DONALD McINNES TALK.

Some Facts About the County Funding Bonds—The Ring County Commissioners Break Faith—McInnes' Side of the Story.

The citizens and squatters of Port Angeles made known in no uncertain manner their appreciation of the efforts of Hon. John C. Murphy, the pioneer squatter, toward the opening of the reservation Monday night.

A committee consisting of J. J. Byrnes, D. McInnes and John Quinn had been appointed at a previous meeting to arrange for a proper celebration of the second anniversary of the moving on the reservation of John C. Murphy, the first squatter.

They went to work with a will, and arranged a program that was creditable. William Banks was chosen to preside, and A. A. Smith acted as secretary of the meeting.

Every seat in the opera house was filled when Miss Daisy Stewart began the program with a piano solo, "Recollections of Home." This was rendered in Miss Stewart's usual artistic manner.

Judge McClinton made a neat address relating the story of the reservation, giving Hon. Victor Smith credit for wise foresight in selecting Port Angeles for a city and then he paid a glowing tribute to John C. Murphy for his work to secure free homes for the settlers. The address was well received. Miss Stewart charmed the audience with the vocal solo, "Bessie, Maid of Dundee." This was heartily encored. Miss Stewart responded to the encore with a pleasing solo, "Tit for Tat." Miss Stewart has a pleasant voice over which she has full command. She was ably accompanied by Miss Lewis.

Little Gracie Sherwood took the audience by storm by her apt songs, and really professional air on the stage. She was called and recalled for three encores, and the audience was not yet satisfied.

E. H. Hatch recited "Bernardo del Carpio," in his usual brilliant manner. He received well merited applause.

Ben. C. Keller's solo, "Anchored," was rendered in such a manner that he received an hearty encore. Miss Stewart accompanied him very artistically.

George Sherwood and Maggie Meredith made fun for all by their jokes and puns, comic songs and dancing.

The entertainment concluded with a tableau, having John C. Murphy in the back ground with an ax on his shoulder. Above him was the the motto, "Boys follow Me."

Mr. Banks then with a few appropriate remarks presented Mr. Murphy with an elegant sealstone ring, bearing on it the familiar emblem of the Knights of Pythias society of which Mr. Murphy is an honored member.

John Quinn then moved the adoption of the following resolutions, which was unanimously carried.

MR. JOHN C. MURPHY, Port Angeles.

Sir:—It is with pleasure that this entertainment is given by the people of Port Angeles, and especially the Port Angeles townsite reserve people. It is given for you and in our weak way bespeaks our appreciaiion of your untiring and energetic efforts toward opening the government townsite reserve at Port Angeles, Washington.

The gathering is not for gold, but to publish to the world our appreciation of your endeavors in our behalf, as the "ORIGINAL SQUATTER on the Port Angeles TOWNSITE RESERVE." Therefore, it is REROLVED, That you have our sincere thanks. That we extend to you and yours, our hearty wish, for lasting prosperity and unbounded success. That a copy hereof be given the press of this city for publication.

J. J. BYRNE,
S. MAXWELL,
DONALD MCINNES,
Committee.

A vote of thanks was then extended to those who took part in the program and to the committee in charge.

Tammany is in Earnest.

New York World: When Mr. Croker and the other leaders of Tammany Hall say that the Democratic national ticket will receive their hearty suppor they can be believed.

Mr. Croker said no more than his worst enemies would say for him when he declared: "I do not know what treachery means."

The Tammany leader is a hard fighter, as the 600 Democrats opposed to the New York Delegation at Chicago found, But he fights squairly and stops when the matter is settled. The World has joined issue with Mr. Croker in the past, and unless he shall make a wise and and right use of his great power in the future it will most likely oppose him again. But it has always found him a man of his word, without subterfuges, and a hater of double-dealing.

"Well, therefore, Mr. Croker says: "We will return home and give the ticket a hearty support. It is a good ticket. We were for Hill, and we will give the nomineee of this convention the same support we gave Senator Hill. We do not do anything half-hearted. If we are for a man we are for him. That is the way we do business."—The Democrats of other states may depend upon his word.

Even if there was a disposition to make a "deal," there will be nothing to trade on. There will be no opposition worth considering to the Democratic local ticket, if it is made with ordinary sagacity, and there are no state officers to elect this year.

Poor Texas.

Only think of it! Three years without rain. Still this is the experience of a portion of Texas, La Salle county, eighty miles south of San Antonia, where desolation reigns supreme fron effects of the draught, In three years it has not rained a drop. The prairies once carpeted with rich grass, are as bare as a billiard table. The streams have gone dry, and there is no water anywhere. For any distance as far as the eye can reach there is not a spot of green. Late letters state that the sun, reflected from the white earth, makes the glare and heat almost unbearable. Deer, turkeys, and other wild animals have left. Even the familiar jack-rabbit has disappeared. All the cattle and sheep have been sold and shipped into other states. Many of the Mexicans are cowboys or soldiers, They have no means of subsistence, and some of them have tried to farm it, but the seed sown two years ago remains unsprouted in the ground. From La Salle county alone 72,000 head of sheep have been removed. The citizens have appealed Governor Hogg to furnish the starving Mexicans transportation to the cotton districts where they may find work. An earnest call for food has been issued,

The Turkish Exhibit.

Those who have been charged with the preperation of the Turkish exhibit at the World's Fair are making very extensive praparations to have it of superior merit and interest. They will charter a large ship to transport the exhibit. They will bring over 400 native Turks arrayed in their national costumes.

They will reprduce at Chicago a street in Constantinople with all its peculiar crookedness and narrownes and its interesting bazaars and restaurants, The bazaars will be filled with staple articles of Turkish manufacture. The expedition to Chicago will start from Constantinople and will call at all Turkish ports for reinforcements and articles to be placed on exhibition. Adrianapolis and Philoppolis have caught the fever and will do quite as much as the capital to make the Turkish exhibit a success. The exhibit will include a reproduction in minature of the Mosque of St. Sophia. This has never been reproduced in any Christian country, and for its reproduction at Chicago special permission of the Sultan had to be obtained.

Dr. Blalock's Encouraging Words.

In an interview with Dr. Blalock, of Walla Walla, while at Mount Vernon, he said that Democratic prospects all over the state are growing brighter every day. "If the Democrats put a good ticket in the field they will be sure to carry the state this fall. I have been over a large portion of the state in the past few months, and am in a position to know." When asked as to his name being placed before the convention for governor, he said: "While I am not seeking nomination, yet, if I am nominated for that position I will accept nomination. Whether I am nominated or not I will do all in my power for the success of the state ticket and the election of Grover Cleveland."

RICH COPPER DEPOSITS

Discovered in the Mountains Near Angeles.

WILL PROVE A BONANZA.

The Owners will Have the Specimens Analyzed, so as to Ascertain the Value of the Ore—The Test will be Awaited with Keen Interest.

Mr. J. C. Burke, who spent a few days of last week out at the Hurricane Hill group of mines, brought back with him some very interesting specimens taken from those mines, and from the copper along the ledge and which can be seen at THE DEMOCRAT office.

