ENTERPRISING FIRM.

The Geo. E. Starr to Make Weekly Trips.

VICTORIA AS A MARKET.

The Farmers' Mercantile Company, of Dungeness, Make a Contract With the Geo. E. Starr — Clallam County a Source of Supply—Other Items of Interest.

Amongst the many enterprising firms who are advancing the interests of Clallam county by finding a market for its products on the outside and bringing in money from the outside, the least is not the Farmers' Mercantile Company of Dungeness.

That enterprising firm has made arrangements to have the steamer George E. Starr call at Dungeness, for a cargo of produce every Saturday for Victoria. The first cargo, consisting of twenty-seven tons, principally potatoes, was shipped last Saturday. These weekly trips added to those already being made by the steamer Angeles, which takes a cargo from Dungeness to Victoria every Wednesday, will take from 2,000 to 3,000 bushels of potatoes, barley and oats every week.

All these classes of farm produce, besides wheat and other classes of vegetables bring a better price in the markets of Victoria than in those on this side of the national bonndary.

Clallam county is one of the few counties on Puget Sound that raises a large surplus of farm produce. For more than a quarter of a century the midling ports and cities of up-Sound have depended largely upon the farmers of this county for their supplies. This re-opening of the Victoria markets cannot fail to stimulate the agricultural class of our people, which is still a great dependence of this county. Farming is now the leading producing occupation of this county and will always be one of the leading pursuits and it is a source of gratification that the markets of the northwest are competing for our stride.

A HORRIBLE EXECUTION.

A Knife Performs the Office of the Guillotine.

March 5 was the day of the execution of a murderer in Slade, a village near Hanover. The murderer was to be guillotined. He was placed in position, but when the knife fell it failed to sever the head from the trunk, leaving his neck in a horribly mutilated condition.

The executioner then raised the knife and attempted to wrench off the head of the unfortunate man with his hands, and after long tugging and twisting, failed.

He again placed the body under the guillotine, and again the blade failed to perform its work, leaving the remains more mutilated than before. The executioner then took a knife and hacked away at the back of the murderer's neck until he succeeded in tearing the head away.

The Czar and the Nihilist.

An unsuccessful attempt was made March 6, to kill the cazina and czarovich while driving in St. Petersburg.

A bundle containing a metal receptacle filled with fluid and covered with al black cloth was thrown at the carriage, but did not explode.

Oh, to be a Millionaire.

P. D. Armour was made the recipitent of a bottle of poisoned wine. Having been warned by an employee that an attempt would be made upon his life he did not drink the wine, but proposes to have it analized.

Poor Peter and His Jag.

Peter Maher, while drunk and brooding over his recent defeat in the prize ring, attempted to throw himself from a rapidly moving train. He was prevented with great difficulty, when an opiate was administered which produced sleep.

Starvation's Stare.

In the neighborhood of Rhoedka, Austria, the greatest distress prevails for lack of food supplies. The district has 1,500 inhabitants and for the last week there has been an average of five funerals a day. The people are living on the bark of trees and bread made from straw and oats.

POLAND AND RUSSIA.

The Russian Yoke Still Galls the Polish Neck.

General Gourke, governor general of Russian Poland, informed the ministers that the people of Russian Poland were in a more unsettled and defiant state than they had been for years past and declared that unless they were speedily terrorized into submission he would not answer for the result.

General Gourke asserted that the Polish bankers in German Austria and Russian Poland had received a large augmentation of funds from Austria to be used for obvious purposes.

It is semi-officially said that the governor general of Russian Poland will almost immediately be authorized to proclaim a state of siege in Warsaw or to proclaim martial law throughout Poland, as the exigencies of the situation may demand

DISCRIMINATION.

FORKS, Wash., Feb 29, 1892.

EDITOR DEMOCRAT,

Sir: Sometime ago I noticed in THE DEMOCRAT a complaint to the effect that your town was discrimated against by certain steamboat companies. That the complaint was well grounded, no one familiar with the situation and the customs of transportation companies, could doubt.

May I use your columns to air the grievances of myself and others in the Quillayute valley?

Up to a short time ago the fare between Port Angeles and Pysht, on the Hastings Company's steamer, was $1.50, but for reasons best known to themselves they have recently raised the rate to $2.00—the same as between Angeles and Clallam—and, as that company has a monopoly, travelers have to dance to their music—be the tune agreeable or otherwise!

Upon being questioned with regard to the matter, Mr. Guy—the purser of the Hermosa—stated, that as it cost the company 25 cents to land and receive passengers at Pysht, they raised the fare to that of Clallam, where it cost them nothing.

Let us do a little figuring: At the old rate, the company netted $1.25 for every passenger between Angeles and Pysht; surely enough for a thirty mile ride!

But if they must have $1.50 net, why not charge $1.75? In addition to discriminating against Pysht, they clear an extra 25 cents each way on every passenger.

It is a well known fact that Angeles and Pysht are the only places on the run where the passenger traffic amounts to anything.

The majority of the people of this valley prefer to come and go by way of Pysht, because it is nearer and easier, and the difference in rates caused many to travel that way.

The Hermosa is compelled to stop at Pysht to transfer the Quillayute mail, people know this, and are certain of catching the steamer, unless the weather is extremely rough, there is no certainty of catching the steamer at Clallam, it sometimes stops going down, sometimes returning.

I am informed that the captain of the Hermosa had a lot in Clallam given to him recently. Might there not have been an object in giving that lot away? May there be no connection traced between its acceptance and the subsequent discrimination against Ppsht in favor of Clallam? Does it not look as if there is a "deal on?" FIAT JUSTITIA.

THE NEWS.

Edouard Franz Ludwig Kullman, who attempted to assasinate Prince Bismarck on July 13, 1874, died a few days ago in prison at Amberg, Germany.

The strike in the Wellington coal mines, which has lasted two years, has ended in victory for the owners. It has cost about $84,000 to maintain the strikers while idle.

Spokane lost a valuable cracker factory by fire, on March 4, with five tons of candy, 10,000 boxes of crackers and seven tons of flour. Sixty-five hands are thrown out of employment. The loss is $25,000, two-thirds insurance.

