ATTORNEY'S OPINION

Notwithstanding the Estimates and Opinions Given by the City Officials, Mr. Burlingame Is Allowed All He Asks For.

The board of councilmen met Saturday morning at 10 o'clock pursuant to the adjournment Thursday evening, it being necessary to take some decided action upon a settlement with Contractor E. C. Burlingame for work performed upon the city's streets.

The amount involved is $8.124.63 as claimed by Mr. Burlingame, and which amount the city council has deemed exhorbitant, claiming that there was an overcharge amounting to $2,300, having been found by Pope & Stevens, who were employed by the city to estimate the amount of material used in the construction of the work.

This difference of the estimates occurred in the interpretations placed upon the wording of the original contract, Mr. Burlingame claiming logger's measure upon all logs over 12 inches in diameter, while the council held that they should settle upon the basis that a log 2 feet in diameter was worth twice as much as the 1-foot log. This position is taken by the council upon the estimates furnished by Pope & Stevens, and city engineer H. E. Williams. The former having inspected the Front street crib, while the latter's attention had been given the crib of First street.

Owing to the absence of Mayor Smith at 10 o'clock, Mr. McInnes was called to the chair, but business had hardly been gotten under way when his honor arrived and relieved Mr. McInnes.

The first business transacted was that of granting to the Peoples' party the use of the council chamber for the purpose of holding within its walls a political meeting this evening.

It was ordered upon petition of Chief Merritt, of the fire department, that two incandescent lights of sixteen candle power each, be placed in the engine house on Laurel street.

It was then suggested that as the meeting was called expressly for the purpose of effecting a settlement with Mr. Burlingame, that all other business be excluded, whereupon his honor called for the reading of the report of the street committee, and the opinion of City Attorney Hatch, attached thereto. The following is the report:

"The undersigned committee on streets and sidewalks, would respectfully report, after a full consideration of the unsettled claim of E. C. Burlingame, et al, for balance due on First and Front streets cribs, that the contractor should be allowed, on the approach to the Lincoln street tunnel, the difference between the cost of the cribbing put in and the boxing, as originally provided for in the plans, and upon which bids were made, would have cost.

The First street crib be settled for on the basis of lineal feet, allowing for logs over one foot in diameter, a price proportional to such diameter. That is, for a log two feet in diameter, double the price of a log one foot in diameter.

That the Front street crib be settled for on the basis of the figures submitted by Messrs. Pope & Stevens, heretofore reported to the council, signed F. S. Lewis and Fred Thompson.

City Attorney Hatch says: "After due examination of the several contracts, plans and specifications, upon which said work, mentioned in the above report, was done I am satisfied that it is based upon and in accordance with proper legal interpretation of said documents."

Mr. McInnes made a few remarks, in which, he stated that he did not think any action should be taken which would tend to the disadvantage of Mr. Burlingame, as it was a fact that, owing to his position as contractor, he had become very unpopular, which Dr. Lewis answered, and declared that an immense steal had been made, and that he did not intend to allow his name to go upon record as having favored any such an action.

Mr. Burlingame, at this point, arose to make a remark, when Mr. Peterson objected, saying that it was not fair and just to the members of the board for Mr. Burlingame to be allowed to sandwich remarks in between every speech made by the members, and, in fact, between every sentence, when it suited him to do so. His Honor decided that Mr. Burlingame, as he was a very much interested party, and was acting as his own attorney, certainly had a right to be heard.

This question being settled, a great deal of figuring was done upon the cost of the work according to the contract price, as claimed by the contractor, and the estimate made by the inspecting engineers. Mr. Burlingame, in a short address, claimed $8.124.63 is due him upon his work, while the figures regarded by Messrs. Pope & Stevens as being adequate for the work is a few cents over $6,699.

Mr. Burlingame took up the report of Pope & Stevens, and not understanding how they had arrived at their figures, wanted to request Mr. Stevens, who was present, to come before the board and explain his report, to which Dr. Lewis strennously objected, and proceeded to say that Mr. Burlingame had no right to introduce the city's engineer upon the attention of the board when his affidavit was appended to his report. A lively time then commenced, in which Messrs. Lewis, Peterson and Burlingame played prominent parts, and some very personal language was indulged in.

Mr. Stevens was then called up to explain his report. Mr. Stevens said he had been instructed by the city attorney to make two estimates, one based upon cubic measure and another upon the basis that a log twenty-four inches in diameter contains twice as much material as one twelve inches in diameter, both being the same length.

