CRAIG FISH PRODUCTS CO.

Contract Let for Wharf and Work Will Be Rushed In All Lines.

With little talk and no asking for gifts the Craig Fish Products Co. is rapidly going ahead and will begin actual costruction work within two or three weeks. Bids were asked for the construction of a wharf and Wednesday the contract was let to the Gate City Contracting Co.

The wharf will be built on the company's property on the Sampson claim, about midway between the cannery and the lagoon. It will be used at once for landing machinery and the plant outfit, and later for landing fish. Work on this wharf will be started as soon as piles can be procured and it will be finished in six weeks.

The buildings to be put up will be started early in February. The Filion mill will furnish the necessary lumber. They will be two story affairs and very stoutly constructed to hold the heavy machinery, the largest piece of which will weigh fifteen tons.

The factory will produce fish oil and fish scrap, from which the oil has been extracted. This dried scrap will be sold to fertilizer manufacturers in California and the Hawaiian Islands. The fish will be procured mainly from Neah Bay and will be brought to the factory in barges towed by the company's own steamers. Any kind of fish will be used, although the company will rely for its supply mostly on dog fish, of which there are great numbers in the straits and which produce a large percentage of oil. During the canning season the factory should be able to get plenty of dog salmon and other fish from the traps and canneries. There certainly can be no shortage of fish when any and all kinds are acceptable, and there is no reason why this should not grow to be as big and profitable an industry here as on the eastern coast, where the poggy steamers and works are a familiar sight.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY MEETING

Annual Meeting to Be Held Saturday, 28th.

The Horticultural Society will hold its annual meeting at the opera house on Saturday, the 28th. The meeting is called for 1:30 p. m. and it is hoped that all will be prompt in attendance, in order that those having to drive home may be present during the entire session.

The election of officers will be the principal item of business, but this will doubtless be quickly disposed of, as the present officers will likely be re-elected. They are: President, Geo. Venable Smith; Secretary, John Church, and Treasurer, H. C. Miller—all energetic men, who have great love for the work in hand.

There will be no speakers from abroad, but several of the members will give short addresses. The main feature of these meetings is found in the opportunity given the members to exchange information and experiences as to the proper kinds of fruit to plant; the care required by different varieties; treatment for various pests; value of new varieties and where they may be obtained, etc. For instance, while raspberries are almost a drug on the market, there are no blackberries raised here; yet there are varieties that ripen in this climate. And again, the ever-bearing blackberry has been so improved as to eliminate the tough center and reduce the size of seeds.

Everyone interested in fruits and flowers are invited to be present and help along the good work.

FOSTER IN THE LEAD

But No Man Can Predict the Result with Certainty.

The senatorial election has been the principal topic from the legislature this week, but from the ballots already taken and the information obtainable it would take a more than shrewd guesser to predict the result. The first ballot gave Senator Foster 43 votes, Piles 32, Sweeny 27, Wilson 15, and others trailing. On the second ballot Foster and Piles gained each a vote; on the third Wilson gained one, and the situation remains the same at this time.

It was a matter of some surprise to the citizens of this county to find Representative Dyke lined up for Wilson, inasmuch as there is a very considerable Foster sentiment in this county. Jefferson county representatives and our joint senator. Clapp, are all lined up in the Foster ranks.

Many worse things than the re-election of Senator Foster could happen to the State of Washington. While his career in the senate may not have been particularly brilliant, it has been eminently respectable and in these days of political jobbery, land frauds, post office frauds, etc., it is delightfully refreshing to have our state represented by a man of whom it can be said that he is eminently respectable.

JEFFERSON'S REPRESENTATIVES ARE BUSY

Introduce Bills of Interest to the People of Both Counties.

Representative Bartlett's bill provides for a bounty for scalps of panthers, bears and wolves, in amount not to exceed $10 and not less than $2.50 per scalp. This bill is in satisfaction of a public need in western Jefferson county where wild animals are a menace to live stock. As the raising of beef cattle is the main industry in the west end at this time, and the introduction of dairy cattle is becoming more frequent, the bill should pass.

Representative Bishop's bill provides for the repeal of the act relating to the annexation of contiguous territory by neighboring counties. It is intended to repeal the old Peasly act which enables people of one section of a county to vote themselves in to another county without carrying a share of the county indebtedness.

