VOL. 2. NO. 11. PORT CRESCENT, WASHINGTON, THURSDAY, AUGUST 6, 1891. PRICE FIVE CENTS.

THE CONTRACT IS LET,

NINETY-FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS

Is the Figure at Which the Contract for Constructing and Bridging the Entire Road, From the Jefferson-Clallam Line to the Quillayute River, Was Awarded to the E. C. Burlingame Company—A Lump Bid That Swept the Platter Clean—No Lack of Bidders for the Work—Some Interesting Details as to How the Figures Ranged—The Eastern Division to be Completed First, and the Middle and Western Divisions to Receive Attention Later On.

THE County Commissioners, at their meeting on Tuesday, awarded the contract for the construction of the entire county road —bridging and all—to the E. C. Burlingame Co., of Port Angeles, at their lump bid of $95,000 for the whole road.

There was no lack of bidders at Tuesday's letting, for the construction of the various divisions of the road, but the Burlingame Company swept the platter clean. Here is the way the bids ran, in detail:

EASTERN DIVISION. — Embracing 17 miles. The bid of W. C. Williams, for the work on this division, was $975 per mile for road work; $16 per lineal foot for bridging, and $6.50 per lineal foot for 330 feet of trestle work.

Charles O'Brien, $1,199 per mile, or $20,383 for the whole division.

Buchanan & Malony, $1,289 per mile, or $21,913 for the whole division.

MIDDLE DIVISION. — Embracing 38 miles. W. C. Williams, $2,400 per mile for road work, and $25 per lineal foot for truss bridges, and $12.50 per foot for bridges of other kinds.

The E. C. Burlingame Co., $13,600 for first mile, and $2,200 for each mile thereafter—or $95,000 for the total road,

J. M. Dougan & Co., $117,000 for the entire road, or $12,513 for the first mile, and $3,500 for each additional mile.

Earle & Co., $1,795 per mile.

Work is to be started on the road at once. The arrangement is, that the Eastern Division is to be completed first, and the other divisions "as the money is forthcoming."

The Eastern Division will be all right, under this deal; but just how the Central and Western Divisions are going to care, remains to be seen.

There is evidently a string to the contract, as let to the Burlingame Company, that is not yet fully apparent to the public. The LEADER's present understanding is, that for the sum of $95,000, the Burlingame Company is to construct the entire road, complete from end to end. But this understanding, we fear, is an erroneous one.

A glance at the separate bids made by the Burlingame Company, on the three divisions of the road, tends but to confirm this fear. These three bids, taken together, aggregate $189,970—$20,000 for the Eastern; $95,000 for the Middle, and $74,970 for the Western division. In face of these figures, it isn't possible to believe that this same company proposes to construct the whole road for $95,000.

But there is no doubt about this: The Eastern Division is to be completed; the Elwha bridged, and the remainder of the work is to be completed "as the money is forthcoming." Just what this phrase means will appear later on. The LEADER, with the information it has at hand, doesn't care to discuss the question now, for it can't do it intelligently.

To be Opened Next Week.

Messrs. S. J. Lutz & Co.'s new store building in the Saw-mill addition, will be ready for occupancy in a few days. It will be stocked with an excellent line of general merchandise, and will be opened for business as soon as the work of getting the new stock in place is completed which, it is expected, will be some time next week. Judge W. S. Miller will have charge of the new establishment—which is equivalent to saying that its patrons will always be well and courteously served.

A Favorite Field for Elk Hunters.

The valley of the Solduck is beginning to attract a great deal of attention at the hands of elk hunters, and several parties are coming in to try their luck with big game, while the animals are ranging in the valley and on the lower slopes of the Olympics. One delegation of sportsmen is coming all the way from Spokane to pursue elk over Olympian hills.

GET YOUR GUN,

And Go Out and Kill a Bear—The Animals are Plentiful, But Wily, and are Worth Hunting.

The bear hunters are having a great time, now, and are enjoying no end of fun in chasing the big, awkward-looking but nimble-limbed wearers of shaggy black fur, through salmon berry brakes, and over the hills and mountain sides.

Messrs. D. C. Robertson, Willett Delighl, Peter Johnson and Tom Thompson were out hunting on the foothills, south of town, Friday, and scared up one big she bear and four cubs—the latter cunning little affairs, as active as cats, and experts at tree climbing. The old bear was shot through and through, but got away. She went plunging through the timber and brush at a great rate, followed by the cubs, squealing at the top of their voices. Together they made an awful racket—one that made it an easy matter to keep up the chase.

Suddenly the squealing ceased. What became of the old animal is not known; but the cubs took to the trees, and two of them were located and killed—a ball from Robertson's rifle killing one of them, and one from Johnson's weapon, settling the second.

One of the cubs shot tumbled to the ground, and was secured; but the second one lodged in the tree in which it had taken refuge, and is hanging there still.

On Saturday, James McFarland shot a large bear, but didn't hurt it fatally, and it got away. He had better luck Monday, however, killing an immense fellow near Manuel Wasankari's ranch.

Mr. Robertson saw a big bear out on the foot-hills Sunday morning, another one Sunday night, and three on Monday —one large and two small ones—but to his great regret, he was unable to get a shot at any of them.

