THE EARLY SETTLERS

Quillayute Indians Murder a Settler at Pysht—Scenes in the Justice Court of the Early Days—Squire Huntoon, Tom Hare, Tom Ballast—Capt. Melville.

Another change of scene brings to view the custom house which had been moved to Port Angeles, and the place was peopled with some original and ever to be remembered persons. Some Quillayute Indians had murdered a settler at Pysht who we will call Cap—I forgot his other name. This moved the whole colony who swore to exterminate the Quillayutes. Captain Dalgardno kept the Hotel Dalgardno and he was also justice of the peace. Judge Dyer, one of the custom house officials, an original and quaint genius, addressed the crowd. "Boys," said he, "don't get yourselves into trouble by promiscuous shooting, do everything according to law; let's go to Del. and swear out warrants." So all hands adjourned to Del's bar-room, where Judge Dyer quickly prepared eight warrants for as many Indians, each named John Doe. "Bring them before me," said Justice Del. "dead or alive, I don't care which." Each man, thereupon, rammed his warrant down his rifle as a wad, being as Del. said, "the best way to serve a warrant on an Indian."

At that time the bay was called Ediz Hook, Old Dungeness and Cherborg. The captains thought the names inappropriate. Captain Winsor suggested Winsor Harbor. "No," said Captain Holmes, "who ever heard of a Winsor having a harbor. Call it Holmes' Harbor." "That's too much like Holmes' Holl at Edgarton," said Winsor, "and you know, Rufus, that the whalemen have a poor opinion of that place on account of the mince pies made of salt beef and pork, flavored with old stockings and red flannel shirts that they used to sell sailors." Rufus denounced this as a libel, and the naming of the bay was left to more poetic minds, who revived the old Spanish name of Port Angeles, said to have been given by a lieutenant of Commander Quadra, whose headquarters were at Nootka, on the west coast of Vancouver island.

The next change of scene brings to my mind, Tom Hare, Tom Ballast, Tom Coffin, Capt. Melville, the bold and intrepid navigator with his schooner Elizabeth, Phil. Beynon, with the sloop Tibbals, and others of the denizens of the beach, also that prince of good fellows, Capt. Tom Stratton, and the inimitable and never to be forgotten Judge Marcus Arelius Brutus Huntoon, chief justice of Elwha, with Owen O'Connor, or Mckey Free, as we used to call him, and others whose names belong to other portions of Port Angeles history.

I have neither time or space to recount all the matters of interest, but I will just jot down a few. Squire Huntoon was one of the wonders of the place, and his queer ways and sayings made him a perfect circus to his admiring friends, for he still lives, though removed from our vision; his home is in California. Long may he wave!

On one occasion O'Connor swore out a complaint before Squire Huntoon against an Indian for stealing an axe and a lot of greenbacks. The Indian employed counsel, Mr. Charles M. Bradshaw, to defend him, while the voluble and festive Mickey Free, acted as his own counsel.

The next morning Squire Huntoon, who lived at Elwha, rose early to walk to Port Angeles to hold court. As he passed the cabin of Joe Fraser on the beach, he stepped in to arrange his papers and compose his thoughts. It was just daylight and Joe was asleep in his bunk, his door was unfastened, and the squire walked in, struck a match, lighted a candle and sat down at the table. This woke up Fraser, who sang out, "hello! Who's there? What the the d—— do you want?" "Keep still Fraser, I am holding court." "The h—— you are, what do you mean by holding court in my house without asking leave?" "If you don't keep still I'll fine you for contempt of court," says the squire. "How can I tell when you are holding court?" asked Fraser. "See here Joe, I want you to understand that when my hat is off, the court is in session, no matter if I am in the woods." Joe dried up and Huntoon picked his papers from the table and walked to town. At 10 o'clock court was held in Del's bar room and it was quite evident that the justice was prejudiced against O'Connor. Jack Dunn was present in a happy mood, and sang out: "Sock it to him Huntoon; sock it to him." "Jack, if you don't keep still I'll fine you for contempt of court." Jack ceased for a while and then sang out: "Sock it to him good, Huntoon." This was too much for the squire, who announced, "Jack Dunn, you are fined five dollars for contempt of court." Jack kept quiet and the case proceeded. Mr. Bradshaw laying down the law in a manner to convince the squire, and Mikey keeping everyone laughing at his comical Irish wit. When the case was concluded Squire Huntoon rendered his decision as follows:

"The prisoner is discharged and may go home, but the culprit—meaning the plaintiff—is fined five dollars and costs, and the marshal is ordered to confine him on board the revenue cutter until the fine is paid."

