THE EARLY SETTLERS

Entrance of the Old Schooner Thorndike—Uncle Rufus Eats Wild Eagle—Hardships of Early Traveling—The Winter of 1859-60.

[Written for THE DEMOCRAT.]

The wonderful change which has taken place in Port Angeles since I first came intto this harbor, which my visit here on Tuesday last has shown me. recalls to my mind some of the early incidents connected with this energetic young city. I will briefly review some of them, each of which could furnish a chapter of interest.

During the summer of 1859 I first came into the bay in the schooner Thondike, owned by Captain Alexander Sampson — now head keeper of Tatoosh lighthouse —Captain Rufus Holmes and Captain William Winsor. They had taken a claim at the head of the bay, where Captain Sampson now has his homestead. We came here from Port Townsend. The three captains constituted the officers of the schooner, and the crew consisted of Jack Dunn who was mate, steward and all hands. The little log cabin was, however, the headquarters of these hardy mariners, where Uncle Rufus presided to look after the claim, raise vegetables and care for Betty, the thrifty sow of fabulous proportions, and Brigham Young, the chanticler, with his numerous family of hens and pullets.

Uncle Rufus was a quaint, dry man, full of quiet humor and ready at all times with a syntax reply to any kind of a proposition. I think it was during this second visit I was invited to a week's visit at the headquarters, in company with a Port Townsend butcher, named Jones, a big, fat fellow, full of fun. The day before we started Jones shot an eagle and having dressed it and removed the head and claws, he boiled it all night and brought it with us as a present to Uncle Rufus, as a wild swan which we had not time to eat. Uncle Rufus was pleased, and having cut it into pieces he added potatoes, onions, pepper, salt and savory herbs, with which he made a sea pie. When done and eight bells had been struck by Jack Dunn on a tin pan, the delicious stew was served at high noon, garnered by side dishes of fried clams and venison steak. Uncle Rufus gave the stew his undivided attention, while Jones and I contented ourselves with the fried clams and venison. Jack Dunn taking a little of each dish.

After we had finished Jones said: "Uncle Rufus, do you know what you have been eating?" "Why, a wild swan, ain't it?" "No, it's an eagle, and here's his head and feet."

This announcement completely upset Uncle Rufus, who rushed out to give vent to his emotions. When he returned Jones, in an unfeeling manner, remarked, "Did the stew make you sick, Uncle Rufus?" "No," said the patriotic mariner, "not the stew, but the thought that I had been eating one of the emblems of my country."

The winter of 1859-60 was a very cold one. I was at Neah Bay on a visit at the hospitable home of my friend, Henry A. Webster. Captain Frank Tucker, the present keeper of the Port Angeles lighthouse, was waiting there, wind-bound, and, like myself, anxious to get to Port Townsend. In January, 1860, we started in a canoe with eight Indians. We prepared everything for our comfort, but it was very cold, and the whole face of the cliffs along the straits were covered with a sheet of ice, formed by the melting and freezing of the snow, which covered everything with a white mantle. The first night we camped on Lyre river, the banks were covered with ice. On this we just spread spruce leaves, forming a compact mat six inches thick, next came india-rubber blankets, then a wide matting of hay, and on these our blankets seemed to make a comfortable bed. I had a big rubber bottle for holding water, but in the hurry of breaking camp the next morning it was forgotten, nor was our loss discovered until we reached the spit, where now the lighthouse stands. There was no tenement on the spit but one old deserted Indian shanty. It was just dusk as we landed, and after we got our things ashore and a fire kindled I discovered that we had no water. There was plenty of snow on the ground and the Indians melted some in a kettle in which they had been boiling blubber. This added richness, but not delicacy of flavor to the melted snow, and with this savory fluid we made our coffee and turned in for the night. The next morning we paddled over to White's creek where we got water and in two days more reached Port Townsend. It was a rough experience; not much like a picnic.

