A BRIGHT OUTLOOK.

Every Assurance of a Signal Victory

FOR CLALLAM COUNTY

Democrats in November—Citizens Thoroughly Dissatisfied With the Flagrant Extravagance and Profligate Squandering of Public Funds.

As the battle advances the outlook for Democratic victory in Clallam county becomes brighter and more re-assuring.

The contest which doubtless will be fierce and bitter, is waged on distinctive issues. The Democratic party of Clallam county has positively and emphatically denounced the shameless waste and glaring extravagance of the present county administration. It denounces such squandering as a misappropriation of the peoples' money.

The Democratic county platform, which should be read and pondered by every taxpayer of the county, declares in no uncertain terms for an honest, economical administration of county affairs.

The enormity of the extravagance of county officials is just beginning to dawn upon the minds of the overburdened taxpayers of the county with overwhelming force. The disclosure of the alarming extravagance of county officials by the Democratic platform, was indeed, a revelation to taxpayers. They really had had no conception of the extent of the squandering of county funds. They fully realize, however, that the rate of taxation is ruinously high; that the system of the collection of taxes is not only unnecessarily burdensome, but an infamy, an outrage, and an additional burden upon the crushing load they already have to carry. For these iniquities, these burdens, they have to return thanks to a Republican administration. They certainly have reason to feel grateful, under everlasting obligations for such marked consideration.

There is a trite and truthful saying that "you can fool some of the people all of the time, all of the people some of the time, but you can't fool all of the people all of the time." The taxpayers of this county have certainly been betrayed and the susceptibility of humanity has been played upon with a master hand. But the point of human endurance has been reached. The day of retribution, of judgment, is at hand. "The way of the transgressor is hard." The people of Clallam have decreed that the squanderer of public funds, the betrayer of public trust, should be relegated to the obscurity of that region the good book tells us all evil spirits inhabit.

Now let the battle begin for reform, for puritannical economy in the administration of public affairs.

Following are brief sketches of the Democratic candidates for county offices:

Representative.

Mr. C. E. Mallette, who received the nomination for representative at the Democratic convention, is a man who, though but thirty-one years old, has experienced those vicissitudes of life, which have developed the qualities necessary to place him in the front ranks of the young Democracy of Washington. A brief resume of those vicissitudes will prove very interesting reading to the voters of Clallam county, and it is but just that they should know something of the man whom they are expected to elect to the important office of representing them in the state legislature.

Mr. Mallette came to Port Angeles in the spring of '89 from Victoria, where he had been engaged in real estate business. Upon the first visit, he became so favorably impressed with the many advantages here presented that he at once determined to cast his lot among the few that were here at that time, and were making a brave struggle for recognition as a city.

He immediately introduced Port Angeles upon the attention of other residents of Victoria who, with Mr. Mallette, and upon his advice, made many large investments in real estate in this city. Mr. Mallette's next step was to sell all interests in other localities and to thoroughly identify himself with Clallam county. The manner in which this was done is amply shown by the present system of water works in which he has invested over $70,000 and outside of this enterprise is one of the largest individual taxpayers in the county. He was the prime instigator of the movement to build a railroad into Clallam county, and though this scheme has not yet been consummated, the fault lies not at Mr. Mallette's door, but is owing to other circumstances which he could not control. The railroad is by no means a dead hope, and to Mr. Mallette this community is now looking for a railroad, with his extensive acquaintance with men of affairs, who are interested with him in the road, a completion will be attained as soon as the Port Townsend Southern give them an eastern connection.

Mr. Mallette was born in Illinois in November 1861, and two years later was taken by his parents to California residing upon a farm in Santa Clara county and at the age of 14, owing to the death of his father, was left the care of the family and the management of the farm. At 21 he married and engaged in the livery business in Hollister, California, misfortune attended this venture, when he left California for Victoria, where he began at the bottom of the ladder with a load of debt upon his shoulders to keep him down. After a few years he had settled every claim against him in California, and fortune smiling upon his efforts crowned them with success.

Mr. Mallette has always been a firm and faithful believer in, and exponent of Democracy. This is his first appearance in the political arena.

Superior Judge.

Judge L. M. Lane was born in Andrew county, Missouri, November 4th, 1854. When the subject of this sketch was in his second year, the family immigrated to Peoria county, Illinois, residing there until 1866. When they returned to Missouri and in the spring of 1872, located in Nodaway county. Judge Lane spent his early days in tilling the soil, his early educational advantages being very limited.

After removing to Maryville, Indiana, he attended school for a time, after which he turned his attention to teaching and for some time was one of the first teachers of his county. In the spring of 1875, commenced the stupy of law. Previous to this he had not given the law any consideration and in the unprecedented time of two months and twenty-seven days, he was prepared, passed a creditable examination and was admitted to the bar. We glean the above facts from the history of Nodaway county, Missouri. At his old home Judge Lane held several positions of trust. He was mayor one term of the city of Maryville, two terms its city attorney, and two terms the prosecuting attorney of Nodaway county. All of these positions he occupied in a manner highly satisfactory to his people and when he left his old home in 1890, he was recognized as one of the first lawyers of northwest Missouri. Judge Lane arrived in Port Angeles December 6th, 1890, where ever since he has been actively engaged in the practice of the law. He now ranks as one of the best lawyers of the Sound country, as he rarely ever losses a case in the courts. He stands high with both bench and bar, and many are the letters of congratulation he has received since his nomination. Judge Lane was the unanimous choice of the convention for the office of superior judge, and we congratulate the people of the county on their opportunity to secure so able a jurist to preside on the bench of this county. We predict his election by a very large majority.

County Auditor.

John W. Troy, Democratic nominee for county auditor, is a native of Clallam county, having first seen the light of day on a farm near Dungeness, October 31, 1868. He a son of Hon. Smith Troy.

His early life was spent in assisting his parents and brothers to hew a farm out of a Washington wilderness. Attended an occasional three month's term of school in a backwoods district. Worked in logging camps and at other manual labor to earn a stake to attend school. In 1886 he commenced attending the Port Townsend public school, graduating in 1887. 1887-8 he attended the Port Townsend accademy. Taught school during the summer of 1888 for six weeks, when he was taken sick and compelled to give up the school.

It was this illness, which lasted all summer, that compelled the subject of this sketch to abandon a cherished ambition for a college education.

His father having been elected county auditor at the fall election in 1888, John was appointed deputy in 1889, which position he filled for two years, to the satisfaction of everyone concerned. While in this position he acquired a knowledge of the affairs of the office, that will be of great value to him and the people if he is elected this fall. Was deputy county clerk in 1891.

In connection with R. A. Grimes he purchased the Port Angeles Herald October 1, 1891, and changed it to THE DEMOCRAT. Mr. Troy has edited this paper ever since, having two months latter purchased Mr. Grimes' interest in the plant. In May of this year, Mr. Troy, in company with Thomas Malony and Louis R. Flowers, formed the Democrat Publishing Company, which company owns and publishes THE DEMOCRAT, Mr. Troy being editor.

John W. Troy, true to his name, is a Democrat, having taken an active part in politics since before he became of age. He has attended every county convention since arriving at his majority and has twice attended state conventions. The late convention at Olympia honored him by making him its secretary.

Mr. Troy was nominated for county auditor by acclamation, there being no opposition.

Sheriff.

William B. Gould, the present sheriff and recepient of the nomination for reelection to that office on the Democratic ticket, was born in September, 1855, in the town of Freeport, Stevenson county, Illinois, of Irish parents, who left their home in Illinois for the farther west, and settled in Nebraska city, Nebraska, sometime in the latter part of '66. Mr. Gould, at that time—though only 11 years old—had become deeply impressed with the grandeur of the great west, and determined to see more of it, which desire was increased by the pursuits in which he was engaged while Nebraska was his home, such as herding cattle and freighting. The scene of which persuits extended over all the territory from the Missouri river to colorado, and in which he managed to accumulate a little property.

