CONVENTION AT WHATCOM.

An Important and Interesting Meeting Next October.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Democratic Society of Washington it was decided to hold the next meeting the 5th and 6th of October.

The society also selected as its state orators at the Whatcom convention the Hon. Chas. S. Voorhees, of Spokane, and Judge S. Fogg, of Tacoma. Many orators of national repute have also been invited to be present and address the convention, after which they will make a tour of the state. Among the number are Senator John W. Daniels, of Virginia; Congressman W. J. Bryan, of Nebraska; ex-Governor G. C. Glick, of Kansas; Hon. Henry Watterson, of Kentucky; State Senator W. W. Dodge, of Iowa; Senator Call, of Florida; Senator Blackburn, of Kentucky; Hon. J. Covert, of New York, and Col. W. R. Steele, of St. Louis. It is expected that there will be 5,000 in attendance at the convention.

The Shingle Output.

More shingles are being shipped to the East from the Sound than ever before. Twenty to twenty-five car-loads go East from Tacoma alone. Last year the cut of shingles in Western Washington was 5000,000,000 and the sales about 425,-000,000. This year the cut will reach 1,000,000,000 and the shipment 900,000,-000.

AN HOLY SHOW.

The County Commissioners "Crawfish."

M'INNES NOT IN IT.

The County Funding Bonds Controversy—Sold to McInnes, and Then Resold to C. H. White & Co.—A Prospective Suit.

The last act in what might be termed a monkey-and-parrot show was given at the court-house Tuesday by Clallam county's monkey-and-parrot board of county commissioners.

The play was all about the county funding bonds. The story runs about like this: At their May meeting the board of county commissioners decided to issue $50,000 10-20 bonds, with which to redeem the county's outstanding county warrants. They advertised for bids to purchase the same, in the county official paper, the bids to be filed with the county auditor by June 11. At a meeting held May 31, especially called for that purpose, the board sold them at private sale to Donald McInnes, giving him a cash ommission of $600 therefore. Our board was also so generous that it did not require any deposit, check or bond for faithful performance of contract.

In the meantime the advertisement was still continued in the papers. Last Sunday J. D. Riley, representing the Puget Sound Bond and Trust Co., of Seattle and A. E. Grier, of E. H. Rollins & Sons, of Denver. Colorado, arrived to bid on the bonds. These were followed Monday morning by P. T. White of C. H. White & Co., bond buyers, of New York. All these gentlemen are bright and wide awake men of affairs, and it did not take them long to smell what they took to be a sharp trick on the part of the county commissioners. The two first named gentlemen filed their bids, but the county auditor refused to receive that of C. H. White & Co., as it was about 10 minutes late before it was presented. However, although only a youth in age, Mr. White was not to be outdone and remained on the scene to fight out his case before the county commissioners.

The fun commenced at once when the commissioners met Tuesday morning. The majority of the county commissioners at once claimed that they were under contract to deliver the bonds to Donald McInness, and thought no bid could be opened. They thought it would not be fair to Mr. McInnes, now that his bid had been exposed, to let others in that they might outbid him. It was suggested by Mr. Grier that it was generally understood that the duty of the county commissioners was to look out for the interests of the people and not that of Mr. McInnes or any one else. The gentleman further asked what the people would think of such actions as this. The chairman of the board answered by stating, in effect, "I don't care for the people."

Mr. Riley also showed that his company had a standing offer in the hands of the county commissioners for the bonds at par, before the private sale. He protested strongly against favoritorism. The board finally laid the matter over until 1 o'clock.

It was after two o'clock when the board met Tuesday afternoon. The fight begun at once. White wanting to get his bid in; Grier and Riley both endeavoring to get the county commissioners to promise to either postpone the sale and re-advertise or to accept the highest bid, and McInnes claiming that he was entitled to the bonds, as it would not be fair to his clients to sell the bonds to other parties after he had done work on the contract and had been at at expense of time and money.

Gray strongly favored giving the bonds to McInnes, as he claimed that McInnes would have an action for damages if the bonds were not delivered to him. It was maintained by those fighting McInnes' contract that it was only an option for seventy days, and obtained, not only without consideration, but he had not been compelled to put up a guarantee of good faith, while those bidding had been required to deposit a certificate check of $1,000. It was claimed that even if McInnes did have an action for damages the county could well afford to pay him the damages asked and then it would save money. Gray wanted to return the bids of all those bidding and to let McInnes have the bonds. Mr. White asked that the bids be opened and read so that the people could find out how much was to be lost by the board.

After an hour of running fight, the bid of C. H. White & Co., was admitted, Gray voting "no." The other bidders were then permitted to withdraw their bids and to again file new bids. This was done by the representatives of the Puget Sound Bond and Trust Co. and E. H. Rollins & Sons. These bids were filed at about 2:15, and were as follows:

The Puget Sound Bond and Trust Co., Seattle, offered to take the bonds at 6 per cent. and pay ¾ of one per cent premium. the county to furnish blank bonds.

E. H. Rollins & Sons, Denver, 6 per cent. and a premium of $400, and attorneys opinion as to legality, at cost.

C. H. White & Sons, New York, pay such a premium as will net the buyers 5¾ per cent. interest, the county to pay actual cost for bonds and attorney's opinion as to legality, which he guaranteed would not exceed $350 and for blank bonds, guaranteed not to exceed $150. making a net premium of $440 to the county. Davis moved that the bid of C. H. White & Co., be accepted. The motion was lost. Gordon moved that the bonds be put up at auction. Carried, Gray voting "no." White bid $440 premium as his old one; Riley raised him to $445; White then raised his premium to $450, and his bond was accepted.

McInnes gave notice that he would contest.

Thus ended a holy show, such as only the Clallam county commissioners are capable of enacting.

THE STEAMSHIP PHRA NANG

Arrives at Tacoma From Yokohama.

The arrival of the steamship Phra Nang from Yokohama, at Tacoma last Friday, was an event of no little importance, it being the initial trip of the trans-Pacific line of steamers recently established between the Sound and the Orient.