A change now takes place in these kaleidoscope scenes. The Elwha Indians had wounded "Sevell," a celebrated Makah chief, and there was war between the two bands of Indians. I was then connected with the Makah Indian agency and had to go to Port Townsend with dispatches for Washington. I had a full crew of Indians, but they were afraid of an attack from the Elwahas and we proceeded cautiously, making several camps. We reached the butt of Port Angeles' spit just at dusk and having hauled our canoe across we launched it in the bay and proceeded to Captain Holmes' house. I found a number of Indians camped there and knew they were Elwhas. I asked Uncle Rufus what they were camped there for, he replied, "These are they who have come up out of much tribulation, their children have died, and they came here for fresh air and a change of scene." I fully expected a row between my crew and the Elwhas, but although they eyed each other viciously, the presence of us white men kept them quiet. Captain Holmes gave my party the use of a lean-to shed to sleep in. Over this shed, in the end of the log house was a sash of a window, the only light in the cabin. After all were quiet outside, and as Uncle Rufus and I were talking before turning in, suddenly there came a crash through the glass

"There," said Uncle Rufus, "those cussed Elwahas have fired a rock and broke my window," with that he rushed out in the darkness shouting and blaspheming. I stepped out to see what my Indians were doing and found that they had thrown the canoe sail on top of the shed, and the end of the mast had broken a light of glass. I called Uncle Rufus back and he repaired the damages by stuffing an old pair of overalls into the break. "They are not very transparent, these old breeches," said he, "and the seat is somewhat tarry, Jack Dunn used them while he was tearing down the rigging of the Thorndyke, but they will do to keep out the cold." We went to Port Townsend the next day where I bought a new sash for Uncle Rufus and the next time I saw him he beamed with satisfaction.

Another change of scene brings to view the custom house, which had been moved to Port Angeles, and the place was

THE SCHOOL RATE.

An Interview With School Superintendent A. B. Dorsey and Others.

Much comment has been made on the action of the county commissioners in deciding to reduce the rate of taxation, as published by THE DEMOCRAT two weeks ago and also on the editorial of last week on the subject. Especially is this so in school circles.

County School Superintendant A. B. Dorsey was in town Saturday and Sunday. He was greatly put out by their action. He said to a DEMOCRAT reporter that if the commissioners persist in their action it will be an outrage on our schools.

He said the school districts and school population have increased faster pro rata than the assessed valuation of the county. "A year ago," said Mr. Dorsey, "there were but fourteen school districts in the county, while there are now twenty-four school districts, and petitions in for the establishment of more; and the school population has increased from 582 to 982. A reduction from four mills to one mill, therefore, means that there will be less than one-fourth the amount of funds this year in proportion to the requirements, than there was last year.

Mr. Dorsey has taken proper steps to get an opinion from the attorney general as to the legality of this action. He feels confident that the attorney general will hold that the county commissioners cannot legally levy a rate under four mills on the dollar. If so, he will insist on a four mill rate being levied by the board.

Mr. Dorsey warmly endorses the views expressed by THE DEMOCRAT last week, and says that the sentiment in the east end of the county, and, in fact, all over the county as far as he can get it, especially in school circles, is one of opposition. Mr. Dorsey has received letters from all over the county on the subject, all asking that he interpose his influence to induce the board to recind their actions.

The officers of this district were also seen and unanimously agree that it would ruin the public schools of this city. One director said that they could not have a six months school next year, if the board did not raise the rate.

The Hindoo nose ring is said to be doomed. At a meeting of the members of the Cutchee Veesa Oswal caste, held at Mandvie Bunder, it was resolved that instead of a ring women should wear a flower in the nose. Inasmuch as the nose ring had led to "much unfavorable comment," henceforth wearing of nose rings would be a fine of ten rupees and four annas, in addition to forfeiture of the ornament.

THE BERING SEA.

An Interesting Interview With Wm. H. Robinson.

ALL IS HARMONY.

The Story of Her Majesty's Steamer Danube's Cruise—Pleasant Concerts Given on the Vessels at St. Mathew's Harbor—A Bear Hunt.

It is a mistaken idea which seems to have taken possession of the minds of some very remote eastern editors, who at length discribe the unfriendly feeling which they imagine exists between the British and American blue-jackets in the Bering sea. That such a condition of affairs does not exist, is forcibly asserted in an interview given a DEMOCRACT representative by Mr. W. H. Robinson, who passed the entire summer on the Bering station on board the British steamer Danube. He being a seaman himself, he can certainly give a more accurate and truthful account of the courtesies received and extended by the sailors of both nations.

The Danube, a steamer of the British reserve force, left Victoria, B. C., July 15th, having on board the commissioners Sir George Baden Powell and Dr. Dawson, appointed by the English government to investigate the seal question, and while on this mission encountered nearly every one of the vessels of both nations in those waters, and many times was anchored in harbors alongside ships flying both the flags of England and the United States.

