Flames Destroy the Well Known Hostlery.

A DEFECTIVE CHIMNEY.

The Envious Flames Deprive Angeles of a Beautiful Structure—County Records all Saved With Other Contents of the Building.

A burnt, rusty looking, plaster cracked vault and a heap of ashes is all that is left of the Greenleaf Hotel and the evidence of its glory.

Last Sunday afternoon about 1 o'clock a strong breeze sprung up from the north-east, which fast worked itself up to almost a gale. A large cedar tree was blown down, which turned the water main up from its bed in mother earth, and cut off the city's supply of water. About an hour after this accident a great volume of smoke was seen ascending from the south-west corner of the Greenleaf Hotel. The alarm was at once given, and was nobly responded to. The fire company was on the scene with their hooks, ladders and hose in short order. The latter was of little avail. The burning front of the building, was hastily examined by the fire boys. It did not take Assistant Chief Dyke long to make up his mind that, on account of the lack of water, there was no saving the building. so the Hook and Ladder Company, ably assisted by others gave their attention at once to the saving of the building's contents. The county offices being situated on the first floor, the attention of the officers was quickly called to the saving of the county records. Deputy Auditor Hoole was the first of those on the scene. After a hurried examination of the fire he determined that there was no time to spare, so he opened the Auditor's office, and directed a corps of willing workers in removing the Auditors records to a place of safety. C. R. Brewster and J. W. Troy soon after kicked in the door to the Clerk's and Treasurer's office. They were closely followed by Deputy Clerk Fisher and Attorney Wilson who removed the files of that office. Deputy Treasurer Hickok was soon on the field and opened the large safe and took from it the most of the valuables and relocked it. The safe with the furniture was afterwards removed. The firemen and a large crew, in the meantime, removed the hotel furniture, which was taken to a safe place in a more or less damaged condition. During this time the fire behaved itself well. The wind was blowing it from the building in such a way as to retard its progress. It however encroached on the working crowd fast enough to spur them to their utmost activity. This, however, came near wrecking havoc in another direction. The stiff breeze carried the flames up the hill in the direction of the residence of Major R. R. Harding. The contents of the building were quickly removed, and a bucket brigade organized which passed water up the hill from a pond at the foot. By an hours' hard work Major Harding's residence was saved. Mr. and Mrs. Rockman's personal goods and some of C. P. Brown's clothing etc, were the chief losses. All goes to show that the flames originated in the flue of the kitchen range, there being a fire in it at the time Its progress was so slow that the building would have been saved from the angry flames had water been available. It was about threee hours from the time the fire started until the building fell in. The county records, all of which were saved in a remarkably intact condition, were taken up town Sunday evening to the McInnes and the Clark buildings, where the offices have been temporally opened. The hotel furniture and contents were moved to Dolan's ware-house temporarily.

The Greenleaf Hotel was built in the summer of 1890 by Captain Silas N. Greenleaf of Seattle, for a hotel. It was not opened, however, until the following spring, when Louis Rockman leased the building and nicely furnished it. The County Commissioners against much opposition, leased the ground floor for the Court House and County offices, where they remained until Sunday's catastrophe. The hotel cost about $7,000 or $8,000. It is said that the insurance amounted to $5,000. The furniture in the building was insured, but Mrs. Rockman does not know the amount. Mr. and Mrs. Rock man were the heaviest losers, many of their choicest keepsakes and treasures being lost.

A great outcry is being made throughout Great Britain at the frequency of outrages in first and second class compartments of railway carriges. Women decline to enter compartments occupied by only one man, and many London ladies have gone over to the slow mode of omnibus travel, or the cab, rather than to incur the risk of encountering the railway brute, who is now regarded as as great a terror as "Jack the Ripper." Most men will not under any circumstances enter a compartment occupied by only one or even two women for fear of being blackmailed.

The principal feature of the liberal platform of Mexico will be the introduction of economies in all branches of the government. It advocates: The abolition of interior custom houses as directed by the late economical congress; a reduction of the customs tariff in order to promote commercial intercourse with foreign nations; the adoption of judiciary reforms, extending the terms of the magistracy if possible to life tenue; the creation of the office of vice-president in order to avoid complications in case of the absolute disablity or absence of the president; and reform of the press laws, granting more liberty without license and subjecting journalists to the common law.

