RURAL ORGANIZATION, THE GREAT NEED OF THIS COUNTY

PAULHAMUS' STORY OF PUYALLUP

It is a well known fact that often the merest trifle, the flip of a coin, as it were, proves sufficient to change the entire course of a man's life. That some equally trivial circumstance may wield as potent an influence in the destiny of a community was brought home to us all at the Fair Friday afternoon when W. H. Paulhamus, to whose genius for organization coupled with shrewd business ability, the Puyallup valley owes ninety-eight per cent of its prosperity today, stated that he came very near locating in Port Angeles when he first came to the state. Senator Paulhamus said he was greatly pleased at the opportunity of visiting Port Angeles, partly because this city came so near becoming his home town, and partly because he wanted to meet the people who had the good common sense to send Dave Troy, one of the best men he ever knew, and a man who always voted right, to the state senate.

Mr. Paulhamus, the speaker of the day, was introduced, after short addresses had been made by Dr. Cardiff and O. T. McWhorter, by Donald McInnes, who presided as chairman of the meeting. Mr. McInnes, who talked on the need of organization among the farmers of Clallam county, said the greatest need was that of men who have the brains and ability to organize associations and cut out the middle man. "If you can get the right man and have to pay him $500 a month pay it and you will be money in pocket," continued Mr. McInnes, maintaining that the cost of a secretary to keep in touch with the markets would not be noticeable when divided among the people of the association.

Mr. McWhorter, who will be with us another month, briefly outlined the work he expected to take up in the line of rural farm development. He made a very favorable impression upon those present, all seeming to think that he would prove to be the right man for the position.

TRACKLAYING COMPLETED TO TOWNSEND

The editor of the Leader, in company with J. P. Christensen and S. J. Lutz, as guests of J. C. Hansen, had the pleasure of seeing the big railroad crew wind up the work of track laying at the head of Discovery Bay Tuesday afternoon, when several hundred ties were placed in position and the rails spiked thereto, leaving only the work of ballasting to complete the line from Port Angeles to a connection with the Port Townsend & Puget Sound, now, like the Seattle, Port Angeles & Western, a subsidiary concern of the C. M. & St. P. It is a beautiful roadbed the Milwaukee has built around the head of Discovery Bay or rather over the tide flats not far from the shore, a wide fill having been made the entire distance. At Port Townsend a three track ferry slip is being constructed that the heavy traffic from Port Angeles' mills may be handled thru the Portage Canal, avoiding the regular semi-weekly towing of two car ferries past Marrowstone, Wilson and Dungeness points, usually a difficult task during the winter months. At Port Townsend, as at Port Angeles, the railroad has been steadily acquiring tide lands by purchase and by condemnation proceedings until they now have about everything they want for terminal purposes and extra trackage. A steam shovel and large force of men are employed in cutting down the bluff at Townsend and filling tide lands, that shops and a round house may be put in.

JUDGE RALSTON SUSTAINED IN BREWERY RECEIVERSHIP CASE

CREDITORS BECOMING HOPEFUL

At last the receivership of the Angeles Brewing & Malting Company seems to be in a fair way to be cleaned up for all time, and those who would take everything, leaving nothing for the creditors, have been foiled. Word comes from the supreme court that the order of Judge Ralston of many months ago, wherein he ordered an additional payment of 40 per cent to the creditors, and from which order the former receiver and his attorneys appealed, for the reason as was shown that they had a claim for Receivers' Compensation and attorneys fees which took all the balance of the funds in the Receivership, has been sustained. Several other appeals have been taken in this case from the order of the court, seemingly wholly with the view of grabbing everything left in the Receivership, but the sustaining of this order, leaves all the rest without anything to fight for and they will undoubtedly be abandoned. In fact, there was filed with the Clerk this week a motion for the dismissal of the appeal of Willett & Oleson, attorneys for the former receiver, they accepting the Court's allowance of $900 in lieu of the $9000 claimed. This coming on the heels of the supreme court's decision is significant. As the Receivership now stands, all appeals are practically abandoned after a fight with the court for over two years, all creditors have been settled with by the bonding company buying up their claims. Janecke's deficiency of $18,000 is thus made good by the bonding company, who now only has to quiet the stockholders to wind up the affairs of the Receivership. They have taken over all the Janecke assets, including the $10,000 stock in the Angeles Transportation Company for which he used the funds of the Receivership. This is the basis for the bonding company securing a Receiver for the latter company in Seattle recently, which the creditors are now seeking to take from the King county court to the U. S. Bankruptcy court. The Superior court of Clallam county is to be congratulated that the end is in sight.

Judge Alston of Everett was here Thursday to hear the mortgage case of Goodwin vs. Goodwin. The litigants, however, held a conference just before the hour set for hearing and came to a settlement out of court a commendable proceedure, but a little late in consummation. Better late than not at all however.

The court will be here again next Tuesday and Wednesday for which a considerable docket has already been arranged.

New cases:

O. M. Clay vs. John Murry, foreclosure on lands in west end.

Fred Farmer vs. Sol Duc Transfer Company, foreclosure and garnishment.

Jas. G. Smith of Sequim vs. Hattie Powell, nee Cummings, to quiet title to property now held by J. A. Adams.

P. J. Becker vs. E. H. Helpenstell and Julius Peterson, foreclosure of chattel mortgage to mill on Anderson place at Lake Crescent.

R. D. Willson Hardware Company, vs. Superior Shingle Company, and E. A. Epperson, suit and garnishment to collect account.

Treasurer Woods has begun foreclosure proceedings for the collection of the 1909 delinquent taxes, a small list.

NAVAL LODGE LAYS CORNER STONE FOR THEIR NEW HOME

ADDRESS BY T. F. TRUMBULL

The corner stone of the Elks' Building on First and Lincoln streets was laid Sunday afternoon at 2:30 by the officers of Naval Lodge No. 353. The ceremony was witnessed by a couple of hundred members and their friends, the attendance being thus limited because no public announcement had been made.

Exalted Ruler G. W. Muck, assisted by Esteemed Leading Knight H. A. Cotton, Esteemed Royal Knight R. H. Callarman, Esteemed Lecturing Knight F. L. Plummer, Esquire T. Fitzgerald, Chaplain W. Goodwin, Inner Guard L. Guthrie, Tyler F. Roberts, Secretary Conrad Luppen, Treasurer H. M. Fisher, and the architect, G. B. Reid, conducted the services in accordance with the Elks' ritual.

Excellent music was furnished by the Marine Band and a cornet solo by Chet Shields. Mr. Geo. Hubert sang that beautiful old hymn, "Abide With Me," being accompanied on the organ by Prof. Wm. A. Lange.

Mr. T. F. Trumbull, in an eloquent and well rendered address, briefly outlined the history of the Elks lodge and its marvelous growth, not only in this county, but all over the world. He spoke of the underlying principles of the order, showing that it stands for all that is highest and best in the world and that if the members lived up to their obligation or oath the world would, indeed, be better because they had lived. Patriotism, charity, brotherly love, justice and fidelity comprise the foundation upon which Elkdom is built.

