Predators On Record For New Bounty Bill

At a capacity meeting Wednesday night, the Predatory Club went on record as favoring immediate action on the Bounty Bill now filed in the lower house of the Washington State Legislature. As over 600 bills have been filed in the house, club members are fearful this bill will never get to the floor of the house for action. The club requests every one interested in the future of game in this state to write to representatives requesting that this bill be taken off the shelf and put on the calendar.

Harvey LeGear spoke on control of predatory animals and asked that everyone write to Olympia for action on the bounty bill.

Ed Benn, food fish warden, asked club members to take a stand against diversion of food fish funds. He revealed that the money in this fund, over $600,000 came from the people of the state who buy fresh or canned fish and should be used for hatcheries and propagation of fish. He also reiterated the importance of asking representatives to pass the bounty bill.

First prize for predatory animals killed went to Willis McNabb. Cash prizes totalling $5 were given to E. O. Michaels, cougar and wild cat killer.

A crow with a band on his leg has been turned loose in this county by the club. Anyone killing this crow gets a prize of $10 from the club and five gallons of gas from Conrad's Service Station.

Game protector Fred Binkie announced that any live crows turned over to the Seattle Sportmen's Club through the game commission would be tagged with large cash prizes and turned loose on the Peninsula from an airplane. For information about catching live crows, see Frank Rhebeck.

Road Grader Bill Is Rejected By Board

After having turned down bills totalling $2,000.93 submitted by the Feenaughty Machinery Co. of Portland for a pseudo-new road grader, the board of county commissioners reconsidered Thursday and agreed to settle for $400. The Feenaughty company agreed to take away their grader and bring back the one traded in for it now in the company shop in Seattle.

The grader had been purchased by Ben Arndt, ousted county commissioner on a rental basis because there was no money provided in the budget for its outright purchase. The county was to pay $400 per month until the price of $4400 was paid. The grader, supposedly new, was an obsolete re-built model. The $400 is for one month's rental and if the county should buy a grader from the company the payment will be applied on the purchase price.

JOURNAL readers will remember that the Journal was bold enough to in the December 28, issue, mention "the purchase of a $4,000 road grader for the West End" was reported, "and that said grader had been delivered."

Unidentified Man Is Found Unconscious

Summoned to the Milwaukee depot by a call from the Paris Motor Company, city police Wednesday morning found an elderly man lying unconscious near the depot. The man, whose identity was not ascertained, was taken to the Hay and Davidson hospital. He recovered consciousness and was released shortly afterward.

Shoplifter Operates In Local Food Stores

Police arrested Robert King in Wolten's Grocery Saturday on a charge of shoplifting, and he is being held for arraignment in superior court. It was also accused of lifting articles from the Piggly Wiggly store also. He was wearing a cruiser coat, and it is alleged that he had taken groceries from the shelves and concealed them in the large pocket in the back of the coat.

King has a police record showing that he had been arrested on burglary charges in Tacoma and San Diego, and was arrested here in 1930 by the sheriff's office on a liquor charge.

RANDOM SHOTS

Everyone stops to peer through the soaped front windows of the storeroom that once housed Nattinger's Hardware. The same place is causing local druggists no end of worry. Reason—it will be a cut-rate, no prescription drug store. Seven well established pharmacies have formed a buying and advertising combine to fight the alleged manace.

TEDDIES WALLOP REDSKINS 24 to 12

Angeles High School's high flying basketball team stepped outside Western Division and walloped Port Townsend, 24-12, Saturday night at the local gym. The Redskins could not cope with the speed and ballhawking of the Teddies. The local boys would have rolled up a much larger score except that they were definitely "off" in shooting, missing many easy shots.

Sinking a foul shot and a field goal, the Redskins went into the lead 3-0 during the first few minutes of the game. A field goal by Don Loghry and a sweet one-handed push shot by Danny McLennan put the Teddies into a lead they never relinquished. The score at the end of the first quarter was 4-3, at the half 12-5, and at the end of the third quarter 17-12. Coach Stun Bray put in his subs in the last period and they throttled the Redskin attack completely while scoring seven points.

Don Loghry was a standout for the Teddies, turning in a nice defensive game and converting four out of six fouls. Ralph Gallaci, Danny McLennan, and Nick Vasilatos uncorked some one-handed push shots that were beauties. Younce, Townsend forward, was high point man with seven. McLennan, Gallaci, and Don Loghry tied for second with

Jailed For Failure To Send Boy To School

In Justice Court, Monday, Robert W. Simmonds was tried and found guilty of failing to send his fifteen year old boy to school, and was sentenced by Justice Fred Filion to serve fifteen days in jail.

Officials indicated a number of prosecutions for the same offense will follow. A list of those failing to comply with the compulsory school attendance law has been submitted to the prosecuting attorney by school authorities.

WERA Work Begins After Brief Shutdown

WERA work relief began Thursday February 21, after two weeks shutdown.

"Through the cooperation of the city and the county, the sponsors of the projects, we are starting work tomorrow morning," H. H. VanBrocklin stated Wednesday. "The sponsors are going to pay for foremen so that there will be no additional expense above relief."

Van Brocklin had previously explained that work projects were held up by lack of supervisorial money.

Although the projects scheduled are only to last until the end of the month, and will not employ all the men on relief, they expect to add new projects and keep on with them after the allotted time, Van Brocklin said.

Pell Brothers Receive Fine and Jail Sentence

Carl and Jack Pell, accused of stealing half a ton of hay, were found guilty of petty larcency by the petit jury Tuesday night after a deliberation of almost two hours. Justice Fred Filion fined them $1 each and costs amounting to $122.50 and sentenced them to serve 15 days in the county jail. As they were unable to pay the fine they will work it out in jail at the rate of $3 a day.

The case was tried before a petit jury of six members in Justice court and was argued from ten o'clock in the morning to five o'clock when the jury went out. Fifteen witnesses were called, eight by the prosecution and seven by the defense.

The testimony revealed a feud al squabble between two groups of residents at Gettysburg near the Lyre River where the theft occurred. It was also reminiscent of pioneer days and the old West when it was revealed that two of the settlers embroiled in the feud packed guns and were not loathe to use them.

