The Co. for tires and Far West Propane for gas.

Mr. A. J. John stated that hourly rates for maintenance of the buses had been raised to $10.00 per hour. He said that we should be thinking about rebuilding a spare motor. A 501 International motor would fit all the Kenworth and the older GHH buses, serving six buses in all. He asked that a letter be written to Frank Buchanan Sales Co., Inc. requesting a copy of their Warranty and Service Policy, Standard specification sheet and a brochure showing detailed school bus construction.

The school insurance issue was discussed at length. The board appointed Raleigh Mann & Powell as agent for the 1972-1973 school year.

The meeting was closed at 8:50 p. m. for consideration of evaluations and discipline.

The meeting was reconvened at 9:15 p. m. for business. A general discussion was held on athletic and scheduling. The board approved the Coaching Assignment Recommendations submitted by Mr. Ratko on a one year basis.

The meeting was adjourned at 9:20 p. m.

No Double Tax On Mobile

Homes

Owners of mobile homes may not be required to pay taxes twice in the same year, the Attorney General has affirmed in an opinion issued July 20.

Beginning with taxes due in April, 1972, all mobile home owners will pay property taxes under a new law enacted in 1971. The amount of their 1972 property tax payments will be based on values fixed by the counties later this year following adoption of county, city, school and other local taxing district budgets for 1973.

Through the 1972 tax year, most mobile homes have been subject to a motor vehicle excise tax based on a percentage of their current market value. An exception has been mobile homes which have lost their mobility as a result of being affixed to permanent foundations and utility hookups. These have been assessed as real property and not required to pay excise taxes.

Persons who paid excise taxes on their mobile homes for 1972 will not be required to pay additional taxes this year. In no year have they been taxed twice, nor can they be under the 1971 law.

The Attorney General's opinion states, further, that counties could not collect 1973 property taxes in advance on mobile homes on which 1972 excise taxes have been paid.

Revenues from mobile home taxes are used to finance schools and other local government services and programs.

SCHOOL BOARD MEETING

The regular meeting of the Board of Directors of Ocully Valley School District No. 402 was held in the High School Library August 17, 1972. Directors Larry Klahn, Dean Hum and Myron Simmons were present.

Herbert Lesure, Maintenance Supervisor, reported as follows: In the old Junior High building twelve window sash need replacing. The cost of material will be $672.00. Four doors need to be replaced at a cost of $100.00 each. This will be done while school is in session. Sixteen steam traps have been replaced at $16.00 each. Mr. Lesure feels the heating problem can now be controlled. The roof of the new gym building has been repaired and the bleachers have been painted. Dry rot has set in in the south end of the elementary building, this will be taken care of next summer. The board instructed Mr. Lesure and

BOATS CUT LOOSE AT LA PUSH

Approximately 50 boats were cut loose at La Push some time after midnight last Wednesday. According to one of the boat owners, he and his wife were sleeping on their boat when they were awakened by other boats bumping into them. They had drifted about 20 feet away from the moorage. They called the Coast Guard, who called the Olympic Charter and Phil Berde, together with his "crew", came down and tied up the boats.

Five charter boats, among them the Linda Rae, had drifted as far out as 270 feet toward the sea. The boat owner and his wife said it was fortunate they awakened. In another 15 minutes they could have been grounded, which would have caused serious damage to the boats. Because five of the boats were documented vessels the FBI was notified. The boat owner and his wife said they saw four youngsters running away from the area.

POLITICS '72

By Terry Dillard The last National Convention was over last week. In contrast to the Democratic Convention the Republican Convention was short, compact and precise as Republican National Committee Chairman Robert Dole said it would be. Dole also said that everything is under control, "including spontaneous floor demonstrations for Nixon and Agnew." No such controls were on the Democratic Convention five weeks earlier. Indeed, the Republican Party doesn't have personalities like Bella Abzug and Chairman Larry O'Brien of the Democratic Convention. There was some dissent though, voiced by California Congressman Paul McCloskey, who may have had one or more elected delegates. McCloskey wanted to be nominated for President so as to tip his anti-war views, but in the short, compact, and precise convention the television prime time was too valuable for that. So, the Rules Committee hurriedly approved a proposal that no one can be nominated unless he is supported by a majority of delegates in three states. "Open-door party!" Representative McCloskey sarcastically said. Oh, yes! It will all be decided in November by the free, uncontrolled voter. Or is he free and uncontrolled?

