Kline's Carlisle Gazette, of Carlisle, Pa.

OCTOBER 30, 1812.

Some Interesting History—The Democrats Strongly Support the Government, While the Federalists Were British Sympathizers.

Through the kindness of W. B Gould a copy of a very ancient newspaper was submitted to THE DEMOCRAT from which to select a few articles, that the public of today may form an idea of what a weekly newspaper of 1812 contained.

The paper is called Kline's Weekly Carlisle Gazette, and was issued at Carlisle, Pa., October 30, 1812. As may be expected the sheet presents a very delapidated appearance, time having wore a fringe all along it's edge, and imparted to it a yellow color. The paper upon which it is printed is certainly of a much better quality than is in general use nowadays, or there would not be enough of it left to tell its many tales.

The first article is a report of the enaggement before Mohilow, sent to 'My Lord, the Prince Major General" by the marshal prince of Eckmuhl, who writes from Dombrowna the 7th of August, 1812.

The battle of Mohilow was fought on Russian soil and was one of those spleadid victories which characterize the military career of the great Napoleon—whose marshal the Prince Eckmuhl then was—and which led on to the seige of Moscow.

The marshal at length describes with great regard to detail, the arrangement of his troops, and mentioned which part of his corps encountered those of his opposing general. Prince Bagration, the Russian commander.

Mention is made of the gallant conduct of the Eighty-fifth regiment as not a soldier left his post to carry off the wounded. In the engagement the Russians left dead on the field 1,200 and above 4,000 wounded, of which "7 or 800" fell into the hands of the French, whose loss amounted to 900 killed, wounded and prisoners.

The report is concluded by a list of names of the officers and men who distinguished themselves by gallantry, and requsts that, their names and deeds be placed before the eyes of his majesty.

The first page is devoted to the war news of Europe and mention that the seige of Cadiz by the French in which that city withstood a two months bombardment, was at last raised and the French were in retreat. This page also contains several notices of the dissolution of partnerships, but has no display "ads," which form a principle feature of its modern descendants.

The second page is entirely employed in giving an account of the battle of Queenstown, regarding which one writer says: "The battle would have terminated in our favor had the militia been up in support of their brethern in arms. Our loss in killed, wounded and prisoners is 800. The British commander, Major General Brock, was killed in attempting to ralley the Forty-nineth.

In this engagement one report places the number of American forces at 1,320, and that of the British at 3,000 men, and a host of Indians, and concludes his letter by saying, "The victory is such as the enemy will weep over."

There is no editorial matter at all, as its editor seems to rely upon his exchanges for ideas and opinions.

During that year Pennsylvania was largely Democratic, the official returns of the state election showing the democratic members elected to the House of Representatives to have been 76 against nineteen Federals, and in the Senate the Democrats numbered twenty-six, Federals five, giving the Democrats a majority in "meeting" of seventy-eight. The majority of the Democrats, or War party, over the Federals, or Peace party, was 25,000.

There is another article of interest which seems to have been clipped from a Boston paper, describing the "dastardly conduct of the British frigate Juno," who entered their bay under a flag of truce, for which emblem the Americans showed the greatest respect, and while protected from the fire of the American forts by this peace flag her captain was busily engaged taking soundings of the channels and entrances to their harbor, with the view of rendering this information serviceable to the secret expedition then outfitting at Halifax.

The trial of Captain Dacres by court-martial for the surrender of his ship the Guerriere to the Constitution was touched upon, and states that he was honorably discharged. In connection with this engagement it is well to quote a paragraph. "We pronounce the story in the Boston Gazette that 'Captain Dacres ordered all the Americans on board the Guerriel below, during the action with the Constitution, to be infamously false; having seen and conversed with one of the unfortunate men impressed on board that ship—who declared he was obliged during that action to point the cannon against his own country.—N. H. Post.

A death notice appears upon the third page and the subject is said to have borne the lingering illnes with the most exemplary christian fortitude.

Twenty dollars reward is offered for the capture and delivery to any U. S. Barrack or jail two deserters—who are minutely described—who deserted from the service ot their country while on furlough.

The princly reward of six cents is offered by Isaac Berkheirner for the arrest and returned to him of Reuben Cogen, a blacksmith's apprentice, aged about 13 years, who was apprenticed to the subscribers in Newton township Cumberland county. This notice was dated October 19th.

"Anderson Pills" are advertised for sale at this office, in the modest space of half an inch.

A list of unclaimed letters remaining in the postoffice at Sluppensburgh Pa., October 14, 1812 is advertised, below which appears several sheriff's notices of sale.

The new tavern of the "Plough & Eagle," George Steve, advertises its business in two inches of spaces, and several notices of valuable real estate for sale reaches the end of the issue of Kline's Weekly Carlisle Gazette, October 30, 1812.

SOME MATTERS OF FACT.