This is the first time in the history of Mexico that so liberal a platform has been announced.

Beaver Citizens Ask for Their Dues.

PETITION FOR JUSTICE

The Citizens of Beaver Ask That the Money of Their Division be Expended Through Road Officers.

The citizens of Beaver and vicinity have become sick and tired of the Burlingame Contract Company. They have arrived at the conclusion that it will be impossible to get fair value for the money expended under the present state of affairs, so they petition the board to expend the balance of the money belonging to their devision through the county road officers.

The following petition, which will be presented to the board of county commissioners at their next regular meeting, is self explanatory:

TO THE HONORABLE THE BOARD OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS OF CLALLAM COUNTY, STATE OF WASHINGTON.

The undersigned citizens and taxpayers of said county, your petitioners, would respectfully present to your honorable body as follows. to-wit:

WHEREAS, We are informed and believe that there is now in your hands, and subject to your control, a sum of money, being the proportionate share of the proceeds of the sale of $10,000, face value, of the road bonds of said county, belonging to the western division of the county road now being built, and, being well acquainted with the ground to be gone over in the further construction of said road, and, being fully advised and satisfied that the said sum of money will suffice to build at least double as many miles, if expended directly upon such road as if paid out under the existing contract with the Burlingame Company. We the undersigned parties do therefore pray that you cause said sum of money to be set apart and expended under the supervision and control of the officers of public highways by virtue of the provisions of the statute in such case provided in further completion of said western division of said road, and your petitioners will ever pray, etc. Signed:

AT THE CAPITOL.

WASHINGTON, April, 1892.

The anti-Harrison Republican senators are well nigh at the end of their wits. The trouble is that they can find no one to fight Harrison with. After the withdrawal of Cullom some of them thought that Alger might fill the bill, and he was sent for to talk the matter over. He has been here several days, but he has not made much progress; on the contrary he has got to the end of his rope, as he has been told that after mature consideration it had been decided that the little episode concerning his war record had made him an impossibility, and that the best thing he could do would be to withdraw. This has almost broken Alger's heart, but he has promised to withdraw. Ex-Czar Reed could have the support of the anti-Harrison men if it were not for Mr. Blaine's opposition to him; it has been tendered to McKinley, but he would not accept it. Secret conferences are being nightly held, but the indications are not favorable to anti's, at least not from the outside.

"Teddy" Roosevelt made a ten strike when that resolution authorizing an investigation of the violations of the civil service law (charged by him in a report made last year to Mr. Harrison) by Federal officials in Baltimore was introduced in the house. He has long been trying to find out why Mr. Harrison pigeonholed that report. The house committe on rules will let Mr. Harrison say why no action was ever taken on that report, and then, if the answer is not satisfactory, the resolution for an investigation will be reported to the house and adopted.

Hon. Hugh S. Thompson, the Democartic civil service commissioner, has tendered his resignation to Mr. Harrison, to take effect May 15.

Every attempt made by the house to give the government more power over the national banks, thus adding to their safety as depositories of the people's money, has up to this time been thwarted by the senate. The bill which was passed by the house a short time ago, prohibiting the borrowing of money by officers of national banks, except by authority of a majority of the bank's directors, which every person familiar with the inside histories of the big national bank failures will acknowledge is a good idea, was promptly saddled with an amendment in the senate, which it was known that the house would not accept, authorizing the banks to increase their circulation to the full amount of bonds they have deposited in the United States treasury. Which body legislates for the people, and which for the corporations? The house and the senate fairly represent the parties which respectively control them.

Senator Daniel, of Virginia, has introduced an amendment to the naval appropriation bill, appropriating $300,000 for the expenses of the proposed international naval review, to be held in New York harbor and in Hampton Roads in April, 1893, in honor of the opening of the Columbian exposition at Chicago. The president is directed, as soon as the appropriation becomes a law, to invite foreign nations to participate in the review.

Somebody is doing some very reckless swearing in the pension office investigation. Assistant Secretary Bussey flatly contradicted a statement made by Green B. Raum, Jr., and called upon the committee to judge which of them had told a lie.