Sullivan will fight Mitchell, but prefers to engage Slavin, believing that he is the better man. John L. does not care for the championship, and says he is only anxious to lick any foreigner who comes to fight on American soil.

Henry Woodson, a well known actor was committed to the Flatbush insane asylum in New York. His insanity is said to have been produced by practical jokes perpetrated upon him by members of his company.

The steamer Mexico is to be placed upon the run between Sound ports and Alaska, instead of the Al-ki, which vessel will return to San Francisco, and be laid up until the Pacific Coast steamship company finds it necessary to put her on another run.

Bud Harris, a 5-year-old negro boy of Columbia N. C., murdered the 7-months old baby of a white woman. The instrument used was a piece of sharpened iron, which was repeatedly driven through the infants skull as it reposed in its cradle.

Steal or Starve.

A number of unemployed workingmen at Dantzic, enraged on account of being unable to find employment, looted several bakershops, crying that they would steal before they would starve. They also seized several butchers' carts and distributed their contents. The police dispersed the mob. The city of Berlin has appropriated 800,000 marks for the relief of the distress of the unemployed.

MINES AND MINERALS.

Resources of the Olympic Mountains.

FIELD FOR PROSPECTORS

A Vast Field for Prospecting Yet Undeveloped, and is Now Only Awaiting the Pick of the Miner to Disclose Its Countless Wealth.

It seems hardly probable that there should exist at the present day a scope of country which might be called a "forest primeval" within a distance of forty miles from a city of 4,000 inhabitants, but such is a fact, and from the few venturesome hunters and prospectors, who have disturbed its silence, some interesting and important information was imparted to a DEMOCRAT representative.

The idea of making the vast area of the Olympic mountains a national park would seem to protect that country against the ruthless invasion of man, who destroys tenfold more than is necessary for his maintainance while passing through it, is exactly the remedy which should be prescribed to protect the timber and game from useless waste, and at the same time would not interfere with the development of its mineral resources.

The law which requires a certain area of land to be cleared and slashed forces the settler to destroy an amount of timber the value of which exceeds the price he must pay for the entire 160 acres of land which he can buy from the government when he deems his improvements, or rather work of destruction sufficient to "prove up." This law compels a waste of nature's resources, and which could be disposed of to a much better advantage were this requirement removed or another substituted in its stead.

That there exists a vast mineral wealth in the Olympics, is beyond doubt, as numerous specimens of "float" have been brought into Angeles, which, had they been exhibited in any mining camp of the Rocky mountains, would have caused a first class stampede to the region from which they were taken, but here, it has caused not a ripple of excitement, because the people to whom these specimens have been shown, were not acquainted with their value.

Specimens of copper have been brought into Angeles by more than a dozen men, who wanted to know: "What kind of mineral this is," which was found in the foot hills, just south of the city. A few have found float which undoubtedly showed horn silver. These are but two instances of the precious metals which this locality have produced, and it is generally known that the baser metals exist in abundance. Iron hemitite and kidney iron are displayed in many offices, while coal is known positively to exist in inexhaustible quantities within thirty-five miles of the city.

A good quantity of mineral paint is found within ten miles of the finest harbor on the Pacific coast, all waiting for a little capital and a thorough appreciation of their merits to develop them into resources of countless wealth.

A recent discovery of an eminent scientist has shown that lignite can be manufactured into a smokeless fuel with greater heat than the best bituminous coal, at a cost not exceeding $1 per ton, and it is a generally known fact that this peninsular is underlaid with lignite.

Patience and enterprise will yet make Angeles the principal port of the coast.

HIS SON, NOT HIS NEPHEW.

A Chapter from Life—In Which Angeles People are the Actors.

Albert Goldwater, of this city, has a chapter of romance mixed with the events of his life that would deepen the interest a lover of fiction would experience in pursuing a novel.

Albert Goldwater, a few years ago, came to Angeles to make his father, whom he he had not seen for years, a short visit, being the only parent he had, his mother having died years ago. His father, in the meantime, had married again, and for some unaccountable reason had never mentioned to his second wife, who survives him, the incident of his former marriage, and as he had neglected to do so for several years, concluded that he would not, and when his son Albert visited him he was introduced to his wife as a nephew. This proceedure deeply wounded the feelings of the young man, who made a very short stay with his father, and left Angeles for San Francisco, with the determination that his father should never look upon his face again.

But a short time after he had established himself in business in San Francisco a telegram was received announcing the death of his uncle, and requesting his presence in Angeles. The message was promptly responded to, and the young man again appeared in Angeles.

It was with a great deal of mortification that he allowed his father to be alluded to continually as his uncle, and being placed in a peculiar position, determined not to establish his proper relationship with the dead man, fearing that many would imagine that his sole object in doing so, would be to make a claim against the estate. So, he determined to act the role of nephew out to the end and to continue the business his father had established, where he could care for and protect the widow and his half-sister and brothers.

Another actor appears on the scene from San Francisco, who had an intimate acquaintance with both father and son in Chicago, who by a letter addressed to another of our townsmen informing him of the true relationship existing between the deceased and his supposed nephew, and stating that his role of nephew could no longer be carried out. This caused Mr. Goldwater to make himself known to his aunt in his true position, when explanations followed, which proved satisfactory to all concerned, and Mr. Albert Goldwater, Jr., may now be regarded as the son and not the nephew of the old colonist.

Elected Trustees.

A meeting was called at the Catholic church last Sunday for the purpose of electing a board of trustees for the ensuing year.

John C. Murphy was appointed president and secretary of the meeting. The trustees were elected by a unanaimous vote of the congregation and are as follows: Charles O'Neal, W. B. Gould, James Fitzgerald, B. B. Meagher and George Fend. The board of trustees elected John Gardner its secretary.

The trustees will meet again next Sunday for the purpose of arranging the church's finances and to attend to all other business of the church.

John L. and Mitchell.