In 1872 he left Nebraska for Kansas and made his home in Cloud county, but not being very well satisfied with his surroundings and the business opportunity offered there, he concluded to tempt fortune as a teamster on the Santa Fe trail and secured a position as such with an outfit bound for Prescott, Arizona.

The next few years he spent in teaming in Arizona, California and New Mexico, and made several trips across the Mojave desert. The mining fever about this time took possession of him, which led him into prospecting, which he persued with great zeal over nearly all of the country in the southwest, having prospected in the Lake Valley, San Dias, Black Range and Socorro districts of New Mexico; the Yuma, Tombstone and Mongollon districts of Arizona. Meeting with indifferent success as a prospector Mr. Gould at last determined to try his fortune on Puget Sound, and reached this country nine years ago. He immediately secured employment, and being of an economical disposition saved a little money and went to ranching on his own account, pre-empting a valuable piece of government land near Port Crescent.

Mr. Gould now has varied interests in Clallam county, and is thoroughly a Clallam county man, and a tried and true Democrat.

County Attorney.

Mr. D. W. Bryan, the Democratic candidate for county attorney, was born in Highland county, Ohio, in the year 1854. Of poor parents, he left home at the age of 16, to struggle for himself and to hew out a fortune and a name in this country of grand opportunities. By his own effort he received an education, chopping wood and making rails in the meantime to earn a livelihood.

As soon as he had gained sufficient knowledge he began teaching school. He taught school in Highland county, Ohio, and worked out during vacation, until the spring of 1875, when he removed to Nodaway county, Missouri. From 1875 until 1881 he taught school and read law in Maryville, Missouri, and was admitted to practice the law at that place in March, 1881. In May, 1891, he accepted a position with an engineering party, and went to Montana, where he spent two years in the employment of the Northern Pacific railway, surveying the line of that transcontinental system through Montana. Returned east in 1883 and engaged in the practice of the law at Pierce, Nebraska, where he remained until coming to Washington in 1889.

During Mr. Bryan's residence in Clallam county he has gained the universal respect and confidence of the people, and is regarded as a man of high integrity of character, as a conscientious, careful, thoughtful and industrious student of his chosen profession.

Respected and admired as a man of character and individuality, Mr. Bryan's nomination will be endorsed by the voters at the polls in November.

School Superintendent.

Mrs. Lena Wilcox was born in Washington, Washington county, Iowa, in 1869. In 1881 her father, Mr. E. E. Boggess, being out of health, changed the ague-filled air of southern Iowa for the life giving oxygen of Colorado, to which state he brought his family the next year. After spending a year on a ranch they moved to Greeley in order that Miss Lena might resume her school work. She entered the Greeley high school in 1884, where she graduated with the second honors of her class. She attended the university of Denver where she led all her class in scholarship and deportment. She began teaching in September 1889, in Logan county, Colorado, riding a broncho four miles to school every day for seven months. She then taught in Weld county until March 6, 1891, when she resolved to try her fortune in the new west. She reached Port Angeles March 16 and immediately secured a school in the Mount Misery district. On visiting the district, she found no place where a lady might board, but not to be baffled by difficulties, she secured a stove and cooking "outfit," saying she had "come here to teach, and meant to do so." She lived alone in a cabin in the woods during a three month's term, walking five miles to Angeles once a week for her mail and supplies. She taught in the Port Angeles Central school last year, and was offered a place there this year, but declined on receiving the Democratic nomination.

Miss Boggess was married to Mr. Scott Wilcox last December, but does not expect to give up school work.

She is secretary of the Clallam County Teachers' Association, and it was through the individual efforts of herself and husband that the Association was organized. Mrs. Wilcox has been remarkably successful as a teacher, and is highly recommended by leading educators of Colorado and Washington.

She held a first grade certificate in Colorado, and holds the best first grade ever granted in Clallam county.

If elected to the office of county superintendent she will give her entire time to the work, and will use her utmost endeavor to raise the standard of the public schools of Clallam county.

Surveyor.

Mr. E. A. Fitz Henry, Democratic candidate for county surveyor was born in Bloomington, Illinois, January 9, 1866. He received his education at the state normal school in that place, graduating at the age of 19. Immediately after leaving school he was appointed assistant city engineer, a position he very acceptably filled for one year, resigning at that time to accept a more lucrative position on the Lake Erie & Western railway.

Like all ambitious, energetic young men possessed with the restless spirit of adventure and a thirsting desire to behold the wonders and embrace the opportunities the evergreen state so temptingly offered the vigorous, active young men of the East, he left his native land to identify himself with the new and promising state of Washington. He has been a resident of Port Angeles for the past three years, during which time he has followed his chosen profession. He had charge of the engineering of the construction of the water works, an important piece of work which he discharged in an efficient and satisfactory manner.

He is regarded as an upright and a competent business man, who will, if elected, discharge the duties of the office in a conscientious and an acceptable manner.

Clallam Bay Record.

C. W. Ide, of Spokane, United States government inspector of surveys, arrived in town on Monday. He was accompanied by two assistants and is going to inspect the four townships surveyed by Shelton last year. The surveying crew left here to begin work last Wednesday. Mr. Ide has numerous other townships in different parts of the state to inspect. In regard to the two mile strip he states that he has had no instructions to inspect it and no information about it.

***

A crew of men are now at work clearing the river of obstructions so that logs can be floated down to the sawmill. This movement was started by David Kellogg who has subscribed liberally towards it. The clearing of the river will make it possible to bring down a large quantity of timber and keep the mill in operation.

***

A few days ago, while the tug Tyee was cruising ten miles southwest of Cape Flattery, Captaim Gove concluded to stop the steamer for a short time and see what the prospects were for catching fish. Accordingly a line was dropped and bottom was struck at a depth of sixty fathoms. The line was hauled in a few minutes later and every hook had a fish. All hands commenced fishing and in a few hours the deck was litterally covered with codfish, redfish, jack cod and small shark. Next day the Tyee took the schooner Lady George to the fishing banks, arriving there about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. She put out her fishing gear and when hauled in two hours later 176 fish were taken, or nearly two tons. The banks are apparently unkown as the latest government charts do not show them, the least depth of water in their vicinity being eighty-two fathoms. The Albatross will make an examination of these new fishing grounds.

***

The building of the county road around the Bay, the extension of the wharf and the clearing of the river will furnish considerable work here for some time to come.

Dungeness Beacon.

The exports in the year 1890 were as follows: Wheat, 8,500 sacks; oats, 5,000 sacks; hay, 1,400 tons; potatoes 50,000 sacks. In 1891 the exports were not so large, as there was no market, but the various crops were as heavy as the year before. This year the crops will average more than in either of the preceding years and the exports will probably be much greater.

***

Mr. Donald McInnes, of Port Angeles, was in town Monday accompanied by his father, D. McInnes, Sr., of Sequim. Mr. and Mrs. McInnes have been spending a week or two at Sequim.

It is believed that there will be fully 1,705 tons of hay and 70,000 bushels of potatoes for exportation this year.

If you really desire a reform in the county government, don't throw your vote away, but vote for the Democratic county ticket.

If you really desire a reform in the county government, don't throw your vote away, but vote for the Democratic county ticket.

The Seattle Telegraph favors digging the ditch if for no other purpose than to dump the King county ring into it and turn on the water. A bright idea.

Citizens of Clallam have ample opportunity to taste the sweet extracted from a Republican system of taxation. Do they relish the luxury?

