RING DELIBERATIONS.

The Republicans Meet in County Convention.

DECIDED IN CAUCUS.

The Ring Caucus Decides What is to be Done and the Convention Obeys—W. R. Hoole, Chairman; G. V. Smith and Captain G. W. Hill, Delegates.

The Republicans of Clallam county have met in convention, recorded their "kicks" and dissentions, and dispursed again. In more respects than one it was a momentuous gathering. For months past a great number of the Republicans of the county have believed that there is a gang, who were not only running the affairs of the county now for their own personal use and benefit, but who proposed to corral all the offices this year for the same great purpose.

The position assumed by the Times, of this city, and the Leader, of Port Crescent, is one entertained by a great number of the Republicans of the county if the vote of 12 to 17 on nearly everything voted on in the convention is an indicator.

The convention met in the opera house at 10 o'clock Saturday, after twenty-four hours of factional caucuses, each great faction suspicious of the other, and watchful of every opportunity. Chairman Bradshaw called the meeting to order, and trouble commenced at once. A skirmish was made on admitting proxies for the purpose of preliminary organization. The "ring" strongly suspected Mr. Carrigan of having his pockets lined with them. Their suspicions turned out to be true. Mr. Carrigan was unable, however, to get his proxies in for the preliminary organization, the chairman ruling them out.

Early in the meeting it was plainly to be seen that the chairman and secretary of the central committee would leave nothing undone to "do up" the rebellious journalists, and, had it not been for an accidental vote, wherein the strength of the two sides was clearly indicated, it is possible that the proxies would not have been admitted at all.

After several motions about the preliminary organization, manner of voting etc., were put, and either carried or lost as the ring desired, the line always being strictly drawn, the convention proceeded to elect a temporary chairman. W. R. Hoole and A. A. Smith were placed in nomination. On role call the result was Hoole 18, Smith 7. H. J. Lipsett, Harry Martin and A. H. Howells were chosen temporary secretaries. The following committees were then appointed by the chair:

Credentials—George C. Hatch, H. J. Fleckinstein, B. F. Dean. Permanent organization—C. D. Ulmer, Louis Williams, G. W. Hill, A. E. Tower, J. A. Smith. Resolutions—M. J. Carrigan, G. V. Smith, E. H. Foster. Order of business — W. E. Burnside, Charles Peters, Hall Davis. The convention then adjourhed until 2 o'clock.

At once upon meeting the committees reported. The committee on credentials reported the following delegates and proxies entitled to vote:

Port Angeles Precinct No. 1—A. A. Smith, A. H. Howells, George C. Hatch,

Geraghty Precinct—William Starrett. Joseph H. Fenn.

Carver Precinct—Charles D. Ulmer, Sr., W. E. Burnside.

Edgewood Precinct— Charles Peters, M. D. Gleason.

Dungeness Precinct—H. J. Lipsett, Hall Davis.

Blyn Precinct—B. F. Dean.

Sequim Precinct—J. A. Smith, J. A. Smith proxy for W. C. Garfield.

Port Crescent—M. J. Carrigan, A. E. Tower.

Beaver Precinct—H. J. Fleckenstein, W. R. Hoole.

Gettysburg Precinct—M. J. Carrigan, proxy.

Eden Precinct—John Everett.

Forks Precinct—M. J. Carrigan, proxy.

Quillayute Precinct—R. C. Wilson, proxy.

Clallam Bay Precinct — George W. Hill.

Neah Bay Precinct—not represented.

Shuwah Precinct—M. J. Carrigan, proxy.

Pysht Precinct—H. Martin.

The resolutions endorsed the McKinley bill, the "honest, honorable and patriotic administration of President Harrison," and the "most efficient and economical (?) administration of Governor Ferry." They hope the Republicans will get the offices.

After the resolutions were ground out without a murmur of applause (the delegates were thinking more of the race for the delegateships than anything else) the convention proceeded to nominate candidates for delegates to the state convention with a dispatch which showed a thorough understanding. Ring men were at once upon their feet to nominate Captain G. W. Hill, of Clallam Bay, and Judge G. V. Smith, of this city. The antis without delay nominated M. J. Carrigan, of Port Crescent, and W. L. Church, jr., of Dungeness. The vote was, as could be clearly anticipated, as follows:

G. V. Smith	16
G. W. Hill	16
M. J. Carrigan	12
W. L. Church, jr	13

Speeches evidencing satisfaction over the result were made by delegates-elect Hill and Smith.

An effort was made to have the convention adopt the primary election law, as is in use in many of the Eastern states, but the ring said, "No," and the result was 17 to 12 in favor of the ring.

After endorsing Blaine for the presidency and instructing their delegates to "secure" a delegateship to the national convention for J. A. Smith, of Sequim, the convention went into executive session. It is said a merry time was had there. Plain language used, etc. The convention finally adjourned, all feeling that the grip of the ring on Clallam county's Republicanism was more firm than it was the day before.