The event was properly observed by the booming of cannons, the decoration of vessels in harbor with bunting and colors, and addresses significant of the occasion.

Her cargo consisted of 140 bales of raw silk, all told, valued at $53,608. It was all placed upon baggage car No. 388 placed in bond of $5,400 and consigned to the New York collector of customs who will inspect it on its arrival to see that the bales contain nothing but what they are represented to contain. Raw silk is admitted duty free into this country, and in order that the shipment may reach its destination as soon as possible, it is not examined here but is bonded through to New York, there to be inspected by the government's officers. Also 10,816 caddies of tea, 100 bags of rice, 3,750 bags of of refined sugar, 1,100 bales of hemp, several hundred packages of fire crackers, several hundred cases of curios, in the load. All these things were rapidly taken from the hold of the vessel and placed in the warehouse or on the trains ready for shipment according to destination. In this unloading was illustrated the great advantage Tacoma possesses over San Francisco as an entrepot. There the goods, after leaving the ship's hold must be hauled in wagons a great distance to the railroad. Here the ship and the cars are not 150 feet distant.

The Phra Nang brought 158 Japanese, 74 Chinese and one European passenger. Some freight and passengers were landed at Victoria, but no stop was made at Port Townsend. The Japs go to Portland and San Francisco and the Chinese to Portland, The steamship has a crew of 50, including 28 Chinese, 12 Japs and 10 Europeans. She will sail for Yokokama in about 10 days.

To Navigate the Yukon.

J. J. Healy of Alaska, is in Portland. He represents a company which is having a steamboat built on the Sound for navigating the Yukon river. It is expected that there will be a line of steamers from the Sound or San Francisco to the mouth of the Yukon next season, and this boat will connect with it and open up the navigation of the great Yukon. The men who organized the first company for navigating the Columbia became wealthy through their enterprise, and it is probable that large fortunes will be made in Yukon. The vast territory through which the Yukon runs contains rich mining sections, and the opening of navigation on the upper reaches of that river will enable them to develope and produce great wealth. The Yukon is 2000 miles long, and for three-fourths of this distance is navigable for steamer, even through the Rocky mountains, which it traverses by a narrow, deep channel, without falls or obstructions. It receives many large tributaries and is itself the largest American river flowing into the Pacific The scenery in the pass through the Rockies is very grand.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

The Chicago Convention has finished its work and finished it well.

Cleveland — grand, noble, fearless, Grover Cleveland — that manly, courageous chieftain of Democratic reform, who was long ago nominated in the hearts of his countrymen for the chief magistracy of our nation, has been called upon by the Democratic hosts to bear the banner of reform, that has been so brightened by his own individaulity and sound doctrine, in the greatest political contest of modern times.

It is well. It is Democratic.

Nobly did those old sages, Carlisle, Palmer Gorman, Watterson, Vest, Gray, Pattison and others, who themselves at a time doubted the availability of Cleveland, stand together, and, in a manner too firm to be misunderstood, demand that the will of the masses of the Democracy be executed.

Cleveland had already been selected by the party, it was the convention's duty to ratify. Clearly did the convention understand its duty, positively did it execute it. Well does the Post-Intelligencer say of their action that it is a proof of "intelligence, capacity, party patriotism and courage that commands the respect of the opposition"

Cleveland has without doubt the first place in the hearts of more Americans than has any other American. He is regarded by all, irrespective of party, as a man of sterling honesty and unquestioned integrity.

The Democratic masses of the nation are satisfied. Their choice will be the next president.

FALSEHOOD AS A REFUGE.

Caught fairly at its unscrupulous falsifying the Tribune seeks a refuge in further and deeper falsehoods. The Tribune says:

"The publication of Hon. Allen Weir's letter smoked out THE DEMOCRAT. It lamely asserts that it did not receive the communication from Allen Weir (published last week) until Sunday. That is all bosh and will be believed by no one."

This shows the brazen affrontery of falsehood. The statement made by THE DEMOCRAT can be sustained by affidavits from Dr. F. S. Lewis, Horace White, Thomas Malony, Louis R. Flowers, B. T. Smith, W. K. Clark and the editor of THE DEMOCRAT. Again we quote:

"The Tribune received a copy on the 9th, and the copy to THE DEMOCRAT had undoubtediy been mailed prior to the date of the one we received by several days."

This is not true. The Tribune DID NOT receive its letter on the 9th. as is shown by the Olympia postmark on its letter June 9th. This can be proven by affidavits from Charles D. Ulmer, unless he would perjure himself, and by others.

The letter by the editor of this paper to Allen Weir was written on June 13th, as can be sustained by affidavits of the business manager and the editor of this paper.

The truth of the matter is the Tribune editor admitted that THE DEMOCRAT had been placed in a false light before the people, but he refused to correct his cowardly attack, and when it is shown up to the public he again seeks lies as his refuge.

Well may that paper say:

"When the overflowing scourge shall pass through it shall not come unto us; for we have made lies our refuge, and under falsehood have we hid ourselves."

JAMES HAMILTON LEWIS.

The Tacoma News is probably the ablest edited paper in the state of Washington. Franklin L. Lane, its editor, is one of the most brilliant orators. and farseeing men in the whole northwest, so when his paper speaks emphatically it means more than a little. This paper never spoke truer words nor safer than the following.

The two elements to consider chiefly in the carrying of this State are the farmers and the laboring men, two classes which are discontented, and are keenly alive to the fact that they have the power in their hands to make or unmake any candidate or any party. What man in this state has shown most sympathy with these classes, has made most persistant efforts on their behalf and is assured most certainly their support?—James Hamilton Lewis.

But Lewis is a dude, a man of fine clothes and of splendid whiskers,

True, Lewis does not go into society wearing a jumper and overhalls, neither does he allow his beard to become matted and like unto a bird's nest. But did any man ever find that Lewis's fine raiment made him a snob? Does Lewis shrink from grasping an honest hand because his trousers fit and his coat hangs properly? Do Lewis's whiskers ever interfere with his seeing a friend who is in trouble and does the fit of his coat ever interfere with his extending his hand in help?