On Monday, Messrs. Frank Schulz and James Duncan saw an able-bodied bear out in the neighborhood of the saw-mill, but they were unarmed, and so that particular animal is still at liberty, and enjoying his regular salmon-berry feast.

Mr. Frank Austin cut another notch in his rifle stock, Monday morning, after bringing down a cub bear that he caught disporting itself about the hill, just west of Dr. Vidal's ranch, on Lake Crescent. He had been watching two large bears for an hour, trying to get a shot at them. While engaged in this absorbing occupation, the cub came within range—and died.

Bears are very plentiful in this vicinity, now. They are scouring the country in search of salmon berries, and you are liable to meet with one almost anywhere in the woods—particularly if you are out early in the morning or late in the evening.

He Will Come Again.

C. F. Seal, Esq., the courteous and capable cashier of the Merchant's Bank of Port Townsend, made a flying visit to Lake Crescent, Wednesday afternoon, under the escort of Manager John E. Lutz of the Port Crescent Improvement Company.

Mr. Seal's time here was very limited; but he was anxious to see the Lake, and having seen it, of course he will return again, when he can squeeze sufficient time from business to make a stay of satisfactory length.

MR. SAM J. LUTZ spent a portion of the present week at Lake Crescent. He drove out in a heavy spring wagon, in which he expected to haul in the trout he proposed catching; and inasmuch as he sent in for the sideboards of the vehicle, and another horse, the presumption is that the expedition panned out even better than expected.

ARTIST M. D. Cryderman, who gave such excellent evidence of his skill at Port Crescent, is distinguishing himself at Port Angeles. He has just completed a large painting of the bay and spit, at the latter place, for the Clallam County Abstract and Investment Co., that is just now attracting a flattering degree of attention.

They Enjoyed a Warm Bath.

Messrs. George Moore and George E. Kent of Lake Crescent, spent Sunday at the Hot Springs in the Solduck, and enjoyed, among other pleasures of a pleasant trip, a bath in the waters of the largest of the springs.

SAYS the Port Angeles Times: "Warren Dodge and his sister, and Mrs. B. F. Schwartz, returned Thursday from their visit to Lake Crescent. They had a splendid time and were loth to leave."

MESSRS. Theo. Meckstroth and Ernest Boehrig of the Solduck, went up to Seattle, Tuesday morning, to be away a few days.

MR. AND MRS. Peterson of Astoria, Oregon, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hanson of Lake Crescent.

A DELEGATION OF LADIES

FAIR AND COURAGEOUS PIONEERS,

Who Will Make the Wilderness Blossom as the Rose—An Unusual and Most Edifying Spectacle, and One That Bodes Well for the Development and Quick Prosperity of One of the Finest and Richest Valleys in the State of Washington—Women of Education and Refinement, and Accustomed to All the Advantages of City Life, Who are Laying Foundations for Snug Little Fortunes by Securing to Themselves Claims in the Solduck.

A MOST REMARKABLE movement is now in progress in the Solduck valley, to which Port Crescent is the gate-way.

This splendid valley, notable alike for the magnificence of its timber and the richness of its soil, which a year ago was practically unknown to civilization, is now being settled up with a class of people who would be a credit to any community on earth—people of education and refinement, accustomed to all of the conveniences of city life, and the pleasures that congenial society yields.

This settling-up movement is going forward with a rapidity nothing short of astonishing; and one of its most remarkable features is the large number of ladies who are participating in it. Nothing like it, so far as the LEADER is aware, has before been witnessed in this section of the state.

Every boat brings in fair feminine additions to the colony of gracious women who have secured claims in the Solduck, and who have thus each laid the foundation for a snug little fortune—for you must bear in mind that the Solduck valley will be opened up, almost in its entire length, by the Victoria, Port Crescent & Chehalis R. R., and that claims in there are going to be worth a whole lot of money.

Misses Frances Harrison and Alice M. Lyle of Port Townsend formed the advance guard of this delightful invasion of a land of glorious promise. Miss Harrison, after a time, returned to Port Townsend, to arrange for the departure of an important delegation for the Solduck—Miss Lyle remaining in the valley.

Wednesday of last week, Miss Harrison returned, accompanied by Mrs. Sarah Harrison, Mrs. M. Darcy, Mrs. Jones and her charming daughter, Miss Anna Jones, Misses Anna and Victoria Marsh and Miss Rosa Sheehan. Quite a number of gentlemen, settlers, too, accompanied the party.

Yesterday, another interesting delegation arrived, bound for the Solduck, and they at once started for their new homes in the valley. This latest addition to an interesting colony comprised Mrs. Lucy Hunter and her daughter, Miss Effie—a most attractive young lady; Mrs. Ida Veuve; Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hardy; Messrs. Frank Baker and Stephen Brinker, and Master Floyd Tod, Mrs. Hunter's nephew—all of Port Townsend.

They went through to Lake Crescent Wednesday evening; took the Lady of the Lake there early this morning; were conveyed to the West End of the Lake, and started thence on their way to their homes in the Solduck, traversing the new trail to the river.