SHOW YOUR IRON ORE.

Advice From Andrew Carnegie the Iron King.

WALLA WALLA, Wash., March 24—Mr. Andrew Carnegie, the well-known Iron King of Pennsylvania, who prides himself on the nick-name, "Star Spangled Scotchman;" has just paid a visit to the State of Washington. Mr. Carnegie has taken no small interest in the approaching World's Columbian Exposition. There was talk at one time of his undertaking to erect a tower at Chicago that would eclipse the famous Eiffel tower of Paris.

The press agent of the Washington World's Fair Commission took occasion to interview him in his private car, Iolanthe.

"What do you think of the Worlds' Fair? was asked.

"I am greatly interested in seeing it made the greatest success of the kind that the world has ever known. I was in favor of Chicago as the site and I am sure it will be a wonderful Exposition."

"What about your plan to build a great tower there, Mr Carnegie?"

"That plan has been given up, I promised to furnish all the steel needed for a great tower, but the Exposition authorities gave up the idea as it would look too much like an imitation of the Paris World's Fair."

"Have you any suggestions to make as to what this state should do at the World's Fair?"

"I would suggest in a general way that the state of Washington will miss her greatest opportunity if she does not make a complete show of all of her wonderful rescources. Why, I am told you have a wealth of iron ore here. That is exactly what the West needs and you should most certainly let the world know that you have good iron here. I have seen your coke and it is magnificent. You have the making of great industries here and you should by all means let the world know it.

"I never saw such hops as those exhibited at the Seattle Chamber of Commerce. They will surprise the visitors at the fair if you show them there in their glory. Then just look at these great logs," looking out of the car window at a passing train of logs, "what untold rescources you have there! And your fish and ores and grain and fruits and all! Why Washington should make a great exhibit that would continue to bring the state benefits long after the Exposition has closed its doors. Yes, my friend, Washington could and should make one of the greatest exhibits at the Exposition, and I am glad to know she has gone at it so earnestly and energetically."

Hon. N. H. Owings, State Senator, from Thurston county, has just returned from an extended visit in New England.

"I tell you it is a blessed good thing" said he the other day "that Washington is going to make a good showing at the World's Fair. While in Boston I took occasion to talk my best for Washington all the time. I especially talked in favor of the Nicaraguan canal and showed what immense benefits would accrue to their own industries as well as to our state and the Pacific Coast generally.

" 'It's no use', said a friend one day, 'these people won't believe all you tell them. Why I came home from Puget Sound not long ago, and, though I enjoyed a reputation for honesty and conservatism before I went away, they are all too prone to think I am romancing when I tell of the wonders I saw out West. Now I tell you what you should do. These people can't go out to Washington, but many of them are going to visit the World's Fair. They will meet you half way. You should bring all of the state that you can spare for exhibition at the fair. They will believe when they can see.'

"This strikes me as the most sensible proposition about our state that I heard from any of those very conservative New Englanders. I hope the Washington World's Fair Commission will carry out my Boston friend's advice as nearly to the letter as possible."

COAL! COAL!! COAL!!!

An Important Discovery On Seibert's Creek.

A COMPANY ORGANIZED.

Hard, Clean Coal Found Within Eight Miles of Port Angeles and in a Locality Most Accessable—Better Than a Railroad—Other Items of Interest.

The question of large coal deposits in the immediate vicinity of Port Angeles is now no longer a subject of doubt, as recent prospecting has shown conclusively that coal exists here, Mr. Dune accompanied by several other prospectors, for the last ten days has been engaged in investigating a small coal lead, situated on Seibert creek about eight miles from Angeles, and two miles from the beach.

The cropping was first discovered by Mr. Dune, and upon seeking advise from coal miners, it was thought advisable to spend a little time and money in developing the find.

The party returned to Angeles and after purchasing a small outfit established a camp in the gulch and went to work. The vein at the surface was scarcely an inch thick, but as the shaft decended the vein steadily increased in size. At eight feet it had increased to three inches, but, having struck a small vein of water it became necessary to put in a pump, so, for the present work will be suspended. Specimens of this lead which the gentleman brought into town, show it to be a fine quality of hard coal, very clean, and perfectly free from sulphur. A test made upon a forge shows the coal to be full of gas, which, when consumed, left a fine piece of coke.

A lease has been obtained from the owner of the land for a long term o years, and a company was formed Monday for the purpose of developing the lead.

Negotiations are now pending for a drill, as the gentlemen consider this manner the surest and at the same time the least expensive way of opening the mine. The drill will bore a four inch hole, and cuts a core so that every inch of the formation may be examined with accuracy.