In these samples, of which fifty pounds were brought to town, can be seen enough precious and base metals, to amply justify the expenditure of thousands of dollars in the development of this lead. Large chunks of native copper, and native silver are in plain view, as well as gray copper, and some galena. No assays have as yet been made, but the owners have sent fifty pounds to a sampling works to be tested, and upon the result of this test will depend the course to be pursued by the proprietors.

The ledge upon which this group of mines is located can be traced for the entire length, copper, silver and galena can be found in every piece of ore broken off. The vein itself is nearly eight feet wide, and presents a singular appearance, as all the vein matter contains streaks of pay ore from one to six inches in width, the body ore of these streaks being spar. The vein has two well defined walls, the foot wall being slate while the hanging wall is a sand stone of very fine grain.

That there is a veritable bonanza in these mines for their owners no one can doubt, who has seen the specimens.

THE COUNTY BONDS.

Something About Them That Might Interest the People.

The following communication by Donald McInnes with reference to the county funding bonds is worthy of a careful perusal. It places in a light, not thought of by many, the actions of the ring county commissioners:

EDITOR THE DEMOCRAT:—Please permit me, the columns of your paper, to draw the attention of the taxpayer, briefly, to the matter of the $50,000 of Clallam county funding bonds.

The bonds were first sold to me, and I now hold a valid contract with the county for them, but the party whip was brought into play by the ringmasters of the Port Angeles ring, and smarting under the lash the bonds were again sold(?) to White & Co., of Tacoma, thereby laying the county liable to a damage suit.

In my contract, a definite time was fixed for the payment of the money, in the last, none. The only stipulation was the following words, "as soon as the bonds can be legally executed," which may mean any time in the next six months.

This company has made no move to take the bonds as yet, and it looks very much like there is a "nigger in the woodpile." Suppose the Angeles ring or its agents are holding say $40,000 worth of county warrants, or, having sold them, with a guarantee that they would not be called until a certain time, which I believe to be the case, would it not be policy, (to call it by a mild name) to let Mr. Davis and Mr. Gordon, "go back on" my contract, so nicely, and (?) sell to some company that had no intention of taking them.

But how is it for the county? If these bonds were floated the county would only be paying 6 per cent on the $50,000. Today it is paying 10 per cent. Let the taxpayer ask the ring to whose interest is it that these bonds are not floated for a while?

Every month that warrants to the extent of say $50,000, are outstanding the county is losing $166⅔ by the bonds not being floated. Just one more question. Considering that the bid of White & Co. was not legal, how was it that the commissioners did not ignore it and give the bonds to the New York firm, who on the following day offered a premium of $750? "What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander," and certainly it was no scruples of conscience that forbid the commissioners, to break their contract the second time. DONALD MCINNES.

Puget Sound Shipping.

The following is an accurate report of the number of vessels passing Cape Flattery during the year ending Jund 30, 1892; Ships, 333; barks, 494; briggs, 4; schooners, 734; sloops, 119; steamers, 1563. Total, 3248.

THE DEMOCRAT is indebted to Cap A. Sampson, keeper of Cape Flattery Light Station, for those statistics which provides valuable information regarding the growth of Puget Sound shipping.

AT THE CAPITOL.

WASHINGTON, July 4, 1892.

Mr. Harrison did not enjoy his Fourth of July even a little bit. He is as mad as it is possible for a man of his glacier temperature to get. He is mad with those Republican Senators who voted for the Stewart free coinage bill, but it is upon the head of Vice President Morton, that the vials of his hottest wrath are being figuratively emptied. Had Mr. Morton been in his seat as presiding officer of the Senate when Senator Vest moved to pospone consideration of the free coinage bill until next December the motion would have been carried, and the present dilemma escaped, as the vote thereon was a tie, and Mr. Morton who is opposed to free coinage, would hhve had the casting of the decisive vote. Mr. Harrison is doing everything in his power to prevent the free coinage bill passing the House although it is stated he is anxious to veto it.

Congress is not in session to-day. Tomorrow the free coinage bill will be taken from the Speaker's table, where it was placed Saturday when sent over from the Senate, and referred to the committee on coinage. A meeting of that committee had been called for Wednesday by chairman Bland, and, if it is attended by a quorum, the bill will probably be at once reported to the House with a recommendation that it be passed. Then the fighting will begin. The silver men will apply to the committee on rules for a rule setting one or more days for a consideration and a time for taking a final vote; this will be opposed by the anti-silver Democrats. The silver men threaten to stop all other business in the House until a vote is had on the bill. The outcome will depend largely on two things, the attendance of the Democrats, and the attitude of the Republican members. So far as Mr. Harrison can control the Republican members they will side with the anti-free coinage Democrats, but it is by no means certain, it will be absolutely necessary to have a voting quorum on the floor to pass the bill, as the Democratic anti's will not vote unless certain of victory.

Ex-Senator Farwell, of Illinois, has published a letter in a Washington paper that is causing much talk, and which shows that Mr. Farwell is no greater admirer Mr. Harrison now than when he retired from the Senate to make room for a good Democrat in the person of Senator Palmer. He calls attention to the fact that some three years ago he and numerous other Republicans then in Congress, recommended Mr. W. J. Campbell, of Illinois, as a suitable man to be appointed inspector of Customs at Chicago, and that Mr. Harrison said that Mr. Campbell was a professional lobbyist and unfit for the position, and absolutely refused to appoint him. Mr. Farwell wishes to know why Mr. Harrison selected a man for the responsible position of chairman of the Republican national committee whom he had refused to appoint to a Federal position because of his being "a professional lobbyist."

By sticking to their guns, the House conferres on the River and Harbor bill compelled the Senate conferres to recede from the Senate amends to which the House disagree. It is going to be just the same with a number of the appropriation bills, the members of the House being fully determined that the Senate shall not force them to accept amendments appropriating large sums of money to which they and their constituents are opposed, even if the session has to be prolonged in order to bring the Senators around to correct ideas.

Senator Hill voted for the Stewart free coinage bill, and says he did so because he considered it an improvement upon the present (Sherman) silver law, which it repeals if it becomes a law.

Representative Baker, of Kansas, one of the Alliance members of the House, think we pay our officers too much, and has introduced a bill making the President's salary twenty-five thousand dollars, Vice President, five thousand dollars, Speaker of the House five thousand members of the Cabinet six thousand, Chief Justice Supreme Court seven thousand, Associate Justices six thousand five hundred, and U. S. Senators and Representatives three thousand.

Ex-boss Clarkson, is getting himself laughed at. His proclamation occupying about a column in the newspapers explaining his relation to the Republican national committee and the ticket is about as silly a bit of egotism as was ever infected on the reading public, which knows that the only trouble with Clarkson is that he did not succeed in making a bargain with Mr. Harrison by which he could have remained at the head of the committe.

Friends of the administration are making it pleasant for the New Secretary of State by telling every one that the appointment was only given him as a temporary make-shift, because of the knowledge of the details of matters now before the department. The fact is that none of the really big men in the Republican party cared to accept a position to which they knew would have to be given up the Fourth of next March.

JEFFERSON ON THE TARIFF.

This is an historical falsehood that only a paper of the Tribune's small calibre or a stump speaker of Hon. Allen Weir's lack of accuracy attempts to force on an unsuspecting public at this time.