The delegation that went in last week, headed by Miss Harrison, had an interesting and eventful trip—one that was, in the main, thoroughly enjoyable. They visited the Hot Springs, in which some of them enjoyed a bath; feasted on elk steak, venison and trout; plucked gorgeous flowers; inspected their claims, put their houses in order and prepared to enjoy life "pioneering it."

Mr. Glen Tod, Inspector of Customs on the steamer City of Kingston, with Engineer Wolford and the First Steward of the Kingston, will visit the Solduck, next week, for the purpose of securing claims.

Things are surely booming in the Solduck. The development of the valley has been extraordinarily rapid, and the country is opening up in a way calculated to astonish an onlooker, whose memory is six months long.

They are to have a good general store in there now. Mr. Arthur Moore, one of the pioneers of the valley, is to be its proprietor, and it is to be opened at once. Mr. Moore arrived here, yesterday, from Seattle and Port Townsend, with a large stock of merchandise, which is now being moved into the valley, Mr. Moore will open the store at his home on the Solduck river, four miles from the West End of the Lake, and he proposes to keep a stock of goods that will meet the wants of the settlers of the valley.

Mr. Moore also brought in two horses, to be used in packing freight over the trail into the Solduck.

Now Making Daily Round Trips Over Lake Crescent.

The launch leaves its wharf at Lake View, at this end of the Lake, at 12 o'clock, every day, reaching the West End at 1:30. Returning, the boat leaves from the wharf at Mr. George E. Michell's—at whose place the Solduck trail terminates—at 2 P. M. Landings will be made at any desired point, on either the up or down trip.

The launch is the greatest kind of a convenience, to dwellers on the Lake, fishing and pleasure parties, and travelers to and from the Solduck.

An Ideal Life by the Sea.

Register T. M. Reed and his charming wife and child, of Seattle, are most comfortably established in camp here, in a lovely spot on the beach, over in the vicinity of Tongue Point. They are enjoying a delightful outing by the sea, and among their pleasures, excellent surf bathing figures prominently. The beach here is perfect—being even finer than the famous beach at Old Point Comfort, Virginia, which it resembles, in many particulars—and bathing is absolutely safe.

Mrs. Reed's mother, Mrs. General T. I. McKenney of Olympia, with her daughter, Miss Marguerite, joined the camping party Monday, and are now participating in the pleasures that both Mr. and Mrs. Reed know so well how to enjoy.

He Can't Stay Away.

That pleasant gentleman, delightful story-teller and capital fisherman, Mr. R. N. Williams of San Francisco and Seattle, who recently spent three jolly days at Lake Crescent, wrestling with trout, will return to the heart of paradise to-morrow, to make a longer stay. He will be accompanied by a party of four or five congenial friends from Seattle—lovers of trout fishing and outdoor life, too—and it is safe to say that they will all find the Lake one of the most perfect resorts that ever contributed to humanity's pleasure.

The party, while at the Lake, will occupy the cottage of Mr. S. J. Lutz—a cottage most beautifully situated, commanding, as it does, one of the finest views of Lake and mountain scenery imaginable.

It Will be an Attractive Place.

The hotel now being erected at Lake View, Mr. Richard McDonnell's attractive place at Lake Crescent, will be a very comfortable house, when finished. The dining room will be a large and airy apartment, commanding a magnificent view of the Lake, and the sleeping apartments will all be very pleasant, and nicely furnished. The table will be well served, you may be sure, and altogether, it will be an establishment that will be appreciated by visitors to the Lake.

Enjoying Both Sea and Lake.

Mrs. Howard H. Lewis and Mrs. John G. Scurry, with their respective families and maids, of Seattle, arrived here Monday, to enjoy a sojourn beside the sea. They are guests at the Markham House, and find much to enjoy here. The children are having a perfectly royal time on the beautiful beach, surf bathing being a feature in their programme pleasure.

During their stay here, both Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. Scurry will visit Lake Crescent.

A Very Pleasant Establishment.

The newly-completed boarding house on Madison street, erected for the especial accommodation of the employes of the Port Crescent Mill Company, was opened Monday, and is now being well conducted by Mr. Charles Logger.

MR. JAMES ELLIOTT, who resigned his position as head sawyer for the Port Crescent Mill Company, on Thursday last, owing to a disagreement with Manager Haddock, is now, with his family, pleasantly situated at Fremont, one of the suburbs of Seattle. Mr. Elliott, and in fact, every member of his most agreeable family, have a great many warm friends in Port Crescent, who hold them in kindly remembrance.

MRS. RICHARD McDONNELL and her sister, Mrs. T. P. Woodard of Tacoma, spent Sunday at Lake Crescent. It was Mrs. Woodard's first visit to that lovely body of water, and to say that she was charmed with it, is understating the fact.

MR. GEORGE R. KENDRICK of Twin Rivers township, spent Tuesday and Wednesday in Port Crescent. Mr. Kendrick is a very pleasant gentleman—one whom we would like to see in Port Crescent more frequently.

A PERPETUAL CABBAGE CROP.

The Way Mr. Joseph Hottowe is Turning a Little Discovery to Account.

"Talking of crops, reminds me that we have something of a agricultural curiosity out our way," said Mr. Joseph Hottowe, who has a rich farming claim in the Lake township, about three and a half miles from Port Crescent.