In drawing up this bill, Representative Bishop has in mind the attempt which has been talked of several times of the west end people to bid adieu to Jefferson and join Chehalis. The people here have no particular objection to the move but feel that the west end should share the indebtedness burden.—Townsend Call.

Eastern oysters served by Civic Club at opera house on the evening of February 14th.

STONE CO.'S FRANCHISE

Occupies Attention of Council Until a Late Hour and Is Finally Passed.

City Council met Wednesday evening with all members present. Mayor Appleton being called away about 8:30, Councilman Brumfield took the chair. The session lasted until about 12 o'clock, most of the time being devoted to the discussion of the Stone Company's franchise.

The Clerk's annual statement of the financial condition of the city was read and with the treasurer's quarterly report was referred to the finance committee.

The City Clerk reported that he had information that the land about Cook's Prairie, granted to the city by the government last March, is still offered for sale at the Seattle land office. He was directed to correspond with Washington and obtain proofs of the grant which could be submitted at the land office and so prevent their making any sales of this land.

J. A. Martin asked permission to cut up and take away two trees which he had felled on this land. Permission was not granted, it being deemed a bad precedent.

The Craig Fish Products Co. was given permission to build a wharf across Railroad avenue in front of Tract D, Sampson claim.

On the motion of Hallahan, the time of the council meeting was changed so that hereafter the eight o'clock meetings will begin in April instead of in May. The change to Tuesday night will take effect after the next meeting.

City Attorney Smith was granted an allowance of $5.00 monthly for office rent.

The ordinance granting a railroad franchise to the Stone Company was referred to committee of the whole, to meet after regular session. Mr. Barnett explained at this meeting that they wanted this franchise so that in the event of having no means of getting stone to the water, the Stone Company could proceed at once to construct a road of their own, as they have several large contracts to fill this coming summer. The ordinance was passed.

The franchise is for use of Tumwater street up the hill to 5th; west on 5th to A; thence south to limits. A 25-foot roadway is to be opened from 2nd to 4th. Construction to commence by October 1st and be finished within one year thereafter.

Fancy Dress Ball Feb. 14th

The "Fancy Dress Ball" to be given by the Civic Club on the evening of St. Valentine's Day bids fair to be the event of the season. Candy booths and a Valentine Post Office will be presided over by the most popular young ladies of the city. An oyster supper will be served during the evening on the stage, by the ladies of the club. A prize will be awarded the person wearing the best "Flower" costume. Music by the best home talent.

Help improve the city by attending the Shadow Social next Friday evening. The Civic Club are promising an evening brimming over with laughter.

Remember the fancy dress ball on Valentine's Day.

The Shadow Social

The Civic Club's Shadow Social is to be given Friday night of next week. Each lady is asked to bring lunch for two, or rather lunch for a lady and gentleman. The shadows of all ladies thus equipped will be thrown on a screen and the gentlemen present will bid on the shadows. The highest bidder in each case will secure "his shadow" as a partner for luncheon. Admission is free, but fast and high bidding may be expected on the shadows.

The cry of "fire" aroused the occupants of the Goldwater Block shortly after ten o'clock on Thursday night. Mr. Goldwater was reading in his room when a defective electric light wire directly overhead started sparking and blazing. He at once gave the alarm and everybody started in to find the best place to cut the wire. It was at last cut outside the building and even there the wire was so hot the nippers had to be wrapped. Had the blaze started in some place where it would not have been noticed, as between partitions, a serious fire would probably have been the result.

POINTS FOR WHIST PLAYERS

The Game of Whist Compared to That of Chess.

It is herein assumed that the reader knows enough about the game of whist to, at least, play what I, in my former article on Bumblepuppy, termed Old Maid Whist. In some respects whist is similar to chess. In whist it is cards that are sacrificed to enable other cards to take tricks, while in chess it is pieces that are given up to to promote the power of other pieces. In both games there is an election to "take" or not to "take." And in both there is a continual struggle for position. In chess, however, the enemy is in plain sight, while in whist the position of the enemy must be thought out—i.e. inferred. And this, at times, is no easy task, the enemy, as in actual warfare, often lying in ambush. Hence, while in chess the principal mental process is that of deduction, in whist it is induction. Wherefore whist offers a larger field for display of the mental powers of memory and generalization (generalship) than does chess. It was for this reason that Deschapelles, the great French whist player, abandoned the game of chess, of which he was a master, for that of whist.