Miss Cheri Lynn Warren became the bride of Pete Curvat Dahlgren in a double-ring ceremony performed by Rev. Art Morfin on June 24, 1972, at 7:30 p. m. in The Assembly of God Church in Forks, Wash.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Warren, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joel Dahlgren, all of Forks.

Approximately 225 guests attended the ceremony. The sanctuary was decorated with pink gladiolus and carnations tied with pink and green bows, and the candleabra held green candles tied with large pink bows.

Mrs. Cheryl Rich sang "For All We Know", "The Lord's Prayer", "Words of Ruth", and "One Hand, One Heart". She was accompanied on the organ by Mrs. Kate Sives.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Mr. George Warren. She wore a white empire floor-length gown with long sleeves and high collar trimmed in white lace. Pink flowers were elegantly spaced down the front of the gown. The bride's bouquet consisted of pink carnations and roses with green leaves.

The maid of honor was Vicki Queen, sister of the bride. She wore a green crepe floor-length empire gown with white lace.

Bridesmaids were Linda Hutt, Kayla Baron, and Linda Breithaupt who wore pink gowns identical to the maid of honor.

Candle lighters were Jo Marie Dahlgren, sister of the groom, and Ken Olson, nephew of the bride.

Best man was Randy Gooz. Ushers were John Dahlgren, brother of the groom, Tom Perkins and Ken Iozzi, all of Forks.

The bride's mother wore an orange knit dress with elbow-length sleeves. The mother of the groom wore a blue long-sleeved crepe dress with light blue button-down dress jacket.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the Alder Grove Recreation Hall, Shirley West and Janice Wahl, sisters of the bride, ladled the punch. The cake was cut by Georgia Gale, sister of the bride, and Wanda Warren, the bride's sister-in-law. Tea was poured by Joyce Warren, and coffee by Mary Jean Marston, sister of the bride.

Flower girls, wearing gowns identical to the maid of honor, were Carmen Gale, niece of the bride, and Linda Dahlgren, sister of the groom.

Ring bearers were Eric Warren and Brad Halverson, the bride's nephews.

Programs were given out by Kandi Halverson and Marcel Olson, nieces of the bride.

The groom's cake was passed by Laurie Warren and Shellie Warren, also nieces of the bride.

The messengers for the bridesmaids and mothers' corsages were made by Sharon Elton, the bride's cousin.

The groom is a 1970 graduate of Forks High School and the bride a 1972 graduate.

After a wedding trip to Victoria, B. C., the couple is now at home in Forks where the groom is employed by Dahlgren Logging Company.

Late Summer Driving

Driving during the late days of summer requires more concentrated effort and attention than at any other time of the year, a spokesman for the Washington Traffic Safety Commission said today.

"Traditionally, families flock to recreation areas in August and over the Labor Day weekend for a last fling at summer fun. Consequently, the roads ahead will be the heaviest travel period of the year," said Clifford E. Aden, Commission director. "We, as motorists, must respond to this peak travel time by driving in a way that will guarantee safe highways for all."

Aden joins with the State Patrol and State Department of Highways and Motor Vehicles in urging motorists to be prepared for their summer fun.

"Check your car and plan your trips before leaving on a family outing. While on that trip, watch your driving. The end result should be many more days of happy travel."

So far this year, Washington motorists have shown considerable improvement in their driving. Despite a sharp increase in travel, the number of persons killed in highway crashes has fallen below that for a corresponding period a year ago. If the trend continues, the state will register the best overall traffic record in history.

"When traveling during peak periods, we must be prepared for slower prevailing speeds and adjust our own speed accordingly. We must be patient by staying in line, rather than attempting dangerous passes or lane changes. We must see where we are going and what other traffic is near by."

"Only by concentrating fully on the job of driving will we have any assurance that our vacation travel will be free of highway tragedy."

BEAVER NEWS

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Moon and children Rita, Julie and Kathy, returned to their home in Tacoma on Sunday, August 20, after spending the weekend at the home of long time friends, Mr. and Mrs. George Blatter.

Leon Young arrived on Wednesday of last week from Whittier, California and will be staying with his mother and step-father, Patsy and Ben Leavitt. He was accompanied by his friend Kirk Thorsvald, also of Whittier. The two young men made the long trip riding tandem on Leon's Honda motorcycle.