Secretary Foster undertook the very difficult task of bolstering up and illegal act—the spending of money received as head tax on immigrants for all alleged improvements on Ellis Island—with an opinion from the attorney general, clearly made to order, and as might have been expected, he made a failure of the job. The alleged opinion is but a lawyer's plea; it justified the authorizing of the expenditure by Assistant Secretary Nettleton on the ground that the late Secretary Windom had contemplated, it he had not actually done, the same thing; and Congress is asked to accept this as a vindication of Nettleton, but it will not do so. If Nettleton has not resigned before the joint immigration committees conclude their investigation of this matter, it is believed that they will recommend his removal, and also that of Superintendent Owen.

Mr. Harrison may find himself in a very awkward predicament, on account of his very remarkable assumption of power in paying an indemnity of $21,000 to Italy out of the state department contingent fund, without consulting Congress at all. This abuse of authority is absolutely without precedent, and Congressmen of both parties are at present inclined to ask awkward questions about it when the consular and diplomatic appropriation bill gets before the house.

The house committee on rules has been trying to get up some satisfactory method of putting a stop to the printing in the record of matter entirely foreign to the proceedings of the house, such as the entire contents of books and pamphlets, which have been printed therein during the last week; but the matter is a very delicate one, involving privileges of which every member is jealous, and nothing has been agreed upon. The common sence of the members will probably come to the rescue, and stop the abuse of a privilege which in itself is highly desirable.

Envelopes are supposed to be quite modern, but in the Birch manuscripts in the British Museum, No. 4,433—105, there is a letter from Martin Triewald to Sir Hans Sloane, dated Stockholm, April 24, 1755, inclosed in an ordinary envelope, which is opened out and mounted at the end of the letter.

At one time the number of swans in England must have been enormous. PROTECT OUR GAME.

From different portions of Clallam county, as well as other parts of the state, news occasionally comes of the merciless and uncalled for slaughter of game, which is either left to rot where killed, or from which only the choicest portions and the hide are removed. This has already so nearly destroyed the deer and elk in the country, that good hunting grounds are becoming scarcer and scarcer. Under the existing laws it seems almost impossible to get at the offenders. Nevertheless it must be stopped, or our great game elk and deer will follow the buffalo and be a thing of the past, and that at no distant day.

THE DEMOCRAT would not complain if the only violations of the game laws were by those who kill an occasional deer, elk or grouse for for their own use. In fact, it does not think it very wrong for the settler, who is trying to hew a home out of the wilderness for himself, to thus supply his table. But for those, many of whom are too lazy to work, who make a livelihood by killing game for their hides, or for those who wantonly kill these noble game for the sport, it has nothing but condemnation.

Our legislature should provide more effective laws for the protection of game from such persons as these. It has been almost impossible to enforce those in force.

THE DEMOCRAT would suggest the division of the state into districts, and the appointment or election of game wardens over the districts, whose duty it shall be to to carefully investigate violations of the law, and enforce it against these miscreants.

NOMINATE THE SENATORS.

With characteristic idiocy the Tribune attacks the position of THE DEMOCRAT as to the election of United States senator, and suggests that if the state convention should nominate the senator it would change the purchasing of legislative votes to delegate buying.

The Tribune loses sight of the fact that if the senatorial candidate was nominated in state convention, he would go before the people as much a party candidate as the nominee for governor, representative in Congress or any other state or county office. His merits and ability would be carefully canvassed. Taking this into consideration the parties could not, from a policy standpoint, nominate a man that would drag their legislative ticket down to defeat, or otherwise overload their state ticket. The result would be better candidates and better senators.

Does the Tribune imagine that W. C. Squire could have been elected United States senator if his run had been made before the people of the state? It is not probable. Let us nominate the senators in state convention.

THE Tribune does not known so much as it would have people believe about the Democratic politics of this state. In its list for the Democratic nomination for governor it has, besides James Hamilton Lewis, L. C. Dillman, Thomas Burke, C. H. Warner, M. M. Godman, J T. Ronald and Henry Drum. All of these gentlemen, Mr. Godman, who will probably be one of the candidates for Congress, alone accepted, have stated on different occasions that they are not candidates for the nomination. The candidate for governor will be Colonel James Hamilton Lewis, and he will be elected governor.

