The Clallam Bay Democratic Club Organized.

AN ENTERPRISING TOWN

A City Built in Six Months—The Democrats Organize a Club—Able Speeches by Judge Lane and Others—Fiffty-One Members.

Clallam Bay has a good, healthy, active and energetic Democratic club, composed of good, healthy, active and energetic men. Clallam Bay, is, in fact, a good, healthy and energetic Democratic town. This is shown in her progress, in the countenances and voices of her people, in fact, everything in and about Clallam Bay shows her true blue Democracy. Her people are up and doing. They believe in progress and justice. They are reformers. To see the town proves this. Where six months ago stood the vergin forest that could be penetrated by the experienced woodsman, only, today stand sawmills, docks, hotels, stores, professional offices, newspaper offices, barber-shops, telegraph offices and residences.

The stillness that six months ago was disturbed by marauding beasts of the forrest and the chirping fowl of the air, is no more. In its stead can be heard the constant rumble of the sawmill, the sharp ring of the carpenter's hammer, the laborer's ax and all the hum and confusion of a town of unusual business activity. The dull times have not affected Clallam Bay. Clallam Bay is a Democratic town. It takes Democrats, true as gold, to make such a town in six months.

If any other proof of Clallam Bay's Democracy than these visible signs is required, it was to be had at the organization of its Democratic club on Monday evening. A meeting for the organization of a Democratic club had been called for that evening by the Clallam County Central Democratic Club.

To meet the announcement made by the club that Angeles Democrats would assist in the organization, President W. Brumfield, Secretary W. K. Clark, Judge L. M. Lane and John W. Troy, of the Clallam County Central Club, boarded the Hermosa at Angeles bound for Clallam Bay. Judge Lane was accompanied by Mrs. Lane and their bright and interesting children, Miss Zella and Master Verne. After a pleasant ride of about five hours, which time was spent in enjoying the scenery and in conversation, the party arrived at Clallam Bay, where they were met by a large number of friends and acquaintances which was rapidly increased by introductions, etc,

After a good dinner at the Everett House, kept by Mr. W. E. Theodore (as good a host as all Puget Sound affords) and a few social hours spent with the boys, the hour for the meeting arrived.

By 7:30 o'clock the I. O. O. F. Hall was well filled with the citizens of Clallam Bay. Promptly at 7:30 President Brumfield called the meeting to order and stated its object.

Mr. Brumfield said he was not a speaker, Judge Lane had come down to do the speaking, but, he said, the citizens of Clallam county had felt the hand of the oppressor, it is bearing down hard upon us all. The people are looking to the Democratic party to remedy this, and we are going to remedy it. That is what we are here for—to assist you of Clallam Bay to organize a club that we may co-operate with yon (as we hope you may lead in the activity and membership of your club) in redeeming this county from the hands of the corruptionist. We have a club 200 strong at Angeles, but we will cheerfully surrender the palm to Clallam Bay—more, we will be pleased to do it. Mr. Brumfield then introduced Judge Lane who, in part said: "This is not really a time for speech making. We have met for the purpose of associating ourselves together that we may work for the great cause we represent in a more organized and effective manner; that we may work together in unison from now until the polls close on the night of November 8." Judge Lane then briefly, but forcibly discussed the tariff. He challenged anyone to show an instance where wages had been raised of account of the McKinley bill or any other high tariff bill. He laid down the challenge of the Democratic Central Committee of Ohio, where they offered a reward to anyone who could show that any manufacturer or employer, employing fifty or more men had raised the employe's wages in the least since the McKinley bill had went into effect. On the other hand he refered to the thousands of strikes and reductions since that time.

The judge continuing asked whether it was under Democratic or Republican rule that the conditions compelled the people to organize trade and labor unions? Was it under Republican or Democratic rule that the people were and are being forced to arise in their might and demand legislation for the protection of their rights? Why, we never heard of such a thing under Democratic regime. The judge then discussed the Republican record toward trusts and corporations in the same manner. He referred to the thousands of acres that the Cleveland administration had restored and the thousands that they tried to restore, but were prevented by the Republican senate. Judge Lane then handled local matters for a few minute without gloves. He refered to the delinquent taxes for this year. He said nearly one-half of our taxes are not paid.

"Is it," he said "because the tax payers of Clallam county are dishonest? Is it because they want to get rid of paying their taxes? No. It's because the people have been overburdened. They cannot pay them. Why this heavy tax. Are we paying our debt with it? No, our debt is increasing every day. It is being spent—wasted—by our Republican board of county commissioners." Judge Lane's addres was able and forcible. He was frequently applauded.

Judge Rowan was called on, and responded with a eloquent ten minute speech. He said we were on the eve of the greatest political contest America ever had. He wanted to know on which side his hearers would array themselves. Whether on the side of equal and fair taxation or on the side of tyranny, on the side of patriotism or paternalism. "It was unjust taxation that we fought against during the revolution. It is unjust taxation that we are here to fight against tonight." Judge Rowan's able hits were enthusiastically applauded.