Mr. Trumbull spoke of the rapid growth of Naval Lodge 353, in the past few years, until it numbers almost a half a thousand members—the largest organization in the county. He congratulated the present efficient officers for their success in being able to bring about the realization of a dream Naval Lodge has had for many years, the building of an Elks Home, of which the corner stone has just been laid. He reminded his brother Elks that though the new building had required, from them all, a sacrifice, that after all, the only things in this world that are lasting and really worth while are the things for which someone has had to make a sacrifice. He believed the building of this home would not only be of benefit to the Elks, but to the whole community as well; consequently all should do their part in helping to make it a success.

The corner stone, a handsome block of grey sandstone in which was carved the name of the lodge, and within which was placed the usual records including copies of the town papers, is located at the northeast corner of the building, presenting a pleasing contrast to the dark reddish-brown paving brick laid in a drab-colored mortar which has been used for the Lincoln street face. The first floor, now all but completed, gives one an idea of the size and beauty of the building, which promises to be the most attractive in the city.

The Elks are already planning a series of social sessions to be given in the new home, and in which the wives of the Elks will play a prominent part.

BABY SHOW BROUGHT OUT BIG CROWD

Believed that a "Better Babies' Contest Can Be Arranged for Next Year.

The fancy work and vegetable exhibit at the Clallam County Fair last week were exceptionally fine and drew out a good crowd each day, but it was the Baby Show that capped the climax and brought out the record crowd Saturday afternoon.

Brother Teck builded better than he knew when he suggested a baby contest, and he sure had his hands full for a while before the last of the thirty-one bouncing babies were properly registered and entered in the race. There surely were some fine looking babies and the judges had hard work to decide who should be the prize winners.

Another year it is proposed to hold a regular Better Babies' Contest, under the management of persons experienced and qualified as to all the requirements. Here's hoping that Clallam County can produce some babies that will compare favorably with the best in the state. The great interest taken in the baby show last Friday would go to prove that a Better Babies' Contest would be a great drawing card at the fair next year. A list of the "prize winners" may be found on page three, this issue.

Each night of the Fair the floor of the dancing pavilion was crowded with merry dancers and Saturday evening there was hardly dancing room for the immense crowd. The elegant floor and fine music were a temptation to all lovers of the dance, and old and young gave themselves over to the pleasure it afforded.

RECEIVER FOR ANGELES TRANSPORTATION COMPANY SOUGHT IN U. S. COURT

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed Tuesday in the U. S. District Court against the Port Angeles Transportation Company. The petitioning creditors, all of Port Angeles, and the amounts of their alleged claims follow:

Bank of Clallam County, $832; F. L. Grubb, $500; Webster Publishing Company, $146.80; James Fitzgerald $127.05; Tribune-Times, $92.55. The creditors, besides alleging that the company is insolvent, charge that applications have been made in two counties, Clallam and King, for the appointment of two receivers, one Lauridsen, in Clallam, and Fred L. Seivas, in King county.—P.-I.

LAURIDSEN'S NEW BUILDING TO BE OF RED BRICK

The contract for G. M. Lauridsen's new business block having been let to Cotton & Reid, work thereon is being pushed right along and the foundation will be ready in a day or two for the carpenters and bricklayers. The building is to have a handsome front, being nearly all glass, as will be the north side; a corner entrance is being provided on the northeast. It is said it is to be ready for occupancy by the close of next month.

Miss Verna Wolverton leaves today for Anacortes to accept a position with Ed Abbott, as pianist for his theaters. She also hopes to continue her musical studies during the winter under Professor Shelling of Seattle, whom she studied under at Walla Walla. Miss Wolverton will be greatly missed in Angeles where she has always so willingly given her services for entertainments of all kinds. She has shown unusual musical ability since a small child, and this natural talent, coupled with a sweet and gracious manner are bound to win her success in the musical world.

MISS NELL MORSE STEALS MARCH ON FRIENDS AND HAS QUIET WEDDING

By J. V. Koenig

We are a little late with an item relative to the wedding of Miss Nell B. Morse of Mora to Mr. George Seigfried of Forks. The wedding took place at Port Townsend on September 1st, and it was not announced at the time. Only the fact that they are one of the most popular of the young couples in Clallam county gives them the chance for any consideration whatsoever. Mrs. Seigfried is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam G. Morse of Mora. She is a native girl of Clallam county and received her education in Aberdeen and Port Angeles and at Bellingham Normal School. Mr. Seigfried is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Siegfried of Bogachiel.

We offer our heartiest congratulations to them both and the best wishes and good will of their many friends is sure to be with them.

Sam Hill of Maryhill, former president of the Good Roads Association, was in Forks Friday. Mr. Hill is to make a speech before the good roads convention at Ellensburg next month and is making a tour of the state roads in order to get a comprehensive view of the situation. Mr. Hill is an advocate of a road along

JEFFERSON COUNTY'S THREE MILE LINK AT DISCOVERY BAY A GOOD ROAD

"It is a splendid piece of roadwork, equal or superior to any other portion of the Highway," said Commissioner J. C. Hansen Tuesday after driving over the recently completed three miles of grade which Jefferson county has tied onto the end of Clallam's road. They have secured a good grade, the roadbed is wide and the character of the soil such that, when graveled, the road will almost maintain itself. However, some four miles yet remain to be graded before the long Discovery Bay hill is eliminated and it is hoped Jefferson county will complete the work next year. A good deal of work is going on on the road down the east side of the bay, some portions of which are already as smooth as asphalt, while others are decidedly "country." Port Townsend will have to see that the improvement is made continuous and the road completed around the big hill before they can expect to participate to any great extent in the benefits of the tourist travel.

CLIMBING MT. ANGELES STILL A POPULAR PASTIME

While no regular week-end had been announced, several members of the Klahhane Club enjoyed the now more or less regular bi-weekly trip to their lodge Friday evening, making the walk out after dark a feature of the initiation of Mrs. Gangler and two or three of the "new teachers" who had recently joined the organization. All report a jolly outing, especially those who made the climb of Mt. Angeles on Saturday.

Next week Friday and Saturday, the 21st and 22nd, it is expected to hold a second "Lodge Day," when a fireplace will be built and other work done to put the lodge in shape for the winter months, it being the intention to climb the mountain every month in the year.

Over two hundred invitations were sent out for the "mountaineer dance," to be given in Parish Hall next Wednesday evening, by the members of the Klahhane Club and it is expected that the first of their series of dances will be quite the society event of the fall season.

ENFORCEMENT OF PROHIBITION TO INTEREST OF ALL CITIZENS

Apprehension is usually the most unhealthful and harmful feature of changes which compel readjustment in business conditions. Business is proverbially inclined to conservatism; this is not unnatural, for its successful prosecution is dependant largely upon the maintenance of stable conditions. It is for this reason, business in this and neighboring states has looked askance at the proposition of abolishing the liquor traffic and making the attempt at prohibition.

Now that the near approach of this departure brings its influence to a careful consideration, it is readily apparent that, from a purely business standpoint, there is compensation for much of the losses as will be occasioned.