Pat Egan began life as a messenger boy. This fully accounts for the slowness of his messages from Chili.

Jay Gould is said to make money at the rate of a million a month. There are thousands of "jays" in this country, but only, one Gould.

While "A Scrap of paper" as played by the Kendals is amusing New York a "scrap" on paper between Slavin and Sullivan is entertaining Boston.

A republican newspaper contains an editorial on "How Will the ex-speaker Be Treated?" It will depend largely on what the ex-speaker has been accustomed to call for heretofore.

One of the "attractions" offered for the world's fair is a pyramid of 400 pianos connected by electricity and manipulated by a female player. Few visitors would care to pyramid the scenes at the fair while the huge thing was being performed on.

Rosewater, the republican editor who went to Washington to scoop in the convention for Omaha, complains that he was not very cordially treated at the White House. Presidential family prefers frangipani, geranium or jockey club.

May Cut Rates.

The following steamer changes are announced by the Pacific coast steamship company. The City of Puebla, advertised to sail December 26, will not go; the Umatilla will leave December 24 instead. The Puebla will sail December 31, and on her return will be laid up. After that date only two steamers will run between San Francisco and Sound ports, the Umatilla and Walla Walla alternative; every Friday. Commencing January 2, the Pacific steamship company will cut rates so low that there will be no living for other sneamers.

Mayor-Elect Smith.

Norman R. Smith, Esq., has been elected mayor of Port Angeles. At the special election held in that city on Tuesday, he was honored by first place on both tickets, and so was practically unanimously tendered the Mayorality of the town to the advancement of which he has devoted himself with singular fidelity. This action on the part of the people was certainly a graceful compliment to the everlasting champion of Port Angeles, and one that Mr. Smith intensely appreciates.—Port Crescent Leader.

A Popular Physican.

The Port Crescent friends of Dr. W. T. Strother will be glad to know that he is prospering famously at Port Angeles. The people ot that thriving young city have found him not only to be a physician and surgeon whose skill entitles him to a position in the front rank of his profession, but a gentleman whom it is a pleasure to know socially. His practice is growin gvery rapidly.—Port Crescent. Leader.

ANGELES A REFUGE.

Schooner Teaser Forced to Leave Neah Bay.

MICHIGAN TIES HERE.

A Storm at Sea Drives the Vessels in Angeles—The Michigan Has a Hard Time, but Finally Reaches Angeles In Safety—The Teaser, Ditto.

The Michigan arrived in port last Sunday about 5 o'clock, and reported having entered the straits on the morning of the same day during the severest storm ever encountered on the Coast. Her officers stated that seas presented an appearance as of moving mountains of water, and every wave breaking made them think of a boiling cauldron, as the white foam was visible upon all sides.

The entire crew, men who had seen service for years upon the sea were made sick by the heavy plunging of the vessel. The Michigan remained in port here until the following morning, when she cleared for Victoria.

The Charles Wetmore left the Columbia river at the same time with the Michigan, but being the fastest steamer she ran so far ahead of the Michigan when the open sea was reached, that even her smoke was soon lost to the view of the latter. The Wetmore passed here several hours after the Michigan entered, but the crew of the latter vessel did not see the Wetmore in in the Straits. She must have passed her off Tatoosh Island. A telegraph from Port Townsend says: The Wetmore reached that Port Sunday night at 11 o'clock. The schooner Teaser, Captain Quinn, arrived in the port from Neah Bay where she has been waiting since November last for weather in which she could sail back to Pysht. The Teaser left Seattle with a load of merchandise for Quillayute about Nov. 1st, and in passing Pysht, in unfavorable weather for discharging her cargo, continued on to Neah Bay, where she has since been lying waiting for the stormy weather to abate.

Sunday morning the Captain says, a perfect gale was blowing at the cape, which parted his anchor chains, so he was forced to sail out leaving his anchor on the bottom, and under a double reefed jib, he made Port Angeles in seven hours from Neah Bay. He reports the gale as having been as fierce as that of the 7th inst.

The Teaser will remain here until favorable weather, when she will again sail for Pysht to unload her cargo.

It is also reported that the stock of provisions at the Quillayute stores are very short, and if the Teaser cannot get into Pysht soon, some suffering will be experienced, the trail from Challam being blockaded by fallen timber.

Near Mjechow, a small town in Russia-Poland, three peasants beat to death a shoemaker. To conceal the crime, they cut the body to pieces and attempted to burn it. A workman passed by the scene of the murder, and seeing some partially cooked meat took it home with him, and invited some friends to partake of the feast, who accused their host of having stolen it, to disprove which they visited the place where he had obtained it, and the awful fact dawned upon them that they had been eating human flesh.

THE DEAD EDITOR.

[Written for THE DEMOCRAT.]