John W. Troy was then called upon. After endorsing the motto of David B. Hill, "I am a Democrat," and briefly refering to the ta iff, the speaker dwelt on the Republican administrations of nation, county and state.

He said: "It was that matchless statesman, Grover Cleveland, who said in his memorable message to Congress in 1887, that 'a condition confronts us and not a theory.' If that was true then it is pre-eminently true now. On March 4, 1889, after four years of economical, and frugal Democratic government, the reins of authority were turned over from Democratic to Republican hands. At that time a surplus over the needs of the country amounting to $130,000,000 was in the national treasury. What use have the Republicans made of the trust given them by the people? What has become of that surplus? Why Reed's 'billion dollar Congress' held sway for two years, and the surplus has gone 'where it will do the most good'—Mr. Harrision, you know, wants to be re-elected. But this is not all. Those gigantic sinking funds that have been held as reserves have been added to the general fund and gone where they, too, will do the most good; and more, the silver reserve fund has been likewise treated, and the end is not yet. Secretary Foster in a recent report said, 'there is the fractional currency and coins, and the pension reserves, that will not be needed this year, we can use them. I am awaiting Mr. Foster's next report. I am curious to know what he will suggest next. I fully expect to hear him recommend that the furniture in the capitol building and the department offices be pawned to raise funds, because there is $30,000,000 of old appropriations yet to meet." Mr. Troy then referred to the state administration and the last two legislatures, briefly showing their record to be as bad as that of Reed's Congress. From this he touched county affairs in vigorous language.

"One year ago last January," he said, "the present board of county commissioners took charge of county affairs. They found the county about $15,000 or $20,000 in debt. We are now fast nearing our $185,000 limit. What have we to show for it? A few miles of almost impassable road, only. Not a county warrant has been redeemed since the present board of county commissioners went in, and there is not much prospect that any will be redeemed until they go out of office. Instead, every time the county commissioners meet, thousands of dollars in warrants are issued. This is not because taxes are low. On the other hand, they are higher than ever. In 1890 the levy was $34,000, and this year it amounts to $72,000. What becomes of the tax. Why every cent of the county fund taxes goes to Republican county officers and their Republican deputies." The speaker then called upon the citizens of Clallam Bay to help drive this gang from office and control. "Their own party has failed to down them, and there remains but one way. Vote the Democratic ticket."

The roll of membership was then signed by fifty-one good Democrats, and the following officers elected: President, W. H. Rowan; first vice-president, J. D. Thaggard, second vice-president, G. W. O'Brien; secretary, R. S. Dimmick; treasurer, N. T. Lamphir; executive committee, R. T. Smith, W. E. Theodore, D. R. Dwyer, F. King, J. W. Otts, J. E. McKabe and Thomas Fallihee. The club has in its membership nearly every business man of Clallam Bay. They are all a bright and intelligent lot, and the Democracy of the county may expect much good of it.

THE SALMON CANNERY.

The Establishment Starts Up in June.

LATEST IMPROVEMENTS.

The Establishment is Equipped With the Best Devices—Foreign Markets to Be Supplied—From Townsend to the Cape—A Fine Site.

The Port Angeles cannery is now ready to commence work and is only waiting for the salmon run to begin operations. The first run begins in June, at which time the Straits of Juan de Fuca may be said to be full of these splendid fish, then the cannery will afford employment for fifty to sixty men.

The site of this enterprise is certainly the most convenient one can imagine, as no bill for water can ever be presented, being supplied from nature's own reservoir, the water being piped from pure springs and sufficient force in its fall is obtained for all desired purposes.

The establishment is equipped with all of the latest devices known in the business, so that salmon may be handled in a manner consistent with cleanliness and dispatch

The machinery consists of one boiler and two retorts with the necessary cutting-up knives, drying, washing and cooling tables, and when the run is fairly on, will have a capacity of canning 100 cases of four dozen cns every two hours.

Three boats will be used on the start to operate a gill net of five inch meshes, which will catch and hold fish of a certain size, six of which filling a case when canned.

This company will buy the catch of other fishermen creating a source of revenue heretofre unknown to a class of industrious men taking their living from the waters of the straits. A small steamer will be used to visit the various fishing stations which will be established at the most convenient places from the cape to Port Townsend. Arrangements to this effect have already been made with parties in Port Townsend.

Salmon when delivered at the cannery are paid for by the piece and are counted immediately, they are then butchered, after which a process of washing is administered, consisting of a thorough bath in two waters. Mr. Nicolai, the manager of the Port Angeles cannery claims that fish canned on Puget Sound are better than those of the Columbia river from the fact that here salt water is used in washing, which has better cleansing properties than fresh water and though he has an ample supply of fresh, salt water will be used.