"I think we have struck a scheme that will enable us to enjoy a perpetual cabbage crop. Last year, we planted some early York cabbage, and in due time the plants headed out, and Mrs. Hottowe began cutting them, for table use. And she kept on cutting them all season. One day my wife was about to cut a head of cabbage from its stalk, when my daughter called her attention to the fact that she had cut a head from that same stalk once before. Mrs. Hottowe made the necessary investigation, and soon found that the child was right, for the stalk itself bore plain evidence of the fact that it had once before been beheaded. Then a number of other stalks were examined, and it was found that they, too, were bearing their second head of cabbage.

"Well, the second crop was duly cut, as needed, and bless me, if those stalks didn't begin to head out a third time.

"Last year, Mr. Sebastian Downie employed me to make his garden, and while at work there, I came across a lot of cabbage stumps that had remained in the ground over winter. Some of them showed signs of sprouting, and I concluded to let one of them stand, with the idea of raising some seed. I went to look at that stalk later in the season, to see how it was progressing. What do you suppose I found? Seed? Not a sign of it. But in its stead I was confronted by a most remarkable sight. The stalk had sprouted and thrown out five strong shoots, and at the end of each shoot was a nice, solid head of cabbage, Yes, sir, five heads of cabbage on a single stalk, and that stalk a relic of last year's crop. A circle of cabbages—that's the way they grew—and nice ones they were, too. I let them alone, of course, that Mr. Downie and his friends and neighbors might see them. They became quite a curiosity, and a great many people can bear testimony to the productiveness of that old cabbage stalk.

"Well, the success attending that little experiment in Mr. Downie's garden gave me an idea; and so, I left a number of last year's prolific cabbage stalks standing in my garden. They were hoed and cared for in the regular way—just as if they hadn't been beheaded stumps—and they came up to the scratch in great shape. They went to producing cabbages in vigorous style, and we are now cutting nice, plump, solid heads from old stumps. I suppose they will go right ahead and produce a second crop, and maybe a third. I'll let the stalks stand, and see what they will do next year."

An Enjoyed Vacation.

Dr. I. R. Herrick of Port Angeles, accompanied by his father, concluded a several days' stay at Lake Crescent, Monday. Both father and son had an ideal time of it, at the Lake. The weather was delightful, fishing was fine, and boating perfect; and the scenery—a rare combination of water and mountain views—was all that mind of man could desire.

During their stay at the Lake, Dr. Herrick's sister, Miss Fannie Herrick of Nashville, Tenn., was a guest at the Markham House, not feeling quite strong enough to undertake the enjoyment of out-door life at the Lake. Miss Herrick is a very delightful young lady, the possessor of a cultivated mind, and manners of the gentlest and most winning character. She made many warm friends here, among those with whom she came in contact.

MR. PETER MCLANE of Seattle, was among the visitors to Port Crescent, this week.

MRS. RICHARD MCDONNELL will return from a visit to Port Townsend, to-morrow.

MR. AND MRS. H. B. Wilson of Port Angeles, were pleasant visitors to Port Crescent, the early part of the week.

MISS LOTTIE WALTERS spent a portion of the present week at Port Angeles, in the interest of her educational work.

MR. JOHN IVERSON of Beaver, spent a portion of the present week in Port Crescent, on his way home from a visit to Seattle.

MESSRS. Harry E. and Sam J. Lutz went up to Angeles, this morning, to transact some business in relation to the probation of the will of the late Andrew Backers.

MANAGER Richard McDonnell of the Hotel Markham has so far recovered from his recent serious hurt, as to be able to walk around a little, with the aid of a stout cane.

IF YOU NEED fishing tackle of any description, you can obtain it at S. J. Lutz & Co.'s.

WHAT CAN BE DONE

GROW LARGE AND SMALL FRUITS,

For There is Big Money in Them, as Well as in all Manner of Vegetables and Staple Farm Produce—Apples, Pears, Cherries, Plums, Prunes, and All Kinds of Small Fruits, Thrive in Western Washington, and Yield Amazingly—Some Authentic Figures as to Yields of Fruits and Vegetables, Which Clearly Point the Way to the Realization of Large Profits.

HON. HENRY BUCEY is the author of the appended article, embodying a great deal of information of interest to the general public, but of especial interest and value to the farmers and land owners of Western Washington. It contains many suggestions, that may be heeded with great profit:

Western Washington is covered with a mighty forest extending from the Cascade mountains to the Pacific ocean, with here and there a small grassy prairie, which appears like an oasis in a great desert of trees. The timber chiefly is fir, cedar, spruce, pine and hemlock, the great majority being fir and cedar. Along streams and bottom lands the principal timber is alder, maple, balm, cottonwood, wild cherry and willow. The land that this timber grows upon is exceedingly rich. This land is less expensive to clear than land that has fir and cedar, and is so productive that it is principally the land now cleared and in cultivation in the western part of the state, with the exception of the small open prairies and diked tide lands. There are hundreds of thousands of acres of choice fruit land with the primeval forest occupying it, awaiting the hand of the husbandman to clear and put in cultivation. Owing to the mildness of the climate, added to the abundance of rainfall, this land has become noted for the great production of fruit and vegetables, and it is a veritable paradise for flowers of all kinds, both cultivated and wild. The first planting of fruit in Western Washington was about forty-five years ago, when orchards were set out on Whidby island and around Olympia, and some about Vancouver, on the Columbia river. It was expected that this section would prove suitable for growing fruits, as it possessed a somewhat similar climate to that of the western part of the state of Oregon, where fruit was known to do well. But when the trees began to produce, claims were made that this was a superior country to that of Oregon for fruit growing; that the trees grew more vigorously, and the fruit was of superior size and quality.