We beg to call the attention of the Tribune to one of the reasons for Mr. Jefferson's resignation from Washington's cabinet. After claiming that he did not want to be held indirectly responsible for Alexander Hamilton's doctrine that congress had the authoritiy, without limitation, to levy import duties to protect American manufacturers. Mr. Jefferson said:

"That to assert such a doctrine is congressional absolutism, and is in direct contravention of the spirit and the letter of the constitution of the United States."

For decency's sake, these small bore politicians shoud attempt, at least, to learn something from the "Napoleon of Protection," Major McKinley, who is fair enough to quote histeoy correctly, no matter how fallacious his reasoning on the tariff question. He is fair enough to state that the Democratic party today is the just and fair representative of its famous founder, Thomas Jefferson, while the Republican party is the continuation of the old doctrines of Alexander Hamilton.

Thomas Jefferson was never a protectionist.

PORT TOWNSEND follows Seattle and Spokane with a great Democratic majority. The tidal wave has fairly started, The climax will not be reached until next November, when the Democracy will acheive the greatest victory for the people that the northwest has witnessed since 1888 in this state. Let the good work continue.

THE local politicial situation is getting warm. In the hilarry, there is one thing that must not be forgotten, or lost sight of by the voters. That is the Republican party of this county, like that of the state, is the home of rings.

It is hard just now to foretell the result of the Republican county convention, but this much is certain, the best the opposition can get is a compermise, with ring influence most likely predominating.

THE DEMOCRAT still maintains that the surest way to vote against the ring, and to effectually kill it off is to act with the Democrats, and secure a good clean ticket that, when elected, will give the people of the county a truly Democratic administration "for the people and by the people."

GLADSTONE has carried England. Well done, Grand Old Man! Free Trade will not suffer across the water now.

THE Port Angeles DEMOCRAT appears to be the leading Democratic weekly in Washington. Its opinions are the most widely quoted and it has recently hit the nail on the head several times in the adjustment of Democratic difficulties. Ability to "get there" is the main thing. Nothing succeeds like success.—Port Crescent Leader.

HON. H. J. SNIVELY, of North Yakima, one of the Democratic leaders in the last legislature, is the last man to announce himself for Colonel James Hamilton Lewis for governor. Mr. Snively thinks Colonel Lewis will get nearly the entire delegation from Eastern Washington.

Every day adds to the popularity of Colonel Lewis. His forces are gaining strength from every section of the state.

The Olympia convention promises to be a repetition of the Chicago convention. It will be the masses demanding the nomination of the state's most popular son, opposed perhaps, by a few politicians, jealous or otherwise. But fight as hard as they may, the Seattle crowd will be unable to down the people. They want no dictating. They are for James Hamilton Lewis and James Hamilton Lewis they will have.

THE Homestead battle between Carnegie's locked-out workmen and Pinkerton's hired human bloodhounds, is the natural and logical outcome of the barbaric protection system that has been forced upon the American people by the plutocrats who control the Republican party.

A LETTER from Hon. Allen Weir on the tariff (?) question was crowded out of this issue. It will appear in the next, with the editors comments.

The Next Governor.

Last Saturday evening Hon. James Hamilton Lewis of Seattle, addressed the citizens of Port Townsend, on the political issues of the day. The address was listened to with wrapt attention by one of the largest and most intelligent audiences ever assembled in the opera house of that city on a similar occasion. The general opinion was that it was simply a masterly effort, a brilliant, piercing and comprehensive discussion of political subjects by a master mind. If there ever was any doubts as to the availability of this gentleman for the high and responsible position of governor, in the minds of the Port Townsend people, it has been completely dispelled. Matchless, indeed, is the eloquence, the logic, the elegance of Mr. Lewis' rhetoric. He is earnest, he is logical, he is clear, and he convinces his audience that he is sincere in what he says.

Jefferson county is enthusiastic for Lewis. Its people believe in him and want him. The sentiment is, if he is the representation of a "dude," the significance of that word then implies true worth, excellence and ability, traits of character absolute to the manly man.

The people of Washington, irrespective of party, want Lewis. In him they see the material for an excellent governor. The unmistakable signs of the times point to Lewis as the next governor of the state of Washington.

Citizens of Port Angeles will soon be afforded the privilege of hearing Mr. Lewis, as he has accepted an invitation to deliver an address in this city at an early date.

An Object Lesson.

Suppose Cleveland were in office instead of Harrison and a Democratic House and Senate had repealed the McKinley law a brought the tariff to a revenue basis. Then suppose the occurance in this month of July of the Carnegie lockout which has deprived thousands of men of work, which lesson would the Republican press now be drawing form the situation? Is there one organ of the party in the whole country that would not be vehemently declaring that the removal of the McKinley protective duties had paralyzed the iron and steel industry and compelled a scaling down of wages?

That lockout gives the lie to the Republican platform and ought to teach every sensible man in the United States that whatever influence the present tariff has upon wages it is the reverse of beneficial. The McKinley taxes on raw materials hamper manufacturing industry, and the McKinley taxes on manufacturing products breed trusts and monopolies. The Republican tariff is a fraud devised in the interest of a few to the injury of the many.—San Francisco Examiner.

A CALL.

We, the undersigned, members of the County Democratic Central Committee, call a meeting of said committee in Port Angeles, Saturday, July 23d, 1892, at 2 p. m.

The object will be to issue a call for primaries and county convention and to transact such other business as may come before the committee.

R. L. SEBASTIAN, Forks,
R. H. DEMMING, Eden,
J. H. YOUNG, Kennel,
J. B. SPEARS, Port Angeles.

Port Angeles, Wash., July 14.

THE FOURTH AT LA PUSH.

Forks Wins the Game of Base Ball---Geo C. Hatch Orates.

FORKS, July 9, (Special.)—Forks people assisted the citizens of La Push in celebrating the 4th of July, and did some of the celebrating, too. The exercises at La Push consisted in the reading of the declaration of independence and an oration, both by George C. Hatch of Port Angeles. Horse racing, canoe racing, foot racing with an interesting and hotly contested base-ball game between the boys of Forks and the La Push boys. The citizens of Forks were made glad by the score resulting in their favor 30 to 13.

There was a bouncing nine pound boy born to the wife of M. Whittier on the Fourth.

PORT TOWNSEND ALL RIGHT.

The Democratic Wave Continues Its Conquering March.

The hardest faught political battle ever waged in Port Townsend culminated Monday in the greatest Democratic victory ever won in that city.

For over a week business men, professional men and all quit their customary avocations and went into the city fight, both parties fighting the preliminary battle for the fall campaign. It was conceded by both parties that the result of the Jefferson county ticket depended upon the result of the city election.

Saturday night, one of the largest political demonstrations ever witnessed in that city was held in Learned's opera house by the Democrats. James Hamilton Lewis was the principal speaker. He held forth for two hours, making one of his matchless speeches.

There were 850 votes cast, and the result was more than was anticipated by the Democrats, their whole ticket being elected by majorities, ranging from 12 for Phillips for councilman to 261 for Delaney for marshal.