The vein dips from northeast to southwest, the drill will be set up at a distance sufficient from the cropping to enable the prospectors to cut the deposit at a depth of several hundred feet.

A diamond drill will appear upon the scene next week when work will be resumed and prosecuted with all possible dispatch.

AT THE CAPITOL.

WASHINGTON, March 24, 1892.

Mr. Harrison certainly has not favorably impressed the majority of the Republican senators by his manipulation of the Bering sea matter in such a way as to create a war by whatever effect it may have had in other quarters.

Mr. Sherman, who is chairman of the Senate committee on foreign affairs, expressed his opinion in a very few words by saying: "A war, or even a contention between the United States and Great Britain for a cause so trivial as one year's fishing for seals, would be a crime against civilization." A prominent Republican, who is a warm personal friend of Secretary Blaine, said to-day that this whole affair had been directed by Mr. Harrison without the knowledge of Mr Blaine, who was for nearly a week too sick to attend to any business, and that when Mr. Blaine learned what had been done his first impulse was to take advantage of his illness, make that an excuse, and tender his resignation to take effect at once. He was persuaded to change his mind, but it is not at all certain that he will consent to remain in the cabinet. He is going South as soon as he can travel, and the date for his return is very uncertain. Naval officials are dropping mysterious hints about sending a naval force strong enough to fight to stop the poaching in Bering sea, but nobody here believes that there will be any fighting, or any occasion for fighting.

The Democrats of the House held a caucus Saturday night and authorized a committee to select the House members of the Congressional campaign committee for this year. Representative McCreary, of Kentucky, will probably be the chairman of the committee, which will begin work at once.

The United States government has profited directly to the extent of $4,000,000 by its dealings with the inventors of the country, that being the amount of of the surplus earnings of the patent office now lying idle in the United States Treasury, to say nothing of the indirect benefit the country has received by reason of the inventions upon which it has granted patents. This makes it seem all the harder that on the account of the failure of Congress to authorize the expenditure of a portion of the surplus earnings of the patent office, to provide necessary room, the commissioner of patents has been compelled to stop furnishing copies of patents issued. This is a hardship, not only to inventors, but to manufactures, owners of patents, and other business men who for one reason or another often find it important to have copies of certain patents.

Great business pressure is being brought to bear on the House committee on rivers and harbors, in favor of the proposed ship channel connecting the great lakes, and more than one hundred representatives, from northern, central and western states have signed a letter addressed to the committee, strongly endorsing the scheme, and asking that it be provided for in the river and harbor bill shortly to be reported to the House.

The House committee on territories will take a formal vote on the bill for the admission of New Mexico, on Wednesday of this week. It will be favorably reported, and it is believed that it will certainly pass the House, but the indications are that it will be "hung up" in the Senate.

Senator Hill's southern trip appears to be giving the Republicans a lot of trouble. He goes in response to warm and pressing invitations, and his certain to meet a welcome worthy of his distinguished services for, and his prominent position in the Democratic party.

So many members of the House wish to make speeches on the free wool bill, now before the House, that it will be necessary to hold night sessions this week in order to give even a few of them a chance to have their say before the vote is taken, next Monday. The present arrangement is to have the debate closed by ex-Speaker Reed, for the Republicans, and Speaker Crisp, for the Democrats.

Two things will occur on Tuesday, March 22, in which Democrats everywhere are deeply interested. At Washington the House will take up the Bland free coinage bill, and Austin, Texas, the legislature in special session will begin ballotting for a senator. There are three candidates here: Senator Chilton, who holds the position by gubernatorial appointment; Representatives Mills, and Culbertson, who declined the position of Interstate Commerce Commissioner to which ex-Representative Clements, of Georgia, has since been nominated, because of his desiring to enter the senatorial contest, and it is greatly to their credit that all three of them propose remaining here and attending to their congressional duties while the contest is being decided.

Representative Springer is slowly recovering, but his physicians do not hold out much hope of his being able to take any further part in the work this session.

The bill for the admission of Arizona will be favorably reported this week, and it will in due time be passed by the House.

SENATOR MILLS.

Texas has done well in electing Roger Q. Mills, the giant leader of tariff reform, to the United States Senate. This will be another great acquisition to the Senate, which is fast regaining its old-time fame as the greatest intellectual legislative assembly of the world.

Since the days when such statesmen as Thurman, Hendricks, Conkling, Pendleton, Blaine, Garland, Morton, Bayard and Logan, made the Senate chamber of the capitol the seat for the great battles of problems of state, the Senate had retrograded. until it apparently represented rather the wealth and capital of the country than the brain and intellect. But the recent election of such statesmen as Carlisle, Palmer, Vilas, Hill and Mills (all Democrats) to that body is a sign of the political times. It indicates that the people are again beginning to realize that a political condition exists that requires the trained minds of the giants to decide. It is a forerunner of a great contest. The movement arising, as it does, with the Democrats, shows that the Democracy is in earnest in its battles for reform.