It is proper to state here that the business for which this meeting was called was entirely ignored by Mr. Peterson, who addressed the board and raked up the record of ex-city engineer H. E. Williams, who is now in California, and charged him with acting in such a manner as to cast a cloud upon his integrity, alleging as his excuse for this digression that Mr. McInnes had remarked that a certain prejudice existed against contractors, that it was not without cause.

The meeting took a recess till 1:30 p. m. on motion of Dr. Lewis.

Mr. Stevens took the floor at the afternoon session and continued his explanation. He said that he had used the the plans and specifications of the work, together with the tally books of timber used by Mr. Burlingame and the city during the construction of the cribs.

This explanation proved satisfactory, and Mr. McInness made the motion that the sum of $3,166.44 be allowed Mr. Burlingame, as per the report of ex-city Engineer Williams, less the sum of $600, deducted for work not ordered performed, this referred to deadmen used in the Front street crib. Mr. Bell seconded the motion, and when put to vote received the following: Messrs. Lewis, Peterson and Thompson, nays; Messrs. McInnes, Metcalfe, Quinn and Bell, ayes.

Mr. Lewis moved that an amendment be made to Mr. McInnes' motion, and was seconded by Mr. Peterson, that $140 be deducted from $937.64 due on the Lincoln street tunnel approach, which was carried by a unanimous vote.

An overestimate on logs amounting to $350, and $937.63, which last amount had been allowed on the approach to the Lincoln street tunnel, was deducted from $4,958.19, leaving a balance of $367.55 on the First street crib.

Upon motion of Mr. McInnes this was amended to read $3,000, when Dr. Lewis made another amendment cutting the figure down to $2,000, which was lost. The vote was then taken on Mr. McInnes' motion, and resulted as follows: Quinn, Metcalfe, McInnes and Bell voting aye; Lewis, Thompson and Peterson nay.

The result is that Mr. Burlingame is allowed $3,166.44 on the Front street crib, $3,000 on the First street work and $798.28 on the tunnel of Lincoln street, aggregating $6,964.72. The meeting then adjourned.

Late in Becoming a Citizen.

John Bridges, of Sacramento, independent candidate for chief of police, to-day took out naturalization papers. Everybody heretofore supposed he was native born, as he was a fireman for a long time and has been identified with Republican conventions for twenty years. Getting his citizenship papers at this date will knock him out of the fight, as the register has closed and the election will take place on the 8th of next month. This will help Dwiggins, the regular Republican candidate.

Another Big Railroad Deal.

A Journal of Finance Boston special says: The contemplated union between the Pennsylvania companies, which had been receiving serious consideration, but fell through for various good reasons, now has every likelihood of being affected. The combine may take in one or two important Northwestern lines. It will be the biggest thing of the kind ever effected, even going in some respects beyond the recent Reading deal. It will represent a grand aggregate capital of $528,000,000

THE NEW WAGON ROAD

In a Wagon From Angeles to the Lakes.

NEW TOWNSHIP OPENED

Bear and Elk for the Hunter—Trout for Fisherman, and Natural Beauties for the Artist — An Ideal Spot for the Tourist.

The wagon road which was mentioned in the DEMOCRAT a short time ago has assumed proportions so favorable that it is deemed worthy of mention again. The subscription list when circulated among our merchants met with ready support and since work has been vigorously pushed.

The Angeles, Lake Sutherland and Solduck wagon road, which is the name the settlers have bestowed upon the new highway, leaves the county road at the ranch of James Frank, then takes a course southwest, going through a forest of magnificent timber to Lake Sutherland. From this lake the settlers of the Solduck and Lake Crescent will continue the road to Lake Crescent. The Lady of the Lake, a beautiful steam launch, will take up the broken thread of the highway and carry travelers over Lake Crescent to Fairholm, situated on its western end, from which place a good trail leads to the fertile valley of the Solduck.

From Mr. Herman Fisher, who has just returned from his ranch on Lake Sutherland, and who has been at work on this road, a DEMOCRAT representative learned some facts which may prove of general interest to the public, said Mr. Fisher: "The road has been logged out three miles, beginning at the county road, which takes it to within one half mile of Lake Sutherland. R. N. Wilson has been at work with a force of from eight to ten men constantly, for the last two weeks, and I have been busily engaged in locating the road between the two lakes during the last week, and now have a good route to turn over to the settlers of Lake Crescent and the Solduck country, who are anxious and impatient to begin work and to see the road completed."