Some one remarked to the squire that the grand jury would get after him for such an outrageous decision. Huntoon replied, "Gosh darn him, he charged me twenty-five cents for packing a quarter of beef from my boat to George Allingham's hotel, and I just socked it to him for that."

While the justice was arranging his papers, Jack, who had had time for reflection, took counsel of Mr. Bradshaw.

"See here Charley, that old fool has fined me five dollars, and I haven't got five dollars. What'll I do?" "Just go in and tell him you did not mean any offense and ask him to remit the fine and it will be all right." Jack approached the squire and said, "see here Huntoon, you fined me five dollars for contempt of your court, didn't you?" "Yes Jack, you are find five dollars." "Well, you didn't fine me enough. I've got more than five dollars worth of contempt for your court, but I'm a poor man and I hope you'll let me off." "Jack," said the squire, with a majestic wave of his hand and benignantly beaming in his eye, "Jack, your apology is ample and the fine is remitted."

On another occasion while holding court, the squire had a new experience. Tom Stratton had made great spider out cobbler's wax and hog's bristles for legs. This attached to a black thread lowered slowly down, presented an apparation of an enormous spider with outstretched legs slowly lowering himself by his silken thread. Tom had found a knot-hole in the floor over the squire's head, and through this he let down the spider in front of Huntoon's nose, which surprised him into the ejaculation, "Jesus, what's this?', The spider was quickly withdrawn only to be lowered at intervals in sight of everyone in the room. Huntoon tried to grab it several times, but failed. At last he shut up his book with the remark "this court is adjourned till that d——d bug is caught." The audience were struck with profound admiration and Tom eased the squire's mind by producing the bug in court amid uproarous shouts of laughter. "Gosh darn it Tom," said the squire, "I'll let you off this time, but may the d—— admire me if I don't sock it to you good if you play any more tricks on this honorable court."

I will close with one more remembrance of the squire. Captain Sweeney formerly of the Tatoosh light, and Hunton, ran the farm on shares. When the potatoes were dug, Captain Sweeney discovered an Indian who had stolen a lot of potatoes in sacks and stored them in his canoe, which was hid in the bushes by the bank of the river. Captain Sweeney made the Indian put them ashore and then took him to the house and made complaint before Huntoon against the Indian for theft. Huntoon heard the captain an then ordered the Indian discharged and Captain Sweeney to pay the costs. "You got the potatoes back, didn't you?" "Yes." "Well this Indian didn t steal them." "But he had them in his canoe and would have cleared out to-night." "You can't prove what he meant to do," says the squire, "and you must pay the costs." Captain Sweeney pulled off his coat and offered gauge of battle to the squire to knock some sense into him. Huntoon took about fifty seconds to reflect, and then said: "Well, Cap, seeins its you, this f—fine is remitted."

If I could sit down with Gay Morse or Dave Morse and Frank Tucker I could with them, recall enough yarns to fill a large volume, but this will suffice for the present to awaken the memories of the the old settlers and amuse the new ones, who may be assured, that however romantic these tales may appear, the half has not been told of the early days of Port Adgeles.

I cannot close this already too long epistle without bearing testimony to the wonderful change in this city in these few years. It seems like a fairy tale of the Arbian Nights to think that less than a dozen years this beautiful city has grown from a hamlet to such large proportions.

The growth of Port Townsend, Port Angeles, Port Crescent and Clallam Bay is an assured fact in the very near future. The growth of one is the growth of all. What Tacoma, Seattle, Fairhaven, Whatcom and other cities on the east side of the Sound have done for Eastern Washington, we can also do, if we pull together, for Western Washington. I trust no petty jealosies or rivalry may retard the growth of all the towns and cities of the west side of the Sound, for by their growth the great region of Western Washington, now so little known, will soon be developed.

I feel gratified that I have lived to see such a vast change for the better and I hope to see the time when every settlement from Cape Flattery to Port Townsend may be united by railroad communication into one friendly and prosperous community.

THE COUNTY ROAD.

A Review of the Complaints Made by Taxpayers.

THE SPECIFICATIONS.

"The Democrat" Interviews Ranchers—They say the Road is Not up to the Specifications—Narrow and Crooked—Another Kick.

Still the citizens and taxpayers of Clallam county, who are most interested in the matter, are talking about the county road that is being built through the county.

THE DEMOCRAT has secured interviews with many practical farmers, mechanics and others, who are themselves not unused to road building, many of them having served as supervisors of roads for years.

Nearly all of them find a great deal to complain about. A good many seem to think it not up to the specifications.