Articles of agreement for a fight between John L. Sullivan and Charli Mitchell, for a purse of $25,000, were drawn up March 5, by the Olympic club and forwarded to Sullivan in St. Paul and Mitchell in St. Louis. The fight is to take place the first week in October.

MISSING LINKS.

The latest story about Jay Gould's health is that he has the new-moneya.

Emperor William is said to drink deeply at dinner. A great many people have wondered wine thunder he talked so much.

When the census of the unemployed of Chicago is taken let the names of the clerks in the city hall head the list.

From the way Ben Butler acts we judge that he thinks he has written a Bible.

"Reading makes a full man," says Lord Bacon. "It also makes a rich man," adds John Wanamaker, who scooped in $1,250,000 by the deal.

If Senator Hill is laboring under the delusion that he is the biggest man in New York he should "size up" with the distinguished Ward McAllister and learn his mistake.

Even if the young emperor of Germany does drink the bottle dry every day, is that any reason why he should boose other people?

Trouble is always to be expected when you put the crown of an emperor on the head of a jag.

The celebrated Sam Hill, by whom many easterners swear, was not an ancestor of Senator Dave. Yet we read the Sams of David.

"Will She Divorce Him? is the name of a play at one of the Chicago theatres. If she is an actress and has been married a month or two she undoubtedly will.

It cannot be said of Dr. Keeley that he is not diligently heeding the injunction, "physician 'heel' thyself."

The president talks about the World's Fair in his message in the enthusiastic tone of a member of Congress who has visited Chicago and looked over the Fair's buildings and grounds.

Ben Butterworth will soon resign. Almost anyone else would do far butterine his place.

Its inventor claims that the whaleback ship would make a very powerful man-of-war. If it will enable us whale back the foes that may undertake to whale us, it ought certainly to be added to the navy.

Chicago dosen't care to be the capital of the country. If it should ever want Congress again it would send for it as it did last week.

Samuel o' Posen, who felt confident of acquittal, undoubtedly regards the ten jurymen, who stood out against him, as "a bad lot."

VICTORY IS OURS.

Pure and honest government, decent and respectable citizenship, morality and justice achieved a victory as worthy as complete in Seattle on Tuesday. The voters of that city, by a majority 2,000 strong, have downed the gang of unscrupulous, boodle politicians who have been looting the Queen city for years.

But the job is not yet completed. This same gang is running the State of Washington, and the people of the state must follow Seattle's noble lead. Will they do it? We think so, and that by giving a Democratic majority in November as emphatic as that given in Seattle on Tuesday.

It is as natural for those who love good government and purity in politics to turn to the Democratic party when the sins of corruptionists become unbearable, as it is for water to seek its level. The Democratic party is truly the party of reform. In nation, state and county, it is protesting against corrupt and extravagant government; protesting against the perversion of the government from its proper sphere to that of aiding a small percentage of the population to subsist on the labor and wealth creating power of the masses. It is the representative advocate of the masses in their struggle against the classes. Republicanism, with its "protective' policy, leads naturally to extravagance, and extravagance leads to boodle and boodlers.

The gang in Seattle is a logical result of such gangs as Reed's "billion-dollar congress," and the Squire-Laughton administration of this state.

The Democracy of Seattle, loving home and country with true, loyal democratic hearts, went into the city campaign to win. They recognized that they would have to fight knaves, so they were prepared for any emergency. They told the people the truth in plain language, and the result was all that could be desired. This should serve as an example for the Democrats and members of other parties who are opposed to the present state of affairs, not only in the nation and state, but in Clallam county. Let us look on Seattle and her noble victors' noble victory, and learn.

THE SUPERB LEWIS

First and foremost in the Seattle fight against the gang of Republican plunderers was Hon. James Hamilton Lewis, magnetic, brilliant, honest, bravely fighting the good fight of the working man, the tax-payer, the lover of his home and family. Well deserved and honorable are the laurels he wears. His example should serve as an inspiration to all loyal citizens. Leaving the elite east, where he was enjoying a vacation from his labors with the culture and brain of our national metropolis, for the specific purpose of assisting to redeem his beloved home from the hands of a hord of human vultures, he rushed into the fight, and with eloquent voice and persuasive tongue never tired of telling the true story of corruption turned loose upon the people. From the time the campaign commenced, through its laborous and tiresome details and until its glorious finish James Hamilton Lewis was the central figure.

So natural was it with Seattle, well acquainted as it is with the gentleman's honorable, consistant and meritorious career, to associate his name with reform that meetings where he spoke, and that was at nearly every meeting in the campaign, enthusiasm reigned supreme. Large crowds of enthusiastic citizens would surround the brilliant colonel, and a speech had to be made from a doorstep, or wherever it was possible. On the night of the election day he was loudly cheered whenever he for a moment exposed himself to the populace. "He is our next governor," became a familiar cry to everyone in Seattle.

Democrats of Washington forget not your opportunity, your duty, but nominate this deserving and able leader—the superb Lewis—for governor, this done, and victory is the peoples.

IT is conceded by prominent Democrats of Eastern Washington that Hon. M. M. Godman, of Dayton, will be the candidate for representative in Congress should the convention not nominate him for governor.

Mr. Godman was the finished debater in the last State House of Representatives, he, with Mr. Snively, of Yakima, and Mr. Sharpstein. of Walla Walla, were the recognized leaders of the Democratic minority, who made such a splendid record at the last session of the legislature.

No state could have a better Congressman than Hon. M. M. Godman will make, if the Democratic convention shows enough wisdom to nominate him.

THE Times wants all tariff discussion put off until later in the campaign. The Times is a Republican paper, and is aware that the Republicans have all to gain in having the people ignorant on that point.

IS THE Tribune really a tariff reform paper? or does it mean the notice kept standing at the head of its editorial columns from the Sheffield Daily Telegraph for a protection argument?

Two cargoes of Clallam county produce are being shipped each week to Victoria. Still the Republicans will tell us that were it not for the "protection" American farmers have against the Canadians they would starve to death on this side. This makes Clallam county farmers smile.

At the jubilee meeting in Seattle Wednesday night James Hamilton Lewis was introduced as "our next governor." He was greeted with cheers for "Governor Lewis."

