cannot go at it haphazard. You cannot expect a man to come in here and put up that dock for you unless he charges a high price. You have got to handle that lumber at the lowest cost to compete with Seattle, where sixteen vessels can be docked at the same time. You have miles of water front and plenty of land. A dock ought not to be very expensive. There are two kinds of docks, pier and key. A key dock, running along the shore, will afford the same berthing space at half the cost. Roughly estimated, it seems to me you ought to be able to build a key dock and improvements for $150,000, which would be very cheap. That would include sheds, tracks,

SALOON MEN LOSE FIGHT

Governor's Lister's Threat to Veto Defeated Movement for Special Election.

Olympia, Wednesday, Jan. 20.—As a bit of political by-play, the Legislature this morning passed a joint resolution, originating from Republican sources, which declares that the present session will not consider any porposal for a special election to consider Initiative Measure No. 18 or any other bill that affects the liquor traffic.

The resolution was agreed upon at a conference of Senate and House leaders last night. An earlier effort had been made to poll both houses, and it was said that but fifteen senators and thirty-eight representatives had been found who would vote for a special election.

This demonstrated that the special election features of all initiative bills would be defeated. Therefore, it was agreed that the Republican legislature could best offset the widely advertised attitude of the Democratic governor by rushing on record in opposition to special elections or other forms of extravagance.

The defeat of the special election scheme is attributable to two causes, though only one appeared in the debates and in general gossip. This was the cry of economy, lawmakers insisting that the public sentiment was so strongly opposed to extra expense that the special election would arouse a storm of criticism. The other really important cause was the fact that an epidemic of cold feet spread thru the capital shortly after the Legislature convened. Governor Lister's appeal for $50,000 to enforce the prohibition law and his well-known determination to veto any special election bill influenced many of the "wets" who might have voted for the proposed election.

INTERNATIONAL OPERATIC CO.

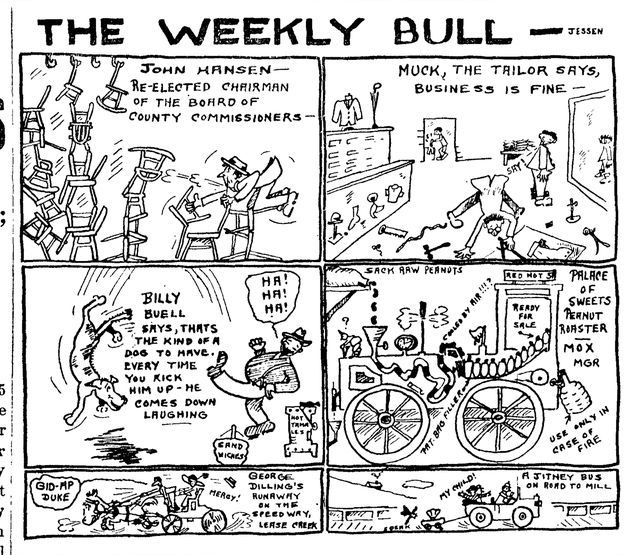
The International Operatic Company, which is to appear on our lecture course January 25, is considered the very best musical company of its kind in this country. The soprano, Mrs. McKinnie, better known in the musical world as Tekla Farm, was for some time prima donna with Madame Schumman Heink. She is acknowledged to be one of the greatest sopranos on the Lyceum or Chautauqua platform, and each member of the company is an artist in the truest sense of the word.

Miss Heidenreich, contralto, of the National Grand Opera Company, has attracted the attention of musical critics during several seasons of pronounced success.

Mr. Grubb, tenor, has a voice of the brilliant robust quality and he sings with the ease and finish of the true artist.

Mr. McKinnie was the leading baritone for years in Savage's English Grand Opera Company and there won the admiration of every audience. His voice is a baritone of true, rich, vibrant proportions.

Miss Day, as accompanist, is sympathetic and artistic to a marked degree. She has spent years in study with the famous Godowsky of Berlin.



CITY ORDERS WORK STARTED ON EDIZ HOOK ROADWAY

Special Police for 24 Hour Service on Highways Leading to the Mill; First Step in Putting Stop to Continual Trouble in Vicinity.

All members present except Fisher.

Electric light committee by Mr. Bigelow reported application of Mrs. Shomar for extension to 15th street, and recommended extension be made, cost $30. Granted.

Agreement was read between City and W. U. Telegraph Co., and adopted. It provides that telegraph company may string their wires on city light poles from office to vicinity of 1st and Vine streets, and on such other poles in city as hereafter may be agreed mutually convenient. City must not at any time exceed 5000 volts on any of its lines used jointly. In consideration the company agrees to help maintain line to extent of 33 per cent.

City Attorney Smith submitted his opinion requested by the Government. He holds that city may not spend any money on the spit, it being outside the city limits, but that city can annex for strictly municipal purposes by adoption of ordinance, or by special legislative enactment, he favoring the legislative act. The Mayor read the law which provides for annexing territory contiguous or otherwise "for park, cemetery or other municipal purposes," holding that the purposes for which city desires to hold same is municipal. City attorney disagreed. It was ordered, however, that the engineer survey the proposed road to the light house on the west and north sides of the sand spit. Mr. Bigelow wanted the survey money put in actual construction work, holding that a survey was unnecessary.

Marshal Dustman called attention of council to disreputable sewer on First street. He had notified owner to abate, but owner insisted it was up to contractors to remedy, hence report to council. Upon motion of Fowler, owner was given 48 hours to abate nuisance. School sewer in vicinity of Motor Inn was also reported in bad condition and school board had agreed to have same fixed.

Engineer reported work in District 12, East Hill, ready for inspection, and acceptance. Council will view same today at 2 p. m., with view of finally accepting work.

W. J. Larkin, the irrepressible, asked privilege of cleaning up his yard adjoining the city hall, fixing fence and constructing a chicken coop. Rejected as against fire ordinance. "Well, may I clean up my yard and fix the fence" he laughingly asked.

Chris Kuppler was granted privilege of putting in a stairway three feet wide leading to basement of his building on Laurel street, same to be in sidewalk area and at NE corner of building.

Jos. Proll wants city to direct contractor Anderson on Lincoln street to remove stump from his yard which they blasted in. Referred to street commissioner and city engineer with power to act.

A petition was read from 5th street property owners, asking that sidewalk between C and G streets be repaired and renewed as same is in a dangerous condition. Dangerous condition of gravel pit in same vicinity was also ordered fenced on south side.

Request of Palace Bakery to tear down old barn in rear and in place construct platform 38x50 and flat roof open shed 8x34 on one side was denied.

Mrs. Jacobson for the Apostolic Mission appealed to council to allow the construction of out building. Rejected. Council ordered clerk to notify owners to connect with sewer.

PROBATE CASES HEARD BY COURT

Details of Horse Trade Occupied Officials' Time for a Half Day Wednesday.

In C. F. Seal vs. J. F. Weelky, motion to dissolve attachment, case set over until February 2, owing to the sickness of counsel.

Case of D. L. Gallagher vs. S. J. McIntosh was finally settled by dismissal with prejudice without costs, by agreement of counsel. It will be remembered that McIntosh some time ago had Gallagher arrested for raising a check. This was dismissed and later this suit was started. All now agree they have had enough.

Richard Blake was appointed administrator of estate of Ida M. Blake.

Henry Sievers was appointed administrator of estate of his motner Margaret Sievers, and executor under the will of his father Claus Sievers, recently deceased.

Demurrer overruled in Jardee vs. Thompson, and defendant given time to further plead.

Distribution was ordered to Mrs. Sullivan of all property in Michael Sullivan estate, except $5 to be deposited in bank to credit of each minor.

In the case of E. W. Merrill & Co., as assignee of J. E. Nelson, vs. J. Batz, et al. Court found that defendants had sufficient counter claims to offset any claim for wages by Nelson and case was dismissed with court costs against plaintiff.

Demurrer of Sheriff in Gomoll vs. Johnson and Gallagher was overruled, case to be heard on its merits.

S. C. Rose was appointed guardian of estate of A. A. Richardson, consisting mainly of $500 personal property. Real estate has been transferred to his daughter, she paying the mortgage.

Alden Goodwin secured judgment by default against Walter Goodwin

CLUB CONSIDERS COMMUNICATIONS FROM MILL COMPANY

Consensus of Opinion Appeared to Be that City Had Been Fair and Patient with Unsuccessful Strike which Should Now Be Declared Off.

Special meeting of the Port Angeles Commercial Club called by the Board of Directors for Monday evening, January 19, and adjourned at that time until Wednesday evening, January 20, for the purpose of hearing the reading of communications from the Puget Sound Mills and Timber Company, relative to the policy of that company with reference to the operation of the company's store and for the purpose of discussing that subject and the problems affecting or affected by it. This meeting was adjourned January 18, in order to enable members to hear addresses delivered on the same evening in the Congregational church, under the auspices of the Congregational Brotherhood, by Secretary C. E. Remsberg, and Assistant Secretary Hamilton Higday of the Port of Seattle Commission.

January 20, 1915, 8 o'clock p. m., present: President Craig, Vice-President Aldwell, J. I. Kirschberg, J. C. Hansen, E. Christopherson, C. W. Muck, J. J. McKenna, D. H. Fry, C. W. Jeffrey, L. J. Leonard, H T. Walton, S. J. Lutz, T. F. Trumbull, W. J. Ware, C. Winfield Harris, Chris Morganroth, F. L. Thompson, B. Goodbrand, Thomas C. Fields, E. L. Ware, James Chenaur, J. J. Herlihy, E. F. Jessen, D. J. McCarthy, Geo. E. Boomer and three or four others, a total of twenty-five members.