The past three weeks have seen a series of birthday parties given for residents of the Bay-side houses at Tyece, beginning with Bernice Leavitt, whose birthday was Friday, August 11. Twenty-five people met at the Leavitt home and had a lot of fun. Ben received a varied assortment of gifts along with the best wishes of all present.

The next birthday party was for Mrs. Luther (Diana) Proctor on Tuesday of last week. Present were: Mr. and Mrs. Larry (Janet) Adams with their daughter, Brenda and Roberta, who and Patsy Leavitt and her daughter, Paulette Little, Luther Proctor, with Wendy, Mike, Lani and James, and the honor guest, Diana Proctor, who was presented with many lovely gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Leavitt gave a party on Friday for her daughter, Miss Paulette Little, which was a combined birthday and going-away party, as Miss Paulette was to leave this week for Seattle on her way to Monroe, Louisiana, where she will begin her second year at Northeastern Louisiana University.

The final party of the series was that given by Mrs. Larry Adams for her two daughters, Brenda, 6, and

Now's The Time To Check

When a boating emergency happens and you are thrown in the water, it's no time to find out that your life jacket is no good.

Federal law requires all boats to carry one Coast Guard approved personal flotation device for each person on board. By law these life preservers must be in "good and serviceable" condition, which is the only way they will be effective in an emergency.

Boaters should check their life preservers frequently and should be alert for the following signs of deterioration which are used by Coast Guard inspecting officers in determining if life preservers are serviceable:

On kapok vests and preservers, any torn or missing straps, missing hardware (D-rings and snap hooks), torn fabric, waterlogged or ripped kapok containers that will not hold air. (Inside kapok preservers are heat-sealed containers, generally plastic, which hold the kapok. If these containers are ruptured, the kapok will become rapidly waterlogged and lose buoyancy. When a kapok preserver is squeezed gently, it should bulge, indicating the inside containers are airtight and not torn. If the preserver compresses and flattens when squeezed, the heat-sealed containers are not holding air. This means the containers are ripped and will rapidly become waterlogged and lose buoyancy when immersed in water.)

On inflatable, plastic foam devices, look for torn or missing straps, missing D-rings or snap hooks, or serious seams which would allow the device to break apart.

On kapok buoyant cushions, look for torn or missing straps, ruptured heat-sealed containers (holds no air when squeezed gently), waterlogged pads (these feel hard-packed when squeezed) or torn covers which expose the interior kapok contents.

End residents who attended the Fair last week, and Betty received a blue ribbon on her golding, the Salyn.

They should be dried after use and stored in a dry, well-ventilated place (but always where they are readily available for an emergency). Like seatbelts in autos, life preservers make a life or death difference when an accident occurs. But they may be useless unless they have been cared for.

And they are absolutely no good if they aren't worn.

Consumers Want to Know

by MARGARET SPADER
Director of Consumer Affairs
National Association of Manufacturers

I've noticed washing instructions on leather clothes in some stores. How come leather is washable now?

A new tanning process allows leather to retain its softness and prevents shrinking after washing. However, all leather clothes are not washable. Before buying and washing leather, read the label for washability and washing instructions.

Why don't manufacturers standardize directions for the use of fabric softeners?

Formulas for these products are so varied that directions for their use must be tailored to fit the product. Basically there are two types of fabric softeners: one type is added in the rinse cycle; a newer type can be used in either the wash or rinse cycle. It is very important not to add other agents such as bleaching water conditioner, etc. when using products formulated to use with the rinse cycle. That's why it's impossible for manufacturers to standardize directions for fabric softeners as well as many consumer products on the market today.

Slash Burning In The Soleduck Dist.

One important phase of timber management in the Soleduck District is logging residue disposal (slash). Slash disposal is done by broadcast burning. This spring and summer 7 harvested units were burned. Before burning these areas many precautions are taken. Two major considerations are smoke dispersal and weather: humidity, temperature and wind. Smoke dispersal management forecasts are made twice two-year-old Douglas fir trees a day. These forecasts help to decide when smoke will disperse over a large area -- an optimum time for slash burning. Weather information is recorded at 4 stations within the District. Measurements include dewpoint, humidity, maximum and minimum temperatures and wind speed. This data helps to determine the time of day for the burn to take place. Many of the units burned are located on steep slopes, these require special techniques in control and ignition. To control the spread of the burn igniter systems are placed in areas of the potential danger. Fire hoses are laid around each unit ready for use at any time. Project crew members trained in the fighting are stationed around the unit ready for any spot fire that may occur.