After detailing the cruise of the Danube, Mr. Robinson gave an account of the meeting of his ship with four men from the Thetis, in the harbor at St. Mathew's island, which is substantially as follows:

"The Danube was steaming under slow bells in search of anchorage, when the lookout announced that he was hailed by a man on shore, a boat was immediately lowered and sent ashore to give relief or what else might be required. Upon landing two men from the Thetis were met; the paymaster and a sailor, who were two of a party of six from the same vessel. The party left the Thetis the day before on a bear hunt, and became lost, and while in this condition their vessel sailed away on a cruise after poachers, having sighted a sail. The party then separated in search of shelter, and soon got lost from each other. This report being made to the captain of the Danube, he ordered the whistle to be blown. After a few hours another hail from the shore was wafted to the look-out and two more of Uncle Sam's bear hunters were rescued. The remaining two were picked up the next day, and all of the unfortunates were most cordially received and hospitably treated on board the Danube. The same day the Thetis returned to St. Mathew's island, and the bear hunters were reluctantly returned to their own vessel.

A bear hunt on a grand scale was then organized by the officers and crews of the Thetis and the British man-of-war Pheasant—who arrived in the harbor of St. Mathews during the night—to be made on Hall's island. Which island is entirely deserted by the Indians during the winter on account of the large number of white bears who make this island their winter home. In this hunt six white bears were killed, two of which were immense males, who made a desperate fight for their lives. In the melee which ensued Uncle Sam might have had to erase a sailor's name from his pay roll had it not been for the careful aim of one of her majesty's seamen, who finished the largest one of the bears at a time when getting away was of deeper interest to the American than staying.

While the ships were lying in the harbor numerous concerts were given on board the different vessels, to which invitations were extended to all, irrespective of nationality, the highest degree of amity prevailing at all times."

Mr. Robinson reports that bear were so plentiful on Hall's island that three of his mates begged to be left there for the winter, which request was granted, they having been abundantly supplied with rifles, ammunition and provisions.

Mr. Robertson did not know the names of the three, but one was named Burns, who was president of the Long-Shore-Man's Union, of Tacoma, the second a Frenchman and the third a Victoria man.

The rhetoric class was up for recitation in a Maine normal school. A young lady, in repeating several paragraphs of text, very glibly, made use of the word idiom. The systematic replanting of the Malagan forests is urged in a Kew bulletin, or gutta percha will disappear. Fifty years ago gutta percha was unknown in Europe. A recent number of the Salvation army's War Cry contains this editorial note: "Will the divisional staff please note that no spiritual meeting is to be called 'Three Hours at the Cross' except those conducted by the commander himself, and then only after his being notified." When an old established weekly newspaper in Delaware was absorbed by a rival a few years ago it was discovered that a family of Scotch presbyterian farmers named Rankin had been taking the newspaper continuously for 100 years. The Rankins were a bit nonplused at the change, but the head of the family promptly subscribed for the victorious rival and is probably still taking it.

The possession of a remarkably retentive memory is indicated by a feat attributed to William Cotter, the registrar of votes in Hartford, Conn. It is said that he can tell from memory the places of residence and politics of 12,000 voters, and also, in cases where persons have been absent from the city, tell when they went away. But it is crowding things to say that he can tell where they went.

PURELY AMERICAN.

"Let the good which men do be interred with their bones and their evil deeds live after them," applies aptly to men who are always Cæsars, but that evils which had no existence in the character of a man, but little less acquainted with fame, should be imparted to him after the good of his life finds a common sepulcher with his bones, appears to us unfair, and is taking an advantage the likes of which would not be allowed in the prize ring.

Eastern and some western dailies have made the imaginary evils of James Russell Lowell's life, the theme of many long editorials, and for want of a better charge they impute to him the last which can be justly attributed to a true American; that of being an anglomaniac.

Mr. Lowell may have thought good [illegible] worthy of emulation man[illegible]ts of the English character, or a few of their customs, and while our minister to the Court of St. James became very popular with the English people, which was no crime, but we consider him to have been too truly American to be imbued with any other idea, than that as a whole the American civilization stands pre-eminently in the van of them all, and that he was a man of such good sense, this knowledge must certainly have been his. For Mr. Lowell to ape the English would be similar to nature copying one of Rosa Bonheur's horses, or Carl Brenner's beech trees. Best is always best, and needs no mixing to improve its quality.

It seems that the republican press of the country with one accord and common consent are using the ink of calumny, and with it paint the tombstones of the dead. Even death affords no asylum from their malice. They may imagine their is political capital to be made from such a course but we fail to see it in that light, and living neighbors to her Majesty's subjects we know that the friendships which exists between the two sides of the Straits is too firmly cemented by commerce to be rudely broken by such unkind articles as now tarnish the pages of the Republican press of the Sound.