There is no reason why the grocer, the butcher, the dry goods merchant, and the clothing dealer should voice vain regrets at the diversion of trade represented in transition. To most of them the expenditure for liquor means just so much deducted from the amount that would normally be employed to provide better living for the families of their patrons. It should mean not only better business, but better collections, instead of exerting a contrary influence, and it has been practically demonstrated in many instances that this is the resultant effect.

The most serious deterrent to be apprehended is that the saloon men shall be able to make a farce of the new law.

The toleration of "blind pigs" and of dens in which liquor is dispensed will minimize the financial benefits which in other states have overbalanced the recognized immediate loss occasioned by driving the traffic into outlawry. If the law is to be found practicable, the efforts to prevent its enforcement must be met with a determination to not only stamp out the traffic but to rid the community of such undesirable citizens. If the law be consistently enforced, there is no question but that business will soon rally from any possible ill effects to be apprehended and it is to the interest of all business men and all good citizens that the experiment should be made effective to the extent of the law's intent.—West Coast Trade.

Did you ever stop to consider, Mr. Smoker, how much damage is done to property in your town, by the unreasonable habit of striking your match on somebody's painted fence or house?

"A BABY SAVED IS A CITIZEN GAINED"

We hear much in these progressive days about the conservation of our national resources. Our minerals, forests and water-power have long been subjects of grave consideration, but only lately have we awakened to the truth that a nation's resource is her loyal vigorous citizens.

That a proper conservation of citizens must begin with the infant is evident to anyone who will read the statistics of infant mortality in our country. Babies are born to live yet the vital statistician of the census bureau estimates that 300,000 babies die annually in the United States under the age of one year.

The Thedora Home, in King county, near Seattle, was founded by the Volunteers of America to aid in this work of child conservation in the natural way by giving needy mothers a home where they are enabled to properly care for their babies during the trying first year and longer if necessary. The object of our work to to avoid the separation of the child from the mother. We take care of the children during the day while the mother is employed, and she comes home at night to a room she can call her own and the privilege of putting her own baby to bed.

Donations of money are most valuable to the Home, but provisions, such as hams, fowls, fruits, vegetables and clothing will be gladly and thankfully received. We feel sure that our patrons and benefactors will be happy in the knowledge that anything they donate will help to give some little one a fair start on the way to a better citizenship, a nobler manhood or womanhood. All donations for the Thedora Home, received at 1930 7th Avenue, Seattle, Washington.

FLY KILLING CRUSADE MOST NEEDED THING

In response to the editor's request, that citizens suggest things that would be of benefit to the city, I would say that in my opinion, a fly killing crusade is now the most needed thing. Had the one who invented screen doors and windows brought out at the time some of the many devices now in use, to kill the pests, we might now be a flyless country, instead of the yearly increase of the plague. So many people do not expend any thought on the subject, only to keep the flies out of the house which screens in some measure do, but they keep the housewives nerves on a tension every time a door is opened, lest the waiting flies outside get in. It's only keeping them out this year to multiply a thousand fold for next year, and so on the years to come. A few years ago a screen door was a rare thing in this town and flies were not numerous. Now both are numberless. Of course the doors are not responsible for the increase of flies nor are they abating the nuisance in a general way. When you chase a fly out, you may be almost certain it will return a thousand fold next season. If you kill it—it is that much done toward exterminating an annoying, unwholesome and unnecessary pest. With the many simple, inexpensive devices now in the market for killing flies, not an impossible task, and this is the time when every one should do his or her best, that it may be said of Angeles, as it is now said of Toledo, Ohio, that she is a flyless city. What has been done in a warm climate can more easily be done here.

"LITTLE VISITS"

My intense interest in folks and their doings has driven me to make a series of little journeys and visits to various places and peoples and to record my impressions of the same. I hope to make a pilgrimage to all places of interest in Port Angeles and to set up my sayings in the good papers of this city.

My first visit was to the public library last Saturday afternoon in company with my boy Duncan, who loves books and libraries as well as his chum "Daddie." I received a good Scotch welcome from Miss MacClure who greeted me open handed and open hearted. I soon discovered that Miss MacClure was a most delightful conversationalist, a discriminating reader, an intelligent judge of books, a keen analysist of characters, a sympathetic friend in the selection of books for the ordinary reader and above all very much in love with her work as librarian.

In our delightful talk she told me of the origin and progress of the library, of their past struggles and achievements, their victories and also a few of their disappointments. This loyal woman did not claim the credit for this success but like the folks who do things she gave the praise and honor to others. She was loud in her praise of Mrs. MacGillivray and Mrs. Willson and others of whom it is my misfortune to have forgotten their names.

The library contains some splendid books and there has been much wisdom and taste in the selection of them but the number ought to be doubled and this could easily be accomplished in several ways. Would it not be a good thing to have a Library Day set apart. Port Angeles needs a good library just as well as she needs good schools or good roads or good buildings or good streets, or good mills or good lights or good homes. The cultivation of the mental life of the folks will reap as good a harvest in the coming years as any investment that the citizens of Port Angeles can make.

I am not criticising at all when I say that I wish the library was more favorable in location and situation. I would like to see it in the very heart of the city in the very best building in the very best block. If I could get enough folks to come out Sunday I would be delighted to preach a sermon on this very subject. Perhaps the day is not far distant when this library will be centrally located, beautifully situated, properly supported by the city and its services appropriated by the good folks of Port Angeles.

Then if the dreams of these talented ladies cannot be at once realized much can be done under the present conditions to develop and improve. It seems to me that the number of patrons and subscribers ought to be doubled at once. The number is very small considering the size and intellectual caliber of this modern and fast growing city. Let all who love books make a little pilgrimage to the library, get acquainted with Miss Mac Clure, look over the books and then take out a card.

Then my mind went forward to the first of next January when the saloons will disappear from the life and customs of Washington. What will take the place of the abolished and voted out social clubs and drinking places which have been frequented by a class of folks who have had no other place to aggregate and congregate. There must be some kind of a substitute for the saloon and that substitute must have the attractions of the saloon with the drinking and other evils omitted. The solution of this problem is in the reading room and the social room which is really a living part of any library. If the people would rally to the support of this library then a room could be opened down town, fitted up in such a manner that many who now patronize and monopolize the saloon would hardly miss it. It can be done if folks say so.

I would like to see this library open every day of the week. Pardon a a suggestion from one who is a stranger to many, but as I have lived in Port Angeles for two weeks I now consider myself an old inhabitant. Could we not find enough people and lodges and clubs and churches and school teachers and lawyers and other busy folks who would be responsible for a day at a time. Yes, it can be done. I have seen enough of the Port Angeles spirit and enthusiasm to know that this would be a simple matter indeed.

But perhaps I have hammered my typewriter for nothing and like some poets have simply thrown the words away. But really I have done some good and that I know right well because I have gotten rid of some thoughts which needed to be let loose and then perhaps some wandering eye may fall on this and wonder who that cheerful idiot is who raves and so foolishly lets his brain storms play upon such a thing as the Public Library of Port Angeles.

It was with regret I parted from Miss MacClure because I had had such a delightful visit, had learned much of the work of the Library Board and I dislike to leave anyone who loves books.

My one great lasting impression was that here is a place where one may do a great work for the people of Port Angeles And I will be one who will help in the good work.