The owners of the steam launch will erect a pier at the east end of Lake Crescent, at which a landing can be made and where the launch will receive its passengers and freight.

"I think that within forty days we can have the road completed and wagons may be taken from Angeles to Lake Crescent."

The great benefit which this road, when completed, will be, not only to Angeles, but to the settlers along its route are worthy of mention, as it will afford an outlet for the products of that part of the county and a market in Angeles where their supplies can be purchased at prices as cheap as the same articles could be purchased in Seattle or Tacoma and a saving of the freight from upsound markets will be saved to the purchaser.

The prospects are that during the coming summer Angeles will make her debut as a summer resort, and certainly her facilities for laying claim to such distinction is well founded. This new road places within reach of the tourist two lakes, which are unequaled by any in the west for their surpassing beauty, and the grandeur of their surroundings. The waters of both lakes are of the deepest blue, and can be penetrated by the eye to a great depth where large schools of trout can be seen waiting for a hook to be cast, and always willing to bite. No sportsman can fail to be compensated by the results of a vacation of a few weeks spent on these lakes.

The Solduck offers even greater attractions. After Fairholme is passed, the hunter finds himself in open woods, which is just the country where the elk makes his home, and of which there are thousands. In almost every patch of skunk-cabbage or salmonberries innumerable signs of bear are to be seen, and numbers are being killed at all seasons.

The Solduck is practically unknown to the prospector, but the few who have investigated its hills report most favorably of copper, galena and coal, the latter mineral is there, beyond doubt, in inexhaustible quantities.

In this region exists a hot spring, a visit to which will repay anyone. Its medical properties are nearly identical with those of the celebrated Hot Springs of Arkansas.

In township 29 N., R. 9 west, in which the principal part of the Solduck valley is situated, are many good claims waiting setttlers. This township is not yet surveyed, but will be this summer.

Angeles affords the most convenient place from which to start for this country where exists today a few good claims which are so very rare and difficult to obtain in the state of Washington,

TARIFF REFORM REPUBLICANS.

It is amusing to note how readily a Republican journal is to lock horns with a Democrat when it thinks the Democrat has taken a stand for the Eastern manufacturer. How anxious the Tribune is to make people think that THE DEMOCRAT is making a stand as a protectionist. It accuses THE DEMOCRAT of favoring the retention of tariff on woolen fabrics, and thinks it wrong for doing so.

There are two classes of Republicans who favor tariff reform whenever and wherever they have a chance of doing so without having it thought they are democratic in so doing. One of these classes never fails to force the Democrats into a position opposed to tariff reform when opportunity affords them the chance. The other class never fails to use its every opportunity to make the voters think that the Democrats are insincere in their fight on protection, and that the Republicans are as much in favor of reform as the Democrats. Of these classes, the former is composed of Republicans with brains, who have studied the matter, and who have become thoroughly convinced that the present tariff is an unjust one, and the tariff reform is the only teneble position on that question. Their prejudices, only, keep them in the Republican ranks. It is well here to note that many of this class have come into the Democratic party. They are coming over from the Republican party here in Clallam county every day.

The other class is composed of those Republicans who recognize that the tariff reform position is the stronger with the people; they recognize that the present war tariff was not made especially for the farmers. They understand that it is a tax levied on the consumers of this land as tribute to less than one per cent of the people. They know that the farmers have studied this question and have come to know that they are the heavy consumers, and have this unreasonable and unnecessary tax to pay themselves, and are not benefitted in the least by it. This is a class of Republicans whom it pays to have the protectionists win. It either pays them to have the offices filled by Republicans or it pays them to have these bloated manufacturers "protected." The Tribune evidently belonges to one or the other of these classes, probably the latter.

For the Tribune's edification it may be well to state here that THE DEMOCRAT does not favor the repeal of the duty on wool only, but it favors a radical reduction in the tariff on woolen fabrics. This is the position of the Democratic party.

THE SEATTLE FIGHT.

The Seattle Democracy is maintaining the Democratic record for reform. The Democrats of Seattle, composing, as always, the very best of the city's population, have taken such a decided stand against the corrupt, extravagant and notoriously outlaw policy of the Republican city government, and have nominated a ticket that so thoroughly represents reform, that all the reform parties in Seattle are supporting it.