Ignition of the slash is done in strips, starting from the top and working across the unit. This is known as a pass. It is done in this manner to facilitate control of the burn areas. After the first pass is cooled other passes are made until the entire unit is burned.

The intense heat of the slash fires makes it a demanding job for each crew member. Each unit is equipped with radio communication with those lighting the fire and the lookouts on different sides of the unit. It is not uncommon for these men to work ten to twenty hours. One fire constantly on guard for fires that could jump across a line. The units that have been broadcast burned this summer will be hand planted with

Spartans Show Spirit And Spunk

Preparing For '72 Season

By Larry Bailey

"Green, but possibly a fine season." These were the words of Coach Ralph Hill this week as his Forks Spartans began their second week of turnout.

The Spartans, made up of mostly sophomores and juniors, at this time are only 25 strong. They are not big, are inexperienced at most positions, and few in number. Speed is one asset shown by this young team.

As the workouts continue for their September 9th opener with Clatsop, the Spartans could pick up several returning personnel from last season. If the returning seniors decide to play ball, they have to practice with the team two weeks before they are entitled to game action.

At this point I would like to make an observation that is not only my personal opinion, but has been expressed by many.

This area, with so many jobs available, has taken its toll in High School sports. With so many fine young athletes, it's a shame so few turn out for school athletic programs. Money seems to be the magic word in High School days. The big question is "Why?"

It may be great to have money in your pocket at all times, but you are missing out on what it means to be young and with really no true reason to work.

There comes in a person's life a time when it is deemed necessary to acquire employment. Under most circumstances, parents are most willing and cooperative to help the student.

How much money does it take for entertainment? Is a car really necessary when your folks say you can use theirs when needed? These are just two of the questions you should ask yourself when you are trying to decide between work and school sports.

As the old saying goes, "You have the rest of your life to work."

Summing up what I have been saying, "Most of you do not need to work, but Forks High School Football does need your help!"

We all want to see a winning season for the Spartans and we do have some fine talent on the team right now. But with a couple of key injuries, the Spartans could be in deep trouble.

Does earning a "buck" mean more than the school colors, and most of all being part of a sporting program that could teach you, if nothing else, fair play along with showing you the essentials of working as a team.

Admittedly it is tough, bruising, hard work, and sometimes just plain painful, but in the long run you can only gain as an individual.

Why not think it over? Stop by and talk to any of the coaches. If you are not familiar with them they are:

Head Coach, Ralph Hill; Assistant Coaches, Jerry Cash and George Olsen. You can find them at the High School for the team practices, or I know they would not mind if you called them at home.

This year's team is spirited, loud, and has as much spunk as any I have seen. But it takes more than spirit, voice and spunk to achieve what they all want. It takes more experience in some positions, and more personnel to back up all positions. What is needed is more capable manpower on the entire Spartans team.

If you have some reason, personal or otherwise, why you do not wish to play either football or basketball, talk to someone. Mr. Ratko, Principal Mr. Hill, Coach or any person involved with the school or sporting program will assist you. They will try to guide you in the right direction. Give it a try! It may do wonders for you as moulding your entire future. At this point all we can do is sit back as spectators and hope the falls come through and give a helping hand to the young, yet spirited, loud and spunky group of young men representing the Forks Spartans on the grid-iron this fall.

Good luck Spartans. In both recruiting and your football season, The entire community is behind you 100%.

A penetrating look at the forest future

The growing dependency of the American people on trees and forests is evident from the following trends and developments:

Housing -- basically a product of the forests -- is in ever greater demand. In 1972, the nation built 2,000,000 housing units, the most ever in a single year and a figure that probably will be exceeded in 1973.

Nearly all U.S. homes use lumber and plywood for structural support, even those with brick and other non-wood products on exterior walls. Plywood output in 1972 set an all-time high. High levels of lumber and plywood production must continue if the people of this nation are to be adequately housed. In 1968 Congress set a 10-year target of 26 million new and rehabilitated housing units.

All told, at least 5,000 different products are now produced from trees including paper, furniture, film, food containers, clothing and many more. Demand and consumption of paper products could double by 1985. In addition, it has been discovered that 2,000 useful chemicals are unobtainable in trees.