HON. S. G. CROSGROVE, who is making a canvass of the state for the Republican nomination for governor, was in this city Wednesday. Mr. Cosgrove thinks the prospects for his nomination good. He claims great strength with the Farmers' Alliance of Eastern Washington. All depends, however, as to his standing with McGraw and Bennett. If they have the gentleman from Pomeroy on their ticket it will be alright; if they haven't it's different.

HON. PERCY W. ROCHESTER, of Seattle, who is visiting this city, says Colonel James Hamilton Lewis will get the King county delegation to the state convention. Mr. Rochester is one of the most prominent Democrats in the state and his opinion about Seattle politics is sound It now looks as though the nomination of Colonel Lewis will be reached on the first ballot.

CHARLES W. ELIOT, ex-president of Harvard university, who is visiting the Sound, has done much for educational institutions. His reformation of Harvard was one of the greatest achievments of the day. His grand and solid work for tariff reform ideas will continue to bear fruit for generations to come.

THE article on another page from the Beaver country shows that the people of that section are up and watching their interests with vigillent eyes. They give the commissioners one more chance to redeem themselves. What will they do?

"A MONKEY and parrot time" would not half express the Republican racket over the appointment of inspector of customs for this place.

NEWS AND COMMENT.

In seeking for examples of human character to set before the community for emulation, we would hardly go to a bar-room public dance for our models. After all neither uniforms nor the garments of the social entre are more than an external covering.—Port Townsend Leader.

If the examples found at a bar-room public dance are not worthy of your emulation brother, do not journey unto the dance, but abide in the bar-room, and there, adorn yourself with the internal covering of a McBrayer under vest, and soon the external garments and subsequent events will array themselves in gorgeous colors and models of the correct sort will be at a premium.

Charles Jefferson Lafayette, a resident of Monterey, Cal., recently received a letter from a granduncle living in Paris, which contained his dying statement that this citizen of California is the direct grandson of the great marquis.

By the arrest of Myron Butler, a mormon living in Trenton, Utah, a peculiar case of polygamy is developed, Butler having married twin sisters at the same time. The marshal met with considerable difficulty in making the arrest as the women were so much alike he could not tell which was the first, the legitimate wife, or which the plural.

If a man could be excused for marrying more than one woman, it would be under the above circumstances when they were twins, believing that they, above all others could occupy the same house without the usual disorder. The trio might be regarded as "three souls with but a single thought," but here the quotation ends, as the two or three hearts are sure to keep up their own individual thumping.

The Tacoma News says of the United States man-of-war Mohican that she is a wooden three masted vessel, and a large yellow smokestack is a distinguishing feature of her appearance.

It does not say from what her smoke-stack distinguishes her, but reverting back to the statement that she is a wooden vessel, the feature may have been supplied that her identity may not be confounded with nothing, or that she may not be mistaken for a fishing smack. 'Tis well then, if this be true, that the Mohican has a smokestack.

An insane choir master of a private chapel in Russia killed his wife and three children.

A SAD ENDING.

E. T. Thomas of the United States Signal Service Commits Suicide.

The usual quiet of this city was disturbed Thursday morning at 9:30 by the report of a pistol shot coming from the office of the signal service observer, E. T. Thomas. Several men were upon the street in close proximity to the house, and upon hearing the report immediately entered the bed-room in the rear of the building and there, upon the floor, with the still smoking weapon of distruction in his hand, in a dying condition, lay the suicide with a mortal wound in his head. The weapon used was a 38 caliber bull-dog. The wound was not immediately fatal, death coming at 10:45 to end the sad life of the man who through physical infirmaties can not be held responsible either for this act or the unhappiness his union with Mrs. Thomas has entailed upon her. The bullet entered the head just above the ear on the right side, coming out on the left side just above the ear.

The general impression is, that Mr. Thomas was temporarily insane, which was probably augumented by domestic infelicity, Mrs. Thomas having commenced proceedings for a divorce. Insanity has for several generations made its appearance in different members of his family.