Mr. Snively assisted Clallam county's representative more than any other man in Olympia to secure a separate court for Clallam county at the session of the last legislature.

The farmers of Eastern Washington will not endorse the administration of a party that would not afford it relief from excessive rates of transportation. The fate of the Wasson railroad bill is fresh in the memory of the voters of the state.

The Democracy of Clallam county has pledged its candidates for office to do certain things. They are actually bound, in such a manner that they must keep faith. No other party has done this. To prove its sincerity, it has nominated a ticket whom all know will keep their part of the contract at all hazzards, if elected.

The Dungeness Beacon makes the most startling admission of ignorance that has occurred during the present campaign. It asks "who is Snively?" Ask any of your town's school children, or any of those who have read your exchanges for the last five years, Mr. editor, and you will doubtless obtain your information.

"BOODLE THE ONLY LAW."

Poetical effusions have played no unimportant part in the great arena of politics. Of all blighting, withering sarcasm, none equals in force and influence the rhythmical ridicule or criticism of an aspirant for offices, particularly is this true of a man of questionable qualifications for an office of trust. Ponder the force and truth of the following stanzas:

We are for the man from King!
He is leader of the ring!
Boodle is the only law
In the eyes of Boss McGraw!
He can barter votes and trade—
He can clinch the gambler's aid!
Money takes the place of mind
In McGraw's peculiar kind!
Ta-ra-ra, boom, McGraw.

Boss McGraw will work the wire!
He it was that boosted Squire:
He is Charley Laughton's peer;
His ambition's very clear;
He would soon the scheme unfold
That his god's a sack of gold;
Principles are bonds of straw
In the eyes of Boss McGraw,
Ta-ra-ra, boom, McGraw.

Hip! hurrah! for Boss McGraw!
Right's a fool and wrong's a law;
Boodle is the thing that knocks;
Candidates must put up rocks;
Heelers must their plots contrive,
Working in their "blocks of five,"
Win by methods foul and raw—
Only WIN—that's Boss McGraw.
Ta-ra-ra, boom, McGraw.

ACTIONS SPEAK FIRST.

C. W. Young promises, if elected governor, to put Pinkerton detectives in the penitentiary if they attempt to do business in the state of Washington. This may be so. He probably would do his best to do so. But there is an old adage that runs something like this: "Actions speak louder than words." Words of promise are better than nothing, but in Hon. H. J. Snively, the Democratic candidate for governor, we have a man who actually faught to a successful end an invasion of armed Pinkertons. As prosecuting attorney of Yakima county, Mr. Snively had every Pinkerton detective who came to assist the corporation owners of the Roslyn coal mines to bulldose the miners, who had made a demand for certain rights, arrested, and lodged in the county jail, where they remained until the trouble was settled.

Mr. Snively is true to his professions.

THE ERA OF REFORM.

The Island County Sun is a staunch Republican paper. It carries at the head of its editorial columns the name of Harrison as its presidential candidate. The Sun has a disposition to admit a good thing when it sees it.

And it compliments the Democracy of Clallam county as follows:

"The Democrats of Clallam county have adopted a platform wherein they agree to put a man in the auditor's office who will guarantee to only employ a deputy and other clerical help in the office when the work demands it, and then that the cost of such help shall not exceed the amount of fees received. Also, a treasurer who will be competent to do the whole work of the office without the aid of a deputy. This is the sort of reform and economy the people of Island county are demanding."

Our Republican friends in Clallam would do well to fall into line with Republicans in Island county in this matter of reform and economy.

Inasmuch as the two platforms are now before the people of the county, this they can do only by voting the Democratic ticket.

We shall err greatly in our judgment if many who desire the proper administration of affairs do not do this. We believe that they will do it. Shameful expenditures of public funds will no longer be tolerated in intelligent communities.

AN EXPRESSION OF GRATITUDE.

A greatful heart beats only in a manly bosom.

The following letter from Colonel Jamas Hamilton Lewis to the editor THE DEMOCRAT is published so that our readers may understand, as near as is possible for those who do not know this greathearted man personally, the feeling of gratitude that that leader has for those who stood loyally by him in the late contest at Olympia.

The people of Clallam county can also appreciate by this the faithfulness which the Clallam county delegation showed to that man Clallam county loves to call a friend. Colonel Lewis writes:

SEATTLE, WASH., Sept. 1st, 1892.

DEAR MR. TROY: I cannot permit any longer time to elapse without giving my expression of gratitude, and thanks for the unswerving fidelity and unshaken friendship of Clallam county to me and my friends, as displayed in the late Democratic convention. Under the gallant leadership of yourself and your worthy lieutenants, Clallam has left by her course, a memory that places me, likewise King county and her friends, under constant and deep obligation. Please say to your people that I, as likewise my county and my friends, am and are at their service in any manner and at any time. With the sincerest trust that Clallam may prove her devotion to the ticket as she did to me, and that a Lewis tho' not from King, still can be known as Clallam's choice.

I beg to subscribe myself the personal friend of yourself and the obedient servant of your people,

JAMES HAMILTON LEWIS.

WHO SNIVELY IS.

In the last legislature Mr. Snively fought for an eight hour labor law, for the anti-Pinkerton law, and for a reduction of freights and fares on the railroads.

During the Roslyn mining trouble Mr. Snively ably and fearlessly defended the miners against the inhuman, unwarranted and barbarous attack of the Pinkerton bloodhounds, the unAmerican existence of which, was made possible in this state by a Republican legislature.

A brilliant lawyer, an earnest, avowed advocate of the peoples' rights Mr. Snively, is not only well qualified for the position of governor, but is a man in whom the people can place implicit trust.

A man imbued with economic, honest and patriotic ideas of the administration of governmental affairs.

A man who is most emphatically and positively opposed to shameless extravagance, profligate squandering of public funds.

One of the few courageous, fearless defenders of the peoples' cause in the late hopelessly Republican boodle legislature.

This is a fair, impartial, although but an incomplete, estimate of Mr. Snively.

He is known to the people of the state. And an enviable record is his.

Not as a boodler, an unscrupulous political boss, a ward-politician, but an honest, upright, fearless advocate of the cause of the masses.

WILL THEY VOTE AS THEY DEMAND?

While national and state politics may be slightly complicated as to the issues involved, local politics are not. The issues that should decide which party's nominees should be chosen to manage Clallam county's affairs for the next two years, are simple and easily understood. Anyone can, all do ununderstand that this county has had two years of wasteful and extravagant misrule. Two years of the most radical of favoritism—that has plunged us in debt more than $160,000 for which we have but a few miles of, at times, almost impassable county road. It has been shown that it has cost the county nearly an $100,000, for ordinary running expenses in nineteen months. This is, as said, clearly understood by all.

By silence and by renominations, the Republicans, in their county convention, through their press and on the street, endorse the administration that brought about this condition of affairs.

The Democratic party condemns it. It has protested for more than a year but in vain. The right way was pointed out while it was yet time to save the county the disgrace, and the people the cost of all this. In the convention, it pointed out this glaring state of affairs, and in a straight forward platform unanimously adopted, it pledged its candidates to a change. It pledged them to execute what is demanded by the people. True to consistency, it nominated a ticket of which every man is one of known and unquestioned integrity. There names are sufficient recommendation that everything for which the platform stands, will be regarded by each as a personal and solemn pledge of honor.

This is plain. It is, further, as plain that the only way to redeem the county, to save it from bankruptcy—is to see that the Democratic ticket is chosen. It is either this or a continuation of what we now have and which we feel so deeply.

Now do the people really desire what they demand? Are the voters of Clallam county consistent? THE DEMOCRATIC believes they are. THE DEMOCRAT has full faith and confidence in the wisdom, patriotism of Clallam county. Otherwise it would not be the county it is today.