The Democratic party of Texas is deserving of credit for thus calling upon the great. hearty, brainy reformer to go up higher. Senator Mills is, indeed, a fit man to sit in a body made famous by Jackson, Clay, Calhoun, Webster, Benton Douglas, Buchanan and Sumner.

FOR LEWIS.

Mayor James T. Ronald, of Seattle has announced himself as favoring the nomination of James Hamilton Lewis for governor. Mr. Ronald is a lawyer, who has met Colonel Lewis at the bar and in social life, as well as in politics. Mr. Ronald knows the brilliant Colonel if anyone in the state does. This hearty endorsement certainly means a great deal. James Hamilton Lewis will probably get the King county delegation to the Olympia convention. If he does, his nomination is assured.

This all looks well for the Democracy. Colonel Lewis will make a campaign that will succeed. All indications point unmistakably to the fact that Washington will soon be with Massachusetts, Michigan and Iowa—Republican states redeemed by the wisdom, patriotism and purity of the Democratic party.

THE RING CONVENTION.

Saturdays convention was characteristic of later day Republicanism. As usual there was the ring element and an anti-ring element. The antis were, however, stronger relatively than is usually the case in Republican conventions nowadays in these parts. Customary to precedent the ring element controlled the convention, that too in a manner that left no mistaking its meaning. Not a crumb was left the anti-ring faction for a comforter.

Combinations and trades had to be made, it is true. but that is always in order with rings. They expect it.

A prominent Republican said caucuses were held in the back offices, in the saloons and in the closets for twenty-four hours prior to the meeting of the delegates. However, it is true that when the convention met everything was conducted with an air of foregone decision. Everything had been arranged. The minority was not in it. A lesson was to be read Editors Smith and Carrigan. The latter made a good fight, but early realized that their cause was hopeless.

There was no use, the ring has control of the Republican party. They may nominate men who have not been prominently identified with the war of the factions for the county offices this fall, as the Seattle Republicans did, but the ring will nominate them whoever they are, and, as always, it will expect them to serve it as faithfully as the present county officers are doing. The only way for the tax payers of Clallam county to down this ring, and redeem the county from the extravagant, wasteful and corrupt rule of the Republican ring, is to act and vote with the Democratic party, as was done by the people of Seattle.

AN ADVERTISER.

Many and unique are the ways of advertisers in these times. George Francis Train attracts attention to himself by making flying tours around our little globe. Mrs. Frank Leslie sounds her fame abroad by talking about her hubby Willie Wilde, but the climax is apparently reached by our own Senator John B. Allen, who poses as a political prophet and predicts the outcome of the Democratic National Convention. He sees that astute and cunning politician, Senator Hill appear before the Democratic convention and with great galore announce "I am a Democrat, nominate Grover." He sees further, in Grover's private chamber he sees that grand and popular statesman with a quill dipped in his own patriotic blood putting a promise on parchment to turn the whole patronage of his administration over to the New York senator, for this act of courtesy.

O, ridiculous senator—to attempt to make an intelligent American citizen to think you sincere. Honest Grover Cleveland is too well known for any of that.

Adopt some other method John B., or you will never be re-elected, if to save your life.

THE Democratic city government took up the lines of duty at Seattle on Monday. Mayor Ronald's message was characteristic of the man. and in keeping with the Democratic platform. Seattle can. indeed, be congratulated.

THE Clallam county Republicans endorsed the "economical" administration of Governor Ferry. Who thought the Republican state administration would be accused of economy?

Accuse Washington with disloyalty, Jackson with hypocracy, Cleveland with dishonesty if you will, but Ferry with economy, never; your sincerity will be doubted.

WHILE the Republicans were endorsing the "economy" of our state administration, why did they not include the economy of Reed's "billion dollar congress" and the ring board of county commissioners of this county.

THE ring convention endorsed every administration in sight but their own private administration of Clallam County. Why was this? They had it in their power to endorse it. They controlled the convention. Do they wish to hoodwink the people into forgetting about the manner they have been running county affairs for a year and a half?

THE Detroit Tribune says Senator Hill has said that he will not be a candidate for the nominotion, as he is afraid he could not get elected.

He favors Senator Palmer of Illinois, says the same authority.

THE New York World thinks it would be a happy termination of affairs if the New York delegation should turn its strength over to Governor Horace Boies, of Iowa, if it finds that the convention cannot unite on a New York candidate. Mr Boies is an ex-New Yorker, and a man whose ideas strike the World very favorably.

NEW JERSEY and North Dakota will send Cleveland delegations to the National Convention.

Bank of Port Angeles makes loans to settlers to prove up with.

NEWS AND COMMENT.

