JUDGE M. A. B. HUNTOON

Dave Morse Tells Some Good Stories.

A TRIP TO BOISE CITY

The Judge Narrowly Escapes Being Burnt—A Ride in a Springless Wagon—Breaks a Setting Hen—On the Ranch—Along the Road.

We remained but a few days in Portland from which place we went by boat up the river to Umatilla landing, and from there the journey was made by stage to Boise City.

Just before leaving Umatilla the stage men informed the Judge that the Indians of the Umatilla agency were very bad, and were liable to cause trouble at any time. Whereupon, the Judge affectionately turned his one eye upon his old gun, and, after giving it a double charge of nails, announced that he was ready for the Indians.

His honor very frequently stopped the stage to get out and inspect anything along the road which happened to strike his fancy, and every time he did so, his old gun would get tangled up in his legs, and cause him to fall and the tails of his great coat would add to his misery and discomfort by getting caught in the door whenever it was closed.

During this stage ride the weather was very cold, so, that at every opportunity we would get out and build a fire of the sage brush, which made very unsatisfactory fuel, as it burns up with a flash and is soon gone.

His honor could not very accurately judge the distance between himself and the fire with but one eye and was nearly always in a continuous blaze, which kept the party on the watch at all times to prevent him from being badly burned.

An object of his especial abuse was the wagon in which we rode, it being entirely without springs and jolted us from side to side in a manner not calculated to leave any unbruised flesh or unbroken bones in our bodies, so, his honor always had some new variety of curses to pile upon the "dead ex."

Along the road through Idaho were thousands of jack rabbits, which delighted the Judge to shoot at—I say at, because he never killed one—but he would tell us after each shot how near he made the dust fly up to the one at which he aimed.

He came very near frightening all the rabbits out of the country as the poor things would become so terrified by the whistling, sighing and sobbing of the nails as they cut their way through the air all around them, that they were just as likely to run back straight to his honor as any other way. When the first one ran toward the Judge after he shot at it, his honor remarked: "Well, the d—— fool, didn't it know I had another barrel?" A drummer, who was aboard the stage and much interested the Judge, in answer to his question said: "Yes, but probably he thought he would be in less danger from a new tune which your nails might sing, than in following in the wake of the charge which he knew was awful."

The Judge held great admiration for the jack rabbit's speed and would tell me quite confidentially that, "they are the d—— suddenest things on earth. I believe one could start even with one of my nails and beat it on a hundred yard run."

Remembering his hat stolen in Portland, the Judge now held in suspicion every stranger he met, and to me confidentially called them all "bilks." It was amusing to see him taking an inventory of his pocket stock after a stranger would move his seat who had occupied the one next his honor.

We were ten days on the road in the stage and when at last Boise City was reached, the Judge's brother John met us at the station, and gave us rooms in his house, the Judge was a little bit restless surrounded by so much, style and often said to me "H—— Davie, I'd a heap rather be upon the beach digging clams."

His honor was given a ranch by his brother about a hundred miles southeast of Boise City, and to this ranch the Judge yearned to go.

We were soon supplied with teams for the trip, after a little rest had been obtained, and started for his honor's new home.

Marcus Arelius Brutus Huntoon was not cut out for a rancher, at least so the cows seemed to think, for the first time he showed himself among them in his great coat, with one accord they gave chase, and his honor, as he said "came very near getting stabbed by a cow's horn."

The next perplexing problem which confronted his honor, was to break a hen from setting, which he tried to effect by starving, but failed. Then he tried the severest remedy, known to expert henherders as that of ducking, which was attended with success, as he drowned the hen.

His honor had never seen a revolving hayrake until he went to his ranch, and he insisted upon showing his men how to run one, accordingly he climbed up in the seat, which was covered by a sheepskin, and giving the mare a sharp cut, started in on a trot. The sheepskin fell down among the teeth, which clogged the rake and stopped it so suddenly as to overturn it, his honor landing on the bottom.

Upon another time his honor and I were trying to extricate a cow from the mire. The Judge walked in very boldly and made one vigorous pull after another and at each effort he sank deeper and deeper into the mud himself. I was so filled with laughter that I could not possibly render the Judge any assistance. The men soon arrived with a block and tackle, which made fast to the Judge and soon had him pulled out.

After this a coldness sprang up between his honor and myself, he having discharged me, charging me with having failed to render assistance in time of danger.

The weather was very hot and the day upon which his mind was the hottest of the season, and during this extreme weather the Judge always drank vinegar instead of the Alkali water.

I remained with him until the following fall when I returned to the Sound. In a short time after my return I received a letter from him saying he had left that ranch and was then upon one on an island in the Boise river, and that his present place was just one-quarter of a mile from h——.

TIRED OF LIFE.

John Carroll, of Dungeness Commits Suicide—Family Troubless the Cause.