The vote was:

For mayor, A. H. Tucker, Democrat, 472; Jonas Gise, Republican, 378; marshal, T. R. Delaney, 546; Claus Stammer, Republican, 285; councilmen, Starrett, Democrat, 494; Phillips, Democrat, 422; Stockand, Democrat, 442; Pink, Democrat, 454; Lillie, Republican, 410; Hammond, Republican, 365; Andrews, Republican, 383; Learned, Republican, 364.

The Democrats had a great jubilee meeting Monday night. All the successful candidates were serenaded.

DEMOCRATS THERE TOO.

Olaf Johnson, of this city, has just returned from a ten weeks trip through the Quillayute country. Mr. Johnson thinks the Quillayute country one of great prospects, one capable of great development.

"Agricultural and timber lands are plentiful and there is still plenty room for thousands of settlers in that neighborhood, but those deserving land should not delay, as hundreds are going into that country." Mr. Johnson also speaks exceedingly encouraging of the prospects of Democratic success in the coming county election. He says the people of that neighborhood are tired of Republican misrule.

Mr. Johnson says that a great number of the people in the west end of the county are in favor of the nomination of Hans Hansen of Quillayute for county commissioner by the Democrats for the west end district. Mr. Hansen is a very intelligent, active and wide awake citizen of Scandanavian birth, and would make an excellent county commissioner. He is a Democrat and is opposed to the Republican management of the county affairs.

Mr. Johnson will remain in Port Angeles for a while now. During his recent trip he visited Gray's harbor and Quinault.

AT THE LAKES.

Many pleasure Seekers at Lake Crescent and Southerland.

"The grandeur, and the many attractions of Clallam's beautiful lakes, are just beginning to be known, and more fully appreciated at their true value and merit." said Mr. Richard McDonnell, to a representative of THE DEMOCRAT, while in this city during the week. The scenery, as you know, is simply grand, while the boating and the fishing cannot be surpassed."

"We have," he continued, "quite a number of visitors from Seattle, Port Townsend, and other up-sound towns. And they are all enthusiastic in their admiration of the beautiful surroundings and the many attractive features of the lakes.

"Many of them who only came to remain a few days have decided to remain several months, expressing themselves as perfectly enraptured with the lovliness of the surroundings.

"When Port Angeles has a railroad connecting with these lakes, it will have one of the most delightful and attractive resorts in the state, which can then easily be reached within half an hour, making it reasonably accessible to the large population which will dwell well here in the near future.

"Your facilities with the lakes are not poor, by any means. Any person can make the trip by either daily steamer to Port Crescent or with horses, the distance by the wagon road being only 18 miles."

There is a party of Seattle school teachers at the lakes at the present time, and Mr. McDonnell believes that hundreds of pleasure seekers will visit the lakes before the summer is over.

THE KNIGHTS ENTERTAIN.

One of the most popular of all societies is the Knights of Pythias. This order is never to be out-done at anything. One of the features on which it prides itself is the success of its social entertainments.

Although not largely attended, the entertainment given at the open installation of officers by Gate City Lodge No. 65, of that order, at their lodge room Wednesday evening, was a success. All Knights in the city their friends and ladies had been invited to be present Wednesday night. The program besides the installation consisted of vocal and instrumental music, and an oration.

The lodge was called to order at 9:15 o'clock by C. C., W. Brumfield, who announced that on account of resignations the offices of Vice Chancellor and of Prelate were vacant. Nominations were declared in order for V. C., and John W. Troy was placed in nomination by C. R. Brewster in a neat speech. Mr. Troy was elected unanimously S. A. Hall nominated Horace White for prelate. Mr. White was unanimously chosen to fill the position.

Frank P. Fisher, Deputy Grand Past Chancellor; C. R. Brewster, Deputy Grand Chancellor; John C. Muphy, Deputy Grand Vice Chancellor; A. A. Smith, Deputy Grand Prelate; S. A. Hall, Deputy Grand Keeper of Records and Seals; R. A. Grimes, Deputy Grand Master at Arms; E. E. Hopkins, Deputy Grand Inner Guard; L. H. Smith, Deputy Grand Outer Guard.

Willard Brumfield, P. C.; Louis R. Cole, C. C.; John W. Troy, V. C.; Horace White, Prelate; J. Dill Stage, K. of R. and S.; J. Melville Albrecht, M. at A.; Thaddeus Wagner, I. G; S. A. Hall, O. G.

The program rendered was good throughout.

Gracie Sheerwood charmed the audiance with some of her songs and ballots. He manner, although she is only 12, was that of a trained actress.

B. C. Keller rendered "I Fear No Foe," in his usual able manner. He was heartily applaued.

The solo, "Twickenham Ferry," was sang by Miss Lewis. Although Miss Lewis showed a lack of practice on her piece, her unusually sweet voice and manner were fully appreciated by all.

Miss La Camp played the piano solo "Carnival of Venice," in a manner that showed her to be a master of music, and a real artist on the piano. She was encored.

R. A. Grimes closed the entertainment with a ten minute speech, relating with much pathos, the story of Damon and Pythias and also some later day heroic acts of Knights. He briefly told of the organization of the order by Past Supreme Chancellor Rathbun, its growth from a few in the city of Philadelphia, to an order having over an half million Knights. He referred to the army of 50,000 well-drilled Sir Knights in the Uniform rank. The speaker the spoke of the lodge's beautiful motto and its teachings. He claimed that man's noblest trait was love for his fellowman. To illustrate this he recited in a feeling manner, Leigh Hunt's great poem, "Abou Ben Adhem." The speaker finished amid great applause.

Refrehments were served after the program was finished.

All those present expressed themselves as highly pleased with the entertainment and with the good order.

Will It Occur To Them.

Perhaps it may occur to the Amalgamated Association of Steel and Iron Workers and to Baron Carnegie, and his associates in sin, says the St Louis Republic, that when the Homesteaders are driven out they may be set to missionary work. If they were scattered over the country, they could impress upon their fellow workmen everywhere a most instructive object lesson upon the working of McKinley Protection in making Carnegie forty times a millionaire while giving his workingmen the choice of accepting reduced wages or becoming tramps.

WELCOME MONTICELLO!

Citizens Hail With Delight the Advent of Better Steamboat Services.

Welcome Monticello, and trice welcome Captain Hatch, is the universal salutation which greeted the new and elegantly appointed steamer Monticello and her gallant captain, as she sailed into Port Angeles harbor yesterday afternoon and moored alongside of Morse's wharf.

Citizens of Port Angeles, indeed, have cause to rejoice over the establishment of such an excellent steamboat service direct with Seattle.

The Monticello will arrange her schedule to leave here in the morning, calling at Dungeness and Port Townsend, reaching Seattle at 1:30. She will lay over there until 2:30, when she will leave on her return trip, arriving here at 11 o'clock in the evening. The advantage of daily connections direct with Seattle will be of incalculable commercial benefit to Port Angeles. It provides business men and citizens daily communications with the commercial centre of Puget Sound. It gives thom them the opportunity, so long sought and so earnestly desired, of visiting Seattle, transacting important business and returning home the same day, an arrangment which will result in financial and commercial gain.

The Monticello is a propeller, built almost solely as a passenger boat, although she has considerable freight-room. Her net tonnage is 174. She is permitted to carry 112 first-class passengers. Her engines are of the triple-expansion design, are capble of developing great power, and of the most finished and substantial manufacture.