That criticisms may be intelligent hereafter, we publish the specifications in this issue. They are as follows:

Right-of-way shall be 30 feet in width 9 feet each side of center line of right-of-way shall be cleared and grubbed free of all stumps and other perishable material. Balance of right-of-way (12 feet) shall be cleared of all trees logs or brush by either burning or removing. No stump shall be left standing on right-of-way higher than their diameter.

GRADING.

The road bed shall be graded to a width of 16 feet on top. Side slope on all cuts shall not be less than one foot horizontal to one foot vertical and all embankments shall have a slope of not less than one and a half horizontal to one vertical. The road bed shall be crowned to a height in the center of one foot above the grade line with gravel or the best material obtainable within a reasonable distance and shall be free from rock or stone. Side hill cuts instead of being crowned in the center shall be raised on the outer edge to a height of one foot above inner edge of road bed and a good and sufficient ditch, not less than 10 inches deep, with occasional cross drains under road-bed, shall be dug between bank and road bed for drainage.

As to the east end of the road THE DEMOCRAT has secured interviews from Joseph Henderson, Samuel Fernie, Andrew Hume, Wm. Morrisey, C. W. Kennard and others. All of these think the road not worth the contract price. They say it is impossible for two wagons to pass each other without one running into the ditch, which would not be the case if the road was sixteen feet wide on top as the specifications require. Complaints are also made about the crookedness and about the covering, which the specifications say should be of "gravel or the best material obtainable within a reasonable distance." It is claimed due deligence has not been made to obtain a suitable covering, especially is this said to be the case at the Shomar place and on Seibert's creek hill.

Some complaint is also made about the McDonnell creek grade. It is claimed that in filling, to avoid a steep grade at the top of the hill, the foot of it has been made wore than it was before.

The most complaint about the middle division is about the location of the bridge accoss the Elwha. The viewers disagreed as to the best place, but the majority of them favored as the site a place near Hunter John's, about 800 feet lower down on the river than where it is now being built. At this place each side of the river is made of solid rock, and there would have been a foundation, it is claimed, that would always be secure. The county commissioners and county surveyor changed this to the present location, where the abutment on the west end of the bridge is built on a sand bar. THE DEMOCRAT has had interviews with Silas Goodwin, J. F. Long, Alex. Clark and Cuarles Peters on this subject. Mr. Goodwin said that he has seen the bar on which the west landing of the bridge is located covered with a raging stream full of drift logs, which would sweep the bridge down the river as if it were an egg shell, many times. All of these gentlemen say that it is but a matter of time when the bridge will be forced down into the straits. On the other hand it is claimed that the present location is the cheaper place to cross the river. Mr. Goodwin also complans that wood is being used for abutments, when granite stone is handy. Mr. Goodwin is building a road from the east end of the bridge, and it is said that it is as good a road as the one on the west side of the river, and is being built over a harder country, and is costing but a little over $1,000 per mile—or to be exact one and one-fourth miles have cost $1,900—while the price paid on the other side of the river is $2,200 per mile.

It is also claimed that the bridges are made of cedar puncheon, not near up to what is required by the specifications, which require that all puncheon must be at least four inches thick and fourteen feet long.

Mr. Goodwin and the lower Elwha people have another kick coming about road affairs of a somewhat different nature. Mr. Goodwin is overseer of road district No. 6, and, as such, has been directed by the county commissioners to use all the funds in his district in opening up the county road connecting the Elwha bridge with Port Angeles while the folks of the lower Elwha valley are prevented from getting their crops to market on account of the impassable condition of their road to Dry creek and Angeles. They claim that the district funds are levied for the purpose of keeping roads in repair, and not for building new roads, claiming that the twenty per cent. of the funds that is set apart as a county fund is for that purpose and should so be used.

Down in the western division they also have their kick, which seems to be similar to that on our eastern end.

There, it is also claimed, that the easier portion only of the road is being built; that the contract price is $1785 per mile for the entire division and that there are not funds enough to build the whole division, thus the contractor will get what should be the average price for the cheapest work.

It may be well to mention that Mr. Burlingame was seen by a DEMOCRAT reporter and he said that it was his intention to gravel portions of the road in the eastern division—notably, the Seibert's hill.

MISSING LINKS.

There may be money in autographs and then again there may not. The late Edward H. Leffingwell, of New Haven, Conn., left an autograph collection, which many judges pronounced the finest in the world. It contained the signatures of nearly twenty thousand noted people. Nevertheless it was modestly put down in the inventory of the estate as worth $10,000, and the family would have been willing to accept even less. Not long ago it was sent to Boston to be sold, and to the surprise of everyone it brought $51,200.07.