On the last resurrection day,
The arch angel blows his horn,
When spirits rise and fly away
To salvation newly born.

One grave alone retains its seal;
Unbroken at the end of Time.
The angel calls with increased zeal
The editor to life sublime.

He blows and blows till dizzy grown,
His face as red as a poppy,
The dead then hears the cry well known
And awakes to the call of "copy."

MISSING LINKS.

The Duke of Devonshire, who is reported to be dying, has the bestowal of forty-two church "livings," as they are called in England, of which twenty-three are vicarages. He owns seven ducal mansions, and is the lord of 193,322 acres, all told.

A copy of Jay Gould's maiden effort at authorship, the "History of Delaware County and Border Wars of New York," was recently sold at auction in Boston. Few copies of the work now exist, and the average price for which it sells is $25. It is a duodecime volume, bound in muslin and printed at Roxbury in 1856.

While the young man of affairs is being "written up" so extensively it should be chronicled that Dr. James Kitchen, of Philadelphia, is busily practising his profession at ninety-two, and Charles C. P. Hunt, a Chicago bookkeeper, and one of the best in the city from all accounts, toils daily at debit and credit, at the age of ninety.

Gov. John P. Buchanan, of Tennessee, who has had a little more than he could do for some time past in dealing with the convict miners in his State, is a tall, blonde man, ruddy of face, with blue eyes and light hair. He wears a long mustache and goatee. He is a self-made man, once a farm boy, and is a fine type of the educated granger.

The next Speaker of the National House of Representatives will be the thirty-second man to hold the enviable position in public life. There has been fifty-one congresses, but only thirty-one speakers. Henry Clay was elected speaker six times, and Blaine, Colfax, Randall, Carlisle and Nathaniel, Macon, of North Carolina, filled the office three times each.

Theodore H. Swift, who was one of the attorneys in the celebrated trial of the Miser Paine will case, is said to have received a fee of $50,000 for his services. He lives now in Potsdam, N. Y., and is still a young man only forty years of age. He came to New York not many years ago to seek a fortune, and having acquired one he returned to his old home to enjoy it.

An old chest that once belonged to Ferdinand and Isabella of Spain and was recently purchased abroad by a Chicago man was not allowed to get by the customs officials until a heavy duty had been paid on it. It would be interesting to know what that duty is supposed to protect. Is it to encourage the infant American industry of manufacturing choice antiques to order?

Russell Sage has the reputation of being a most abstemious man. A writer once said of him, in reference to this trait, which is coming to be distinctive of the great millionaires of America: "He has smoked only once in his life; a pint of sherry or whiskey in his office lasts him from one to three months; a spoonful, every other day, or once a week, in a wineglass of water, is all that he permits himself to indulge in."

A Kansas editor says that the monument erected to John Brown at Ossawatomie some years ago, when Senator Ingalls delivered the oration for the occasion, is a very ordinary shaft, not more than ten feet high, and disappointing to the curious visitor. Of late it has become more a monument to the spirit of American vandalism than to the man it commemorates, for it has been chipped and scarred and carved by relic-hunters and is covered with pencil-marks

CHRISTMAS.

How many happy, prattling children, with hearts filled with joy over well deserved visits from Santa Claus, and plenty, can, this morning, attest to this being Christmas day—Christmas day, long looked for by all the Juvenile World, with an expectant hope that is beautiful to contemplate.

In the world of Christiandom, Christmas day is truly children's day, the day when, with beaming eyes and exhultant spirits, they look for a reward for good deeds done, and for forgiveness for all their childish shortcomings, from fond parents and good old Santa Claus.

It is gratifying to all, in whose bosom beats heart and soul, that so large a proportion of the youth and innocence of our Heaven-blessed land are not doomed to that sad dissappointment, that is all too common, of not being remembered on this day of all days. For what is more sad than to witness the tears of the unhappy, unfortunate urchin who finds its stocking empty Christmas morning—expected, perhaps, but not less a sad disappointment to the little one, who thought, perchance, the unexpected might happen? Too much praise cannot be bestowed on the Chicago Herald, in giving to every child in Chicago, whose parents and friends require their entire weekly wage to eke out for themselves and families a pittance upon which to exist, a "Christmas gift." In Christmas gifts, as in other of the rewards of life, there is a too unequal distribution. True, in christian charity, our churches make happy the day in many poor homes, as do other charitable and philanthropic societies. But all should not be left to these. Every womanly woman and every manly man should deem it a duty owing to make glad as many hearts as is possible on this day.

May God hasten and make speedy the approach of a time when not a child, from the shaggy copse of Maine to Washington's towering firs, shall pass a Christmas tide forgotten by its fellow creatures.

JAMES HEARD'S BILL.

