THE WORLD'S FAIR

Some of the Features of the Exhibition.

WASHINGTON'S EXHIBIT.

An Interested Railroad Man—A Hatful of Gold Nuggets — Plant a Few Sugar Beets—A Train Load of Watermelons —Other Exhibits.

The contract for constructing the Washington building at the World's Fair has been let to Rigby & Evans of Port Townsend and Spokane. This firm has build the county court houses at Whatcom, Port Townsend, Olympia and Vancouver.

The contract price of the World's Fair building is $25,000 including the architect's fees. This represents about one half the cost or value of the building as the material is all to be contributed by citizens of this state, Work on the building begins at once and all the material will be framed and prepared at Tacoma before being shipped to Chicago.

TIMBER STRAIN.

Among other features of the Washington forestry exhibit will be an exhibition of the strains Puget Sound fir can endure conpared with the fir of other sections. The fir ranks among the highest in this regard and practical demonstrations of the fact will be given at the exposition.

AN INTERESTED RAILROAD MAN.

President D .C. Corbin, of the Spokane and Northern Railroad Company, is deeply interested in the success of the World's Fair, and especially in the success of this State at the Fair. He will cr-operate in every way possible.

HATFUL OF GOLD NUGGETS.

Mayor John A. Shoudy, of Ellensburgh is interested tn the Swauk placer mines of Kittitas county. He says he will have a hat full of nuggets to send to the World's Fair from Kittitas county. Mr. Shoudy is one of the enthusiastic pioneers of Washington. Ellensburg has grown up on his old homestead claim. He is probably the only "hold over" mayor in the state. At the last city election there were two contestants for his office aud both withdrew, leaving Mr. Shoudy still in posession of the office, though much against his wish,

EXHIBIT OF GOOD ROADS.

The Washington World's Fair Commission has endorsed the plan of Albert A. Pope, of Boston, who is anxious to have the exhibit of roads raised to the dignity of an independent department The Northwest is certainly interested in anything pertaining to the best methods of maintaining good road.s

AN ALFAFA EXHIBIT.

W. L. Follette, of Pullman, superintendent of the department of agriculture, is preparing a bulletin to send out to farmers. Among other things he will urge them to save good specimens of every crop of alfafa during this year. From this lot of alfafa gathered the finest specimens will be placed in neat boxes showing the different crops for the year. Great bales of alfafa and full statistical information will also be shown, making a complete alfafa exhibit.

PLANT A FEW SUGAR BEETS.

Mr. La Follette will also urge the farmers to plant some sugar beet seed this spring. From the beets produced it is proposed to have sugar made and then at the exposition we will be able to demonstrate what an opening there is for the beet sugar industry in the state of Washington.

TRAIN LOAD OF WATERMELONS.

Dr. N. G. Blalock, president and executive commissioner of the Washington World's Fair Commission, is about to plant a great many acres to watermelons. Speaking of the matter he said: "Those people back East don't believe that we can raise good watermelons. Now I will tell you what I propose to do. I will contribute to the Washington World's Fair Commission enough watermelons next year to fill a train of cars and we will send a special train of delicious melons to the World's Fair. When we get them there we will give them away to the Eastern visitors who are skeptical about our resources. So you can all get ready for a watermelon day at the Washington World's Fair building."

COLUMNS FOR THE FORESTRY COLONNADE.

Mr. W. P. Sargent, manager of the Buckley Lumber Company, was seen by the press agent of the World's Fair Commission and after telling of his deep interest in the success of this state at the World's Fair and of his willingness to contribute his share to the state's building, he casually remarked that he had already obtained six trees for this state's two column's in the forestry colonnade at the World's Fair. These trees are fir, spruce, cedar, hemlock, alder and ash. Mr. Sargent says his mill is favorably situated near the Northern Pacific railroad and to secure these columns for the state was a service which his company gladly and easily performed.

EDMOND S. MEANY.

AT THE CAPITOL.

WASHINGTON, May, 1892.

Mr. Harrison's visit to New York this week, while ostensibly for the purpose of attending the laying of the corner stone of the Grant monument, is in reality for the purpose of settling the question of his candidacy for a renomination. He will carry with him the two men who were taken into the cabinet solely to bring about his renomination—Secretary's Foster and Elkins—and while there these political manipulators will meet the Republican bosses of New York and other states and try to make bargains with them. Secretary Foster has just returned from Ohio, where he went to lay Harrison wires, and there is reason for believing, although he maintains to the contrary, that he found the anti-Harrison sentiment too strong for him, and that the Ohio delegation will go to Minneapolis uninstructed. With such states as Pennsylvania and Ohio sending uninstructed delegations, it becomes necessary for Mr. Harrison to capture the New York delegation or throw up the sponge.

Senator Teller is doing all he knows how to do to make himself disagreeable to the administration. Not satisfied with charging Mr. Harrison with having been in league with the money power lobby to defeat the free coinage bill in the house, he knocked the bottom out of a very nice little scheme which Mr. Harrison has been concocting for electioneering purposes by offering a resolution, which was adopted by the senate, calling upon the president for information as to what steps have been taken toward the holding of an international monetary conference, and for copies of all correspondence with governments invited to participate therein. Senator Sherman made a hole for Mr. Harrison to crawl out by amending the resolution by adding "if not incompatible with the public interests," but Mr. Teller intimates that Mr. Harrison had better not try to make use of it. It is known that Mr. Harrison has had secret agents at work for mon ths trying to get the European governments to agree to take part in such a conference and it is said that they have succeeded in getting a number of them to do so, and that conference is to be held when it will do the Republican party the most good—just before the election, when all sorts of promises can be made as to what it will do.

Senator Palmer has announced himself a candidate for the presidential nomination, and he says he will endeavor to secure the support of the entire Illinois delegation.