Some mighty big nuggets of gold have been found in California recently. One that weighs 203½ ounces and is worth about $3,600 was found in the Ruby drift mine above Forrest City, Sierra county. It is eight inches in length by five in width, and varies in thickness from two to three inches. It is scalloped in places and has a lovely bronze color. It is the largest of the nuggets that have been found in recent years. The mine has been worked for ten years and has produced several large nuggets. The day after the finding of the largest nugget one worth $500 was found.

The oldest inhabited dwelling house in the United States is said to be that of Killian Van Rensselaer, opposite Albany. It is described as being of brick with a gambrel roof. The front wall contains two port-holes, out of which the early inhabitants shot at the Indians. According to a plate in the rear, set up by the Albany Commemorative Society, the building was erected in 1642. The Dutch reformed settlers held religious services in the old hall. There is a well behind the house which legend names as the place where "Yankee Doodle" was composed during the French and Indian war.

Frank E. McGurrin, of Salt Lake City, claims the championship as the fastest typewritter in the world. He does not glance at the keyboard while reading copy. He covers the board with his hands and uses the finger movement instead of the wrist movement. His record is 124½ words, exclusive of errors, from dictation, in a minute. On a single memorized sentence he wrote at the rate of 156 words in a minute. Miss Orr and Miss Grant, of New York, are the only operators who approach McGurrin in swiftness and accuracy. McGurrin defeated Miss Orr by three words and was afterward defeated by her. Miss Orr's best record is 93 4-5 words in a minute.

THE ELECTION.

The last important elections before the presidential campaign are now over and their tales told. While neither party has received a signal victory, the odds are all with the Democrats. They have carried New York by a greatly increased majority—and so with every state that has been considered safely Democratic. They have the whole state machinery of Iowa, that old Republican hallwick, by safe majorities, and were it not for legislative gerrymandering, they would have the legislature too. Old abolition Massachusetts has re-elected her gallant tariff reform governor by a handsome majority and clearly defeated the entire Republican state ticket. While, on the other hand, the Republicans retain Ohio by less than an average majority and they narrowly escaped defeat in Nebraska and South Dakota.

But, as said, neither party has received a signal victory. The issues, however, for 1892, have been clearly defined, and the indications are that it will be the hardest fought battle ever waged between the two great parties. However, every thinking man must admit, that the chances are mostly in favor of Democratic success. The fighting ground will be broader than that of 1884 and 1888. Michigan, Wisconsin and Iowa, then safely Republican, are now as likely to go one way as the other—Michigan is almost sure to give the majority of her electors to the Democratic candidates on account of choosing her electors by districts, and then the election of McKinley and of Flower makes it certain that the issue will be the tariff—the Republican platform will be based fairly and squarely on the McKinley bill, and on that issue these states are as likely to be Democratic as Republican. Yes, more.

The party that wins in 1892 must carry New York, and division in its own ranks is all that can prevent the Democrats from carrying New York.

"OMEGA" hits McKinley prices a hard blow in his article in another column, but one so well posted as he should know the Democratic record better than to compare them with Republican high-tariff politicans. Had he kept up with the issues in Massachusetts, New York or Ohio he would understand the Democratic position better. The Democrats have not had an opportunity yet to pass a tariff law. Our advice to Omega is to get in and help us "saw wood," and in 1893 his cup of happiness will be full.

COUNTY EXPENSES.

For decency's sake, at least, the Tribune should confine itself to the truth. It charges the Times and THE DEMOCRAT with misrepresenting the condition of affairs and then fails to point out an instance of misrepresentation, and we challenge them to do so. They cannot do it. The facts about taxation and public expenses given to the people by this paper are incontrovertable and the people know it, and that they approve our action, has already been evidenced. After this sweeping assertion the Tribune follows with a labored, awkward and untruthful rant about the County officers. It says: "Two of the main offices of the county, that of Sheriff and Clerk, are filled by democratic incumbents and neither of them pays expenses." This is not true. The County Clerk's office is the only office in the county that does pay expenses and the records in the Treasurer's office will show it.

We do not understand their, at least partially, incorrect defense of the Auditor as that official has not been attacked.

THE DEMOCRAT bases its demand for a reduction of county expenses on facts and figures of Republican county officers. The levy last year was deemed adequate for the running expenses of the county. It failed by about $15,000 to do so. This year the levy is less than that of last year. By a little reasoning, if it has such a faculty, the Tribune should understand, that if the expenses are not reduced therefore, there will be another $15,000 or $20,000 added to the County's floating indebtedness this year.