The dead body of John Carroll, a Dungeness rancher, was found Friday morning in the county road about 100 feet east of the Bay View Hotel and in front of the residence of Captain John Morris. At his right side was a 44-calibre Colt revolver. Its two empty chambers and a ghastly wound in the right temple told the sad fate of Mr. Carroll's terrible deed.

John Carroll was a half-breed Indian. He was about thirty-five years of age and has spent his whole life in Dungeness. His father dying when he was a small boy, he was raised by an old pioneer and hunter named Henry W. McPherson, who died about four years ago.

Mr. Carroll was married in 1882 to Miss Nettie McKissick, who, with one child survives him. Until a few years ago he was sober and industrious, and had accumulated considerable property. He owned at the time of his death a fine ranch of about thirty acres, on the Dungeness river, nearly all of which is under cultivation.

A few years ago Mr. Carroll commenced gambling, afterward came family quarrels and periodical sprees. Liquor changed the man's disposition from a peacable, law-abiding citizen to a quarrelsome man when drunk. He and his wife finally separated, and have been living apart for some time. Several times, when under the influence of liquor, he has threatened to kill himself.

For several days before his last horrible deed he had been drinking and gambling. Thursday night he was in the bar-room of the Bay View Hotel, which is run by Joseph McKissick, his wife's brother. He with others became excited and boistrous about midnight, when Mr. Kissick admonished them to keep still and suggested to Mr. Carroll that he go to bed. This angered Mr. Carroll, and angry words passed between them.

Friends took Mr. Carroll out and persuaded him to go to bed, but this he refused to do. They returned to the hotel and Mr. McKissick, not wanting to have a row, apologized for what he had said and induced Mr. Carroll to go to his room. As soon as his friends were out of the room, Mr. Carroll took his clothes under his arm and went down stairs and outside. He then tried to get Mr. McKissick outside. He had in the meantime made threats of killing himself, as he had done before. He had also said before that he would kill others before suiciding, so those in the saloon were unwilling to go out.

Mr. Carroll then left, and shortly after shots were heard by those in the barroom, but none went out, thinking that it was probably a ruse to get them outside, and it was not until next morning that the terrible result of the shooting became known.

Coroner McGeorge was at once telegraphed for. He wired to Justice Kennard to take charge. Kennard at once summoned jurors and held an inquest. The jury found that he came to his death by a pistol shot from his own hands. Mr. Carroll's remains were intered on Saturday.

THE ANGELES CLUB HOP

Mr. and Mrs. Bickford and "The Democrat Club" Give Dinners—A Birthday Party—The Skating Rink—The Beauty and Brilliancy of Our City.

The first hop of the series to be given by the "Angeles Club," was in every particular a success, and occured at the Opera House on the evening of the 8th.

The spacious hall was well filled with fair ladies and gallant knights, who opened the dance with the grand march and keeping perfect time to a waltz air, no prettier scene can be imagined than that presented by the dancers, whose every motion was in harmony with the music, which soon entered their souls and made captive by its entrancing strains the "light fantastic toe," which scarcely seemed to touch the floor as it danced the happy hours in and out.

At 1 o'clock the home waltz was played and the happy dancers said one to another good-night, thinking that the success and long life to the "Angeles Club" was assured by the enjoyment of its first entertainment.

Among those present were

Messrs. and Mesdames F. S. Lewis, B. F. Schwartz, E. T. Thomas, Charles Dickson, George E. Fisher, J. B. Spears, Charles A. Foss, S. W. Shearer, H. B. Crockett, J. W. Garrison, Otto Sheilds, J. H. Fenn, W. E. Smith, Mrs. E. Metcalfe, Mrs. Stimpson, Mrs. A. S. Davies. Misses Jefferies, Stewart, Grant, Fenn, Fend, Church, Crocket, Land, Davis, Robertson, Love, Lee, Clifton, Hattie and Florence Hastings, Landers, Yarnell and Petty. Messrs. W. Brumfield, Thomas Malony, J. M. Grant, S. Land, A. A. Smith, W. R. Dodge, Charles Morse, J. F. Smith, W. J. Ware, Horace White, R. A. Grimes, Joseph Pearson, John D. Hickok, J. B. Taylor, F. P. Fisher, K. Y. Church, Ben Smith, John Schaeffer, G. C. Hatch, A. L. Johnson, E. Campbell, C. R. Brewster, J. H. Holden, W. W. Dedman, J. W. Troy, C. D. Ulmer, Jr., J. M. Ballinger J. L. Bell, C. Crockett, B. C. Keller, Joe Jones, Ed Stewart, St. John, Horace Mason, Robert Shields, Walter Burch and Dr. George.

The Democrat Club Entertains.