Otto Weyand, complaining witness, declared: That on the evening of February 1, he and Fred Comber, a neighbor, caught Carl and Jack Pell, and Grover Norman on his premises preparing to leave with a load of hay from his barn on Pell's truck. He fired over their heads with a .45 Bulldog pistol, and they scattered. Later Carl Pell returned and set the load of hay on fire, burning the hay, the bed of the truck, the cab, seat cushions and rear tires but not harming the motor.

The Normans and the Zemeks established an alibi for the defendents by testifying that:

On the afternoon of February 6, the Pells were helping Norman carry some of his hay. At four o'clock Carl Pell had gone to Zemek's where he had stayed until 7:30 when he went to Norman's and played pinochle until late. At four o'clock Jack Pell and Grover Norman had gone to Norman's home and stayed there the rest of the evening.

The prosecution cited the burned car as undeniable evidence of their guilt.

Witnesses for the prosecution were: Otto Weyand, Fred Comer, W. E. Comer, Sr., Elmer Comer, George Reynolds and wife, John H. Butcher and son.

Defense witnesses were: Grover Norman and wife, Agnes Louie Zemek, Helen Zemek, Jimmie Norman, Gus Nystrom, and Ed Douge.

Jury members were: W. L. Longfellow, Warren Morse, Will Ware, Ray Haynes, C. E. Hammer, and Herbert Baker.

The defense attorney was Max Church of the firm of Lewis and Church. Prosecutor Johnston was assisted by Deputy John Wilson.

Stoien Car Owner Is Wanted By Offcials

A Studebaker believed to have been stolen has been setting at Third and Valley Street for several days. The car has a 1934 license numbered 266-644. Both city and county officials have been attempting to locate the owner.

Annual Fair Date Is Set For August

At a meeting held Friday night in the Chamber of Commerce office, the Fair board and representatives of local clubs made plans for the organization and management of the county fair to be held late in August. It was decided that the delegates from the clubs would form an advisory board to assist the fair manager and board. All the delegates were enthusiastic and promised the support of the organizations they represented. A committee of three was appointed to obtain a manager for the fair.

J. F. Dilling, chairman of the fair board, was in charge of the meeting. Other members of the fair board present were F. R. Beehan and Howard Hill.

Charles Lewis representing the Merchant's Bureau asked that the fair be held a week before Labor Day so that it would not conflict with the Salmon Derby on September 1, or the Labor Day celebration of the unions. In addition, he said, many people who might attend the fair would take advantage of the three day holiday and leave town. He suggested August 22, 23, 24, and 25 as the best days to hold it and asked that a secretary manager be appointed immediately. The merchants, he declared, will close at one o'clock on Friday if the management wanted to make it Port Angeles day at the fair.

"And that's quite a concession," he added.

John Kringlen, delegate of the Central Labor Council, promised Union support and asked the board not to hold it on Labor Day.

Ed Brickey, speaking for the Rotary club and the Chamber of Commerce, assured the board that both clubs would work to put the fair across.

Earl Miller, delegated from the F. O. Eagles, promised their support and declared the Eagles were back of anything that would benefit the people.

Dave Masters, city commissioner, told the board the city would provide free water and free electric power except for concessions.

Oral Freeman announced that the American Legion has gone on record as giving their whole support to the fair.

An important point brought up for discussion was the spacing of other carnivals far enough ahead that they would not interfere with the fair's business. Freeman said the Legion would attempt to schedule the West Coast Shows in June. If this was done and other civic organizations cooperated, there would be no public celebrations from the 4th of July to the day of the fair.

J. B. Wooding from the I.O. Odd Fellows, Frank Christman from the Kiwanis Club, and Bob O'Brien of the Predatory Club, promised their clubs' support.

Others present were Herb Molchoir, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, Mike Schmidtt, and J. J. Joyner.

Kreuse Disappears From 29th Engineers

Herman Kreuse, a private in A company of the 29th Engineers, stationed at Forks, disappeared Sunday evening shortly after five o'clock and has not been seen since. Kreuse left camp in full uniform at five o'clock for a walk around the "loop", a short road that connects with the Aberdeen Loop Highway. When he didn't return the whole company went out to look for him but without results.

Captain Ward, head of company A, asked Deputy Sheriff Walter Holenstein to notify the Harbor sheriff and the office in Port Angeles of his disappearance. It is thought that Kreuse may have had amnesia and picked up a ride away from the locality. He had no reason to desert as he had just been on furlough with his parents who have enough money to buy him out of the service if he wished. The young man has had an excellent record heretofore.

He is 22 years of age, weighs 185 pounds and is five feet eleven inches tall.

Townsend Old-Age Pension Bill Discussed

When State Senator Scott M. Ryan of Whatcom county opened his address on the Townsend Old Age Pension Plan at Eagles Hall last Monday evening at 8:30, 330 people were packed in the hall and standing room was at a premium. Late comers were unable to gain admission and scores were turned away. The meeting was under the auspices of the Progressive Democratic club and the speaker was introduced by President Dr. Robert Howard.

Senator Ryan held the attention of his large audience, many of whom were uncomfortable because of the crowded conditions, to the end of a two-hour speech in which he analyzed state and national conditions and praised the proposed Townsend old age pension plan as the surest way through our economic bewilderment to the goal of prosperity. He shifted the scenes rapidly from Olympia to Washington and back again, pointing out in a rapid fire manner the sharp cleavage between human rights and property rights.

He stirred his hearers when he asserted that something must be wrong "when two percent of our people have all the money and 98 pecent of the people have all the debts." He flayed the big bankers and predatory interests that prey on the public and the government, and declared that one of the finest features of the Townsend old age pension plan was that it would put billions of dollars circulating through the trade channels of the nation.

Eight Million Eligibles

According to Senator Ryan there are now 10,300,000 persons in the United States who are 60 years of age and over. Of this number he estimated that about 8,000,000 would qualify as pensioners, each receiving $200 per month would send a mighty liquid stream of purchasing power of $1,600,000,0000 per month through the nation, totally nineteen billions annually.

Another advantage of the plan pointed out by the speaker was in the large number of jobs at high wages which it would create immediately. Pensioners would be required to give up all active competitive labor and agree to spend the pension money received each month.

It would also go far toward solving the crime robplem.

The plan, as proposed, would be financed by a two percent transactional sales tax.

Following the fine address the Senator answered a number of questions from the audience.

A large number signed petitions and signatures were secured for a local Townsend Club which is scheduled to be organized at the next meeting of the Progressive Democratic Club, March 4.