THE DEMOCRAT was not inspired to its action by partisan motives at all, but acted for the public welfare. That it is commended by our best citizens irrespective of party is evidence of this.

TAXATION AGAIN.

It will be seen by our report of the proceedings of the county commissioners, that they have confirmed their instructions to the county Auditor and fixed the county rate of taxation at 3 mills on the dollar, but have rescinded their instructions as to the school rate and have finally decided to let it remain at 4 mills.

Whether or not this last was done unwillingly on their part, but in response to public opinion, matters little. It was the right thing to do, and the commissioners did it and THE DEMOCRAT is glad to give them credit for it.

THE DEMOCRAT still believes that they have made a serious mistake, though, in their action on the county rate; one that they will fully realize before the year is ended. Their motive for fixing the rate so low—3 mills on the dollar—is in doubt. They surely do not mean it for economy. They well know that as long as county warrants are sold for 75 or 80 cents on the dollar they will still have to pay from 25 to 33⅓ per cent. more than any article is worth, whether that article be labor or any other commodity. They also certainly know that the market value of warrants will not increase, as under the rate adopted it is not probable that any of the $35,000 or $36,000 in warrants, with interest now outstanding, will be paid, but that more will be added to them. They must know that this is not economy.

Their action is certainly a mystery.

THE POST-INTELLIGENCER seems to see a great Hill triumph in the New York election. The wish is very likely the father of the thought. The average Republican to-day is as scared of Cleveland as he was of Tilden ten years ago. Every favorable indication for Hill in the New York election applies with equal effect to Cleveland.

MASSACHUSETTS is indeed to be congratulated on the re-election of her brilliant, eloquent and scholarly "boy governor." The re-election of Governor Russell is a just recognition of the young man in politics, by placing continued confidence in this young leader, who has so ably directed her ship of state during the last year.

HON. DAVID E. DURIE has retired from active editorial management of the Telegraph. He, however, retains his interest in the plant. Mr. Durie will go to Scotland to visit his mother, who is failing in health.

SCORE another for the Mediterranean of the Pacific. The Wilmington, being shut out from the forbidding mouth of "The Oregon," steams quietly and peacefully into our beautiful and peerless strait.

JUDGE SWAN's article on the early reminiscences of Port Angeles is concluded in this issue of THE DEMOCRAT. Judge Swan is always an interesting writer.

Now that the tax rate is established the county commissioners should reduce the running expenses of the county to the lowest possible limit.

Too much credit cannot be given School Superintendent Dorsey for his energetic action on the school taxation question. Dorsey is all right.

IT now looks like Cleveland and Boies and the tariff question for 1892—Silver will not be a factor.

PRESIDENT POLK, of the Alliance says it was $1,000,000 that elected McKinley and not protection.

WHAT profit is you if you gain Ohio and lose the whole world besides?

THERE are no files on New York's Democracy.

If the would-be-organ of the County Commissioners is to be believed, they desire to avoid all responsibility for the increase made in the School rate and put it all on the people. If we mistake not, the people of Clallam county are willing to accept all responsibility or the education of her sons and daughters.

THE County Commissioners say they will examine the county road before it is accepted and paid for. This is right; it is what the people expect.

MCKINLEY PRICES.

TO THE EDITOR:—Ther are problems in our political economy that puzzle us. We have heard it said tariff protects, and makes better times, and the laborer is benefitted by the McKinley bill. Go to the different stores and get prices, compare them now and a year ago. It costs more now to buy the necessaries of life—barring sugar, which is about 40 per cent. lower. In the domestic line prices have not advanced much but the quality has lowered.

Manufactured stock of all kinds has increased. Protectionist say not so. Now I wish to cite you a case. In November, 1890, excelsior was $25 per ton, now it is $35. Twine, best grade, was 16 cents per pound, now 22 cents; ticking 9 cents per yard, now 12½ cents. These articles are all American. Why this advance in price? Is not the tariff responsible? Is it not burdening the life of the laborer? The laborers say jobs are fewer and wages lower. Times are harder and money closer. Is there any hope of of improvement? Are not political parties a delusion? Are not both of the two parties alike, inasmuch as fair promises are made that fail to materialize?

Will the Democratic party afford relief if they be placed in power? We say to whom can we look for better times? Will some one enlighten us how we can get relief from our burdensome tax—which tariff is admitted to be—or can we become satisfied and happy in our present condition. OMEGA.

DEMOCRATIC VICTORY.