The influence of the inland sea of salt water, known as Puget Sound, with hundreds of miles of shore line, no doubt renders this section of land known as the "Puget Sound Basin," comprising some 1,200 square miles, more suitable for fruit raising than any other portions of the western part of the state, for the reason that no late frosts prevail to injure the fruits, and fruit is a certain crop every year.

APPLES.—The apple is the great staple fruit of the United States, and nowhere does it reach that degree of perfection that it does in this state, both east and west of the mountains. All the choice and popular varieties of apples of the United States are found growing here. The largest and finest of Newtown Pippins, Baldwins, Rhode Island Greenings, Bellflowers, Gravensteins, etc., are to be seen in the markets in their season. I have handled yellow Bellflowers that weighed over a pound each, and Glori Mondi of over two pounds each. Fruits of all kinds are especially rich in color; hence the name, "Land of the Red Apple."

PEARS.—Much has been written about Washington pears, as to their prodigious size, and their excellence in quality and color. There is no fruit tree that will excel the pear in growth and productiveness. Both climate and soi seem to be perfect and congenial to its growth. All varieties of pears do well here, yet the famous Bartlett leads all others now in cultivation.

CHERRIES.—The cherry tree grows vigorously and is very productive throughout the state. The western portion of the state excells the eastern part in growing a greater variety of cherries The Heart, Dukes and Morelles grow to a degree of perfection that is not witnessed elsewhere. A tree full of ripe fruit is a great sight, as the cherries are seen, not only in bunches, but are so thick that they appear like ropes of cherries. I cut four short limbs from a

The farmers of Eastern Washington are, as a rule, satisfied with the new grain rates of the Northern Pacific R. R., granting a reduction of 14½ per cent. from the old schedule. The reduction made by the railroad company is greater than that originally asked for by the Farmers' Alliance—which was 12 per cent.

The Supreme Court of the State has decided that Valentine Scrip cannot be placed on tide lands. This decision was handed down on the first of the month, when the court disposed of the famous case of Milton L. Barr vs. Moran Bros., of Seattle. Barr claimed to be the rightful owner of forty acres of the most valuable tide land betore the city of Seattle—land on which he had filed Valentine Scrip, and he sought to have Moran Brothers, whose machine works cover a portion of this land, ejected from the premises. The case was stubbornly fought through the lower courts; and now, the Supreme Court says that Mr. Barr's claim to the land is not good; that tide land cannot be filed upon as public land; that "public land" means, under the universally sustained rule, "upland, and not soil beneath navigable waters."

Figuring on a basis of handling 18,750,000 bushels of this year's wheat crop, the reductions made by the Northern Pacific R. R., in its schedule of grain rates, will occasion an aggregate loss to that road of $656,250. The farmers, however, will enjoy that sum, in the shape of increased profits.

Parnell has sued Captain O'Shea for the recovery of £3,600, part of which, it is claimed, was advanced to the Captain during the progress of the famous divorce trial. The Captain repudiates the claim. So there are likely to be more singular disclosures, as regards Mrs. O'Shea's late and present husband.

The reciprocal treaties effected by Secretary Blaine, between the United States and Spain, and the Republic of San Domingo, have been made public. They secure to this country great advantages over the other leading nations of the world, in the trade in wheat, flour, provisions, and a great variety of manufactured articles.

Mr. John A. Sleicher, on of the most eminent journalists of New York City, and the editor and joint owner of Frank Leslie's Illustrated Weekly, is now making a tour of the Pacific coast.

Mr. Sleicher is a gentleman of information. He is one of the best posted men, politically, in the East, particularly as to New York politics, and he gives it as his candid opinion that Grover Cleveland will not be the Democratic nominee for the Presidency, but that that honor will go to Governor David B. Hill, of New York, or some candidate whom he may name. Speaking on this subject to a representative of the Post-Intelligencer, Mr. Sleicher said:

"It does not seem to be generally understood in the West, that at the next Democratic National Convention, New York will send a solid delegation for David B. Hill, and not a man for Grover Cleveland. Those who are not in the state do not appreciate how adroitly Governor Hill has handled politics there. He has absolute control of the party machinery, and since the two-thirds rule is in force with us, the Governor himself will see to it that the delegation is a unit for himself or for whomever he chooses. Governor Hill will be the man to make terms, and Grover Cleveland will be on the outside, so to speak."

The Post-Intelligencer, speaking editorially, has this to say of Gen. James S. Clarkson, the new Chairman of the Republican National Executive Committee:

"James S. Clarkson, who has been chosen to succeed Senator Quay as the Chairman of the Republican National Executive Committee, is not unknown to the people of the United States. For the past ten years he has been recognized as one of the leaders of the Republican party, and his extraordinary talent for political generalship has been regarded with pride and satisfaction by the millions of voters who share with him the political faith to whose extension he has devoted his life.