The ultimate object of all whist play is to win tricks, tho to do so it is sometimes necessary to lose them. The forces employed to do this are of two kinds—cards and suits. Cards are used against cards and suits against suits. When the ace takes the king of the same suit, it does so because it is a stronger card than the king. On the other hand, when a trump takes a plain suit card, it does so, not because of its rank as a card, but because it is a part of a stronger suit than that to which the card it takes belongs. Or, again, when the deuce of one plain suit takes the ace of another plain suit, it does so, not because the deuce is a higher card than the ace, for it is not, but because it is of a stronger suit.

In each suit there are thirteen cards, any one of which, except the deuce, might be used to take a trick within the suit to which it belongs. Besides this direct trick-taking power of cards, there is not a card from ace to deuce that might not be used to help other cards of the same or other suits, the suit to which it belongs or other suits to win tricks.

Cards are classed with reference to their rank. Those above the eight are "high," while those below the eight are "low." This classification is important in governing the play of the hand, for it is with the six high cards that tricks are to be taken with CARDS, while it is with the six low cards that tricks are to be taken with SUITS. This classification is not arbitrary, for the lowest high card, the nine, is far more likely to take a trick as being the higher card played thereto than as a "long" card at the end of a suit, while the highest low card, the seven, is much more likely to take a trick as a "long" card than as a high card. When the nine takes a trick at a low (long) card or the seven as a high card it is generally by accident or poor play and not by design.

Of the thirteen cards of a plain suit, the eight is the least promising as a trick winner. It is too small to be the head of a trick and too large to be the tail of a long suit. It is the Janus-faced card of the suit.

OUR STATES OPPORTUNITY

Should Make a Great Showing at Portland Fair

People in Portland who are familiar with the results obtained from advertising at expositions are very decided in their opinions in regard to the Lewis and Clark Centennial. They say that the centennial will advertise the Pacific Northwest as no other agency could and that especially is this true of Oregon and Washington. The low rates offered by the railroads, $45 for round trip from Missouri river points, and one fare from points further east, assure a large attendance of visitors from these regions. The rates provide for side trips, and it seems safe to assume that the majority of the visitors will look around a bit before returning to their homes, if they do return. Letters received by people in Portland from friends in the east indicate that many people, dissatisfied with the cramped conditions at home, will take Horace Greeley's famous advice and visit the west this year with a view to settling. Oregon, with her pavilion and her many separate county displays, will naturally attract the majority of these settlers, if Washington does not make an extensive showing.

People in the east have for the most part very vague and uncertain ideas about the great Pacific Northwest. Probably not one out of a thousand knows that Washington, with its immense territory, has a population of 800,000. They do not know that Washington has all the natural resources of Pennsylvania, and harbors as good, if not better, than those of New York, with a population one-eighth as great as Pennsylvania and one-ninth as great as New York. It is to acquaint the eastern and middle west with such salient facts as these that the exposition was conceived, and Washington will make a great mistake if she does not do all in her power to tell the visitors of her greatness.—Call.

Halibut Brings Big Prices

The "halibut industry" has increased enormously during the past year, the figures for three months, ending with November, showing nearly one and a quarter million pounds, worth $47,000, as against a quarter million, worth $6,000, for the same months of 1893. Much of the fish was shipped east, fresh halibut selling for 25c per pound in the Atlantic coast cities. On the Atlantic coast, even to Greenland, halibut fishing has long been a leading industry, but there the catch depends largely upon weather conditions, while on this coast the bulk of the fish are caught along the Alaskan coast, where the islands afford protection and the water is calm.

PEARLS TO STRING

Bits of Philosophy Written by Those Who Know Mankind.

Worry, hate and unkindness are all forms of fear. — Hubbard.

What do we live for if it is not to make life less difficult for each other?—Eliot.

I'll chide no breather in the world but myself, against whom I know most faults. — As You Like It.

The heart that goes out of itself gets large and full of joy. This is the great secret of the inner life.—Mann.

His heart (Lincoln's) was as great as the world, but there was no room in it to hold the memory of a wrong.—Emerson.

I have always this sort of feeling when I look at the sunset; that there in the West lies a land of light and warmth and love.—George Eliot.

If every man could regulate the affairs of others to please himself there would be enough anarchy in the world to upset the civilization of the centuries.