After the fish have been washed they are then placed in a retort where a constant steaming is given them for one hour, they are then placed in another retort where the same process is used, but continued for one hour and a half. Then they are laid out upon a cooling table, where they are subjected to a lye bath which removes all the oil, and then they are put in cans which are sealed, labled and packed into cases. Before being cased every can is separately examined, with the object of ascertaining if any are leaking, if such are found it is rejected the rest being packed and are ready for shipment.

This enterprise partakes very much of the nature of an experiment with all chances in his favor, the principal of which may be considered. All salmon pass up Sound through the Straits and the fishing fleet from Angeles will have the first chance at them. There will be no opposing fleet to war with, consequently there will be no contending for positions.

This cannery intends to seek a market in foreign ports and Angeles is most convenient to the sea, with every shipping facility.

AT THE CAPITOL.

WASHINGTON, March 28, 1892.

Senator Hill returned from his Southern trip the 20th, and whatever effect it may have had upon his presidential prospects, one cannot doubt after hearing his enthusiastic description of the hospitable reception he met with everywhere he went, that it was one of the most enjoyable trips he ever made. The senator says that the sensational stories about his having attempted to dictate to the Democratic members of the house committee on elections how they should vote in the New York contested election case of Noyes vs. Rockwell, which has been reported in favor of Noyes, the Republican contestant, are absurd. Personally he would like to see Mr. Rockwell keep the seat, but he has no doubt that the committee acted on the evidence produced before it in deciding against him, and he has no criticism to make. This knocks a big hole in one of the most sensational stories of the session.

The free wool bill will be laid aside in the house until after the free coinage bill is disposed of, which will be this week, according to the original resolution. There was considerable talk several days ago of an extention by agreement of the silver debate, but nothing came of it, because a majority seemed to think such an extension entirely unnecessary, as it is not probable that any amount of debate would result in the change of one single vote.

There is another clash between Secretary Noble and Commissioner of Pensions Raum, and a report is current that Mr. Noble informed Mr. Harrison that he must choose between his resignation and the removal of Mr. Raum, and that Mr. Harrison told the secretary that he would have asked for Mr. Raum's resignation long ago were it not for the congressional investigation now being made of the pension office, and requested him to be patient. The immediate cause for the secretary's anger was a recommendation made by Mr. Raum, which he found on his desk when he returned to Washington last week, for the appointment of his daughter to be his private secretary. Mr. Noble sometimes uses "cuss words," and it is said that he said of Raum when he read that recommendation, almost identically what the late William H. Vanderbilt said upon a certain occasion to one of his sons-in-law, Colonel Elliott F. Shepard. Commissioner Raum had a very humiliating time before the investigating committee. He was compelled to acknowldge that Secretary Noble had turned down his attempt to make his daughter his private secretary, as well as his son, the young man who made such a gorgeous failure as an office-broker, had been refused permission to practice before the interior department, notwithstanding his personal appeal in his behalf to Mr. Harrison.

The river and harbor bill, which was reported to the house the 21st, contains a number of new and important projects, among which are the Hudson river improvement, the ship channel connecting the great lakes, the improvement of Mobile harbor and of the Savannah river. It carries in round figures twenty and a half millions.

General Nelson A. Miles, at present here, has added his quota to the usual war scare which is always produced when the appropriations for the army and navy are being considered by Congress, by a newspaper interview in which he enlarges upon "our defenceless condition" and the danger of war.

Treasury officials — minor ones—for the first time acknowledge that the department finds it difficult to meet current expenses, and others say that it does not meet them, but postpones them from day to day by every means in its power.

Secretary Foster returns to his department just in time to find a nice little family row on between Assistent Secretary Nettleton and the immigration commissioner, over the question of allowing pauper immigrants to land upon the guarantee of some society or association that they shall not become a public charge. Assistant Secretary Nettleton, while acting secretary, wrote the New York superintendent of immigration a very sharp letter asking why he had followed such a practice, to which that official replied by quoting from a letter from the commissioner of immigration authorizing him to do so. Then Mr. Nettleton wrote another, stating that the commissioner had exceeded his authority, and that no one could grant such authority, except the secretary. The trouble with the commissioner of immigration is that he imagines himself an independent official instead of the subordinate of the treasury department. He has been in hot water ever since the office was created.

Mr. Harrison is reported to have attempted to read the riot act to the five Republican senators who were absent without being paired, when his protege, Judge Woods, of Indiana, just slipped through by a majority of one. Senator Stewart, who was one of the absentees, is said to have remarked dryly: "Had we been present and voted the majority would have been the other way." Then Mr. Harrison was sorry he had said anything.

A Race Around the Horn.

At dawn of the 27th inst. the ships Shenandoah, Captain Murphy, from New York, and S. D. Carleton, Captain Amesbury, from Philadelphia, will sail toward the Golden Gate on one of the longest races upon the sea ever attempted by sailing crafts. The Shenandoah is an extreme clipper ship, with the finest lines, and is a four-master. The Carleton is almost a new craft, sailing from Rockport. Maine, and on her last voyage from San Francisco to Havre loaded with wheat, showed a clean heel to all competitors.