Her cabin on the upper deck is very spacious, elegantly furnished, conveniently appointed, with a view to the comfort of the passengers.

There is an attractive promenade on the lower dock, round which are comfortable cushioned seats, and easy chairs, promiscuously scattered over the deck, affording an excellent opportunity of viewing the splendor and the graneur of the matchless scenery of Puget Sound, on this exceedingly delightful trip between Seattle and Port Angeles.

The Monticello is a home production, having been built at Salmon Bay, near Seattle, and she will be distinctively a Port Angeles boat, as Capt. Hatch positively affirms that this will be his home port.

It will now become the duty of all citizens who feel a patriotic interest in the material advancement of Port Angeles, to extend a liberal support to Port Angeles' new steamer, and see to it that the public spirit manifested by the enterprising owners of the Mohticello is adequately appreciated.

To the Trade.

I have just received a large invoice of one of the best brands of California canned tomatoes, bought at a bankrupt sale, which I will sell at 10c per can, or one dollar and five cents per dozen, until sold out.

D. G. HARVEY.

AN OPPOSITION BOAT.

Port Angeles Will Now Have Better Transportation Facilities.

Port Angeles will have an improved steambort service before August 1st. This much is assured. So well known has the gigantic kick made by Port Angeles become that there is no lacking of opportunities to secure better service than the little Garland, that is really inadequate to properly perform service on this route.

In the first place it is known that the Hasting's Company have at last awakened to the actual conditions of affairs, and are endeavoring to get the Willipa from the Columbia river for this run. Then Capt. Hatch was recently in Angeles, and has been corresponding with Angeles people with reference to a sale of an half interest in the Montecello, a new steamer just finished at Seattle. It is thought, however, that the Montecello is too frail for this route, and this will probably prevent Capt. Hatch from placing his stock in this city. However, it is probable that Capt. Hatch will attempt to demonstrate the capabilities of his steamer, even though no interest is sold to Port Angeles people, by putting her on himself, before the first of August.

But each of these failing before August 1, Mr. Chas. E. Mallette has the word of Capt. D. B. Jackson of the Puget Sound and Alaska Co., that he will then put a good steamer on for his company.

Thus there seems no doubt but that Port Angeles will have good steamboat service after August 1st, no matter the position taken by the Hastings' steamboat company.

Union Pacific Coming.

President Clark of the Union Pacific, states that the Puget Sound extension of that transcontinental system will soon be finished. A meeting of the directors will soon be held in New York, when the question of resuming construction work will be definitely settled. President Clark was very favorably impressed not only with the condition of the road, but with the general evidences of prosperity manifest on every hand in Oregon and Washington, and he said while in Portland that the affairs of the Union Pacific were never in better condition, and the prospects for increased business never brighter.

He signifies that he realizes the importance and the magnitude of the Puget Sound trade, and the great necessity of more extended transportation facilities, not the least important of which was the completion of the Puget Sound extension.

A BEAR STORY.

Not Vouched For But Said to be True Just the Same.

Word was sent into town this week by Messrs. Herman Fisher and George Fisher to their anxious friends that they were alright, and had come out winners in a fight with a large bear weighing in the neighborhood of a thousand tons. It might be several blocks away, but still was in the same township and range with the thousand.

The story of the fight is as follows: Last Monday the two valient hunters departed from the Hotel Fisher with the burning desire to inflict great bodily harm upon any kind of a critter wearing either horns, hair or hide. Armed with the latest improved weapons of distruction and blood-thirsty dispositions that deepened the cardinal tint of of their amiable countenance. After an absence of a few hours those left at the hotel heard a fusilade of musketry echoing along the mountain side and bounding from crag to crag, which was so rapid and vehement that the thought was immediately suggested, that a British "man-o-war" was on the mountain top shilling the woods. After the ammunition was all spent a wild, blood curdling yell came rolling down the mountain like the triumphant cries of friends, then all was still, and in breathless suspence the listeners awaited the denouement.

About 4 o'clock in the afternoon the brave hunters were seen coming into the clearing, covered with prespiration and gore. After refreshing themselves with a drink—of water, they condescended to answer the inquiries piled upon them three deep regarding the late engagement, upon the mountain.

George E. Fisher, the dignified host of the Old Crow, broke the almost unbearable silence by saying: "Well, you see, Herman and I started out this morning on a little hunt, being tired of catching fish and when we were nearly up to the top of the mountain—."

"What mountain," asked an anxious listener in trembling tones.

"A-n-y mountain," answered George displaying some irritation at the interruption.

"Just wait until I get through and then ask your questions." Then continued he, "when near the top we heard some brush cracking, and stopped to listen. In a few minutes we saw a large bear emerge from the brush, and look kinder sideways at us. Then he threw his nose up in the air, sniffing all the time, as if he was trying to tell by scent what kind of liquor was in my flask. He seemed a little too large to be one of my bears, and I don't like to take bears that belong to anyone else, and was about to suggest this fact to Herman as I saw a flash and at the same instant heard the report of his gun. When the smoke cleared away the bear was pretty close up to us, having decreased the distance separating us, and was walking on his hind legs, with eyes glaring and mouht open wide enough to slip in a five gallon keg of beer.

"I was now satisfied that he was not our bear, as our's don't act in this pugnacious fashion, nor do they have eyes so like coals of fire, but I thought that if we had found some other fellow's bear, it was nothing more than right to expect that he would be on hand to help us loose him. After looking around several times to see if the owner was in sight, and finding no one, we concluded that the best and only way to get rid of our unpleasant company was to fill him so full of lead he would not be able to move and then we could walk away from him. We opened up on him and worked our guns about as rapidly as we could all the time, keeping two bullets traveling down the barrel at the same time.

"When our magazines were empty we began to 'fill 'em up again' and casting a sly glance around for the bear to ascertain how he fared, and what direction to shoot next time, I saw him lying down with blood flowing all around him. I concluded that he was anchored securely and told Herman so. Then, of course, we yelled once, because for the first time since he came in sight, we felt secure in regarding him as our bear."

"Will you fellows help us get him in?"

"You bet we will." And they did.

A TWILIGHT EXCURSION.

Victorians Will Visit Angeles With the Danger of Small Pox Over.

It is seriously to be regretted that Victoria is so sorely afflicted with that dread epidemic, small pox, and that the health authorities have deemed it advisable and in keeping with safety to place the Puget Sound cities under absolute quarantine restrictions, thereby cutting off all communications with Victoria, until the danger of the terrible contagion spreading is over, as it indefinitely postpones a number of excursion parties which would have been arranged in Victoria to visit this city.

Port Angeles has a faithful and steadfast friend in Mr. R. T. Williams, of Victoria, who never looses an opportunity to strengthen, increase and unify the already warm friendly relations which exist between the citizens of either place.

The success of the Fourth of July excursion is largely due to the untiring personal effort of Mr. Williams. As soon as Mr. Williams reached home, doubless encouraged by the pronounced success of the excursion on the Fourth, he went to work with vigor and enthusiasm to arrange for a twilight excursion to this city. His plan was to give some hospital or other charitable object a benfit. Secure the Islander, issue 400 round-trip tickets, for which the reasonably low fare of $2.50 per couple would be charged.