TALKS ON THRIFT

Talks on Thrift by the Savings Bank Section of the American Bankers Association.

"While waiting for the great chance, do not neglect the regular chores."

Too many people are looking for a "big strike," a great opportunity, a great streak of luck, that they fail to see in the daily walks of life many little chances. the little streaks of luck, and the little strikes, which if persistently followed would lead to greater and more lasting achievements than the one great crop .

Michael Angelo observed that "trifles make perfection and perfection is no trifle." Success comes from attention to detail; thought for little things; doing little things so well that out of the many little things well done is sure to come one great thing—character.

No man jumps into success at one leap. No great invention has been a sudden thing. The Wrights worked on flying machines years before they flew. Henry Ford was a mechanic before he was an automobile wizard. He did not dream a Ford car; he worked it out. And it took years.

It is all very well to keep your head up, but watch your step or you will stumble. Look out to sea once in a while, but mind the compass near at hand. Aim at the moon if you will, but there's a barn door handy by to practice on. Dream big things, but try your hand at little ones first.

The man who wears expensive clothes, a high hat, a diamond as big as a hen's egg and a watch chain that would do honor to a battleship may look prosperous and cut a wide swath, but if he neglects the razor, the nail file and the tooth brush, he can't break into good society, nor make a good impression at his bank. The banker wants consistency—attention to little things.

In the effort to get rich (and who doesn't aspire to wealth) it is better to lay a foundation, as the mason lays brick, saving little by little, laying by each week or each month a few dollars which, when they get together in the bank, will form the foundation for a great structure when the time comes to build. Your bank account will get you more than you appreciate and carry you a long way on life's journey. Mark the man with a bank-book—how easy it is for him to get credit!

Thrift in the last analysis consists in attention to detail; in doing the little things so well that by the time the big thing comes your way, the habit of saving and thoroughness will have been so fixed that the big chance will be well done too. While you wait for the big chance, do not neglect your regular chores.

NOTES

The pastor of the church is pleased with the growing congregations. Every church in the city ought to be crowded every Sunday.

The subject for next Sunday morning will be "The Man Who Forgot Something." In the evening there will be a continuation of the theme discussed last week relative to the value of human knowledge; the subject will be "Seeing Things Without the Eye."

The pastor is very desirous that this church shall be known as the church of the "Royal Welcome." A good welcome is a powerful sermon to some folks.

There is the feeling in many places that the preacher and his church are something just to be endured and yet not abolished. In some vicinities I have heard him called the fifth wheel. The preacher ought to be one of the most useful citizens in any city. In fact he is not on his job if he merely pastors his own denominational flock.

The church has a commercial value to any people and their property. Some time ago a friend of mine in the East wished to invest a considerable amount of money somewheres in the Golden West. He just asked one important question relative to conditions and that question was: "What kind of churches have you and how are they attended?" Now this was a shrewd business man, who realized the commercial value of the church. There are many people in the east whose investments out here will be largely determined by that very same question.

It is just as important to develop church life and property as it is to develop the material as important and valuable as that may be. Let Port Angeles be known soon as the best church town on the Straits or the Sound. Then let this be known abroad and there will come to this city the best class of citizens in all the world.

THEODORE SHARPE,
Pastor M. E. Church.

The croaker looking for evidence of hard times would hardly find it at Billy Martin's sash and door factory just now. In every space between the numerous machines of the plant is stacked up portions of window and door frames and interior finish, all a portion of the big order for the Elks' building, which is being built, in so far as is possible, by home people.

PROF. MARY E. SUTHERLAND'S 100 FAVORITE RECIPES

CHEESE

Cheese is the curd of milk separated and pressed. It is made chiefly from cows milk. Goats' milk is sometimes used. It may be made from whole milk, to which cream has been added, or from skim milk. One lb. of cheese contains as much nutriment as 2 lbs. of meat. It is a highly concentrated food, therefore should be eaten in small quantities with carbohydrates. It should be kept covered. Any kind of cheese is made more digestible by being finely divided and mixed with other foods, as in cooking. Cheese is sufficiently cooked when melted, long cooking makes it tough. Soda added to dishes prepared with cheese makes it dissolve more readily, thus making it more digestible. When adding soda use ⅛c of grated cheese.

TOASTED CHEESE SANDWICHES

Prepare toast, dip quickly in hot salted water. Spread slices with grated cheese, place in pan in oven long enough to melt cheese. Put slices together as sandwiches.

WELSH RABBIT

½ lb. cheese (grated), few grs. cayenne, 2 eggs, ¼ tsp mustard, ⅛ tsp soda, 1 tbsp butter, ½ tsp salt, ½ c milk, crackers or toast.

MUSICAL CLUB HELD FIRST MEETING TUESDAY

The Port Angeles Musical Club held its first meeting of the year Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. Minnie Troy, the president. A very enjoyable impromptu program was given, consisting of piano numbers by Miss Wolverton and Mrs. Gilbert, two violin selections by Miss Elliott and a vocal solo, Schubert's Serenade, by Mrs. Cole.

The Club has decided to hold one afternoon and one evening meeting each month, hoping in this way to secure the membership of many who cannot attend afternoon meetings on account of their work and also to give an opportunity for the gentlemen lovers of music to become honorary members. The evening meeting will be held the second Tuesday of each month and the afternoon on the fourth Tuesday. A cordial invitation is extended to all who are interested in music to join the club. The meetings for the present will be held with Mrs. Troy.

ATTRACT WOMEN TO YOUR STORE

They Do Most of the Family Shopping.

KEEP TO THEIR STANDARD.

They Are More Observing Than Men and Will Not Make Their Purchases In Disorder and Confusion—Immaculate Array of Goods Pleases Them. The Shiftless Merchant Fails.

[Copyrighted, 1914, by Thomas J. Sullivan.]

An acorn is not an oak when it is sprouted. It must go through long summers and fierce winters and endure all the frost and snow and thunder and storms and side striking winds before it is a full grown oak.

Not Half a Man.

So man is not a man when he is created. He is only just begun. His manhood must come with years. He who travels through life prosperous and goes to his grave without a wrinkle is not half a man. Difficulties are God's errands and trainers, and only through them can one attain to the fullness of manhood.

And what a chimera is man, what a confused chase, what a subject of contradiction—a proposed judge of all things and yet a feeble worm of the earth; the great depository and guardian of truth and yet a mere huddle of uncertainty; the glory and scandal of the universe!

Women Greatest Shoppers.

Man is a sort of dependent creature, and that is why woman took him in charge and relegated him to the rear of the procession, at least so far as the purchasing agent of the home necessaries goes. Some extravagant guesser has guessed that 80 per cent of all retail buying is done by women.

We guess that that guess is too high.

Men have more to do with the family shopping than they are often willing to have their wives, daughters and sisters admit to friends.

Men are the court of last resort, and the case is often reversed, as the exchanged and returned goods department of almost any store can testify.

Perhaps the expense of these departments would be largely reduced if the stores were made more attractive to men, if it were less unusual and less embarrassing for them to shop. Certain it is that, even though the women make 80 per cent of the family purchases, the men must be catered to in any store that is to succeed.