A SINKING SHIP.

The old ship Protection is slowly but surely sinking. Punctured on on all sides by the arrows of truth, her political managers have lost control of her old thread-bare and worm eaten hulk. Under the determined, relentless onslaught of the tariff reformers they have been driven to the wall. Their condition is pitiable in the extreme. In Ohio they are making a frantic endeavor with the use of the party lash and gold dollars to keep their own ranks in line, but despite their efforts they are deserting day by day, one by one, and no wonder. Since the fail campaign has opened they have made so many admissions that there is scarcely enough left to cling to. One leader admits that the tariff does not increase wages, another that it does not cheapen the cost of the necessaries of life, and Foraker says all admit that it is a tax, and even McKinley admits it one day, only to deny it the next. Verily, the bottom has dropped out of the old fraud and she is going down, down, down —"unwept, unhonored and unsung."

ON Monday the county commissioners will meet in regular session. What they will do about the tax rate remains to be seen. The opinion of the Attorney General to the effect that they can, if they choose, reduce the rate of school taxes lower than 4 mills, whether right or wrong, gives them opportunity to inflict an injury on our schools that will require years to recover from. As shown in our interview with Superintendent Dorsey in another column, the school population and the number of school districts have increased faster in proportion than the assessed valuation of property, therefore to reduce the rate from 4 mills to 1 mill would give to the schools less than one-fourth the amount of money they have had this year in proportion to the requirments, and this year we have had no more than was necessary. In two districts, only, has there been over six months school — Sequim and Port Angeles. On a one-mill rate it is doubtful if any district in the county would have more than a three month's school. It is too late for them to levy a special rate, the schools are, therefore, at the tender mercies of the county commissioners.

THE TIMES flies off on a tangent about "Democratic tin-plate liars," and why? Simply because one man, named Swank, has been investigating (presumably the records at Republican headquarters), and finds that there are "twenty manufacturies either making tin-plate or erecting the necessary plant." It is a good thing for Mr. Swank's veracity that he added that saving clause. Wonder if our neighbor knows that McKinley has stopped telling the dear people that tin-plate is being manufactured now. On being cornered he says it is terne-plate—which means sheet iron dipped in lead alloy, and in the language of the chemist the "lead largely predominates." Of course there are lots of them that are just going into the business, and they will be just going into it until after the election.

Papa Smith is mistaken. The tin-plate liar is a Republican. A Republican built on McKinley's plan.

THE county commissioners should reconsider their action in reducing the rate of taxation for county purposes, even if a much needed reduction is made in the running expenses of the county. The county should redeem some of its outstanding county warrants. As long as warrants are only worth 75 or 80 cents on the dollar in the market, the county will lose on all its transactions.

OUR sleepy little contemporary actually had a news article in it yesterday, and in its exultation over the unusual occurance trotted out its shabby old rooster, evidently thinking it its last chance to display his ungainly plumes. As a matter of course, the aforesaid news article was full of inaccuracies.

THE city case has at last been settled as far as the trial court is concerned. While it is to be regretted that the case did not go to trial on its merits, nevertheless it is a relief that it has been decided and in the city's favor. It is hoped that the prosecution will not take it further.

JUDGE SWAN's efforts toward a celebration of the centenial anniversary of the Northwest discoveries, should receive the united and enthusiastic support of every citizen of this state. It was these discoveries of the intrepid Captain Gray that gave the United States this great state.

An Horrible Accident.

An horrible accident occurred yesterday which will probably cost a Mr. Brotherton, who resides on Valley street in this city, his life. Brotherton was cutting down a large cedar tree which fell in the forks of another tree and rebounded back striking him before he could escape by running. The blow fell and almost buried him into the earth. Fortunately assistance was near at hand, and he was extricated by kind hands and removed to his home. For some time he was apparently dead, but a physician was called and finally succeeded in resuscitating him. It is not thought that he will recover.

A BEAR FIGHT.

Charles Donney Kills a Bear With a Club —Two Cubs Bagged.

Mr. Charles Donney, who came to this place from Catlin, Illinois, about one year ago, and who has been earning a livelihood with his gun for sometime past, had an interesting adventure with an old she-bear and her cubs last Sunday.