The Fruit Industry Leads

The orchards and vineyards of Washington, tho but in their infancy, yielded twenty millions in the year just closed, making the fruit industry the leading one of the state, according to a statement made by the State Horticultural Ass'n. Over four million trees will be planted this year. There is room in this state for many thousands more of good horticulturists, for not only is the market capable of absorbing the product, but the small fruit farm develops the highest type of manhood. Fruit farming requires a great deal of study and labor; those of shiftless and intemperate habits are certain to fail, as neglect will soon reduce the returns to less than expenses. Ten acres in varied fruits makes a good farm, with constant income and a home ever increasing in value. The work is done by those in the community and thus the money is kept to assist in building up the country.

Creamery Products of '04

The total number of pounds of butter turned out by the creameries of the state in 1904 was 7,566,769, compared to 6,970,172 pounds in 1903, says the Townsend Call. Two million pounds were produced east of the Cascades and five and a half millions west of the mountains. The statistics show that 4,491,050 pounds of eastern butter, 711,- pounds of California and Oregon butter, and 1,408,520 pounds of eastern and 614,602 pounds of California and Oregon cheese were shipped into the state, which is evidence that there is room for many more creameries in this state.

Snohomish and Olympia counties are raising funds for the preparation and printing of advertising matter to be distributed at the Lewis and Clark fair.

The Pacific Wireless station at Seattle was opened the 14th and messages flashed between that city and Townsend.

A force of experienced Japs have been put into the Layton shingle mill on Discovery Bay.

THE FUTURE IDEAL PEOPLE

Will Be the Transplanted New Englander of Washington

If the Pilgrims had landed on the northwest coast of what is now the United States, said Elbert Hubbard after his visit to Puget Sound, I doubt me much if we today would use New England for even a goat pasture.

Prof Shaler in a recent lecture said: The natural economic resources of the western coast of the United States as compared with the eastern coast are about three to one.

The states of Washington and Oregon are larger than all of New England when you have added to their square miles the area of New York and Pennsylvania.

The New England states are rich and always will be rich, but their wealth has come from their manufactories, and the capital to run the manufactories first came from commerce with foreign countries. New England could never have grown rich from wealth produced within her borders.

The world has paid tribute to the cunning of the Yankee brain, and therein lies the secret of her wealth. Her wealth is an importation, drawn into her domain thru the shrewdness of her citizens.

Yet let the fact remain, she has produced some great men. All of the great men that this earth has produced have come from a little strip across the north temperate zone. Man can be transplanted, but not very far north or south. You can transplant a tree within certain prescribed limits. You can change the nature of a tree by placing it in another soil, and all of our most beautiful flowers once grew somewhere, wild.

Go too far north and mankind is stunted, dwarfed. Go south to a point where men need no bedclothes but the clouds, and where, by lying under a banana tree, food will fall within reach, advancement ceases because there is no struggle.

In a climate where winters are cold and the summers pleasant, men will work, and thru this work they grow strong in body and in resource.

But in New England, nature slightly overdid it. The winters are very cold — the thermometer may drop to forty below zero — deep snows may come — all livestock must be housed. Fuel and food must be gathered and stored. Only one crop a year can be produced, and there is even a risk about this. It is a struggle for existence — life is a warfare and in the midst of life you are in debt.

Let us swing back to Puget Sound and take a look at the transplanted New Englander, for most of them are New Englanders, or descendants of New Englanders, who made their way by easy stages to New York, Ohio, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota — and Washington.

The western portion of Washington has a climate like the south of England. Very seldom does the mercury drop to freezing, and in summer the heat is never oppressive. The gentle humidity makes a country of perpetual green. The state flower is the rhododendron, but it might better have been the rose, for while roses do not bloom the year around, they come very near to it, and in summer they form a forest of blossoms.

There must be a happy mean of climate, just enough to make life pleasant, and it seems to be in Washington. Where mistletoe, the mosses and ferns flourish, all vegetation flourishes. The eucalyptus is everywhere and it is a great scavenger — it purifies both soil and atmosphere.

There is no miasma in Washington, no mosquitoes, no more snakes than in Ireland.

In Washington you must work to make Nature give up her treasures, but she is so lavish in her returns that men who work naturally grow lavish and generous too. What think you of four crops of alfalfa a year on the same field? or of one crop of asparagus, one of watermelons and one of turnips? In the Yakima valley, land under the ditch sells for three hundred dollars an acre and returns fifty per cent.

Apples raised in Washington are sold on the markets of New York City and Boston, and melons by the carload go to St. Paul and Minneapolis.

Thru what is called the arid belt — the eastern portion — vast herds of cattle, horses and sheep live out of doors the year round and thrive to a wonderful degree.