Senator Call has offered a resolution which, if adopted and carried out, would get together some very valuable information. It provides for the appointment of a committee to inquire into the present value per mile of the railways of the United States, their present capitalization and the difference between such capitalization and their actual cost; their gross and net receipts; number and compensation of employes, amount of bonded indebtedness and capital and stock; and a list of stockholders and bondholders, giving their residences.

The senate, in its usual ponderous way, is discussing the house Chinese exclusion bill.

The Republicans are trying hard to make party capital out of the Democratic vote by which Representative Rockwell, of New York, was retained in his seat, notwithstanding the report of a majority of the elections committee in favor of the contestant. Representative McMillin, of Tennessee, voiced the general Democratic as well as the common sense view when he said of it: "I cannot see how it can affect the Democratic party. It was a case upon which men could honestly differ and upon which they did differ. Mr. Rockwell had the advantage of the skill with which his case was presented, and there were many minds that were not made up until the final presentation of the case. The very length of the debate and the perfect freedom which marked it was sufficient to show the country that the Democratic house was willing to listen every phrase of the case."

Some gossip has been caused by the report that Mr. Blaine was very brusque in his refusal of the invitation to accompany Mr. Harrison and the administration party which is to go to New York to-morrow evening to take part in laying the corner stone of the Grant monument on Wednesday. Mr. Blaine is at least consistent; there was never any love displayed by him for General Grant fn his life-time, and he declines to make a pretense of it over his grave.

Senator Voorhees says of the platform adopted by the Indiana Democratic convention: "It is a sound platform, embracing tariff reform and a currency of gold and silver and legal tender paper (greenbacks) on an equality with each other. This is the old Democratic platform, and no new departure toward Wall street." He adds that the state ticket is a splendid one, with a practical farmer at its head, and that it is certain to sweep the state into the Democratic column this year.

A whaleback barge will be commenced at Everett in about six weeks.

THE LEAP YEAR DANCE

The Young Ladies Achieve Distinction

ACTING AS GENTLEMEN

While the Men Wear a Tired Expression When Waiting to be Escorted Across the Floor by Some Lady Fair—Some of Those Present.

The evening of April 29th, 1892, will be remembered with pleasure by the amusement loving portion of the community for many years to come, as it was upon this day that the young ladies gave the most successful and enjoyable entertainment which has ever stirred the placid social stream of Angeles. The occasion was a leap year dance at which the ladies were the gentlemen, and the gentlemen made themselves conspicuous, one and all, in their frantic endeavors to deport themselves in a manner consistent with true lady-like behavior.

At 9 o'clock the hall was well filled, and a few minutes past this hour the grand march was formed upon the floor, being led by Mr. and Mrs. Warren Hoag, after which the floor committee granted an intermission of a few minutes in which cards were filled with engagements for the evening, "and all went merry as a marriage bell." A well arranged program gave satisfaction to all, and untiring attention from the ladies of the committees of the floor and reception assured a pleasant evening to the few strangers who were present as well as our own townspeople.

The ladies aid society served an elegant luncheon, and a prominent restaurant also kept its doors open for the occasion. The crowd was indeed so large that at neither place, nor, in fact, at both could all have been waited on at the same time.

From the list of names published below it may readily be seen that never before has such a splendid and representative gathering of the youth and beauty of the county been assembled together at a ball. To the young ladies, under whose management this dance was given, all thanks and praise are due. Those present were:

Messrs. and Mesdames: Lewis, Schwartz, Bickford, G. W. Meagher, Spears, Hoag, B. Chambers, J. F. Meagher, Crockett, Gould, A. L. Johnson, W. W. Shearer, S. W. Shearer, P. A. Meagher, Robert Shields, Otto Shields, Ketchum, Foss, Church, L. H. Smith, H. B. Willson, Garrison, Metcalfe, McKivor, Davis.

Mesdames: Stewart, Reckman, Ferguson, Meagher, Campbell, Heberling.

Misses: Lewis, Love, Guptill, Davis, Stewart, Voldo, Ferguson, Yarnell, Grant, Fenn, Dora Fend, Maggie Fend, Crockett, Land, Church, Kemp, Draper, Jefferies, Alice Nailor, Nellie Nalior, Susy Nailor, Shields, Chambers, Clements, Shearer, Sullivan, Reyburn.

Messrs: W. Brumfield, W. K. Clark, A. A. Smith, C. P. Brown, F. P. Fisher, James A. Wood, of Port Townsend; Percy W. Rochester, of Seattle; Fred A. Wing, of Seattle; K. Y. Church, S. A. Hall, W. W. The home waltz was played at 3:30 a. m. when with tired eyelids the merry dancers turned their steps homward just as "jocund day stood tiptoe on the misiy mountain top."

Portland's Republican Police.

The grand jury of the state circuit court made its final report Saturday. Of the police department the report says:

We find that gambling is being carried on at several places in this city, but we have had no evidence to show any disposition on the part of the police department to do its duty toward the suppression of gambling; while, on the contrary, we have evidence that police officers do not dare to make any move against gamblers, without special orders from their chief. Further evidence in the matter, fully convinces the jury that large sums of money are being regularly paid by the gamblers for the protection they receive. We further find that confidence operators of the coast make this city their principal field for work, We have had direct evidence before us showing that paid detectives of this city "stand in" with the confidence men for a "divy" in consideration of which they have full protection.

We have also evidence that saloons are carrying on business without a license, and we hereby recommend that the city present a bill to the next legislature placing the police department under the direct supervision of the common council.

THE NEWS.

A wreck occurred on the Great Northern seven miles east of Banners Ferry near Spokane. Six were killed and about thirty injured.

The condition in Russia is getting worse and worse smallpox and typhus fever has set in in the famine stricken districts. It is feared the diseases will spread all over Europe. Poles are emigrating from Russia in herds, principally to the United States.