The members of the "Democrat Club" entertained Col. Coolican and party, of Portland and a few of its friends at dinner Tuesday evening. A splendidly arranged dinner was served, and an evening spent in its enjoyment and in social coversation. Those present were Colonel J. S. Coolican, Charles H. Allen, and Jas. Oglivie, of Portland, Ex-Mayor Brumfield, Mayor Smith, Dr. F. S. Lewis, City Clerk Humphreys, City Marshall Meagher, B. F. Schwartz, A. A. Smith, R. A. Grimes, Horace White, K. Y. Church, Ben Smith and J. W. Troy.

A Birthday Party.

Mr. and Mrs. William Ritchie entertained a few of their friends on the evening of the 8th inst., at a birthday reception given in honor of the anniversary of Mr. Ritchie's birth. The assembly was composed of Mr. and Mrs. William Ritchie, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Lou Smith, Mrs. and Miss Voldo and Messrs. Crawford, Seevers and Davis. The company were highly entertained by a well selected musical programme, rendered by Messrs. Ritchie and Williams. An elegant luncheon was served at 10 o'clock, and the evening was full of enjoyment. The guest lingered until the wee hours in the morning.

Now Skate.

A roller skating rink was opened last week in Thompson's hall, under the management of Mr. Ed. Barnett. On the first night but few could be induced to put on skates. A little more time will be sufficient to persuade the good people to try. The floor was rather too smooth, caused by having been waxed for dancing, but a little chalk will remove this objectionable feature, and a great deal of fun and falls are in store for the tyros.

A Dinner Party.

Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Bickford gave a dinner party Thursday evening of last week to their friends A. A. Smith, R. A. Grimes and Horace White. One can hardly believe that a home so cosy and filled with so many evidences of taste and culture could be found in the wilderness of the reservation. But this particular home is all that the words imply, and one to realize it has only to come under its subtle influence.

The supper served the boys was an elaborate affair of seven courses and was duly and properly appreciated by the guests, after a communion deep of an hour with the inner man, all adjourned to the parlors and spent a delightful evening playing cards and in songs and music. Mrs. Paine, mother of Mrs. Bickford, entered the lists against Mr. White in a tournament of checkers with honors about even. The party broke up at a late hour and the verdict of the "batchs" was that Mr. and Mrs. Bickford are true friends of suffering humanity, especially that portion that goes through life wandering aimlessly and alone.

A NATIONAL PARK.

The article by Mr. J. M. Grant with reference to a national park published in another column of this issue deserves more than passing notice. A national park in our far famed and beautifully picturesque. Olympics would be the proper thing.

To set such a tract, as suggested by Mr. Grant, apart for that purpose would show a proper and decent appreciation of nature. It would speak more than words or letters to the generations, whose parents will be born in the centuries yet to come, of our respect and admiration of Natute's grand handiwork.

Then, as suggested by Mr. Grant, the benefits that this city would derive from the location of such a park in its vicinity would be incalculable. The advertising the city would get would be great. All the old romantic and wierd stories told and printed about the mysterious Olympics would be retold and reprinted in thousands of newspapers and magazines, and in railroad guides, works on travel and advertising circulars. All this would advertise Port Angeles. Again, such a park, with the history of the Olympics, shrouded, as it is, in a veil of mystery, as a special feature, taken with the beauty, grandeur and sublimely magnificence of these matchless Olympic mountains, could not fail to attract thousands of visitors to our city, and to see Angeles and its environments and to become acquainted with its people is to be its friend and its citizens' well-wisher for all time.

Thousands would seek to invest here who have never heard of Angeles. Then the trade that the travel would bring Angeles would be immense.

This is something, citizens, that we should not neglect. Our delegation in congress should be made aware of our desires. President Harrison's attention should be called to it. Let us do something in this line.

AS PREDICTED.

When the county commissioners fixed the tax-levy for the year 1891-92, THE DEMOCRAT insisted that they had made a mistake in making the rate for county purposes only 3 mills on the dollar. It then stated that, if they did not raise the rate or reduce expenses, none of the outstanding county warrants would be redeemed, and, at that time figures and estimates of the county's expenses during the year to come, prepared by county officers, pursuant to law, were quoted to substantiate its position. The commissioners refused to raise the county fund rate, and that the result will be as THE DEMOCRAT said, is strongly foreshadowed in the figures from the treasurer's office, published in our last issue. During the month of December $10,770.70 in taxes were paid into the treasury. Of this sum, on account of the rate made, only $1,750.48 was paid into the county fund, and all of this but $366.10 has been placed to the credit of the salary fund to pay salaries of the county officers, and there is now only $188.13 in the salary fund. Besides all the county fund not otherwise used had already been transferred to that fund. It will be seen that the commissioners do not intend to reduce expenses, but that the entire county fund, or nearly so, will be used to pay the salaries, and there will be no warrants redeemed. In the meantime the county commissioners continue to issue county warrants and correspondingly increase the county's indebtedness at an extravigant rate.

THE NEW OFFICERS.

The new city officers have made a good start. The mayor and council have taken up the lines of government and moved off with grace, ease and a clear comprehension.