The Republican party in Seattle is under the control of as unscrupulous and vicious set of political tricksters as ever run a party. This ring has control of the city and county government, and is reaching out to get control of the state, which it almost has. It elected Squire senator. It openly defies any who questions its methods. It will take an heroic fight to down such a gang, but the Democratic party is used to heroism.

In a few months the people of Clallam county will have a similar and almost as hard a fight on their hands.

SOME EXTRAVAGANCE

The Tribune finds fault with THE DEMOCRAT for criticising the Board of County Commissioners and for not attacking the county auditor. The reason for this is, of course, some spite the editor of that paper has against the county auditor probably because the auditor refuses to take stock in the Tribune; more probably because W. R. Hoole, deputy county auditor, did not see fit to support the editor of that paper for state committeeman at the meeting of the Republican Central Committee. But the Tribune must be aware of the fact that the county commissioners are responsible for the number of deputies employed by any of the county officers. The county auditor can not get the best of the county except by order of the county commissioners.

THE DEMOCRAT has said, and now repeats, that it is costing the people of Clallam county a great deal more than is necessary to have its affairs administered. The county's debt is being increased day by day; warrants are being issued at every session of the board of county commissioners, but none are being redeemed. Nearly all money paid into to the treasury for the county fund is being transferred to the salary fund to pay the county officers and their deputies. This, THE DEMOCRAT unhesitatingly believes to be wrong, as it has said repeatedly. But the Republican board of commissioners seem to think otherwise.

HON. JOHN W. FRAME, member member of the House of Representatives from Snohomish county, has purchased the Snohomish Republican and will conduct it has a Democratic journal hereafter. This insures Snohomish a good, honest and thoroughly reliable newspaper. Mr. Frame is one of the state's best newspaper men, and also one of the ablest members in the legislature.

Mr. Frame will change the name of his paper to "The Democrat."

GEORGE VENABLE SMITH, County Attorney, has tendered his resignation to the board of County Commissioners. Thereby hangs an interesting tale.

THE Democratic State Convention to nominate state officers will be held at Olympia.

THE best way to settle with contractors is to have none. Elect honest and capable officers and have the work done by the day, and pay the laborers cash.

THE editor of the Tribune is mad because County Auditor Baker and Mr. W R. Hoole showed good sense enough to refuse to subscribe for capital stock in the Tribune Job Lot Company.

IN Indiana, the primaries show a stand-off between Cleveland and Gray. Gray will probably get the delegation. Hill isn't in it. His name is seldom mentioned.

THE Hotel Angeles is assured. The bonus is raised and the $120,000 edifice will shortly be under construction. The citizens who have labored so faithfully toward this end, deserve the gratitude of every citizen of Port Angeles.

THE city council should accept the offer of citizens to pay for a law suit, and have the court interpret Burlingame's contract.

FROM THE QUILLAYUTTE.

QUILLAYUTTE, Feb. 28

TO THE EDITOR: The people of Forks and Beaver have already spoken their opinion in regard to the county road matter, but nothing has yet been heard from the lower part of the Quillayute valley, but the silence from this section is by no means to be understood that the people are satisfied with the contract between the county commissioners and Mr. Burlingame. Every honest and enlightened man in this section of the county condemns the action of the county commissioners, as one of gross injustice to the county, and particularly to the taxpayers in the Quillayute valley. When the people of this section of the county on December 19, 1890, voted for county bonds to the amount of $100,000, it was understood that $35,000 was to be expended between the Quillayute river and Clallam Bay, and also that the most practicable route should be selected. But what has happened since that time? The county bonds have been sold; the county debt increased $100,000; the taxes are doubled, and yet not a single mile of county road has been built that is of any earthly use or benefit to the people living on this side of Burnt mountain; neither is there any hope or prospect for it, as nearly all the money is now used up to build roads where the people of the Quillayute valley cannot use them.