Present and prospective environmental demands are just as imposing. Since World War II, visits to National Forests and National Parks have been increasing by 10 percent each year. The forest-based land industry have made available an ever-increasing acreage of commercial forest land for outdoor recreation.

The Outdoor Recreation Resources Review Commission of the Federal Government predicted that demand for outdoor recreation will triple by the year 2,000. Of course, much of the pressure for space will fall on the forests.

Expanding demand for boating, industrial sites, highways and airports is consuming land at the rate of 2,944 additional square miles each year. Therefore, the American public will look more to forests for recreation. Forests are also becoming increasingly important as sources of scenic beauty, pure air, clean water and wildlife propagation.

Last -- but by no means least -- forests are nourishing industries which employ close to two million people and which provide financial support for several million more.

As population, environmental and economic demands continue to grow, questions will inevitably arise as to the ability of the nation's forests to meet these varied and expanding needs during the years ahead.

Much of the responsibility will fall on 510 million acres (80,000 square miles) classified as commercial forest land. While these lands are best classified as timber lands, they are capable of growing commercial timber crops, they can provide extensive environmental services as well as economic benefits if developed to full tree capacity.

Of the 510 million acres, 97 million are in the National Forests, mostly in Western states. The forest-based industries hold about 65 million acres. There are other Federal and state holdings but by far the most extensive single category of ownership is the non-industrial private category embracing 308 million acres and 4 1/2 million individual owners. Nearly half of this acreage is concentrated in the South.

While industrial holdings comprise only 13 percent of the total acreage, they're planted, protected and otherwise managed to the point where they're providing 75 percent of the total harvest for forest products while confining to improve in volume of standing timber.

The National Forests provide 30 percent of the harvest and the non-industrial private owners -- who hold 59 percent of the acreage -- supply only 21 percent of the harvest. Both are far short of full tree potential.

Obviously, there's an imbalance here which can be remedied if trees are planted, protected and grown with the same intensity on the National Forests and by non-industrial private owners as by the forest-based industries.

Some idea of the potential can be gained from the fact that as long ago as 1909, the industrial lands alone contained 147 parks, 157 picnic areas and almost 55,000 miles of roads open to the public. This was made possible -- even though these lands represent only a small fraction of the total commercial forest land and even though their primary purpose is to grow successive timber crops for essential products -- because tree growth had been boosted to levels consistently exceeding harvest thus assuring an abundance of prolific woodlands capable of serving a variety of purposes.

This same intensive management and multiple-use concept should be applied to all commercial forest lands, if the nation is to meet future needs. In the case of the National Forests, this is required by law. The Multiple-Use Act, passed by the Congress in 1970, requires that the National Forests serve equally various needs such as recreation, wildlife propagation, timber production, watershed protection and Wilderness. But, unfortunately, the Congress has not yet provided the funding that the U. S. Forest Service -- manager of the National Forests -- needs for tree planting, forest management and protection, reforestation and other practices which it must follow to comply with the Multiple-Use Act to the letter.

At least 4, 3 million acres of National Forests -- either leveled by wildfire or understocked -- should be reforested. And another 13 million acres need improvements, such as thinning. But the funds are not available.

And while it has been proven that protection and management of forest are highly favorable to wildlife propagation and watershed development, here too, the Forest Service is short of money.

Still another aggravating factor is pressure brought to bear on the Forest Service which has resulted in the Federal agency initiating studies of substantial commercial acreage in the National Forests to determine suitability for possible inclusion in the Wilderness System.

Already, about 10 million acres of National Forests have been assigned to the Wilderness System with 4, 1/2 million more designated as "Primitive Areas," carrying the same restrictions as if Wilderness and expected to be added to the System.

Off-the-road and other motor vehicles are prohibited in Wilderness, as is timber harvesting. Forest management and protection as well as certain recreational uses are prohibited or restricted. Thus, any further massive withdrawals from either the commercial or non-commercial sectors of the National Forests for Wilderness will curtail the ability of the Forest Service to comply with other objectives of the Multiple-Use Act including wildlife management, recreation and the supply of timber to meet material needs of people.