Herr Miquel, German minister of finance, has submitted to the landtag a proposition providing an income tax. He proposes to make the income tax progressive, excepting small incomes, and he will also introduce a new tax, making interest pay more in proportion than earnings. Minister Miquel expects the increased revenues thus obtained will enable him to resign the taxes on land and industries, amounting to 100,000,000 marks, to the local authorities. His most unpopular proposition is a tax on beer, which the Centrists will especially attack, and probably in the face of opposition Minister Miquel will abandon the proposed tax.

Ex-Speaker Reed has finally made up his mind to go gunning for the presidential nomination at Minneapolis. That this might be done was intimated in a Washington City dispatch to the Post-Intelligencer. The New York Sun prints an authoritive announcement from Mr. Reed that he is a candidate for the nomination, and that he will use every effort to secure it. There is no question in the minds of astute politicians here that if President Harrison's opponents can concentrate their strength on Reed or any other man before the people as a presidential possibility, they can defeat Mr. Harrison's nomination.

Discontented Laborers.

The despotic nations of Europe had a warm job on their hands to prevent riots on May-day. Bomb explosions were numerous in Italy, about fifty arrests having been made on April 30. In Spain out door demonstrations on May day were prohibited. In Portugal troops here held in readiness to act at any minute. In many places in Belgium the police toook active measures to prevent riots. Even in Switzerland and France the police were kept active on that day to prevent riots.

An Industrial Boom.

Port Angeles has the essential elements of a large commercial town. One of its greatest needs, however, at the present time, is a pay-roll. The absence of any considerable pay-roll in the various Puget sound cities is largely responsible for the uncommonly long period of depression. Western Washington is wonderfully rich in natural resources, the development of which will make it one of the wealthiest and most prosperous states in the Union. Of all activity an industrial boom is what should be devoutedly hoped for.

Who Can Inform Him!

THE DEMOCRAT has received a communication from Mr. A. McIvar Brisbine, correspondent of the Washington World's Fair Commission, of interest to the general public as follows:

"The Men or women in your city, who are to contribute to this state's exhibit, at the Chicago exposition in any special way, I will be glad to know the names of as well as their plan of work. If a woman's club has yet been formed for the advancement of woman's work in connection with the Washington exhibit, and under the general guidance of our efficent lady superintendent, Mrs. Alice Houghton, please advise me of same, together with the name of the president of the club."

Port Angeles—Victoria Railroad.

The proposed construction of a railroad between Port Townsend and Gig harbor is the subject of a lengthy article which appeared a day or two since in the Tacoma Ledger. Frank Ross of Tacoma is the projector of the line, and he is confident that the road will be built. If it is and makes a connection with the Port Townsend Southern, as it is proposed, Victoria will reap some little profit considering the fact that the Port Angeles Southern intends to make connections with that road also and intends to run ferries direct from Port Angeles to Victoria. Gig harbor, the proposed terminus of the new line, is near Tacoma and will be connected with by ferry.

Building the road would thus give Victoria a new and rapid route to the upper Sound country.

THE NEWSPAPER CHANGE.

The Port Angeles Times has lost its identity in the Tribune-Times.

The Republican ring, whose handiwork has been so noticeable in the events of the present county administration, and in local Republican politics, has accomplished another coup d'etat.

After attempting, in different ways, first by bulldozing, then by coaxing, to get the Port Angeles Times to quietly submit to their machinations, and, failing in each, be it said to the credit of the Times' editor, they have emptied their coffers of their treasures and bought the Times at a good, round price, said to be $4,500.

The Times had talked out in meeting, it had put itself on record as opposed to the scheming, underhanded political methods of the "gang" which have been running Republican politics. They couldn't stand this. With a fearless newspaper to fight, they recognized that it would be a hard matter to hold the Republican party down and bend it to itself. So, hard effort though it was, the only recourse was taken. The ring bought the Times, paying its owner's price therefor.

The Tribune Job Lot Company, and their immediate cohorts will continue to run the only Republican newspaper now in Port Angeles, and with it the Republican party of Clallam County.

THIS week has made some changes on the newspaper staffs of Port Angeles. The most marked of all is the retirement of Arthur A. Smith, Esq., of the Times, from the editorial profession. In this, journalism in the Northwest has lost one of its most brilliant lights. Mr. Smith was an able writer, a positive man, with the courage of his convictions, and a true gentleman. His place cannot be refilled nor easily substituted. Wherever he goes and in whatever enterprise he engages, Mr. Smith has the sympathy and good will of THE DEMOCRAT.

FOR LEWIS.

The Tacoma News, probably the ablest edited paper in the State of Washington, refers to James Hamilton Lewis in the following complimentary language:

J. Hamilton Lewis may have more pairs of trousers than the most of us, but it must also be remembered that he has more sense. A man who can raise himself from the ranks of the laboring class and become within a few years the foremost criminal lawyer in a state so full of able lawyers as this, is made of the stuff politicians cannot afford to laugh at. To be sure he is not gray-haired and he is not worth millions of dollars, but the honors of officers should not be altogether reserved for the old and wealthy. William E. Russell, of Massachuetts, is neither rich nor senile, and so distinguishingly brilliant has been his administration that he has been seriously spoken of for the presidential nomination. In point of ability, character and personality Colonel Lewis would outshine any Republican who might be nominated.

SEATTLE salary warrants were sold Monday at a premium of 3-8 cents on the dollar. This shows the confidence reposed in the new Seattle government by the business men. This is the first instance of this in Seattle since the adoption of the new charter.

OF COURSE the Republican members of Congress voted against removing the tariff tax on binding twine. The bill passed, however. The Republicans in Congress cannot obstruct. There is not enough of them.