The board of county commissioners have neglected to do their duty to the people living on this side of Burnt mountain, if they had the sense of justice in their hearts, and the desire of doing equally right to all sections of the county, they should have commenced work on the road three miles above Pysht river and across Burnt mountain, and built as far as the money lasted. With the amount of money on hand the road would have been built to Lake prairie, and the people in the Quillayute would have derived some benefit. But instead of doing this the county commissioners ordered Burlingame to commence on the western division of the county road some where above the Pysht river and work to be prosecuted from that place to Clallam Bay. But when the Quillayute people cross Burnt mountain they are not likely to travel to Clallam Bay when they have a six-mile shorter route to Pysht; so this road from Pysht river to Clallam Bay is entirely worthless to the people in the Quillayute valley, and the money so spent might just as well have been presented to the Burlingame Company.

In the contract between the county commissioners and Mr. Burlingame it reads: "All work will be at the risk of the contractor until finished and accepted by the county commissioners." But the commissioners did not act according to this proviso in the contract; when the heavy windstorm in December broke down trees and blocked up the new county road on the middle division, before said road was finished and accepted, the county commissioners at once ordered the supervisors of that district to clear the same at the county's expense, while such work should have been done by Mr. Burlingame, as the contract plainly states. The commissioners can have no excuse. * * *

If the county commissioners had to pay Mr. Burlingame out of their own pockets, I would like to know if they would pay $1,785 per mile on the western division, and $2,200 per mile on the middle division and accept the work as good, when said road is hardly a good horse trail. HANS HANSEN.

NEWS AND COMMENT.

Europe is aghast at the emperor's indiscreet speech at Brandenburg, where he publicly announced that if his subjects did not like his ideas they had better emigrate.

It is so refreshing to know that William sometimes is afflicted with ideas, that they might be tolerated by his subjects, whose bodies and souls he possesses by a chattle mortgage in which the grantee is divine. A few more such speeches and William's body will follow his reason into dethronement.

The press censor, of Berlin, has so altered press dispatches regarding the recent riots, that they do not tell the tale of disorder to its fullest extent.

Wouldn't some fellow pile up a heap of trouble upon himself, if he should monkey with dispatches in Uncle Sam's domain? But then William rules by divine right, and Uncle Sam rules—anyhow.

In the fight between Ryan and Needham, which was to have taken place in New Orleans, February 29, the former backed out on a physician's cetificate which stated that "he was not fit to fight."

This was probably because he did not care for the fight to fit Needham too well.

Judge Hunter, of Centralia, dissolved the tax injunction against that city.

Well, it is a pleasant piece of information to know that tax injunctions were once in order. There are other people in the state who might profit by a similar move, who are not very far from home either.

The Democratic state convention will meet in Vancouver.

Which causeth that people to rejoice with a loud voice, and well it might, for is the cause not sufficiently great to tempt even "our friends, the enemy" to hew off a small slice, and rejoice a little too?

WILL SUPPORT DEMOCRACY.

The Alliance of Georgia Will Help the Democrats to Win.

The majority of the Georgian alliance men will not desert the democratic for the people's party. This was demonstrated at an alliance meeting held today. The speakers were Congressman L.F.Livingstone, president of the Georgian alliance, and N. A. Wilson, vice president of the alliance, both of whom have just returned from the St. Louis conferance, and ex-Senator Z. T. Zachery, a prominent alliance man.

All the speakers declared it would be folly for the farmers, who composed the majority of the Democratic party, to leave for the new party, the main strength of which lies with the Republicans in the West and Northwest.

JUST A LITTLE MORE.

The Prize Still Within Our Reach—Six Thousand Raised for the Angeles.

The meeting of the citizens at the opera house Monday night, with regard to raising the hotel bonus, was largely attended, and among the gathering was men of every occupation in life, al seemed to be deeply interested in the question, deeming it of all but vital importance to the future prosperity of Angeles.

The result of the effort to complete the bonus was very encouraging, though the full amount was not raised, but still, the interest manifested showed that the project was dear to the hearts of most of the citizens of Port Angeles, and many were there, who though posessed of too small a quantity of this world's goods to give with a lavish hand, showed by their donations that they were in full sympathy with the enterprise

Dr. F. S. Lewis was called to the chair and R. A. Grimes acted as secretary.

Dr. Lewis introduced Colonel J. S. Coolican, who made a few very forceible and accurate remarks, depicting the advantages which must of a necessity fol lowin the wake of the hotel. Among the most prominent of which were the opening of a stone quarry, a sash and door factory and the starting of brick kilns. For the latter industry there is no better clay in Washington than is afforded by this immediate vicinity.

Colonel Coolican concluded his remarks by raising his subscription to the bonus to $1,000.