Cannibalism on a Ship.

The American schooner Winnie Lawrey arrived in New York harbor March 25, from Haiti, after being short of food sixty days. Three of her crew are missing, and it is intimated that they were killed and eaten by their seven shipmates.

THE SILVER QUESTION.

It may be accepted as a foregone conclusion that the house of representatives will not pass a free coinage bill during this session. There are too many Democrats opposed to the bill and opposed to its consideration at this time to permit it. In fact it is doubtful whether the Bland bill will come up for a vote on its final passage or not.

While THE DEMOCRAT did not favor silver agitation at this session of Congress, when it did come up THE DEMOCRAT favored its passage. However, the interests of silver have not suffered. There was no hope of securing the free coinage of the metal at this time anyhow, as the president is known to be opposed to it.

One thing has been settled by its discussion at this time more definitely. That is, it is not a political question, but rather one of the sections.

It is true, more Democrats favored the bill than Republicans. This is partly because it is favored by the South as well as the West, and partly because many western Republicans, including our John L., have been whipped in against it, by the Republican leaders hopeful of making a party question out of it, that the Democrats would be at a disadvantage in New York. The great mass of the Western and Southern people favor the free coinage of silver, and they are going to get it in time, no matter which party controls in Congress. All that is needed is a free coinage president, or one that will not veto a free coinage measure.

"LITTLE RHODY" is having a red hot state Campaign. Both parties are having their ablest men stump the state. Amongst the prominent Democrats who are making the Providence plantations ring with the true doctrine are Senator Palmer, Speaker Crisp, Congressmen Mills, McMillin, Breckenridge, Wilson of West Virginia, and Bryan, Governors Abbett and Pattison and Wm. McAdoo of New Jersey. Rhode Island is the only state that holds an election before the National Conventions. Another prominent feature is the State Convention instructed its delegates for Cleveland.

THE tariff debate still progresses. The Democratic majority in Congress has cleared the decks and is in constant and vigorous action. From the debate on the tariff bills, where party lines are strictly drawn, it is easy to see that the Democrats have as large a percentage of the house as of its members. The Republicans are hardly making an attempt to defend their position. They are instead, trying to delude the people into thinking the real issue is the silver question. Tariff reform is in the ascendant in this country.

THE DEMOCRAT heartily congratulates the Democracy of Clallam Bay. The Clallam Bay Democrats are made of the right stuff. They have a Democratic club that, for brains and activity, a city of three or four times its size might be proud of. Clallam Bay is alright. Its destiny is assured. It cannot fail to make a splendid city having, as it has, such a corps of level headed, earnest and able men to back it. It is certainly a "bully boat and a bully crew."

THE Democrats and Alliance in Minnesota have about agreed upon a fusion. The Alliance gets the governor and four presidential electors. The Democrats get five presidential electors. The combined Alliance and Democratic vote in 1890 was 50,000 larger than the Republican.

CONTRACTOR BURLINGAME is getting in his fine work for the Tacoma Republican ring, but he has not the field in peace. The News, true to its well earned reputation for fairness and honesty, has attacked his methods and shows up his work in plain language.

TACOMA is having a campaign that is a duplicate to the one just finished in Seattle. It is, as there, the Democracy making the peoples' fight its fight. As in Seattle, the Republicans are fighting with the ring. The Democratic candidate for mayor is Hon. Alexander Parker. A hard fight is being made.

THE Bynum quarttete, colored, which did such good service for the Seattle Democracy, is one of the leading attractions at the Democratic meetings in Tacoma.

THE Hotel proposition is probably ago. This is good news. Its promoters deserve praise.

NEWS AND COMMENT.

John L. Lingenan, the crank who wanted to analyze the brains of Conelius Vanderbilt called at the residence of Jay Gould for the purpose of declaring his love for Helen, the financer's youngest daughter.

This last act probably indicates more wisdom than insanity, and that the day will come when some other crank will present himself at Jay's door for the same purpose, is certain. Lingenan's act was declared insane only because it was a little previous and had not one chance in a thousand to win, otherwise it might have been consider a brilliant effort.

The collector of customs at Victoria has been instructed to permit no more vessels to clear for Bering sea.

This is a concession made by Lord Salisbury in allowing the modus vivendi to again become operative in '92. Canadian vessels who will take seals in Bering sea this season will do so at their own risk. And now, the mighty Wolcott, the terrific Rush and the furious Bear will have an opportunity of earning a degree of fame second only to that achieved by the old constitution, and our coast protection of two very "bad guns" will not be needed.

On Friday, May 20, at Columbia, S. C., four men and one woman—all negroes—will end their existance upon the scaffold, in expiation of a crime in which all were implicated.

If the hemp crop of the south continues good, we may still hope to see the Republican ranks legally depleted.

The action of the British admiralty in notifying the Canadian Pacific railroad that about the middle of May the British government would ship 203 sailors and three officers over that line from Halifax to Vancouver, the dispatches say, would probably arouse a misconception, unless it is known that this course was decided upon before the Bering sea difficuly assumed such a critical stage.