Mr. E. T. Thomas was born in Grafton, W. Va. thirty-eight years ago, and for the past sixteen years has been connected with the Government Signal Service, and at all times has been a faithful servant of the government. While stationed at Columbus, Ohio, he met his present wife, they were married soon after, Feb. 19th 1887, in New York City, and since have lived in many of the important cities of this country, coming to Angeles to assume charge of the signal office about eighteen months ago.

Mr. Thomas had an aunt and uncle upon his mother's side to die in an insane asylum after having been confined in that institution with insanity. His mother before her death developed indications of a weakening mind.

Mr. Thomas appeared upon the street as usual Thursday morning and appeared cheerful, having sent a communication to his wife to call at his office, who being advised by friends of the danger of such an act. declined, when the time appointed by Mr. Thomas passed and his wife did not respond to his summons the report of his pistol was heard. The unfortunate man when found was beyond all human aid. That, the act of self-destruction was the result of insanity is beyond doubt, as Mrs. Thomas states, during the first week of their married life she noticed that her husband posessed an unsound mind. Mr. Thomas leaves a wife and two children both of whom are boys.

The Coroner's Inquest.

Dr. McGeorge, the coroner, had the following jury summoned on the remains of E. T. Thomas: James Love, Herman Culver, W. D. Stivers, G. W. Meagher, Charles Morse and M. A. Foster. After hearing testimony given by D. G. Harvey, S. P. Carusi, Dr. Poyneer, Mrs. Cooper and J. H. Young, which evidence went to show that deceased came to his death by a wound inflicted with a revolver in his own hand. The verdict was in accordance with these facts.

It has not been definitely decided what desposition will be made of the remains, as the deceased was a Mason and belonged to the Vancouver, Wash., lodge, but it is probable that that order will take charge, and the interment will be made either here or in Vancouver.

The Republican Show.

The state of Washington sends to Minneapolis five Republican bankers as five-eights of its delegation. This is a good working majority, Two others are railroad men and one is a farmer— the last one chosen.

Get in line, toilers! Prepare to swing your hats and shout yourself hoarse for the procession of bankers and railroad men that will enunciate your principles and show you how to make their prosperity more prosperous and your slavery servile!

Swallow the pill; shut your eyes; hold your nose; gulp it down; it's patriotic—you stand by your party you know—your own prosperity counts for nothing.—Seattle People's Call.

Miss Mamie Love, will teach the Lincoln street school, entering upon the discharge of her duties next Monday. W. B. Main, who taught this school the preceeding term, will go to Blyn.

Mr. William Bell, formerly Signal service officer in this city, now stationed at Walla Walla, will be relieved in June, and it is believed he will resume his old station here. Mr. Bell was in charge of the station here from 1883 to 1888, when he was removed to Walla Walla, where he has resided until the present time. Having formerly resided in Port Angeles he acquired considerable property, which has become quite valuable with the marvelous growth and advancement the city has undergone these succeeding years.

Those gentlemen who have received no invitation from a lady, and who have received invitations to the Angeles Club dances, are requested to attend the Leap Year dance to-night without a lady escort. They are assured attention by the ladies of the different committees.

If you feel an interest in your schools, come out and see what your teachers can do.

Beached and Abandoned.

The custom house officers at this place have in their charge a sloop of 4 tons which was abandoned Wednesday about the time the Wolcott left for Port Townsend. The supposition is that the sloop, whose name has been effaced, had on board some centraband articles, probably Chinese, and running upon the cutter so unexpectedly created a panic when the little vessel was beached and abandoned. Nothing as yet has been heard of her captain or crew and no one has as yet claimed her. She evidently comes from Victoria as the few paper sacks found in her cabin would indicate.

W. R. GAY HOME AGAIN.

He Retuns Home After an Extended Visit East.—He Thinks our Future Bright.

Will R. Gay, Esq., returned home Tuesday from the east. A DEMOCRAT reporter interviewed him as to the prospect of the times.

Mr. Gay said that while east he had visited Washington City, New York, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Chicago, South Bend, Kansas City and Denver besides spending the holidays at his old home in Erie county Pennsylvania.