Women Very Observing.

But, primarily, the stores are for women. They make up the majority of every merchant's customers. For them the right merchandise must be secured; to them the merchant must make his appeal.

Just as surely as women are naturally more observing than men, just so surely will the merchant make the mistake of his life if he attempts to run his store in a sloppy, slipshod way. The successful store must be kept up to the woman's standard.

Many men who are good merchants in other respects fail here and then wonder why they do not get the trade—wonder why it goes to the big city stores or to the retail mail order houses.

Attractive Stores Win.

Observing women who are careful and conscientious housekeepers are not going to buy in disorder and confusion. One way a merchant can place himself out of reach of competition is to make his store so conspicuous for its attractiveness, its cleanliness, its immaculate order, its convenience for women, that even the most particular of the sex will show her delight in it.

This is the most effective and least expensive advertising a merchant can do.

In the business world of today there is no place for a weakling. Business is a man's game and must be played in a man's way.

Shiftless Merchant Fails.

The failure of the merchant who keeps a dirty, sloppy store, in an indolent, shiftless way, means another revolution of the wheel of progress.

His trip to the scrap heap is for the general good, for the betterment and advancement of the industry he would keep in disrepute. That man is already on the greased side of the toboggan. It is but a question of time when you will hear him fall.

Woman's keen eye soon sorts out the storekeeper from the real alive, up to date merchant, and it does not take her any great length of time to forget that the dead, sleepy storekeeper ever existed, and he is so dumb and brainless that he can't account for the loss of her trade.

She Will Tell Him.

Let him ask any woman in his town why he failed to get her trade, and she can and will soon tell him that the sooner such a business man or storekeeper as he retires and leaves the field to his more progressive competitor the better it will be for himself and the entire community.

"Opportune" once signified nothing more than "to be at the harbor." An opportune ship was a ship which had come to port.

BAYONET CHARGES.

Hand to Hand Conflicts Are Rare Upon the Field of Battle.

In a talk about military methods in warfare General Stephen M. Weld, in discussing stories of bayonet charges, said:

"I do not know of a single case in our war where bayonets were actually crossed. I heard of one or two, but I never happened to see one.

"In the numerous charges made by our corps in the Wilderness campaign the only one we ever made successfully was on the 17th of June. One division had already charged and been repulsed. Our division was then ordered to make a charge across a plain some 200 yards wide. Colonel Gould had command of the division, which placed the brigade in my hands.

"Before charging the men were ordered to remove the caps from their guns and when they did charge were told to leg it like blazes, which they did. In almost no time we were over the 200 yards, subjected to a storm of shell and cannister and only one volley from the infantry in the enemy's trenches. One-half of the men in our regiment were lost in this charge.

"Here was a case where you would suppose we might have crossed bayonets. On the contrary, the Confederates fled, the same as we would have done had we been attacked. We captured their knapsacks and everything they had in the trenches just as they were."—Exchange.

A FAMOUS DETECTIVE.

Vidocq Was a Notorious Thief Before He Joined the Police.

Modern detectives, as a rule, are fitted for their work by a long course of police training. But not so Vidocq, the great French detective, who was born in Aras in 1775. He began life as a baker and early became the terror of his companions by his athletic frame and violent disposition. At the same time he was a notorious thief, and after many disgraceful adventures he enlisted in the army.

In 1796 he returned to Paris with some money, which, however, he soon squandered. Next he was sentenced at Lille to eight years' hard labor for forgery, but repeatedly escaped, and in 1808 he became connected with the Paris police as a detective.

His previous career enabled him to render important services, and he was appointed chief of the safety brigade, chiefly composed of reprieved convicts, which purged Paris of the many dangerous classes. In 1818 he received a full pardon, and his connection with this service lasted until about 1828, when he settled at St. Mande as a paper manufacturer.

Soon after the revolution of 1830 he became a political detective, but with little success. In 1848 he was again employed under the republican government, but he died penniless in 1857. —London Standard.

Queer Pronunciations.

There are many names of places in England that puzzle the stranger. Happisburgh, in Norfolk, for instance, is pronounced "Hazeboro," Abergavenny simply drops a syllable and becomes "Abergenny," and it is alleged that St. Neots sounds more like "Snoots" than anything else. Cirencester seems to vary from "Sister" to "Sizeter." In Suffolk Waldringfield is "Wunnerful" and Chelmondiston "Chimston," while in the adjoining county of Norfolk Hunstanton is "Hunston," and in the west country Badgeworthy is "Badgery" and Cornwood "Kernood." Huntingdonshire claims the purest English, but they call Papworth "Parpor." And not far from there a motorist turned upon a rough road and asked the intelligent laborers where it would take him. "That road," said the honest countryman, wiping his brow, "will take you to 'Ell, sir." The courageous motorist went on and found Ellsworth, which is pronounced "Elser."—Manchester Guardian.

Fruitful Combination.

In New York a new teacher found that a little negro girl was named Fertilizer Johnson.

"Are you sure Fertilizer is your right name?" she asked.

"Yes, ma'am," replied the little girl.

"Well, tell your mother to come here," said the teacher.

The mother came the next day.

"Yes, Fertilizer is right," she said. "You see, I named her after her father and mother both. Her father's name is Ferdinand, and my name is Liza, so we called her Fertilizer."—New York Globe.

Her Reason.

The beautiful girl was writing a letter.

"I am writing," she mused, "not because I have something special to say, but because I have nothing special to do."

Thus does the busy little bee employ each shining hour.—Philadelphia Ledger.

How He Won Her.

She—Mamma is opposed to you because you never minded your mother and were never considerate with your sisters. He—Perhaps you would rather marry some chap who would want his mother and sisters to come live with you? She—Horrors, no! How foolish mamma is!—New York Weekly.

He who cannot forgive others breaks the bridge over which he must pass himself, for every man has need to be forgiven.

WHY WE CAN'T FLY

The Reason Man Is Unable to Rise In the Air Like a Bird.

HE LACKS THE BREASTBONE.

In the Bird It Is Very Massive and Developed Like the Keel of a Yacht, and Therein Lies the Secret of Its Enormous Wing Power.

Man has always longed to fly like a bird, and all the ancient attempts at flight were based upon the flapping of wings attached to human arms.

These efforts were given up long ago when it was realized that man was not and could not be strong enough to sustain himself in the air by the use of his arms. A man can only just lift himself with his arms—chinning the bar, for example—but he finds himself pretty heavy after he has done it a few times.

The reason why no man will ever be able to fly with self moved wings is that his breastbone is not big enough. A bird's breastbone has along its middle a deep keel, from which spring the enormous muscles that draw down the wings when flapping or hold them level when soaring, the muscles, in other words, that support the entire weight of the bird.

The most powerful fliers have the deepest breastbones. Look at the skeleton of an albatross, a condor or a humming bird in a museum and you will notice that the keel of its breastbone projects like the keel of a racing yacht.

You can see this keel, only much smaller in proportion to the size of the bird, on the carcass of any chicken or turkey after the meat has been removed, and the tender white flesh from the breast is nothing but the muscles with which the bird flew when alive.