Mayor Smith has shown that the people had not misjudged him. He is the right man in the right place. His message has the right ring. It was able and filled with clear cut and business-like suggestions. Port Angeles is proud of its mayor.

The councilmen have also displayed good judgment and ability. So gracefully have they accepted the situation that they already appear as veterens. They have shown wise decision in their selection of officers. C. K. Humphries has shown himself to be a man of ability and one amply competent to discharge the duties of his office. P. A. Meagher is a competent and gentlemanly young man, who, like the mayor, has been part of the history of Port Angeles since the sixties. Port Angeles is to be congratulated on its city officers. They have exhibited a spirit of energy, progress and activity.

The prospects for Port Angeles for 1892 are bright indeed.

THE New York World in a column and a half editorial criticises Senator David B. Hill's national policy, as outlined in his recent speeches. It thinks it undemocratic, as repudiating the policy upon which it has achieved its great victories of the last three years.

The World takes consolation in the fact that Senator Hill is a new man in national politics and will consequently not have the influence that he had in the state affairs.

This is all good news. The new York World is always slow to criticise, but is usually correct. Its conclusions are logical and its opinions on national questions more nearly correct and well advised than that of any other New York paper. The World's choice is clearly shown to be Cleveland, the great leader and representative of tariff reform. Mr. Cleveland's chances seem much better than they did a month ago From all over the nation the cry has been raised when it seemed that a scheeme had been developed to down him in Hill's interest. Grover Cleveland is the most popular statesman in the United States today.

THE greatest paper in the United States is the New York World. It is more widly read and has accomplished more than any other paper in the world. It is reliable and says nothing but what it means, and thus far it has done what it says it will do, as it does not contemplate such a thing as a failure. With such a reputation, fairly earned, a great deal is meant by its announcement for 1892. Under the caption of "The World For 1892," it says:

"We can tell our Republican readers a secret and our Democratic friends a piece of good news:

The World intends to and will elect another Democratic president this year, as it elected Grover Cleveland in 1884.

Whether the Democratic candidate shall be Grover Cleveland, representing the cause of tariff reform, or any one of a number of other Democratic leaders who can be elected, representing all the elements of opposition to Republicanism, The World will be foremost in his support. THE NEXT PRESIDENT MUST BE A DEMOCRAT."

THE Democrats of Clallam county should reorganize their clubs, and get to work for the fall campaign. The Republicans are on the alert. They have already a meeting called for that purposes. We cannot afford to be behind. Never in the history of our country has the Democracy represented more that is worth fighting for than it does today. Never has the chances for success been brighter in our nation, state and county than now. We cannot afford to let this glorious opportunity to do, and assist in, a great work for our land go by default. Let us organize at once.

WILLIAM M. SPRINGER, chairman of the ways and means committee, is not to be mistaken on the tariff question. In a speech in New York, where he addressed the same meeting as did Cleveland, he said that tariff reduction and tariff reform and economy would be the issues in the next campaign. He was twice interviewed and at each time reiterated this statement. Democratic division is not so bad as Republicans would have it though.t

THE city council paid a just and well merited compliment to Ex-Mayor Brumfield in adopting resolutions of thanks. Mr. Brumfield is one of God's noblemen and a prince of good fellows. He has also displayed during his term of office, a sagacity and business tact that the city can but ill afford to lose.

SENATOR HILL is not as large a man in national affairs as he was in state matters. It is, in a degree, a new field for him. He will learn a whole lot before his term expires.

THE TRIBUNE is apparently displeased at the new city government. It refers to the council as a 3 to 4 outfit. Evidently Brother Ulmer's sympathies are enlisted on the side of the 3.

THE Chilian affair has assumed a more agrivating aspect.

A meeting was held at Porter, Chehalis county, which passed resolutions condemning the action of the county commissioners in letting the railroad have the county road on each side of that station, and not compelling them to provide as good a road as that destroyed.

Well, it is quite consoling to the people of Clallam county to know that there is in existance another board of county commissioners whose most serious fault is, excessive generosity.

It is a noticable fact that no editors contracted their last sickness in this distinquished gentleman's delightful society.

IT IS "MAYOR SMITH."

P. H. Humphries Elected Clerk P. A. Meagher, Marshal—Proceedings.

On Tuesday last, at 2 o'clock, the old city council met for the last time. They closed up their business in a quiet and business-like manner and adjourned sine die.

The new mayor and councilmen then took their seats, they having previously taken the oath of office. Without delay Mayor Smith rapped the third council of the city of Port Angeles to order. The roll was called and Bell, Lewis, Metcalfe, McInnes, Peterson, Quinn and Thompson answered to their names. Mayor Smith then delivered his message, as follows:

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE COMMON COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF PORT ANGELES.