In the play "The Power of the Press" the black-moustached villian attemps to bully a very elegant stranger who is defending a woman, but to his sorrow he discovers that this club dude is an athlete, So will it be with those who think that Lewis's clothes indicate the man. Republicans will find that Lewis strikes a man's blow. Strong, virile, sensible words come from those lips which are fringed by the elegant mustache. Popularity such as his is not gained without merit and abitity. In an extended law practice Lewis has been always found direct, honest and faithful to his client. As a member of the Legislature Lewis was a staunch and brilliant defender of the rights of the people, The caresses of the prigs of society or the "influences" of the wealthy do not swerve him. He lives the life of a polished man of the world with an honest ambition to gratify and a true purpose to carry out. He is not rich and cannot throw a sack into the campaign, but he can bring into the canvass a verility, an enthusiasm and a sincerity which mean more than the buncombe of high-priced professions and the noise of purchasable cattle.

ONE of the saddest events recorded on the history of time is the untimely death of Emmons Blaine at Chicago last Saturday. The sympathy of a sympathetic people that has been shown for that great American statesman, James G. Blaine, in his hour of affliction was never more worthily or justly bestowed. The action of the Democratic National Convention at Chicago in passing resolutions of sympathy and in cheering that name that all Americans admire. though they may disagree with his principles, was one of the most magnanimous acts of record. It was just. It was deserved. It is such acts as these that evidences the brotherhood of man.

SENATOR HILL and his handful of followers have found that the masses of the Democratic party are doing the nominating this year. The Seattle Telegraph had better take warning itself. One does not have to put his ear to the ground to catch the vibrating of the demand of the people of this state for Colonel James Hamilton Lewis.

THE Seattle Telegraph had as well get in out of the rain. Colonel James Hamilton Lewis is going to be nominated and elected governor of the state of Washington whether that paper likes it or not.

HON. ALLEN WEIR has not shown up as yet to fulfill his part of the tariff discussion to which he challenged THE DEMOCRAT.

So Can Lewis.

S. C. Cosgrove, of Pomeroy, arrived Wednesday evening to set up the pins for his nomination by the Republican party for governor. He is an affable gentleman and can tell a good story, but so can Mr. Lewis and a host of other gentlemen who possess sounder ideas on popular government. The best thing we can say of Mr. Cosgrove is that he is a law partner of Mr. Godman, the Democratic warhorse. With such an associate he cannot be a very bad man. —Olympia Standard.

To the Trade.

I have just received a large invoice of one of the best brands of California canned tomatoes, bought at a bankrupt sale, which I will sell at 10c per can or one dollar and five cents per dozen, until sold out.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

Renominated for President on the First Ballot.

GEN. A. R. STEVENSON

Nominated for Vice-President on the First Ballot—The Platform All Right Convention Enthusiastic and Harmonious.

For President,
GROVER CLEVELAND,
of New York.

For Vice-President,
A. R. STEVENSON,
of Illinois.

The foregoing is the result of the Democratic National Convention that convened at Chicago on Tuesday last. The convention lost no unnecessary time, having finished its work in three days.

W. C. Owens, of Kentucky, was made temporary chairman and William L. Wilson, of West Virginia, permanent chairman. Thomas F. Byard, of Delaware, was chairman of the committee on resolutions.

The platform adopted denounces Republican protection as a fraud and a robbery, it calls for tariff reform. It denounces the Force bill, trusts and combinations which have been forced upon the people by the pernicious class legislation of the Republican party.

On financial matters the platform says:

We denounce the Sherman law of 1890 and demand its unconditional appeal; we favor the free coinage of both gold and silver on such a basis as will maintain the two metals on a parity with each other.

The most radical feature of the platform is the tariff plank, amended by the radical reform element so as to denounce protection as a fraud.

The platform was adopted at the Wednesday evening's meeting, after which nominations for president were declared in order. Gov. Abbett. of New Jersey, placed Grover Cleveland's name before the convention, the cheering was intense. For more than twenty minutes enthusiasm reigned supreme. DeWitt, of New York, named David B. Hill, and Yeoumans of Iowa, named Horace Boies of Iowa. While considerable enthusiasm was manifested in each case, the nominations were really but formal, as it was a fore gone conclusion that Cleveland would be nominated on the first ballot.

The vote on the roll call of states could not be gotten for this place, but as Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri and Pennsylvania had decided upon voting for the great New Yorker as a unit, it is safe to say that the majority was large.

The convention at once adjourned until 2 o'clock Thursday. On convening Ex-Governor Gray of Indiana, Chief Justice Morse of Michigan and General Stevenson of Illinois were placed in nomination for vice-president. The ballot resulted in the choice of General Stevenson.

The convention was marked throughout for its enthusiasm, its order and for the pacific manner in which those defeated bowed to the will of the people.

DEMOCRATS VS. REPUBLICANS.

Republicans Can't Even Play Ball for Harrison—They Are Not In It.

The Republican base ball players of Port Angeles challenged the Democrats to play base ball last Sunday afternoon. The natural aversion of the Democrats to Sabbath breaking kept them from accepting until their taunts became unbearable, when Ben Smith and J. C. Burke and other Democrats became indignant, and, just to show the Republicans that the Democrats could play ball, they mustered a team, and the next presidential election was decided on the diamond Sunday afternoon. The Democrats went sweeping into power by a score of 18 to 5. One Republican said, "if Blaine had been nominated he thought the Republicans would have played better ball, but Harrison isn't in it." The special features of the game were O'Brien's home run; the pitching of Mell Albrecht and the double play of Hancock to Burke, all made by the Democrats.

After the game the Democrats organized a club with H. B. Crockett, manager, and J. C. Burke, captain. The players enrolled are:

Herbert Vail, Harry O'Brien, J. M. Albrecht. J. C. Burke, H. D. Cowan. George Hancock, W. B. Rose, Scott DeLaunay, Hiram Love, Bay Fletcher, Will Fend, Will Leonard and Maurice Fisher.

To find how the thing was done, the Republicans will meet this aggregation again next Sunday at 2:30 o'clock,

"LET THERE BE LIGHT."