You notice that even on a chicken, which is one of the weakest of fliers, this flesh forms the greater part of the body. On a humming bird there is little else but this mass of flying muscle. In other words, the humming bird is nothing but a tiny flying machine.

An albatross has a vast spread of wings, and its small body is little else but a pair of powerful pectoral muscles. These are attached by tendons to the bone called the humerus, which is the counterpart of the upper arm bone of a man. They spread out like a solid fan and are fastened to the breastbone with its deep keel, to the clavicles, or "wishbone," and to the ribs.

A man's breastbone has no keel. His humerus, or upper arm bone, is hinged to the clavicle, or collarbone, and shoulder blade. His pectoral muscles, which move the arm forward, and deltoid muscles, which lift it, are attached to it by strong tendons and spread fanlike over his upper chest, being inserted in the ribs and collarbone.

These are the muscles that do the same work for man as the pectoral muscles do for a bird. These are the muscles on which he would have to rely if he were to fasten wings to his arms and try to fly.

Compare these muscles with those of an albatross and you will see how inadequate they are. Though an albatross weighs only a few pounds, it has pectoral muscles that are actually larger than those of the most powerful athlete.

In order to have muscles powerful enough to lift his weight in the air by flapping wings a man's breastbone would have to develop a keel like a bird's and his collar bone would have to be changed to a giant "wishbone."

Some writer on aviation has calculated that this keel and "wishbone" would have to project at least six feet in order to furnish attachment for the necessary muscles, for man in proportion to his size is far heavier than an albatross. This bird has small and very light legs, whereas man's legs are solid and heavy. The albatross' long wing bones are hollow tubes.

This makes it plain why experimenters in flying long ago gave up the idea of self moved wings and flight like that of a bird.—San Francisco Chronicle.

The Trouble With Golf.

Queen Victoria once induced Count Shuvalov, the Russian ambassador, to try a game of golf at Balmoral. The Russian did try, but after innumerable misses he turned round to one of the bystanders and said:

"Ach, monsieur, it would be a very nice game if the ball was ten times larger. Now let us go home."

But what he said in Russian to himself is not recorded.

Felt Safe.

On Jimmie's birthday his mother gave him a knife. A little friend told him that he ought to give his mother a penny, so that it would not cut their friendship, whereupon Jimmie replied, "It won't cut anything else, so I guess it won't cut our friendship."—Delineator.

The Way of It.

"The doctors who attended me after my automobile accident told me I was full of grit."

"Yes; I understand they removed a great deal of the road you were holding in your teeth."—Baltimore American.

PRINTING

STYLES in job printing have undergone many changes in the past few years. The gaudy type, fancy borders and big ornaments have been replaced with more simple designs. Present-day advertisers realize that the old out-of-date designs have no connection with modern business methods. We are specially equipped to execute simplified designs which attract attention of buyers and reflect the prosperity of the merchant.

All work promptly and carefully attended to.

RURAL ORGANIZATION, THE GREAT NEED OF THIS COUNTY

PAULHAMUS' STORY OF PUYALLUP

By W. H. Paulhamus.

"I want to congratulate you on your Fair. I am not going to flatter you on it, it is not as large as some I have visited, but I do not know of any where the exhibits have been of a higher class and where they were presented in better condition. I visited the Inter-State Fair at Spokane, and I want to say, that the way that fair was put up did not compare with the way your exhibits are put up. It is true it is a much larger fair but I want to say frankly that the way your exhibits are arranged, I never saw any better.

"I have been the president and general manager of the fair at Puyallup Valley for about fifteen years, and the success of our fair has been due to the fact that we have had a one-man management. Not because I was this one man, but I want to say that if you are going to have a successful fair you can only have it by having a man in charge of that fair and the balance being workers, not 15 or 20 managers. I never found any business that was a success that did not have a boss. That is what is the matter with the fairs, they do not have a boss. We all think we know more than the other one. The failures are due to the fact that we do not want to learn.

Farmers Must Keep Books

"Dr. Cardiff spoke a volume when he said that no farmer is successful unless he keeps books. If we could all have a man like Billy Sunday to take charge of the business, and then keep books we would have much more successful farms today. I believe that every farmer should not only keep books with his cow but also with every field; that is, when he plants the field he should charge the cost up against that field, and when he takes off a crop of potatoes, or whatever it may be, he should credit the field with it. I do not believe that we will ever be successful until we do that.

Marketing Secret of Success

"Dr. Cardiff spoke of the value of teaching agriculture, and of the new man you are to have in this county. Now I assume that this man's duties will consist largely of teaching you how to make your cows produce more milk, and how your fields should produce more grain, and how you can make your ground produce more potatoes; but supposing that he is successful, supposing that your cows do produce more milk, supposing your hens lay a vast number more eggs, but supposing you cannot sell the milk, or the eggs or the potatoes at a profit, what have you gained? I think that the secret of farming is not any more in growing two potatoes where one grew before, but in selling them after you have grown them. We have various colleges to teach you how to grow crops, and how to harvest them, and how to take care of them but that is less than half the battle because unless you can sell that product at a profit what you have gained?

"If I had my way the Department of Agriculture would be transposed and there would be departments of markets, with offices at Seattle, Spokane and possibly Everett, and instead of having a man to go out and inspect the trees, a man would go around and inspect the markets, and what there is an opportunity to sell and how it should be put up in order to sell it.

Makes a Discovery

"When I was young, I succeeded in saving some money, and like many of you I had an ambition to live on a farm and I thought that all that was necessary to do was to buy the land, have a cow, a horse, build a horse barn, and a house to live in, but I want to say that the illusion soon left me, because after I had produced a crop on the land, and it took all the money I had to produce it and then no one came along to buy it. The truth was that no one wanted my rhubarb, asparagus, apples, pears, loganberries, etc., and I found out that the customers did not care whether they had my crop or not. That was a disappointment to me, and I resolved to find out whether my neighbors were in the same condition, so I called a meeting at my house and found that they were in the same condition. I found that they would go to Tacoma and sell part of what they had to sell and have to bring home what they were unable to sell, with the result that they were not making money. It did not take me long to find out that there was something wrong with the industry. What was it? Were not our goods as good as the rest? The trouble was that we did not have the right way of delivering them.

The Beginning at Puyallup

"We then organized a fruit growers' association with about forty members. In those days we did not produce in Puyallup Valley more than $3,000 a year. Today we have 1,800 members, and this year we shipped 246,000 crates of red raspberries. We ship as far east as Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburg and as far north as trains go. We shipped one day 23 carloads of red raspberries, every car containing from six to seven hundred crates of berries. Last year we brought in Puyallup Valley for our berries $1,128,000 on a capital of $2,500. Now that shows what can be done by the right kind of co-operative work among the growers themselves. We soon found that it was not advisable to ship them all fresh and it was necessary to have canneries built, and we have now two of the largest canneries in the United States. This year we purchased at one time 40 cars of sugar. We have possibly $150,000 worth of tin cans. We have paid $150,000 for labor, and at this time we have in our canneries more than half a million dollars worth of loganberries ready to be shipped out. This has been built up by the growers themselves and we did not have any more money to start with than I stated.