Senator Allen has introduced his bill giving the net proceeds from the sale of the Port Angeles townsite reservation to Clallam county for public building. This is the same bill that he introduced at the last session, at the solicitation of our fellow townsmen, James Heard, whose pet hobby it has been. To secure the passage of such a bill Mr. Heard went to Washington city twice. The bill was passed by the senate last December, but hung up in the house. The House committee on public lands to which it was referred refused to recommend the passage of the bill. The legislature of this state memorialized the House to take favorable action on it, and Mr. Heard labored faithfully with the committee to recommend its passage. but Chairman Payson, of that committee, was obstinate and refused to give the bill consideration.

By many who were interested in the bill it was thought Congressman Wilson, of this state, did not exert himself as much as he should in its behalf. Anyhow, Mr. Wilson at once upon receiving the copies of the memorial, as passed by both branches of the legislature of this state, wrote Representative Troy, of this county, who had secured its passage and had forwarded certified copies to him, that he deemed it impossible to get a favorable report from the House committee as Payson, of Illinois, claimed there was no precedent for such legislation. Had a pet railroad corporation been the party to be benefitted Payson would undoubtedly have looked at it otherwise.

It remains to be seen what Mr. Wilson will do this year. That the measure is a just one, and should pass, there is no doubt. If this bill becomes a law, the citizens of Clallam county will owe Mr. Heard a debt of gratitude that should, and doubtless will, be heatfelt and sincere.

THE TARIFF POLICY.

The Post-Intelligencer is wrong when it states that the remark made by Mr. Springer, that "tariff reformers should content themselves with increasing the free list at this session," is an indication that the party is going to take a step backward on the tariff question. This plan was first suggested by the St. Louis Republic, one of the most earnest reform advocates in the nation, nearly a year ago. Personal letters were then addressed to the most prominent Democrats in Congress—among them Mr. Springer—by that enterprising journal, to get their opinion as to the plan suggested, which was not to pass a general tariff reform bill, but to pass a dozen or more separate bills each placing a single article on the free list. In the list of articles were mentioned binding twine, strip-iron, for bailing cotton; jute, for the manufacture of bags; salt; coal; wool and other articles, any of which, taken alone, would get enough Republican votes in the senate to pass the bill. President Harrison would then have to either sign the bills or sign his doom for re-election.

Mr. Mills, Mr. Springer, the Breckinridges, Mr. Bynum, Mr. Hatch and other great representatives and several senators wrote the paper endorsing this policy. It has now been accepted by the New York World, the New York Post, the Courier-Journal, the Chicago Herald, the Atlanta Constitution, and other great Democratic journals. This has become so nearly settled as the policy of the Fifty-second Congress that the Review of the Reviews, (non-partisan) in commenting on the new Congress, says it will undoubtedly be the Democratic policy. This is the only chance to accomplish anything for the people at this session and it should be followed.

WERE THERE MORE LIKE HIM.

How many editors hearts would be made glad were there more men like Mr. Williams of Victoria? He writes THE DEMOCRAT as follows:

VICTORIA, B. C., Dec. 17th, 1891.

TO THE EDITOR:

Dear Sir—Herewith please find four dollars for two years subscription to your valuable paper. As everybody thinks a newspaper can be run for nothing I thought I would send you an extra year to help out the delinquents. Long may the happy family of newspapers live in Angeles. There is nothing like live newspapers to build up a city and with the natual advantages you have, it is only a question of a short time when Angeles will be the leading city on Puget Sound.

Yours very respectfully,
R. T. WILLIAMS.

THE P.-I. opposes the election of United State Senators by a direct vote of the people. This could be expected. The P.-I. is thoroughly Republican. And then Mr. Squire would never have been a senator had it not been for this relic of centralization. No country has ever yet suffered by leaving to the people any question. The success of republican government depends entirely upon the qualifications of the masses for self government.

THE Port Crescent Leader continues its articles on the county road. Last week in a four column article it quotes figures and makes well authenticated assertions that show the road up in an unsavory light. Mr. Carrigan, of that paper, made a personal examination of the road in company with Mr. J. F Raney. Their reports confirm the statements made by THE DEMOCRAT, that portions of the road are not up to the specifications.

THE sudden death of Senator Preston B. Plumb, of Kansas, is a national loss. It is especially so coming, as it does, at a time when every vote in the senate for tariff reform is of so much consequence. Although a Republican, Mr. Plumb, in common with the masses of his state, believed in tariff reform. He was one of the three Republicans who voted against the McKinley bill in the Senate.

THE Mendelssohn Quintette club played in only five cities in this state; namely: Spokane, Tacoma, Port Angeles, Seattle and Olympia. Dr. Lewis deserves great credit for his enterprise in getting this good company to show Port Angeles this favor. By his efforts our Opera House is becoming well and favorably known.

THE "Gate City," indeed is Port Angeles. In Sunday's storm at sea, neither the Michigan nor the Teaser found relief from wind and wave until they reached our harbor.