Port Angeles Controls and Operates Its Electric Light System.

Doubtless one of the best, and what will prove one of the most profitable business strokes, was made by the municipal government a short time since. when it leased the electric light plant, with the privilege of purchase at a stipulated price at or before the expiration of the lease.

It seems to be an almost universal opinion that the ownership, control and operation of the light and water system should be vested in the local government. And wherever the experiment has been given a thorough trial, it has proved in every way satisfactory, obtaining better results not only to the private but to the public consumer.

As an instance. prior to the ownership and operation of the water system of the city of Portland the established rates to a family of four persons for the use of water for domestic purposes was $1.50 per month and 75 cents per month for each additional person. The rate now obtaining under the management of the city is 75 cents per month for a family of four and 35 cents per month for each additional person.

The principal object, of course, of the municipal ownership of these commodities is supplying the consumer at the very lowest rate possible consistent with proper and economical operation.

The benefits which accrue are of double nature. First the cost to the city is nominal, together with it not being restricted in the number of lights in use. 2nd, As the government is the people, and the people constitute the government, the purpose of honest, ligitimate and economical government, is to reduce the cost of living to the lowest point in keeping with safe and sound business principles, therefore, it is plainly the duty and certainly should be the aim of the municipality to reduce the cost of electric lights until they are within reach of every citizen.

Since the ultimatum is benefit to the greater number, not one of profit and benefit to the few it is to be hoped the principle will prevail until it finally triumphs in the ownership by the city not only of its light but water system.

Every citizen imbued with the sentimant for good and economical government will most assuredly encourage to the uttermost any effort as praiseworthy and so preemently calculated to promote such and object.

It is understood that the cost of incandescent lights for private use, as well as arc lights for business houses will be materially reduced.

The capacity of the plant is: Engine. 72 horse power; arc dynamo, 50-2000 candle power; 32 in use—16 for street lighting, 16 for commercial purposes; incandescent dynamo, 500-16 candle power; 200 candle power in service.

The management of the system is under the supervision of a special committee of the council, consisting of Messrs. Lewis and Thompson with Mr. G. Klaffert as superintendent.

The city council is to be congratulated particularly upon the wisdom of its action in this direction.

AT THE CAPITOL.

WASHINGTON, June 13, 1892.

The Democratic smile is a very broad one these days, as it has every reason to be. Democratic prospects were never brighter, and nothing but the making of a gigantic mistake by the Chicago convention, and there exists no reason for anticipating anything of that sort, can prevent the Democrats naming the next President of the United States. The Minneapolis convention could not possibly have done more to please the Democrats than it did do.

It made the infamous force bill a part of its platform; it nominated the champion of that measure for president, and, as if the Democratic cup of joy were not already overflowing, it nominated Whitelaw Reid for Vice President. Mr. Harrison is acknowledged to be weak in States which the Rebublicans must carry to win; but Whitelaw Reid is weak everywhere. He has for many years made war in his paper—the New York Tribune — on all organized labor, and particurlarly upon the typographical Union, a fact which will not be forgotten or forgiven because he for the purpose of getting himself on the ticket, allowed the union printers to take charge of his office until after the election. The files of his paper will furnish reasons enough enough to prevent any friend of organized labor casting a vote for the ticket which carries his name.

Mr. Reid has another element of weakness that will neither be lost sight of nor forgiven by the old "stalwart" element in the Republican party. Some of the most bitter attacks ever made upon Grant were written by Reid during the Greely campaign when he was supporting the Democratic National ticket. The Grant men never forgive those who attacked their idol, as one James G. Blaine could testify to, if so disposed, and it is certain that many thousands of them will refuse to vote the ticket of their party because Reid's name is on it. A weaker ticket than Harrison and Reid could not have been named.

The return of the Republican bosses who went to Minneoplis to "down" Harrison, was much quieter than their departure from Washington; but notwithstanding professed intentions of support they are still bent upon "downing" him, and this time they will succeed, as the contest will be before a tribunal that cannot be controlled by Federal office holders, and when the tribunal shall render its verdict against Harrison and Reid a joyful chorus of "I told you so's" will be heard from Quay, Clarkson, Platt & Co.

The presence at the Minneapolis convention of such a large number of office holders, has revived the idea of an amendment to the civil service reform law, prohibiting any Federal office holder becoming a delegate or alternate to any nominating convention. There is no question that such an amendment would be in the line of real reform, and may think that Senators and Representatives should also be included.

The investigation of the Census Bureau will not probably proceed much further until after the Chicago convention, as Representative Fithian, chairman of the committee, has gone to Chicago to remain until after the convention concludes its work. He says he proposes making short work of the investigation when he returns.

The conference committee on the river and harbor bill held its first meeting today. Its members are confident of reaching an agreement and getting their report before the Senate and House this week.

It is understood that Mr. Harrison is almost as much pleased at having at last succeeded in getting rid of Mr. Blaine as he is at being renominated. He will take pains in filling the vacancy not to select a man larger than himself

Representative Bryan. of Nebraska, whose speech on the tariff made such a wide and favorable impression last winter, is delighted. He says: "Harrison's nomination will be especially helpful to the Democrats of the west, because he represents all that is stalwart in the Republican party. The young men are drifting to the Democracy, and there is nothing about Harrison to change the drift. He represents all that is high in protection and all that is bitter in partisanship. This, together with the fact that he is opposed to the west on the silver question, will make his nomination of special advantage to the Democrats of that section."

The death of Col. L. L. Polk, president of the Farmers' Alliance, which occurred here on Saturday, upsets the plans of the leaders of that organization to a very great extent, as he had been slated for a place on the ticket which it is proposed to nominate at Omaha on the 4th of next month.

THE COLLEGES FOR CLEVELAND.

P. M. Troy Returns From Ann Arbor--He Reports Everything for Cleveland.

Preston M. Troy arrived at Port Angeles, Wednesday, from Ann Arbor, Michigan, where he has finished his junior year in the law department of the great university of Michigan.