New York, Iowa, Massachusetts, New Jersey and Maryland in line.

M'KINLEY CARRIES OHIO.

Flower's Majority 46,000; Boies' 10,000; Russell's 5,000; Brown's 15,000; McKinley's 19,000. Full Democratic State Ticket Elected in New York, Iowa and Maryland—Legislatures in Doubt.

The returns from Tuesday's elections in the East are coming in slowly, and are somewhat conflicting as to minor officers and state legislatures, especially so in New York, but the majorities for governor in none of the states will change much from present estimates.

In New York the entire state ticket is elected at majorities ranging over 40,000. Both sides claim the legislature. The New York World places Flower's majority about 40,055 and claims the legislature for the Democrats. The Sun makes Flower's majority about 43,000 and the Herald 40,446. The Herald claims the legislature to be a tie.

In Ohio the Republicans elect the entire state ticket from McKinley down. McKinley's majority is about 19,000. The state ticket is largely Republican.

In Iowa the whole of the Democratic state ticket is elected, Boies leading with 8,000 to 10,000 majority. The legislature is very close but probably Republican.

In Massachusetts Governor W. E. Russell is re-elected by about 5,000 or 6,000 majority. The balance of the Republican state ticket is probably elected by a small majority.

New Jersey has gone strongly democratic—the legislature will be about 35 Democratic majority—insuring the election of a Democratic senator.

Maryland has given a greatly increased Democratic majority—about 15,000. The legislature is about 4 to 1 democratic. In Kansas the Alliance has received a black eye—the Republicans being successful. The Republicans also carry Nebraska, Colorado and South Dakota. Virginia and Mississippi have gone Democratic by old-time majorities.

COOLICAN HERE.

A Party of Portland and Eastern Capitalists and Business Men Visit us.

J. S. Coolican, A. G. King and Norman R. Smith, of the Citizens' Association, arrived in this city last Tuesday evening with a party of Portland, Walla Walla and Eastern capitalists and business men. They were entertained at the Greenhood Hotel for a couple of days. The party all expressed themselves as highly pleased with this enterprising city.

Messrs. Chandler, Coolican and King propose to erect a $30,000 stone and brick building if they can get it rented for $100 per month and if they can get a suitable site. Mr. Rockman offers to guarantee the $100 per month. All that is wanted now is the site for the building. If they succeed in this enterprise, Mr. Coolican says they will build more.

ONE FOR "THE DEMOCRAT."

The County Commissioners Decide to let the Rate Remain—Dorsey's Efforts.

County Superintendant A. B. Dorsey was in Port Angeles Tuesday to meet the board of county commissioners, who are in session, and present petitions from school officers remonstrating against the proposed reduction of the rate of school taxation.

Mr. Dorsey, with commendable pains, secured petitions signed by all the school officers of all the school districts east of the Elwha, with the exception of one director in district No. 11, who could not be seen, praying that the rate be not reduced. Those west of the Elwha were not seen on account of not having time.

The board took the matter up for consideration Tuesday evening at 4 o'clock, according to agreement formerly made.

Mr. Dorsey, Dr. McGeorge and J. M. Grant, directors of this district, and Mr. A. N. Taylor, city superintendant of schools, appeared before the board and urged that they permit the rate to remain as it has been heretofore—4 mills on the dollar—whereupon the board granted the request.

Mr. Dorsey said that much credit was due THE DEMOCRAT for getting the people stirred up on the matter. Mr. Dorsey returned to Sequim Wednesday to resume his duties.

The people are generally pleased at the outcome, and have many pleasant things to say about the stand taken by THE DEMOCRAT and the Times on the matter.

AN OLD-TIMER KILLED.

Thomas Hume Killed by a Falling Tree—A Short Sketch of his Life.

Thomas Hume, of this county, well known to all Puget Sound lumbermen as one of the biggest and best "choppers" in the country, died last Sunday evening at 10:30, at the residence of Alexander Clark in Eden Valley, on the west side of the Elwha. The cause of his death was the injuries received in an accident in felling a tree Saturday evening at about 5 o'clock. He had just finished cutting a dry stub of a tree, and jumped down from the chopping board on a log and ran along the log, trying to get out of the way of danger from the falling tree. He came to where the log was crossed by another and tripped himself, falling down over this log, and while getting up, being in a stooping position over the log, the tree reached the ground, striking the log on the other end causing the end that was under him to fly up and strike him in the chest. The tree over which he was leaning broke under him and the slivers from it entered his body. The blow stove in his whole chest, breaking three ribs and the colorbone, it also broke his jaw bone in two places and fractured his skull. Kind hands assisted him to Alexander Clark's. Drs. Herrick and Strother were called and everything within the power of human ability was done to save the wounded man's life, but all was of no avail.