A brief business session was held and an interesting program of musical numbers, including a duet by Joe Smith, guitar, and Bill Kilby, banjo; August Mullich, zither solo; Walter Ebbetts, clarinet solo; Oscar Winters and Bob O'Brien songs, piano and harmonica, and Lou Thompson, piano solo.

Mrs. Helen Broderson made a report on the legislature and in a fiery speech called attention to the failure of the state solons to get down to work.

Delicious refreshments were served to a large group who remained for the social hour.

BABCOCK WINS IN CCC MAIN EVENT

In the main event of the CCC Boxing Smoker held Tuesday night at the Eagles hall Sailor Babcock, divisional light-weight contender, from Camp Snider won on a technical knockout from Frankie Morrison of Camp Twin in the third round. Although outclassed from the start, Morrison subbing for an Elwha boy who didn't show up was plenty game and kept plowing into the sailor's punches. Babcock drew blood from Morrison's nose in the first and by the end of the fight both boxers were well smeared.

FIGHT TO DRAW

In the first bout of the evening Jack Dickinson and Eugene Edgington fought a three round draw.

In the second bout Al Honey Snider defeated Frank Frederickson, Twin, in a three rounder. This bout was one of the best of the evening.

Dunlap, Twin, and Norman Renn, Snider, middleweights fought a three round draw.

Johnny Townsend, welterweight, defeated Glen Madden, a substitute.

Sanford Floe and Bob Schloss refereed the prelims and Ralph McLarney, the main event.

As the Elwha boys did not show up, matchmaker Frankie Gains was forced to call off the main event and make substitutions in several other bouts.

Dick Draper was the timekeeper, Dave Moffett the announcer, and Fred Rice and Guy Oakes the judges.

Firemen's Ball Will Be Big Social Event

The 44th annual Firemen's Ball will be held Friday night in the Elk's ballroom and gymnasium. The ball has always been one of the big social events of the year and this year will be no exception, according to those in charge. Upstairs in the ballroom Pat Mulholland's eight melody boys will provide hot music for modern dancers. Downstairs in the gymnasium there will be old time music and dancing.

The proceeds from the dance go into a fund for expenditures which cannot be made through the budget, such as convention expenses, uniforms, fire prevention meetings, helmets, furniture in the fire hall and turnouts.

The firemen paid all the expenses of the firemen convention held here in 1931 out of this fund.

Sheriff Gets Tip On Port Angeles Boys

The three Port Angeles boys who ran away two weeks ago stopped at the Harborview Hotel in Seattle for a short time and then continued south, the sheriff's office reports. The sheriff was "tipped off" that the boys were staying in the hotel and communicated with the King county sheriff. When the latter went to the hotel to detain the boys, he found they had left two days before. It is believed that the boys are headed for Berkely, California and have approximately $30 among them.

Hearing Announced On Logged Off Lands

A public hearing is scheduled for March 27, at 10 o'clock a. m., in the county assessor's office on classification of lands in Clallam county for purposes of reforestation, according to Assessor Vern Robinson. The lands are held by the Milwaukee Land Company and the Illinois Timber Company. If the lands are approved they will go on the tax rolls at $1.00 per acre.

Townsend Plan Will Be Debated March 8

A debate will be held in the Eagles Hall on March 8, at 8:30 p. m., on the stated subject, Resolved that the Townsend Old Age Pension Plan is Adequate, Workable, and Should be Adopted at Once by the Federal Government. The affirmative side will will be debated by C. L. Vaughan, editor of the Clallam County Journal, and the negative will be given by F. O. Fountain, of the First National Bank. The main speeches will be thirty minutes, with five minutes for rebuttal allowed to each speaker. The public is invited.

SYNOPSIS

Theodore Gatlin adopts a baby, "Penelope," in an effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But his wife has never wanted her, and their affairs end in the divorce court. Ten-year-old Penelope is given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin. At a baseball game a ball strikes Penelope on the nose and Mrs. Gatlin removes her from the hospital and spirits her to Europe. Gatlin is about to begin a search for his daughter when a motor accident ends his life. Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt is a rising young psychiatrist. Dan McNamara, chief of police, brings him a patient—Nance Belden, a girl with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" is in part responsible. McNamara does not think she is a criminal and obtains Burt's expert testimony in court. Lanny, the doctor's office nurse, is won over to Nance's cause, but the girl's criminal record outweighs Doctor Burt's explanation of her case and she is sent to San Quentin penitentiary. She escapes, although shot, and goes to Lanny's apartment. Lanny tells Chief McNamara, who orders her to bring Nance to his apartment. One of the men who helped Nance escapes has been wounded and his partners take him to Burt's office, where McNamara finds them. He learns that Nance's real name is Penelope Gatlin. In her cell at San Quentin McNamara finds a blank check on a San Jose bank. From the banker he learns that Penelope Gatlin is heiress to $750,000.

"There's hope for the dagoes yet, my boy. You're right. It stands to reason some doctor fixed them up. Now, then, what doctor?"

"Dr. Stephen Burt," Angelloti decided.

"It stands to reason that if this Doctor Burt dressed their wounds last night he'll call on his patients every day until they're out of danger. If we catch him at his dirty work there ought to be a little something in this on the side, Amadeo."

An hour later they pulled up in front of Stephen's house, and behind a coupe parked at the curb. Flynn, circling around it, noticed a red cross on the radiator.

They circled the block and returned, to park at the lower edge of the block. At a quarter past eight they saw Stephen come out, bag in hand, enter his coupe, and drive away. So they followed him and came, in time, to Dan McNamara's house, into which they saw him enter, as they rolled slowly past.

"He had a latch key. He didn't ring the bell. An' no lights in the front o' the house," Angelloti cried excitedly. "Drive back, Pat, and I'll get the number."

"That house," Flynn informed him dramatically, "is the habitat of His Royal Highness, Daniel McNamara, Chief of Police of San Francisco. I always knew he was a fox, but I never suspected he was fool enough to hide an escaped convict in his own house. That situation is ticklish an' requires calm an' mature deliberation.

"Maybe you're right at that, Amadeo. Well, we'll stick round a while."

They stuck around half an hour before Doctor Burt came out, and drove away. "Drop off an' watch the house," Flynn suggested to his partner, "an' I'll follow his nibs. I'll be back later."

He trailed Stephen Burt to the latter's home and saw him pull up across the sidewalk, preparatory to opening the door of his garage. So Flynn rolled past, circled, picked up Angelloti at the end of the block.