Mr. Donney was out in the woods hunting near the farm of Hon. Smith Troy, when he ran across two bear cubs playing in a small opening. He at once opened fire on the youthful bruins, killing one instantly and severely wounding the other. He tried to cut the wounded cub's throat with his knife, when it set up an unearthly yell, which brought out the old mother bear from a neighboring wood with her mouth wide open. Donney hurriedly got hold of his gun. He had but one cartridge left and it failed to go two or three times, but finally when the wrathy old lady bruin got within about ten feet of him the gun went off, inflicting a flesh wound, which only increased the rage of the madened brute, who went at him more furiously than ever. Mr. Donney made up his mind that his time for ascension had come and at once took to a tree. When he had got about six or eight feet up the tree the old bear arose on her hind feet and struck him on the leg, tearing his pantaloons nearly off from him and bringing him to the ground. Now commenced a race around a tree, which was more exciting than pleasant. Donney finally got hold of a piece of seasoned wood several inches in diameter and seven or eight feet long, with which he turned on the bear, determined to make a last stand. Mr. Donney said, "I was scared, and I believe I struck the hardest blow I ever struck in my life." Suffice to say, that although both of the bear's arms were used vigorously in trying to ward off the blows, they were broken down and the club came down on her bearship's cranium with force enough to stun her. The club was broken into three pieces. The frightened hunter, with great presence of mind, at once jumped onto the bear and before she had recovered from the effect of the terrible blow on her head, he had cut her throat from ear to ear, and the victory was his.

The old bear was brought to this place Monday evening and sent up to Port Townsend by Mr. W. G. Strong, who bought the trophy from the successful hunter.

The old bear weighed 250 pounds when dressed. Mr. Donney says there is much more romance in talking about bear fights than in actually participating in them. It is generally believed that he means it.

AN IMPORTANT CENTENNIAL.

Judge Swan Talks About the Dicoveries of the Northwest Coast.

Judge James G. Swan, the veteran pioneer and historian of the Northwest, was in Port Angeles Tuesday.

The venerable and good hearted judge was seen by a DEMOCRAT reporter, to whom he expressed his satisfaction in noting the great and rapid advancement of this enterprising city.

Judge Swan, always in anything the tendency of which is to advance the interests of science, history or the welfare of his beloved state, has been urging the celebration of the centennial anniversary of the discoveries of Captain Gray on the northwest coast, which occurs next year. Said the Judge: "These discoveries were of great importance to this part of the country. It was on account of these discoveries that Washington was given to the United States by the arbitors in the settlement of the northwest bonadary. England it will be remembered, claimed the Columbia river." Judge Swan, in an ably written article in the Post-Intelligencer, called the attention of the legislature to this last winter. This letter was favorably commented on by the state press, but was overshaddowed by the Sachs trial and the Metcalfe-Clarke investigation.

Judge Swan, said that the World's fair commission were considering the proposition to get the articles it is proposed to take to Chicago and exhibit them at Tacoma next year. Judge Swan suggested this to Chairman Blalock, who liked the idea.

GRAND FANCY BAZAAR.

To be Given at the Opera House the First Week in November.

After many weeks of preparation Mrs. Charles Foss, Miss Maggie Fend, and Mrs. John C. Murphy, representing the ladies of the Catholic church have definitely decided upon holding their bazaar on the 3rd, 4th and 5th of November in the opera house and have prepared the following attractive programme:

Nov. 3. A choice and appetizing supper is to be served from 5 p. m. to 11 p. m.

Nov. 4. Musical Evening. The following are the names of those who are to render selections: George E. Fisher, Baritone. Comment upon Mr. Fisher's ability as a singer is useless, he being the happy possessor of one of the finest cultivated voices on the coast.

Miss Daisy M. Stewart, alto: Miss Stewart has a beautiful voice and having perfect control over it is quite capable of rendering extremely difficult pieces very acceptably to the most critical audience.

Harry Holden, tenor: Mr. Holden to-day as a tenor stands without a peer on Puget Sound. Those who have heard the two gentlemen sing say that Mr. Holden's voice is of the same range as J. H. Middlebrook's of Seattle.

Miss Minnie Lewis, soprano: Miss Lewis has a very sweet soprano.

Geo. Travers, character songs: Mr. Travers will entertain very pleasantly and his songs are always welcomed.

Violin Duettes: Lovers of the violin will be greeted with some exquisitely rendered duettes.

Other musical numbers are to be presented by well and favorably known talent.

Nov. 5. For this the closing evening of the bazaar a "German" has been decided upon to be followed with a recherche supper. Excellent music is to be provided and lovers of the light fantastics are certain to have good dancing. As this "German" is to be under the personal supervision of the committee those who patronize it are sure to thoroughly enjoy themselves in a very select gathering.