---

THE Seattle election was a Democratic victory but not a victory for partisan politicians. The Democrats espoused the cause of good government, and the independent vote endorsed it.

How do the farmers of Clallam county relish paying a tariff tax on agricultural impliments, tinware. binding twine, grain bags, wire nails, baling and barbed wire? This is the tariff given the Clallam county farmer by the McKinley bill.

NEWS AND COMMENT.

Emperor William's famous Brandenburgh speech and the subsequent remark: "I will pulverize Russia" has found an echo in St. Petersburgh, which slightly changes the form of William's sound. When informed about it the czar sent him word by General Von Schweinitz as follows: "Tell your Emperor that when he wants to begin pulverizing us, we will throw half a million soldiers over his frontier with the greatest pleasure." The general communicated the message.

Sic' him Billy, and be the powers, sic' him Aleck.

Andrew Carnegie says that Mr. Blaine's letter, declining to allow his name to go before the Minneapolis convention, is final. and that Mr. Harrison will get the nomination. Mr. Carnegie also said that the McKinley bill is the best law ever devised, that it had brought down the prices of iron, steel and other things.

There is not a logger or woodsman in Washington who does not know that before the passage of the McKinley bill the best cross cut saws were purchased at $1 per foot, after the bill became a law the price of the same article wa. $1 25. This may be lowering prices, but it hardly wears that complexion to the logger.

A most revolting story comes from London's baby farming establishments, where the law allows but one child at a time to be taken to be slowly tortured to death. One child, a mere baby, when rescued from such motherly care, was shown a cruciform, and said: "Oh, I was tied that way once."

T'is a pity these are not American babies, that her grace, the duchess of Edinburgh, might revel in their misery. Will not the toading American travelers seek the favors of her grace by supplying these baby slaughter houses with a few of their own. Great favor, and may be a presentation at court, would be the result.

An eminent American authority on railroads says, regarding the probable limit of speed to be attained by trains: "There appears to be no reason why trains may not attain a speed of 100 miles an hour."

The passengers would then, undoubtedly, have to exercise great care in their selection of a comb when arranging their toilets, as a few miles of telegraph poles would prove very deceptive.

A French traveler, M. Lajard, has written a work on the whistling language of the Canary islanders, where people whistle their thoughts instead of speaking them.

How delightful street car travel must be in those islands, and what a time a reporter must have in taking notes of a Woman's Sufferage meeting. But, dudes can't smoke cigarettes and whistle at the same time, so that these great evils, coming singly, may be borne.

There is a wide spread feeling in England that orders of an aggressive nature have been sent to the British Pacific squadron, to govern their actions, in regard to the Bering sea affairs, during the coming season.

When it comes down to bluster and bluff the English press knows very well its lessons, as played upon the jingo harp, and never fail to mention another and another British Pacific squadron. Why don't our press let them know that Puget Sound is to be made as impregnable as Gibraltar, with the two guns about to be mounted somewhere on the coast? Then their jingo articles will cease to appear.

The duchess of Edinburgh suddenly refused to preside at drawing rooms this season in lieu of the queen, because presentation lists were presented to the queen and not to her. These lists also contained an objectionable feature in the shape of the names of several Americans. The duchess refusing to receive any American other than members of the diplomatic circle.

This tea-pot tempest should have the effect of subduing the idiotic desire of Americans who travel in Europe, to be presented at courts, where they are subjected to insults inflicted by people whose manners as well as intelligence would be greatly benefited by association with decency and healthy brains.

"FROM GENERAL TO CORPORAL."

The Entire Democratic Ticket Elected in Seattle.—Much Interest Manifested.

Much interest was manifested in this city over the result of the Seattle election held on Tuesday.

Tuesday night many anxious enquiries were made about the telegraph office. The first intimation of the result was a message from J. H. McGraw to John C. Murphy to the effect that the situation looked unfavorable for the Republicans.

Democratic hopes went up several degrees. Wednesday morning, the news was confirmed. Democrats felt anxious about the majority only. Just after noon the wires ticked the following message:

SEATTLE, March 9.

To JOHN W. TROY.

We have swept the enemy from General to Corporal, Our whole ticket elected. Two thousand majority.

J. HAMILTON LEWIS.

THE DEMOCRAT printed this splendid message and circulated copies through out the city.

The Democratic anxiety and feeling then gave way to rejoicing and congratulation. The noble fight for Democracy and reform had triumphed. Later news confirmed the estimate of the gallant James Hamilton Lewis. The Democrats will control the whole Seattle government from mayor to both branches of the city council. The majority will range from 1,000 to 2,000. The total vote was over 8,000.

The Railroad From the West.

The Aberdeen & Victoria Railway company, which proposes to build a line from Gray's Harbor to Port Crescent, Port Angeles, or some other point on the Straits of Juan de Fuca, and to make a connection by ferry with Victoria, B. C. has parties out looking over the proposed route. Most flattering reports have been received from the country lying between the Olympic mountains and the Pacific coast, where there is a fertile belt of country of about sixty miles width and extending the whole length of the Olympic peninsula. The timber is, of course, of great value. The mineral wealth, maybe, is as yet unknown, but there are indications of a most favorable nature. Beyond any doubt there is a fine future to be realized by this great peninsula. It would be judicious for Seattle to bestir herself so as to have a hand in the coming development of that region and to make herself the headquarters of its trade.—Seattle Telegraph.

PRINCES OF THE ORIENT.

A Reception Given by Mr. Burlingame—A Sumptuous Repast.

A verry elegant luncheon was given to the Princes of the Orient by Mr. Burlingame, at McDavit's restaurant last Tuesday evening. A sumptuous colation was served upon a long table arranged in the center of the room, around which were seated the representative young men of Angeles. Many invitations were extended by Mr. Burlingame, those who responded personally were: Mayor N. R. Smith, ex-mayor W. Brumfield, Captain Dixon, of the str. Geo. E. Starr, George W. Meagher, P. A. Meagher, Dr. E. George, Judge Louis Williams, R. A. Grimes, Horace White, A. A. Smith, S. A. Hall, B. F. Schwartz, Ed. Metcalfe, Dr. Lewis, Warren Dodge, L. R. Cole, John W. Troy, W. W. Dedman, L. H. Smith. Mr. Dedman being selected toast-master arose and proposed: "Our host Mr. Burlingame" which was responded to with a feeling that showed the high esteem in which Mr. Burlingame is held by the People of Angeles. Every one present was called upon in time for a speech, and all agreed with one accord that "Burley" is the very prince of good fellows.