"After you an' the doc left, I went up to the corner drug store and phoned the chief's house, but nobody answered," Angelloti confided. "The gang's in there, all right."

"I'm as nervous as an old woman," Flynn confessed. "I wish I had a drink."

Angelloti was a resourceful fellow. "Let's call on that Lanning woman, apologize for our rough work last night, an' maybe she'll slip us some o' that pre-war Bourbon again."

Flynn nodded, and they drove to Lanny's house. Lanny received them coldly. "Have you come to search my house again?" she demanded irritably.

No mule's face could possibly have been longer and sadder than P. Flynn's. "We didn't come to annoy you, Miss Lanning. The chief's give us the inside story. We just called to apologize for even suspectin' you."

"An officer," Angelloti explained, "has got to do a lot o' things he don't like to do in the discharge of his duty. The apology goes double, Miss Lanning."

"It's accepted." Then they shook hands. "How about a shot in the arm?" Lanny, the worldling, suggested much mollified

Angelloti shrugged expressively. "Well, seein' as how," P. Flynn murmured. So they had three drinks and spent a very pleasant evening with Lanny and she was loath to see them depart.

Now, Lanny was aware that Stephen had planned to visit his queer patients after dinner that night. So she telephoned—and Dan McNamara answered.

"How's everything, Dan?"

"I haven't seen the patients, but my chief of staff was up waiting for me, and reports everything jake."

"That's all I wanted to know. Thanks, Dan. Oh, by the way, Flynn and Angelloti called on me again, tonight."

"What's that!" The chief's voice was a roar. "What are those two eggs up to? I told them to lay off you."

"They're doing that, Dan. They just called to apologize. They spent the evening with me. They only left a moment ago."

"I know those two. It would never occur to them to apologize to anybody if they didn't have a reason. It's just as I suspected, Lanny. They're going to hang on to this case on the quiet and trail you around."

An anguished thought popped into Lanny's agile brain. "Oh, Dan, suppose they took a notion to trail Stevie!"

"Hush! You don't have to paint me any picture, Lanny. When did these two busybodies call at your house?"

"At nine-fifteen."

"Wait a minute." Lanny waited a minute and then McNamara said: "Stephen left here just about that time, so I guess we're safe tonight. And tomorrow I'll cover that loophole. I'm an ass not to have thought of it before. Good night."

In the morning Dan McNamara sent for Flynn and informed him he was to depart that night for Los Angeles to bring back a prisoner. Flynn begged Angelloti to keep his eyes on the job. But that night McNamara found other work for Angelloti. By the time Flynn returned, Angelotti was gone, and the same night, without a moment's notice, McNamara shot him up to Seattle on a similar job.

Dan let himself into the house that night with his latchkey, turned on the hall light and whistled. "Hello, everybody," he shouted. Nobody answered, so he hurried down to Nance's room. The door was open. He switched on the light and found a disordered bed with nobody in it. He searched the house thoroughly, only to discover he was alone in it; finally, on the living room table he found a note:

"Dear Chief: We think you mean well and we thank you for what you have done, but the dicks are watching this house. They trailed the doctor last night, but a friend how, it would be embarrassing for of ours trailed them. Forgive us if we just can't trust any cop. Anyou if your men found us here. Good-by and good luck."

McNamara sat down. He was suddenly weak. So he hadn't fooled Flynn and Angelloti after all. The smart devils! Well, they might suspect all they pleased, but unless they had seen his guests and recognized Nance they could never prove anything.

He realized now that his act in sending them out of the state would clinch their suspicions; they would be sure to have somebody in their confidence keep the house under constant surveillance until they got back. Evidently they had sent a bungler and the ex-soldier had spotted the fellow—he wondered if Nance and her loyal friends had made a clean getaway.

The front doorbell rang and he went to answer it. A thin, bent man stood in the entrance, and even in the dim light from the hall McNamara knew him for an ex convict in his prison suit of civilian clothes.

"Chief McNamara?" he queried huskily.

"Yes, I'm the chief.'

"I got out of San Quentin this morning. I had a message for you, but I didn't want to come to headquarters to deliver it. Benny the Beetle told me to tell you to rest easy."

"Thanks, friend Come in and rest easy yourself. Let's get acquainted." McNamara invited hospitably. In the clearer light of the living room he saw his visitor was far from being a well man. "What is it, kid?" he demanded. "Hop—or T. B.?"

"The old coughin' sickness, Chief. The prison directors shortened my term to let me out for treatment. As if I can get treatment anywhere," he added bitterly.

"Oh, yes, you can. I'm living alone here for the next thirty days, so I'll get a nurse in to take care of you, and you stay here."

The man looked at him suspiciously. "You mean it, Chief?"

"What did Benny tell you about me?" McNamara asked.

"He told me to trust you. He said you was one human being, even if you was a chief of police."

Dan changed the linen on Nance's bed, put the room in order, laid out a suit of pajamas and ordered his guest to bed.

"And now, me bold buckos," he reflected, "keep on trailing Doctor Burt to my house, if you feel like it."

He waited up until Stephen Burt arrived, and explained the situation to him. Stephen considered it a tremendous joke but commended his line of attack on Flynn and Angelloti.

"The man does need treatment very badly," he told the chief. "I'll send around a practical nurse early tomorrow morning to look after him, and I'll continue to call upon the poor devil nightly until further orders. We're both involved in a tricky game now and must play the hand through."

Doctor Burt was suddenly serious. "I do hope we haven't lost Nance, Dan. She's the most interesting psychological case I've ever seen."

"She ain't lost, but I'll bet a cookie she's well hid. But I'll locate her within twelve hours," Chief McNamara added, thinking of Ella Cates.

"I've run Nance's early history down since I saw her last, Doc," he announced suddenly. "I got busy the other day and luck was with me. She's an heiress, and her name is Penelope Gatlin. She got it on the nose by a baseball—a long fly into the bleachers. But I also discovered something else. It's a question whether she ain't just a natural nut. Her mother is. She led Gatlin a h—l of a life."

"Hello, Stevie, Old Darling."

"No, I don't think it's congenital, Dan. There's something about that girl that's healthy—mentally and physically. Did you meet her mother?"

"No, but I'm going to run her down easy enough."