Mr. Phil Dolan followed Colonel Coolican, and as a final period to his address raised his subscription from $1,200 to $1,500.

Mayor Smith was next called, and spoke very enthusiastically upon the subject and gave $1,000 additional.

Louis Williams addressed the meeting for a few moments, after which a committee of three, composed of N. R. Smith, Louis Williams and Dr. George, was appointed to go around with a subscription list and thoroughly canvass of the house for donations.

The result was not as large as had been hoped for as the amount raised was just over $6,000. When the committee submitted their lists the result as above given was made known and the meeting adjourned.

There is not an old timer upon this coast who will not feel the deepest pangs of regret in learning of the death of James Heard which occured in Black Rock, Conn., on the 15th ult., at the residence of his nephew William Wilson. Mr. Heard leaves a large tract of land in Clallam county of considerable value.

The meeting of the city council last Saturday was greatly disturbed by a runaway team belonging to M. D. Gleason, which had been left standing in front of the Bank of Port Angeles. The team took fright, probably at a piece of paper, and started upon a mad run down Front street, making a successful turn at Front and Valley, and as each horse endeavored to pass the arc-light pole on the corner of Second and Valley on opposite sides, they were brought to a very sudden stop, breaking the breast-yoke. The wagon contained three boxes of giant "power," which was thrown out in front of the DEMOCRAT office, and lucky it was that the shock was not sufficient to explode it, or this part of town might have been blown over to Victoria.

Bradshaw, the ex-collector of customs at Port Townsend, was wielding the goad stick over the backs of the bulls, while T. H. Bradshaw was driving the team on the tramway, and Fish, the foreman was acting hook tender.

The men will resume work on the condition that the company will establish a regular pay day, and settle all arrears.

A WARING REDSKIN.

Paints a Portion of the West End a Very Deep Hue.

Taquan, a Siwash, on the night of February 22, got himself gloriously drunk on six bottles of whiskey, which he claims to have purchased at a saloon in this city. Feeling beligerant with so much disturbance surrounded by his anatomy, he repaired to the abode of Skookum Charley, where he converted himself into a minature cyclone and proceeded to make a wreck of Charley's chateau. He immediately fell afoul of Charley and made very vigorous efforts to flatten him out. Meeting with success in his endeavors, he turned his attention to Mrs. Charley, having a fast hold upon her hair he was making it very interesting for her when his friends appeared upon the scene and succeeded in subduing the brave warrior.

A few days after Skookum Charley swore out a warrent for Taquan's arrest, who was brought up before Judge Williams for trial, who found the defendent guilty and mulct him in the sum of $17.70 and the costs.

Taquan's friends "dug up" a rusty sack which, it is supposed, had been cached for a long period of time to meet just such an emergency.

Taquan is now looking for Francis Murphy and a piece of blue ribbon.

A WILD RIDE.

A Bad Bicycle Dumps Its Rider Into the Bay.

A certain young man one day, or rather night, this week saddled and briddled up his new bicycle, and, in company with a friend, to herd him, started out along the Front street extention to break the thing to ride. The steel broncho behaved beautifully until Dolan's wharf was reached, when he switched his tail, caught the bit firmly between his teeth and started for the end where the cold, cold water played a sad dirge against the piles, to a depth of fifteen feet.

The tide was in. Pretty soon the young man was in the tide. As the refactory steed had gone a little too far to the left, and while jumping stiff legged, threw the novice off the saddle and down, down into the unsympathetic tide.

The herder, in the meantime, left the scene for Myers' bath house to procure a boat, with which to rescue his friend, who was left clinging to a friendly pile.

It was truely a fiend who came along and saw the discomfited rider up to his chin in water and asked him to "please accommodate me with a match."

THE STREET CONTRACTS.

The Council Recinds Its Action—A Meeting—An Offer.

The principal topic of conversation on the streets of Port Angeles during the last week has been the city's settlement with the Burlingame Contract company. A difference has arisen over the construction of the contract.

A DEMOCRAT reporter interviewed several of the parties who have had to do with the settlement, amongst them City Attorney Hatch, who fully explains the situation. Mr. Hatch said there are three things to be considered.

First. A lineal foot shall be the basis of all measurements, and is a section of a log twelve inches in diameter, twelve inches long.

Second. Logs larger than twelve inches in diameter shall be measured in proportion by loggers scale.