"Everywhere," said Mr. Gay, "I heard good words for Washington state." Bankers and business men in all the great centres of finance, without dissent, regard Washington state as one of the greatest countries in the world. The general opinion was, however, that we had given to much attention to engineering real estate booms, and not enough to developing our natural resources. There is, he said, plenty of money in all the leading cities to invest in Washington industries, but not much for real estate speculation,

Mr. Gay said if our Board of Trade would make known everywhere our natural resources, have agents at the termini of travel on the Sound and induce tourists to visit our city, we would soon have men interested in our natural wealth; men who would let us have capital to developour limitless resources.

There is plenty of money to use in business enterprises, but none for real estate speculation in New York.

Mr. Gay does not look for a great boom until after the world's fair. The great railroad companies are now building a great amount of rolling stock for the world's fair trade. Their money is now being spent in preparing for the trade of the fair. When it is over, they, he thinks, will push their track building in search of new fields on which to use their increased rolling stock.

Mr. Gay says he was interviewed by men who wanted to start breweries, wagon shops, plough shops and, in fact, every manner of industries. To most of these he gave the address of the secretary of the Citizens' Association.

Mr. Gay still has the utmost confidence in the outcome of the Washington and Port Angeles in particular.

THE SAME OLD STORY.

Grace Gilbert's Whereabouts Discovered—Wanted Badly.

What came near being a sensation was brought to light on Sheriff Gould's visit to Quillayute last week. Some time ago W. A. Lewis of that country wrote Mr. Gould that he was in position to tell him where Grace Gilbert, a notorious woman, who was wanted in San Francisco, and for whose arrest a liberal reward was offered, for forgery, was, and he would communicate her hiding place for a reward. Sheriff Gould wired Chief of Police Crowley, of San Francisco, who answered offering $300 for the woman's arrest. She was wanted for forging the name of Miss Emma Dix, in San Francisco, Sept. 10, 1890. There she was known both as Grace Gilbert and Ollie Hutchins. Mr. Gould at once went to Quillayute to see Mr. Lewis, but the latter had in the meantime left the country. Sheriff Gould commenced investigating, and found that Grace Gilbert had been living with Lewis, and that she is now in Olympia. He has notified Chief Crowley of San Francisco, of her whereabouts.

Visitors in Angeles.

Messrs. Percy W. Rochester, and F. A. Wing of Seattle, are guests of the Democrat Club of this city, this week. Mr. Rochester was the chairman of the "Kid Committee" that made the great fight for "Ronald and Reform" in Seattle. Mr. Wing was a member of the committee that engineered the campaign for Leary and defeat.

McDonald Postoffice.

Mr. Frank Clark of the upper Elwha river was in this city Saturday. He says that the enterprising people of that community have petitioned the postmaster general for a postoffice to be located at the residence of J. M. McDonald, who is to be postmaster. The office will be known as McDonald. They have also petitioned the County Commissioners to establish a voting precinct and a road district in their section. They have about forty settlers and have organized a non-political farmers' club.

Peoples' Party Meeting.

M. F. Knox, editor of the Peoples' Call, of Seattle has been making his speeches throughout Clallam County in the interest of the Peoples' party. He spoke to a fair sized audience Wednesday evening, at the Squatters' Hall. Mr. Knox holds up the sub-treasury scheme as the panacea for all our hard times and the unequal distribution of wealth.

Fortunate "Okonogan."

"Okonogan" Smith is reported to have made a sale of of all his mineral claims in the Palmer mountain section to a syndicate for $300,000. By the terms of sale the purchasers are to locate a smelter with a capacity of 300 tons per day, somewhere on the Similkimeen river this side of the boundry line. —Anacortes American.

War Maneuvers.

Orders for the great autumn maneuvers of the Austrian army near Przemlin Eastern Galacia, show that Austria intends to make a counter demonstration to the Russian maneuvers of the last two years on the frontier, and to the present massing of Russian troops at that point. Fully 100,000 men will be in the field and every improvement in the art of war will be tested. Said an Austrian staff officer in speaking of Russia: "We will show them that if they throw half a million men, as they say, over our border, we will not be slow in throwing them back."

Unlike the Pig.