Stephen sighed. "Oh, poor Nance! I'm afraid she's beyond my skill, after all. A bad family history, Mac—very bad. There's a structural weakness in some families that never gets bred out, and I suspect poor Nance has an inheritance of mental instability from her mother."

"Well, with that busted nose, her inheritance and her hellcat mother, she certainly had a fine start on the road to the foolish farm, didn't she, Doc? Excuse me, there's the telephone."

Lanny was calling. "Dan," she quavered, "my house has been burglarized. They jimmied the back door, and for all I know the burglars are upstairs still. I'm watching the staircase—got my pistol covering it. Come over quick, Dan—please."

"Coming right away, Lanny." He hung up and faced Stephen. "Lanny has burglars. Into your car, boy, and we'll beat it over."

CHAPTER VII

LANNY, very white and shaken, was in her living room, pistol in hand, watching the stairs, when McNamara and Stephen came noiselessly in the back door. The chief whipped out his pistol and went unhesitatingly up the stairs. Presently he called them to come up.

They found him standing in the doorway leading into Lanny's guest chamber. "Take a look at that," he ordered.

They looked. Lying in the bed, sound asleep, was Nance Belden!

"Got to get her out of here," Dan McNamara decided. "Flynn and Angelloti finally got on her trail, no doubt about that—and it's a mighty cold trail those two dicks can't follow. I suspected this, and the note she left at my house confirms it. It's just the mercy of God that Flynn and Angelloti didn't happen to slip into my domicile and find the note. If they had I'd be sunk. They can suspect all they want to, but hanging it on to me is another pair of boots, as the French say."

"Can't you give the miserable snoopers an office job?" Lanny demanded. She was faintly provoked at Daniel for his lack of initiative.

"Would you herd cows with a couple of horses that had won the derby?"

"Oh!"

"Wake that psychopathic nuisance up, Lanny, and get her down here. I've got to find out things or go crazy. Besides, she hasn't had any dinner."

"Let the poor lamb sleep, Dan," pleaded Lanny.

"I need a lot of sleep myself, and I can't get it until I know how, when and where Nance and her gang made the getaway. Suppose Flynn and Angelloti let them make the getaway; suppose Flynn followed the men and Angelloti followed Nance? They'd do that; they wouldn't risk getting in Dutch with me by making the pinch as the gang came out of my house. They have some loyalty and a lot of common sense, and they know which side their bread is buttered on. When they take the girl they'll not turn her in to me. They'll waltz her straight back to San Quentin to the warden and let his men get the credit for recapturing her. All they want is the reward. Suppose they know she's here now and suppose they've seen me come here? Ouch! Murderation!"

"Have her down, Lanny," Stephen commanded in his operating room voice, and Lanny had no alternative save to obey. So presently Nance came down the stairs with her. The girl was arrayed in an old faded dressing gown of Lanny's, her hair was tousled, and she yawned sleepily.

"Hello, Stevie, old darling; hello, Dan, you great big beautiful thing. Here I am."

"Sit down," McNamara invited in honeyed accents.

So Nance sat down promptly—on his tremendous knees—put her arm around his burly neck and kissed him. "Now, don't get excited," she cooed. "I know exactly what's burning you up, but you needn't worry. One of the boys recognized Flynn and I recognized Angelloti, because he's the dick that pinched me the first time I got in Dutch. They kept circling the block in their car all the afternoon, and when it was almost dark we saw Flynn go into an alley alongside a vacant house across the street. We decided Angelloti had gone home for dinner. So we telephoned Angelloti's house and his wife said he was eating his dinner, and unless it was important to call up in fifteen minutes. So we said it wasn't important, hung up and held a conference.

"We decided the back of the house wasn't guarded, so we telephoned the boy friend that met us at the yacht harbor that night, and he came and parked in the next street. We went out your back door, leaving the light in the front room burning and shinnied over the back fence. Some job for two members of the party, I'll say. Once over the fence we had to prowl through the back yard of the house that abuts against the rear of your house—and a dog bit me, but not very hard. We got out in front and into the next street before anybody could come out and see what luck the dog had had; our car was there and we beat it. We're pretty sure nobody followed us, but we drove out to the park first with our lights doused, and when we were sure nobody was trailing us, the boys brought me here. We jimmied your back door, Lanny dear; then the boys said good-by to me for keeps. It seems you don't want me associating with them any more, and they think you're right about that, Dan."

"Did your men scout the street in front of this house before pulling up in front of it?" asked McNamara sharply.

"Certainly. We circled the block twice."

"Feed our Nance, Lanny," McNamara urged happily. "She's a smart girl. How's the shoulder, dearie?"

"Fine. It'll be O. K. in another week."

"So am I." Mr. McNamara grinned horribly. "Flynn's home eating his dinner now, and Angelloti must be on guard in that alley. I'm going to mistake Angelloti for a suspicious character, lurking in the dark—and put a mark on him so I can recognize him later. He can't stand to mix with me, and get recognized, of course, so when he runs I'll fire in the air. He'll know who I am, but he'll never suspect I know who he is."

McNamara bade Nancy, Lanny and Stephen goodnight and hurried away in a taxi. A block from his home he alighted and walked down the side of the street opposite his own house. He was whistling softly as he came abreast of Angelloti's hiding place, where he turned at right angles, apparently with the intention of crossing in the middle of the street to his own house. A step from the curb he halted, turned, bent his head in a listening attitude, then stepped resolutely into the alley.

DROUTH BLAMED ON RECESSION OF ICE FIELDS

A theory that changes in climate conditions which have brought drouths to western Canada and parts of the United States may be caused by the recession of glaciers in the Canadian Northwest and Alaska is being studied by a committee of the British Association for the Advancement of Science under the secretaryship of Moses B. Cotsworth of Vancouver and London.

The scientists have found that the warm winds of the Pacific are not only demolishing great ice sheets in this district but are hollowing out a path across northern Canada on their way east. Formerly they were diverted by ice fields in the North and passed through southern British Columbia to drop their moisture in rain on the Canadian and United States prairies.

Now with less ice each year in the North and no mountains to precipitate their moisture, the winds reach the 9,000-foot ice cap of Greenland. The change, Mr. Cotsworth says, seems to be making Alaska warmer and Greenland colder.

Meanwhile, the Greenland ice cap has grown immensely. It is estimated to be sufficient to cover North America with a layer of ice 50 feet thick. Gravitational weight seems to be very gradually exerting a tendency to move the earth's crust around its central core of the heaviest metals. These changes, Mr. Cotsworth suggests, may prove helpful in the detection of further climatic changes.