Deep regret was expressed that Mr. Burlingame has found it necessary to make his home and that of his family in other places, and the wish was general that when the occasion requires Mr. Burlingame might again be called upon to make this his home, when the friendly ties, now severed by distances only, may be united.

Mr. Burlingame having settled up his business affairs in this city, will leave in a few days for Tacoma.

COUNTY FINANCES.

Some Interesting Statistics Picked up in The Treasurer's Office.

The treasurer's balance sheet for March 1st., showes $23,068.24 to be in the treasury, credited as follows:

Appreciated At Last.

The Puget Sound & Alaska Steamship Company sent an agent here this week for the purpose of securing a dock or wharfage privilege at which their steamers could tie up, intending to make regular calls at this port and giving us regular connections with Victoria. The agent not making any satisfactory arrangements here left for Portland for the purpose of confering with Phil. A. Dolan about obtaining his wharf. If satisfactory arrangements can be made, we shall see the steamers of that line calling here by April 1st.

Rather Conflicting.

Below is published a letter received from the land office at Washington, D. C., which will define the position in which parties will find themselves who have endeavored to hold a lot upon the reserve and a ranch under the homestead laws:

Department of the Interior, Mar. 2.

L. E. DOYLE, Esq., Port Angeles,

Sir—Replying to your letter of January 28, 1892, I have to state that the majority of the lots in the townsite of Port Angeles will be offered at public outcry, to the highest bidder. With regard to the requirements of the homestead laws as to residence upon land entered thereunder it may be stated generally that continuous residence upon land entered under those laws is required to be maintained, to the exclusion of a home elsewhere, up to the date of making final proof.

Respectfully,

W. M. STONE, Asst. Com.

Settled With Burlingame.

Last Tuesday the city council settled with contractor Burlingame after a stormy session lasting the whole afternoon. He was allowed $2,500 for the Front street work. He claimed $3,166 and the street committee reported $1,549 48 still due. Mr. Burlingame had put in more timber than was required by the contract.

On the First street crib and the approach to the tunnel the council allowed Mr. Burlingame $3,250. Mr. Burlingame claimed $4,924.17 and according to the street committee's figures he had already drawn $124.47 more than was due. These latter figures were made on the basis the city attorney and the ex-city attorney agree to be the correct way to figure.

Councilmen Lewis, Thompson and Peterson made a hard and tenacious fight for the side of the city against Burlingames' claims.

Owing to the Bishop of Bristol having accepted recently a cope and miter, a sentiment of intolerance has been developed at Bristol. March 3, while the dean was addressing a missionary meeting, people in the hall raised cries of "No popery" and an uproar followed, cries of: "Down with popery," and "Clear the cathedral of images" were frequently heard. The chief disturbers were finally ejected from the hall and the dean continued with his address.

GOOD SORT OF A WOMAN

She was the strangest character in town. In fact, she came nearer being two characters than any woman I ever knew.

Maria Lynch, in the morning was no more like the Maria Lynch in the afternoon than Saturday night was like Sunday. In the morning she had no hesitance about coming down-town in the most frowsy of gowns and with her hair in a mop that defied any man's ingenuity in solving the problem of how it was kept up at all, for there was no pins in sight, and the loose ends of the wisted hairs would stray all around her neck and blow in her face, as if it had no home and never expected to have. Her shoes in these hours were two mysteries. They always managed to keep their places on her feet, but why they did so no one could tell, unless it was to hide the still more disreputable stockings, that any person could see whenever he chose to look. Generally the dress was torn a bit here and there, and the white of linings, or the white of other or less discussable garments, showed through. She generally wore a sun bonnet of the limpiest and saddest pattern imaginable, and it drooped around her head in a withered fashion, quite in keeping with the other habiliments. And even her walk was a sort of shamble. She may have been afraid to lift her feet from the ground least those awful shoes should change their mind and conclude to quit her; and she may have been so punctilious of the eternal fitness of things that even in carriage should Maria Lynch in the morning be other than the frowsy thing she had always been.

But in the afternoon! look at her then. She has good clothes, and if ever a woman knew how to wear them it was Maria. Undoubtedly she was handsome. Her cheeks were as rosy and her eyes were as bright as any fairy in all the books. Her father was a good-for-nothing shoe-maker, who got gloriously drunk at the end of one working week, and remained so till the first of the next. He was such a particularly disreputable old fellow that no one wondered that she should have gotten to be like him at least half the time. When she went to church she went alone, and when she tried to enjoy any social entertainment no one was there to make things pleasant for her. And she always showed that she missed these things. She was very intelligent, and was sufficiently cultered to prove her title to a place with the best of them. But you know how it is in a little city. Every one knows all about every one else, and no one dared to give her the shelter to which all were really anxious to invite her.

Finally Jim Miller, who was head salesman in Downey's big double store, just cut loose from all restraint and went to fair Maria. It cost Jim his best girl; but he must have counted on that and been willing to make the change. And Maria was happy.

But she didn't dress up any more in the morning than she used to. She came down town for the daily marketing just as she had always done, and if Jim or any one else had influence to prevail upon her to robe herself in anything more seemly no one ever used that power. She bought goods in Downey's store, sometimes of Jim, and sometimes of the other clerks. She wasn't a bit spooney, but he was inclined to be, even in public. He used to tell her he was madly in love with her and would do any thing in the world for her, She believed him enough at least to go with him wherever he wanted to go. But the office of the mariage license clerk did not seem to be one of these places.