Puget Sound Mills & Timber Company, Communications.

The secretary read a letter from the Puget Sound Mills & Timber Co., by Thomas C. Fields, superintendent, dated January 11, 1915, in which the company specifically branded as untrue assertions alleged to have been published in the Peninsula Free Press to the effect that the company required its employes to trade at the company store, and that the shingle men are compelled to board at the company's boarding house. These allegations the company flatly denied, declaring that the company cared not where they boarded or slept. This was supported and fully affirmed in a communication dated January 13, and signed by Yard Foreman William Foley, Shingle Mill Foreman G. A. Hallstrom, Planing Mill Foreman H. P. Kobering, Shingle Mill Night Foreman Geo. H. Rinkel, and Shingle Mill Day Foreman L. E. Brain.

Editor Geo. E. Boomer stoutly denied that the Free Press had ever stated that men were forced to trade at the company store.

Mr. Hurlihy replied that for the last three months the Free Press had persistently misrepresented the mill company's policy and had endeavored always to pervert public sentiment against the mill company.

Mr. Trumbull thought that the question before the Club was the truth or falsity of the charge that th company compelled its employes to trade at the store, and that the company was entitled to have the truth made known to the public.

Mr. Boomer declared that since the company had recently inaugurated the policy of selling store coupon books to its employes it thus unfairly competed with established retail merchants, and that he was told by a former employe closely connected with the mill store that more than $3,000 worth of goods were sold in December to the general public outside the mill area.

Mr. Herlihy replied that the coupon system was established last July in which month the sale of coupon books reached $900, in October $1400 and in November and December $1,800 to $2000, in round numbers, and that sales to other than mill employes averaged about $300 a month.

Mr. Trumbull reviewed the history of the mill store and boarding house, showing that the company established both contrary to its adopted policy because the absence of a passable street to the mill at that time rendered such establishments absolutely necessary.

Mr. Boomer opposed the principle of the company store and urged that no future establishment be facilitated here without provision for its elimination. He particularly objected to the coupon system.

Mr. Trumbull, in reply, compelled Mr. Boomer to admit that he used the coupon system to influence merchants to advertise in the Free Press.

G. W. Muck stated that he had solicited business in all departments of the mill and had shown goods in the mill store. He had been informed that of the $57,000 paid to the employes just before Christmas in checks, only $9,000 of the checks were cashed in Port Angeles.

D. J. McCarthy declared that the further progress of the city depended largely upon the spirit and efficiency of our people and their local government.

L. J. Leonard suggested that a representative committee of three practical men be chosen to inspect the work at the mill and determine if the strikers have any chance to win because of alleged inefficiency of the crews now at work. If this committee found the mill operating satisfactorily, the strike should at once be declared off and picketing suppressed.

President Craig stated that it had been up to this time the declared attitude of the Club to remain neutral, restricting its activities toward the maintenance of law and order.

Vice-President Aldwell said that the merchants had been very patient and tolerant, but that they were suffering seriously in the loss of the mill trade. He thought the mill should do everything possible to help solve

WOULD REVISE CONSTITUTION

Governor Lister's Recommendation Meets with Approval from All Quarters.

Governor Lister's urgent recommendation to the legislature to take steps looking to the calling of a constitutional convention, is meeting with approval with legislators here irrespective of party affiliations. The recommendation will be embodied in a committee bill and submitted as one of the early features of the session. A two-thirds majority in both houses is required to call the convention. The consensus of newspaper opinion the state over favors the convention, so far as expressed, as do party leaders, business men and commercial organizations, so far as there has been expressions of sentiment in those quarters. MASTER KEY AT DREAM

John Fleming Wilson's great film story, the Master Key, will be shown at the Dream theater next Thursday. There will be a special matinee at 2 p. m., and the evening show will start at 6 p. m. The Master Key is in 30 reels. Two reels will be shown on Thursday of each week for 15 consecutive weeks. This thrilling story of mystery and romance features Bob Leonard and Ella Hall, and is said to have cost twice the sum that the Trey o' Hearts cost to produce. On Monday, January 25th, the leading characters of the Master Key will appear in a two reel lumber camp drama, "Olaf Erickson," and a Mary Fuller Picture, the "Phantom Cracksman" completes the program. Tuesday, January 26th, "Across the Pacific" will be shown. This thrilling war drama of 5 reels is a product of the World Film Corporation.

AN IDEAL COMMUNITY ACTIVITY

An interesting talk on the work of the Seattle playgrounds association by Mr. Higby of the Seattle Port Commission proved quite a feature at the monthly meeting of the Brotherhood Monday. It was Ladies' night and the unusually large audience was thus entertained by Mr. Higby while waiting for the arrival of guests from the Commercial Club.

Mr. Lindsay of the Brotherhood's committee had reported the making, by the city engineer, of a blue print showing the possible outlines of Civic Park, and the listing of owners of the property desired, which was as far as the city can go at present, or until authority is had from the legislature to raise money for park purposes by means of bonds. City Attorney Smith would take the matter up while in Olympia next week.

In 1907, said Mr. Higby, a little group of interested people organized the Seattle Playgrounds Association. The $2,000,000 provided by the city for park purposes was being too largely expended for boulevards by the park board. The mayor and council met the association's demand for playgrounds with scorn, but continued agitation caused them to see matters in a different light. Seattle now has 26 playgrounds, 14 of which are supervised. Several of them are provided with recreation buildings and are in use throughout the year. Seattle's park system is now the best in the United States. "We have wading pools, tennis courts, sand courts, swings, shade trees, lawns, and seats for the old people. It is an ideal community activity and I commend it to you," concluded the speaker.

The question of government reserves being brought up, Dr. Lewis suggested that the four lots opposite the Court House might be secured; they would have the advantage of being close to Civic Park. The city has already put in an application for them for city purposes, but the Doctor was informed no action would be taken by the present congress. The Hospital reserve has been leased and improved and the government could hardly be expected to cancel the lease. Besides, it is not central and would be of little use to the children. Jitney cars would make the city park available and it has the advantage of having 40 acres of the 160 cleared. But the Doctor believed the ideal plan would be to acquire and park every one of the valleys running thru town.

Abraham E. Smith, U. S. Consul at Victoria for the past 17 years, died in that city Monday evening. Mr. Smith was a trained journalist, having conducted the Rockford, Ill., Gazette for over 25 years. He had many friends in Angeles, it having been his custom to make frequent trips to this side. He is survived by the widow, a daughter and two sons; burial, after cremation, will be had at Rockford.

CLUB CONSIDERS MILL COMMUNICATION

the problem so that the men at the mill could come up town to trade.

President E. L. Ware of the Timber Workers Union said that he and the union would also like to know who is preventing the men from coming up town.

Mr. Fields said that every noon a crowd of picketers gather about the mill fence and dare the workmen to come up town, openly and in the vile language threatening them with personal violence.

Mr. Trumbull declared that members of the organization openly boasted about beating men up, and that one member of the union had told him twice that they proposed to perpetrate assaults worse than ever before.

James Chenaur, a member of the Club and of the Timber Workers Union, remarked that many present bewailed the sufferings of the poor merchant, but the merchant did no talking for himself. He had never heard violence suggested at a meeting of the union, and he personally had comitted no violence nor would he be a party to it thru his organization.

Mr. Aldwell thought that the merchants of the city, whose trade was being ruined and who had been fair and patient with both sides, had suffered long enough and something should be done for and by them for relief.

Port Angeles Marine Band Concert

The secretary urged that the members present attend the free concert to be given by the Port Angeles Marine Band in the Opera House on Sunday afternoon, January 24, at 3 p. m.

OUR WATER SUPPLY

To the Editor:

Can you tell many of your readers the terms under which the company that is supposed to supply this city with constant flow of pure and wholesome water holds its charter? It is not possible that the company has made itself liable to forfeit its right through frequent failures to adhere to its terms? Is it not a fact that after every heavy rainfall the pipes carry into our houses as much sand and ooze as they carry water? This (Sunday) morning the tap in my bathroom discharged into the basin a liquid that resembled weak coffee and when I turned the so-called water into the wastepipe a sandy sediment was left in the bottom of the basin. Surely there must be some means whereby the company can be made to improve the output or go out of a business the handling of which they do not appear to understand. Port Angeles has just awakened from its Rip Van Winkle sleep and the first thing that we should look after is an improvement of its water supply. I would suggest the appointment of a committee to look into the matter. If the City Council will not act, perhaps the energetic and able Commercial Club will.

Tax Payer.

Pussy Willow Day, when each loyal citizen is expected to send his Eastern friends a little box of branches, will come two weeks earlier this year. The buds have been breaking for the past ten days and ere the close of the month the downy balls will be in their prime. Spring millinery, the latest in hats and gowns, are being shown in all the large display windows in Seattle, and every window has its jar of willow buds, half opened. The forest service report shows less snow fall this year than for twenty years previous. On the west side of the Cascades there is about three feet of snow, less than half that usual at this time of the year, and the mountains are dark colored, the lower underbrush covering the slopes showing thru just as it does on Mount Angeles.

If Councilman Dustman's "stitch in time" policy with regard to Front street be carried out throughout the city, we will not need to be ashamed of the unkept condition of our streets this summer. By making an equally thoro job of each street as the regrade work is completed we may easily have the cleanest and brightest city on the Sound, a matter in which we might well take pride.