In Paraguay it is chiefly the women who chew, and travelers have often described their emotions when, on entering a house, a lady dressed in satin and adorned with precious stones comes toward them and, before holding out her mouth to be kissed, as is the usual custom of welcome, pulls the beloved tobacco quid from her cheek pouch. Some of the South American tribes actually eat the tobacco cut into small pieces.

Ten years ago the ice scenery of the New Zealand Alps was almost unknown, even to the colonists. But in 1882 Rev. W. S. Green, with two first-class guides, explored the glacier region beneath the highest peak—Aorangi, or Mount Cook—and arrived, after a long, difficult and dangerous climb on the summit of that mountain. Since then the "Britian of the South" has become proud of possessing the "playground of Australasia."

Two young city bred women, daughters of a prominent wholesale merchant in San Francisco, named Lowenstein, are living on and working a land claim in the state of Washington, between Hadlock and Port Ludlow. They tock up the claim two years ago and have lived on it continuously since, built the cabin in which they live, and have cleared and grubbed twenty acres of land Their nearest neighbor is four miles away.

Nana is the most popular woman in Philadelphia. The young men who promenade Chestnut street with their best girls have foresworn ice cream saloons and soda water fountains for the beautiful Nana. Business men and men who have no business no longer ask each other to take a cocktail, they say "Come in and see Nana." The price is the same—25 cents.

Six weeks ago Nana arrived in a large wooden box from London and in this six weeks she has become the talk of the Quaker City. It is claimed that 30,000 men and women have paid their respects to this popular siren, and the figures are probably not much exaggerated.

A World reporter recently went too see just what sort of a person Nana was and to learn of the peculiar attraction that had gained such a hold on the affections of these simple Quaker folks. It was not very difficult to find where Nana holds her daily levees. It is in the back part of a long room on the ground floor of a shop at Thirteenth and Chestnut streets. which is about as central a position in Philadelphia as Twenty-third and Broadway is in New York. The front part of the store is partitioned off from the back by a dark curtain running across the room. An old Frenchman stands in the dim light of the ante-room and gives each visitor a slip with "Nana" written on it. Then he takes the 25 cents and points to a dark passage leading to the rear of the store. In the long room where Nana receives her guests, the darkness is so intense that it is difficult to see anything but the woman herself.

She is very much in evidence. At the other end of the room there is an alcove, built of dark brown plush, about eight feet broad and six feet deep. At the end of this Nana lies on a lounge, which is covered with a tiger-skin. At her head is a small table with a cup of coffee and some fruit. The background is dark and blends into the dark brown of the alcove. The same may be said of the carpet of the floor on which Nana's couch rests. Nana is lying at full length, with one arm under her head and the other holding out a great mass of long blond hair. Incidentally it it might be mentioned that Nana is not dressed.

On the other side of the room is a mirror which makes the picture look even more realistic. It is not the purpose here to pass any critical judgement on the picture. It sufficies to say that the effect is simply of coming into a woman's boudoir and finding an undressed woman. If the picture was exhibited in a gallery in an ordinary gilt frame and hung with the other pictures it would be pronounced clever, but unnecessary. In its present realistic surroundings it is the most indecent picture ever exhibited in this country. At intirvals of every ten minutes a young man with a distinct cockney accent makes the following speech:

"This picture was painted by the celebrated Russian painter Suchorowsky ten years ago and took three years to complete. It represents no one in particular. The face is that of his niece, and the figure is taken from numerous models. The artist supposing the young lady to have had a bath, after which, throwing a silk robe around her. she lies down on the sofa to sleep. She awakes to find that her robe has fallen to the floor, and looking across the room is startled at the sight of her own beauty. He shows an exquisitely modelled figure, expressive of youthful grace, the eyes and mouth seeming instinct with life."

SPOILED A FULL HAND.

Pantoms Enact a Traged in a Haunted House in California.

The quiet of this unusuaully peaceful locality has been rudely disturbed. and that, too, in an apparently unearthly way sufficiently startling to scare the stoutest unbeliever. The scene of the spiritual visitation is an old saloon on the river-road to Oroville, long since deserted by all save rats and beetles.