Third. The contract price 14½ cents per lineal foot.

Mr. Burlingame claims that all logs over twelve inches in diameter should be measured for cubical contents, while Mr. Hatch holds they should be in proportion—that is the price of a log twenty-four inches in diameter should be double that twelve inches in diameter, it being impossible to make a proportion or ratio between lineal measure and lumber measure.

Mr. Hatch consulted Judge Bush, of Port Townsend, and Mr. Tyler, of Seattle, who agree with him. Attorneys in this city have been consulted and they quite agree with Mr. Hatch also.

The history of the case is, in brief, the old council refused to allow Mr. Burlingame's claim and referred it to the street committee, who employed Messrs A. J. Blackwood and E. A. Fitzhenry, civil engineers, to examine the work. These gentlemen, after a thorough examination, reported against allowing the claim. The matter then came up before the new council, which referred it to its street committee, who employed Mr. Pope and Mr. Stevens, both civil engineers, and they, after a thorough examination, reported in favor of measuring as Mr. Hatch said it should be, making about $5,000 difference in the cost of the work. The city attorney appended his opinion to this approving its conclusion.

The council Tuesday amended the report to conform to Mr. Burlingame's ideas, but adjourned until last night without adopting the report. At last night's meeting the council refused to adopt the report as amended, so the matter is still unsettled.

A meeting of the tax payers was held Wednesday, which was addressed by Messrs Peterson, Lewis, Malony, Hatch, McInnes, Levy, Quinn and Bell. The sentiment of the meeting was that the claim should be settled on the plan suggested by Mr. Hatch. Mr. Maloney stated that this was what Mr Williams had intended when he made his specifications. The councilmen who are opposed to the street committees' way of thinking, say that it is their opinion that the city would lose a suit, and they would not only have to pay the whole claim in the end, but would have to pay the costs besides.

The citzens have guaranteed that a law suit shall not cost the city anything if it will stand for its rights and make Mr. Burlingame sue.

TAKEN FROM LIFE.

Mr Lovey was rather a sentimental young man, even under adverse circumstances, but—well. it would be useless to undertake a description of his emotions while influenced by what might be termed suggestive surroundings. At the particular time about which I shall tell you, his soft-heartedness drew him into a somewhat ridiculous position.

He had been spending a few weeks of his summer vacation at the home of one of his fellow students, who, unfortunately for Mr. Lovey, was blessed with two bright and charming sisters. He had encountered the elder first, and after gazing at her with undisguised admiration for a slightly embrassing space of time. he came to the conclusion that she was the lovliest young lady he had ever met, which conclusion, with Mr. Lovey, meant a dangerously near advancement to the brink of the "precipice." But then he had fallen over so many times without any serious injury that his relatives, who were interested in the question of his marriage, would probably have felt no great anxiety, even if they had been aware of his condition.

However, said relatives were safely away in New York, and he, Mr. Lovey, was in the meanwhile planning a most delightful little love drama in the cozy parlor of his friend's country home.

Now it so happened that Jack Stone had previously ioformed his sisters of the one weakness in the make-up of Mr. Lovey's charater, cautioning them not to respond to his possible lovemaking, as he was already bound by some family arrangement, and might be looked upon as an engaged man. At which Polly tossed her curls and Nannie pouted, and said it was "like his insolence." Whatever she may have meant by that, and Jack need have no fears on their account.

Every one knows it is as natural for a girl to enjoy a chance to laugh as it is to breathe. and, although by no means coquettes, Jack's sisters were no exception to the general rule. and they also planned a little drama, minus the love; so when Polly, the elder, entered the parlor on the day of Mr Lovey's arrival, she held out her hand and smiled the warmest kind of a welcome with her soft blue eyes as she murmured how glad they all were to meet dear Jack's friend. She met the laughing eyes of her sister at this point and came very near spoiling the dramatic effect by a hearty laugh, but controlled her mirth, and things went smoothly forward until teatime, where the uncertainty which was to become the bane of his visit first assailed Mr. Lovey's mind.

Miss Nannie was seated by his side at the table, and her witty remarks and lovely eyes held him spellbound until he happened to glance across at Polly, when he said to himself: "Well, first impressions are always correct, and Miss Polly is certainly the prettier." By the time a conclusion of this kind was reached Nannie would say something which made it necessary for him to give his attention to her, and the blue eyes confused him so greatly that he kardly knew what he thought.