The committee having taxed their ingenuity to the utmost in creating something novel and entertaining in the way of booths, happily struck upon what is sure to be one of the prettiest features of the bazaar, a Japanese Booth. This is to be presided over by a charming young lady of whom Dame Rumer is quoted as saying is the belle of Port Angeles. Be that as it may the bachelors and benedicts can judge for themselves.

On Tuesday and Thursday evenings admission is free. On "musical evening," Wednesday, tickets are twenty-five cents each.

C. C. Supper.

The ladies of the Baptist congregation, under the auspices of the "Ladies Aid Society" will give a "C. C." supper next Tuesday evening, November 3rd, in Goldwater's vacant store, corner First and Lincoln streets. Supper will be ready at five o'clock. Price, 25 cents. The following is the bill of fare:

Cultivated country climber; Cutely carved cold cuts; Coffee colored corn cereal; Cereal compound; Cold comfort; Chinese cheer; Cucumis; Coagulated curd; Crinkles and crisps; Cramp and colic cure; Country cousin's comfort; City chop comforts; Choice churned cream; Communicative cordial, containing no chicory; Curious compounds by competent cooks; Charming chopped combinations.

GROVELAND CITY.

A New Town Being Surveyed—Dungeness to have a Saw-mill—Society Notes.

DUNGENESS, Oct. 24.—[Special.]—The Groveland City Land Company is the name of a new company organized by Dungeness and Port Townsend people. They are surveying a townsite on the Groveland farm, near the mouth of Dungeness bay. They propose building a wharf at once to deep water. The wharf will be about three-quarters of a mile long.

A Green river saw-mill man has leased a tract of land on the farm of E. N. Pilcher near this place and will at once move his saw-mill from Green river, King county, here. The mill will cut all kinds of lumber, and has a capacity of about 8,000 feet per day.

John Dickinson, one of our big ranchers, raised a potato that weighed nine pounds. This is the largest yet reported, although six and seven pound potatoes are common here. The mammoth potato is on exhibition at the Farmer's Mercantile Company's store, labeled "the poor man's friend."

The society people of Rena gave a basket social a few days ago in the school house at that place. A good literary and musical program was rendered to an appreciative audience. The proceeds, about $60, went to the Rev. Slack, the social being a benefit for him. There was a large attendance.

A house warming was had at the new residence of John Knappman a few days ago in Happy valley.

A pleasant party was given to Misses Mann and Miner at the residence of the latter's father, near this place, the other day. It is needless to say that the guests were warmly received and had a good time.

J. W. Cays and wife gave an oyster supper and dance Thursday in honor of the birthday of their daughter, Miss Merissa Cays. A pleasant time was had.

State News.

Farmington has struck artesian water.

Pomeroy will be lighted by electricity.

The Lewis county fair at Chehalis, last week, was a success and largely attended.

Receipts at the Spokane land office, during September amounted to $8,717.60.

E. F. Templin & Co., Fairhaven contractors, have failed, with $30,367.55 liabilities and about $25,000 assets.

Sunfert Bros., are to erect a new fish cannery at Seattle. F. A. Sunfert is now shipping salmon from that point to the Dalles.

Mrs. Henrietta Malone's hop ranch, near Buckley, was burned Friday, together with the product of ten acres of hops. Loss, $5,000.

Work has been suspended on the state university building at Seattle, because Auditor Reed will not audit accounts of that committee.

The Western Central Labor union at Seattle, has issued a boycott on all King county coal product, except that of the Black Diamond mine.

Three highwaymen entered the National bank at Enterprise, in Walla Walla county, last week, held up the cashier and passing people with revolvers, emptied $3,500 into a gunysack and sloped.

The next congress will be asked to appropriate $30,000 for improving the Nooksack, Skagit and Snohomish rivers. The amount asked is greatly in excess of that ever allowed for this purpose, the last appropriation being but $12,000.

Farmers about North Yakima are rejoicing over abundant crops this season, while fruit and produce dealers are also well satisfied. One man who purchased twenty acres of ground last year for $1,700 and seeded it in alfalfa, cut from it 240 tons of hay. At $7 per ton, the ruling price, it will be seen that he has in hand $1,680 worth of hay as his year's work. This is an actual and by no means isolated case.

Mining News.

It is estimated that one-half the business men of Seattle are interested in mining deals.

Work on the tunnel of the Snohomish Mining company is progressing. It will be 600 feet in length when completed.

The Kelso coal mines are being developed by San Francisco capitalists. General Backus, the postmaster of that city, being interested.