A year ago the house had the reputation of being haunted, but nothing definite was known about it, and since the stage line quit using that road the place has been untenanted. Recently the passers-by have seen lights in the building of a conventional ghostly blue, and heard a hoarse choked voice singing and laughing late at night, but the knowing ones only winked and said "tramps," and that seemed to settle it. Bert West and Bob Follett, two Thermalito boys, were out hunting ducks and on their way home late in the evening were overtaken by the rain. Stumbling along in the inky darkness they ran against the old stage station. Being newcomers they didn't know the ghostly reputation of the house and accordingly entered. Striking a match they found a candle on the old counter and finding the place dry and comfortable and being well provided for lunch, they decided to stay until morning.

From half a dozen packs of cards scattered about the floor they made up a full pack and proceeded to play poker. Bob had been having bad luck, but had just dealt himself a hand of threee aces and a pair of kings when a cold blast of wind extinguished the candle.

To their astonishment the room did not become dark, but was filled with a pale light in which all the objects of the room were visible.

In this peculiar light they could see a figure attired in shirt and overhalls lying on the lounge apparently asleep.

While they looked they saw a trap-door in the center of the room rise slowly up, and out of the cavity below climed a Chinaman.

The heathen was thin, almost to skeleton leanness, his eyes and his face, as he saw the figure on the lounge, assumed an expression almost devilish. He was almost naked, having only a few rags hanging about him, and tottered with weakness as he stealthily made his way across the floor. In his right hand he carried a piece of iron, rudely fashioned in the shape of a knife. While the two paralized boys watched him he made his way to the sleeper on the lounge and struck savagely and repeatedly with his knife at the throat and breast of the man before him. With a choking cry the sleeper awoke grappled with the Chinaman and threw him to the floor, stamping on him savagely with his feet after he had fallen. Then standing a moment with the blood spurting from his wounds, he gave vent to a horrible choking laugh, and fell, apparently dead, to the floor.

As he fell the light faded out of the room, and the boys regained enough strength to betake themselves speedily from the building, leaving their guns and bag of game to be recovered later. They arrived at Thermalito late that night and next day went back after their property, which they found just as they had left it. Even in daylight they did not remain longer in the building than was necessary, but noticed as they came out that there was a trap-door where they had seen the ghost emerge the previous night.

Moderate.

A colored "friend and brother" in a southern state, twenty years or more ago, who was a trial justice, says the Lewiston Journal, but recently heard his first case.

He listened to the evidence and the arguments of the lawyers, and then seemed at a loss what to do next. Seeing his dilemma one of the lawyers nudged him.

"Now charge the jury," said the lawyer. "charge the jury."

The justice thereupon rose and said: "Brethern dis am a small case, an' I shall charge but a dollar and a half."

Milan Again.

Ex-King Milan of Servia is again reveling in a scandal. This time a shop-keeper's widow in Paris involved him in numerous embarassments in but a short time after he had taken up his residence in that city after his abdication. To free himself from a fresh intrigue with an actress he aggreed to pay his discarded love 25,000 francs annually, but after making two quarterly payments of 6,000 francs ceased, when the widow resorted to the courts. Only through great influence was the scandal suppressed temporarily, and now, the ex-king has been served with papers at the widow's instance, and Milan will be compelled to appeal to his friend the Czar for aid, or will have to settle at his own expense.

A Swell Wedding.

The most notable wedding of the year in England will doubtless be that of Viscount Chelsea. The Viscount is the heir of Earl Cadogan, one of the wealthiest noblemen in England, and is said to posess an excellent character.

It is known that the queen tried to make a match between him and the Princess Maud of Wales, but the Viscount preferred his present choice even to a marriage into the royal family. The prospective bride is the daughter of Lord Arlington and is very popular among rich and poor.

A Determined Landlady.

"But there's some boarders Mrs. Flapjack. who won't eat hash."

"I'd make 'em eat it."

"No, you wouldn't."

"Yes, I would."

"I don't believe you could, ma'm. I've seen boarders that wouldn't touch it no way you could fix it."

"They'd have to if they boarded with me long, Mrs. Yerger, I'd get it into 'em somehow, even if I had to use a gun."

Bicycle Dealer— This machine will be better for your boy than a pony. It dosn't eat anything.

Frugal parent — (not entirely convinced) No it won't eat anything, but I'm afraid it'll give the boy a thundering big appetite.