NEW HAVEN, Conn.; Saginaw, Mich.; Cleveland, Ohio, and Boston, Mass., are all experiencing labor strikes. This in the face of the fact that the McKinley bill for the protection of labor (?) has been in effect more than a year and a half.

REFERRING to a social entertainment the Key City Graphic, of Port Townsend, said:

The affair was strictly temperate, something almost unknown in the history of social entertainments in this this city, whether public or private.

Yet the Port Townsend press complain of the criticism of Port Townsend morals.

Now that the Senate committee has reported favorably for the establishment of a fort on Puget sound, these waters will probably receive the protection they demand.

The Republican Senate did what it could for the Chinese, but the House would not stand their work.

WHAT'S the matter with Spokane? She's all right.

SPOKANE is in line for Democracy and reform.

THE PRESS.

OUR CITY FATHERS.

The Council Meets and Transact Routine Business—Streests to Be Opened.

The city council met Wednesday evening, their regular meeting night having been changed from Thursday until Wednesday.

In the absence of Mayor Smith, Mayor-pro-tem Quinn presided. Councilmen Lewis and Metcalfe were absent when the council met, but Mr. Lewis came in before adjournment.

Surveyors Polk and Blackwood reported progress in the survey of street grades. Their report was placed on file.

The bills for street work for the month of April were audited and ordered paid from the street fund.

The reports of the city officers were filed and their salaries ordered paid.

Over the miscellaneous monthly bills a little discussion was raised, as they were approved by Councilman Lewis only. The other member of the committee, Mr. Peterson, having resigned. Councilman McInnes and others, who thought the Second ward was not fairly represented on the street committee tried to force the issue on the mayor by laying the bills on the table. Many of the most important bills were then taken from the table and passed. The bill of the Washington Electric Light company was among these.

Councilmen Peterson also objected to the payment of the special policemen appointed to look out for property at the time the Greenleaf was burned. He voted alone, however, against the payment.

Councilman McInnes objected to the payment of the Times bill for printing, as it had not been audited by the entire finance committee. Mr. Peterson favored its payment, because he did not feel like kicking a dog when it was down. Mr. Smith is down, he said, so he would vote to pay the bill. Mr. McInnes then withdrew his objection "because," he said "Smith was on top."

A wrangle was then indulged in over the opening of streets and the employment of a city engineer, brought about by a motion by McInnes to refer a petition to open Fourth street from Laurel to Francis street to the street committee for an estimate as to its probable cost. Mr. Peterson objected as he thought the street committee's estimate unreliable. Dr. Lewis said if it was referred to the street committee he assured the council the estimate would be within the limit whether the work cost more or not. He favored the opening of streets and claimed his position was right and would be maintaned until it was shown the city was not getting value received for money expended. This he defied anyone to show. McInnes' motion carried, Bell and Peterson voting "no." Lewis moved that Oak street be opened from Second to Sixth. This was opposed by Peterson who claimed that the city would soon be over its limit of indebitness. Lewis and McInnes favored the motion as they thought the work necessary, and they wanted to keep the laborers employed. The motion carried, Peterson voting "no." The street committee reported, favoring the opening of Second street from Peabody to Francis On motion of McInnes, it was so ordered Peterson voting "no."

The ordinance committee was instructed to incorporate, in the ordinance being prepared, a clause giving the Health officer to remove nuisances in certain cases on motion of Lewis, Peterson voted "no." The council then adjourned,

WASHINGTON AND THE GOVERNOR.

Young Democracy's Candidate—Colonel James Hamilton Lewis.

Colonel James Hamilton Lewis, of Seattle, says the Tacoma News of the 30th ult., arrived in the city yesterday and is staying at the Tacoma. It is well known that Colonel Lewis is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor, and his aspirations are enthusiasticly supported by multitudes of warm admirers not only in King country but throughout the State. Colonel Lewis is an able lawyer, a brilliant speaker and an accomplished gentleman. A southerner by birth and education, his speech and manner mark him out as an ideal type of the old chivalrous gentry of the South, but added to Southern manners and speech are the pluck, daring, push and energy which Lewis has imbibed in the West and won him hosts of friends throughout Washington. It is this mingling of the chivalrous south with the rushing, restless spirit of the West in the person of James Hamilton Lewis that has made him out one of the most picturesque, if not the most picturesque, political aspirant in the State. His power of rousing the enthusiasm of an audience and winning the admiration, if not the support, of political foes gives color to the belief of his enthusiastic friends that he could sweep the State next fall and capture the gubernatorial prize. Therein lies his strength, and it is the strength of the strong.

"I am over here," he said to a News reporter on private law business. I am not making an active canvass for the governorship. I am ambitious of the honor, and if the nomination comes to me I will make a vigorous effort to win.

"I can only say as to myself. Were I a candidate I should merely regard national issues as incidental and would wage the conflict before the people on the record of the present administration of the State—the extravagant expenditure of the people's money and the vicious domination of machine party politics."

The Abandoned Sloop.

A telegraph dispatch from Victoria under date of the 2nd inst., dispels the mystery concerning the abandoned sloop which was beached about a week ago last Wednesday, and subsequently taken charge of by local custom officials: Friday night two young men stole an Austrian fisherman's boat, took aboard Lucretia Vincint, 15 years old, and set sail for Port Angeles. They were seen leaving the harbor by an Italian fisherman coming in at dusk, The party reached Port Angeles, disembarked, and let the boat go on the rocks where it was found the next day, badly battered. The owner was notified and came over from Victoria to claim his property, The men and girl went on to Seattle. The girl, though so young, is a notorious character and came from Montreal.

From Forks.