A jitney bus route has been started at Port Townsend, with both 5 and 10c fares. There is where they will make their mistake. The popularity of the jitney (New York slang for nickel) bus rests entirely upon its popular price.

DREAM THEATER

Why not the jitney bus in Port Angeles? Every Ford in Seattle has been decorated with big banners giving the names of certain streets between which it runs, and the price, 5c. While not as speedy as street cars on the long runs, in the down town districts where the cars have to stop at every cross street the Ford has everything its own way. A great howl has gone up because of the loss to the street car companies and consequently to the city, but the traveling public is revelling in adequate transportation facilities for once.

The use of modern improvements and innovations is largely a matter of habit. Once we become accustomed to them we wonder how we ever managed to get along without them. Such would undoubtedly be the case with the jitney bus in Port Angeles; and a number of routes could be suggested that would prove a great convenience and consequently popular.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Bradley, late of Lake Worth, southern Florida, are the latest arrivals, coming with the intention of making Port Angeles their home. Having been old residents here on the Sound and having five married children living in the West, they felt they were strangers in a strange land in Florida and decided to return. After a few days spent with a daughter in Spokane, they grew tired of the snow and came on to the Last, Best West, where it is always spring, selecting Port Angeles because of a belief, now universal on the Sound, that it is the coming city.

You may think Muck, the Tailor, is crowding the season a little with his display of spring woolens, but just you wait 'till day after tomorrow before ordering your spring suit and you'll find yourself a back number, out of style and out of date. Spring is not "coming"—it is here now.

ANGELES BEATS SEQUIM IN FAST GAME

The Angeles Basket Ball team, altho out-weighed, and handicapped by the small floor, captured the second game of the season from the Sequim H. S. five by a score of 27 to 12. The score at the end of the first half was 18 to 6 with Angeles on the long end of the string and the Angeles boys were at no time in danger of the Sequim five.

There will be two games played on Friday evening, one between the Faculty and the boys team and the second between the Sequim H. S. girls and the Angeles girls. This promises to be a good game for the last game played was won by Sequim by one point, the score being 16 to 15. The Angeles girls are determined to get even by winning this game and they are going to fight to the end.

JANITOR DOTY RESIGNS

H. W. Doty has resigned as janitor of the court house after a service of over 19 years. Political regimes have come and gone, but faithful Mr. Doty has remained on the job. It all came about by the demand that he not only do the janitor work but also the nightwatch. This Mr. Doty, being a man of family and a home-loving man could not see his way to do. Then it is only to be temporary anyway as the janitor at the new building must be a licensed engineer—and other things.

Mr. Doty carries with him in his enforced resignation the good wishes of every office holder in the days of his service. Never was an employe more faithful. The new janitors will have to go some to emulate his record.

Methodist Episcopal Church, Rev. Herbert Jones, Pastor. Morning Service 11 a. m. Evening Service 7:30 p. m. Subject for the morning sermon: "A Man Who Had the Blues, and How He was Cured." Evening: "Profit and Loss." Special music by the choir. Evening song service led by Mr. McCarthy.

A. H. Singer and brother-in-law, Mr. Sandmire of Seattle, were in from Lake Crescent last Saturday. They are very busy these days getting things in shape for enlarging and improving the Burkhardt place which they have bought and will convert into an ideal summer home for boarders. In addition to the large main building, which will have twelve or fifteen bed rooms and an elegant living room, with wide porches all around, there will be a number of cottages, cozy and comfortable, besides tents for those who wish them. The grounds are to be wonderfully improved also with fancy flower beds, winding paths, tennis courts and in fact, everything that will add to the pleasure and comfort of the guests.

The Olympic-Leader is a good paper.

THE PALACE BAKERY

PRETTY HOME WEDDING AT PORT CRESCENT

One of the prettiest home weddings that I have ever witnessed was one that I by chance happened to see in the home of one of my customers last Wednesday at the Raymapo station, fifteen miles west on the new railroad.

The contracting parties were Mr. James McNally and Miss Edith Wasankari, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel Wasankari, and was at the home of the brides parents. The ceremony ws most excellently performed by Rev. Herbert Jones, pastor of the M. E. church in Port Angeles, at high noon, in the presence of about 30 friends and relatives. The wedding march was played by Mr. Alton of Port Angeles. The pastor was tastefully dressed for the occasion. The bride wore a beautiful gown of shadow lace, over white silk, with a large bunch of orange blossoms on the crown of the veil. The groom was handsomely dressed in a blue serge suit. Miss Ester Wasankari, sister of the bride, acted as brides maid and looked almost like the bride herself, daintily dressed in white, with a pale blue sash about the waist. The groom's brother was best man. After the usual congratulations, all were ushered into the large dining room, where the long table was loaded to full capacity, with one of those well-cooked and bountiful dinners, only to be found in a good farm home. At 1:25 p. m., the bride and groom departed by auto for Port Angeles in the midst of a shower of rice, thrown by the relatives and friends of the bridal pair. They will spend about ten days in Angeles, after which they will be at home in their new bungalow, just completed on Mr. McNally's farm, near his father's home. Both are very popular young people and highly esteemed by all who know them. And we all join in, wishing them a long, happy and prosperous life. J. D. O'Connor.

TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK DIRECTORS ELECTED

The annual meeting of the Port Angeles Trust & Savings Bank was held at the bank on Wednesday afternoon. The shareholders were much gratified at the amount of business which the bank has secured during the eleven months it has been in existence. The directors who will serve for the ensuing year are: R. D. Willson, D. E. McGillivray, Christopher Kuppler, Alston Fairservice, C. L. Babcock, Robert Gilmore, Herman Johnson, Willis Chambers, and Benj. N. Phillips. All the old officers were reelected

In the evening a banquet was given by the bank to the stockholders and their wives at the Olympic Hotel. The banquet was in every way a credit to the new hosts at the hotel. Mr. Walter MacClark was in the role of toast-master, and the following toasts were responded to:

How the Stockholders Can Help the Bank, R. D. Willson; The Trust Department, Frank L. Plummer; The Ladies, Dr F. T. Hyde. Mr. Clifford Wiley, of Lewis, Wiley & Morse, who was a "drop-in" guest, of the bank, gave a forceful address in which he emphasized the fact that the bank has excellent facilities for carrying on all kinds of financial operations. Dr. D. E. McGillivray's subject was "The Savings Department." Benj. N. Phillips spoke on "The Future of the Bank."

COMMERCIAL CLUB MEETING AT SEQUIM

A number of members of the Port Angeles Comercial Club are in attendance at a general meeting of the people of the East End this afternoon, held at Sequim upon invitation of the Club, to participate in a discussion of the proposed Port District with the view of including that part of the county if they so desire.

Mrs. Jessie Webster leaves tomorrow night on the City of Angeles, for a weeks' vacation. While gone she expects to attend the Mid-Winter Board meeting of the State Federation of Women's Clubs to be held in Olympia, January 28 and 29. The Olympia Club women will entertain the visiting ladies with a complimentary luncheon on the 28th and in the evening will hold an open meeting at which the members of the Legislature and their wives will be invited as guests of the Federation. Governor Lister is also expected as a guest. Senator Ralph Metcalf will discuss the subject of "Rural Credits" and a history of the Club movement will be given by the Federation president, Mrs. Ruth McKee. The following morning the Club women will visit the House and Senate, after which the Board will convene and finish up their business.

At the Congregational church special music is being planned for both services. In the morning there will be a solo by Mrs. Luppen and in the evening Miss Fisk will sing. Miss Fisk is the guest of Miss Inez McLaughlin. Two years ago she visited Port Angeles and sang at the Congregational church. Her beautiful voice and pleasing personality will be remembered by those who heard her before. Mrs. Smith will give a short paper on the "Hymns of the Church."

Mr. N. McKee, a contractor, who has been doing considerable road work and grading during the past year, has rented the Oscar Morse barn, on the Peoples wharf and will go into a general delivery business, delivering for most of the grocers, the Port Angeles Meat & Sausage Market and the City Fish Market.

Get your hair shampooed and correctly dressed at Pettitt's' Barber Shop by the lady expert. Appointments made for any day in the week.

OLYMPIC ROAD IS NOW INCORPORATED

The first formal action relating to the acquisition by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, of the railroad system on the Olympic peninsula, built by C. J. Erickson, occurred yesterday when articles of incorporation of the Seattle, Port Angeles & Western Railroad Company were filed at Olympia. The incorporators are:

H. B. Earling and Avery M. Ingersoll, vice-presidents of the Milwaukee, and R. M. Calkins, traffic manager for the same system, all of whom have headquarters in the executive offices of the company in the White building. The three named and E. D. Sewall, vice-president of the Milwaukee, with headquarters in Chicago, and C. J. Erickson, constitute the board of trustees of the new company.

TRACED ACROSS COUNTRY BY TATTOOED FOREARM

Identified by the initials "B. L. E." tattooed on his forearm as the man wanted in Cleveland on the charge of impersonating a federal secret service man, D. C. Smith was arrested here Wednesday by Capt. Thomas B. Foster, secret service operative, and W. D. Downey, deputy marshal.

Tuesday, Capt. Washer, wired a description of the man, with instructions that he would probably be found in Angeles.

Capt. Foster figured it out that "B. L. E." meant Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. On his arrival here, the government man learned where a man answering the telegraphic description lived. A woman answered Capt. Foster's rap at the door.

"Do you know if there is a locomotive engineer living here that is out of work?,, he queried. "Perhaps I have a job for him."