NEWS AND COMMENT.

Elkins would not accept the war portfolio as the successor of Proctor until his friend Goff had been provided for by the promise of a circuit-court judgeship, and then hied himself to his other dear friend of "Vigorous foreign policy" fame, with whose approbation his desire to accept met, then he forwarded his acceptance to the president.

Like Caesar, thrice were these weighty honors thrust upon him and his final acceptance seemed to depend upon the pleasure of everyone else. but that of the man who offered the position, which argues that, Benjamin is out of sight—under his grand pap's hat.

It is reported that Russell B. Harrison is authority for the statement that Blaine's withdrawal as a candidate for the presidential nomination would follow the appointment of Elkins as secretary of war.

If the g. o. p. would just leave this little business to his princelets, he could fix it up—to suit his pa as well as himself.

The president has sent to the Senate the nomination of Steven B. Elkins to be secretary of war to succeed Proctor.

Mr. Elkins groomed Blaine for his race in 1884, and lost, but, it is better to have groomed and lost than never to have groomed at all. Mr. Elkins used to be a giddy cow-puncher of New Mexico, and in case of war it is safe to say, his old comrades would rally to his yell, and join him in "shooting up" the enemy's town.

In consideration of the fact, that the mining company of Crested Butte, Colo, who have just settled their differences with the Italian strikers, have refused to employ any Italians again in their mines.

Would it not be well for Benjamin to issue another message in which he could recomend congress, upon suggestion of Rudini, to amend our constitution in such a manner as will compel these soulless companies to give the dagos preference in all things.

Hon. Joseph H. Manley, of Augusta, Me, stated in Washington, that Blaine was in the presidential race and to stay, and further: "He is certain to be nominated, and that without the least friction. I speak by the ear."

Now, can't someone speak for Benjamin by the mouth?

Murat Halstead in Rome thinks Flower will get the Democratic nomination for the presidency instead of Mr. Cleveland.

While Murat may not be the most knowing man upon the earth still, he ranks away up among them, but there are greater possibilities in Mr. Cleveland than Murat's philosophy ever taught him. In a word, Murat is prejudiced.

James S. Clakson alleges, that the reason why Harrison appointed Elkins as secretary of war is, that before Harrison was nominated Elkins was a Harrison man, and that, at the convention which nominated him, Elkins was the brains, energy and electricity of Harrison's supporters.

With three such backers as Steven Brains Elkins, Steven Energy Elkins and old Electricity Elkins it is indeed not to be wondered at that Mr. Harrison realized the deliciousness of Mr. Eli's triumph when he obtained the object of his endeavors. But, what was Mr. Blaine's name?

At the meeting of the Republican State Central committee in New Orleans knives and pistols were used and the meeting broke up in a row.

A Deceiving Machine

He stood before a penny-in-the-slot weighing machine at one of the railroad depots across the river and shook his head and waved it aside, and said:

"No, you don,t, ole feller—no, you don't. Can't fool me again on that, you know!"

"What's the matter?" asked a man who came up.

"Don't want nuthin' to do with that machine."

"What's wrong with the machine?"

"Can't depend on it. Dropped in a penny las' week and masheen said I was as sober as a judge. Hadn't got two rods away when a p'liceman run me in and I got fined $5. Go 'way, ole man—can't bamboze me never no more!"

LOCAL.

Tumwater hill is being repaired by the city council.

A sidewalk is being laid from the Gulch road to the Colony mill at the East End.

Lincoln street sidewalk is being planked from the Meagher farm into town by the Squatters.

City Attorney R. C. Wilson has moved his office to one of the front rooms in the Clark building.

The schooner Mary Parker brought a load of hay from Dungeness to the Port Angeles Transfer Company this week.

D. W. Morse, postmaster at Port Angeles, has been informed that his office will be advanced to the third class January 12th, 1892.

The George E Starr left Saturday night for Tacoma with 500,000 shingles from the Port Angeles Mill & Lumber Company.

Judge George W. Tyler, late of San Francisco, but now of Seattle and Port Townsend, was in Port Angeles Monday and Tuesday, on professional business.

Dr. and Mrs. F. S. Lewis gave a whist party Tuesday evening. The invited guests were Judge George W. Tyler, Mr. J. R. DeWitt, Dr. Herrick and Mr. J. Ferres Smith.

The county treasurer is busy receiving taxes these times. People seem to want to get the benefit of the three per cent. discount allowed for paying before January 1st.

The following are the names of the trustees elected for the ensuing year by the Squatters' Association: David O'Brien, John Henson, P. Wiley, W. B. Main and S. D. Maxwell.

The Burlingame Contract Company's entire outfit will be shipped on the Starr Saturday to Tacoma and from there to Ellensburg, where it will be used in the construction of an irrigation ditch.