The funeral occured at Sequim Wednesday.

Thomas Hume was born in Victoria November 15, 1856 and when yet a small boy removed with his parents to Sequim in this county, where he was raised. His life was spent mostly in the logging camps as a chopper, and he was considered one of the best axmen on Puget Sound. Much of his time during the last fifteen years has been in the employ of C. W. Thompson. "Tom," as he was familiarly called by his host of friends, was always faithful and diligent, kind-hearted and true, a perfect type of the old pioneer; always generous to a fault. He leaves two brothers and a sister to mourn his untimely death.

A KICK.

Herman Sindars and others went before the board of county commissioners Wednesday, and complained about the road that is being built by the County. They protested against paying for the road as it now is. The commissioners said that they intended going over the road before accepting it, and that if it was not up to the specifications that they would not accept it.

AS OTHERS SEE US.

The state papers continue to say good things about THE DEMOCRAT. The last is from that bright, newsy and ably edited paper, the Monte sano Democrat, which says:

We are in receipt of THE DEMOCRAT, published at Port Angeles. Port Angeles now has four papers, and THE DEMOCRAT is one of the brightest. We wish its publishers, John W. Troy and R. A. Grimes, success. It has the right ring.

RAILROAD AT RENA.

The Survey Located at Rena—Potatoes a Drug on the Market—Other Notes.

RENA, Nov. 5.—[Special.]—The survey of the Port Angeles Southern Railroad has been completed to near Sequim. The road will run across Long Prairie, and it is proposed to have a depot at this place. The chief engineer reports the grades to be good.

Major Hooker has just completed a fine residence on his place here. The major is rapidly getting one of the best improved farms in this county. He has had twenty-one acres slashed this summer and he proses to clear the same at once.

George Webber has sold his forty acre ranch near this place to George Alexander for $850.

Potatoes are a drug on the market this fall. In this vicinity there are thousands of bushels not sold. They have been offered at remarkably low prices.

W. M. Redwine, our genial merchant, is adding to his already creditable stock of goods every day.

PORT ANGELES THE REFUGE.

The Steamship Wilmington Puts into This Place after a Perilous Time at Sea.

The steamship Wilmington, Captain Moody, arrived at this beautiful harbor of refuge yesterday morning at about six o'clock after a perilous and exciting time on the Pacific. The Wilmington was to leave Portland last Friday for San Francisco, but owing to a mishap to her machinery she was delayed until Saturday afternoon, crossing the bar, wheat laden, for San Francisco, Sunday morning. She had proceeded southward along the Oregon coast about sixty miles, where she encountered a heavy gale. She was heavily loaded and had about fifty tons of coal on her deck, which all counted against the ship in her fierce struggle for supremacy which followed.

After laboring for hours, and shipping sea after sea, which washed most of her coal overboard, and after the most of her coal that remained had been thrown overboard, she put about to return.

She found it impossible to enter over the bar when she had reached the mouth of the Columbia, so they kept on for the greatest and safest of all the havens of earth—Port Angeles.

Once, coming up, her engines refused to work, but were soon repaired.

The passengers, at one time, thought that their earthly days were numbered, and, it is needless to say, they were glad to again get on terra firma at Port Angeles.

The Wilmington intended to clear here for Victoria, there to take on coal and proceed with her voyage, but, being ordered to Seattle she left for that place. She will be examined and overhauled there before she proceeds to sea again.

County Surveyors Association.

Messrs. J. K. Ashley and Warriner Smith attended the meeting of the County Surveyors of the State at Olympia last Monday. Seventeen counties were represented. A permanent organization was affected. Mr. Ashley was elected president, W. P. Wood, of Pierce county, vice president, Lewis P. Ouellette of Thurston, secretary and treasurer; executive committee: Messrs. Wood, Ouellette and Miller, of Jefferson. The purpose of the organization is to secure better service. They will petition the Legislature to pass a law requiring a certificate from a committee authorized by the State, for an engineer to practice his profession. They will also endeavor to be more fully recognized as county officers.

California has more than bountiful harvests this year. Not nearly all of her fruit can be disposed of and the potatoe crop is so enormously large that thousands of bushels are being allowed to rot in the fields. A prominent grower says that in one district, near Sacramento, no less than 400,000 bushels of potatoes were not dug, because it would not pay to market them. Some of the growers plowed up the potatoes and allowed them to remain on the ground as a fertilizer for other crops which were put in.