If they are patriotic, if they really want what they have demanded, they will show it by voting, irrespective of party, for what they have asked—for the Democratic ticket. It must be thus—or it will be two years more of the present misrule, unless bankruptcy comes first.

A Republican Estimate.

To John H. McGraw and Henchmen: We are talking to you. Listen! You organized the overwhelming defeat of the Republicans of Seattle yesterday. You had not sense enough to see that the people of Seattle, as well as the state, are sick of the political methods you and your friend Metcalf inaugurated in the lobby of the Olympia hotel a year ago. You carried those ring methods into the Seattle Republican city convention, you alienated men who had fought and bled for the Republican party, you brought a disreputable "bummer" element prominently into the party, forgetting that the voter was alone with his lead pencil when he exercised the right to reject the ring candidates you had foisted upon him. It was not strictly a Democratic victory yesterday. Seattle is a staunch Republican city. Hundreds of Republicans voted the opposition ticket because they are sick and tired of "boss" rule in the councils of the party. Retire, Mr. Graw, as a counsellor of the Republican party. You have done damage enough.—Olympia Tribune, March 9, 1892.—(Republican.)

County Assessor.

William Redwine, Democratic candidate for county assessor was born in Gainesville, Georgia, thirty-eight years ago.

After receiving a good business education in the schools of Georgia he began his business career as a clerk in a store, a pursuit he very successfully followed for a number of years. He afterwards engaged in the mercantile business for himself with excellent success, removing, however, to Eastern Washington in 1872 where he again engaged in business, which he conducted very successfully until 1882, when he removed to San Francisco, California, where he was employed in a large mercantile establishment as bookkeeper. He remained in California until 1890, at which time he removed to Clallam county being a resident of Rena at the present time.

As a thorough, accurate bookkeeper Mr. Redwine is well qualified for the position of assessor. This position requires as the essential qualifications that a man possesses a good idea of land values and a thorough understanding of accounts. In this direction the Democratic candidate is eminently competent.

A DISMAL FAILURE

Attends the Effort to Arrange a "Happy Family" in the G. O. P. Household.

Have you never viewed that peculiarly interesting picture drawn by a master hand, representing the "Happy Family?" It presents a collection of the animals of the forest and of the plains, both the domestic and the wild and untamable. You see the gentle lamb lying peacefully and in perfect security by the side of its most dreaded enemy, the treacherous wolf; the graceful and harmless fawn, grazes unconcernedly in close proxemity to its destroyer, the fierce and carnivorous panther, the dog and the cat have forgotten their vows of eternal enemity, and throughout this remarkable picture the crosses of wild nature have been harmoniously blended into perfect unity.

On the minds, doubtless, of the Republican brethren had been impressed the vision of this beautiful and interesting picture, when they met last Tuesday in committeeship to renew acquaintance and pour vows of everlasting friendship and brotherly love, and they had fully determined to examplify the grand object lesson taught. But the magnetic influence of the tamer, the mysterious power of the hypnotic was not present. The fierce, bloodthirsty nature of the wolf, the panther, was, if anything, more intense and rapacious.

A terrible scene takes place. Bitter hatred, consuming jealousy, malignant envy control the minds and the actions of the leaders of Clallam's Republican household. Talk about family jars, an entertainment in the realms of pandemonium, they sink into utter insignificance in comparison with this veritable "parrot and monkey" show.

THE DEMOCRAT will draw the curtain of charity over the scene. Out of consideration for the feelings of its readers it will not attempt to reproduce the forceful and uncomplimentary epithets exchanged, the accusations of dishonesty of purpose and untrustworthiness. This will be left entirely to the imagination of the reader.

The object of the meeting, was, of course, to elect a chairman and a secretary of the county central committee.

The candidates for chairman were Messrs. R. C. Wilson and W. R. Gay. The vote resulted 15 to 16 in favor of the latter. Mr. Horace White was elected secretary. The contention was, of course, over the chairmanship.

Friends and supporters of Mr. R. C. Wilson maintained that he represented the better element of Republicanism was a man of honor, and integrity of character, worthy in the highest sense of any position of responsibility or trust, while on the other hand friends, supporters and admirers of Mr. W. R. Gay, as warmly contended that their candidate was "the young man in politics," who was an untiring worker, a shrewd manipulator, a brilliant organizer and withal the right man for the place. Their wishes prevailed, greatly to the chagrin and surprise of the contending forces After the battle the contestants shook hands, exchanged well-wishes, and agreed to see each other through to—the bitter end.

The executive committee appointed were: Theo. Bradshaw, Len. Raymond, John Brown, Sequim; M. V. B. Lameroux, Beaver.

Snively's Record.

Our next governor, H. J. Snively, when prosecuting attotney of Yakima and Kittitas counties during the coal mine trouble five years ago at Roslyn, upon the approach of an armed body of Pinkertons, wired the Democratic governor, Eugene Semple, that he would be compelled to resist any invasion of his county by anybody of armed troops, unless otherwise instructed. To which Governor Semple replied: "Stop them at all hazzards." And we beg to state that they "stopped." Fine promises in a political campaign are always in order, but actions speak louder than words.—Elma Chronicle.

TIN PLATE HISTORY.

THE DIVERSIFIED USES TO WHICH IT IS APPLIED.

Its Use as a Food Wrapper—How the McKinley Tariff Is Injuring the Tariff Industry—What Tin Plate Is and How It Is Manufactured.

Tin plates since the tariff discussion concerning them have become an item of public interest. There seems to be a surprising ignorance on the part of the people concerning their manufacture, the diversified uses to which they are applied, as well as to the qualities which make them important in the economy of living.

Briefly stated, tin plates are iron or steel sheets cut to a convenient size plated with tin; in other words, iron or steel plates painted on both sides with a tin coating.

Ninety per cent. of all the tin plates consumed in the world are made in Wales. For 170 years that little country has defied all competition in their manufacture. Added to a thorough knowledge of the practical features of the trade, the Welsh manufacturers have proved great inventors in bringing into use labor saving and material saving machinery.

As iron and tin constitute the entire bulk of and 90 per cent. of the entire cost of tin plates, their price and fluctuation are the history of the tin production of the world and the sheet steel industry. Owing to the scarcity of tin, prices advanced from 1864, when it was £87 per ton, to £159 in 1892. There was nearly as marked an advance in iron during the same period. This sent the price of tin plates up to 26s. per box. In 1878 tin reached the exceedingly low price of £52 10s. per ton. Iron reached a correspondingly low price, Philadelphia pig being quoted in 1876 at $16.50, as against $53 in 1872. The cheapness of these ingredients lowered the price of tin plates to 12s. 1½d. Since that date the decline in plates has been in strict keeping with the price of iron and tin down to June, 1890, when speculation incident to the McKinley tariff on tin plates set in.

The cheapness of tin plates, together with their durability for certain uses, and their adaptability as wrappers for hermetically sealed canned food has greatly stimulated their importation. In 1850 the importation was only 500,000 boxes; now it has reached over 6,000,000 boxes. Our natural increase in consumption of plates since 1887 amounts to 500,000 boxes each year. This increase is directly traceable to the development of the canning industry, which now consumes more than 3,500,000 boxes yearly.

These cans or wrappers for canned produce are made up with a large percentage of tin for soldering, as the solder needs to be strong and noncorrosive. From 15,000 to 18,000 tons of pig tin are required for this purpose annually.

The canning industry would never have developed to its present status had it not had the advantage of cheap tin plates. Glass was found to be too expensive and the matter of its breakage too extensive to prove economical as a wrapper for a food product. Tin cans were found to be as wholesome as glass, proof against breakage and less than one-third the cost of the glass jars.