Do Not Cook Cheese

"Cheese should not be cooked," Doris W. McCray says in Hygeia Magazine, in discussing the acceptance of cheese by the American Medical association's committee on foods. "It may be melted in a sauce or may be added grated, after the food is removed from the fire. Too high temperature or too long cooking causes the fat to melt and drop out of cheese, leaving the toughened mass of protein, which is stringy and rubbery."

Now Science Explains Why So Many People Past 40

Feel That They're Slipping Losing Their "Grip" on Things

Many people 'round 40 think they're "growing old." They feel tired a lot . . . "weak." Have headaches, dizziness, stomach upsets.

Well, scientists say the cause of all this, in a great many cases, is simply an acid condition of the stomach. Nothing more.

All you have to do is to neutralize the excess stomach acidity.

When you have one of these acid stomach upsets, take Phillips' Milk of Magnesia after meals and before going to bed. That's all!

Try this. Soon you'll feel like another person! Take either the familiar liquid "PHILLIPS'" or the convenient new Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM: Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets are now on sale at all drug stores everywhere. Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

COSTUMES OF THE 60'S FIGURE AT COLONIAL TEA

The First Methodist and the Lincoln Memorial gave a joint tea, Wednesday afternoon at the church social room.

The very, very lovely program began at two o'clock. Mrs. Sadie Ford Black and Mrs. Daisy Brown played two lovely piano selections. Mrs. Chester Gagnon gave two vocal solos Several of Mrs. Davidson's kindergarten kiddies amused and entertained the guests with their songs.

The principal feature of the tea was the pantomine presented by Mrs. Horace Horstman. The tableau depicted such famous women as Ann Rutledge, Mary Todd and Nancy Hanks.

Tea was poured by Mrs. M. J. Rhodes and Mrs. Lotzgesell, who were dressed in crinolened dresses and paisley shawls. The church parlor was decorated to represent a large living room, with birds supplying both color and music to the afternoon. Those present were made to feel as if they were in their own home.

The debate which was to be given by the Young Democratic Club, Wednesday evening was postponed until March 6, due to illness.

A LATE LESSON?

We noticed on our way to work this morning a car that should have been a real source of pride to its owner. We noticed it for two reasons, first, because on one side it was badly smashed and marred; second, because it stopped most conscientiously at the least unfrequented intersections. May we be pardoned for wondering if those unsightly dents and mars had taught a late but much needed lesson.

A VICIOUS RACKET

These are days of racketeering. The slimy trail leads to every line of activity. One of the latest is the garnishment racket. This has developed rapidly during the present period of depression and unemployment. Thousands of good, honest citizens, pressed by the emergencies of the hour, have been forced to use their credit. Then, unemployment, sickness or some other unforseen thing has occurred to make it impossible or extremely difficult to meet their obligations promptly. As a consequence these accounts have been turned over to collection agencies who have used the courts through a semblance of legal right to hound and harrass the debtor and with no thought of the elementary principles of right and justice. It is now time for the great mass of the people who believe in ordinary, common every-day decency to smite this vicious racket and put an end to it. The best and surest way to do this is to write to your legislators and others in the State Legislature to support House Bill No. 174, which protects our citizens against the rapacious collection agencies, who assume an air of super-honesty and oppress the poor and unfortunate. This bill, introduced by Messrs. T. E. Smith and J. D. McDonald, exempts a person having a dependent upon him for support, up to $200 per month, and a single person up to $100 per month; and it further provides that the defendent is apprised of his rights at the time any action is filed.

We hold no brief for the professional deadbeat. nor the individual who repudiates an honest obligation, but we do deeply sympathize with the honest individual who would pay if he could, but who cannot, and yet, is forced into the position of being a deadbeat and dishonest through a court action and force of law. House Bill No. 174 will make the merchants and those who extend credit more careful as to their risks, and it will at the same time protect the struggling worker against that group of racketeers who seek to wring blood money from the unemployed, honest worker.

The primary basis of credit is character. The honest man will pay according to his ability. He can do no more and there should be no more expected of him. If unemployment, sickness or unfortunate conditions arise over which he has no control to render it impossible for him to pay. there is no rule of reason or right which should penalize him for his honest failure.

The thing which boils our blood is the fact that a lot of these individuals who assume an air of super-honesty never did an honest days work in their lives and make their living by harrassing and preying on the public. This racket should be abated. House Bill No. 174 will do the trick. Act now.—C. L. V.

A JURY ON PARADE

It is reported that the jury which tried and convicted Bruno Hauptmann in the Lindbergh kidnap-murder case in Flemington, N. J., last week, will appear in vaudeville on a barnstorming trip through the country. If they do, and it seems likely, it will represent the acme of shame and disgrace. It will do more than that, it will arouse the indignation of a nation to a point where many who are now doubtful will be convinced that Hauptmann did not receive a fair trial and that the instructions of the trial court were prejudicial to the rights and interests of the accused. It gives credence to the thought in many minds that the Hauptmann trial was staged for the purpose of promoting the financial fortunes and political prospects of some of the principals. We hold no brief for Hauptmann, and if he is guilty of the atrocious crime of which he is accused, he should pay the penalty. However, we do dissent from the view that the tragedy should be turned into a circus for the benefit of a few self-seekers who desired publicity more than even justice for the accused. The jury, under our system, is as much a part of the court as the judge and attorneys, and for the Hauptmann jury to parade before the American public for financial reasons is a disgrace that smells to high heaven. It will turn thousands in anxious sympathy toward any man whose life was in their hands. Shame on such a thing!—C. L. V.

IS AMERICA IN GREAT DANGER?

This question is now agitating the minds of many thoughtful citizens, and some actually think we are approaching the end of democracy and the final collapse of popular government in this country. Frankly, we do not share these views. We do agree, however, that there are dangers in our economic set-up and that grave abuses and gross injustices prevail in industry. Our whole social fabric has been weakened by the impact of materialism. But, we do not know of any nation in history, under any form of government, that has been free from these evils. Any fair appraisal of world conditions today must convince one that, with all our economic and social ailments, we are better off than any other country.