Our two canneries employ from 700 to 800 employes, and for about four months in the year we employ 10,000 in the berry fields and are the largest employers in the State of Washington.

Aid Farmers Now Here

"Our Commercial clubs have been spending money to have photographers take pictures of our orchards to send back east to bring out others to build up our country, but I believe that it is better to give that same amount of energy to encouraging the men that are here, for if the man who is here is a success and makes it go the others coming in and finding that those that are here are making money then the new one will stay. I have seen, and you have seen, people come in here and look around and take the next train for Canada. I do not believe that is good. I believe that the commercial clubs should do all they can for those who are here, and if that is done we are going to have a successful country.

Organization Necessary

Chairman Donald McInnes, in his opening address urged the necessity of organization for the securing of the proper markets for Clallam county products. He said, in part:

"The exhibits here show what the soil of the counties of this peninsula will produce with a little effort, and which is as good as can be produced anywhere. While perhaps the fruit is not as fine as those on the east of Washington, for the reason that we do not resort to spraying our trees, but I venture to say that if we did our fruit would be just as good as that grown there. This fair distinctly shows that products can be raised here, but we all know that our farms are neglected. What is the reason of this neglect? The principal reason is that the man that grows the products does not always get the results that he should, perhaps the prices are not what they should get for them. Someone is at fault. I am a farmer and have a right to talk. We are lacking business instincts. Now you know that we can grow just as good apples as any place, and yet in the Seattle market you had to pay 5c a piece for Gravenstein apples and at the same time that you had to pay 5c a piece for a California Gravenstein apple there were apples going to waste here because they were not on the market. Why was it? Because you had no organization capable of putting your fruit on the market. The farmer cannot afford to go to the market every day, or run to Seattle to see where he can sell a box of apples but if you had an association with a paid secretary whose wages you paid and that you could discharge at any time, I tell you that the amount that it would cost each farmer would be very small and probably what it would cost him per month he would get back on one box of apples which he would sell. If you had a paid secretary to keep in touch with the markets and notify you where there was a good market you would know where to sell. This does not apply to apples alone. I find that sometimes several farmers in the same district will ship hogs on the same day. Possibly the market that they ship to can handle about five hogs a day, and possibly on one day 25 hogs will come in from the same place, and as a consequence they ship them to other markets and you take the smaller price also. If you had a paid secretary this would not happen. This is not only the case with apples and hogs but with veal and with butter. We are getting a better dairy country all the time and the same thing happens there. If you can get the right man even if you have to pay him $500 per month, pay it and you will be money in pocket. You require an agency of this kind to give the producer a reasonable price.

"We say that the government should help us. I say that we do not need any help. What we need is men who have brains and ability to organize associations and cut out the middle man. "Providence helps him who helps himself."

I was down at Discovery bay and a man asked me if I had been down to the codfish industry, and he stated that there are 320 tons of codfish waiting to be shipped East. I asked him where they were shipped, and he stated to Boston, and the truth of the matter is that they ship the fish to Boston and the firms there rebox it and re-label it and it is sent back here and we buy it. I sold red raspberry juice to Hungford Smith and he re-bottled it and sold it to the soda fountains for more than twice as much.

Find the Trouble

"We should adopt the policy of trying to find out what is the matter with us. I read a sign over there a few minutes ago which pointed out how many potatoes could be raised in each of the States, and it stated how many were raised in the whole, and how many were imported into the United States and how much the shortage was. My idea is to ascertain where that shortage is and sell to them. Apply the same horse sense to farming as to any business and we will be successful, but the trouble is we do not like leadership. But constructive leadership is going to build up every community, and if you do not consent to that you are not going to make a success.

"As Dr. Cardiff stated, for instance in potatoes, find out the kind of potatoes the people like and all the farmers grow that kind of potatoes and then get a nice sack with 'Clallam County Farmers' Association' on the outside and no man pack his potatoes but have them sent in bulk to one place and sorted, just like they do in central Washington, so that when a housewife buys a sack she will find them all uniform, and then we are going to make a success of the potato industry. This is not only true of the potato crop but also of fruit trees, etc

The Raspberry Market

"I suppose you have never heard of keeping raspberries in barrels. A fellow came and asked me what berries were, and I said $2.00 a crate, and he said he wanted a carload to put in barrels, and I told him that if he would let me watch him I would sell them to him at $1.90, and he did. He took two pounds of berries and one of sugar and thus filled up the barrel, and last year we sold 5,000 barrels of red raspberries, blackberries and loganberries. We have sold them to Heinz, of 57 Company, and various other companies. They buy the berries in barrels then add more sugar to them and sell to the soda fountains, and we are now selling more berries in barrels than in crates. We also shipped more than 140 carloads of Evergreen blackberries this year. It is hard to conceive how many that it, but the fact of the matter is that we have just started on the berry business and I believe than 10 years from now it will be just as much greater than 10 years ago.

Do One Thing Well

"Clallam county can do something just as good as in any other county in the state, and I believe that it is right for you to study and find out whether it is in potatoes, logan berries or what it is, then go ahead and do it, and do just a little better than the rest. Have meetings, and elect a manager, and stand at his back and help him make a success of the industry. If he does not make good, fire him and get another, but do not go to the grocery store and talk about him behind his back. Call a meeting and tell him to his face. That is one of the troubles we have, so many find fault with the management behind his back and do not give the managment a chance to explain. I know it is hard at first to turn your produce over to another man and let him sell it for you and pay you, but it cannot be done in any other way.

"In this county you are in the dairy business, at least. That is one of the best, but the trouble is that our milk industry has made a few of our men very wealthy. I can remember when John Stuart, of the Carnation Milk Company, came here and started the company. I do not blame them for making the money, but how much better it would be if the farmers had a greater share of the profits. The other day I went along 4th avenue, I think it is, in Seattle, and saw a new stone building and over the door was the name Stuart. He has made the money to buy that building out of milk. The trouble is that the farmers should organize and man their own business and I believe it can be done.

"I believe that fairs are one of the best things to bring the people together. We spend too much of our time at home. We do not get out enough to get the cobwebs off our brain. If we get out and exchange views we will do better. If this Fair has done nothing but bring the people together to exchange their views it is one of the best factors for the building up of the State. Clallam County will be just what you make it and that is going to depend entirely on your leadership whether it is successful or otherwise. I visited at one of the meetings of the Commercial Club in Tacoma and the key note of the address given was "Place at your head men who are not always asking the question, how much is there in this for me.' If you can organize with the right man at your head you are going to make a success of your county."

REGULAR MEETING OF THE WOMEN'S AUXILIARY

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Auxiliary to the Commercial Club was held at the club rooms Tuesday afternoon. Interesting reports of the work done at the fair last week were given by the chairmen of committees, Mrs. Callarman and Mrs. Ware. They tho't the women's department could be made one of the great attractions of the annual fairs, judging from the splendid manner in which people responded this year. Mrs. Ware tho't there could have been a beautiful floral display had provision for such been made in time.

The question of trying to complete the work of beautifying Laurel street zig-zag was discussed and left in the hands of the original committee, who will all struggle with the difficult problem once more. They hope to get grass seed sown and some shrubbery set out before the rains begin.