The first discovery of ore in the new Stillaguamish mining region, was the Anacortes mine, made by George Hale, on the 4th of last July, and now there are over 300 claims located.

The discovery of a six-foot vein of bituminous coal, eight miles from Clallam Bay, is reported by S. H. Graham. He proposes to have a pack trail built at once and the embryo mine developed. Specimens of the coal burn clearly and brightly, and the find may prove a valuable one.

Messrs. Kelsey and Woodman have returned to Centralia, from a sixteen days' trip to the new mining district recently discovered about forty-five miles east of that city. They report the lookout as being very bright for the development of rich mines. They made locations and will return in the spring, prepared to thoroughly test the matter. There are already five camps in the district, consisting of from two to five men in each. Most of them will spend the winter in the mountains.

The Murder and the Lawyer.

A murderer who had been found guilty and sentenced to death sent for his lawyer and said:

"Behold! I am doomed to die on the gallows!"

"Yes, I heard a rumor to that effect," replied the lawyer.

"But you held out high hopes that I should escape."

"Yes, I know, but at the most critical period you declared to me that you were innocent of the crime."

"And so I am—innocent as the babe unborn!"

"Then it's no wonder you are where you are. It's my business as a great criminal lawyer to clear the guilty and nothing to do with the innocent. It's no wonder old Jones stood out until he brought the eleven others over with him!"

MORAL.

Be guilty if you would escape the law.

Long Steel Shaving.

At the Wagner car-works a bar of soft steel two feet long and two inches thick was to be made into a piece of shafting. The process of turning produced a shafting eighty-one feet one and one-half inches long even in the curled-up form in which a shaving comes from a lathe. Could it be straitened out it would be nearly three times as long. The shaving has been preserved in the office of the Wagner works.

The Hottest Place on Earth.

Do you know the hottest spot on earth is within the boundaries of the United States? It is situated in Southeastern California, and is called Death Valley. In July a thermometer placed in the shade registered 130. This desolate spot is less known than any other locality in the country. This valley was once a lake of water, containing in solution common soda, salt and borax, and now above the marsh there is a crust of common salt from six to twelve inches thick. The borax deposits on the east side of the valley are said to be the richest in the world. The United States signal service, wishing to gather more complete information concerning this region, has sent James H. Cleary, fermerly of the Omaha station, to spend the summer in the heart of the valley. No rain falls in Death Valley throughout the year, and persons who enter the place have to take along supplies of water.

IN THE COURTS.

Grindings of the Superior Court During the Week—New Cases—Probate Notes.

The all absorbing topic around the court house during the week was the case of the State vs. The City of Port Angeles et al. This is an interesting case and has an interesting history.

Away last May E. B. Mastick, Jr., after failing to get the prosecuting attorney to file an information in the nature of a quo-warrano, requiring the court to inquire into the legality of the incorporation of the city, filed an affidavit with the clerk of the court, on the showing of which the court issued an order compelling the prosecuting attorney to file such information. This was done on June 3rd. The case came up on motions and demurrers to the pleadings a dozen times or more, each time the decision was in favor of the plaintiff, In one of these motions the attorneys for the city maintained that the state, having made the city of Port Angeles, as a corporation, a party, and having brought it as such into court was estopped thereby from denying that it was legally incorporated. This motion was overruled by the court who relied upon a decision of the California Supreme court.

The case was finally set for trial on October 20, but afterward continued until the 23rd on account of the illness of Judge Lane, who with W. R. Gay, had represented the state until this time in the case. At this time Judge McClinton decided that the prosecuting attorney properly had charge of the case, and George C. Hatch took charge.

On Tuesday morning, the day set for the trial, the ball was set in motion by the city's attorneys moving for judgment on the pleadings for the city, alleging as they did before, that after admiting the legal existence of the corporation by bringing it into court, they were estopped from denying it.

Attorneys Burleigh and Piles, of Seattle, argued the motion for the defendant and attorneys Gay and Hatch, of this city, for the state. The court, in ruling on this motion, stated that he had consulted with a number of the superior judges in the state, and that he found that he was alone in his ruling on this point before, he had finally made up his mind that the California court was alone, and its decision unsurported, and that the Illinois case, urged by the defense, was more at point, the Illinois statute being identical with our own, and being fully supported by others, therefore he granted the motion, and ordered the judgment asked for.

After this the attorneys for the state made application to amend their information, which was denied, and notice was at once given of appeal. This settles a very important case as far as this court is concerned.

Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Hatch took copies of the papers in the case and left for Seattle Thursday morning to consult with the attorney general about prosecuting the appeal in the Supreme court.