"Yes, there is." answered the woman, and she called from the foot of the stairs, "Oh, Mr. Smith."

Capt. Foster and Marshal Downey did not wait for Mr. Smith to come down. They arrested him upstairs.

STATE ASKED TO ENDORSE GRAVES PLAN

President Craig and Secretary Teck were in attendance at a conference of Hoquiam, Aberdeen, Townsend and Angeles, held in Seattle the 15th, to endorse the plan of National Forester Graves for improvement of the Olympic Highway. The conference recommended that half the appropriation to be asked from the legislature by the state highway commission toward the Olympic Highway project be spent on the Forks-Quinault link, where 55 miles will complete a continuous scenic highway of 400 miles around the peninsula.

CITY COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

A petition for a two plank walk on Peabody street, 11th to Broadway, for benefit of 33 school children of vicinity south of town denied, as setting bad precedent.

Petition of O.D. Cummins to put in shooting gallery in room recently vacated by O. A. Pettit's barber shop, filed, council having no authority in matter.

Permission was granted R. Dillon to construct a building 26x56 on lot 6, block 116, to cost $1250.

Permission was given E. A. McRae to put in new floor and glass front in old shooting gallery on south side of Front street.

Residents on plateau above Front street crib were given permit to put in private sewer down Front street to Chase crossing to bay at Chase.

T. T. Aldwell was given permission to put in sidewalk elevator in front of Seevers Grocery, now known as Jeffrey's.

City attorney reported that all city had to do to get around the law providing that all work in excess of $500 shall be done by contract, is to declare an emergency. City can then do work under direction of street superintendent. A real joke, he said.

The famous burned tree at the end of Third street extension came in for another inning. City attorney finally gave it as his opinion that as it was apparently a menace city could order its removal. Owner was ordered to remove same.

An ordinance was offered by Mr. Bigelow amending the rules governing Ocean View cemetery. Two important changes are that lots are raised to $4, and city collects for digging graves at time permits are granted. This relieves the caretaker from this duty and everybody must now pay. Caretaker Johnson will hereafter get a salary of $75 per month instead of only fees as heretofore, and will be required to put in 8 hours a day, turning in all fees to the city. Mr. Bigelow thought with the city guaranteeing the $5 for digging the graves, that plenty of men could be had on the old basis which he thought would be most satisfactory. Mr. Gherke being called upon stated land at cemetery did not altogether agree with plat. No action.

Mayor called attention to Mr. Davis' request for special police at head of bay. Filion wanted to know if there were any depredations reported. No telling when there will be and man on the job would be able to place responsibility. Hooker had talked with man working at the mill, who having to go both ways in dark was afraid; would have to quit. He moved that the marshal put on two men, disinterested, and each to work a twelve hour shift. Mr. Bigelow thought this a useless expense. Fowler wanted committee appointed to investigate. Mr. Hooker said they would know as much when they got thru as before. Mr. Hurlihe of the P. S. M. & T. C., stated that there had been continual trouble in that vicinity; he would not say by strikers as he did not know, but by someone; his company were policing their grounds but could not police the highways. There must be protection. Wolverton agreed that there must be protection. Filion agreed to support motion if left to discretion of marshal to fire when found not necessary. Agreed. Marshal was authorized to employ.

Upon motion of Mr. Bigelow, bill poster license was allowed at $10 for coming year provided he removes within ten days all bill boards from any city street.

Matter of constructing new Oak street walk south of First alongside of present walk leaving old walk for accommodation of basement of City Hall and old Richardson office was discussed at length but passed without any decision.

Contractors Johnson & Leonard having removed some of the planking from the Peabody bridge at Seventh street were ordered to return same for use of city.

Hearing on I street improvement came up. The preliminary expense money not having been put up, no action was taken.

Street superintendent reported on having secured a new residence and city barn at 7th and Cherry streets.

Approach to alley from Francis west between Caroline and Georgiana referred to street superintendent with power to act, to extent of $10.

Council adjourned.

COURT HEARS PROBATE CASES

and wife for $4,866.92, on promissory note.

The hearing on the order to show cause why the administrator in the estate of Pehr A. Peterson, late of Ozette, was had Tuesday. The administrator submitted his final report in the estate, and the date of hearing on same was fixed for March 2, to which time further hearing on the show cause order was also postponed. It was apparent that the delinquencies were largely a matter of misjudgment. Of an estate estimated at $1500, the administrator has about $400 left.

The court was occupied all of Wednesday morning with a horse trade case in John Solf vs. L. J. Leonard, and A. L. Johnson was brought in. A horse trade is a bad case at best but where a written bill of sale is brought against an alleged verbal agreement, and where the main witness has been doing too much talking as in this case, it is hard to get at facts. Judgment went for the defendant as to the trade and against them on their demand for feed of horse since November, $35. Defendants were also allowed part of their costs.

In Kaughman vs. J. R. Gallagher as sheriff, demurrer of defendant was overruled, in an effort to have the case heard on its merits. The sheriff sold a launch to plaintiff, receiving the money therefore. Hardly was the bill of sale recorded when the launch was siezed by U. S. Marshal, wiping out claim of purchaser who now seeks to recover his money or the launch.

A settlement in Caskey vs. Caskey was reported as probable, but owing to the sickness of Mr. Lindsay for defendants, it is not consumated at this time.

Motion for new trial in Schwabacher Bros. vs. Johnson, and the sheriff, which was decided against the sheriff in the aggregate of $200, court took same under advisement.

Court business has fallen off fifty per cent in the past six months.

LINCOLN HEIGHTS

Mr. Hemme's folks did not get away last week. Mr. Hemme started Sunday morning with his car of stock and household goods and Mrs. Hemme and son went on the City of Angeles Monday. They had many troubles in the way of getting started to their new home but we hope they will have all pleasant hereafter.

The Pollock's have had their share of misfortune recently. Mr. Pollock's sore hand was but little better when his son Oscar came home with a badly cut foot. Dr. Hyde sewed up the cut and Oscar gets around with the aid of a crutch.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Fey, of Lincoln Heights, Friday evening, a fine boy, at the home of Mrs. John Smith. Mrs. Smith is caring for the mother and baby.

The Wheeler family entertained a number of their friends Saturday evening with dancing, cards and a nice luncheon. Coffee came near being a minus quantity, as the city water had ceased to run, and this being a "dry" ward no other beverage was at hand, but some thoughtful person suggested the idea of going to a lower altitude, where the pipes might not be emptied. Water was found and the indispensible coffee was made and enjoyed immensely.

Query: If two men with ropes are necessary to patrol Pine Hill for the purpose of coralling loose cows, how many men are necessary in the 6th Ward, which extends from Tumwater street to the Boulevard. (about 4 miles.)

Mrs. Libbie Dorr visited with Mrs. Bowman Sunday evening.

MT. PLEASANT.

Mrs. Krajewski, Sr., who has been visiting in Angeles for the past week, returned home Saturday.

Mrs. Albert Draper visited in Angeles from Friday until Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Belt of Angeles spent a few days in Mt. Pleasant, the past week.

Mrs. Joe Hagan of Angeles visited at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harrington, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Eva Stevens is visiting in the city for a few days.

Lad Byers, who has been working on the Aldwell ranch for sometime, returned home Friday.

Mrs. Hall and Mrs. McLaughlin visited in Angeles Tuesday and Wednesday.

DE FUCA

Mrs. J. A. Reeve has bought a mill, known as Merrill's mill, which she intends to move out here from near Angeles as soon as possible.

James Wooding spent several days in Sequim last week.

Nat Broughton and Edwin Champion were Sunday visitors in De Fuca, as guests of the Thorpe boys.

Mrs. Wm. Wooding, Sr., and Lucy returned from Seattle Saturday, after a visit of a month with Miss Florence Wooding.

George Potter of Lost Mountain, who has been staying with Mr. Wooding for the past month, returned to his home on Tuesday.

Miss Marie Broughton was a Sunday visitor from Blue Mountain, at Heuhslein's. Mr. Howard Putman was also down.

Miss Evelyn Gasser spent the week end visiting at the Laurens home.

James Wooding has gone to work in a mill near Angeles, the one recently purchased by Mrs. Rice.

Mr. Louis Houcke was a visitor in the neighborhood from Port Angeles last week.

Jack Kilmer was up from Fairview to get some pipe from Mr. C. A. Laurens last week.

There are visitors at the Thorpe home this week; some relatives from Ellensburg.

The dance at th school house was again a success. Altho the crowd was not large, there were just enough to make dancing pleasant.

Mr. Ed Fries of Blue Mountain was down visiting the people of the neighborhood last Tuesday.

FAIRVIEW.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hardman, who have been visiting at the Fossett home for a couple of months, have gone upSound again.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Pellerin, who have been visiting with home folks, the past few weeks, have gone to their home at Eden.

Mr. H. McLaughlin of Dungeness, was a visitor at the Luke home one day last week.

Mrs. Page is in town at present, under the care of Dr. McGillivray. Her arm was broken when she was thrown from her buggy a couple of weeks ago. Mrs. Winters, Sr., is taking care of the children.

The ball has started rolling in the direction of a new piano for the school house. The first thing will be a dance on Saturday night, January 30th. We hope to have the piano by June, or sooner if possible. Here is where we roll up our sleeves and get busy, for it will mean plenty of hustling. Don't forgt the date, January 30th.