The services held in the Congregational church next Sunday morning will be appropriate to the Christmas season. Special music will be prepared for the occasion. All are welcome to attend.

The steamer Victorian broke down Monday and the George E. Starr took her place on the Victoria route, making her eight hours late at this place Monday, the mail not arriving until 4 o'clock Tuesday morning.

They Deserve Credit.

Colonel J. C. Murphy, at the head of a large party of citizens, has completely transformed the appearance of the reserve on both sides of Oak, back to Tenth street, by slashing all the timber, and now is presented to view as lovely a scene, to which water, snow and mountains give their charms, as ever an artistic soul could wish to behold.

No one ever dreamed of the beautiful townsite which existed here, because the dense timber has effectually hidden this feature from the public's view, and its possibilities have only been guessed at. The small areas that have been cleared from time to time being the foundation upon which the idea of a good townsite has been formed, but now it will repay anyone to take a walk out Oak street, and for the first time realize what advantages are here.

A MANGLED FOOT.

Samuel Fernie gets a Foot Badly Crushed While Baling Hay.

DUNGENESS, Dec. 23—[Special.]—While baling hay for Thomas Knoph, near this place last Saturday, Samuel Fernie got his foot badly crushed. The press did not work just right and Mr. Fernie attempted to help it to do its duty with his foot and did not get it out in time. Dr. Thompson, of this place, was called and dressed the injured foot. Mr. Fernie may lose the foot.

Dated the 14th day of December, 1891.

NOTICE.

IN the Superior Court of Clallam County, state of Washington.

In the matter of the estate of Jim Quenamyak, alias James Webster, deceased.

Pursuant to an order of said Superior court, made on the 10th day of December, 1891, notice is hereby given that Tuesday the 26th day of December, 1891, at 10 o'clock, a. m., on said day, at the court room of said court, at the city of Port Angeles, county of Clallam, has been appointed as the time and place for proving the will of said Jim Quinamyak, alias James Webster, deceased, and for hearing the application of John D. Hickok for the issuance to him of letters of administration with will annexed, when and wherearny persons interested may appear and contest the same.

Witness, the Hon. JAMES G. MCCLINTON, Judge of the said Superior court, and the seal of said court affixed this 10th day of December, A. D., 1891.

WILLIAM K. CLARK.
County clerk and clerk of the Superior court.
R. C. WILSON, att'y for petitioner.

SUMMONS.

In the Superior Court of the State of Washington, for the County of Clallam, holding terms at Port Angeles.

State of Washington, County of Clallam } No 208.

The Port Discovery Mill Company, Plaintiff, vs. J. E. Hartagen, Defendant.

The State of Washington to the above named defendant:

You are hereby notified that The Port Discovery Mill company, plaintiff, has filed a complaint against you in the Superior Court of the State of Washington, for the County of Clallam, holding terms at Port Angeles, which will come on to be heard sixty days after the first publication of this summons, to wit: Friday, the 4th day of December, 1891, and unless you appear and answer the complaint on or before the 4th day of February, 1892, the same will be taken as confessed and judgment will be rendered against you according to the prayer of said complaint. The object and prayer of said complaint is for the foreclosure of a mortgage on a parcel of land in the townsite of Port Williams, Clallam county, Washington, described as follows: Commencing on Williams avenue on the northerly side of the land end of the said Port Williams townsite company's dock in said town of Port Williams, running thence northerly along said avenue in a direct line on the line of said dock seventy 70 feet to a point at right angles northwesterly from said avenue five, 75, feet to a point thence at right angles in a direct line south easterly seventy, 70, feet to a point, thence at right angles in a direct line seventy-five, 75, feet to place of beginning; also the hotel and buildings, buildings situated on above described land. Given by said defendant, J. E. Hartagen, to said plaintiff, The Port Discovery Mill company on April 17, 1891 to secure the payment of a certain promissory note of same date, April 17, 1891, for the sum of $322.20 dollars, and interest thereon at the rate of 1 per cent. per month and the further sum of thirty-two dollars and twenty nine cents to be taxed as part of the costs, the attorney's fee provided for in said mortgage, together with costs and disbursements herein.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court, affixed this 2d day of December, A. D. 1891.
{SEAL}
WM. K. CLARK
County Clerk and Clerk of Superior court.
TRUMBULL & PLUMLEY, Attorneys for Plaintiff.
Date of first publication Dec. 4.

In the Superior court of Clallam county Washington.

In the matter of B. F. Schwartz, Ex parte, on application for a Receiver for the B. F. Schwartz company, a corporation.