We believe that America is fundamentally safe and sound, economically and socially. We believe that the young people of America are better trained and better able to assume the responsibilities of citizenship in this bewildering and complex age than any other generation. Moreover, we believe that a lot of the present-day criticism of America and our institutions is ill-founded and will do much harm and no good. What we need in this country is a revival of old-fashioned faith in God. old-time religion and simple honesty in dealing with each other. A revival of these elementary forces will restore reverance for home, respect for authority, obedience to law and love toward God and humanity. America is in danger only in proportion as we have lost our grip on these primary things.—C. L. V.

COST OF EDUCATION AND CRIME

In a recent meeting of citizens in Columbus, Ohio, called to consider the crisis in education, some very impressive facts were brought out. It was pointed out that we are spending $1,500-000,000 annually to incarcerate our 500,000 prisoners, while we are spending only $200,000,000 to educate our some 26,000,000 school children. In other words, according to the reports tabulated. the country is spending more than five times as much for crime as for education. Senator Copeland of New York recently made the startling statement that one-fourth of the national income goes to pay for crime. Another startling statement was the fact that our criminals now average twenty-three years of age, and that the two largest age groups in our penal institutions are the nineteen and eighteen-year old groups. Nothing better illustrates the false economy now being preached and practiced by states and communities in closing schools and shortening terms and reducing staffs and lowering teachers' salaries. Instead of reducing the school costs in the hope of lowering taxes, such a policy only complicates the problem and increases the cost of government. In this changing and rapidly developing world, there is only one answer to the crime problem, and that is education, not less education but more.—C. L. V.

THE MARK OF AN EDUCATED PERSON

Albert Wiggam, in his late book, "The Marks of an Educated Man," gives his opinion that the test is mental attitudes. Do you keep an open mind on every question until you have all of the evidence in, and then consider the facts without prejudice? Do you know when you don't know, or do you take sides and then seek for arguments to sustain your position? Do you investigate, or just try to win your point? Dr. Wiggam says that if you have the scientific attitude toward these things, you are educated. What we need in this complex and changing world in which we live is the open mind. The person with a closed mind lives in a state of isolation with the barriers of prejudice and intolerance shutting out all and sundry approaches. Such a person becomes super-sensitive and sour. The one thing needed to save us from deep despair in the present crisis is that we take the long look and attempt to see the problem whole. It is the mental attitude that determines whether one is educated or not. It is not necessarily text book information.—C. L. V.

SWORD OF THE COWARD

The coward strikes in the dark. He attacks his victim from ambush. He sneaks along dark trails. He deals in innuendo. He attempts to spread the poison of suspicion. He lies when truth would serve him better. He never comes out into the light of day. He smiles in one's face and stabs him in the back. He is conscious of his own cowardice and moral weakness and believes others are like himself. He winces at exposure. He makes reckless chargs against anyone he may fancy he doesn't like. He blabs and boasts. He fears to reduce his charges to a form where he would be forced to prove them. He slinks and slimes his way along, like the snake that he is. There is none so contemptible in the whole human family as the coward.—C. L. V.

The thoughts of the soul are printed on the face. You cannot prevent the display of character.

This and That

By TEX ALLEN

February may be the shortest month in the year, but it is one of the biggest months we have in the year also.

On the Twelfth of the month was ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY.

And today is GEORGE WASHINTON'S Birthday. He was truly a great man, General, President, farmer, slave owner, and was the first millionnaire in the States. It too bad we haven't a few men like Washington today to kind of help things along. We might get somewhere.

My friend, have you heard of the Town of Foo-Chow
On the banks of the River Slow?
Where blooms the waitawhile
Flower fair.
Where the sometimeorother scents
The air.
And the softgoeasys grow?
It lies in the valley of whats-
Theuse
In the province of letterslide,
And thattiredfeeling is native
There—
It's the home of the reckless
Idontcare,
Where the giveitup's abide.
It stands at the bottom of lazy
Hill,
And is easy to reach, I declare,
You've only to fold up your hands
And glide
Down the slope of Weakwills slip-
Pery slide
To be landed quickly there.
The town is old as the human Race.
And grows with the flight of Years,
It is wrapped in the fog of idlers'
Dreams;
Its streets are paved with dis-

And sprinkled with useless

HAPPINESS DEFINED

Wanting nothing and knowing it.

The mental sunshine of contest.

A "will-O-the-wisp" which eludes us even when we grasp it.

Excelsior! The ever-retreating summit on the hill of our ambition.

The prize at the top of a greasy pole which is continually slipping from one's grasp.

The only thing a man continues to search for after he has found it.

The bull's-eye on the target at which all the human race are shooting.

The goal erected for the human race, which few reach, being too heavily handicapped.

A wayside flower growing only by the path of duty.

A bright and beautiful butterfly, which many chase but few can take.

The interest we receive from capital invested in good works.

The birthright of contentment.

A treasure which we search for far and wide, though oftimes it is lying at our feet.

The summer weather of the mind.

The dancing of the heart to its own music.

Do You Know—

1888, Littlewood walked 623 miles in six days (at N.Y.)?

MY PRAYER

Give me not power nor riches
I seek neither wealth nor fame
Help me O God but to live my life
Like a man—to play the game
Let me be to all men, all a man
Should be, honest loyal and true
Let me ask nothing of any man
That I would not willingly do
Make my heart true and c'rageous
Keep my feet fr'm paths of pride
Help me O God to walk the way
Of Thy Son whom they crusified.

The "liquid test"

...it ENDS bowel worries for many people

This is a test that tells you whether the system needs a cathartic change. If you have constant sluggish spells or bilious attacks, and laxatives seem to make things worse, it would be wise to try this:

Stop all use of any laxative that does not encourage variation from a "fixed dose" (which may be entirely too large a dose for your individual need). Use instead, a liquid laxative that you can measure and regulate as to dose. As necessary to repeat, take smaller doses, less and less often, until the bowels are moving without any help at all.

Doctors use liquid laxatives, and a properly prepared liquid laxative, containing natural laxative agents like senna and cascara is a joy and a comfort; a real help in establishing regularity. Ask your doctor about this! (Doctors use liquid laxatives.) You can get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a most dependable liquid laxative, at any drug store.

DON'T NEGLECT YOUR KIDNEYS!

IF your kidneys are not working right and you suffer backache, dizziness, burning, scanty or too frequent urination, swollen feet and ankles; feel lame, stiff, "all tired out" . . . use Doan's Pills.