Mr. Troy has been very active this year in the political movement in the American colleges, being one of the enthusiastic free-traders who predominate in this greatest American college. He was selected as the chairman of the reception committee at the great Democratic demonstration at Ann Arbor which took place Friday last, but left too soon to act. He was also recently honored by the Democrats of Ann Arbor by being selected as one of the principal speakers at a Democratic mass meeting held at Ann Arbor, June 2nd.

Mr. Troy is a Cleveland enthusiast, and claims that all Michigan is on fire for matchless Grover Cleveland. He thinks his nomination means his election. The Republican collegians were all sadly disappointed over Harrison's nomination, they being for Blaine or McKinley.

Mr. Troy will remain in Port Angeles until next September.

Guard Against Fire.

Every precaution should be taken by the city authorties against fire on the Fourth of July. There is always great danger attending the use of fire crackers and other explosives which are discharged so carelessly by thoughtless boys.

Special police should be detailed whose duty should be to restrict the discharge of fire crackers or other explosives to certain outer limits of the city consistent with safety. By all means the council should prohibit their use in the business centre of the city, and should see to it that the provision is rigidly enforced.

If proper measures are taken the city will doubtless avert what might result in a very destructive fire.

The fire department should also be instructed to thoroughly sprinkle the principal business thoroughfares on the morning and the evening of the Fourth, and for that matter, to take any other step necessary to the adequate protection of the city. There should not be criminal negligence in this important matter.

TO RATIFY CLEVELAND.

Troy were selected as a committee on arrangements, and Judge Lane and F. P. Fisher, as a committee on finance.

THE CITY COUNCIL.

The City Council met Wednesday evening in regular session. The most important matter considered was the opening of Pine street. After much discussion it was decided to open Valley street from Second to Third, to open Third from Valley to Pine, and to open Pine from Third to Sixth street.

Tuesday the council met again. The management of the electric light plant was acted upon and the council appointed C. M. Kent, superintendent, subject to the future action of the council.

The council refused to appropriate $250, asked by citizens for Fourth of July celebration.

Captain Greenleaf, of Seattle, arrived on the Garland Tuesday afternoon, to look after his extensive property interests in this city. Mr. Maguire, a rancher, living near this city, had his leg broken in an attempt to drive a wild, unmanageable and unbroken pony. The furious animal overleaped all bounds of propriety, and made a plunge into the City hotel, throwing the driver with great force to the ground, viciously kicking him in the fall and breaking his leg just above the ankle, and causing other severe bruises. The unfortunate man is getting along as well as could be expected under the circumstances.

The Oregon Improvement Co. Moves.

News comes from Port Townsend that the Irondale smelter, with a capacity of 24 tons of pig iron per day, which has been closed down for several years, will be put in operation again by a strong company, consisting of C. J. Smith and John L. Howard, of the Oregon Improvement Company, and Henry Scott, of the Union Iron Works, of San Francisco. From authentic sources and Mr. Smith's statements, it is believed the object of their visit is to open the Irondale smelting furnace. He said they had an offer for 50,000 tons of pig iron at a good price.

The participation of the Oregon Improvement Company in Port Townsend enterprises, would seem to indicate the early resumption and the speedy completion of the Port Townsend Southern railway. It certainly is one of the favorable signs of the times.

FAREWELL RECEPTION.

The Knights of Pythias Give Mr. and Mrs. Hoag a Reception.

A farewell reception was given Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hoag at the Port Angeles opera house, Monday evening, by the members of the Knights of Pythias.

Dancing was the order of the evening. At midnight, as by accident, all were gathered in one corner of the beautiful opera house, Mr. J. W. Troy escorted Mr. Hoag to the centre of the group and introduced him to Mr. R. A. Grimes, who in a neat speech presented to him a gold watch charm, a present from Gate City Lodge No. 65 K. of P., "as a constant reminder," the speaker said, "of two of your most sacred obligations. On the outside of this locket are these letters, so magical to all Knights, 'F. C. B.'—Friendship, Charity, Benevolence, a canstant reminder of your obligation to your fellowmen. Inside, protected carefully, is a place for the photograph of your wife, that will constantly remind you of that most sacred of all vows."

Mr. Hoag, in an appropriate and feeling manner, thanked the brothers of the lodge and the citizens of Port Angeles generally for their courteous and friendly treatment.

The evening passed very pleasantly to all.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Hoag, Dr. and Mrs. F. S. Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Carrigan, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Hoole, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. E. Metcalfe, Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Meagher. The Misses Lewis, Hannah Draper, Fannie Draper, Jefferies, Love, Voldo, Fitzsimmons, Fenn, Crockett and Hastings, Dr E. George, and Messrs. R. A. Grimes, A. A. Smith, C. R. Brewster. Horace White, L. R Cole, W. R. Dodge, S. A. Hall, W. W. Dedman, J. A. Wilson, J. L. Bell, C. W. Cook, J. W. Troy, B. Crockett, John Brown, jr., and F. G. Jones.

After the reception a small party of the guests, including Mr. and Mrs. Hoag, Miss Lewis, Miss Love, Miss Fitzsimmons, Mr. L. R. Cole, Mr. S. A. Hall, and Mr. J. W. Troy, repaired to the City Hotel where an excellent luncheon was served. Toasts were proposed and responded to. After a pleasant hour the wee sma' hours of morn warned the party of "home, sweet home."

Mr. and Mrs. Hoag, who have been residents of Port Angeles for about five years, coming during the first colony days from Chicago, left Tuesday for Chicago. They will probably be absent for a year or more.

The invitation is printed in script with gold ink, upon black card board, in the upper left hand corner is a photograph of the condemned criminal who is to dance a solo upon nothing to the time of the reportorial chestnut "a dull thud." If everything works well there will be but one set danced during Mr. Price's little entertainment, as no amount of applause could induce the distinguished artist to respond to an encore.

The Consumer Pays It.

Mrs. Emery made one point in her Colfax address that farmers would do well to consider. "The consumer pays the tax on imports," said she. "The importer receives the goods and pays the duty of twenty-five or fifty per cent. which he adds to the price of the goods. The wholesaler takes the tax out of the retailer, and the retailer charges it all up to the consumer." The tariff is a tax and the consumer pays it.—Colfax Commoner.