Mrs. Land's raisin pie recipe: Place a coffee cup of milk in a double boiler, when it comes to a boil add a large tablespoon of flour, ¾ cup of sugar, salt to taste, yolks of two eggs, beaten together, 1 tablespoon butter and one cup chopped raisins, when thick take from stove and add 1 teaspoon vanilla, pour into a pie shell that has been baked, beat whites of eggs, add two tablespoons of sugar and spread over top. Brown in oven. This is very fine.

THE PORT DISTRICT

Clallam Bay, Wash.
Jan. 15th, 1915.

To the Editor—

There has been considerable agitation lately relating to the formation of a Port District co-extensive with Clallam county. As such a step means a raise in the tax rate, I have become interested in it and wish to call attention to what seems to me to be the fundamental error made by those favoring the district. I am in favor of everything that is calculated to build up Clallam county safely and conservatively, and against anything highly speculative and ill-advised. Hence I tried to analyze the arguments and facts bearing on the present discussion.

The principal claim made by the advocates of the Port District seems to be that if one be formed and storage docks constructed, the transshipment of fish and other commodities will thereby be shifted to Port Angeles from Seattle. This claim seems to be based on the theory that ocean-going freight will seek that point of transshipment which is closest to the ocean and which will give the longest haul by rail. This theory is absolutely opposed to fact and experience, for transportation by water is so much cheaper than rail transportation, that freight always seeks the water route and that point of transshipment which gives to the water route the greatest possible proportion of the entire distance which the freight must travel. The effect already felt from the opening of the Panama Canal is a sufficient instance to cite, but let us look at some of the harbors of the world for examples:

"Hamburg is the greatest shipping center in continental Europe, yet it is seventy six miles from the open sea and for sixty-three miles of this distance ships must go up the silting stream of the Elbe, which requires constant dredging.

"Antwerp, the great port of Belgium, is fifty-five miles from the North sea and also located on a narrow silting stream, the Scheldt, and of which also requires constant dredging.

"Manchester became a port only by spending over eighty million dollars to construct a great canal thirty-five and one-half miles long and with five systems of locks to connect it with the ocean.

"Glasgow on the Clyde and Newcastle on the Tyne, eighteen and twelve miles inland, respectively, are also notable examples of river harbors proving my contention, and especially so since they present difficulties of dredging and conditions of tide, currents and narrow channels, compared with which the route from Port Angeles to up-Sound ports is like the open sea.

"Montreal is one thousand miles from the open ocean, and with the St. Lawrence river closed with ice for five months in the year, is yet the leading port for export of Canadian wheat and other products and has twenty-five steamship lines, and this in spite of the fact that all this freight could go down the river by rail to Quebec, or, indeed, could go clear to the gulf.

"Philadelphia, altho one hundred miles inland up the Delaware, rivals New York as a port, and anyone familiar with the tremendous export and trans-shipping business of Duluth, Chicago and other ports of the Great Lakes, will easily understand the force of my argument.

"It is needless to say that the same considerations do not apply to rapid passenger service and are confined to freight, but the Port District is designed for freight facilities, and there is no reason for applying to fish shipments any rule differing from those of ordinary freight. The same reason for carrying the frozen meat from Argentina and New Zealand forty miles up the Thames instead of trans-shipping at the first railroad point for London, will continue to take fish up-Sound instead of trans-shipping at Port Angeles, where the demand for local consumption is negligible, and where only one railroad system, instead of a half-dozen, is available.

"Astoria, Oregon, is another instance in point, altho more rapid passenger service may partially go to Astoria, the freight from the interior always has been and always will be loaded at Portland, one hundred miles up the river.

"I do not wish to minimize the opportunities and resources of Port Angeles, but at this time of high-taxation and business depression, we should be aware of false promises and speculative enterprises. Trade and commerce follow definite channels and from natural causes. The development that belongs to Clallam county, because of its location, is coming steadily, but the well established principles of commercial transportation above referred to cannot be changed by the expenditure of any amount of money within our means. Altho millions have been spent by the first port district created by our statute, no new business has as yet been created thereby. This is peculiarly the time to play safe."

Here is a new Ford story we saw somewhere, but have forgotten just where. CHAPTER LI.

The New Judith.

From sleep as from drugged stupor Judith Trine awakened, struggling back to consciousness like some exhausted diver from the black depths to the star-smitten surface of a night-bound pool.

And for a little she lay unstirring, her half-numb wits fumbling with their business of renewing acquaintance with the world.

At first she could by no means recognize her surroundings. This rude chamber of rough plank walls and primitive furnishings; this wide, hard couch she shared with her still slumbering sister, Rose; the view revealed by an open window at the bedside; a fair perspective of tree-clad mountains through which a wide-bosomed canyon rolled down to an emerald plain, conveyed nothing to her intelligence.

A formless sense of some epochal change in the habits and mental processes of a young lifetime, added to her confusion.

Who was she herself, this strange creature who rested here so calmly by the side of Rose? If she were Judith Trine, how came she to be there? Irreconcilable opposites in every phase of character, the sisters had sedulously avoided association with each other ever since childhood: they had not shared the shelter of four walls overnight since time beyond the bounds of Judith's memory. What, then, had so changed them both that they should be found in such close company?

What, indeed, had become of the wild thing, Judith Trine of yesterday? Surely she had little enough in common with this Judith of today, in whose heart was no more room for envy, hatred, malice or any uncharitableness, so full was it of love which, though it was focused upon the person of one man, none the less embraced all the world—even her sister and successful rival in that one man's affections.

This change had not come upon her without warning. She had been almost insensibly aware of its advent through the gradual softening of that old Judith's hard and vengeful nature in the course of the last few days. But now that the revolution was accomplished, she hardly knew herself—she hardly knew the world, indeed, so differently did she regard it—not without something of the wide-eyed wonderment of a child to find all things so new and strange and beautiful.

And this was the work of Love!

Now the chain of memories was quite complete, no link lacking in its continuity. She recalled clearly every incident that had marked the slow growth of this great love she had for Alan Law, from that first day, not yet a month old, when he had escaped the fiery deathtrap she had set for him, and repaid her only by risking his life anew to save her from destruction, down to this very morning when the stream from a hydraulic nozzle had swept over the brink of a three hundred-foot precipice a crimson racing automobile containing two desperate men bent upon compassing the death of her beloved.

By that act of sheer self-defense the world was richer for the loss of two black-hearted blackguards, and Alan Law might now be considered safe from further persecution—since there now remained not one soul loyal enough to Seneca Trine to prosecute his private war of vengeance against Alan. And though that aged monomaniac had means whereby he might purchase other scoundrels and corrupt them to his hideous purposes, Judith was determined that he should never again have any opportunity so to do. Though Alan, she knew, would never lift his hand to hinder her father's freedom of action, she, Judith, meant to take such steps as his persecution called for. If there were any justice in the land—if there were any alienists capable of discriminating between Trine's apparent sanity and his deep-rooted mania—then surely not many days more should pass into history without witnessing his consignment to an institution for the criminal insane.

She, Judith, would see to that, and then . . .

The woman sighed once more.

Then Rose and Alan would marry and live happily ever after.

But what of Judith?

She made a small gesture of resignation to her destiny. What became of her no longer mattered, so that Alan were made happy in such happiness as he coveted.

And now the thought stirred her sharply that what was to be done must be done quickly, if at all.

And the almost level rays of the declining sun, striking in through the open window, counseled haste if Judith were to accomplish her intention of leaving this place and finding her father again before nightfall.

With the utmost care she rose from the bed, crept to the door of the room (now recognized as the quarters of the foreman of the hydraulic mining outfit) and out into the room adjoining.

And there, pulling the door to gently behind her, she paused and for many minutes stood in tensestrung contemplation of the man she loved—Alan Law, asleep in a chair beside a table, his head pillowed on his folded arms.

This was leave-taking between them—and he would never know.

Far better so: Judith felt she could not trust herself to say farewell to him without breaking down and confessing the utter wretchedness that threatened to overwhelm her each time she forced herself to face the thought that this parting must be final.

Like a thief she stole across the creaking floor to Alan's side, hesitated, bent her head to his and touched her lips to his cheek—a caress so light that he slept on in ignorance of it.

Then, as she lifted her head and stood erect, bosom convulsed with silent sobs, she looked squarely into the face of Rose.

CHAPTER LII.

The Old Adam.

A long minute elapsed before either woman moved or spoke.

Transfixed beside Alan's chair, steadying herself with a hand upon its back, Judith stared at the figure in the doorway, in a temper at once discomfited and defiant. With this she suffered a phase of incredulity, was scarce able to persuade herself that this was truly Rose who confronted her—Rose whose sweet and gentle nature had ever served as the butt of Judith's contempt and ruthless ridicule.

Here was revolution with a vengeance, when Rose threatened and Judith shrank!

It was as if the women had exchanged natures while they slept.

The countenance that Rose showed her sister was a thundercloud rent by the lurid lightning of her angry eyes. Her pose was tense and alert, like the pose of an animal set to spring. In her hand hung a revolver, the same (Judith's hand sought the holster at her hip and found it empty) that her sister had worn and forgotten to remove when she dropped, half-dead with fatigue, upon the bed.

And slowly, toward the end of that long, mute minute, the girl's grasp tightened upon the grip of the weapon and its muzzle lifted.

Remarking this, a flash of her one-time temper quickened Judith. Of a sudden, with a start, she crossed the floor in a single, noiseless stride, and threw herself before her sister.

"Well?" she demanded hotly. "What are you waiting for? Nobody's stopping you: why don't you shoot?"