The steamer would leave Victoria at six and arrive here at 7:30 in the evening. Arrangements for the reception, entertainment and amusement of the guests would be made beforehand. The fare would include a supper prepared here at a restaurant or hotel, which Mr. Williams believes could be provided for 50 cents for each person. As to entertainment, Mr. Williams is of the opinion that a social dance at the opera house would be the most effectual means of bringing the young people together, thereby becoming better acquainted and cultivating a friendly relation. He proposes to engage the opera house and pay as well for other services rendered, expecting only friendly and courteous treatment, which would, of course, include the provision of suitable accommodations, the decoration of the opera house, free lemonade and a neat little bouquet for each of the guests.

The party will dance until 3:30 a. m., when they would leave so as to reach home at 5:30 a. m.

THE DEMOCRAT, with the citizens of Port Angeles, keenly sympathize with the citizens of Victoria in their affliction, and earnestly hope that the epidemic will soon be gotten under control, and that it will not be long until it is safe to remove the quarantine rettrictions.

While the misfortune fell doubly heavy upon Victoria, the injury is none the less severe, viewed from a commercial standpoint, to Puget Sound.

Could Not Land.

The British tug Alert was chartered yesterday by a few Port Angeles people and their friends, who were in Victoria, to bring them over to this place. Amongst those on board were Lewis Levy, of this place, R. T. Williams and the Mayor of Victoria, also a brother of Frank Chambers, of this city, just from the east. When the boat arrived here, the health officer would not permit any one to land. After several hours of parleying and consideration it was decided that the steamer should be returned without permitting the passengers to land. In the meantime, Frank Chambers got on board to see his brother and the health officer compelled him to return to Victoria also.

Cut With an Axe.

Mr. Thomas Gould came to town on the Garland yesterday in the care of Joseph Eglar with a very severe cut in his left foot.

Mr. Gould has been employed in the logging camp of Hall & Bishop during this season and Wednesday while clearing a way for a skid road, inflicted an injury with an axe, that will probably lay him off for the rest of the season. Dr. Lewis dressed the injured member and reports his patient doing as well as could be expected.

THE CORDAGE TRUST.

HOW IT EXTORTS ENORMOUS PROFITS BY COMBINATIONS.

How It Is Protected—A Long Struggle to Force in the Independent Manufacturers—All Now in One—Large Dividends and $1,000,000 Surplus.

Hemp and its substitutes—manilla, sisal grass and jute—constitute the raw material of two important industries, those of cordage and bagging manufacture. The most important of these is the cordage industry, which comprises the production of all classes of ship and other cordage, rope and binding twine. It is seldom that these products are manufactured in separate establishments. Nearly all the materials used are imported, and the establishments in the industry are quite widely diversified throughout the country. A scheme to combine all these establishments into a gigantic trust would have been considered impossible several years ago. Now, however, after the people have become accustomed to the sight of trusts and combines as a result of the tariff, its successful accomplishment excites little comment.

The duties on the material and on cordage and twine are as follows:

	Specific. Cts. per lb.	Ad valorem equivalent. Per cent.
Manilla	Free	..
Sisal grass	Free	..
Jute	Free	..
Binding twine	7 1-10	17
Hemp cordage	2½	28
Manilla cordage	1½	16
Jute cordage	1½	16
Tarred cordage	3	28

Previous to October 1887, the cordage manufacturers were in a combination or pool, the object of which was to fix prices. In 1887 this pool fell to pieces and the nucleus of the present Cordage trust was formed. This nucleus was composed of the following concerns: Elizabethport Cordage Company of New Jersey and the Tucker & Carter Cordage company, L. Waterbury & Company and William Wall's Sons, all of Brooklyn.

The trust, as thus constituted, succeeded from time to time in uniting with it, by means of contracts or leases, six other companies situated in various parts of the country east of Ohio. At the time of its organization the chief object of the trust was to secure the economies arising from the purchase of its raw material on a large scale. From this was gradually evolved the idea of a control of the production and price of the finished product. This was the purpose for which the contracts or leases were made with the ten concerns in the trust. Under these contracts the different companies agreed to make secret competitive bids each year for the production of cordage. The trust agreed to furnish the material and to award the contracts for the year's production to the lowest bidders. Besides this the contracts bound the companies not to engage in production on their own account. This worked well, but internal dissensions soon broke out, for manufacturers who had bound themselves by contracts found little profit in keeping their plants idle for a year in case they were not successful in securing contracts by low bids.

It was these internal dissensions which induced the trust to secure a corporate charter, and by purchase of the plants under contract to strengthen its power and increase its control over the production of cordage. When the trust secured its charter in October, 1890, it had contracts for the fee of the following companies, in addition to the four mentioned above: George C. Pooley & Sons, Buffalo; Xenia Twine and Cordage company, Xenia, O.; J. Rink's Sons, Easton, Pa., and the Akron Twine and Cordage company, Akron, O. In addition to these it controlled by contract the following: Victoria Cordage company, Dayton, Ky.; H. R. Lewis & Co. and Baumgardner, Woodward & Co., Philadelphia; the New York Cordage company, New York; the Atlas Cordage company, New Orleans, and Randall Goodale & Co., Boston.

Having thus successfully accomplished its reorganization, the trust proceeded to take steps to acquire other properties. In 1891 it secured control of the eleven cordage factories in Canada, which gave it a complete monopoly of the industry there. At the same time the trust secured options on several of the outside establishments in this country, and in order to provide funds for the purchase of these it organized the Security Corporation of New Jersey, to which it turned over its options. It was agreed that this corporation should acquire a majority control of as many independent plants as possible and then lease them to the trust. The first move on the part of this annex to the trust was the negotiation of a mortgage for $6,000,000 on the properties already acquired and to be acquired. The trust then arranged a lease of these properties at an annual rental of $360,000 per year, being a payment of 6 per cent. per annum on the mortgage on the properties. By the terms of the lease the trust also agreed to make a sinking fund payment of $225,000 per year, to be used in payment of the $6,000,000 mortgage. By this means the trust will become absolute owners of the properties at the end of twenty years.

So far the plan has worked as successfully as could be expected, and the trust has now secured control, by purchase or lease, of the following companies in addition to those already mentioned:

The Sewall & Day Cordage company, the Boston Cordage company and the Standard Cordage company, all of Boston; the Day Cordage company, of Cambridge; William Deering & Co., Chicago; the Field Cordage company, Xenia, O.; the Miamisburg Binder Twine and Cordage company and the Middletown Twine and Cordage company, of Ohio; the Galveston Rope and Twine company, Texas; the Suffolk Cordage company, Boston; the Peru mills, Indiana; the Hanover Cordage company, Pennsylvania; the Donnel Cordage company, Bath, Me.; the New Bedford Cordage company, Massachusetts; the Lawrence Rope works, New York; the Peoria Cordage company, Indiana, and the American Bagging company, New York. The trust has also secured control, by purchase or contract, of the plants of the following manufacturers of machinery: W. C.

The Wrapping Paper Trust.