From a purely emotional standpoint, Wilderness is the most appealing facet of the multiple-use spectrum. But obviously, it should not be over-emphasized at the expense of other important uses and needs, especially since intensive management of commercial forests is the only practical means of saving expanding environmental and economic demands -- including housing and jobs -- in the years to come.

NORTH CASCADE OPENINGS

Speculation concerning the possible attendance of President Richard Nixon in the scheduled opening ceremonies on September 2 for the North Cascades Highway (State Highway 20) ended today with an announcement by Gov. Daniel J. Evans that the president would be unable to attend.

James Dooliver, administrative assistant to the governor, said he has been informed that a conflict of scheduling will prevent the president from participating in the three-pronged opening of the state's newest scenic highway. Dooliver said the president was invited by the Governor to participate in the ceremonies planned for September 2 at Winthrop (10:30 a. m.), Newhalem (2:00 p. m.) and Sedro Woolley (4:00 p. m.).

Dooliver said the Governor also has invited Secretary of the Interior Rogers C. B. Merton and Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz and the heads of the National Park Service and the National Forest Service. Word is expected soon as to the availability of these national officials.

A large crowd is expected to participate in each of the three historic openings on September 2. Those who wish to participate are warned by the State Highway Department that no services (water, food, housing, gasoline, etc.) will be available in the section between Winthrop and Marblemount.

The North Cascades Highway will be closed to all traffic without exception until September 2. Traffic participating in the opening ceremonies will be allowed to travel westerly only from Winthrop to Newhalem after the ribbon cutting ceremony at Winthrop is completed, at about 12:30 a. m.

The highway will be opened to the public on a two-way basis at about 10:00 p. m., following the ceremonies at Newhalem. The highway will remain open until winter conditions cause its closure. The highway will not be kept open during the winter months.

The Highway Department is attempting to provide adequate parking and sanitation facilities at the three dedication locations to accommodate the large crowds expected to attend.

Flagmen will be on hand to direct motorists to designated parking spaces in each of the three locations. Motorists should expect heavy traffic and allow extra time to arrive at the dedication sites.

One of the highlights of the opening ceremonies will be the presentation by Gov. Evans at Winthrop of two plaques—one honoring the late State Highway Commission Chairman George Zahn of Methow and another honoring eight residents of both sides of the state who were instrumental in the original planning for the highway.

Specialized Silvicultural Burning Announced

Several unusual silvicultural controlled burns using a special mass ignition technique will be conducted during the summer by the Department of Natural Resources in the Straits District.

Near each location, residents and travelers may hear an explosion and will see a rapid release of a high smoke column, advised E. C. Gockewell, Olympic Area Manager.

The purpose of these burns is to rehabilitate difficult sites covered by brush and weed species in order to prepare for planting a commercial crop of trees.

First, a drying chemical will be applied to wilt the green leaves. On the day of the burn, soaked cans of gelled gasoline will be dispersed throughout the unit and connected with an explosive rope called pinta cord.

The entire unit can be fired instantaneously by electric blasting caps when weather conditions are favorable.

Lessons for using this technique were explained by Lawrence Goodman, District Manager. Management of smoke to preserve air quality is an important consideration. It is difficult to get a clean burn so these generally wet sites with green vegetation by a cautious method.

Mass ignition under carefully selected atmospheric conditions allows smoke produced by clean, complete combustion to be dispersed to the upper air in a short time.

Burning is scheduled to begin in early July on two sites near the Lyre River Campground.

Later, three other units will be fired, one 11 miles west of Port Angeles on the Wasanki Road, another south-west of Sequim on the upper Olson Road, and one near Lake Leland, 6 miles north of Ocullee.

Can parents learn a lesson from their teenage sons and daughters? Apparently so, since a survey conducted by Liberty Mutual Insurance Company indicates that twice as many teenagers as adults use seat belts. Parents, take a cue from your kids.

Logs Branded In "Wild West"

In the "Wild West," brands like the circle-C, the diamond-M and the double-Z were widespread expressions of ownership. Just who owned what. Butlers who ignored these symbols were marked men, branded for extinction by irate ranchmen and vigilante groups.

But it wasn't always cattle that got stolen or lost. Since 1890 it has been Washington State law that logs to be put in the waters of the state shall be marked with a brand registered to the owner.

The Northwest Timber Division has 721 registered log brands of its own. The circle-C, diamond-M or double-Z mark on the end of a log means that the log belongs to TIT Roylizer. The State of Washington Department of Natural Resources keeps track of thousands of brands, each belonging to an individual logging operator.