Under the stimulus of these cheap wrappers made from tin plates the canning industry has made wonderful development, and being a direct evolution of agriculture has stimulated a class of intensive farming in the older settled portions of the country which has not only rescued farmers from an actual retrogression, but has made their farms remunerative. One million acres of land are now under exclusive cultivation for these cameries. As a farmer on an average devotes from eight to ten acres of his farm to this class of culture, it is shown that 100,000 farmers, or 500,000 people, are interested in the cultivation, growing and picking of these fruits and vegetables which these can wrappers convey to the consumers of the country.

It was under these encouraging conditions of the canning industry, and the advantages thus created by a home market for the farmers' produce, that the supposed prohibitive duty of 1890 on tin plates was inflicted.

Put forth as a protection pure and simple to a few sheet roofing men in order to drive out a competing article, the law utterly ignored the canning industry, which, unable to substitute galvanized iron or sheet steel for tin plates in its manufacture of hermetically sealed food products, hence had no alternative but to pay the enhanced price or go out of the business.

Reports from all sections of the country indicate clearly the effects of this arbitrary interference on the part of the government with an established industry. Letters received from over 100 concerns, both canners and manufacturers of tinware, and of all political shades, and scattered from Maine to California, set forth in most emphatic terms the injury of the increased duty on tin plates to their business.

The policy of spoliation, however, has been perfectly vindicated. The sheet iron mills have been able to advance the prices of their products according to programme, and American consumers of tin plates have been taxed $21,000,000 to create an industry which up to date has supplied us with less than twenty-two hours' consumption of American plates made of 90 per cent. imported material and by imported mechanics.

Tropical Fruits in the United States.

There are now more than 500,000 almond trees actually bearing in the United States; there are hundreds of thousands of bearing cocoanut trees; there are more than 250,000 olive trees, producing fruit equal to the best Mediterranean varieties; there are now more than 500,000 bearing banana plants, 200,000 bearing lemon trees, 4,000,000 orange trees and 21,000,000 pineapples, and the value of tropical and semitropical fruits grown under the American flag is nearly $20,000,000.—Yankee Blade.

LOCAL PARAGRAPHS.

An enthusiastic Democratic meeting was held at Dungeness last Monday night.

There will be a Democratic meeting held at Eden Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock and at Wenomah Friday evening at 7:30. On Saturday evening a meeting will also be held at Carver, in Crockett's school house. It is earnestly desired that there be a large attendance at these meetings, as addresses will be made on county issues of vital interest to every taxpayer in the county.

The mail service is materially improved with the through mail received every afternoon (Monday expected) on the Monticello.

An outing party consisting of Dr. and Mrs. F. S. Lewis, Miss Minnie Lewis, Miss Mamie Guptill and Mr. W. Brumfield left Wednesday morning for a week at the lakes.

There will be a meeting of the general public on Saturday, September 10th, to discuss the advisability and the advantage accruing from the annexation of the reservation to the city. There should be a full, representative attendance.

In an annoucement of a social dance at Blyn, the name of Mr. A. Steel appeared as among those present. This was a mistake.

Messrs. E. Metcalfe & Co. have received a drove of forty-five head of cattle from the Quillayute. The cattle are from the large stock farm of Mr. D. Pullen. They are without doubt the finest band of cattle ever raised in Clallam, and speak volumes for the Quillayute as a stock raising region.

We have heard many compliments during the week for the service of song and praise in the Congregational church Sunday evening. It was different from anything ever before heard here. The church was crowded, and all seemingly regarded the entire service as one very interesting and beneficial. The plan is to give one of these services every month.

"Turning the Water into the Wine of Life" will be the subject of the sermon at the Congregational church Sunday morning. There will be something special in this sermon for mothers. In the evening the subject will be "What the World Would be if Christ had not come." Evening services will begin at 7:30.

The Salvation Army held a grand rally at the Congregational church Wednesday evening. The local forces were recruited with foreign talent which added not a little to the interest of the meeting.

The colony mill, which has been closed down for several months past, will be started up again next week.

Mr. E. C. Burlingame, the contractor, wants fifty men to work on the road in the western end of the county. He offers $2.25 to $2.50 per day.

Port Townsend citizens rank supreme as rainbow chasers, will-o'-the-wisp enthusiasts. Life to them would be a burden were they not in a perpetual whirl of excitement over some visionary scheme or absurd undertaking. Their hopes are no sooner dashed to pieces because of some purely imaginary source of wealth does not materalize than another ignis-fatuus reflects its deceptive rays to lead them still farther into the wilderness of despair. The latest hallucination under which they are laboring is that Quimper peninsula and Port Townsend bay is underlayed with an inexhaustible deposit of coal. So completely carried away are they with this hobby that they are holding public meeting and actually devising ways and means for the mining of this imaginary deposit of black diamonds. Their condition is, indeed, pitiable.

The Michigan called in Tuesday evening outward bound for San Francisco, with a cargo of line.

Ship John Erickson was in harbor Thursday and cleared for Nanaimo.

Ship Glory of the Seas was in our harbor this week.

George Edward Potter was married at Sequim last week to Miss Duncan of that place. The contracting parties are both well known in the East end of the county. Mr. Potter having lived there for several years. The happy couple will make their residence at Sequim. They have the good wishes of all their numerous acquaintances.

There will not be preaching at the Baptist church Sunday. The festival will also be postponed until a week from Sunday evening.

PERSONAL.

Mr. W. L. Church, of Dungeness, was in town Tuesday.

Mr. John Govan, of Dungeness, was in town Tuesday.

Mr. B. F. Dean, postmaster at Blyn, was a visitor in Port Angeles last Tuesday.

Mr. E. C. Burlingame was in the city several days this week. He reports steady progress with the construction of the new county road at the western end of the county.

Judge Lane, Sheriff Gould and other Democratic candidates returned from a successful canvass of the eastern end of the county, Thursday.

Messrs. Lewis Levy and E. H. Fitz Henry left Wednesday for a prospecting tour of the mountyins, and an examination of the Hurricane mines. They will be gone a week or ten days.

A. A. Richardson, Democratic candidate for county clerk, was a passenger from Port Townsend on the Garland last Monday, en route to his home a Beaver.

R. C. Wilson returned from a business trip to Dungeness Monday.

Frank W. Hastings and David Littlefield, of Port Townsend, returned from a trip to the lakes and the western end of the county last Saturday.

William Barker, of Gettysburgh, was a passenger on the Garland returning from a visit to Port Townsend the first of this week.

H. B. Crockett attended the Democratic meeting at Dungeness Monday evening.

W. C. Williams, a prominent and successful contractor and a large property owner in Clallam county, was in Port Angeles Wednesday. Mr. Williams is also one of the leading moves in the local railway enterprise. He expresses himself as confident that work will be resumed on the Port Townsend Southern before the beginning of the new year.

Lieut. Doyle, of the revenue cutter Wolcotr, was in this city Wednesday. Mr. Doyle is a large property owner in Port Angeles and has abiding faith in its future. He bitterly condemns, however, the excessive county taxes. He rightly holds the opinion that no town will prosper under such an enormous load of taxation.

Mr. Geo. W. Meagher returned Monday from a visit with friends in Seattle and Junction City.

Mr. J. C. Murphy returned Wednesday from a business trip to Seattle. Mr. Murphy, it is understood, will canvass Eastern Washington in the interests of the Republican party.

THE SCHWARTZ PARTY.

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Schwartz Entertain their Friends.