The upward movement of the hand was checked: the weapon hung level to Judith's breast—as level and unequivocal as the glance that probed her eyes and the tone of Rose's voice as she demanded:

"What were you doing there?"

"If you must know from me what you already know on the evidence of your eyes—I was bidding good-by to the man I love—kissing him without his knowledge or consent before leaving him to you for good and all!"

"What do you mean?"

"That I'm going away—that I can't stand this situation any longer. Marrophat and Jimmy are dead, my father's helpless—and I mean to see that he remains so. Nothing, then, stands in the way of your marrying Alan but me. And such being the case—and because he's as dear to me as he is to you—I'm going to take myself off and keep out of the way."

"For fear lest he find out that you love him?"

Judith's lip curled. "Do you think him so witless he doesn't know that already?"

"And so you leave him to me out of your charity! Is that it?"

"Any way you like. But if it's so intolerable to you to think that I dare love him and confess it to you—if you begrudge me the humiliation of stooping to kiss a man who doesn't want my kisses—if you are so afraid of losing him while I live and love him—very well, then!"

With a passionate gesture Judith tore open the bosom of her waist, offering her flesh to the muzzle of the revolver.

A cry broke from the lips of Rose that was like the cry of a forlorn child punished with cruelty that passes its understanding. She fell back against the wall. The revolver swept up through the air—but its mark was her own head rather than Judith's bosom.

But before her finger found strength to pull the trigger the man at the table, startled from his sleep by the sound of angry voices, leaped from his chair with a violence that sent it clattering to the floor, and hurled himself headlong across the room, imprisoning the wrist of his betrothed with one hand while the other wrested the weapon away and passed it to Judith.

"Rose!" he cried thickly, "what does this mean? Are you mad? Judith—"

Dragging the bosom of her waist together, Judith thrust the weapon into its holster and turned away.

"Be kind to her, Alan," she said in an uncertain voice: "She didn't understand and—and I goaded her beyond endurance, I'm afraid. Forgive me—but be kind to her always!"

Somehow, blindly, she stumbled out of the cabin into the open, possessed by a thought whose temptation was stronger than her powers of resistance. What Rose had failed to accomplish might now serve to resolve Judith's problem. . . . None, she told herself, bitterly, would seek to hinder her. But she meant so to arrange the matter that none should see or suspect and be moved to interfere.

Round the shoulder of the mountain, on the road along the edge of the cliff, she was sure of freedom from observation.

And yet, such is the inconsistency of the human animal, the instinct for self-preservation was stronger than her purpose: when a touring car swung round the mountain and shot toward her, she checked herself hastily and jumped aside in ample time to escape being run down.

The next instant the machine was lurching to a halt and the sonorous accents of Seneca Trine were saluting her:

"Judith! You here! What the devil? Where've ye been? Where are Marrophat and Jimmy?"

Digging the nails of her fingers painfully into her palms, she breathed deep, fighting down hysteria, reasserting her self-control in so short a space of time that her father failed to appreciate that there was anything uncommon in the mind of the girl.

"Where?" he demanded angrily as she approached the car, "where, I want to know, are Marrophat and Jimmy? Haven't you seen or heard anything of them? They left me at six o'clock this morning, to go after—"

"Dead!" the girl interrupted, sententious, eyeing him strangely.

"I don't believe it!" the old man screamed, aghast. "I won't believe it. You're lying to me, you jade! You're lying—"

"I am not," she broke in coldly. "I am telling you the plain truth . . . They followed us all morning in that red racer, firing at us all the while. Finally they caught up with us here, about noon—came up this road shooting over the windshield. It was our lives or theirs. We turned the hydraulic stream on them and washed the car over the cliff. If you don't believe me, get somebody to show you their faces."

She indicated with a gesture two forms that lay at a little distance back from the roadside, motionless beneath a sheet of canvas—the bodies of Trine's creatures, recovered by the mining gang and brought up for a Christian burial.

But Trine required no more confirmation of Judith's word. The light flickered and died in his evil old eyes; his stricken countenance assumed a hue of pallor even more intense than was normal with it; a broken curse issued from his trembling, thin, old lips; and his chin sagged to his chest, heavy-weighted with despair that followed realization of the fact that he no longer owned even one friend or creature upon whose conscienceless loyalty he might depend.

The last bitter drop that brimmed his cup of misery was added when Alan Law himself appeared, leaving the miners' cabin in company with his betrothed—Rose now soothed and comforted, smiling through the traces of her recent tears as she clung to her lover, nestling in the hollow of his arm.

To Alan, on the other hand, this rencontre seemed to afford nothing but the pleasantest surprise imaginable.

"Well!" he cried, releasing Rose and running down to the car. "Here's luck! And at the very moment when I was calling my lucky star hard names! How can I ever reward your thoughtfulness, Mr. Trine? It beats me how you do keep track of me this way—happening along like this every time I need a car the worst way in the world!"

"Drive on!" Trine screamed to the chauffeur. "Drive on, do you hear?"

But Judith had stepped up on the running board and was eyeing the driver coldly, with one hand significantly resting on the butt of the weapon at her side. The car remained at a standstill.

Sulphurous profanity followed, a pungent stream of vituperation that was checked only by Judith's interruption: "We've had to gag you once before, you know. If you want another taste of that—keep on!"

"But where's Barcus?" Judith demanded when, after helping Rose into the car and running off to thank their hosts, Alan returned alone to the car.

Lightning Kills Trine and Strikes Down Alan and Rose.

"Goodness only knows," the young man answered cheerfully. "He would insist on rambling off down the canyon in search of an alleged town where we could hire a motor car—somewhere down there. I tried to make him understand that we had plenty of time, but he was mulish as he generally is when he gets a foolish notion into his head. So I daresay we'll meet him on his way back—or else asleep somewhere by the roadside!"

Taking the seat next to the chauffeur, he gave the word to drive on; and they slipped away from the location of the mining camp, saluted by cheers from the miners.

The road dipped sharply down the mountainside to the bed of the canyon. The car moved smoothly and swiftly, coasting: only now and then was it necessary to call upon the engine for power with which to negotiate an upgrade or some uncommonly long stretch of level road.

Half an hour passed without a word spoken by any member of the party. Each was deep in his or her own especial preoccupation: Alan turning over plans for an early wedding; Rose hugging the contentment regained through her lover's protestations; Judith lost in profoundest melancholy; Trine nursing his rage, working himself up into a silent fury whose consequences were to be more far-reaching than even he dreamed in his wildest moments.

Its first development, for all that, was desperate enough.

The aged monomaniac occupied the right-hand corner of the rear seat. Thus his one able hand was next to Judith, in close juxtaposition to the revolver in the holster on her hip.

Without the least warning his left hand closed upon the weapon, withdrew it and leveled it at the back of Alan's head.

As he pulled the trigger Judith flung herself bodily upon the arm.

Even so, the bullet found a goal, though in another than the intended victim. The muscular forearm of the chauffeur received it.

With a shriek of pain the man released the wheel and grasped his arm.

Before Alan could move to prevent the disaster the car, running without a guiding hand, caromed off a low embankment to the left and shot full-tilt into a shallow ditch on the right, shelling its passengers like peas from a broken pod.

Alan catapulted a good twenty feet through the air and alighted with such force that he lay stunned for several moments.

When he came to, he found Barcus helping him to his feet; a heavy seven-passenger touring car halted in the roadway indicated the manner in which his friend had arrived on the scene of the accident.

When damages were assessed it was found that none of the party had suffered seriously but the chauffeur and Seneca Trine himself. The former had only his wound to show however, while Trine lay still and senseless at a very considerable distance from the wrecked automobile.

Nothing but a barely perceptible respiration and intermittently fluttering pulse persuaded them that the flame of life was not extinct in that poor, old, pain-racked body.

CHAPTER LIII.

The Last Trump.

Toward the evening of the third day following the motor spill, Judith sat in the deeply recessed window of a bedchamber on the second floor of a hotel situated in the heart of California's orange-growing lands.

Behind her Seneca Trine sat, apparently asleep, in a wheeled invalid chair.

There was no occupant of the room.

Though he had lain nearly two days in coma, her father's subsequent progress toward recovery of his normal state had been rapid. Now, according to a council of surgeons and physicians who had been summoned to deliberate on his case, he was in a fair way to round out the average span of a sound man's lifetime. He had apparently suffered nothing in consequence of his accident more serious than prolonged unconsciousness. For the last twenty-four hours he had been in full possession of his faculties and (for some reason impossible to Judith to fathom) uncommonly cheerful.

RALPH BOYKER, PROPR.

THE TREY O' HEARTS

From this circumstance she drew a certain sense of mystified anxiety. Twice in the course of the morning she had caught his eye following her with a gleam of sardonic exultancy, as though he nursed some secret of extraordinary potentialities.

And yet (she argued) it was quite impossible that he should have some fresh scheme brewing for the assassination of Alan. Not a soul had had any sort of communication with him since his recovery but the attending surgeon, a man of unimpeachable character, a meek-mannered trained nurse, and herself, Judith. Under such circumstances he simply could not have set a new conspiracy afoot.

And yet . . . She was oppressed by a great uneasiness.

Perhaps (she reasoned) the weather was responsible for this feeling, in some measure at least. The day had been unconscionably hot, a day without a breath of air. Now, as it drew toward its close, its heat seemed to become more and more oppressive even as its light was darkened by a portentous phenomenon—a vast pall of inky cloud shouldering up over the mountains to the music of distant rumblings.