The representatives of the wrapping paper combine concluded their secret conference at the Auditorium yesterday, and were congratulating themselves last evening before departing for their homes on the fact that they had gathered in three more factories—two in Ohio and one in Indiana. There are fifty-eight mills in the United States engaged in manufacturing coarse wrapping paper, and of these twenty-six are in the trust, which has its headquarters in Chicago.

This trust was badly wrecked by the antitrust law when it first came into force, and has not fully recovered from the shock. However, it is making rapid strides, and expects to have all the mills back into the combine in a year or two. At present it runs under no particular name, and without a president or any high sounding title of any sort. The product of its twenty-six mills is marketed through a general agent, and he, with two others, constitutes the executive committee. They are J. C. Richardson and F. C. Trebein, both of Ohio, and J. B. Halladay, of Chicago. The last named is the general agent of the concern, and from his headquarters in Chicago supplies the market of the country with coarse wrapping paper, except in so far as the independent mills supply it.

There are a large number of mills not now in the trust, and these are, as usual, cutting prices. The trust price for common wrapping paper ranges from $1.25 to $1.75 per 100 pounds, while the figures of the independent makers range from five to ten cents less. The object of the meeting was to extend the membership of the trust and take steps to prevent further hurtful competition. The progress in this direction was quite flattering. Three of the largest mills outside of the trust were taken into the fold and others are preparing to follow. A slight cut in prices was ordered, but Mr. Halladay says that as soon as the other mills are induced to join the combine the rates will be raised to the figures of two years ago.—Chicago Times.

A bright New York boy has set himself up in the business of exercising fine bred dogs for rich men whose time is too much taken up with money making to properly look after their canine property.

THE MAN IN THE CAB.

A VIEW AT CLOSE RANGE OF THE MEN WHO GUIDE TRAINS.

The Cab—What It Means to the American Engineer, Though His English Brother Rides in the Open Air—The Whistle and Its Individuality.

The average American engineer and his fireman would think themselves very ill used if an order were issued for the abolishment of the cabs—that friendly retreat from inclement weather that is now considered an absolute necessity on all engines. And yet in civilized England, on a majority of the railroads, the engines in use are built minus the cab, thus forcing the operators to work without shelter in all kinds of weather. It sounds inhuman, and yet in refutation the railroad companies ask whether the soldier should carry an umbrella when it rains or the sailor be allowed to work under an awning? The claim is that the railroad employees become inured to severe weather and the absence of covering keeps them alert, so that the possibility of danger from inattention to duty is reduced to a minimum. Subtle argument, perhaps, but hardly tenable. If this practice was adopted on some of our western roads where the temperature ranges from 20 to 50 degs. below zero, how many engineers would live to carry their trains from one station to the next?

The unpardonable sin in an engineer is to let the water get out of the boiler of the engine in his charge. No matter what excuse he may offer, if he lives to make his report in turn, his dismissal will be peremptory, for by this action he has proved himself incompetent and unworthy of future responsibilities. It is better for an engineer that he had never been born when he reaches this stage of self torture. Fortunately such cases are rare. The man on all well conducted railroads must have shown himself to be trusty and true before he is given charge of an engine, and the rigid inspection to which he is subjected before an engagement is a guarantee of future conduct.

One weakness nearly every engineer has, and that is a penchant for "doctoring" the steam whistle on his pet engine. Every boy in a country town familiarizes himself at an early age with the different "toots" that by day and night wail through the unhappy village. He can detect No. 4's whistle when the train is five miles distant, and in like manner the approach of Nos. 1 and 2 are heralded to his keen ear. Of course all whistles are alike when they leave the shops, but the engineer fills in the sounding bell with a piece of turned wood that fits snug and changes the tone to a short, sharp scream or an angry, impatient howl, as his fancy may dictate.

The close observer may lie snugly in his bed and yet be able to detect the passing of either a freight or passenger train. The engine on the former announces its approach by emitting a sharp, shrill scream that is soul piercing enough to waken the dead, while the passenger engine, with due respect to the living freight it carries, sounds a long, deep warning note that does not bring the occupant of a berth to his feet "all standing," ready to curse the company in general terms and the engineer in particular ones for such an act of folly and inconsiderateness. On the freight train a sharp, shrill scream is essential, for it notifies the brakemen, who are perhaps forty cars in the rear of the engine and separated from the occupants of the cab by many ways of ear piercing sound, just what work is required at their hands.

This whistle is to them what the cry of the call boy on the Thames steamboat used to be to the engineer down below before the advent of electric bells. "Ease her!" the captain would remark in his ordinary tone of conversation to the small boy that followed him like a shadow, and "Ease her!" the youngster would scream in his sharp, shrill staccato down the companionway. "Stop 'er!" "Turn 'er astern!" "Go ahead!" would perhaps follow in rapid succession, and in this decidedly crude fashion the London steamboat captains did their steering by proxy only a dozen years ago. One wonders what has become of those call boys. Perhaps they spend their hours in spinning yarns to the younger cockneys of the past glories of steamboating in much the same manner that our dethroned stage drivers of the west now regale the tenderfoot with glimpses of bygone acts of heroism and feats of impossible horsemanship. This is somewhat of a digression from the topic under discussion, but perhaps the reader will excuse its insertion. One thought naturally suggested the other.

As a class engineers are usually good natured, kind hearted, though a bit rough; deep thinkers, due to their fixed habits of attention and long hours of enforced silence, and of good morals. An engineer who drinks cannot hope to hold his position long, for no master mechanic will tolerate confirmed tippling in a subordinate whose duties are so responsible as those of an engineer. He must be abstinent, prompt at his post of duty, and ever vigilant if he hopes to maintain his position. His hands may be black and his face grimy, but that his heart is all right was evidenced not long ago in a railroad terminus on the Pacific coast when the engine, puffing and laboring from its dizzy ride over mountain passes and along dangerous precipices, was approached by a golden haired miss of six, who patted one of the huge driving wheels caressingly and lisping, "You dear, big black thing, how I love you for bringing my sweet mamma and papa home to me from across those horrid mountains, and you too," she exclaimed, lifting her pretty face to the black bearded engineer, who had been watching her from his cab. The tear that sprang instantly to his eye was not an evidence of weakness, but of a warm, impassionate heart, and the father of the little girl that occasioned this touch of human nature furtively reached for his handkerchief just as the engineer drew his grimy sleeve across his sooty face.—Chicago Herald.

Housewifely English Sparrows.

A loving student of the English sparrow as the bird is to be seen in Brooklyn finds that the little creature has in his domestic relations many human traits. When the sparrows are mating and building, the male sinks into insignificance beside the female. When a nesting place is to be selected the male looks jauntily about and is ready to accept anything that comes to hand, but the hen examines each proposed site with critical care, apparently studies the relations of the place to sun, wind and rain, and finally decides the question with small consideration for the opinions of her spouse.

When the nest is to be built the housewifely character of the hen again asserts itself. She is busy all day long gathering sticks and straws to serve as building material. Nothing is taken haphazard, but every stick or straw fits to a nicety and is admirably adapted to the end for which it is selected. As to the male, he gives moral support and little else. While the hen is devoting all her energies to the task in hand he sits on a neighboring bough and encourages her with music. Nor does she expect or wish more at his hands.