Last Satuaday evening a number of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Schwartz responded to an invitation to spend an evening in social intercourse and with games. The occasion was the christening of their four months old daughter. The ceremony was the beautiful one of the Congregational church, Rev. A. H. Howells. officiating. The child was christened Cecilia Lillian Schwartz. The evening was delightfully spent with animated conversation, brilrepartee, music and card playing. Luncheon was served at the usual hour. With others the following were present: Judge G. McClinton, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Gay, Mr. and Mrs. W, R. Hoole, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Williams, Dr. F. S. Mrs. and Miss Lewis, Mrs. Hazlewood, Mayor and Mrs. N. R. Smith, Mrs. Harding, Dr. Chas. Gove, L. R. Cole, Dr. George, Rev. A. H. Howells, Horace White, A. A. Smith, C. P. Brown, J. S. Coolican, Jas. Stewart, Geo. C. Hatch, Geo. W. Meagher, J. W. Troy, W. W. Dedman, B. C. Keller.

UNDER CANVAS AND SAIL.

The Captain of the Mylomene Royally Entertains a Crowd of Young Folks.

Tuesday evening was the event of a most enjoyable social affair aboard the staunch ship Mylomene that has for some time past been at anchor in the harbor. Agreeable to a kind invitation from Captain Wilkin a party of young folks were conveyed to the vessel from Morse's wharf in the ship's boat, where they were received with a most cordial welcome from the captain and his officers.

In anticipation of the event the ship had been tastily decorated, the main deck canvased and canopied, and every thing that would add to the pleasure, the comfort of the guests had been thoughtfully provided.

The evening was delightfully whiled away with cards and dancing.

At 11:30 a delicious luncheon was served.

With others the following were present: The Misses. Morris, McAndrews, Zoe Shield, Maggie Fend, Dora Fend, Emma Fenn. Miss Sparks, Jennie Crockett, and Miss Tory Dunning, Messrs. L. R. Cole, Sam Hall, Morris Fisher, Ed Bell, Chas. Bell, Warren Dodge, B. F. Van Lehn and Benton Embree.

Items from Blyn.

John Morgan returned from Seattle on Sunday.

Miss Grace Ware spent Saturday and Sunday with the Burrows. She completes a very successful term of school on Burnt Hill next Friday.

A school election was held at the school house on Saturday. Mr. B. F. Dean was nominated as director and his son Orville as clerk. Peter Ipson was also nominated as director with Mrs. S. Fernie as clerk. Mr. Impson and Mrs. Fernie were elected.

The Quaker Poet Dead.

HAMPTON FALLS, N. H., Sept. 7.—John G. Whittier, the "Quaker poet," died at 4:30 this morning, in the eighty-fifth year of his age.

Whittier passed away peacefully. His nearest relatives and Dr. Douglas were at his bedside when death came, and he seemed to be conscious of his surroundings to the last moment.

John Greenleaf Whittier was born in Haverhill, Mass., December 17, 1807. His parents were Quakers, and to the the practices of this sect he always remained faithful, conforming even to its peculiarities of speech and garb. Born on a farm, Whittier's first occupations were those of a farmer's boy. He was thus early brought into that intimate communion with nature which gives such a peculiar charm of picturesque truth to so many of his poems.

In 1836 he became secretary of the American Anti-Slavery society, and afterwards removed to Philadelphia, where for a year (1838-9) he edited the Pennsylvania Freeman with such sincerity that its printing office was sacked and burned by a mob.

ON WITH THE DANCES.

Democratic Clubs Organized and the Truth Disseminated.

The Democratic County Central committee has commenced work with a will.

Under its auspices clubs have been organized in nearly all the East End precincts during the last week.

Last Saturday an enthusiastic meeting at Lost Mountain was addressed by Judge Lane, F. O. Lamoreux and R. A. Grimes. A good audiance was present, which was appreciative.

Monday night a club was organized in Dungeness, the seating capacity of the new Colony hall at that place was all occupied. Ringing speeches were made by P. M. Troy, Chas. E. Mallette, Judge L. M. Lane, Thomas Malony and R. A. Grimes. The Democratic club organized by choosing Wm. Ward, president; Geo Alexander, vice-president; M. J. Clump, secretary and T. S Clark, assistant secretary.

These same speakers addressed a good audience at Sequim Tuesday night, and at one Rena Wednesday night. At Rena a club was organized with Major W. F. Hooker, as president and W. M. Redwine. secretary.

At all these meetings, county affairs were handled without gloves. The facts as they exist were shown up by earnest speakers, taking the the Democratic county platform for a text.

Today meetings will be held at Eden and at Edgewood (Wenomah). At the former place at 3 p. m. and at the latter at 7:30 p. m. Judge Lane, P. M. Troy, F. O. Lamoreux, Chas. E. Mallette, R. A. Grimes and others will speak.

Saturday night a club will be organized at Carver precinct. Prominent speakers will be present, and a good time is anticipated.

The election of a school director and clerk for this district, which was held last Saturday, was quite hotly contested. The candidates for director were Messrs J. E. Beam Wm. Graham and D O'Brien and for clerk J. B. Spears and W. A. Nicholas. There were 478 votes cast. The women took considerable interest in the election, quite a number of them exercising the right of franchise with manifestly no little amount of enjoyment. The canvass of the vote cast resulted in the election of Mr. William Graham as director and Mr. W. A. Nicholas as clerk.

Third Party View.

Monday night was an event of no little consequence to the Peoples' party followers, it being the occasion of the presence of their candidate for governor, Mr. Young, and candidate for congress, Mr. Knox. The public meeting was held in the opera house and was attended by a large, mixed audience. The speakers were surrounded by prominent members of the party, on the stage, while the general appearance of the stage was greatly improved with floral decorations.

The issues of the day were discussed at great length by the speakers. They professed to believe that all ills, shortcomings of the old parties would be effectually overcome with the success of the third party, which had provided a remedy for the inequality and the injustice of the law. While they advanced some good Democratic doctrine, many of their ideas appear impracticable and somewhat crude. There most certainly is abundant room for reform. The reform, demanded, however, must come through the agency of the Democratic party.

CONCERNING DYNAMITE.

Millions of Dollars Invested in Its Manufacture in the United States.

Very few people have a correct idea of what dynamite is, of what it is made and the uses to which it is put. To the French belongs the honor of its discovery and its practical use.

Nitroglycerin is the force of all high explosives. Dynamite is the name most usually given to these explosives, though other names are sometimes used.

Dynamite is simply nitroglycerin mixed with various ingredients. Nitroglycerin is made by mixing sulphuric and nitric acid with sweet glycerin, the same that is used by the ladies to prevent chapped hands. Mixing the acids and glycerin is where the great danger lies in the making of nitroglycerin. The mixing tank, or agitator, as it is called by dynamite makers, is a large steel tank, filled inside with many coils of lead pipe, through which, while the mixing is in progress, a constant flow of ice water is maintained. This flow of ice water is used to keep the temperature of the mix below 35 degs., as above that point it would explode, and a hole in the ground would mark where the factory had been. The nitroglycerin is stored in large earthenware tanks, which are usually sunk in the ground to guard against blows or severe concussion.

The other ingredients for making dynamite are, nitrate of soda (which is found only in Chili), carbonate of magnesia and wood pulp.

Dynamite is put in paper shells usually 1¼ inches in diameter and 8 inches in length, and weighs about one-half pound to each shell or cartridge. It has largely taken the place of black powder for blasting, as it is many hundreds of times stronger, and consequently more economical. It is used chiefly in mining all kinds of ores, coal and rock, and submarine blasting and railroad building. Without its aid many railroads, especially those crossing the Rocky mountains, could not have been constructed; without it Hell Gate, in New York harbor, could not have been destroyed, and without it the miner, at prices now paid for mining ores, could not earn his bread.