"Under present conditions, the chairmanship of the National Committee of a great party is a position of the utmost importance and responsibility. During a national campaign, the one who occupies this position exercises an influence scarcely less than that of his party's candidate for the Presidency. It is his duty to plan the campaign, to prepare for attack or defense, to lead his party as an army is led until it meets the enemy in battle at the polls, and stands triumphant or goes down to defeat.

"Republicans may feel gratified that this important position in their party organization is to be occupied by one so experienced and so capable as Mr. Clarkson. He has been for many years a member of the National Executive Committee, and during the campaign of 1888 he was its assistant chairman. How well he filled the latter position is known to all. He was the general of the campaign, and to him, more than to any other man, not even excepting Chairman Quay, was due the credit of the brilliant victory achieved in the election of President Harrison. His great services in the past are a sufficient guarantee that his leadership of the party will be safe and successful. He is a general who has and who will continue to have, the confidence of those who follow him, and under his generalship the Republican army will march to victory in 1892.

Don't Monkey With Sections 16 and 36.

An mportant opinion by Hon. W. C. Jones, of Spokane, Attorney General of the state, with reference to the rights of squatters on school lands who made settlement before their claims were surveyed, has been received by Hon. W. T. Forrest, commissioner of public lands. During the time that Washington was a territory, whenever a man settled on a strip of school land before the same was surveyed, the schools lost it. A few days ago the question of squatters' rights again presented itself to Commissioner Forrest. It was the first time the matter had ever been considered since Washington became a state, and Mr. Forrest referred the matter to Attorney-General Jones, and an opinion on the law was received in reply. It begins by quoting the question put by Commissioner Forrest, and after reviewing the law, concludes with this very clearly put opinion:

"The act to which you refer, viz., the act of February 28, 1891, was passed by Congress after the admission of the state into the Union, and is manifestly an attempt on the part of Congress to dispose, without the consent of the state, of lands which are the absolute property of the state. I am of the opinion that Congress has not the power to do this, and that no person can acquire any rights against the state by making settlement on sections 16 or 36 prior to the survey thereof."

There is Money in Growing Prunes.

"It has been known that figs, of which some ten millons of pounds are annually imported into this country, will thrive in Central and Southern California; but there has been no systematic effort made to cultivate them. A company has just been formed for the purpose of producing dried figs in large quantities, and to this end an orchard of 460 acres, near Los Angeles, which will be at once planted with fig trees, has been purchased," says the Seattle Press-Times, editorially.

"Careful investigation by experienced men has proved that the climatic conditions of Southern California are as favorable to the cultivation of figs as is that of Turkey in Asia, whence comes the greater part of the entire product consumed in this country. Those who are thus extensively investing in fig culture calculate that the trees will not come into full bearing until 1898, and that from that time the profits of the crop will be from $300 to $375 per acre. In order to produce these results, it will be necessary to complete an expensive and thorough system of irrigation.

"This anticipated development of the fig industry in Southern California is noticed for the purpose of showing that Puget Sound offers superior inducements for horticultural pursuits; that the results are greater, the outlay much less and interest on original investments more quickly realized.

"It was only last week that Mrs. Davis, who owns a farm on the Skagit river, sold the fruit on trees growing on five acres of land for $2500—$500 per acre. The experience of prune growers over on the Columbia river is almost if not quite as profitable. There are ten times as many pounds of prunes used in this country as there are figs. The market is practically limitless. The entire portion of Puget Sound especially adapted to the culture of prunes, would not half supply the market. Nor is it alone the growth of this fruit which offers exceptional opportunities for absolutely safe and most profitable investment. All manner of small fruits reach a condition of wholesome perfection in this soil and climate, challenging the world to competition.

"The particular feature of fruit-growing on the Sound, aside from the main fact that both climate and soil are remarkably adaptable, is the ability of the settler to earn a living after the first year from his prune and other large fruit land, while he waits for his trees to come into bearing. In cultivating his orchards, he plants between the trees vegetables, strawberries, blackberries, currants and other fruits, which yield him returns the second year of his occupancy.

"The cultivation of figs, walnuts and other similar products offer inducements to the man of wealth whose money may not yield him returns for five or eight years, and who can maintain himself in independence while his orchards mature; but Puget Sound offers superior attracions to the man who is able and willing to work. California will do for the capitalist. Washington offers equal invitation to the industrious poor and the enterprising rich."

Even Larger Than Lake Crescent Trout.

A dispatch from Portland to the daily press, under date of July 31st, gives the following details concerning the landing of a fish on the beach at Tioga, considerably larger than any trout the LEADER will expect Colonel Ulmer, of the Port Angeles Tribune, to admit that he caught in Lake Crescent:

"The largest whale ever seen on the Pacific coast is now ashore between Tinker's Hotel and Tioga. Yesterday afternoon a party of bathers in the surf were startled to hear loud cries from people on the sands, and looking out toward the ocean, were paralyzed at beholding a huge black mass coming toward shore. Thoughts of sea serpents and ocean monsters became certainties and there was a scramble of frightened men, women and children for the shore.