But why misconcieve? Suppose the order was issued with malice aforethought and warlike intentions. Would not the beligerent Steve Elkins round-up a few Montana cow-punchers, and pi the C. P. R? We know that Steve may be relied upon, and will swear the punchers would accept the job.

The wires of the country have transmitted a message, whose burden of intelligence is, that Sullivan and Corbett have at last signed articles to beat and bruise each other in the prize ring.

We, of modern civilization may now know and feel that exquisite thrill of a great pleasure held in anticipation, which was experienced by the ancient Romans upon the announcement of a long list of bloody combats by gladiators, trained to no greater degree of physical magnificance than Sullivan and Corbett. And yet, they were barbarous and we are civilized. We also regard with horror the bull-fights of Spain and Mexico, and express sympathy for the poor bulls who fight for their lives, while the higher animals fight for money. Which is the higher order of animal development; the trained bull who killed Frascuela, or the victorious Sullivan? It seems perfectly proper that these two splendid types of triumphant animals should settle all disputes as to the final championship, and meet each other in the arena, and let the better man, or animal, win.

The foreign ministers at Berlin, excepting the French minister, have informed their respective governments that for sometime the Emperor William has been showing distinct symptoms of monomaina. His tendency is to squander his fortune.

This mania of the emperor has certainly appeared most opportunely if his donations can be directed in useful channels. Instead of blowing himself for booze he can relieve much suffering now prevalant in his empire, and his subjects will call him, blessed.

Doings of Society.

At the Opera House.

The entertainment given by the ladies of Angeles at the opera house last Tuesday night, for the benefit of the free reading room, drew a good crowd, who from their applause may be considered to have been highly entertained. The entertainment reflects great credit upon the ladies who managed it, and upon those ladies and gentlemen who participated in the performance. The programme was opened with an overture by the Gate City Band, This selection was rendered in a way to make every citizen of Angeles feel proud of its band, who have earned the reputation of being the best outside of Seattle.

Mrs. Beardsley and Miss Stewart played a piano duet, the selection being from Bela, which received applause. Harry Holden, sang a solo, "Be Thou Mine Own" and charmed the audience with his tenor. A mixed quartette sang, Moonlight Will Come Again," the quartette was composed of Mesdames Foster and Beardsley, Messrs Fisher and Wilson. "Le Chalet" the violin and piano duet given by Miss Lewis and Mr. C. K. Humphries. was one of the best parformances of the evening. Mr. Humphries being a master of the violin. "Thy Sentinel Am I," a grand barritone solo, by Mr. Ben C. Keller, seemed to touch the musical soul of the audience who applauded until Mr. Keller reappeared and sang "Sweet Dreamland Faces." Miss Lewis and Mr. Holden sang a duet. "A Voice From The Waves." Miss Lewis posseses a pure soprano voice of great sweetness. The renowned Male Quartette, Messrs. Holden, Wilson, Fisher and Bickford, sang Hatton's "Tar's Sons." This quartette represents some of the best voices in the city. A vocal solo "Waiting" with flute obligato by Miss Stewart and Mr. Craick concluded the musical part of the entertainment. Miss Stewart has a rare soprano, and always delights her audience whether upon the stage or in the parlor.

The Yankee Duelist, is the name of the one act farce which was presented to a critical Angeles audience, and which deservedly secured the encomiums of the public. The play itself was a happy selection containing none of those difficult positions which it is impossible for amatuers to understand and appreciate that they may be properly rendered. The best histrionic talent this city affords was in the cast. Miss Shearer who posesses talent sufficient to place her in the firmanent of theatrical stars, played the role of Amanda, study being the brush which, if applied properly, would make Miss Shearer's acting shine with a brilliancy equal to that of Mary Anderson Mr. L. R. Cole as the Yankee Duelist, handled himself with great credit. His thorough appreciation of the character he represented made it possible for the introduction of much local acting not written by the auther of the farce, and which Mr. Cole introduced with a finesse worthy of a star. Mr. Horace White. personated the Uncle. His make up as a very podgy landlord, was perfect, and his acting could not have been improved upon. This was Mr. Whites first appearance before the public in Angeles though by no means his debut upon the stage. His acting was certainly not that which an audience would expect from an amatuer, but all they could expect from a professional.

A Birthday Surprise.

An exceedingly pleasant surprise party was given L. F. Person, proprietor of the city hotel, by Mrs. Drannan and Charles Brown, on Wednesday evening, after the Ladies' Aid Society concert, that being the occasion of Mr. Person's thirty-first birthday. A plentious luncheon was served in the dining room of the City hotel at 10:30 o'clock, after which the two long, well laden tables were removed and dancing commenced and continued until 1 o'clock. Those who responded to the invitation in person were: Mr. and Mrs. Schwartz, Dr. and Mrs. Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Bickford, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Meagher, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon, Mrs. Stewart, Mrs. Beardsley, Miss Stewart and Miss Lewis; Messrs. A. A. Smith, C. K. Humphries, Horace White, L. R. Cole, Dr. Herrick, Dr. Strother and John W. Troy.