Now and then, apparently pricked by conscience, he leaves his perch, picks up a clumsy stick or straw and carries it to the scene of the building operations. But his contribution is seldom received with favor. The hen usually examines it with the ill concealed scorn that wives sometimes accord to domestic performances of husbands, and in nine cases out of ten she tosses away the proffered material as soon as the back of her spouse is turned.—New York Sun.

A Cowboy's Sense of Humor.

A globe trotting Englishman told me this story: "To show you that the cowboys are not as bad as they have been painted—in fact, that they are opposed to anything like lawbreaking and violence—let me relate an incident. There was a poor clerk standing up over his books at a desk in a shop on the main street, and there was a cowboy riding up and down the street. Well, the cowboy saw the clerk and his sense of humor was aroused by the idea of shooting at him, d'you know. Those cowboys have a very remarkable sense of humor. So the cowboy ups with his pistol, d'you know, and he shoots the poor clerk right through the head, killing him instantly.

"Well, now, that sort of thing is very distinctly frowned upon by cowboys, as a rule, and in this case the cowboys held a meeting and resolved that the fellow with the lively but dangerous sense of humor should be hanged at once. They put a rope around his neck, and there being no tree anywhere in sight they hung him to the side of a Pullman as the train came rolling in. I've seen a number of occurrences of that sort, which makes me quite positive in stating that though they are a very rum sort of beggars they are really not a bad lot."—Julian Ralph in Harper's Weekly.

A Lazy, Though Shrewd Fellow.

Tulkinson—a barrister and bachelor combined, by the way—is a very systematic man. The other day he had his house fitted with electrical appliances, and giving instructions to his servant Joseph, he said:

"Now I want you to understand, Joseph, that when I ring once that means for you, and when I ring twice that means for Maggie, the housemaid."

Joseph, who is the laziest wretch that ever accepted wages he did not earn, bowed respectfully and withdrew. A little later the bell rang. Joseph never moved. Presently it rang again, and according to instructions Maggie came hurrying to her master, who was very angry.

"Why didn't that rascal, Joseph, come when I rang for him?" said the barrister bachelor disgustedly.

"Why, sir," answered Maggie, "Joseph is busy in the office reading your newspaper. When he heard the first ring he said to me, 'Now, Maggie, wait until he rings the second time, and then it will be you he wants.'"—London Tit-Bits.

Strange Cave Dwellers in Spain.

At a meeting of the Royal Geographical society, of Madrid, Dr. Bide gave an account of his exploration of a wild district in the province of Caceres, which he represented as still inhabited by a strange people who speak a curious patois and live in caves and inaccessible retreats. They have a hairy skin and have hitherto displayed a strong repugnance to mixing with their Spanish and Portugese neighbors. Roads have lately been pushed into the district inhabited by the "Jurdes," and they are beginning to learn the Castilian language and attend the fairs and markets.—W. H. Larrabee in Popular Science Monthly.

The Growth of Railroad Mileage.

In 1830 there were twenty-three miles of railway in operation in the United States. By 1832 the mileage had increased to 229 miles, and in 1835 the country had 1,098 miles of railroad. The first through railroad from the east westward was completed in 1842 between Boston and Albany, connecting at the latter place with the Erie canal. In the same year the last link of the line from Albany to Buffalo was opened. At the end of 1848 the total mileage of all the railroads in the country was 5,996 miles, or about 500 miles more than there are now in the state of Nebraska.—Edward Rosewater's Omaha Address.

The Flute Is Very Old.

The flute is very old in its origin, but the flute of today is different from that of the ancients. It has been improved upon from time to time, and the old people would probably fail to recognize it now. The flageolet, which is somewhat similar, is credited to Juvigny about 1581.—Harper's Young People.

Felt Flattered.

England is laughing at the story told in Henry Norman's "Real Japan" of the American minister at Tokio, who thought the Japanese "darned clever" people because they greeted him with cries of "Ohavo." "How did they know that I was from Ohio?" he asked.

"The tenement house," said a speaker at a recent public meeting, "is the enemy of philanthropy of the present day." He meant that whatever is done to ameliorate the condition of the masses of the poor in the great cities is, to a great extent, neutralized by the conditions under which they live.

The value of the product of the factories and mills west of the Mississippi during the year 1891 is computed at $423,068,695, and the product of the states west of the Missouri alone is computed at $198,722,653.

In territorial area the United States ranks third. Great Britain contains 8,557,000 square miles of territory, Russia, 8,352,940 miles, and the United States, counting Alaska, 3,580,242 miles.

STATUE OF CHARLES THE FIRST.

Comely and calm he rides
Hard by his own Whitehall;
Only the night wind glides:
No crowds, nor rebels, brawl.

Gone, too, his court, and yet,
The stars his courtiers,
Stars in their stations set;
And every wandering star.

Alone he rides, alone,
The fair and fatal king;
Dark night is all his own,
That strange and solemn thing.

Which are more full of fate,
The stars, or those sad eyes?
Which are more still and great,
Those brows, or the dark skies?
—Lionel Johnson.

Symbols of the Thunderbolt.

The different nations of the world, both ancient and modern, have employed various symbols to represent the fires that flash from the thundercloud. The Chaldeans symbolized it with a trident; the learned Babylonians used a human arm for the same purpose. The bas-reliefs of Nimrud and Malthia, the work of later and more refined Assyrian artists, show the trident doubled or transformed into a trifid fascicle. This triumph of the classic art secured for the ancient Mesopotamian symbol the advantage over all other representations of the thunderbolt.

The Greeks represented the storm fire with the features of a bird of prey. Later on, when they had begun the use of the Asiatic form of the symbol, they put it in the claws of an eagle and made it the scepter of Zeus. Gaul received the symbol from Italy, but soon altered it to the familiar two headed hammer seen on the Gallo-Roman monuments. The same symbol is seen on amulets found in Germany, Scandinavia and Brittany.—St. Louis Republic.

The Color of the Complexion.

If Mrs. Emily Crawford's deductions are true, beauty and such a hitherto difficult achievement as a complexion are mere matters of determination. Mrs. Crawford says that Frenchwomen used to be brown as a berry; but of late years they are conspicuous for their marble charm. The expression is Mrs. Crawford's. This, she says, is simply the result of their intense desire for beauty in pallor; it is altogether a matter of will power. It is elsewhere admitted that the Parisian has been giving a great deal of consideration to her diet, and has found that poultry and milk are better allies, so far as her skin is concerned, than butcher's meat and wine.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Perfumes the Horse Likes.

There are some perfumes that are very grateful to horses, however little credit a horse may commonly receive for possessing delicacy of scent. Horse trainers are aware of the fact and make use of their knowledge in training stubborn and apparently intractable animals. Many trainers have favorite perfumes, the composition of which they keep a secret, and it is the possession of this means of appealing to the horse's æstheticism that enables so many of them to accomplish such wonderful results.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Enemies of the Salmon Fisheries.

Seals and sea lions are a great nuisance to the salmon fishermen. At the mouth of the Columbia river they watch the gill nets and grab the caught salmon by the throats, devouring those parts which they regard especially as tidbits. Bears are very fond of salmon and catch a great many of them in the streams. They eat only the heads.—Washington Star.