"Slowly the huge mass drifted along, each breaker bringing the monster higher upon the beach, until finally the whale grounded. It was just the turn of the tide, and as the waters began to recede there was general amazement at the huge proportions of the great fish. When the tide had gone out a careful measurement was made and the total length of the monster was found to be 187 feet.

"Last night the beach was crowded with hundreds of people viewing the carcass, which lies like a huge hulk along the beach. There was a small whale washed ashore near Stout's about six years ago, but it only measured 50 feet in length. An old Indian, who has lived near the ocean beach for many years, said large whales had come ashore long ago, but never had such a monster as this been seen."

WHAT CAN BE DONE.

tree, the longest being but thirteen inches, in the summer of 1889. The cherries upon these limbs weighed over nine pounds. Every home here can have an abundance of cherries.

PLUM AND PRUNE.—There is probably no place on the face of the globe that can excel Washington in the production of these fruits. A prune orchard, after it is eight years old, will net the owner from $400 to $600 per acre annually. Hundreds of acres are being planted every year, and prune raising is soon destined to be one of the leading industries of this state. The annual importation of dried prunes to the United States is over 70,000,000 pounds, which insures a good home market for all the prunes we can raise.

PEACHES.—This fruit is grown very extensively east of the mountains, and to some extent west of them; yet the western part of the state is too cool in the summer for it to be a good peach country, while the eastern part produces as fine peaches as can be produced anywhere.

WILD FRUIT.—There are not as many kinds of wild fruits found growing in the eastern part of the state as in the western part. While the cultivated grape attains perfection east of the mountains, yet there is not found, to my knowledge, any species of the wild grape growing in this state. There is a small bush that produces berries that resemble the grape in appearance only. They are called the Oregon grapes, but they are not grapes, or of any species of the grape. The wild blackberry, strawberry, gooseberry, currant, red and black huckleberry, salmon berry and other berries, are plentiful in their season, in the timbered lands in various parts of the state.

NUTS.—Our forests contain no nut bearing trees; yet the walnut, chestnut, hickory nut and other nut bearing trees, when planted, make rapid growth and produce regularly fine crops of nuts.

SMALL FRUIT.—All kinds of small fruits are produced in great abundance over the entire state. There has always been a dispute between the western and eastern parts of the state as to which could produce the greatest amount of small fruit to the acre, such as strawberries, blackberries, raspberries, currants, gooseberries, etc. But there is no dispute that the eastern part of the state is superior to the western part in the production of grapes. There are some choice grapes grown in the western part of the state, but the summers are not warm enough to produce fine grapes and melons; hence, the eastern part of the state is depended upon for these fruits.

Having stated that fruits and vegetables are produced in great abundance, and the soil very productive, it is proper here to show, by reliable and authenticated statements of orchardists and gardeners, how abundantly the soil produces in Washington. A sample potato grown by Isaac Cathcart, of Snohomish county, weighed 5⅛ pounds and was 11½ inches long and 5 inches wide. A sample turnip grown by Robert T. Flynn, of Kitsap county, was 33 inches in circumference and weighed 20 pounds. Strawberries over seven inches in circumference are not at all uncommon. From his crop of 1891, W. H. Carter, of Montesano, picked one gallon made up of seventy-nine berries. The largest was 7 inches in circumference and the smallest 4 inches. Fourteen of them weighed a pound. Mr. Hoskinson in his article on the climate of Washington, mentions one yield of forty-two bushels from the one-eleventh part of one acre. This has probably been repeated in many instances. Mr. Sorenson, of Maiden Bower bay, on Lake Washington, gives the cost of strawberries as ten cents per gallon, of which four cents is for picking and two cents freighting to the Seattle market. He has sold his product for an average of fifty cents per gallon. Other small fruits produce in like abundance, and with like profit to the grower. Frank R. Spinning of Sumner, from 70 acres in 1890 sold 250 tons of onions from a ten acre tract for $12,000; $2,500 worth of carrots from a five acre tract; 20 tons of hops for $8,400; 60 tons of hay for $1,200; $460 worth of oats, and $1,600 worth of garden truck. F. J. Kerr, of Slaughter, raised 10 tons of potatoes, 6 tons of carrots and 2 tons of rutabagas from two acres of ground. A. Stewart, of Kent, on three acres produced 24 tons of potatoes, 9 tons of rutabagas and 3,000 heads of cabbage, and a large amount of common garden vegetables. G. D. Dement, of Blaine, picked 10 pounds of fruit from each of his gooseberry bushes and 22 pounds from each of his currant bushes. The Hon. A. F. Shaw, of Vancouver, speaker of the state house of representatives, from one acre gathered 18,666 pounds of prunes, which made 5,333 pounds dried, netting $639.96. R. Kies, of Vancouver, dried 25,391 pounds from 2¾ acres, worth $3,044.58 These are but samples of what can be realized from gardening and fruit raising in the western part of the state. To show the productiveness of the soil in the eastern part of the state, I quote the following from the Washington Farmer, as the statements made in reference to the Walla Walla valley apply to other sections:

"There were during the last season within a radius of two miles of Walla Walla, over 1,000 acres cultivated as vegetable and small fruit gardens, and the value of their product was to exceed $40,000, all of which was marketed in this state, Idaho, Montana, Eastern Oregon and points to the southeast as far as Denver.