Representative Wilson (our John) introduced a bill to give the consent of congress to the renioval by the legislature of Washington of the restriction of the power of alienation of their land by the Puyallup Indians.

Hears of John's bill and thinks him full of prunes,
And John engrossed in senatorial chat,
Forgets our park while talking through his hat.

Mrs. James Coleman Drayton, nee Augusta Astor, third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Astor, has furnished her sets on both sides of the Atlantic with a delicate bit of scandal, in which Hallett Aisop Borrowe plays an important part.

It is strange how perfectly English, you know, some Americans can become in a short time. We now entertain hopes that a Prince of Wales may be developed among us at no very distant day.

When a contemporary refers to the Post Intelligencer as "the leading paper of this state" before he applies this compliment he should first learn which way the pilgrim is going. If wrong, it certainly leads. If right, it will not even start the traveler in that direction.

Oil and water possess the same chemical affinity that may be found to exist between the "rag" and accuracy.

Mr. Peffer, the Alliance senator from Kansas, discovered that the nation's capital and General Pope's army was saved from distruction during July and August 1862, by Sergeant Harter of the First Indiana cavalry, for which service he proposed that Congress should vote the hero $10,000 and a gold medal.

This is a fair warning to the Alliance followers, that they had better stick to Democracy, as with such leadership, they may have the appropriations of another "billion dollar Congress" to pay. This is a bad beginning, but may end well if the "Sockless Jerry" will raise the price of pumpkins.

A communication was received by the Senate from the president, with information to purchase the unpublished correspondence and manuscript of President Monroe.

'Tis well that the head of our government has taken this step and now let the doctrines of Monroe, when once made public, be taught at Vassar, so that all the girls may become intimately acquainted with that statesman's ideas of crowned heads, nobility, etc., and it may be that the crops of rich American girls as garnered by noble runts and skalawags in the future may prove failures.

Mr. Enloe, of Tennesee, offered a resolution, which was adopted, calling upon the secretary of the treasury for a list of all persons employed in the coast and geodetic survey, whose salaries were increased or decreased during 1891, also for a list of persons discharged or who resigned during that year. Mr. Enloe said that he had information from a discharged employee, that the coast survey is in the hands of a ring.

It would be well for someone else to emulate the example of Mr. Enloe and make a call for other lists, which would, without doubt, confirm the general impression that the whole Harrison administration is encompassd round about by ring, which, in a word may be called, Wall street. Is there not another Mr. Enloe craving distinction?

Endorses Lewis.

Mayor-elect Ronald declares that he is not a candidate for any office. "If there is an attempt to force me further," he says, flatly, "I shall not budge." But he adds: "For governor, I think James Hamilton Lewis is the most available candidate, and so I am for him." No one can accuse the mayor-elect of ingratitude. Now we know why the shining silk hat and Fourth of July oratory of Col. Lewis was a most conspicious feature of the Ronald meetings.—Press Times.

No Enemies.

The Skagit Couny Times, thus refers to Col. James Hamilton Lewis: In "debates his argument is like a two-edged sword, cutting right and left and leaving no point undefended. For his ability as a lawyer he has the respect of the bar, and no man in public life in the state of Washington has so few enemies among men as has James Hamilton Lewis."

A Purchase.

H. J. Lipsett, of Dungeness, purchased four fine horses from H. J. Fieldsen yesterday, giving therefor $1,000. The sale was made through Thomas Malony, who disposed with Angeles real estate to the amount of the $1,000 transaction. The teams will be used by the Dungeness Mill & Lumber company at that place. These are some of the best horses in the county.

We Must Irrigate.

At the irrigation convention held in Las Vegas, New Mexico, March 8, a resolution was presented to the effect that the convention was in favor of granting all lands and water rights belonging to the United States lying west of the 99th standard meridian of longitude west, and located in the states of Nebraska, Nevada, South Dakota, North Dakota, Montana, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Colorado, Kansas and California, and in the territories of New Mexico, Oklahoma, Arizona and Utah severally, with complete jurisdiction thereof, to each of the states and territories, with the proviso that each state and territory shall proceed immediately after the passage of the act to divide its irrigation lands into districts and engage in the actual work of reclaiming said lands by canals, reservoirs and all other necessary irrigation work. The resolution was referred to a committee.

The Port Townsend Southern.

The unfavorable news relative to the Port Townsend railroad published late last week, met a prompt denial from C. J. Smith. Mr. Smith asserts that he did not go East to sell bonds at all, but that the company had sold $11,000,000 of the $15,000,000 issue, and did not wish to sell the balance until the bond market improved. The general impression is that the Port Townsend Southern will be built this summer. If this is correct the Port Angeles Southern will be built to connect with it by December next.

PROGRESSIVE WHIST.