In the Extreme Southwest Corner.

The new town of Frankfort, in the extreme southwest corner of Washington, nearly opposite Astoria, Oregon starts with a paper named the Chronicle and therefore must become great. But the paper, which would do credito a much larger town, gives evidence of ability to do an active part, in addition to its mascot name, toward building up a city in that far away corner of this great and varied state. Frankfort will be a new Seattle.

The Modern Girl Better Off.

There is no doubt that Maude's great-grandmother would be shocked at the "goings on" of these latter days. The old lady would faint at the sight of her descendants' ways; but, after all, isn't the change for the better? Certainly the dress is better than the terrible lacing of revolutionary days, and if Maude does go "low neck" to a ball, she appears on the street in a stout cloth gown. How any woman ever lived to be thirty in ye olden time is a mystery. Why, the way they tramped about in no sleeves and low necks and fasted themselves then and fed (supposedly) on lilies is enough to make a galloping consumptive invalid pale with envy.

Evelena, pale and languid, read poetry all day, except when she floated about like a sylph in the rose garden. It is bad to rashly judge, but one's private opinion is that the aforesaid Evelena had her chunk of beef in the pantry.

Why did Evelena spend all day in a rose garden? Was she supposed to be studying the beauties of nature, or had the old man really sent her out to spray the bugs off the bushes?

Another weakness of Evelena's was her relapsing on all occasions into "floods of emotions" and "tears of sweet sensibility." In fact, one is tempted to believe that she wandered about clothed in "her regal beauty" and an old pale green calico wrapper. But one fails to find a reason for her "emotions."

Doubtless they were kept "on tap," and didn't lose their sparkle by frequent turnings of the spigot. But it must have been real uncomfortable to sit up at night learning how to weep and faint just at the right time.

But Maude irreverently thinks the "goings on" of her great maternal ancestor a trifle stupid, and there is no doubt that she finds the "healthy" fashion far more enjoyable than the "dying-in-leafy-June" style of beauty. Then Maude walks, rides, drives, goes boating and plays tennis till the blister on her nose murmurs of "cold cream." Still she enjoys it, and would you change if you could?—Washington Post.

Making Them Young.

There once lived in the City of Mexico a Frenchman known as Otavito (little Octave), whose rogueries kept the town in a ferment. At one time he claimed to have discovered a specific for the rejuvenescence of women, and by means of sensational advertising he succeeded in gathering a clientele of forty or fifty ancient dames, who were assembled, on a certain day, in a long sala, tricked out with astrological symbols, crucibles, alembics and all the paraphernalia of charlatanry. The conjurer presented himself before the ladies and addressed them in flamboyant language, ending as follows: "And now, senoras of my soul, it is needful that the mystic ceremonies before us be opened by the oldest one among you."

Then, addressing her whose appearance seemed to indicate priority, he asked her age. "Thirty-seven years, senor," simpered the beldame, who was at least in the seventh decade. "And you, senora?" "Thirty-six." And so on, until he had got them down to a declared age of twenty years, with a maximum of thirty-seven. "Well, ladies all, you perceive that without further proceedings the miracle is accomplished," said Otavito, "for the least gallant of men could not call her aught but young whose years are but thirty-seven—and you see for yourselves that is the age of the oldest among you!"—San Francisco Argonaut.

Physicians and Their Drugs.

The active competition for a living that the physician in New York has to encounter has resulted in a curious method for stimulating trade. There are doctors in this city, graduates in due form and no doubt in many cases men of ability, who remit all fees for consultation, relying on the profits they obtain from the medicines they prescribe for emolument. Certain standard prescriptions they have put up in quantities, and these they sell directly to the patient. Where a prescription has to be compounded the patient is sent to a certain drug store, at which the doctor has an arrangement for his commissions.

Between these two devices the practitioner really captures a reasonable fee, and he gets it, moreover, in cash, where he otherwise might have to give credit, with a strong show of loss, for though patients will not dream of demanding credit for medicines, they make very small bones about leaving the doctor's bill unpaid once he has permitted them to run it up.—New York Cor. Pittsburg Bulletin.

Peculiar Pronunciation.

Landor always pronounced yellow as yaller. We have heard Mr. A. R. Wallace, the eminent naturalist, during the course of a lecture, repeatedly sound it thus, a mode of pronunciation said, indeed, to be traditional in many good old English families, and which includes the substitution of laylock for lilac, Room for Rome, goold for gold, and woonderful for wonderful.

A homely old rural dean, long since dead, used always, like Sam Weller, to leave out the "w" in woman, and his "Wilt thou have this ooman to be thy wedded wife?" was apt to mar the solemnity of a marriage service.—London Tit-Bits.

An Easter Scene in Athens.

For some time before Easter the city of Athens wears a picturesque aspect. This is due in great part to the number of shepherds who, with their flocks, have come down from the mountains and are camped in every available open space, engaged in selling their lambs. There is no family so poor as not to break the long Lenten fast with an Easter lamb, the value of which is about a dollar, and a veritable massacre of the innocents is going on.—"Customs and Lore of Modern Greece."

Attacked the Wrong Dog.

There was a tremendous rumpus and excitement in a prominent drug store on Chestnut street, near Twelfth, the other day. A fair maid, strolling down the street with a large mastiff, stopped in the store for soda. The place was crowded, and among the crowd were two other ladies with two other dogs.

The other dogs were considerably smaller than the mastiff, but by a lightning calculation they decided that by combining forces they might take a fall out of him. Instantly acting, the rumpus began.

In one-fifth the space of time it takes to write it the air was filled with snarls, yelps, barks, growls, dog hair, female shrieks, children's howls and screams, soda water, muffs, small packages and male profanity. Women and children clambered upon the counters or fled into the street; the clerks and soda water boys grabbed the fighting dogs, and the big mastiff was dragged out upon the pavement, where a crowd had already gathered.