FORKS, Wash., May 1—[Special] Mr. O. P. Nelson, the postmaster died at 8:10 a. m. April 30, of consumption. For about two years he had been failing, but not very rapidly until since January first. He leaves a widow and one child. Mr. Nelson was a native of Sweden, coming to this country about twenty years ago, for a while he worked about the mill ports up Sound, coming to Forks in 1876 where he has since resided. He was among the first settlera in Forks and was the only white man here at one time for nearly a year. Mr. Nelson was notary public and had discharged the duties of postmaster since the office was established up to a few weeks ago, when he transferred the care of the office to J. E. Crawford, with a recommendation to the department that Mr. Crawford be appointed in his stead; thus showing that he had given up all hope of living. Mr. Nelson was one of the most highly respected citizens of Forks, by his death the community losses a valued member. The funeral took place Sunday at 2 p. m.

This is the second death in this community. By a curious coincidence the committee to select a site for a cemetery were to report yesterday, which they reported having selected a site on the ranch of S. S. Irwin.

The petition and road notices were prepared and will go to the commissioners immediately.

J. P. Austin was assaulted by Chris Fasel a few days ago. Austin was over to the prairie a few days later exhibiting himself, he had been badly used up, the affray was the outcome of a feud of long standing.

Mr. Austin has received the appointment of postmaster at his place, the new office to be called Solduck, and the office at Shuwah to be discontinued. Post-office matters are looking up in this vicinity. The settlers up the Bogachiel have petitioned that an office be established in township 27, range 13, at the place of Jacob Lochbaum, he will be postmaster.

The hop industry is active, poles are all up, new yards are being set out, and old ones being grubbed. On Mr. Whittier's place a small worm was discovered in the hop hills, which has caused some worry for fear that they may be the larva of the dreaded hop plant louse from which the yards here have hitherto been free.

Mr. J. M. Keen returned Friday from a trip up Sound.

Democratic State Convention.

Secretary George Hazzard, of the Democratic State Central Committee writes as follows regarding transportation arrangements which the committee have made with the various lines for the advantage of delegates:

Arrangements have been perfected with the Northern Pacific railway company and the Union Pacific railway company by which each of these roads will transport all persons (delegates and others) from any point in this state to the forthcoming Democratic State Convention to be held at Vancouver, Clarke county, Wednesday May 25, 1892, at one and a fifth (1 1-5) fare for the round trip on the certificate plan. Full fare is charged in going, but a purchaser of each ticket will get a printed receipt from the agent selling the ticket which, when countersigned "George Hazzard, for presiding officer or secretary" will entitle the holder thereof to purchase a return ticket for one-fifth (1-5) the regular fare. Tickets will be good going from Sunday, May 22, to Wednesday, May 25, and returning from Wednesday, May 25, to Saturday, May 28. However, tickets can only be bought to Portland, Oregon, from which point delegates will have to be transported to Vancouver by the "Dummy Line," the fare being less than half a dollar for the round trip. Mr. Hazzard, either in person, or by some person duly authorized thereto, will be present in Vancouver to see that the certificates are properly stamped as above indicated upon presentation. The roads declined to make an open excursion rate unless the committee could guarantee them a sale of 250 tickets, and for this first convention the committee does not feel that they could make such a guarantee. Therefore the certificate plan is adopted.

An Important Question of the Hour.

Not another town in Western Washington is more favorabiy situated than Port Angeles for a manufacturing centre. It would seem that the public spirit and the genius of the community should unite in an effort to utilize the magnificient water power nature has favored this spot with in driving the wheels of numerous manufactories. There are booms and there are booms, but infinitely more beneficial than all else would be an industrial boom. Any community without producers is in a very critical condition. Did you ever consider that patriotism of home is quite as high a trait of character as patriotism of country?

The Bond Sale Consummated.

The sale of the Port Angeles bonds has at last been consummated. City Treasurer Kiernan has received word that $44,000 has been paid over to the National Bank of North America to his credit. He has accordingly called in for payment all general fund warrants issued prior to February 1, 1892.

Several of the young ladies and gentlemen, pupils of Professor Main, assembled at the home of Miss Alice Henson on last Saturday evening to bid him a last farewell. The evening was a pleasant one consisting of games of all descriptions.

Professor Main has resigned his position as instructor in the Port Angeles City School to accept one at Blyn, Wash., where he taught a long term last year. He is in receipt of numerous letters from Fall City, this state, requesting him to go there and take his old position as principal of the Fall City school where he served two years ago in that capacity. Professor Main is an active man in his profession and his services are highly appreciated wherever he goes. He has been with us for the past eight months, during which time he has shown himself to be not only one of the ablest instructors, but a thorough business man with an untarnished character and who ranks well with our rising young men. Professor Main holds the position as president of the Squatters' Association and is also connected with the Squatters' Hall Company of which he is secretary.

Dr. Strother Leaves Angeles.

It is with many regrets we have to record the departure of Dr. Strother on Thursday morning. We knew for a week or two that he was preparing to leave us, but hoped all the time that he would change his mind and remain here. He came here seven months ago from Port Crescent well recommended for his professional ability and gentlemanly deportment. His sojourn with us has but fully verified his recommendations. He has discharged the duties devolved upon him with a kind, true, firm hand, and his efforts in relieving the afflicted who came under his care were crowned with success. He has shown unusal ability in his profession. As a gentleman he stands above reproach. He has made many warm friends here who will remember him always more kindly, and who will wish him every success wherever he may go. Should he ever return to Angeles we will receive him with open arms and give him the welcome that men of his calibre deserve. So far as we know there is not one single stain upon his escutcheon. Though modest and unassuming we feel safe in saying that his star will ever shine brightly and that he will be a valuable addition to whatever community he may cast his lot with. His courteous and gentlemanly deportment will recommend him to all with whom he may come in contact with.

An Excellent Financial Showing.