Nor was this all; a considerable degree of restlessness was surely pardonable in one who, from her window, watched a carriage-drive populous with vehicles (for the most part motor cars) bringing to the hotel gayly dressed men and women, the guests invited to the wedding of Rose Trine and Alan Law.

Within another ten minutes the man Judith loved with all her body and soul would be the husband of her sister.

She had told herself she was resigned; but she was not, and she would never be. Her heart was breaking in her bosom as she sat there, watching, waiting, listening to the ever heavier detonations of the approaching thunderstorm and to the jubilant pealing of a great organ down below.

The had told herself that, though resigned, she could not bear to witness the ceremony. Now as the moment drew near when the marriage would be a thing finished, fixed, irretrievable, she found herself unable to endure the strain alone.

Slowly, against her will, she rose and stole across the floor to her father's chair.

His breathing was slow and regular; beyond doubt he slept; unquestionably there was no reason why she should not leave him for ten minutes; even though he waked it could not harm him to await her return at the end of that scant period.

Like a guilty thing, on feet as noiseless as any sneak thief's, she crept from the room, closed the door silently, ran down the hall and descended by a back way, a little-used staircase, to the lower hall, approaching the scene of the marriage.

Constructed in imitation of an old Spanish mission chapel, it contained one of the finest organs in the world; at this close range its deep-throated tones vied with the warnings of the storm. Judith, lurking in a passageway whose open door revealed the altar steps and chancel, was shaken to the very marrow of her being by the majestic reverberations of the music.

Since they had regained contact with civilization in a section of the country where the Law estate had vast holdings of land, the chapel was thronged with men and women who had known Alan's father and wished to honor his son. . . .

Above stairs, in the room Judith had quitted, Seneca Trine opened both eyes wide and laughed a silent laugh of savage triumph when the door closed behind his daughter.

At last he was left to his own devices—and at a time the most fitting imaginable for what he had in mind.

With a grin, Seneca Trine raised both arms and stretched them wide apart.

Then, grasping the arms of his chair, he lifted himself from it and stood trembling upon his own feet for the first time in almost twenty years.

Grasping the back of the wheeled chair, he used it as a crutch to guide his feeble and uncertain movements. But these became momentarily stronger and more confident.

This, then, was the secret he had hugged to his embittered bosom, a secret unsuspected even by the attending surgeon; that through the motor accident three days ago he had regained the use of limbs that had been stricken motionless—strangely enough, by a motor car—nearly two decades since.

Slowly but surely moving to the bureau in the room, he opened one of its drawers and took out something he had, without her knowledge, seen Judith put away there while she thought he slept.

Then, with this hidden in the pocket of his dressing gown he steered a straight if very deliberate course to the door, let himself out, and like a materialized specter of the man he once had been, navigated the corridor to the head of the broad central staircase, and step by step, clinging with both hands, negotiated the descent.

The lobby of the hotel was deserted. As the ceremony approached its end every guest and servant in the house was crowding the doorway to the chapel. None opposed the progress of this ghastly vision in dressing gown and slippered feet, chuckling insanely to himself as he tottered through the empty halls and corridors, finding an almost supernatural strength to sustain him till he found himself face to face with his chosen enemy and victim.

The first that blocked his way into the chapel, a bellboy of the hotel, looked round at the first touch of the claw-like hand upon his shoulder and shrank back with a cry of terror—a cry that was echoed from half a dozen throats within another instant.

As if from the path of some grisly visitant from the world beyond the grave, the throng pressed back and cleared a way for Seneca Trine, father of the bride.

And as the way opened and he looked up toward the altar and saw Alan standing hand in hand with Rose while the minister invoked a blessing upon the union that had been but that instant cemented, added strength, the strength of the insane, was given to Seneca Trine.

When Alan, annoyed by the disturbance in the body of the chapel, looked round, it was to see the aged maniac standing within a dozen feet of him; and as he looked and cried out in wonder, Trine whipped a revolver from the pocket of his dressing gown and swung it steadily to bear upon Alan's head.

At that instant the storm broke with infernal fury upon the land.

A crash of thunder so heavy and prolonged that it seemed to rock the very building upon its foundations, accompanied the shattering of a huge stained-glass window.

A bolt of bluish flame of dazzling brilliance slashed through the window like a flaming sword and smote the pistol in the hand of Seneca Trine, discharging the weapon even as it struck him dead.

As he fell the bolt swerved and struck two others down—Alan Law and the woman who had just been made his wife.

CHAPTER LIV.

The Wife.

Again three days elapsed; and Judith, returning from the double funeral of her father and sister, doffed her mourning for a gown less somber and more suited to the atmosphere of a sickroom, then relieved the nurse in charge of Alan.

He remained as he had been ever since the falling of the thunderbolt—in absolute coma.

But he lived, and—or the physicians lied—must soon regain consciousness.

Kneeling beside his bedside Judith prayed long and earnestly.

When she arose it was to answer a tap upon the door. She admitted Tom Barcus and suffered him to lead her into the recess of the window, where they conversed in guarded tones in spite of the fact that the subject of their communications could not possibly have heard them.

"I've come to tell you something," Barcus announced with characteristic awkwardness, "I've known it for three days—ever since the wedding, in fact—and kept it to myself, not knowing whether I ought to tell you yet or not."

He paused, eyeing her uncertainly, unhappily.

"I am prepared," Judith assured him calmly.

"You're nothing of the sort," he countered, argumentative. "You couldn't be. It's the most amazing thing imaginable. . . . See here . . ."

"Well?"

"You understand, don't you, that Alan must never know that Rose was killed by that lightning stroke?"

"What do you mean?"

"I mean," the man floundered miserably, "you see, he loved her so—I thought—I'm sure it would be best—if you can bring yourself to it—to let him go on believing it wasn't Rose who was killed, but Judith. And that's skating so close to the truth that it makes no difference: the Judith Alan knew and the Judith I knew in the beginning is gone as completely as though she and not Rose had been killed."

After a long pause, the girl asked him quietly: "I understand. But is it possible you don't understand that, if I were to consent to this proposition, lend myself to a deception which I must maintain through all my life to come—Alan would consider me his wife?"

"Well, but—you see—you are his wife. . . . Oh, don't think I'm off my bat. I'm telling you the plain, unvarnished truth. You are Alan's wife. . . . No, listen to me. You remember that day in New York when you substituted for Rose, when Alan tried to elope with her, and you went with him to Jersey City, and stood up to be married by a preacher-guy named Wright—and Marrophat broke in just at the critical moment and busted up the party?"

"Well?" she demanded breathlessly.

Barcus produced a folded yellow paper from his coat pocket and proffered it.

"Read that. It was handed to me as best man, just before the ceremony. Seeing it was addressed to Alan and knowing he was in no frame of mind to be bothered by telegrams, I slipped it into my pocket and forgot all about it temporarily. When I came to find it, I took the liberty of reading it. But read it for yourself."

The typewritten lines of the long message blurred and ran together almost indecipherably in Judith's vision. None the less, she contrived to grasp the substance of its meaning.

"WHY DIDN'T YOU WIRE ME SOONER," it ran: "MARRIAGE TO ROSE IMPOSSIBLE. REV. MR. WRIGHT INFORMED ME YOUR MARRIAGE TO JUDITH LAST WEEK HAD GONE TOO FAR WHEN MARROPHAT INTERRUPTED. JUDITH LEGALLY YOUR WIFE. WOULD HAVE ADVISED YOU SOONER HAD YOU LET ME KNOW WHERE TO ADDRESS YOU. HOPE TO HEAVEN THIS GETS TO YOU BEFORE TOO LATE."

The message was signed with the name of Alan's confidential man of business in New York.

When Judith looked up she was alone in the room, but for the silent patient on his couch.

Slowly, almost fearfully, she crept to his bedside and stood looking down into the face of her husband.

And while she looked Alan's lashes fluttered, his respiration quickened, a faint color crept into his pallid cheeks—and his eyes opened wide and looked into hers.

His lips moved and breathed a word of recognition:

"Judith!"

With a low cry of tenderness, the girl sank to her knees and encircled his head with her arms.

"Judith," she whispered, hiding her face in his bosom, "Judith is no more . . ."

A pause; and then the feeble voice:

"Then, if I was mistaken, if you aren't Judith, you must be Rose—my wife!"

She said steadily: "I am your wife."

His hands fumbled with her face, closed upon her cheeks, lifted her head until her eyes must look into his.

And for many minutes he held her so, looking deep into the soul of the woman.

Then quietly he said: "I know . . ."

THE END.

The Board appointed the following road supervisors, and fixed their bonds at $11,000.00:

Road and Bridge District No. 1—Chas. MacDougall.

Road and Bridge District No. 2—Joseph Pearson.

Road and Bridge District No 3—Nels Nelson.

Road and Bridge District No 4—Cliff Wilson.

The Board then adjourned until Tuesday, January 12, 1915 at 9:00 a .m.

Tuesday, January 12, 1915 at 9:00 a. m.

The Board met pursuant to adjournment, all members being present.

The Board appointed Owen T. Webber as Superintendent of Construction of the new Court House in place of F. D. Sheffield, resigned, and fixed his salary at $100.00 per month, Commissioners Dick and Hansen voting "Aye" and Clark voting "No."

As provided by the 1913 session laws, the Board appointed C. E. Fulmer as official undertaker for the County, the office of Coroner having been abolished.

The County Treasurer designated the following banks as depositories of County funds: The Bank of Clallam County, the Citizens National Bank, the Port Angeles Trust & Savings Bank and State Bank of Sequim.