Married on the Elwha.

Mr. Axel Forsberg and Miss Alivina Flemser were united in marriage Monday, Judge Louis Williams performing the ceremony. The marriage took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Peters on the Elwha river.

Miss Mary Forsberg acted as bridesmaid and George T. Haines as best man. The bride is a niece of Mr. Charles Peters, and has lived in this county but eighteen months, having decided to make her home with her uncle, she left Zurich, Switzerland, for that purpose.

Mr. Forsberg has lived here for the past five years, and is well and favorably known. Mr. Forsberg owns a farm adjoining that of Mr. Peters.

After the ceremony the guests sat down to a sumptuous colation served in a room beatifully decorated with flowers and mosses of Washington. Many presents were received by the happy couple, among which were: A handsome oil painting from Mrs. C. M. Mason, a clock from Paul Ptister, a set of toilet towels from Miss Mendhurke, a bedroom set, a set of cane chairs, a deed to a one acre building site, and a handsome glass set from Mr. and Mrs. Peters, a lamp and fruit set from George T. Haines, a photograph case from Mrs. Rosa Hall, a silk handkerchief from Mrs. Ione T. Smith, and a large lamp from Fred Neiger.

A Picnic Party.

A picnic party composed of Misses Grant, Love, Rigley, Clark and Shields; and Messrs. Clark, Bell, Willson, Fisher and Dedman, left the city Wednesday morning for an outing at the lagoon. The party was conveyed to the head of the Bay in boats, and from there a trip was made afoot across the spit. The table was arranged just under the tramway, in full view of the straits where the surf unceasingly sings its thundrous dirge. An elegant lunch having been prepared by the ladies, all did ample justice to the spread of delicacies, and with regret the party returned at five o'clock. The trip is to be repeated tomorrow.

Entertained at the City.

A very elegant dinner was given at the City hotel last Sunday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sheldon to a few of their friends living in Angeles.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sheldon, Mrs. Drannan, Mr. and Mrs. George Washington Meagher, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Smith and Mr. Fred Person. Mr. Sheldon is first assistant light keeper of the Tatoosh light-house, and is one of the old timers on the Straits, he is now taking a short vacation, which is being most agreeably spent among his friends in Angeles.

THE TIDE WAS IN.

A Narrow Escape From a Watery Grave.

The bright, beautiful sunshine of last Sunday offered inducements for a drive, which proved irrisistable for three young men and one young lady, who provided themselves with available teams and left town in high glee at the prospect of a charming afternoon. Mr. I. Kirshberg and Mr. C. P. Brown occupied one buggy, while Mr. L. H. Jenns and Miss Daisy Stewart followed in another.

The pleasures anticipated were more than realized as long as the well worn wagon road was traversed, but a nemesis in the shape of a spirit of adventure and longing for more diversified scenery took possession of the unsuspecting party and lured them down to the beach from the Elwha river.

The beginning of this drive was most favorable, as the beach is quite wide, and devoid of rocks with a long stretch of hard, well packed sand. At Dry creek there is little left of the beech when tides are high, and so it happened upon this occasion.

In the dispute regarding the right-of-way between the gay drivers and the tide, the latter won. Mr. Brown's horse stumbled at a critical moment, while Mr Jenns' horse was close behind, the latter becoming frightened at the boiling surf, which was about his feet, shied, in doing so upset both buggies, and the entire party was thrown into the water. Mr. Kirshberg making a very narrow escape, having fallen under the vehicle, while Miss Stewart was thrown clear, and farther out into the Straits. Through the presence of mind of Mr. Brown that young lady was rescued from a predicament which might have resulted seriously.

Both sets of harness were damaged to such an extent that one had to contribute a few straps to the other that i might again do duty in taking the lady to a place of greater safety and warmth, where the dampness was not so general. A house under the tramway offered itself as an asylum. Mr. Brown, after making his charge as comfortable as circumstances would permit, continued on to town where a relief expedition, consist-of a two horse wagon, was quickly dispatched to take up the wreck and relieve the suffers.

"Yes" or "No."

About half the trouble in the world arises from the fact that people try to make words mean something different from what they say. A San Francisco paper begs that when Congress passes a Chinese exclusion act it will make it only five lines long, so that the courts will not be able to pick it to pieces. But it is not only in theology and law that these difficulties arise. It is alleged that a woman's "No" always means "Yes," and no doubt it very often does. The sex likes to be pressed, and undoubtedly derives a good deal of pleasure and confers not a little thereby. Now, here is an illustration of what has just been said. Lots of people will believe these words mean something else than they are intended to express. The pressure under consideration is purely mental,—Seattle Telegraph.

LADIES ATTEND.