A Pleasant Entertainment and Delighted Guests.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Spears gave a progressive whist party at their home on Second street near Eunice. Wednesday evening, which proved to be a most enjoyable affair.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Spears, Misses Love, Davis, Ferguson, Shields, Stewart, Lewis, Grant and Shearer; Messrs. Keller, Stewart, Cole, Dedman, Grimes, Mason, White and Troy.

Four tables were conveniently arranged, partners having been drawn for. when the games started at the tap of a bell, The winners were allowed to remain at a table while the defeated moved down the line and on to the next table. This change occurred after each hand. The loser giving the winner one bean for each trick over a book.

Miss Stewart and Mr. Mason were declared champions, and received the prize of a handsome deck of cards. Miss Love and Mr. Dedman won out first, but the wrong way. It was rumored, their sack of beans was not so well filled, as were those of the other players, when the game commenced, and certainly it was seven worse off than empty when the game was ended.

An elegant luncheon was served at 12 o'clock, after which an hour was passed in pleasant conversation when the guests took their leave.

The suggestion meet with general favor, and it was decided to make it the special subject for discussion at the meeting next Friday. The discussion of "Division of Fractions" was then opened by Mrs. Wilcox, followed by Messrs. Dorsey, Wagner and Taylor, who presented various methods. The following is the programme for the next meeting: "Advisability of Establishing a County Teachers' Association," "New Zealand," J. B B. Taylor. Questions on school subject.

GOOD SORT OF A WOMAN

went down to the Lynch cottage. It was very early, but he wasn't working now, so he could go calling when he liked. Several people saw him go there and several others saw him go away. And right then, when the storm was coming up at its worst, we all saw Maria run from her house and go down the street toward Downey's house, where Grace Fallen lived. We crouched along the stone wall in front of Downey's house and saw Maria try twice to go to the door, but the whirlwind threw her to the ground. We tried to get to her, but it seemed impossible for awhile, and then the wind went down for a minute, and the rain fell like a very deluge. In that torrent Maria got up and went to the door and knocked, and Grace Fallen came and opened it for her. By this time it was getting pretty dark, but it was light enough to see that Grace just screamed with hate when she saw Maria and slammed the door in her face.

Slammed the door in her face on such a night as that! Why the storm was a perfect terror. It almost swept poor Maria off her feet as she stood there. Then we got up and went to her and found she was crying as if her heart would break. She was not frightened or angry. She was just grieving. We opened the door and pushed her inside Every man's house is public property once in a while. There the two girls stood facing each other.

"Grace," said Maria, "I came to tell you that your money is not burned up at all."

"Oh! oh! where is it?" said Grace. She was as angry as a person could well be, and she hated Maria; but a rich girl's money lies pretty close to her heart. "Where is it?" she said, and she almost put her hands on Maria's wet arms.

But before the answer could come Jim Miller burst open the door and leaped into the room. He was white as a sheet and all panting from a hard run. He stopped with with his eyes fairly blazing, and looked from one girl to the other. At the start neither of them said a word. and then Maria was the first to break down. She put both of her drenched arms around his drenched neck, and laid her head down on his shoulder, and cried as if there was something terrible the matter. He stood there a moment and then turned to Grace, and I'll be shot if she didn't fall right into his arms.

That settled Maria. She quit crying on the instant. She stood up straight and handsome as any woman in that town ever stood—handsomer by far than she would have been if her clothes had not been so wet—and she told Grace to ask him where her money was. He would have hit her if it hadn't been for the rest of us when she said that. Old man Downey came into the room and he wanted to know what that was about Grace's money.

"Jim has it," said Maria.

Jim broke from Grace and ran from the room. He went splashing down the street, for the water was hardly done falling and the whole town was about deluged. "He set the store on fire himself and then ran to the church," said Maria to the old man. "He knew if he did that no one would ever suspect him.

"He has all of your money and that of Grace's tied up in envelopes, just as you left them the night before the fire. He is going to Mexico, and has been coaxing me to go all winter. But—" and here she blushed and began crying again—"but he didn't want to marry me. And when nothing else would move me, and knowing that I hated Grace for insulting me at the church that night, he told me to-day that he had all of Grace's money, and I could have the satisfaction of spending it on myself any way I wanted to, if I would only go with him. And that frightened me so that as soon as he left I came here to tell you about it so you can stop him. He is going on the 9 o'clock train, and he has it all straped on him in a belt."

"Why it's past 9 o'clock now," said the old man.

We all ran from the house and headed for the depot. There stood Jim, waiting for the train. The storm had washed out the track, and no regular train could be made for hours after that. When he saw us Jim jumped across the track and ran for the woods. But the whole town was after him and he had to give up. At last he tried to take the belt off and throw it away, but he couldn't even do that, and he was taken with evidence enough to send him to the penitentary for ten years.