While a number of persons are complaining because the condition of the times is somewhat strained, it would be well for them to peruse the annual statement of the Mason Montgage Loan Company. That company has loaned $3,821,792.58 in twenty-two counties in the state. This amount represents 3,850 loans. These loans extend over a period of from five and a half months to ten years, the average length of a loan being three years eight months. Of the entire amount the company has been forced only to foreclose on property involving $13,600 in order to protect its securities. The statement also reveals the fact that the company has sustained no loss whatever, consequent on foreclosure. Few other states in the union can make a better financial showing. Revalations such as these should convince any reasonable person that notwithstanding the era of temporary depression Washington stands out in bold relief as one of the most solid, the best and the most promising states in the union.

Bank of Port Angeles makes loans to settlers to prove up with.

Rip Van Winkle.

The play of Rip Van Winkle is the one chosen for the opening of the Imperial Comedy Company at the opera house next Tuesday evening. This piece is the same version made famous by the great actor, Joseph Jefferson, and is a dramatization of Washington Irving's story, the Vergaland of the Katskill mountains. The title role is in the hands of George Berry, who plays the part to the life, in fact, to use the words of a Victoria critic, it was one continuous laugh from the opening to the finish of the play. He was particularly good in the pathetic scenes and drew tears from many eyes. Miss Belle Inman as Gretchen, Rip's scolding better half, was a splendid effort and well deserved the applause she received. The company is far above the average and have a splendid performance.

Of Vital Importance.

Fires in the fallen timber on the reservation should remind those interested that what might prove a disastrous fire can be averted if ordinary precaution is taken to clear up and burn the brush and logs before the dry season begins.

The Centennial.

Dungeness and Sequim people will celebrate by a picnic and horse racing at Sequim prairie, and by a dance at Dungeness in the evening. Preparations have been made for a great time. Many of the Angeles people expect to attend and enjoy the matchless hospitality of the Dungeness folk. Great preparations have been made for a celebration at Port Townsend also. Gov. Ferry and other distinguished guests will be present.

Saucy Bruin.

What came near being a lively time with a bear terminated in bruin's death in Texas Valley the other day. A little child of William Stone was playing near the door, when it happened to look up and saw a large black bear on a log near by. It commenced to cry, partially realizing the situation. Mr. Stone came to the child's assistance. The little girl pointed out the huge object and said, look at that big black thing on that log.

Mr. Stone rushed into the house and got his gun and made war on bruin, shooting twice when his ammunition gave out. He then sent for his neighbors, but before they arrived he found more cartridges and killed the bear. The dogs had held bruin at bay in the meantime.

Spokane Democratic.

Victory again perches on our banner. Spokane, in the Eastern portion of our state, has spoken in unmistakable terms for Democracy and reform. Mr. Drumheller, the Democratic candidate for mayor, received about 400 majority over Mr. Graves, Republican. The Democrats also elect the balance of their city ticket, the treasurer probably excepted. The council will have nine Democrats to six Republicans. All this augurs well for the Democracy in the state fight this fall.

Rip Van Winkle.

Commissioner's Proceedings.

The county commissioners have been in session all week. Amongst other things they have created voting precincts on the upper Elwha, at Rena, west of Beaver and two on the Ozett. They have also leased the Catholic church for a court house.

Sam Houston's Indian Wife.

"Do you see the little moss-covered grave down there by the creek?" asked my companion pointing to a small patch of sagebrush bordering a little stream on our right.

"There," he continued, "is the grave of Sam Houston's Cherokee wife."

"Sam Houston's Cherokee wife!" said I, not a little surprised at the revelation. "And is it a fact that Houston married a Cherokee woman while in the Cherokee Nation?"

"Yes, it's a fact," continued my friend, most certainly is—though I'm told that Houston's decendants have always denied it and successfully kept this unwritten chapter out of the life history of the great statesman and patriot. Just why they have persisted in doing this I never could quite understand, for could they have seen this fair maiden of the Cherokees, whose dark locks had never been stirred by any ruder air than the breezes of Providence, and whose rich, transparent beauty, peculiar to the mixture of Caucasian and Indian blood, was unrivaled even by the fair daughters of Vienna, they would not have denied her notice in the biography of the Texas hero."

We had by this time reached the little patch of sagebrush wherein the grave had been pointed out to me, and I proposed that we dismount and examine the premises. I had before heard the story of Huston and his romantic marriage to a pretty Cherokee woman, but had supposed it to be a mere myth. Now to be brough face to face with this convincing proof aroused my curiosity to such an extent that I was glad to have an opportunity to find out all I could about the matter.

My companion was an intelligent, well-read half-breed Cherokee, who had already beguiled some three hours of our tiresome ride from Muskogee this morning with his entertaining stories of Indian life. He was the ex-Judge of the Supreme Court of the nation, with a mind stored with much of the unwritten history of his country. His gray locks indicated that he had already lived men's alloted three-score years and ten, and, posessed none of the reticent characteristics peculiar to many of his race, he was always ready when an opportunity offered to relate some of the interesting incidents which happened in the early days of the Cherokee Nation.

After dismounting and hitching our horses to some shrubby black jacks that stood by the roadside we walked down to the moss-grown mound. Implanted at the head of the grave stood a roughly hewn tombstone of native marble, upon the face of which was carved in an irregular manner the simple inscription:

Tahlihina Sleeps Here.

That was all. Why a more comprehensive epitaph had not been inscribed my friend could not explain.

Near the neglected grave were the decaying logs and tumbled-down chimney of an old house surrounded by briers and shumach bushes. Less than a dozen yards to the east a babling brook raced playfully on its downward course to the Arkansas river half a mile below, blending its cheerful music with the song of the birds and the melancholy sigh of the tall cottonwood trees that skirted its banks on either side.