Dynamite will not explode from any ordinary fall or jar. It will burn without explosion and freezes at 42 degs., 10 degs. above ordinary freezing point. The bomb is made of metal or glass and filled with pure nitroglycerin arranged so as to explode by severe contact with any hard object. These bombs are of course never made by a reputable dynamite factory.

Five or six millions of dollars are invested in the manufacture of dynamite in the United States, and its use is constantly on the increase. The fumes of nitroglycerin produce intense headache, which can be cured by taking a very small dose of it internally.—Detroit Free Press.

A Logician Out of Place.

A gentleman who stood a few moments at a corner where a large building was in process of erection overheard some remarks made by an Irish workman who evidently fancied himself a logician of no mean order.

He was a sturdy, good natured looking man, but evidently enjoyed leaning on his hod and commenting on what passed around him much better than he did active work. The cry of "mortmort" usually rang out several times before he heeded it.

"Pat," said the foreman severely, coming upon the man at one of the moments when he was "restin a bit," "why don't you attend to your work and keep that man going?"

"Shure, now," said Pat, shifting his feet and turning a broad smile upon the foreman, "if I was to kape him goin he wouldn't have sorra a thing to say at all; an if he didn't say annything, how would I know he was there? An if he wasn't there fwhat would he be wantin of morther, sorr?"

And Pat marched off with his hod, leaving the foreman not convinced, but certainly confused by this remarkable exhibition of the workings of a logical mind.—Youth's Companion.

A Lightning Calculator.

Professor Truman Henry Safford, of Williams college, is one of the most remarkable lightning calculators now living. A gentleman who had heard of his power and wished to test it said to him one day: "I have a little problem for you, Professor Safford. I was born Aug. 15, 1852, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. This is June 20, 1883, and it is just 3 o'clock. Now, can you tell me my age in seconds?" The great man frowned, bent his head, and began to walk rapidly up and down, twisting his mustache and clasping and unclasping his hands in his nervous way. After a moment or so he returned the answer, which was somewhere in the billions. The gentleman produced a paper containing the problem worked out, and said, with a superior smile, "Well, professor, I'll give you credit for great genius, but you're several thousand out." The professor stretched out his hand for the paper, and running over the calculation, said contemptuously: "Humph! You've left out the leap years."—Boston Traveller.

Speaking of the Late Queen.

James i disliked to hear encomiums lavished on his predecessor, "Le Roi Elizabeth," as the French called her, and always depreciated her when possible. On one occasion some one speaking of the late queen as a "most wise princess," James said sharply, "She had wise counselors." "And, please your majesty," said the speaker, "did ever a fool choose wise counselors?"—London Standard.

The Morality of Factory Women.

With reference to moral conditions, I am inclined to think that the popular impression is that, so far as wage workers are concerned, the morals of women are not up to the standard under the old hand system of labor, in which she took little or no part, and that her entrance into the industrial field has lowered her moral standard. I believe this view to be absolutely false, and that the working women of this or any other civilized country are upon as high a plane of purity as any class in the community.

I make this statement upon positive investigations which I have carried as far as it has been possible, but not so far as I hope to carry them, and in whatever direction I have turned my studies of the moral character of women engaged in industry, the result has been the same, whether in this country, in Great Britain or upon the continent of Europe.—Carroll D. Wright in Forum.

When Animals Are Ill.

Said a prominent veterinarian: "Animals when sick are the most helpless and appreciative of all creatures, and the way of administering relief and medicine in many instances is as novel as it is effective. The most savage and revengeful animals during spells of severe pain are as docile and tractable as a child. Relief must come from a human being and come quickly, and they seem to know it. The most vicious horse when groaning with pain would allow a mere child to administer relief, and many of the wild animals when in sickness seem to forget their savage instincts."—Philadelphia Press.

AN ESOTERIC CLIMAX.

WHILE SPIKETOWN COUNTED SIXTY HOKO PREPARED IT.

A Professor of the Art of Legerdemain Enlightens a Whole Town, at Fifty Cents a Head, [illegible] Difficult and Exasperating [illegible] Cooking.

Nobody had ever heard of the celebrated Hoko Effendi, but the public curiosity to see him was no less keen on that account. In the little western Illinois town on which he had alighted like a flaming meteor the visit of a professor of magic was an event. All that was known of him was that he had made his appearance about the time the stagecoach from Shacksville came in, and was supposed to have traveled in that conveyance; that he had procured the printing of several hundred small bills at the office of The Blizzard, promising to pay for them the next day.

The evening came. The price of admission to the entertainment was fifty cents for adults, children half price. The celebrated Hoko Effendi was his own doorkeeper, and the people of Spiketown turned out in large numbers. There were no deadheads except the editor of The Blizzard and the dignified citizen who wore dyed whiskers and a plug hat and announced himself at the door as the mayor.

When the audience began to show impatience by the customary stamping and whistling the world renowned master of Egyptian magic accepted the proffered services of a leading citizen as doorkeeper, and went back to the other end of the hall, disappearing behind the curtain that hid the stage from view.

In a few moments he reappeared in front of it and made a pleasing little speech, requesting close attention to the performances, as many of them were of a nature bordering on the supernatural, and promising an entertainment such as had never been seen in Spiketown before and never would again.

After performing some curious tricks with playing cards he announced that the first really difficult feat of the evening would now be shown—that of baking a cake without a pan of any kind.

"The ladies in the audience," he said, "when they bake cakes are compelled to use butter, eggs, flour, sugar, flavoring extract, icing, etc., and put the dough in a hot oven. I do nothing of the kind. By the simple manipulation of flour, sirup and a hat I can produce a cake in five minutes that no lady in this house can equal. I will make a cake that a committee, to be selected from the ladies present, will pronounce the best they ever tasted. I will do this or forfeit $100. Will some kind gentleman present oblige me with the loan of a high silk hat? Will you kindly lend it to me? I will take excellent care of it and return it in a few minutes."

The mayor demurred.

"Your hat will not be injured in the least, sir," the magician assured him. "I will return it to you without spot, blemish or stain. I have performed this feat thousands of times without the slightest injury to the hat."

The mayor of Spiketown, thus appealed to, relented and handed over his cherished tile.

Then the magician produced a pan of flour, which was passed through the audience and unanimously declared to be genuine. He poured it into the hat. Then a quart measure half filled with New Orleans molasses was produced and handed around in like manner, pronounced the pure, unadulterated stuff, and returned to him. He poured this into the hat likewise and stirred the mixture with a long lead pencil. The mayor involuntarily gasped and half rose in his seat, but the wizard again assured him, with a wave of the hand, "Your hat will not be injured in the least, my dear sir," and he proceeded with the performance.

"Now, ladies and gentlemen," he said, we will witness the finale, the denoomong, as it were, of this unparalleled feat of illusion. I can bake the cake just as well on a piece of ice as on a stove; but as there happens to be a good fire in this stove near the stage I will bake it on top of that. Again, I assure you, Mr. Mayor, that your hat will not suffer the slightest injury."

Stepping briskly down, he placed the hat on the stove.

"Now, good people," he said, "keep your eye on that hat till you can count sixty. I will retire and prepare the esoteric climax."

He mounted the stage and stepped behind the curtain.

In a moment a smoke went up from the hat on the stove, and the odor of something scorching filled the air.

The mayor of Spiketown jumped from his seat, and with one bound cleared the distance that lay between him and the stove.

He lifted his precious hat.

The bottom, or rather the top, fell out. The sizzing batter spread out over the stove. It hissed and sputtered and flew. And even as the mayor held up the hideous ruin of his once glorious hat and looked through it some of the yellowish mixture trickled on his vest and ran in sad, discouraged, bilious looking streams down his trousers.

His honor spoke a few words briefly, but emphatically—through his hat—and broke for the stage, followed by several of the leading citizens of Spiketown.