They brought the whole thing to a test finally. It was at the Christmas holidays and all the town seemed in good humor. The methodists had arranged to have an immense tree in their house of worship, and all the Sunday-school children were to have a treat. Grace was one of the teachers, and, was chief of the committee to receive people and take them to seats where they would be least in the way for the house would be jammed, and yet there must be some room for the children. There was a march of fairies that was the event of the evening after the tree was disposed of.

We had all been watching for this night for a long time. We didn't think Jim would dare to bring Maria right in here where all his folks were members and where Grace was just about supreme. But he did. The place was filling so very fast that all the ushers were as busy as bees, when Grace took a laughing couple to a choice place she had saved for them, and then turned back all pretty and happy and excited—and there, right in the door, stood Jim with Maria Lynch on his arm. Grace was surprised, first into looking at one and then at the other without saying a word. Then she put up her hands to her face for about a second and turned partly around. When she took her hands down she seemed to be all right, and to know just what to do. But it wasn't to escort them to their seats. It was to walk right down the aisle, without one sign to them, and to leave them standing there. But that wouldn't do. Others were coming all the time and Jim knew if he stood there just a moment he had her conquered. So he looked all around the room at the decorations, and said how handsome they were to Maria, for all the world as if he wanted to stop and stand there anyway. Grace knew that she must go and get them, but she would not be beaten by the shoemaker's girl—that slouch. She came back smiling, and bowing just as sweetly as you please, and said:

Maybe it wasn't a very Christian spirit and that on Christmas eve. but it was human nature, She could crush the girl who had taken her lover away, and no wonder she did it. But Jim was game, too. He was in for it, but he couldn't be driven away by anything like that. So he said real gentle and kind:

"But it will take two seats for us Miss Fallen."

"Oh, said Grace," I didn't see anybody with you."

It cut Maria to the quick. For all her funny ways and all her unpleasant home surroundings, she knew she was as good a girl as Grace Fallen. And we young fellows in the town knew it, too. And those of us who knew her best knew that best. She might have retorted, and if she had she would have said some things that would sound better outside than in church. But Jim, who knew what to expect if she did take it up, kept her still by moving her forward without any usher at all, and Grace fell behind and took the next party to their seats.

Every one had heard it, and poor Maria sat there all through the evening and knew that people were looking at her and chuckling. She knew lots of them were wishing she had said something to Grace, and maybe they would try to throw them together as the meeting broke up, just to see the fun when two tongues were loosened That was the most mortifying thing in all the incident. People thought she didn't care.

It was over at last, and Jim went out just as straight and as proud as if he had had rich Grace Fallen on his arm. And that one night and his treatment of the girl there, where he was strong and she was pitiably weak, did more for him in her eyes and her heart than all the rest of his attentions. It really looked as if Jim cared for her. He went on going with her, and people kept on talking about it, as if it was any of their business, till nearly spring. And then one night the climax came.

It was Sunday evening and all the people who were church-goers were there, and were just about ready to sing the last hymn when there was an alarm of fire, The first man to run out of the church door bumped up square against Jim Miller, and the two fell over each other all the way down the steps. Each recognized the other. and both asked where the fire was. No one seemed to know yet, but after a minute all the town could see that it was Downey's big store. The whole inside was full of flames long before Jim or anyone else could get there, and no one dared to try and save anything. It burned as if there was oil and turpentine on every square yard of floor in the great building. Poor old man Downey cried like a child, and begged them to get in and save the books and cash. For there was no bank in the town at the time, and all the merchants kept their own money. But no one could go in, so it had to burn. It was all they could do to keep it from taking the whole town. If the wind had been a little higher and a little more from the South, nothing could have saved the whole business portion of the place.

After it was all over, and when folks would go to old man Downey and ask him how much he had lost. he would say, "I don't know. Go ask Jim. He kept accounts of everything. I left all to him. Even Grace, my niece, has lost all she had in the world, for I had most of it in money here in the store, having just sold her farms; and the rest of it was invested in goods, and my notes to her are all burned up in the fire."

He kept getting worse all the time, and finally had to go to bed, and he was sick for a long time.

Jim Miller said he was going away. He couldn't get as good a situation in the town as he had had, and he couldn't take a poorer one. Old man Downey was ruined most likely, and would never be able to put up another such a place. So Jim would go to Cincinnati and see what he could do. Everybody in town was sorry to see him go, for he had lots of friends, but there didn't seem anything wrong in his going. Finally they began to wonder why he didn't go. He set the time over and over again, and every time he would say that something came up that kept him from starting. All at once old man Lynch came up with a reason. Jim had asked Maria to go with him and she wouldn't go.

But right on the heels of this story Jim was arrested.

There was an awful storm one night. No such a hurricane had ever gone through that country. It blew down houses, ruined trees, and swept the whole face of the country clean of all crops for more than a mile wide, and clean across the country. While it was clouding up and before anyone thought of its being much of a blow Jim

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that in compliance with an act passed by the Legislature of the State of Washington, March 20th, 1890, entitled, "An Act to establish a uniform standards of weights and measures in this state, and to provide for a state sealer and inspector of the same." The law provides that

"The county auditor of each county shall be the sealer of weights and measures of that county, and shall have the care and custody of the County Standards."

"SECTION 5. The several county sealers shall try and prove all weights and measures, scales and beams, when requested so to do, and when the same are found or made to conform to the legal standards, they shall seal and mark such weights and measures with a seal to be kept by them for that purpose."

"Sec. 6 The state and county sealers of weights and measures in this state shall charge for testing or sealing any beam or scale the sum of fifty cents: PROVIDED, That no charge shall be made for testing or sealing weights for counter, gold or apothecary scales, and for each and every weight or measure ten cents; for sealing and marking liquid and dry measures, if the same be a gallon or more, ten cents; if less than a gallon, five cents. They shall also be entitled to a reasonable compensation for making such weights and measures conform to the standards established by this act."