Seeing his mistress on the outskirts of the crowd the mastiff gave a bound toward her and hurled an old gentleman and a small girl flat on their backs. The crowd scattered as if it had been an egg thrown against a barn door, the big dog barked loudly and the old gentleman grew red in the face in his efforts to do verbal justice to his feelings. The excitement lasted until a reserve policeman came up and asked what the matter was and was told nine different stories, all of which were wrong.

Inside the damage was computed at six broken tumblers, five or six dresses ruined by soda water stains and a huge bowl of fresh eggs rendered valueless by being sat in by a fat baby, which was placed there by its mother during the first outbreak of the excitement. One of the small dogs had about a half pound of meat bitten out of him by the big one.—Philadelphia Record.

A Cruel Joke on Boomers.

Many thousands of settlers camped on the southern line of the soon-to-be-opened Cheyenne and Arapahoe lands received word that the president had issued a proclamation opening the lands. Instanter they by hundreds and thousands invaded and took claims. The military at once proceeded, however, to eject them. Then they learned that some one had played a practical joke on them, and they were 100 miles from a telegraph office.

This has greatly complicated matters, as under a strict interpretation of the law they became "sooners," and cannot hereafter acquire titles to public lands.

SWANK'S BOOMERANG

LUDICROUS SHOWING OF THE PROTECTIONIST "TIN PLATE LIARS."

The Manufacturers' Association Reports Three Times as Large a Product as Manager Swank Can Find—The Consumers' Association Finds Still Less.

So much has been said and written on the rise of the tin plate industry in the United States as completely to bewilder the people. On one side claims are advanced that the growth of the industry since the McKinley tariff went into effect is phenomenal; on the other, all these claims are denied and the counter-claim is set up that only a little tin plate has yet been made, chiefly by coating imported sheets of iron or steel, and that the total product is less than 1 per cent. of the consumption.

The Tin Plate Manufacturers' association has done much to create a favorable impression. On Jan. 9 it gave out for publication a list of the works in operation, with their capacity, and those now building and projected. Twenty-four of these, it claimed, were already turning out tin plate, with an estimated weekly capacity of 38,550 boxes, while four others would soon be in operation. This statement was published in full by The Bulletin of the American Iron and Steel Association and other high tariff papers.

In January last the Tin Plate Consumers' association issued a statement to the effect that the production of tin plate in this country was equal to less than 1 per cent. of the consumption, and consisted largely of terne plates made from imported sheets of iron or steel. And in order to get at the facts the association sent out to its members a circular letter requesting them to send in reports of the amount of American tin plate used by them since the duty went into effect. So far 115 reports have been received, exactly 100 of which declare that their writers have not bought any American plate whatever, while fifteen report that they have bought some—the total being 665 boxes.

Each of the above statements is vouched for as being perfectly correct. Which is to be believed?

The manager of the American Iron and Steel association issues annually a directory of the iron and steel industries, a publication which is regarded as a standard authority in the iron trade. If the statements of the Manufacturers' association are correct, they ought to be vouched for by this directory, the edition of which for 1892 has just appeared. The statements have been corrected down to the middle of last February. To any one who is curious enough to consult this directory it will at once become evident that Manager Swank has not used by any means as much latitude of statement as is in his weekly Bulletin.

In the directory Mr. Swank describes the status of twenty works which are "in operation or are prepared to make tin or terne plates," and ten others now building. Of these he says fifteen are in operation. In giving their weekly capacity he is careful to use the word "estimated," which he explains in a note as meaning "reported by the respective manufacturers." The following comparison between the statements made by the Manufacturers' association and the facts as ascertained by Mr. Swank is interesting:

(a) Not mentioned. (b) Not given.

In addition to the above, Mr. Swank gives four plants which are now projected. Of the list of twenty-four works which the Manufacturers' association says are in operation, with a capacity of 38,550 boxes per week, Mr. Swank gives only twelve as at present producing tin plates, to which he adds six not mentioned by the Manufacturers' association. Of the twelve remaining Swank says nine are building, one is projected, one does not exist either as in operation, building or projected. For the one remaining, the St. Louis Stamping company, he gives no estimate whatever.

Not counting the number of boxes produced experimentally by Norton Bros., the Somerton company and the St. Louis Stamping company, Swank gives the "estimated" weekly production as 10,500 boxes only, or less than one-third of the amount given by the Manufacturers' association. But Mr. Swank is not willing to vouch for this much, but states that the production is as estimated by the "respective manufacturers." In the case of works now building he gives "estimates" of proposed production, but even these estimates fall far short of the production as claimed by the Manufacturers' association in their January statement.

The statements made by Mr. Swank in his directory furnish data from which can be shown the course taken by the industry here. Of the thirty works now in operation and building only thirteen intend to make their own black plates, while seventeen have erected or are erecting tinning plants only and intend to buy their plates from the sheet iron and steel manufacturers.

Those which are making their own plates are nearly all also manufacturers of galvanized sheet iron and steel, and are members of the Galvanized Iron association. It was this association which was chiefly interested in having the duty on tin and terne plate advanced. Their primary aim was twofold—(1) to cause an advance in the price of terne plate used for roofing, and for this purpose competing with their own galvanized product, and (2) to extend the market for their sheet iron and steel.

In respect to the first they have been very successful, for the present high price of terne plate has not only caused an increased demand for galvanized sheets, but has enabled them to advance its price directly in the face of a large fall in the price of the raw material and of all other iron and steel products. The concerns now making sheet iron and steel which have erected or propose to erect tinning plants are among the smallest of those engaged in sheet iron and steel production. The large manufacturers of sheet iron and steel have shown no inclination to engage in the manufacture of tin plates. But they will no doubt be ready to furnish plates at their own prices to those who erect tinning plants.

Should the tin plate industry continue in this course, it can never be established on an economic basis in this country. Not until the large producers of sheet iron and steel erect cold rolling and tinning plants, so as to be in a position to carry the product through all the stages of production from the pig iron, or at least from the steel billets, is there any prospect that tin plates can be made here and sold in competition with the product of Wales, even under the present high duty.—New York Commercial Bulletin.

Relief for the Foreigner.

The jug handled reciprocity treaty with Nicaragua affords an example of how these modern conventions untax foreigners, while our own people go on paying tribute.