Behind the curtain were several empty barrels and boxes.

And the back window was up.

RIVER INHABITANTS.

A FLOATING VILLAGE WHERE PEOPLE PASS THEIR LIVES.

A Wandering Settlement of Strange Folks Who Make Their Homes on One of the Tributaries of the Mississippi—They Pay No Rent and Spend Little.

Up where Wolf river, treacherous and insatiate as the animal for which it is named, empties its yellow waters into the great flood of the Mississippi, is a cluster of odd looking craft, half house, half boat, that lie moored to the bank and form a part of a great floating suburb of Memphis, of whose existence the average citizen is totally unaware. Nevertheless, strange as it may seem, the inhabitants of this floating village are born, live, marry and die in their movable homes in much the same manner as people in similar walks of life whose houses have a firmer foundation, and, stranger still, they like their river life and would be extremely loath to give it up.

Who they are and where they came from, whither they go and how they live, were questions that aroused the curiosity of the writer and induced him to make a tour of inquiry among the houseboats, as they are called.

These are of all shapes and sizes, from the more pretentious home of the well to do shipbuilder to the humble abode of the itinerant fisherman. Some of them are named and some are not. Many are neatly painted and show glimpses of interiors in which lace curtains, carpets and pictures combine to make not inharmonious settings. Social lines are not very tightly drawn in the village of the houseboats, and the homes of whites and blacks lie mixed indiscriminately, without regard to race, color or previous condition of servitude.

Wanderers by nature, the term water gypsies may be applied not inaptly to the inhabitants of the village. It is not to be wondered at therefore that the colony is by no means composed of those who are to the manner born. On the contrary, it is made up of representatives from nearly all of the twenty odd states that are drained by the Mississippi or its tributaries. Were a census of the floating village taken tomorrow it would show some interesting statistics concerning the birthplaces of its inhabitants. Here one can find a man who has drifted down from the Black Hills of Montana side by side with a native of Pittsburg or Cincinnati, while their next neighbor may be from St. Paul or Knoxville.

From far up the Missouri, the Mississippi, the Ohio and the Tennessee rivers they come, resting here like birds of passage for a time, till, moving ever southward with the current, they become merged with the cosmopolitan population of the Crescent City, hundreds of miles below, even as the waters of the Mississippi become lost in the great Gulf of Mexico.

There is but little doubt that the dweller in the Mississippi houseboat has successfully solved the problem of living on next to nothing. Believing that the river is free, and that it owes him a living, the waif of the father of waters does not find it very difficult to collect the debt. Just what the ice fields are to the Eskimo, the desert to the Arab, the plains to the Indian, the river is to him. It is at once his place of abode and his means of support. Landlords, or, more properly speaking, waterlords, are unknown to him, and rent day, that nightmare of the poor, is fraught with no terrors to his mind, because he pays no rent.

The law provides that any one mooring a boat to the bank of a river is subject to a rental at the option of the owner, but in the case of the houseboat dweller this is rarely enforced. For fuel he catches the driftwood brought down by the river or gathers that which accumulates along the bank. His principal article of food is fish, for which he turns once more to the river, and from its yellow bosom draws the juicy catfish, the buffalo, the perch and innumerable other varieties that abound therein.

Only his clothes and a few other bare necessaries of life are not supplied by the river, and the means to obtain these is readily secured by the thousand pursuits open to the sturdy longshoreman. Scattered among the houseboat colony are here and there a family who have virtually taken to the river out of necessity. These are refugees from the flooded districts of the upper Missisippi, who have been rendered homeless by freshets.

Ruined by the encroachment of the river, they have collected such of their effects as the waters left and embarked on a hastily constructed craft, built as likely as not from the debris of their former homes.—Memphis Appeal-Avalanche.

A COSMOPOLITAN SCHOOL.

A Queer Mixture of Children in One of New York's Big School Buildings.

Until about a year ago the principal of ward school No. 23, New York, did not realize what a queer lot of pupils he had, although he had sometimes laughed over the strange collection of names upon the rolls. A year ago he took a census and carefully traced out the exact part of the earth from which the parents of each of his pupils had come. He found that there were in his school no less than twenty-seven different nationalities, speaking about twenty-five languages other than English and its dialects. He found that of these sixteen were in the primary department alone.

So not long afterward he arranged a novel feature to one of the school entertainments. At a certain place in the programme each child arose, holding [illegible] was [illegible]g of [illegible] had [illegible]vere [illegible]f a [illegible]ners [illegible]man, [illegible]like. Then they saw nearly a dozen others, recognizable from their shapes and colors and designs as the banners of barbaric or semibarbaric countries, known to us in a vague way as heathen.

When these children, none being under five years of age, first come to this school they are foreigners to the very core. They speak the language of their fathers, and perhaps have never even heard the sound of an English word. They are of the country from which their parents came both in customs and ideas. Their clothing alone bears the stamp of America, and that so out of accord with their faces and expressions that they seem ill at ease, and even more poorly clad than they really are. They enter the primary department. And here it may be said that, although the youngest are five years old, the ages of many extend upward toward eighteen and twenty years.

It is the business of Miss Rose O'Neill and her seven assistants to teach these children the English language, and then to make American children out of them. Go into the school at the beginning of the school year, and you will think the task hopeless, impossible. Come back at the end of six months, and if you close your eyes and listen to the reading exercises you will not be able to distinguish Chinese child or Arab child or Tunisian child from the few pure blooded Americans who form the curiosities of the school. Then you will wonder how the miracle has been performed.—Harper's Weekly.

Educate Children to High Ideals.

We are too ready to impart instruction to children from low moods and on a low plane, because we do not ourselves habitually dwell in the latitude of the uplands. Motives of policy, of vanity, of seeming instead of being right, enter into our own lives and, alas! poison the lives of the little ones at the fountain. A grand life, a brave example, a splendid instance of fortitude, of self abnegation, of courage against odds is never in vain. It is an object lesson that flames out from the sky, as the planet amid the host of lesser stars. Whether it be an arctic or an African explorer, the leader of a forlorn hope, the missionary living among the island lepers, or the army nurse, leaving home and luxury to minister to the wounded and soothe the dying, the noble ideal is uplifted before the eyes of those who are yet in the initial stages, and whose characters are not yet in the mold of destiny.

This thought of the lofty ideal gives the chief value of our annual Decoration Day, giving us pause amid the pomp and ease of peace, that we may think not of the pageantry of war, but of its sufferings, its fever and thirst, its rigors of cold and furnace heats, its weary marches, fierce battles and the patriotism which alone condones its bitter woe and the mourning that follows in its track.—Harper's Bazar.

Powerful Indian Air Guns.

The Indians along the Mirida river hunt with blow guns made out of the young stalks of a certain kind of palm, from which the pith is removed. The arrows employed as projectiles are simply splinters of reed, sharpened at one end, the other end being wrapped with enough silk cotton obtained from another kind of palm to fill up the bore of the blow gun. The arrows are about ten inches long and very light. They are tipped with the famous and deadly "woorari" poison.

Used by one of these naked savages the blow gun is a weapon of great accuracy and effectiveness, even a small bird on a treetop being brought down by the skilled shooter with reasonable certainty at the first try.—Interview in Washington Star.

Bride and Groom Weigh 1,311 Pounds.

A curious sight at Union station was that of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Farlow as they alighted from No. 4. They are the largest couple in the world, and, having been married in Chicago, were en route to New York on a honeymoon trip. As Mrs. Farlow weighs 685¾ pounds and as her husband tips the beam at 625½, it is necessary for them to ride in a fruit car. No passenger cars in use have a door wide enough for either.—Pittsburg Leader.