Now, on this 14th day of December, 1891, comes the above named B. F. Schwartz, and files in this court an application, verified by affidavit, for a Receiver to be appointed for the B. F. Schwartz company under the law of the state of Washington, alleging among other things, in the said application that the said corporation has but one officer or stockholder residing within said state, and that said corporation is largely indebted with no officers to carry on and transact the business of the same. And that said corporation is the owner of real estate encumbered by mortgage, and that said corporation has no property outside of said encumbered real estate to pay said indebtedness, and that unless a Receiver is appointed for said corporation, it will become hopelessly insolvent and unable to pay its said indebtedness, and that said coporation has forfeited its corporate rights under the laws of said state.

Thereupon it was ordered by the court that said application be set for hearing at the court house in said county, on Tuesday the 29th day of December, 1891, at the hour of ten o'clock A. M., and that all persons interested in said application appear at said time and place, to show cause, if any why the prayer of said applicant should not be granted, and a Receiver appointed according to law.

Given under my hand this 14th day of December, 1891.
JAMES G. MCCLINTON,
Judge of said Superior Court.

The Bank of Port Angeles is a State, not a National Bank. Pays interest on deposits. Makes no charge for drafts on Pacific Coast points.

COMMON SENSE.

Say, Jim, where have you been the past few days?"

Well. Tom. I thought I would go up to Seattle and buy a suit of clothes for Christmas."

Tom—Why, Jim, that suit is just like mine. how much did you pay for that suit, Jim?

Jim—Guess, Tom.

Tom—Fifteen dollars.

Jim—You hit it, by Jingo.

Tom—Ha! ha! ha! ha! ha!

Jim—What are you laughing at, Tom?

Tom—Why, you darn fool, Jim, that suit of mine only only cost me $10. Guess where I bought it. Give it up, do you? Well, go to the New York Clothing House. That is where you will get them, Jim. The cheapest place to buy clothing, I ever saw. But Jim, how much did that trip up sound cost you?

Jim—Oh, about $12, Tom.

Tom—Let me see; $12 for expense and $5 overcharge on the suit makes $17 in all. That would just buy, at the New York Clothing House, a nice suit and overcoat. Ha! ha! ha! you darn fool, Jim.

Jim—Now, Tom, I don't want any more of this giggling. You dont count the pleasure one has of seeing the beautiful stores with their plate glass windows and the nice cushion chairs one gets to sit down on. That's worth something isn't it?

Tom—You make me tired. Jim. That's no way to do. You can't expect your city will ever amount to any thing if you squander your money outside and get no benefit of it. Support home trade, old boy.

It Was Late.

I had asked the colored porter at the depot if the train from Savannah was on time, and he replied in the affirmative, when another colored man came up and inquired:

"Did yo' want to know sunthin', sah?"

I was asking him if the train was on time."

"And what did he say, sah."

"He said it was."

"Hu! Dat's all he knows 'bout it! Dat pusson, sah, ar' employed to sweep out the depot an' fill up de water-cans."

"And you?"

"While I, sah, ar' employed to put checks on de baggage an' put the baggage on de kyars! Yo' wanted to know if the train was on time, sah. No, sah, it han't sah. De train ar' jist exactly two seconds late, sah!"

"My boy says you haven't taught him any spelling," said Mr. Oatcake to the teacher. "No we only teach the girls spelling. The boys don't need it, because when they grow up and go into business they employ the girls as typewriters."—Harper's Baxar.

ON COW GUARD.

A TRUE STORY OF THE PLAINS.

[WRITTEN FOR THE DEMOCRAT.]

"WELL, wake up and climb into that saddle. Them fellers out at the herd want to crawl into their beds, and they can't leave until we get 'round 'em."

I said "all right," but really felt that it was all wrong to call a fellow out of a warm bed in which he was peacefully sleeping to throw himself into his saddle and ride around a herd of cattle three hours, from 12 to 3 o'clock, and in the middle of the night when he could put in his time so much better sleeping, but such is a cowboy's life, and I finally got myself awake, mounted my horse and was soon by my companion's side.

I was not positive that I recognized his voice, and to make sure I said: "Is that you Bill?"

"Yes, that's me Bill," he replied with a heavy emphasis on the last word.

"Were you ever on this range before?"

"Say, pardy, if you are lonesome and want to get on behind, I think my horse'll carry double, an' you had just as well turn yours loose, an' let him work over to the caballado."

I felt this rebuke, so concluded Bill was not in a good humor, and that I would not bother him any more, but I did want to talk to some one.

It was a beautiful night, the moon being full, which in New Mexico makes the night almost as bright as day, and decidedly more pleasant. I am on a round-up down near the Staked Plains, and tonight our wagon is camped on the Pajarita. I ride around the herd several times and finding all quiet without a thought of stampeding. I begin to think of Bill who is standing this guard with me. There are five of us on, but I don't think much of either of the others, and being impressed with the beauty of the scene, I want to talk about it to someone, and I conclude that Bill is unanaimously elected so, I begin to listen for the rattle of his spur chains up his stirrups, and ere long I hear them coming up behind me, I slacken my horse's gait until I get him into a slow walk, when Bill overtakes me.