When this treaty goes into effect the United States government will have made an agreement by which Nicaraguans may import untaxed horses and cattle from this country, while it will tax our own farmers thirty dollars a head on horses and ten dollars a head on cattle. It will make agricultural and garden seeds free to the favored foreigners and will tax its own people 20 per cent. It will provide free coal for the foreigner, while it will exact seventy-five cents a ton from the citizen.

The Nicaraguan will have free wool and lumber, while the citizen of the United States will pay a tax of from 10 per cent. to $3.50 a thousand feet.

The one will have free and the other taxed agricultural implements. The one will be able to fence his farm with untaxed wire, while the other will be obliged to pay a tax on his fence wire of from 45 to more than 100 per cent.

The Nicaraguans will have untaxed machinery. The people of the United States must continue to pay a bounty to the producers of ore and to the makers of pig and bar iron, on the lumber, on the rivets and nails, and finally on the finished product.

These are a few of the incidents of a treaty by means of which commerce is to be increased through relief granted to the people of foreign countries. The protectionists have based their system on enmity to foreign commerce, and their pretended reciprocity treaties bear strong testimony to the fact that they are at last moved by stress of hostile public sentiment to mitigate the results of that enmity. Revenue reformers would remove the shackles from commerce by relieving the people of the United States; the reciprocity jugglers shamefacedly confess their defeat by untaxing foreigners.

Therefore in this last treaty, as in those that have gone before it, the burden continues to rest on the people of this country, while it is removed from the people of Nicaragua.—New York World.

Failure of the Sugar Bounty.

The "maple sugar vote" in New England is greatly dissatisfied with the workings of the McKinley law. That measure removed the duty on imported sugar, but offered the home producer a bounty as compensation. But the new system does not suit the Vermont owners of maple groves at all. They complain that they are being ruined by the pauper maple sugar of Canada. Congressman Powers drew this alarming picture of the situation in a speech delivered in the house recently:

"The maple sugar production of Vermont is about 15,000,000 pounds. The production of Canada, just across the line, is 20,000,000. But the possibilities of production in Canada are perfectly astounding: 100,000,000 pounds might be produced there, and since this bounty was given to the maple sugar producer there have been ten carloads of maple sugar imported into this country from Canada where before there was but one. It is imported to the city of Chicago and there adulterated, and is sold, as I am told, through the west for Vermont maple sugar."

So desperate is the situation of the Vermonters that Mr. Powers has introduced a bill to restore the old duty and to repeal the bounty. One of his objections to the bounty system is that the red tape necessary in order to get it compels the producer to lose the early market on maple sugar and forfeit more than two cents a pound if he undertakes to secure the bounty. Mr. Powers declares that "if the old tariff upon sugar were restored, so as to keep foreign sugar out and leave the market to our own product, then our maple sugar producers would be vastly better off than they are now." All of which illustrates again the difficulty of suiting people by any device to put money in their pockets by way of the federal treasury.—New York Evening Post.

Big Steel Trusses.

The steel trusses which are to support the roof of the Manufactures building in the World's fair grounds will be the largest in the world. There will be twenty-two trusses, and they will be erected in pairs. Each truss will cover a span of 386 feet, and from the center of the roof inside to the ground there will be a distance of 206 feet. Each truss weighs 200 tons, and 6,000 tons of steel will be used in the roof of the building. Above the trusses supporting the roof will be erected other trusses to support the lantern roof. These trusses will be thirty-six feet in height and each will span a distance of 150 feet.—Exchange.

What He Didn't Eat.

ONE, TWO, THREE.

I saw three witches as the wind blew cold,
In a red light to the lee;
Bold they were, and over bold,
As they sailed over the sea;
Calling for "One, two, three!"
Calling for "One, two, three!"
And I think I can hear
It a-ringing in my ear,
A-calling for their "One, two, three!"

And clouds came over the sky,
And the wind blew hard and free;
And the waves were bold, and over bold,
As we sailed over the sea;
Howling for "One, two, three!"
Howling for their "One, two, three!"
Oh, I think I can hear
It a-howling in my ear,
Howling for their "One, two, three!"

And the storm came roaring on,
Such a storm as I never did see,
And the storm it was bold, and over bold,
And as bad as a storm could be;
A-roaring for its "One, two, three!"
A-howling for its "One, two, three!"
Oh, I think I can hear
It a-howling in my ear,
Howling for its "One, two, three!"

And a wave came over the deck,
As big as a wave could be,
And it took away the captain, and the mate, and a man;
It had got the "One, two, three!"
It had got the "One, two, three!"
And it kept the "One, two, three!"
Oh, I think I can hear
It a-rolling in my ear
As it went with the "One, two, three!"

—Charles Godfrey Leland in Longman's Magazine.

Do You Know Your Letters?

Any man who can read would probably resent such an imputation of ignorance as this question conveys, "Do you know your letters?" is what is asked the little tot when he or she first sets foot in school. But grown up men and women may be pardoned for believing they are speaking the truth when they answer "yes" to the question. The chances are, however, that they don't know their letters. Why has "A" its present shape? Stumped the first time! Every A-merican ought to know that. A takes its shape from a picture of an eagle. B was once the picture of an Egyptian bird. D represented a man's hand. F was the horned viper. The two upper strokes are the remains of the horns and the perpendicular line the upright body of the viper. H was once the semblance of a sieve.

We got our letters from the Phœnician alphabet, which in turn came from the hieroglyphic picture writing of Egypt. So don't be so sure of your knowledge next time you are asked a simple question.—Detroit Free Press.

The Way of the World.

Funny world we live in. A man who has six horses standing idle in a stable walked two miles out in the country on a little matter of business a day or two ago, while another man who had no horses and very little money hired a team to go the same distance. This was an actual occurrence this week, and shows the perversity of human nature. He who has the facilities for driving prefers to walk, while he who could much better prefer to walk and has no team, goes and hires one. Men are crazy to own a team, and it soon becomes a bore to give the horse necessary exercise. It has always been thus, and we presume always will be.—Westchester Record.