GENTLEMEN: We stand to-day as a decimal point, as it were, between the past and the future. Occupying this point of vantage let us weigh with impartial candor the work done by our worthy predecessors, the councilmen who have so gracefully given place to us to-day. We wear the laurels of victory, but these gentlemen have earned theirs. Let us look for a moment beyond the selfish gratification of pride, at the facts laid before us by the gentlemen whose places we are about to fill. And what do we find? A wonderful sight! In spite of a universal depression, and an unprecedented exodus from all other towns on Puget sound, our city has forged ahead. De we realize the importance of this? Let us try. First our financial condition is better than that of any town showing the amount of improvement in the same given time. And do we realize how nearly completed are all the plans laid out by these gentlemen? We certainly should. Contrast the appearance of Port Angeles, one year ago to-day, with our city now. Then a hamlet of anxious people who hoped to see our town on a par with other places less favored than we are by nature—now enjoying graded streets, connected and well constructed sidewalks, a system of electric lights second to none, and a resource of water supply well distributed that is without a rival. This condition has made possible a business aggregating many thousands of dollars daily, and for its protection against fire there has been organized as competent a fire department as any town can boast. Let us hope that this department may be a special object of our care and protection least we suffer as Seattle, Spokane, Bakersfield and other cities only just arising out of the ashes of their folly and neglect.

One year ago we could count our neighbors and see all their chimneys. To-day we are strangers to the majority of the people who have flocked in by thousands to the shores of our unrivaled harbor, and whose homes have sprung like magic from the spot where we have known only the forest primeval, and to-day the ring of their axes and the crisp biting of cross-cut saws awake the echoes that were startled only by the gun of the hunter or the panther's scream, before these gentlemen undertook the task of shaping our fair city.

In the face of these facts, we cannot do justice to ourselves nor hope for impartial consideration in the future, without rendering this acknowledgement of the good work already done by the mayor and councilmen of the past year. If we but do as well with the added strength of their achievements, we will do well indeed. If we accomplish more 'twill be due to greater opportunity made possible by the point of vantage at which we start.

The year is before us, let us pause and consider well its needs, its merits, its prospects and its possibilities. And while we should be conservative let us not forget that we are in the nineteenth century and must build a nineteenth century town.

There is no spot so favored as ours, and we have not long to wait ere the commercial interests, which can best be subserved here in Port Angeles, will wake us to an activity unprecedented in the history of town building.

Let us be deliberative in all our proceedings, as we are oft reminded in the business affairs of life that to be hasty and careless is a source of one of the most expensive mistakes, and in conducting the affairs of the whole people we should proceed with wisdom, caution and concern. Therefore, I commend you, first to the task of formulating a rule of procedure not to be departed from unless the matter be of such a nature as not to permit delay, and to so provide that this exception may not be obused or misused.

I believe that the legal statutes of our city is ambiguous, to say the least, and that this condition is owing to or has grown out of the late suit to test our charter. This we should straighten out at once, even at the cost of ourselves. I believe that the larger portion of our population have been disfranchised. If this is so, we should lose no time in rightening so gross an injustice. If this is so, unless it is mended, I warn you that the future will not only nullify our every act, but hold us personally responsible for blind ignorance or culpable neglect.

We must consider our town as a whole. Let no personal feelings actuate us in this discharge of this sacred trust, which we to-day accept at the hands of our sovereign—the people.

Our acts will tend either to discourage or attract capital, let us bear this well in mind, and when we drive a stake, put it down to stay. I would sugest a comprehensive plan of grades and sewerage in order that no work be done twice, and that the city maintain from the first a competent surveillance over all the minor departments of its municipality.

I would also suggest that salaries be paid all city officers instead of fees, and all fines collected by its officers be turned into the city treasury. This has been shown by experience to be conducive to the best social condition, and let us use our influence upon our state legislature for broader and more generous legislation regarding municipal government. We are in a measure tied and hampered If the city stood in the same relation to the state as the state does to the federal government, we would not have to witness the rottenness shown up for political purposes from year to year in the fairest cities of our land.

N. R. SMITH, Mayor.

The council at once went to work. Their first vote was one of thanks to Mayor Smith for his able address. A resolution was also adopted thanking Ex-Mayor Brumfield and Clerk Humphries for valuable services rendered the city.

A motion to elect the city clerk then prevailed. C. K. Humphries, William Banks and A. H Howells were placed in nomination. Howells' name was withdrawn by Peterson, when the council proceeded to ballot, Humphries getting six, and Banks one.

After a recess had been taken, the council proceeded to vote for marshall. Over the result of the appointment of this office much interest was manifest. The fight being between W. D. Stivers and P. A. Meagher.

W. D. Stivers was placed in nomination by Peterson. Lewis nominated P A. Meagher. Quinn nominated Joseph Pearson, and the names of Walter Burch, and Ben Chambers were also presented. The balloting resulted as follows: First ballot. Stivers, 3; Meagher, 3; Pearson, 1. Second ballot, Stivers, 3; Meagher, 3; Pearson 1. Third ballot, Stivers, 2; Pearson, 1; Meagher, 4. Meagher was then declared elected and adjournment was taken.