New England has neither coal, iron, copper, gold nor silver in her hills, but Washington has all of these, besides mines of lead, arsenic, and borax, from which quiet working men are now lifting fortunes.

As for forests, such trees exist nowhere else on the continent as on the coast. The spruce gets much of its nourishment from the air—the climate must be moist, kindly, equable, and free from violent storms, or it will not grow. Its hold upon the soil is comparatively slight, but it literally towers to the skies. Trees in Washington cut eight feet and more across the butt, and if you want a stick a hundred feet long, any saw-mill will supply it.

As for water, the towns build dams at the snow line, a few miles away, and secure gravity pressure that would be dangerous were it not strongly controlled And as for economy in its use, —why, western Washington will laugh at you.

Puget Sound is a natural harbor, land-locked for two hundred miles in length, with an entrance from the sea miles wide.

The harbors of New England are dangerous to enter, and are sometimes death-traps to the ships inside. Boston Harbor can be entered safely only in calm weather. Nantasket Beach is a vast graveyard of dead ships.

If an ideal environment will ever produce an ideal people, and an ideal people make an ideal city, I think the suburbs of that city will be on Puget Sound.

The Passing of Strikes

T. V. Powderly when he was head of the Knights of Labor was a central figure in all labor matters. For years he has been keeping close watch of the current events. He now declares that in his judgment the day of strikes is passing away. "I do not mean by that there is never to be another strike," he says, "but I do mean that each year will see fewer causes for strikes and as a natural result the strike will be a thing of the past as a means of bringing employers and workingmen to amicable relations. I know nothing as encouraging as the recent conferences between capitalists and laboring men."

For the medicine chest or side-board J. W. Harper whiskey is also eminently the family whiskey — none better. Sold by E. E. Day.

RECIPES FROM ANGELES' FAMOUS COOKS

Edited by Mrs. Webster.

MRS. CRAIG'S POT ROAST.

Four pounds round steak, three quarters of a pound fat salt pork, one large onion, pepper and salt to season very highly. Slice onion and place in the bottom of a large earthern bean pot or ten pound pail, cut pork in thin strips and lard the beef with it, lay on top of onion in pot, add the salt and pepper, and enough boiling water to come up in sight; not too much. Cover very closely and place in oven for three hours, or until beef is very tender. It will be far nicer if not opened at all while roasting.

MRS. H. E. LUTZ'S VEAL LOAF.

Four pounds veal ham, one-half pound, or less, of butter; salt and pepper well and slice one onion on the veal; put in roaster with one cup hot water and bake one and a half hours.

MRS.H.A.BABCOCK'S VEAL POT PIE

Boil the veal until tender; season with salt, pepper and butter. Thicken the gravy, first adding hot water, if necessary, that there may be a sufficient quantity. Put all in a pudding dish. Now make a biscuit dough, roll thick and cover the meat; make an opening for the steam to escape. Bake in a moderate oven. Serve in the pudding dish.

MISS MCNAMARA'S SPICED VEAL.

Chop four pounds veal; season with pepper, salt, cloves and cinnamon, or to taste. Add four small crackers rolled fine, one egg, beaten, and a lump of butter nearly the size of an egg. Mix thoroughly and press in a baking pan. Bake two and a half hours.

MRS. BRUMFIELD'S MEAT CROQUETTE'S.

One large steak run through meat chopper. Add one beaten egg, pepper, salt, and one tablespoonful of finely chopped onion. Roll into balls, dip in egg and roll them in cracker crumbs. Put them in a vegetable basket and submerge in boiling lard, and cook until brown. Serve hot with Tomato Catsup.

MRS. F. E. BROWN'S HAM CROQUETTES.

Three cups finely minced cooked ham, one cup finely minced bread crumbs. Put in frying pan, pour over one small cup hot water and add one teaspoonful of corn starch wet with small quantity of cold water, a generous piece of butter, pepper, and scant half teaspoon of mustard; if ham is not sufficiently salt, add some. Let this mixture cook a few minutes, cool, and make into balls. Then dip in egg, roll in fine bread crumbs and fry in hot fat until a nice brown. Any other cold meat may be used in place of the ham.

The Tacoma Weekly Ledger, new subscriptions only, and the Olympic at $1.00 per year.

Try a pair of Alf. A. Davis' box calf leather lined hand sewed heavy sole shoes for winter use—$3.25 a pair.