He will be governed entirely by the attorney general in his further action.

The Lennan Case.

On Saturday Judge McClinton denied the motion of plaintiff to strike out the defendant's demurrer in the case of Wm. McLennan vs. Mary Ann McLennan and then overruled the demurrer. This case was tried last month, but the judgment withheld. After overruling the demurrer the court filed his findings and decree, which were for the defendant. The divorce was granted and the defendant given, as her separate property, the Rockman building and the equity in the lot on which it stands and all the household goods. Mr. McLennan gets the lots on the reservation and $350 from the defendant for work done on the Rockman building.

NEW SUITS.

The following cases have been filed since our last issue:

No. 180. Lewis Leland vs. School District No. 7, Foreclosure of mechanic's lein. Mr. Leland claimed that the district owed him $13.62 and had filed a lien on the Central school house and lots. The suit is to foreclose this lien.

No. 181. J. Baumgarten & Co. vs. A. Gerke, on account for merchandise $389.84.

No. 182. Stephen L. Hall vs. Fanny Anderson, Clara L. Fisk and S M. Nolan, to have deeds from Fanny Anderson to Clara L. Fisk and from the latter to S. M. Nolan, declared void, and to have a judgment heretofore obtained by Hall against Fanny Anderson, declared a lien on property at Gettysburg thus deeded.

No. 183. J. Furth vs. B. F. Schwartz and B. F. Schwartz Co., foreclosure of mortgage for $6,000 and interest.

No. 184. J. Furth vs. B. F. Schwartz and I. Salhinger, suit on promisory notes for $1,345.34.

No. 185. J. L. Worthley vs. A. Gerke, Phil A. Dolan and B. B. Meagher, on promisory note for $300 with interest a two per cent. per month, and attorney's fee of $30.

SUPERIOR BRIEFS.

Lars Hanson, a native of Denmark, was admitted to citizenship in open court Wednesday. He proved his residence by Lars Sali and Peter Hanson.

Thomas F. Keillor, a native of Canada, has declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States.

The following named citizens have made final proof before the county clerk during the week, to-wit:

Ben Crockett, homestead; Michael J. Verdon, homestead; and Frank Hall, homestead.

Last Thursday the court granted C. J. Peters until October 27 to appear in court and show why he should not give his wife, Christina Peters, $150 to prepare her case for a divorce.

The demurrer of defendant to the cost bond in the case of Staver & Walker vs. B. F. Schwartz, was denied and defendant given ten days in which to answer.

The case of Greene vs. Williams on title to land, has been set for trial on November 2.

"A Turkish Bath."

The opera house was well filled last Monday evening by a goodly representation of the citizens of Port Angeles who turned out to see "A Turkish Bath." The entertainment—while not up to the highly cultured eastern standard—was so much better than any one of the audience dared to hope for, that all expressed themselves as being satisfied. Conjecture was rife concerning the name of the piece, and how any connection can possibly exist between it and the plot, however, all seemed to enjoy the good the gods sent, and in silence endured the evil. That part of the program which invaded music's domain, was decidedly better than the histrionic talent. The singing was good, but would have been better, had as diligent effort been exerted to produce melody as was employed in displaying the flexibility of the singer's voice. Port Angeles will always well fill her opera house.

The Number of Flour Mills.

It is a fact not generally known that the number of flour mills throughout the country is decreasing year by year. It very rarely happens that a mill that is destroyed by fire or otherwise is rebuilt, and in that way it has come that within the last decade the total number of mills throughout the country has fallen off considerably. The reason of this is the smallness of the profits now realized from milling. Only the larger and better equipped mills make any money, and that only by reason of their large output.

A Shoemaker's Lucky Discovery.

By the way, a poor shoemaker in Chilli made a peculiar discovery in a peculiar way. On Aug. 14, 1888, a dyke burst in a river at Valparaiso and flooded the whole business section of the city. In speaking of the affair this shoemaker said to me: "Out of every evil there's a little good, for after cleaning up my store all I could find in it were five bull-frogs of a gigantic size, the smallest weighing five pounds. After killing them I endeavored to remove part of the skins by soaking them in alum, and was well paid for my trouble. 'Chinese mules' were made of the skins, as they were very supple and as easily worked as kid. Finding a ready sale for them, other frogs were obtained and similarly used They are called little elephants here." That poor shoemaker made a special traffic in those frog skins, as they were found to be well adapted for the manufacture of pocketbooks and wallets. Today he is a rich man—a fortune made out of nothing but frog skins.