On Wednesday the council met pursuant to adjournment, and after postponing the opening of the bids for the planking of Front street, they proceeded to the election of police judge.

S. P. Carusi, J. M. Grant and Louis Williams were nominated. The ballots stood as follows, first: Carusi, 3; Grant 3; Williams, 1. Second, Carusi, 4; Grant, 3.

The city attorney, city engineer and street commissioners have not yet been elected.

Wednesday evening and Thursday morning a rumor was current on the streets that the old officers would refuse to turn the offices over on the ground that their full terms had not expired, they being elected at different times after the council had taken their seats. This rumor was run down by a DEMOCRAT reporter, who found that there was absolutely no truth in it so far as it concerned the police judges and the city attorney, but it was being considered by Marshall Stivers. But better council prevailed and Mr. Stivers handed in his resignation yesterday afternoon. Tuesday evening the boys celebrated the election of P. A. Meagher in great shape. The feeling that had been stirred up over the fight on the marshallship was surprising. While there are a few who feel sore, the greater portion of the town are either jubilant over the result or are philosophical enough to make the most of the situation.

EDITOR DEMOCRAT,

Sir: In the last days of its last session, Congress passed a law entitled "An Act to Repeal Timber-culture and for Other Purposes." Among its provisions was one to which we wish to call the attention of your readers it reads as follows: "The president of the United States may from time to time set apart and reserve, in any State or Territory having public lands, wholly or in part covered with timber or undergrowth, whether of commercial value or not, as a public reservation, and the president shall by public proclamation declare the establishment of such reservation and the limits thereof."

In accordance with the provisions of this bill the president has already set aside considerable tracts in various parts of the country as national parks. The wisdom of this policy—of setting aside large areas of the rugged and mountainous portions of our public domain as parks and the protecting them from the randalism which is only too ready to destroy that which is most appreciable in any tract set apart for the enjoyment of the public—is a matter which has gone beyond controversy.

It is so universally recognised as one of our most beneficient legislative acts as to need no dissension here. In relation to this, however, that which is not so generally known is the immense advantage accruing to the communities in the immediate vicinity, by the location of a national park. In the first place we have the advertising a locality receives by so important an exercise of the exetive privilege. The fact is heralded thoughout the natfon, that the president has set aside lands located so and so far a national park. Many journals will print lengthy discriptions of the tract. Transportation companies have found that a national park along or near the termination of their lines is a guarantee of a large tourist patronage and are very careful to give the fact a large space in all their advertising matter. It is easy to understand the advantage such widly extended advertising would be to a young and aspiring town like our own.

This advantage, however, is not the greatest we should enjoy by the location of a park in our vicinity. The large influx of tourist travel which so surly follows the establishment of a national outing place will form a continued stream of golden wealth into the pockets of the business men of our town. Over 80,000 tourists visited the national park of Montana last year. Nearly as many went to the Yosemite and Seymore parks of California. Consider that our tourist ravel is larg ely of a class who do not demur to their bills so long as they are accommodated, and you see the prosperity of a city that is privileged to entertain them.

Lying adjacent to our town is an area of as rugged and picturesque mountain country as can be found in the United States. A tract of country possessing more natural beauty and attractiveness in its native wild than perhaps any other west of the Mississippi. What better use can be made of it than to make it a great national picnic ground? In what way can it be utilized to a better advantage to our city?

Should we not as a city petition the president to set aside, say, twenty-five miles square for a park?

Destroyed by Fire.

CLALLAM BAY, Jan. 13.—[Special.]—On last Tuesday night at 10:30 o'clock a fire was discovered in the bar-room of the Ocean View hotel, which soon gained such headway as to be completely beyond control, and in less than thirty minutes from the time of its discovery had consumed the entire building. The loss is estimated at $3,000, with insurance amounting to $1,500, The building was owned by J. D. Thaggard, formerly of Port Townsend. The rooms and dining room were conducted by Herman Trapeur, also of Port Townsend, whose loss in furniture is fully covered by a policy of $1.500. The cause of the fire is unknown. No fatalities occurred, though several persons had very narrow escapes.

Death of J. Y. Hall.

Our fellowtownsman Mr. S. A. Hall received the news of the death of his brother J. Y. Hall, which occurred at the Providence hospital, Seattle, at 6:55 p. m., Jan. 10. Mr. Hall received the sad intelligence too late to take the boat for Seattle, which would have enabled him to be present at the funeral on Monday. The remains were interred in the Episcopal cemetery at Seattle. The deceased came to Puget sound from Wisconsin three years ago, in search of a climate which would prove of benefit to his health, having been a sufferer from pulmonary complaint for some time. He was a member of the Episcopal church and a mason. THE DEMOCRAT and the numerous friends of Mr. Hall extend to him their heartfelt sympathy.