A meeting of the ladies of Port Angeles and Clallam county generally, is called to meet in the parlors of the Olympian hotel for next Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock to form a Ladies' Club to work for the furtherence of the women's display for this state of the Columbian exposition.

The ladies desire to get samples of the artistic and tasteful work and talent of the ladies of the county that this county may be properly represented at the great fair. Curios of all kinds and all rare or phenominal products of Washington will be gratefully received. All the things will, of course, be returned after the exposition. This movement should have all the patronage and assistance that is possible to give it. It deserves well at our hands.

A LEGEND OF A HORSE

Not long ago, as the freight train running from San Francisco to San Jose rumbled around a sharp corner just outside the city of San Jose, a white horse sprang on the track just in front of the engine and ran down the track toward town. For a mile the train did not gain on him. Then the unequal footing of the cross-ties and the pace began to tell on the white steed, and the engine crept slowly up to him. The engineer gave a few shrieks of the whistle to scare the horse from the track, but he kept on in front, running with the speed of a racer, with his long tail streaming in a straight line behind him.

The pilot struck him, ground the life out of him in an instant and then plowed up the ground on the opposite side of the track. The engineer swore a few choice oaths and jumped out of the cab. The horse was as dead as a door nail and the engine left the rails.

It was Vasquez's horse. The whole country knew it the next day. He was twenty years old and totally blind when he met his death in front of the freight train, and for ten years had roamed over the unoccupied land about the lower part of Santa Clara county, free as a bird and feared by the Mexicans worse than a lion. He was called the "white devil," and it was their belief that he was posessed of a soul engaged to the evil one—the soul of Vasquez. It is a strange tale the old Mexican mothers tell of the white horse.

Vasquez was the most noted bandit of California twenty years ago. He had defied the law, eluded the detectives and searching parties for years and killed and robbed half a dozen men. He roamed over the State of California from the North to the South, leaving desolation and death in his wake. He surrounded himself with a band of desperate Mexicans and terrorized entire communities.

On a dreamy August afternoon in Southern California, the mayor of Los Angeles and a fellow official were driving along the old sand road through the Arroyo Seco toward the town. Over the brow of a hill half a mile in front of them a group of horsemen appeared at a gallop. They swept down the hill and met the buggy of the mayor. The galloping horses were yanked back upon their haunches, and a swarthy Mexican on a white horse shoved a pistol in the mayor's face, and said, with a show of his teeth in a smile, "Your money, senor,"

The mayor thought it was a joke and laughed.

"Quick, quick!" said the horseman, as his weapon clicked. "I am Vasquez."

The mayar laughed again.

"Ef you don't belief me, senor, look,"

He pointed back to the hill and there appeared another group of horsemen riding at full tilt from the town.

"Quick," said Vasquez. "I am no fool."

The mayor looked down the pistol barrel at the black pair of eyes, that lined the sights and threw up his hands. He was lightened of his chamois bag of gold, as was his friend, and the bold robbers wheeled and were off at a run, the posse from the town riding up five minutes too late to catch them or to save the mayor's coin. The band escaped into the chaparral.

Vasquez made history in this way for five years, and then was caught like a rat in a trap in an adobe house near the scene of the robbery of the mayor, and was shot down by a newspaper correspondent detailed to accompany the search party. He survived his wounds, and was taken to San Jose, where one of his earliest and most atrocious murders had been committed, and there met his death on the scaffold.

The night after Vasquez was hanged a white horse galloped up the street to the jail, stood a moment at the door and gave a neigh. The Mexicans heard in it a call to the dead Vasquez. There came no answer to the horse's challenge, and he wheeled about and went as suddenly as he came.

Then he turned bandit and followed Vasquez old trails. Once in a while a man would be found on the road with his body frightfully mutilated and his flesh bearing marks of hoofs. Sometimes in the night a white horse would appear at the door of a Mexican cabin in some lonely spot and neigh. If no answer came he would be off like the wind, but if any man dared show himself the horse would attack him with hoof and teeth, and it was seldom that a victim escaped. Time and again he was shot at and one Mexican buck who was foolhardy enough to try to rope him met a horrible death. The horse bore a charmed life. He became almost as great a terror to the Mexicans as Vasquez had been to the rich Americans. If by chance a Mexican pony got out of the corral and wandered off in search of grass, the white horse would find him and enlist him. First he had one follower, then two, then half a dozen. No man could kill them, and no man dared to attempt to capture them. With no loads on their backs they were as fleet as the wind and could outstrip the best horse with a rider. The Mexicans named the leader the "white devil," and said that Vasquez lived again in his horse.—San Francisco Examiner.

AN ISOLATED RACE.

Dwellers in the Artic—The People of Upper Greenland.

In 1813 Sir John Ross discovered an isolated race of human beings numbering about two hundred souls, living on the inhospitable shores of North Greenland, says a writer in Scribner's Magazine. To this community he gave the romantic name of "Artic Highlanders," a name unfortunately misleading, for they are a littoral people and cannot inhabit the artic highlands, as it is an everlasting ice cap, and moreover they will not even visit it, for this inland ice is a region of terror; a land where abide their demons and evil spirits.