He is there now, and will be for more than a year yet. And do you know that in all that time Maria Lynch has dressed herself up in the morning just the same as in afternoon, and has been the straightest woman in that town? She softened to Jim as soon as he was in trouble and stood by him all the time since he has been locked up. When he gets out they will be married, for Jim don't feel any too good for her now, and she loves him so well that she will forgive anything he ever did in his life.

The only trouble is Jim thought she would care more for her revenge than she would for honor, he was mistaken. She was so rigid in what she thought the right thing to do that she would have sent him or she would have gone herself rather than even see the girl she had hated robbed of a dollar.

And when she does get married there isn't a man or woman in the town but will wish her a Godspeed clear from the bottom of their hearts.

A PRISONER OF WAR.

A Long March Ended in Castle Thunder and Libby Prison.

The 18th day of March was ushered in by a glorious flood of golden sunshine, and 'though we were foot sore, we again resumed the march to Richmond. In this, we were bouyed up by the hope of the faithful fulfillment of a promise that as soon as we should reach the Richmond & Danville railroad we would be permitted to take the cars. That same evening the railroad was reached, crossed, and left several miles behind, and our hopes were left by the side of the track as we were hurried on by the guards.

About 11 o'clock we came upon a camp of rebels 2,000 strong, who were very gentlemanly and kind in their treatment of us, and, as the fullest intercourse was permitted between the soldiers and men, I managed to purchase a shirt from a Johnnie, for which I paid $2, and immediately put my purchase on as it was an article for which I stood in need, my old one being in a most delapidated condition and also was alive with "graybacks," who were accustomted to hold high carnivals and run races up and down my back.

In this camp I witnessed a sight, which was well calculated to cause every patriotic face to blush with shame, for a portion of the Union army, who had been made prisoners and had just taken the oath of allegience to the Confederacy, and had joined the rebels.

They came on a run down upon the camp yelling and swearing and demanded that the yankees prisoners be turned loose that they might make targets of us, and after heaping all manners abuse upon us, called us Lincoln scabs.

The southern soldiers very quickly ordered them back to their quarters, remarking that: "Those galvanized Yankees were not to be trusted," and that they were only kept on the reserve force.

After noon we took up the march again and had proceeded about two miles when we came upon a force of colored men and women working on the road, who were being ordered around like so many brutes by an overseer, who was armed with a long goad pole. I could see the women crying with blood running down their arms and slowly dropping off at the ends of their fingers from wounds inflicted with the goad. This overseer was armed with two large revolvers, and a knife and wore a broad brimmed hat. When he saw the darkies looking at us he immediately ordered them to look the other way, and began cursing us, which he continued to do until we were out of sight.

We reached another railroad that night and went into camp with the promise of a train at 11 o'clock, but no train stopped for us though many passed.

The next morning we were turned over to a new set of guards, who proved to be regulars. Upon leaving, the old guards shook hands with us and hoped that we would not fare badly, and the colonel warned the new men against ill treating us, saying, that we were not a bad lot of Yankees to deal with, and also told them that neither the prisoners or his own men had half enough to eat.

We made about ten miles and went into camp drawing rations of corn-bread and meat, which might have been horse or mule, being more hungry than particular I did not delay long in trying to solve the problem, but cooked it as well as I could over a fire and made a fair supper.

Under our present guards we were not allowed to hold any conversation with them or among ourselves, and were made to march two by two, and were at all times under the strictest orders.

We were nearing Richmond and were crowded to the utmost that we might reach the confederate capitol on the evening of the 22d. All day we were forced to keep perfect step that we might make a grand show while passing through Richmond. The city was at last reached, tired nearly unto exhaustion we were put into Castle-Thunder where we passed our first night. Our quarters were cold and damp, and but little sleep was indulged in. The next morning we were removed to Libby prison, a three story brick building which had been a tobacco barn.

On the second day of our confinement in Libby prison we were visited by three officers, who had us stripped and searched and treated us with the greatest cruelty.

We remained there until March 30, when we were parolled and returned to our own lines, where we were placed in the hospital and given the most nourishing food.

In a few weeks we were again sent to the front and found a musket upon our shoulders.

F. LA BOUNTY,
Ninth Michigan Cavalry.

A little colored boy was recently found sitting on the steps of a fashionable house crying pitifully.

"What's the matter wid you," asked a colored woman.

"Matter nuff, double trouble all ober the house. Fader am drunk; mudder hab gone home wid close; sis broke de looking-glass wid de broomstick; de baby don gon got his eyes full of kyan pepper, and little Ned Anthony put mustard on his hair for goose grease. I put salt in my tea for white sugar and it makes me seasick. De dog licked Ned's face and got his mouth full of mustard, and he's under the bed howlin." De kitten got her head in the milk pitcher, and I had to cut her head off to save the pitcher, and den I had to break the pitcher to git her head out, and de way I'll git licked when mudder comes home fur settin' the bed afire will be a sin. Oh—oh—oh!"—Werner's Voice Magazine.