At Gettysburg.

GETTYSBURG, Jan. 13.—[Special.]—The schooner Mary Parker arrived at Gettysburg from New Dungeness on the 10th, having on board a cargo consisting of thirty-seven tons of hay and ten tons of potatoes, consigned to Hall & Bishop, and thirty cases of apples for R. N. Getty. She finished discharging her cargo on the 11th and returned up Sound. A number of settlers with their families have rented houses at this place, and are prepared to spend the remainder of the winter on the beach. Owing to the incessant rains, the trails destroyed by the late storms have not yet been made passable for horses, consequently the settlers have moved in nearer to their supply depot, and Gettysburg wears quite a citified air.

Hall & Bishop will commence immediately the work of clearing their skid roads of the fallen timber preparatory to beginning logging at a very early date in the spring. It is rumored here that these gentlemen will build a tramway from the beach back several miles, which will enable them to turn out nearly three times as many logs as they have any previous year. There is probably more good timber and farming land adjacent to Gettysburg waiting for settlers who will locate upon it, than in any other locality on the Straits. By paying almost any settler for his time the homeseeker will be shown the best claims in this section, and will escape the exhorbitant charge of $100 imposed by professional locators. New settlers are coming in every day, and those recently located express themselves as being well satisfied. The influx of settlers at this place has been so large within the past eight months that greater hotel accommodations is requisite to meet this increased demand. R. N. Getty has commenced the erection of a hotel which, when completed will afford ample accommodations for all. The new mail route between Gettysburg and Twin river has been in operation three weeks. The mail leaves Twin river every Saturday and returns the same day. The carrier is compelled in several places where his trail lies along the beach to time his passing according to the tides.

The last section of the breakwater erected last summer was carried away by the unusually heavy surf of Decemcer.

Visitor Here.

Colonel J. S. Coolican, Charles H. Allen and James Ogilvie, of Portland, but very warm friends of Port Angeles, are in this city this week. Colonel Coolican is trying to work up a stock company to build a hotel in this city The proposition is a feasible one and it seems probable that it will succeed. $25,000 has been subscribed by local capitalists. Colonel Coolican is doing a great work for Port Angeles. THE DEMOCRAT will have some definite announcements next week.

Paddy Ryan, the ex-champion, is thought to have been implicated in a gigantic scheme for swindling the pool rooms of the country, and by which the gang cleaned up $100,000.

Professor Ryan probably thinks it is more renumerative to knock-out a pool room than to be knocked out by Professor Sullivan.

A New County Road.

T. E. Semon, deputy county surveyor, went to Pysht last Monday for the purpose of running the line of a new county road. A petition praying for this road has been under the consideration of the commissioners for some time, and now the prayer of the settlers is about to be heard. The road will begin at the east quarter post of section 6, thence through section 5 to the west line of section 4, thence southeasterly through section 4 to the northeast corner of the northeast quarter of section 9, crossing Pysht river in towhship 31, north range 11 west.

MR. QUAD TENDS THE BABY.

An Experiance with a Lively Youngster in a Station.

It was in the waiting-room at the Grand Central depot. I was sitting beside an honest-faced, motherly woman of about thirty-five who had a baby about eight months old asleep on her lap. She had asked about the train up the river. When she suddenly cried out that she had lost her porte-monnaie. She felt in the pocket of her dress, and the pockets of her cloak, and she shook out the baby's clothes and by and by she said:

"I remember now. I left it at my sister's in East Thirty-sixth street. My ticket and all my money is in it."

"Madam," said I, you have fifty minutes before train time You can easily go back and get your purse."

"But the baby."

"He's asleep, and if you dare trust him with me I'll take care of him."

"I don't know. They wouldn't give you the purse, and I'm not rich enough to take a carriage. Have you—you——?"

"Have I had any experience? certainly ma'am. I've got half a dozen kicking around the house at this very moment. Just drop him into my lap, and I'll warrant you he'll never open an eye while you're gone."

I've most a mind to do so."

"Come on with him, and you needn't hurry a bit on my account. We'll both be right here when you get back. Is it a boy or girl?"

"Boy, sir."

"All right—I've got him. Boy babies always chum with me. He's sleeping like a top."

She gave me a long, lingering look, so as to be able to swear to me in court, and hurried out, and she was scarcely out of sight when a woman about four seats away, who had heard and seen all and was no doubt jealous, got up and walked around and said:

"That shows how much mothers think of their offsprings! Do you suppose I'd ever left one of my children that way! Not much!"

She was still walking around with her nose in the air when an old man with a cane and satchel came along and stoped to yell at me:

"Do you know if this is the New Haven depot or not?"

"No, sis, it isn't," I replied, as I held up my hand warningly.

"Young'r asleep, eh!" he shouted in still louder tones.