His Speech Effective.

"Before we knock the barrel out from under you," said the leader of the band of Arizona regulators," "we'll give you a chance to say a few words."

What's the use?" replied the man with the rope around his neck. "You would not listen to me."

"We'll listen for just five minutes," rejoined the chief, pulling out his watch, "if you want to shoot off your mouth, If not, up you go."

The condemned wretch looked with dogged, sullen hate at the crowd before him.

"It won't do any good that I know of," he said, "for me to make any remarks, and it won't help me any, I reckon, to kick against these proceedings. It's nothing more than I expected, anyhow. I'm used to being knocked around, and I'm used to seeing everybody else knocked around. Your turn will come some day. You ain't a bit better than I am. The whole country's going to the devil as fast as it can go. Been going to the devil for years and years. There ain't any chance for a man to be anything, and it's not worth while for him to try. Every man's doing what he can to down every other man, and it dosen't make much difference which comes out on top. The fellows that get on top generally stay there, and the poor devils that are under can squirm and squirm and it won't do them any good. They've got to stay there and"——

"Fellers," said the leader of the band, much mortified, "we've made a mistake. We've got one of these darned calamity howlers from Kansas. He ain't worth hangin'!"

And they walked away and left him standing on the barrel.

In The Same Boat.

A Vagrant Theosophist was expounding the doctrine of universal reincarnation.

"All shall live again," he cried, kindling with enthusiasm and consuming himself in the flame of his own felisity; all creatures of the Creator shall pass, with out loss identity into other bodies—every living thing that God has made!"

"It's a bad outlook for me." said an adjacent mule, sadly shaking his head; "I'm not in it. God made all other creatures, but I am the work of an ass."

"So is Theosophy," said a miscreant observer.

And the ass was comforted.

Didn't Take After His Father.

It was in the police court and the prisoner was the fifteen-year-old son of a well-known sneak thief

"So," inquired the court, sternly "you are Slick Tom's son?"

"Yes, your honor," replied the boy with, say, pardonable pride.

"And you take after your illustrious father, I see?" observed the court sarcastically.

"No, your honor, I don't, beggin' yer pardon for contradiction". My father ain't that kind of a man. He don't leave nothing' after him fer me nor nobody else to take," and the young one drew himself up with more pride than ever.—[Detroit Free Press.

Tailor-Made Divorce Suits.

The strangest fad that has yet come under my observation is one that I recently encountered in an eastern city. I was talking on business to a ladies' tailor, when he told me he was making a big thing out of his new idea of making becoming gowns for fair divorcees. I questioned him wonderingly, and found out what I thought to be a "fake" was a firmly established branch of trade. The women who obtain divorces are anxious to appear charming, and yet to study closely appearance and gain sympathy, not comment. To this end a careful study of costume is made during the trial, and each day some appropriate one of white, violet or black is chosen. Apparently each one is simple, but in reality no debutante's gown is half so considerately seleced. And the man who designs and make these telling effects on the jury gets a double price for his pains.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

IN THE COURTS.

Grindings of the Superior Court During the Week—New Cases—Probate Notes.

A remittitur from the clerk of the supreme court in the case of the State ex-rel, G. V. Smith vs. the city of Port Angeles et al has been received and entered by the county clerk. This shows that on Nov. 2 the appeal came up on a stipulation signed by Deputy Prosecuting Attorney George C. Hatch for relator and Andrew F. Burleinh for respondent, stipulating that the appeal be dismissed, which the court upon due consideration did. This settles one of the hardest-fought battles ever had in the court of Clallam county, and finally establishes the question of the legality of the incorporation of the city of Port Angeles.

NEW SUITS.

The following cases have been filed since our last issue:

No. 186. Charles P. Dyer, as administrator of the estate of George E. Allingham, deceased, vs Charles A. O'Connell, for possession of lot 3, block 15, original townsite of Port Angeles, and for $500 damages and $1500 rents and profits derived by the defendants by illegal possession of the said property.

The Catholic Bazaar.

The Catholic bazaar closed last night with a grand ball, For three nights they have reigned supreme.

Their grand bazaar was a great success and the promoters may well feel proud of their efforts. About $400 was realized and everybody enjoyed their hospitality. The Catholics of Port Angeles, under the able leadership of Father Faber, are doing much work.

Haytian Republic Overdue.

The Haytian Republic sailed from San Francisco for Seattle last Tuesday and is now a little overdue. It is probable that she was in the same storm encountered by the Willmington, and will have a rough passage.