"Sec, 8. That any person in this state who shall, after thirty days subsequent to published notice from the county sealer of weights and measures, as provided in section four of the act, be found to be using any false or fraudulent beam, scale, weight or measure, and who shall fail or neglect, on written notice of the same from any person aggreived, or in any way cognizant thereof, to have said imperfect beam, scale, weight or measure duly inspected, and by proper authority adjusted and sealed, or who shall use the same scale, weight or measure subsequent to said notice without correction or adjustment, as provided in this act, any person so offending shall be liable to a action in law and penalty of twenty-five dollars for each and every offense, to be paid into the county fund."

"Sec. 10. In the sale of fruits, vegetables and all other articles, sold by heaped measure, one thousand two hundred and eighty-two (1,282) cubic inches shall constitute a half bushel."

Sec. 11. The hundred-weight shall consist of one hundred pounds, and twenty such hundred-weights shall constitute a ton."

"Sec. 12. Whenever any of the following articles shall be contracted for or sold or delivered, and no special contract or agreement shall be made to the contrary, the weight per bushel shall be as follows to-wit; Wheat, sixty-six pounds; oats, thirty-six pounds; barley, forty-eight pounds; buckwheat, forty-two pounds; dried apples or peaches, twenty-eight pounds; potatoes, sixty pounds; green apples or pears' forty-five pounds; flax, fifty-six pounds."

"Sec. 13. Whoever, in buying any of the articles mentioned in the preceding section shall take any greater number of pounds thereof to the bushel, or in selling any of said articles shall give any less number of pounds thereof to the bushel than is allowed by said section, with intent to gain advantage thereby, except when expressly authorized so to do by special contract or agreement to that effect, shall be liable to the party injured in double the amount of the property so wrongfully taken or not given, and ten dollars in addition thereto, to be recovered in any court or competent jurisdiction."

Now, therefore, I, B. John Baker, auditor of Clallam county, State of Washington, do hereby, in pursuance with the above act, give due notice that I am prepared to inspect and seal all weights and measures according to law, and would respectfully call the attention of all persons using weights and measures of the penalty [see section 8] for their non-compliance thereto.

IN THE COURTS.

Grindings of the Superior Court During the Week—New Cases—Probate Notes.

NEW CASES.

The following new cases have been filed since our last report:

241. Kloslerman & Co. vs. George Amorsen, on account, for groceries, etc., $326.17 and interest amounting to $13.58.

242. Daniel Pullen vs. Jesse S. Maxfield and Ephriam D. Pullen, administrators of the estate of M. D. Pullen, deceased. The defendant alleges that the deceased was indebted to him for rent, $2,250; board and nursing, $560; looking after deceased's affairs, $200; driving cattle $36; total $3,046. This claim was rejected by the administrators and the claimant sues for recovery. The defendants' attorney has filed a motion to make the complaint more definite and certain.

243. Mrs. H. S. Pullen and Danie Pullen, her husband, vs. J. S. Maxfield and Ephraim Pullen, administrators of the estate of M. D. Pullen, deceased. For claim against the estate of M. D. Pullen for money loaned, washing and goods amounting to $259.65; this claim, having been rejected by the administrators, the plaintiffs sue.

244. Florence A. Livermore vs. Nathaniel L. Livermore; divorce. The plaintiff alleges that they were married September 23, 1884; that they are still husband and wife, that one child, a boy of four years, is the only issue; that the defendent treated her cruelly and inhumanly; that defendant deserted plaintiff three years ago. Plaintiff asks for absolute divorce and possession of the child.

SUPERIOR BRIEFS.

Default has been entered in the case of Joseph McKissick vs. Ah Hong, suit on promisory note.

Albert Dahlin, of Wenomah, has made final pre-emption proof before the county clerk.

William Dodd, guardian of Burt Tillman and Walter Tillman heirs of Laura Tillman, deceased, sold lot 1, block 19, of N. R. Smith's subdivision of the townsite of Port Angeles, at public auction Monday. R. A. Grimes was the purchaser, the price being $925.

LOCAL.

Sunday school at the church after the morning service and in the Tenth street chapel at 3 p. m.

Henry Nelson, notwithstanding the reputed dull times, has erected a store building on First street.

Frank Merritt is now established in his new quarters on Front street, where excellent fresh water baths may be had.

Last Monday the Hermosa delivered two very fine horses for Silas Goodwin, who made the purchase east of the mountains.

The dry creek mill is cutting shingles, but saws no lumber. It is not known when the trouble between the bosses and men will be settled.

Rev. C. E. Chase will preach at the Congregational church at 11 a. m., at the chapel at 3 p. m., and again at the church at 8 p. m. Song service at 7:30 p. m., which all are invited to attend.

Prospectors are beginning to outfit for the hills in search of mineral. Some placer and coal prospecting is meeting with a gratifying amount of success.

J. J. Russell has a complete stock of fresh confectionaries and fruits, cigars and tobacco and and a full line of smokers' articles. Ice cream and frozen delicacies day and night.

The weather for the last few days indicates that a glorious spring is upon us. The weather is a little in advance of the usual crop of spring poetry, which, however, may be garnered a little later. There is still hope.

William Dodd, mine host at the Central hotel, of Port Townsend, paid Angeles a short visit last Monday in connection with the Tillman estate, being the guardian of Bert and Walter Tillman.

The Geo. E. Starr was delayed at Dungeness last Saturday on account of having ran aground in the harbor. The Starr went to Dungeness for a cargo of potatoes for Victoria, and reached Angeles between 12 and 1 o'clock Sunday morning.

The dollar social given by the ladies of the Congregational church last Tuesday night, proved to be a very enjoyable entertainment. The new feature of relating in rhyme the manner in which a dollar had been earned by the ladies, was very attractive and some good stanzas were read. Charades came next on the programme, after which ices and cakes were served.

The Baptists are holding a series of revival meetings at their church on the corner of Second and Oak streets. Rev. J. H. Scott, of Port Townsend is assisting Rev. M. U. Squire.

The Y. M. C. A. is becoming a popular resort for our young men.

School Superintendent A. B. Dorsey will hold a meeting at Gettysburgh today, for the purpose of changing the school district lines.

Teachers' Meeting.