May Have Been Once.

There is a bright little girl in port who has a mind of her own. She is so independent, in fact, that she didn't seem to relish being reminded by visitors day in and day out how much she "looked like her mother."

"Mamma," she said one night very decidely after having stated her grevance just before going to bed. "I don't like it!"

"Don't like it, my child? Why not?"

"Because you are not pretty!" This rather blunt assertion dumfounded the mother—who, by the way is regarded as a fine-looking woman. The little one noted the change in her mothers face and at once regreting her frank assertion assayed to modify her assertion by declaring:

"Well, mamma, you are not pretty now—but you may have been once!"

A Simple Question.

The troupe had gone to pieces in Livingston, Nev., on Tuesday, and on Thursday the first walking gentleman stopped at a house close to the railroad track.

"Good morning, madam" he said pleasantly to the woman in in the front yard. "Can you tell me how far it is to New York?"

It almost took her off her feet.

Twenty-seven hundred and eighty-three miles," she gasped.

"Thank you." he said politely, and walked on with an air that was bracing enough to kill a grip microbe.

There was but one man on the car, and he was seated. The aisle was crowded with woman standing. The conductor rang the bell.

"Get up!" cried the driver, addressing the horses.

"I won't do it!" yelled the man. I've paid my fare and I'm going to keep my seat."—Harper's Bazar.

Life In Zenith City.

The following extracts clipped from the last issue of the Zenith City (Oklahoma) Torch of liberty, accurately portrays the amenities of life in that embry metropolis:

"We hereby publicly apologize to Mrs. McKerchin, the eminent temperance advocate, for referring to her in the last issue of the Torch as the Amazon of Oklahoma. We had forgotton for the moment that the Amazon has a mouth 150 miles wide.

A Brave Woman.

At the corner of Fifteenth street and New York avenue yesterday a man released a cage of rats to be killed by dogs. One of the rats ran under the skirts of a lady standing on the corner and disappeared. Instead of fainting or screaming she slightly raised her garments and gently shook the rat to the ground, after which she calmly boarded a car. The rat was killed. The incident was witnessed by an interesting crowd.—Washington Post.

Ignance Pederewski gave three piano recitations last week, and in order to accomodate the ladies two of them occured in the afternoon. The manner in which some of the fair sex were impressed by his performance is best indicated by the appending criticisms that were heard at the matinees:

"I know how he makes his hair stand out in front like that. He powders it."

"Perhaps he crimps it,"

"Oh, no! for if he did it would be more curly."

"Isn't, he romantic?"

"Yes; and he never smiles."

"They say he is a widower."

"Oh how nice! I wish I could meet him."

"Did you notice his artistic necktie and how one end dangled out in front of his coat?"

"I heard that he drinks nothing but soda water and eats nothing but lemons and that he never sleeps."

Such is the appreciation of a great artist.

OSTRICH FARMING.

South Africa Exported $50,000,000 Worth of Plumes in Thirty Years.

Ostrich farming is one of the important industries of South Africa, which, as yet, furnishes the bulk of the ostrich plumes for the markets of the world. There are probably 200,000 domesticated ostriches in Cape Colony, says the American Agriculturist. Each bird is supposed to net its owner $40 per annum. The inclosures in which they are kept is usually built of stone, but where stone is not abundent wire fences have been used with equal success.

The birds are commonly plucked once every eight months, yielding one pound of feathers each, but many farmers only pluck sixty feathers at a time, so as not to cause too much irritation and resulting inflammation, which is very injurious to the next crop of feathers. The birds, in these large fields find plenty of food, rarely having to be fed with mealies, beans, lucerne or other cultivated food products.

The number of eggs varies from eighteen to twenty-four, the male bird usally excavating the nest in some sandy spot, but both birds assisting in the incubation, taking turn about. But it is during this period that the plumes are at their best, and many of them are utterly spoiled for commercial purposes. Of late years artificial incubators have been restored to with perfect success, for it has been found that fewer eggs have spoiled by this method, and that the young thus hatched are no less vigorous than those brought up by the birds themselves. The value of feathers exported from Cape Colony during the past thirty years is estimated at over $50,000,000, the total weight being about 1,200 tons.

Couldn't Board Him Free.

Young man lodger—Will you marry me?

Landlady—let me see. You have boarded with me four years. You have paid promptly. You have never grumbled at your food. No; I cannot marry you."

"Perhaps if I had acted like Duffer, and abused the coffee, grumbled at the scarcity of butter, always a month behind in pay, you would have married me."

"Yes perhaps I would. As it is, I will marry Duffer.'

"What!"

"Yes, I will marry Duffer. He needs some discipline. You are too good a boarder to be put on the free list.—Tid-Bits.