At the present day their number, can be estimated, as about the same as when the knowledge of them came to the civilized world; nor have they increased their territory, but live on the narrow strip of mountainous coast, which is left bare during the summer months by the retreat of the winter snows. They could not be more cut off from human beings did they live on some oceanic island. Practically they do live on an island, for they are surrounded by water; by great expanses of solid water; for they never pass the ice barrier of the great Humboldt Glacier, with the sea face of sixty miles; they never ascend the summit foot of the "ice blink," some two thousand feet above the sea level, nor attempt to wander south over the vast ice-floats of Melville Bay, one hundred miles in extent. At 79 deg. north latitude, near the southern edge of the Humboldt Glacier, is a collection of huts known as Etah, their most northern settlement, while at Cape York, in latitude 75 deg. 55 min. north, probably their largest encampment, in their southern limit, and which, as near as we could determine by the sign language, they call Pi'anito. Their country may be said to be about one hundred and eighty-five miles long and from three to five miles in bredth.

An Unprejudiced Critic.

Stranger—They seem to have been doing a good job of paving on this street.

Citizen (residing on the street)—Good job! It's a cheat, sir—swindle—a fraud!

"I don't know much about pavements myself, but I was talking a little while ago with a man up the street who seems to be a good judge. He says its one of the best jobs he ever saw."

"Was he a light-built man with a blonde mustache.

"Yes."

"Smoking a cigar?"

"I think he was."

"Dark clothes on?"

"Yes."

"Takes rather long steps when he walks?"

"Yes."

"About five feet ten or eleven?"

"I should say that is about his height."

"And he's sure this is a good job?"

"That's what he said."

Citizen—"Gosh blame him! He's Burly, the contractor."

His Name Was William.

"What is your name, my little man?"

"Willie when I'm good and William when I get licked."

"How old are you?"

"Ask maw."

"Where do you live?"

"To home."

"You look like a bright boy!"

"Tell ye, mister, I'm way out o' sight, and don't you forget it."

"Don't you think so bright a boy as you should be more mannerly?"

"Say, looky here, I'm in it, I am, an' I ain't goin' to let an old duffer pump me on private matters—bye, bye."

And the precious child wafted himself down the street, with his hands in his pockets and began to whistle "Annie Rooney."

The kind old gentleman happened to be his uncle, just returning from a long residence abroad, and when Willie got home that night his name was William.—Detroit Free Press.

Foreign Tourist (gazing at the throng in the steerage)—It does not seem possible that your country can assimilate all these strange people.

American—have no fear. In a year or two they'll be voting for President, and in four or five years they'll be shouting "America for Americans!"

WANTED BLOOD.

A Litigant Threatens to Kill the Judge—He Wanted a Jury.

An interesting scene occured in court yesterday morning. It was the last act that has been played of an interesting little drama.

About a year or more ago Peder Petterson, of this city, commenced action against his wife, who resides in Denmark, for divorce and to quiet title to his property in this town, consisting of 100 feet front on Front street. Default was duly entered in the case and judgment granted as asked for.

About this time a letter was received by an adopted daughter of Mr. Petterson and wife from Mrs. Peterson. She employed an attorney, who succeed in getting the judgment set aside as far as the property was concerned. She was allowed forty feet of this Front street property. Since that time Mr. Peterson has been trying to get a new trial. He seems to think he has been imposed upon by the court because he did not have a jury trial.

A short time ago he went to see Judge McClinton about it and asked for an honest jury trial. Judge McClinton referred the imposed upon man to an attorney. Mr. Petterson was opposed to lawyers. He said they put their heads together and acted against him. He then threatened to go around town and "talk bad" about the judge if he didn't give him an honest jury trial.

Yesterday he again came into the court room with blood in his eye. Judge McClinton, Sheriff Gould and Deputy Clerk Fisher were present. Mr. Petterson asked the judge if he was going to give him "an honest jury trial." Judge McClinton explained to the deluded man that divorce cases were cases in equity and a jury could not be granted.

"I make you" said Mr. Petterson. The judge wanted to know how he was going to do it. Mr. Petterson said he would "shoot him down before these two witnesses with his revolver." Judge McClinton was inclined to sentence the man to jail for contempt, but finally decided that he was crazy and ordered the sheriff to put him out. The man with blood in his eye was accordingly ejected.

A neighbor of Mr. Patten one day this week entered his house on the reserve, and immediately began preparations for his evening meal. Having started a fire in his stove, he began to take an iventory of the provisions in his larder, and finding no meat, he concluded to make a fast trip down-town for the lacking article. The fire box of the stove was then filled up, so that a good hot stove would be ready upon his return. In this he reckoned without a very enterprising indivldual, for upon entering his cabin he found it cold and cheerless, and the hot stove and stove-pipe were gone.