I nodded and cautined him again

"Oh! I an't goin' to wake him up!" he yelled. "I'm the father of ten of them, and I guess I know all about young 'uns. Where is the New Haven depot?"

At that moment the baby's eyes opened. I rocked him to and fro and cooed to him, and he'd have slept again but for a woman who came up and loudely inquired;

"Did you notice a handbag on the seat when you sat down?"

The child's eyes opened very wide and were at first fixed on my hat. I don't know what kind of hat his father wears, but in about a minute the youngster made out that I wore a strange tile.

"No! I didn't see a hand-bag, and you woke the baby up!" I shouted at the woman.

"Oh! I have! State prison offense, I suppose!" she sneered as she made off.

By this time the baby's eyes had got below my hat, and they began to betray a great deal of anxiety. I kept my knees moving and sang to him. I had sung about a rod of "The Old Oaken Bucket," which I had always found to have a soothing effect, and he was looking at me with a great deal of curiosity, when a fat woman came sailing along and stoped to exclaim:

"Kichee! What a sweet little baby! Is it a boy or girl?"

"Go away woman! Don't you see that you scare him!"

"Scare him—humph! I never heard of such a thing!"

"Go away."

"Well, I declare if he isn't crazy!" she muttered as she shied off.

The youngster was now not only wide-awake, but bound to investigate and solve the problem. Was I his old dad or was I a base imposter who was seeking his confidence? He looked me square in the eye as he asked himself this question and I smiled and clucked at him and softly sang two verses of the "Sweet By-and-By." I think my singing rather tended to sooth him, but he objected to the words, and suddenly kicked me in the stomach with both feet and put up a lip.

Walking around with a baby in your arms is rather monotonous on the spine and knees and shoulders, but was invented as an offset for parogoric. I lifted up the baby and took a walk. As I walked I tried to divert his mind into a new channel by telling him a bear story. He was gradualy becoming interested and had probably made up his mind that I was at least his step-father, when a little old man who hadn't the slightest excuse for living blocked my way and shrilly observed:

"My wife died and left a baby about as big as him and I know how to pity you. Are you raising him on the bottle?"

I went on with the bear story, but it was of no use. The baby began to grow red in the face and to kick and claw, and he finally yelled out at the top of his voice. I changed him to the other shoulder, but it was no good. I got him down on my arm and tossed him up and down, but he piped the harder. No less than six full-grown people gathered around to discuss the case, and because I couldn't stand still to answer their questions I heard them saying I was a heartless father and that the Humane Society ought to station an agent at the depot.

I took the sobbing, kicking thing over to the news-stand, but he failed to become interested. I carried him over to the ticket office and the information bureau, but he was not in want of anything in that line. I walked and waved him to and fro; then I stood still and tossed him up and down; then I sat down and bounced him on my knee until his front tooth was almost shaken out. He had made up his mind that things were not according to Hoyle, however, and he stuck to his tune.

I don't remember all that was aid by the waiting passengers, but here are a few sample specimens from the stock:

"No one can make me believe he is that child's father!"

"He dosen't seem to have a spark of love for the poor little thing!"

"It's curious the police haven't interfered before now!"

"Dear me, if he knew anything about children he'd know that a pin was pricking the poor thing to death!"

There was just one faint hope left and I seized upon it, I carried him out of doors and the sudden change shut him up. Then I walked along until I got the sun in his eyes so he could no longer see me and he got a new train of thoughts and stopped kicking. While he was wondering who was elected, I began to sing "Old Uncle Ned" and gave him my finger to chew on, and when the mother returned he had both eyes squinted up, a smile all over his fat face and was as content as a pumpkin in a corn-field.

SWALLOWED THE LEECH.

A Miner Who Acquired a Poor Opinion of the Bloodsucker.

The other day a couple of gentlemen, one of them a city official, were in a drug store while the clerk was tying up several leeches that a doctor had ordered. At the sight of cotyloids the officer began to smile, and then broke out into a hearty laugh, the worms bringing to mind some amusing incident. At last he said:

"I never see a leech or hear the word but what I think of an occurance that happened in a small mining-camp in Arizona, long before I came to Butte. In one of the mines a brawny Irishman was employed as a miner. One day he broke his shoulder, and we packed him to his boarding-house. The nearest doctor was thirty miles away, and a messenger was sent for him. In the meantime the boys had engaged a harum scarum feller, known as Billy Moore, to act as nurse for the injured miner. The next morning the doctor arrived, and after fixing up Pat's shoulder left directions with Moore what to do, and also gave him some leeches, two of which he instructed him to apply to Pat's shoulder, and then went away. Pat happened to be asleep at the time, and the doctor told Moore not to arouse him, but to wait until he awoke and then place them as directed. As soon as the doctor was gone, Moore slipped out and took a number of drin[illegible] Pat' was doct him and "[illegible] give awol they Witl swal effor man som wate mou leec take and " not thi