So matters went on for nearly three weeks, and Mr. Lovey was still in perplexity as to which of the young ladies was the prettier, and consequently the more worthy to be honored with his young affections.

One beautiful evening in July the sisters entertained company. As the evening was warm as well as beautiful they had all betaken themselues to the porch, and the fates, or perhaps Polly, had so arranged matters that Mr. Lovey found himfelf delightfully situated in a snug corner sheltered by honeysuckle, through the leaves of which crept the most enchanting rays of moonlight, and with Nannie as a companion. As you already know, Mr. Lovey was a man very easily influenced by circumstances, and on this particular evening he seemed to be more affected than usual.

"Ah, Miss Nannie," he said, with the inevitable edging up of the chair, "if you only knew how enchanting you look sitting there with the moonlight playing over you, I am sure you—you would understand how a fellow—er—me, for instance, felt, and would excuse him if he made a fool of himself."

Nannie's eyes twinkled roughishly.

"What an odd remark!" she cried. "Pray tell me in what way you intend to assist nature. Mr. Lovey."

"Now th at's cruel." he returned so captivated by her saucy manner that he forgot the sting in her words. "Miss Nannie you're awfully sweet and charming and worthy of the love of the best man under heaven, but I wish you would smile a little on the worst you know. I have always thought you the lovliest girl in the world, and I—well, I love you more than——"

"Wait a moment, Mr. Lovey," she interrupted, "I don't know your worst man. You see you are all so bad that it is hard to pick out the different degrees. I——"

"Oh, Miss Nannie! You must know what I mean," he was saying, desperately, when Polly and the others invaded the quiet corner with the information that there had been a walk proposed, and the alacrity with which Nannie sprung up to join them was very trying to Mr. Lovey's nerves.

"By Jove!" he thought, I do believe she was half glad to. and I don't believe I have made an impression on her."

They all went off together, and by the time a hundred yards had been traversed Mr. Lovey found himself so fascinated by Polly's conversation and coquettish glances that he almost forgot Nannie's existance. They picked some daisies on the way, and Polly tried his fortune, talked about the moon and flattered him to such an extent that his head was quite turned. and before the walk was over loved her to distraction.

Polly first laughed, and then pretended to be much touched, and in the end left him in a cruel state of uncertainty as to the real condition of her affections.

We will refrain from an unkind curiosity as to the state of Mr. Lovey's feelings when he presently realized the fact that he had proposed to two girls in one evening, had been rejected by neither and was as good as engaged to a third. Such conduct might be considered by some people as unprincipled. As for poor Mr. Lovey, he excused himself from the company very early in the evening on a plea of a bad headache and fled to his room. For those heartless girls persisted in looking effectionately at him every time he screwed up his courage to the point of looking in their direction.

Mr. Lovey paced his floor about half the night, thinking, to use a mild expression, very unpleasant thoughts. The other half he spent at his open window, saying bad words to the moon. He was a man who rarely failed to lay the blame of an action where it belonged, and he realized that if it had not been for the face of the luminary he should have made such a fool of himself.

At last, in desperation, he wrote an object apology to each young lady; but, comprehending how rediculous it was to try and explain why he had proposed to them both, he tore it up in despair and decided wildly that he would leave the house before the family were awake and tell Jack he had received a telegram or felt the cholera coming on—anything would do. Then it occured to him that he had already declared his intention of leaving on the morning train, and there was no possible excuse for going before that time.

His heart sank at the idea of breakfast, and with good reason, for in the morning, when he appeared in the dining-room, looking pale and haggard, every one, especially the girls, expressed the greatest solicitude about his headache of the evening before, and his hostess insisted on giving him a strong cup of tea and paid him many kindly little attentions, all of which overwhelmed him with remorse.

But worse was to befall unhappy Mr. Lovey. When he went to his room to prepare for his departure he found a note on his dressing-table disclosing the young ladies cards and saying in substance that as it would be rather embarrasing for both of them to be engaged to him they had decided to decline his kind offers with the thanks they deserved.

Mr. Lovey boarded the cars, feeling so small that he felt sure nobody would see him, and he jumped as if shot when the conducter asked him for his ticket.

As for the young ladies, they have not done laughing about their hapless admirer. I am afraid, though, that the episode ended the friendship between Mr. Lovey and their brother, for he has never visited him since.—Waverly Magazine.