The writer, desiring to get some figures showing the average yield of the garden lands of Walla Walla and their market value, called on W. S. Offner, the leading market gardener, and received the following information in regard to average yields of 'garden truck' under ordinary cultivation, by the acre:

Onions, 25 tons at $12	$300
Potatoes, 20 tons at $10	200
Carrots, 50 tons at $6	300
Cabbage, 15 tons at $15	225
Table beets, 20 tons at $15	300
Stock-beets, 40 tons at $6	240
Grapes, 10 tons at $60	600
Strawberries, 10,000 pounds at 6c	600
Blackberries, 12,000 pounds at 7c	840
Raspberries, 5,000 pounds at 7c	350
Melons, 300 doz. as $1	300
Asparagus	300
Tomatoes, 600 boxes at 30c	180

"This gives a total of 13 acres of garden, for one year's crop, of $4,735. Mr. Offner further said that the cost of the land would not exceed $2,600, with a good fence around it; $500 will pay for necessary improvements, such as the planting of berries, grape vines and asparagus, and $500 will purchase a team and necessary implements to cultivate the garden. This makes a total investment of $3,600. The cost of planting, cultivating, gathering and marketing the crops from 13 acres will not exceed $1,500. Taking this as an experiment, the total investment up to the end of the year would have been $5,100, and the receipts for one year's crop would be $4,735. The profit on the investment would be $3,235, or nearly 100 per cent.

"This man was the first to commence gardening upon a large scale, and the smaller gardeners laughed at him, believing that he would glut the market with his produce, and thus cause his own downfall. Instead of that, in the first year he could not fill the orders received, and he doubled the size of his garden. The next year it was the same, and he again increased the size of his garden. Still, he says, the only difficulty experienced in retaining his customers is because he cannot half fill the orders received. One of he reasons, besides advantage of location, why Walla Walla fruits and vegetables have a market, it because of the early season there. Berries and vegetables are in the market as early as in California, and are of even finer quality."

A Bride Who is the Niece of a Pioneer.

The Lowell, Mass., Citizen of recent date, contained the following account of the marriage of Miss Louise Barker of Lowell, a niece of Mr. Wm. F. Barker of Lvre River township, and one of the pioneers of Clallam county, to Mr. Joseph A. Nesmith:

At the residence of the bride's mother, on Eleventh street, Miss Louise Barker and Mr. Joseph A. Nesmith were married at 10 o'clock this morning. The guests were confined to the relatives and immediate friends of the bride and groom, and the genial informality which this restriction encouraged gave an added charm to the happy occasion.

The bride was attended by her mother, who gave her away, and by her sister, Miss Bertha, who was her only bridemaid.

Six pretty little misses in pretty gowns followed the ushers that led the bridal party into the presence of the clergyman. They were Misses Hilda Nesmith, Harriet Greenhalge, Mary Bailey, Alice Rowell, Florence Nesmith and Harriet Nesmith.

The groom was attended by Mr. George Motley, his best man, and the ushers were Mr. Curtis Guild, Jr., Mr. Dennison Slade, of Boston, Mr. Frank Mardon, of New York, Mr. George R. Richardson, Mr. Fred A. Chase, Mr. Arthur Cummock and Mr. Henry Eastman.

After the ceremony, the wedding breakfast was discussed with a merry zest, and the inviting lawn, with its fragrant shade, drew the guests from out of the house to appreciate the peculiar delights of a perfect wedding.

It was an ideal morning for a wedding; at least, every body said so; and while the temperature may have been a little fervent, it was not unseasonably warm.

The recess in the drawing room where the ceremony was performed and where Mr. and Mrs. Nesmith received congratulations, was transformed to summer suggestiveness by smilax and roses and foliage plants. There were palms and hydrangeas in the library, and the mantel was banked with a mass of rhododendron.

In the dining tent the table bore a center piece of Mermet roses and ferns, and there were roses scattered all about in appropriate honor of the month and the occasion. The sideboard was a mass of lychnis.

They Should Have Both Roads.

A petition, signed by Frank T. Balch, C. O. Gordon and twelve others, has been presented to the County Commissioners, praying for the establishment of a public road from Quillayute Prairie to La Push, that will cross the Quillayute river above tide water. They respectfully ask that a county road be laid out as follows: Commencing eighty rods south of N. W. corner of section 18, Tp. 28 N., Range 14 West, on the township line. Thence south about two miles to the south side of the Quillayute river. Thence in a westerly direction along the bank of said river to the meander stake between sections 23 and 26, Tp. 28 N., R 15 W. Thence west about one-half mile to the edge of the beach, at or near the section line between said two sections, to connect with the county road.

They also ask for a road, to begin on the Solduck river, on the line between lots 3 and 8, Sec. 20, Tp. 28 N., R. 14 W., and to run due west on the quarter line to the Quillayute river, about three miles. "And we would respectfully represent," say the petitioners, "that the roads asked for are necessities for the use of the general public, and as outlets for settlers along the way."