The weekly meeting of the teachers of Port Angeles was called to order last Friday evening by Principal Taylor. County Superintendent Dorsey being present, made a few remarks, in the course of which he advocated the organizing of a County Teachers' Association, which should hold monthly meetings. The suggestion meet with general favor, and it was decided to make it the special subject for discussion at the meeting next Friday. The discussion of "Division of Fractions" was then opened by Mrs. Wilcox, followed by Messrs. Dorsey, Wagner and Taylor, who presented various methods. The following is the programme for the next meeting: "Advisability of Establishing a County Teachers' Association," "New Zealand," J. B B. Taylor. Questions on school subject.

Masquerade Ball.

Invitations are out announcing a grand masquerade ball to be given Thursday, March 17, in the Opera House by the Gate City band. This promises to be one of the features of the season. Nothing will be left undone to make the occasion one of enjoyment.

The members of the Gate City band have labored hard to maintain acreditable band in this city, and deserve patronage.

Friday Night Hop.

The Opera house was well filled by a throng of gay dancers last Friday evening. The intermission of two weeks had served but to increase the desire for indulgence in the dance, and this hop of the Angeles club must be justly considered to have been its most successful in point of numbers, applying the old saying "the more the merrier." Luncheon was obtained at 12 o'clock, after which the party came to an end, the participants seeking their homes.

Rev. C. E. Chase Resigns.

The entire congregation and visitors at the Congregational church last Sunday, heard with feelings of sincere regret, the pastor, Rev. C. E. Chase, read his resignation, to take effect as soon as a successor can be found to take his place. Mr. Chase stated that his reasons for giving up his charge was the ill health of his family with whom the climate did not agree.

Los Angeles, California, will probably be his future home.

Our Italian Climate.

The idea of a picnic being possible in the month of March seems rather absurd to people unacquainted with this climate. A very enjoyable affair of this kind was given last Sunday on Ennis creek, and was participated in by Dr. and Mrs. F. S. Lewis and family, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Meagher and Miss Rigley and Messrs. Humphreys and Smith.

Bank of Port Angeles makes farm loans for long and short periods.

GOOD SORT OF A WOMAN

went down to the Lynch cottage. It was very early, but he wasn't working now, so he could go calling when he liked. Several people saw him go there and several others saw him go away. And right then, when the storm was coming up at its worst, we all saw Maria run from her house and go down the street toward Downey's house, where Grace Fallen lived. We crouched along the stone wall in front of Downey's house and saw Maria try twice to go to the door, but the whirlwind threw her to the ground. We tried to get to her, but it seemed impossible for awhile, and then the wind went down for a minute, and the rain fell like a very deluge. In that torrent Maria got up and went to the door and knocked, and Grace Fallen came and opened it for her. By this time it was getting pretty dark, but it was light enough to see that Grace just screamed with hate when she saw Maria and slammed the door in her face.

Slammed the door in her face on such a night as that! Why the storm was a perfect terror. It almost swept poor Maria off her feet as she stood there. Then we got up and went to her and found she was crying as if her heart would break. She was not frightened or angry. She was just grieving. We opened the door and pushed her inside Every man's house is public property once in a while. There the two girls stood facing each other.

"Grace," said Maria, "I came to tell you that your money is not burned up at all."

"Oh! oh! where is it?" said Grace. She was as angry as a person could well be, and she hated Maria; but a rich girl's money lies pretty close to her heart. "Where is it?" she said, and she almost put her hands on Maria's wet arms.

But before the answer could come Jim Miller burst open the door and leaped into the room. He was white as a sheet and all panting from a hard run. He stopped with with his eyes fairly blazing, and looked from one girl to the other. At the start neither of them said a word, and then Maria was the first to break down. She put both of her drenched arms around his drenched neck, and laid her head down on his shoulder, and cried as if there was something terrible the matter. He stood there a moment and then turned to Grace, and I'll be shot if she didn't fall right into his arms.

That settled Maria. She quit crying on the instant. She stood up straight and handsome as any woman in that town ever stood—handsomer by far than she would have been if her clothes had not been so wet—and she told Grace to ask him where her money was. He would have hit her if it hadn't been for the rest of us when she said that. Old man Downey came into the room and he wanted to know what that was about Grace's money.

"Jim has it," said Maria.

Jim broke from Grace and ran from the room. He went splashing down the street, for the water was hardly done falling and the whole town was about deluged. "He set the store on fire himself and then ran to the church," said Maria to the old man. "He knew if he did that no one would ever suspect him.

"He has all of your money and that of Grace's tied up in envelopes, just as you left them the night before the fire. He is going to Mexico, and has been coaxing me to go all winter. But—" and here she blushed and began crying again—"but he didn't want to marry me. And when nothing else would move me, and knowing that I hated Grace for insulting me at the church that night, he told me to-day that he had all of Grace's money, and I could have the satisfaction of spending it on myself any way I wanted to, if I would only go with him. And that frightened me so that as soon as he left I came here to tell you about it so you can stop him. He is going on the 9 o'clock train, and he has it all straped on him in a belt."

"Why it's past 9 o'clock now," said the old man.

We all ran from the house and headed for the depot. There stood Jim, waiting for the train. The storm had washed out the track, and no regular train could be made for hours after that. When he saw us Jim jumped across the track and ran for the woods. But the whole town was after him and he had to give up. At last he tried to take the belt off and throw it away, but he couldn't even do that, and he was taken with evidence enough to send him to the penitentary for ten years.

He is there now, and will be for more than a year yet. And do you know that in all that time Maria Lynch has dressed herself up in the morning just the same as in afternoon, and has been the straightest woman in that town? She softened to Jim as soon as he was in trouble and stood by him all the time since he has been locked up. When he gets out they will be married, for Jim don't feel any too good for her now, and she loves him so well that she will forgive anything he ever did in his life.

The only trouble is Jim thought she would care more for her revenge than she would for honor, he was mistaken. She was so rigid in what she thought the right thing to do that she would have sent him or she would have gone herself rather than even see the girl she had hated robbed of a dollar.

And when she does get married there isn't a man or woman in the town but will wish her a Godspeed clear from the bottom of their hearts.