The president appointed a committee of three to represent the Auxiliary at a committee meeting representing the various women's organizations of the city. They hope to make arrangements for the opening of a free reading room down town somewhere, that will give men a place to loaf after saloons are closed.

"TALKS ON THRIFT"

We publish this week the first of a series of "Talks on Thrift," sent out by the savings bank section of the American Bankers Association; we trust they will be found of interest to all wage earners—and that includes practically every resident of the county. At some time or other, nearly everyone has a rainy day. The only way in which these can be provided for is to spend less than we earn, to provide for the rainy day when the load is easy. In no way can that be more surely and easily accomplished than thru the savings departments of the local banks.

PERUVIAN SHIP STELLA FLOATING PEST HOUSE

Reporting one member of the crew dead at sea and the others so weakened by beri beri that they would not even take in the sails while she was being towed up the strait, the Peruvian barkentine Stella, a floating pest house, seventy-four days from Callao, was brought into Port Townsend Wednesday night by the United States coast guard cutter Snohomish, stationed at Port Angeles, and the tug Prosper, says the Seattle P.-I.

Immediately upon her arrival at Port Townsend, Drs. Seavey and Carter, of the United States public health service, boarded the vessel. They found four members of the crew in a critical condition, and the others, including the master, barely able to crawl about.

The disease made its appearance on the vessel six weeks ago, and the members of the crew fell ill one by one, until the climax was reached October 5, when death boarded the craft and took Hurto Marredonr, the steward. He was buried at sea.

Doggedly the men stuck to their task of trying to bring the vessel into port, and at noon yesterday they passed Cape Flattery, with one man just able to hoist the signals for help to the government observers at Tatoosh Island.

"We are so ill that we are unable to handle the vessel," was the message sent.

The entire crew has been placed in the marine hospital, and the vessel taken to Diamond Point quarantine station. The quarantine officers say that the vessel is in the worst condition of any craft ever entering Puget Sound.

The Stella is under charter to the shipping firm of W. R. Grace & Co., and will load lumber at Mulkiteo and Port Angeles for the west coast of South America.

The U. S. R. C. Snohomish arrived back in Port Angeles Thursday evening and reported that two more men had died of the beri beri fever.

The cutter also reported that they had pulled the big 500-foot liner Calchas off the rocks at Point Wilson. The ship had two large holes in her bow and was still leaking through the bulkheads. Most of her cargo was taken off the past two days.

WM. PAYNE CRUSHED BY FALL OF GARDEN WALL

Particulars regarding the death of Wm. Payne, a former well-known citizen of Port Angeles, who while here was employed in the Citizen's National Bank and by the county as expert accountant, were received by J. P. Christensen last week. It seems that Mr. Payne, assisted by his gardener, was taking down a garden wall, which being 20 feet high and having an overhang, was propped up by struts. They removed these and had not had time to step away when the gardener noticed a slight movement of the wall and shouted to Mr. Payne to look out. Stumbling himself in getting out of the way, he saw upon rising that the wall had fallen upon Mr. Payne,fracturing his skull, breaking both legs and causing other injuries; death must have been instantaneous. Mr. Payne was 50 years of age. Mrs. Payne, writing to Mr. Christensen, says she is seriously considering returning to Washington, to make her home here or with her mother at Monroe.

CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY WITH MUSICAL EVENING

Mrs. A. D. Wolverton celebrated her birthday anniversary Tuesday evening by entertaining the ladies of her neighborhood with a very enjoyable musical evening at her home. Her daughters, the Misses Verna and Cora most graciously furnished both instrumental and vocal selections. A dainty luncheon was part of the pleasant evening's entertainment, the guests all wishing for their kindly hostess many more happy returns of the day.

BRUDDER FISHER, HE CARVED DE 'POSSUM

A few members of this order conceiving the idea of having Chinese noodles on Monday night, October the 11th, the news was spread and the brothers began donating chickens until it grew so large and so much cooking to be done that arrangements were made to have the dinner in the old dining room of the Angeles Hotel, as Brother John Pollanz consented to do the cooking. Several invitations were also given to outsiders to dine.

Dr. W. J. Taylor acted as toastmaster and Elmer E. Fisher had consented to be the chief carver of the evening and claimed that he could carve a possum. So a few of the Brother Moose arranged with Mr. Cole, the genial barber, to go out and round up a few coons to take the place of possum. And they were nicely roasted with sweet potatoes and veiled with napkins and set at Brother Fisher's plate. And the brothers should have seen the expression on Mr. Fisher's face as he took a little peep under the napkin before the ceremony started.

Music was furnished by Theo. Jensen's orchestra. After the Chinese noodles had been served and all were feeling quite satisfied, Brother Fisher commenced to carve the possum. We have always taken Brother Fisher as a very truthful person, hailing as he says from Elgin, Illinois, near Mooseheart, but if all present could have sat at the center table and watched Brother Fisher's mouth work, while he was "carvin' dat possum," and dishing up sweet potatoes, he would have sworn that he came direct from the old plantation in Alabama.

Toasts were given by Judge G. V. Smith, Wm. B. Ritchie, Councilman Bigelow, Harry A. Cotton, Councilman Wilhelm (aspiring), Judge J. M. Davis and Sheriff Harry Bishop.

Then following came the presentation of the handsome silver cup won by the Moose Lodge in the parade given by the B. P. O. E. during their carnival on July 2, 3 and 4. The presentation being made by Elmer E. Fisher, an Elk as well as a Moose, and the acceptance was made by the Worthy Dictator, No. 991, H. S. McLeod.

Quite a number of new applicants from the logging camps and the big mill were present to partake at the festivities and will be initiated in the lodge at a later date. It was just a royal good social time of the Moose and all seemed to enjoy it to the fullest extent.

"A BABY SAVED IS A CITIZEN GAINED"

We hear much in these progressive days about the conservation of our national resources. Our minerals, forests and water-power have long been subjects of grave consideration, but only lately have we awakened to the truth that a nation's resource is her loyal vigorous citizens.

That a proper conservation of citizens must begin with the infant is evident to anyone who will read the statistics of infant mortality in our country. Babies are born to live yet the vital statistician of the census bureau estimates that 300,000 babies die annually in the United States under the age of one year.

The Thedora Home, in King county, near Seattle, was founded by the Volunteers of America to aid in this work of child conservation in the natural way by giving needy mothers a home where they are enabled to properly care for their babies during the trying first year and longer if necessary. The object of our work to to avoid the separation of the child from the mother. We take care of the children during the day while the mother is employed, and she comes home at night to a room she can call her own and the privilege of putting her own baby to bed.

Donations of money are most valuable to the Home, but provisions, such as hams, fowls, fruits, vegetables and clothing will be gladly and thankfully received. We feel sure that our patrons and benefactors will be happy in the knowledge that anything they donate will help to give some little one a fair start on the way to a better citizenship, a nobler manhood or womanhood. All donations for the Thedora Home, received at 1930 7th Avenue, Seattle, Washington.

The town's prosperity is your prosperity. Your interest is here. Keep your money in town by spending it in town.