"Yes, I used to punch cows down here about five years ago." He now aswered the question which I had nearly forgotten had been asked, and as he drew his horse over closer to mine he commenced upon a subject which showed he had been thinking about my question during the changing of the guard and while we were bringing in straggling yearlings and calves.

"It was just five years ago tonight. I was camped here with a small bunch of steers going up to Las Vegas to ship to Kansas City."

He stopped so long here that I thought he had gone to sleep or had forgotten what he was going to say, so I said:

"Well, did they all bog down in this hole or did you hear anything more about it?"

"I guess I'll tell you a story, kid. This bright moonlight makes me feel like talkin' an' we have two hours yet to stand."

"Turn yourself loose."

"Well, there came to the head of the Pajarita about fifteen years ago an Irishman, his wife an' baby to make it their home, an' settled here amongst about as onery a lot of greasers as ever I saw. I never did understan' how he managed to live in peace with them, but he did an' appeared to prosper. He put up a nice little bunch of cattle, had a good ranch an' was seemingly begining to enjoy life, when the smallpox broke out, an' carried him off. This was about five years ago.

The old man had not been planted over a week when his wife also took sick. By this time the disease was an epidemic, an' many greasers died, an' all became very much afraid of it, so much so, that they would not go near the sick woman, nor her house, nor would help the kid a durn bit, but somehow the little gal, though only ten years old, took care of and nursed her mother who finally died an' left her alone.

Then the greasers began to quarrel over the kid as she was awful purty, an' they all wanted her, so, in the fus an old hag named Pablita produced a paper, which she said was from Florita's mother which gave to her the little gal.

"Well, this paper settled the dispute an' old Pablita walked off with the gal, but only had her about three weeks when old Gallejos happened to notice her an' viewed her with lustful eyes, so he goes up to Pablita, an' opens negotiations for the purchase of Forita.

Of course, Pablita wanted to sell, the only difference being the price. You can bet old Gallejos intended no good to Florita, who was a heap too purty to live in the same house with such a villian.

He finally came up to Pablita's figure an' became the owner of Florita.

Well, the day that Florita was to be taken home by Gallejos, our horse herder, a kid about sixteen years old, an' as good a kid as ever wore a spur, happened up in the plaza, just half a mile from camp, he heard an awful rumpus in Pablita's house, an' amidst the noise could distinguish the sounds of a gal's voice, begging not to be sent away, an' emploring Pablitd to let her return to her mother's house an' live by herself, if she could not stay there, an' saying that she was afraid of old Gallejos. Well, Dick—which was the horse-herder's name—concluded, that maybe, he would be needed, so, to hear more of the trouble, without being seen, he moved his horse behind the house an' listened with all his might.

"He heard Pablita say, 'Signor Gallejos will take you to his house an' if you please him maybe he will marry you when his wife dies, or if she don't die, he will get tired of you in a little while an' then you can come back to me. He will raise you to become his wife when you get old enough.'

'Oh, comadre Pablita, don't send me to him, only give me a little bread and let me run away, maybe I can get to Las Vegas, where the Americans will take care of me, it is a long distance I know, but I can walk and then, if I can ever earn any money I will pay you more than Signor Gallejos gave you for me. I'd rather die on the road and would go if you will let me, even though I was certain I would starve to death.'

"Well, Dick after hearing this was certain that he was needed, an' began to think how he could have a little talk with the gal without excitin' suspicion, so, he climbed upon his horse an' road up to the far end of the plaza to think about what he could do, an' get up some plan. He did not have long to wait, for just as he got to thinking good he saw old Gallejos ride past him an' on down to Pablita's house. In a few minutes after the old greaser went in, the door flew open an' out came the gal on a dead run an' headed in the direction of our camp.

Gallejos could not catch her afoot so he mounted his horse an' started after her, knowing that if she should reach our camp, he nor the devil himself couldn't take her away.

"Dick was riding his chief horse an' saw that it was time for him to do his do, so he dug his spurs into his horse's flank, an' started after Gallejos like a bullet out of a six shooter. The gal had a good start of the greaser which gave Dick's horse time to get a good action on himself, which he did, an' was soon along side of Gallejos, who by this time was close up to the gal. The poor little gal was running like a scared antelope, but when she looked over her shoulder an' saw Dick close behind her instead of the greaser, she kinder smilled an' threw up her hands. Dick was then even with her an' reaching down off his horse caught her under each arm, with a little pull lifted her upon his saddle in front of him.

Old Gallejos just yelled with rage, when he saw that the American had the gal safe, an' then drew his gun an' tried to shoot Dick's horse, but fortunately he missed every shot, an' was rapidly falling behind. It was only a run of a half mile an' the greaser knowing we were camped here gave up the chase to return to the plaza for reenforcements.