"And there," said my friend after a few moments of silence, pointing to the heap of decaying timbers, "are the remains of Sam Houston's house. It was there that Houston and his little wife with laughing eyes spent one brief year of unalloyed happiness. Yes, one short year, for in the fall following their marriage, when the forests had shed their robes of summer green and the prairies were brown and dry, the young wife sickened and died. Houston laid her rest by the brook, and on the eve of his departure for Texas he placed that little tombstone at the head of her grave."

After a little further examination of the grave and its surroundings, we remounted our horses and continued our journey to Fort Smith. Before reaching our destination however, Judge Brewer (for that was my fellow-traveler's name) told me the following romantic story of Huston's life, which he said he got from Houston himself and the near relations of the Cherokee wife, and which I thought worth recording:

"Yes, I knew them both," he commenced. "Her maiden name was Rogers—Tahlihina Rogers—and she was a decendant of one of our proudest Cherokee families, being a niece of old Chief Jolly, one of the leading men of his day. Tahlihina's parents died when she was an infant, and she was raised and educated by Jolly, who, though married, had no children of his own. He loved and treated her as he would have done a daugeter of his own, sparing neither painstaking or money such as the country at that time afforded. Sam Huston knew her in Tennessee before the Cherokees moved to this country. They grew up together, and young Sam conceived a most ardent affection for her. They attended school together in the same little log house, Sam helping her along all he could in her lessons, and his young heart gladdened with a swelling pride as he saw her learn and her face grow brighter than the faces around her. Thus it was that Sam and Tahlihina grew to be lovers in childhood, and it is not at all strange that the Cherokee maiden ever after held a warm place in Huston's heart. It was a combination of circumstances that seperated them while yet in their teens; Sam went away to complete his education at college and ere he returned Tahlihina had removed with her people to this country.

"Meanwhile she never forgot for a moment her gallant and ambitious young acquaintance, and through the long years that followed their first seperation she continued to love him with the entire strength of a feminine nature, though nearly a score of summers passed before she saw him again.

"Huston returned from school, brilliant and promising. He entered into politics and became the friend of Andrew Jackson, achieved note in the war with the Greeks, and was finally elected Governor of Tennessee. Then he married—not the woman he really loved, but a brilliant and accomplished lady suitable to a man of his rank—and they apparantly had every reason in the would to be happy. But they were not; he did not love her nor she did not love him.

"On the eve of their wedding day Huston entered his wife's room and found her weeping bitterly. He asked her the cause and she told him she had married him through pique, that she loved another and her heart was breaking,

"Houston did not upbraid her for her conduct, but took it as a rebuke on him for marrying other than the woman he loved. He never spoke an unkind word to her, but abruptly left the house, resigned his position as Governor and departed for the country, no one knew whither.

"About four or five manths after his unhappy marriage in Tennessee Houston was a passanger on a small river steame. which was plying the Arkansas between Little Rock and Fort Gibson, and was one of the first to disembark at Webber's Falls, a trading post in the Cherokee Nation, some fourty miles west of Fort Smith, Ark. Ex-Chief Jolly lived but a few miles from the falls and so it happened, was in town when Houston arrived. Of course Jolly was somewhat surprised to see him, but the meeting was mutually a happy one, and Houston accompanied the old man home that evening.

"Tahlihina Rogers—unmarried and more bewitching than ever—still lived with Jolly, but had long since despaired of seeing Sam Houston again. She had read in the newspapers of his successful career as a statesman and Governor, and of his brilliant marriage to a lovable woman. Then, when the tall, handsomely dressed stranger who accompanied her uncle home that evening was introduced to her as Sam Houston, you can better imigine her surprise than I can describe it.

"'Tahlihina, do you know me?" said Houston as he hesitatingly extended his hand"

"'I once knew you a long time ago,' she answered, and timidly taking his hand their eyes met for an instant. Then with a tender, sad smile on her pretty face Tahlihina left the room without another word or look. Nor did Houston see her again for weeks to speak with her notwithstanding he spent most of his time at Jolly's house. Tahlihina knew—or thought at lesat—that he was now married and that he could never be more than a friend to her, and his friendship she seemed to spurn. She evaded him whenever it was possible, and when unavoidably thrown into his company she treated him with an almost icy coldness. No one knew why Houston was in the territory and the mystery of his presence only deepened when he failed to explain why he so abruptly left Tennessee. A short time after his arrival Jolly ventured to ask him of his wife and the object of his presence in the nation, but he evaded an answer by shifting the conversation to something else. Tahlihina, as well as the rest of his acquaintances here, as I have stated, had learned through the newspapers of Houston's position as Governor of Tennessee and of his recent marriage, and, notwithstanding most of his time was spent in the chase with his Cherokee friends, it is generally believed that his visit to the Cherokee Nation was upon some kind of important business. But as the months sped on without any sign of Houston's returning they began to think differently, and when Jolly again asked him to explain matters he did so, telling him that he had deserted his wife, resigned his governorship and never expected to return. Houston always liked the Cherokees, and he told Jolly that he intended to spend the remainder of his life among them.

"Well, things rocked along for awhile longer and Houston and Jolly finally embarked in the mercantile business at the Falls. Tahlihina no longer shunned his company, but on the contrary filled the place of an able assistant in the store most of her time.

"In the meanwhile, however, Houston wrote back to his wife in Tennessee, telling her that he had deserted her forever, and advised her to sue for a divorce. This she lost no time in doing, and, it is said, was married to the fellow she loved on the very day that the divorce was granted. Of course it suited Houston exactly, for within a month after he got the news he and Tahlihina were happily married.