The Board ordered the Engineer to at once begin preparations to do the following work:

To survey the Quillayute Bottom Road and the Ww. Klahn road; to survey the hill for better grade at the upper Solduck bridge; to survey or report upon a road from Mora to the mouth of the Dickey river; to survey a section of the Forks-Clallam Bay road, 1¼ miles south of the Clallam river; to survey and report on the Pysht road from Pysht river bridge towards Pysht; to survey around Rocky Point at mouth of the Suez River south of Neah Bay, and to report upon the condition of all bridges in the County.

The Board allowed the Commissioners' claims and ordered the Auditor to issue warrants for same upon the Current Expense Fund:

Frank Lotzgesell, salary and mileage	$ 26.00
James Dick, salary and mileage	10.00
James Hanson Salary and mileage	28.00
J. F. Clark, salary and mileage	42.00

The Board then adjourned until February 2, 1915 at 9:00 a. m.

CALL FOR BIDS

Notice is hereby given that sealed bids will be received by the Board of County Commissioners of Clallam county, Washington, at the office of the County Auditor, up to the hour of 10 o'clock, a. m., Tuesday, February 2, 1915, for the gravelling of the Bonded Road from Sequim to Blyn, according to the direction and supervision of the County Engineer. Said bids must be made upon a yardage basis.

Each bid must be accompanied by cash or certified check in an amount equal to 5 per cent of the estimated cost of the work.

The Commissioners reserve the right to reject any and all bids.

By order of the Board of County Commissioners made Monday, January 4, 1915. R. D. McLAUGHLIN.

INDIRECT BENEFIT OF COMMISSION

locomotive cranes for handling lumber and shoving cars.

"The Port Commission has charge of the leasing of the harbor area. The law provides that 75 per cent of all receipts shall go to the port. I think the city should take the matter up with the State Commission and get them not to lease any more harbor area. The Port Commission has the right of eminent domain; the people cannot be held up on a site. The people can vote a debt in bonds up to three per cent of the assessed valuation of the whole district, but you will make the cost as low as possible. Don't by any means make your district so small that no one will take your bonds. In King the district includes the entire county."

Concluding his address, which was a thorough presentation of the subject, Judge Remsberg said he believed our requirements for a lumber dock would be very similar to those of Astoria, where a new municipal dock capable of loading two million feet of lumber into a schoner in nine hurs, which had been done on a test, had recently been completed.

Mr. Higby, secretary of the Port Commission, and formerly a member of the Industrial Insurance Commission of the State, gave a brief review of the work of the Seattle Commission and an interesting outline of the Port District Act. He said there had been a great awakening of all the ports of the United States as a result of the completion of the Cnresult of the completion of the Canal. Seattle, recognizing the advantages of sea trade, had organized the energy of the city into a commission. One of that city's undertakings had been the building of a million dollar pier at Smith's Cove. It is a half mile in length and a city block in width, and a depth of 35 feet has been obtained, by dredging, for half its length. The dock will be provided with bridge cranes which will pick up lumber from flat cars and carry it to piles or direct to ships; there will be covered sheds for storage and every facility of a modern equipped dock. Seattle proposes to invite all small mills that have no tide water facilities to make use of these they have provided and they expect the big dock will be constantly piled full of lumber.

MYSTERIOUS DEAD BODY

The dead body of a woman was seen on the spit Monday night by a fisherman, who notified Sheriff Bishop Tueday morning. It had floated away, however, by the time of the arrival of the sheriff and the fisherman, but may be picked up at any time.

The Idaho Senate has passed, with one dissenting vote, a resolution providing for an amendment prohibiting the manufacture and sale of liquor after May 1, 1917.

WOULD REVISE THE CONSTITUTION

in an open letter declares his agreement with Governor Lister as to the "necessity of constitutional revision by a constitutional convention." "This step," he further declares, "is absolutely necessary if we desire to reduce the present burden of taxation."

Governor Lister considers the issue one of the most important the present legislature will consider. "All feel the urgent necessity of the convention," said he yesterday, "the only objection from any source being that it delays too long the relief which can be secured thru it alone. To fully satisfy such sentiment we should endeavor to secure all relief possible under the present system and take steps immediately for the calling of the convention."

Sweeping changes in the industrial insurance act are foreshadowed in a new act drafted at the instance of the State Industrial Insurance Commission. The new act broadens the scope of the commission in many ways, permitting changes in classification in hazardous occupations and shifting funds of classifications as necessity demands. It also increases payment for permanent disability $20 per month, compels employers to submit certified copies of their payrolls monthly, provides that delinquent payments to the state shall bear 15 per cent interest, levies insurance premiums on all taxpaying districts where men are engaged in extra hazardous occupations, and it rules that delinquent insurance premiums shall take priority over all claims in cases of insolvency, bankruptcy and assignment.

As an argument for his new livestock law Agricultural Commissioner Graves will slaughter a tubercular cow at the steps of the state capitol building in the presence of the members of the legislature. Commissioner Graves believes the exhibit will demonstrate the utility of the new law and emphasize the necessity of rigid inspection by showing the dangers faced by consumers of milk from diseased dairy herds.

The likelihoods are strong that President Wilson will include Washington in his itinerary in his forthcoming visit to the Panama Canal and the Pacific Coast. On behalf of the people of the state Governor Ernest Lister has wired a cordial and pressing invitation to the president to do so and commercial organizations of the larger cities together with the United States senators of Oregon, Idaho and Washingon have joined in urging the president to make the larger itinerary.

The annual convention of the Washington State Federation of Labor opened here Monday. Chief among the questions before the body is that of the policy of maintaining the joint legislative committee in conjunction with the Farmer's Union and the State Grange. Electing its officials by referendum is also under consideration by the Federation.

Superior Court Judges in counties of the First Class will have their salaries raised from $4,000 per annum to $5,000 if a bill introduced by Senator J. A. Ghent, of King county, is made law. The terms of the bill provide for the payment of the increased salary out of the county receipts.

That the State Bureau of Inspection is on the job is evidenced in the discovery by it of improper expenditures and errors in public officials totalling $1,385,000. Nearly $200,000 of this has been recovered and returned to the proper treasuries, and the bureau is after the remaining.

A spirited fight between the cities of Montesano and Aberdeen, hinging on the transfer of the superior court sessions from Montesano to the Harbor City, has been carried to the floors of the legislature. Several years ago this was a bone of contention and caused the people of Aberdeen and Hoquiam to demand a division of Chehalis county.

A new game code harmonizing the state game laws with Federal acts in regard to sunrise and sunset shooting and changing the present open trout season from May 1 to January 1, to open April 1 and close November 1, has been agreed upon by county game commissioners and game wardens and the House Committee will embody the changes of the bill.

With the declaration that the present fortifications of Washington and Oregon are entirely inadequate Senator Boner, of Aberdeen, introduced a joint memorial to the president, secretary of war and congress asking that fortifications be provided at once on Grays Harbor and Willapa Harbor. Senator Bethel, of Lincoln county, opposed the memorial on the grounds that fortifications have been proven by the present European war to be obsolete. He suggested submarines be asked for instead of fortifying the harbors.

The economy trend on the part of the House committee may result in cutting down the proposed $2,500,000 road and highway appropriation urged by Governor Lister and the Good Roads' Congress. The Senate committee favors the retention of the entire appropriation. The two committees are jointly working on the problem this week.

The House of Representatives got thru its first week's session with but $120,000 appropriated and only eleven bills introduced. The appropriation was for the expenses of the legislature and for the printing of bills.

In order that privately owned docks and wharves can have no grounds for complaint on the score of unfair competition on the part of the municipally owned wharves and docks an amendment to the present law was introduced this week by the senate committee on public utilities. The new measure places the control of public docks in the hands of the public service commission of the state.

Governor Lister prepared and submitted to the legislature this week a financial statement showing his own estimates of the needs of all the departments over which he exercises control. Along with the statement goes a parallel showing, giving the appropriations for the various departments two years ago.

Senator Sharpstein, of Walla Walla, has introduced a bill giving counties permission to adopt the commission form of government at the polls. To become effective a change in the state constitution will have to be made as it does not permit of such radical departure.

In a recommendation by the House Commitee on Privileges for a recount of 11,000 votes cast in Snohomish county at the November election there is a possibility of the Bull Moose delegation of the house being reduced to six and the republican strength increased to 78. Thomas M. Swale, Bull Mooser, was elected by two votes by the Snohomish electors over James M. Hogan, republican. Both sides admit incorrectness in counting and Hogan's friends believe the recount will give him Mr. Swale's seat in the house.

Mrs. Josephine Preston, state superintendent of public instruction, is making a hot fight against the House Appropriations committee, which, in its economy propaganda, struck from the list of appropriations $15,000 allowed by the last legislature for agricultural and industrial work in her department. Mrs. Preston's demands for salary increases of from $3,600 to $4,800 a biennium for deputy superintendents and her assistant have also been refused.

The reception in honor of the legislators and their wives given by Governor Lister and Mrs. Ernest Lister at the executive mansion Monday evening saw one of the largest and most brilliant social turn-outs witnessed at the Capitol City in many a day. The function was followed on Wednesday evening by a reception in honor of the governor and Mrs. Lister and members of the legislature with the citizens of Olympia as hosts.

On Friday evening, Jan. 8th Port Angeles Lodge No. 869 of the Fraternal Brotherhood had installation of officers. Mr. J. M. Martin, state manager of Seattle being installing officer. Six candidates were initiated. Installation being over, refreshments were served and all enjoyed a pleasant social evening.