Logs are branded at the landing. While the State might be satisfied with one brand for the entire company, the Timber Division uses numerous brands to establish the source of production. This identifies whether it was a contractor or company logging crew that brought in the log and what area of the company's operations it came from. This helps in inventory control.

Company rules specify that if a company or a contract logger is working an area having a common intersecting point, as where four sections meet, a separate log brand must be used for each section. Brands registered to a particular logging unit of the company must not be used elsewhere.

Another important reason for branding is because logs are sometimes lost. Most often they are lost during rafting. Especially during rough weather or strong tidal currents, even a securely bound log can slip away unnoted from others in the boom. The brand insures, if the log is found, that it can be returned to its rightful owner.

Logs destined for rafts in State waters carried on common carrier railroads or ships must be branded according to State law. Although branded logs are rarely found anywhere but in the water there have been cases of logs slipping off a raft or even a truck and rolling down a hillside where they are found and returned, perhaps years later.

Logs are branded with a tool that looks like a hammer. Welded on one end is a plate with the brand symbol raised upon it. The brand is indented into the end of the log when it is struck with the hammer. When wielded by a busy brander, the hammer will make a mark identifiable several feet into the log.

So merely backing off the branded end and calling the log your own will not work. More than one log rafter has found that out the hard way!

HILMON NAMED DIRECTOR

Dr. Junior B. Hilmon, Assistant to the Chief of the Forest Service, has been appointed Director of the Division of Forest Environmental Research, Chief John R. McCreedy announced today.

Dr. Hilmon succeeds Thomas F. McIntock, who retired June 30.

J. B. Hilmon is a native of Astoria, Va. He earned a bachelor's degree in Forestry and Wildlife Conservation at Virginia Polytechnic Institute in 1952, a master's degree in Range Management from Utah State University in 1955, and a Ph. D. in Ecology from Duke University in 1959.

Dr. Hilmon started his career with the Forest Service in 1955 at the Southeastern Forest Experiment Station, Asheville, N. C. He was later made a Project Leader at Fort Myers, Florida. In 1967, he was appointed Assistant Director at the Southeastern Station. He transferred to Washington, D. C., in 1969 as Branch Chief of Range and Wildlife Habitat Ecology and Management Research, and in March 1971 was named to his present position as Assistant to the Chief of the Forest Service.

In his new position, Dr. Hilmon will be in charge of Forest Service research efforts in the environmental field, including research in range and wildlife habitat ecology, forest recreation, and watershed and aquatic habitats. In announcing Dr. Hilmon's appointment, Chief McCreedy said, "At a time when the Forest Service is greatly increasing its efforts in environmental research, I am particularly pleased to have a man of Dr. Hilmon's knowledge and experience to fill this important position."

Dr. J. B. Hilmon's appointment was effective August 6.

Prepare For Next Summer's Fun

With the end of summer fun in sight and the Labor Day Weekend approaching, now is the time to stop and plan for next year. Will you be coming back to enjoy another summer of fun?

Washington State Patrol Chief O. C. Fumeth urged all Washington motorists to plan now. "Past Labor Day Week-ends have been sad and grim reminders for some families of traffic tragedies. It is my hope that all Washington motorists will take the time to plan for this last flag at summer with the thought of coming back to enjoy next year, too."

Included in any planning must be thought for the most valuable possession your car will carry, the lives of you and your passengers. Familiarizing yourself with the correct route to your ultimate destination is a must, and a current Washington map necessary. The planning should include the knowledge of what roads and exits will be used if any freeway driving is involved. Another freeway driving must is the necessity to relax, but not while driving. Take advantage of Washington's excellent rest areas, and take a ten minute break out of every two hours driving.

Keep the odds on your side by operating a car which you have recently inspected. A safe automobile is a decided edge when you meet a driving emergency and have to make a life-saving maneuver. This is all part of defensive driving: it is the driver who keeps his auto in good repair and is mentally this Labor Day Weekend could be fatal-free."

The Department of Highway, the Department of Motor Vehicles, The Traffic Safety Commission, and the Washington State Patrol are confident that this Labor Day Weekend can be a safe and enjoyable holiday for all motorists. When the summer fun and Labor Day Weekend have fallen behind, will you be around to plan for next year's summer fun? We hope so.