"I never could understand why it was that Houston selected the secluded, out-of-the-way place that he did for a home, unless it was on account of the picturesque scenery and abundance of game which surrounded it. At any rate he gave up his business at Webber's Falls, built a rude log house 'way up there at the foot of the hills, where he and Tahlihina lived for a year, seemingly in the fullest enjoyment of health and happiness. They often visited the military post at Fort Gibson and soon became favorites with the officers and their wives. They would always go horseback, each taking their rifle to use in case they encountered a herd of deer or buffalo, both of which were plentiful at that time Tahlihina was Houston's equal in the art of both riding and shooting and often they would go hunting together, she seldom failing to bag as mush game as he. Thus they lived a wild, sweet life for a year, and Houston more than once said during that time that he would not exchange such a life for the presidency of the United States or for the wealth of a millionaire.

"It was late in the fall, about a year after their marriage, that Houston had to leave home a couple of days to attend to some business with the chief of the nation. He kissed Tahlihina the morning he left with his usual fondness, and thought she was never in her life so beautiful and dear to him. He finished up his business with the chief and hurried back home the next evening to find Tahlihina violently ill and her fair young face scorching with fever. She lived but a day longer, and, being delirious from the beginning of her brief illness, she never recognized Houston again or knew that he clasped her in his arms and wept bitterly over her when she died.

"That dark day, for the first time in many years, the stern face of Sam Houston was stained with tears. On the morrow, when the bright sun came up over the blue peaks to the east, it stole sadly through the windows of the rude cabin, where the dead lay calm as marble and the living in silence, and set a crown of glory upon the peaceful brow of Sam Houston's Cherokee wife. She was reverently laid to rest there on the brink of the little stream, which has ever since been called Tahlihina Creek by the natives. Houston left within a year for Texas, where a successful career awaited him, and there now remains but faint traces of his once happy home among the Cherokees. The lonely grave and its history has been almost forgotten except by the older inhabitants. Will T. Canup, in St. Louis Republic.

A Tribute from the Fair Sex.

At a banquet given at Atlanta Ga., on April 13 to Mrs. Frank Leslie-Wilde, Mrs. A. Miner Griswold made the following speech in proposing, in response to a toast to herself, the toast: "The Gentlemen, God Bless Them."

They divide our joys, they double our sorrows, they treble our pleasures, they quadruple our responsibilities and out-general us in everything. They increase our self-respect, they awaken our sympathy, they excite our curiosity and arouse our enthusiasm. We comfort them and the precious fellows don't know it. They are splendid escorts—for some other man's wife or sister.

As our fathers how we love them as our brothers, how proud we are of them; as our husbands, how we adore them, and how we cover all their little domestic shortcomings with the mantel of domestic charity, that the world may think they are the models of perfection the lords of creation should be—the gentlemen, God bless them."

The Shingle Industry.

The rate at which new shingle mills are being erected in Washington evidences the increasing demand for the product of our mills in a practical manner and leaves no doubt that the present year will show a splendid production. Along the lines of all new railroads almost the first industry to develop itself is a shingle mill at every accessable point, and at present it is impossible to keep track of those in different stages of construction, many towns, reporting four or five, with from 50,000 to 250,000 daily capacity.—The West Coast Trade.

Washington's Mammoth Timber.

Mr. W. L. Davidson, of Tacoma, has received his commission as timber collector for the World's fair building. He has been at work two weeks. The largest timbers ever sent East will soon be brought to Tacoma and prepared for shipment. They include two sticks 122 feet long and 42 inches in diameter at the small end; also eight more of that length, but of smaller diameter. These came from North Bend in King county. Other timbers, nearly as large, are coming from Edmonds and Shelton. Mr. Davidson has had such success so far, all timbers have been contributed, though some of the largest pieces are considered worth nearly $500.

The railroad is investigating to see whether it can ship to Chicago timbers 122 feet long, which exceed in length the three flat cars in which they are to be shipped. The danger lies in turning sharp curves when the timbers are supported by two cars only, the middle car going out from under them, as it must keep the track in making the curve. Heretofore the longest timbers shipped East were 111 feet long.

If the long timbers can be shipped whole, it is expected that they will astonish the "natives" of the effete East.—Tacoma News.

Romance.

What strange things happen! There is Colonel F. J. Parker, editor of Spring Grove addition to Walla Walla. As soldier, scout, miner and prospector he has traveled over the roughest parts of North America. Sometimes his hoss caried him and sometimes he had to carry the hoss, so rough was the way. And yet he came out fat. And after all this, the other morning he kissed his babies goodby, started for his office, stepped out on a smooth sidewalk and broke an ankle.

Why do things happen that way? That same ankle packed him over the roughest rimrox, where there wasn't a level square foot in sight. —Puyallup Commerce.

No Victory in It.

The reasoning Republicans over this way see no victory for that party in the recent Tacoma election. That party elected the mayor and over half the other officers, but that is certainly a defeat with a 1,200 majority to begin with.

Such straws as this show that the Democrats have more than a fighting chance to elect their ticket the coming fall, and will do so beyond much doubt, in case the old gang of boodlers make the nominations.

The people are sick and tired of boss rule and intend to throw off the yoke of bondage to any party that is ruled and governed by the unscrupulous gang that has dictated and used the nominations in the state to get into the offices for boodle in too many flagrant instances to receive the support of as loyal people as we have in Washington. Let the voters keep cool and calm and watch for the boodle head and crush it with ballots wherever it shows above the surface of the cesspools of corrupt politics.—Pomeroy Independent.

Professor John Fiske declares that there is not a competant scientific man in the world to-day who is not an evolutionist.

Mme. Scalchi says that on the days when she is to sing at a matinee she eats, at 10 o'clock, a breakfast of rare meat and bread and takes no more food until 6 o'clock.

Mrs. Sangster, the editor of Harper's Bazar, is said to be as attractive on the lecture platform as she is in the editorial chair. She has a very musical voice and graceful manner of speaking.