Thousands rely upon Doan's. They are praised the country over. Get Doan's Pills today. For sale by all druggists.

DOAN'S PILLS

CONSTIPATED? GIVE NATURE A CHANCE

Stop shocking your intestines with violent purgatives. Take Sargon Soft Mass Pills, the mild but very effective laxative designed to give relief from constipation and biliousness by stimulating the flow of bile from the liver, thus cleansing the system in a natural way. They are pleasant to take, leave no bad after effects and are not habit forming.

Sargon Soft Mass Pills are for sale by all good drug stores.

WASHINGTON NEWS ITEMS OF INTEREST

Brief Resume of Happenings of the Week Collected for Our Readers

Wenatchee — The first of the winter's series of Chinook dances by Indians was completed in the early hours of last Sunday. The dancing continued for three nights.

Olympia — The reappointment of T. M. Jenner of Seattle as a member of the state tax commission is announced by Governor Martin. He was reappointed for a six-year term.

Wenatchee—District - wide orchard cleaen-up campaign will be under way in the Wenatchee district as soon as federal funds are made available to the WERA. All trees will be scraped and the debris burned to destroy codling larvae.

Olympia — Fearing that the price of nicotine sulphate used in spray material, may become prohibitive if the AAA carries out proposals to destroy low-grade tobacco, the Yakima Chamber of Commerce has wired Washington congressmen to work for provisions to make nicotine from the tobacco to be destroyed.

Kelso—Kent Anderson, Smith-Hughes agricultural student in Woodland high school, from which he will graduate this spring, has been awarded the Union Pacific scholarship to Washington State college this year for his outstanding Smith-Hughes work. His supervised agricultural project consisted of the care and management of 500 chickens.

Walla Walla — Libby, McNeill & Libby telegraphed recently that the contract for a new cannery had been let to the Austin company of Seattle, and that work will start in ten days and be completed in 65 working days. Contract price is $71,480. With machinery and other equipment the plant here will represent a $250,000 investment. It will be devoted this year to canning of peas.

Cathlamet—Comparatively few sturgeon are being caught in the Columbia river, according to fishermen. The sturgeon is the last surviving relative of the armored fish of the days before the great glaciers and were formerly plentiful in the Columbia as far as the mouth of the Snake river. The fish have already vanished from these haunts. The largest sturgeon caught here weighed 900 pounds and was more than ten feet long. The fish brought in now seldom weigh more than 200 pounds.

Dam Warehouse Job Let

Almira—Clark & Early of Seattle were low bidders with $24,264.70 to construct a government warehouse at the Grand Coulee dam. The warehouse will be of steel frame construction with metal roof and sides.

Broom Business Blooms

Oroville — More orders than they can fill are coming in for the brooms made by Charles Hoover & Son, who live near Tonasket. The two men grow the broom corn on their ranch, make the brooms and ship to places in the state.

$2,000 Is Paid Depositors

Chelan—Checks totaling $22,000 have been received by the depositors of the Closed Chelan State bank. They represented a dividend of 15 per cent and made 42 per cent paid. Liquidation has been proceeding slowly, to prevent sacrificing assets unnecessarily.

Takes 10 Weeks to Serve 10-Day Term

Puyallup—It will take Ed Harris, Puyalluy, 10 weeks to serve a 10 day jail sentence. In order that he will not lose his job. Harris will spend one day a week in jail here. He was found guilty of gaffing salmon in violation of state law.

Bank Deposits Mount

Chewelah—On Marhc 11, 1933, when the First National Bank of this city opened its doors following the president's bank holiday, the deposits were $156,587.47. February 8, 1935, the deposits increased to $306,278.27. This increase is attributed to improved conditions, especially in the price paid for farm produce, and to the steady operation of the magnesite plant.

Sale Lures Huge Crowd

Odessa — The Odessa Trading company's farm sale last week at the Henry Seibel farm drew one of the largest crowds ever seen at a sale in this region. Bidding was keen and the buyers from Colfax, Ellensburg and many Palouse places, the property sold will have wide distribution. Seventy head of stock were sold, prices ranging as high as $190 for one horse and $160 a head for the mules. Wheatland plows brought $200 each. Sandy Keith was auctioneer.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE

If there were no guesses there would be no lotteries. If there were no lotteries, some millions of people would not lose the money they put up when they take chances which are so small as to be practically neglible.

Nobody a Good Guesser

When Isaac Newton noticed an apple fall in his father's orchard he did not content himself guessing why it fell down instead of up.

He had at the time no information on that subject.

Probably he asked elder people so many questions about it that they shuddered when they saw him approaching.

No grown up person likes to be asked questions when he doesn't know the answer.

But the Newton boy refused to be satisfied with the explanations that were given to him.

He thought over that problem till at last he concluded that there was some force which controlled the apple's movements.

Today that force, which no man or woman had understood before, is being used to do about three-quarters of the really hard physical work that is being performed on this planet, as well as controlling the movement of the planet itself.

* * * * * * *

Don't guess. Know. Know all that there is to be known.

Ours may not be any more interesting, or so greatly interesting as some of the other planets, but it is the only one upon which this race of ours will ever dwell.

Our job is to find out more about it as we study it.

Don't be contented merely with looking at trees and flowers.

Find out as much about them as you can.

Already, thanks to Newton, you know why water flows down instead of up. Build on that.

Questions and answers comprise learning. And if you do not constantly learn you will be of as little value to your fellow dwellers on the earth as is the snow you sweep from the streets after a storm.

Less value, indeed, for the snow melts and waters the plants, or joins rivers that turn mill wheels and produce power.

* * * * * * *

Nothing brings such self satisfaction as to know that you are doing something, building something, bringing into the world some useful thing that has never been known before.

If we could get rid of the loafers and guessers and idlers in the world we would get rid of hatreds and wars.

That will take a lot of energy and team work, but eventually it will be accomplished.

Don't Sneer at Politics

I know that it is a common practice in this country to belittle politics and politicians.

But politics and politicians control the country.

They always will control the country.

And, as some early philosopher said: "If you can't like 'em, jine 'em."

For a great many years I was a political reporter, in Oregon, in New York and in Washington.

I met many crooked designing politicians.

But they were not, I am happy to say, in the majority.

I knew many honest, earnest men who were trying their best to better such conditions as could be bettered.

They had discovered that in a country where the ballot is free what is called politics is the only force which can change things for the better—or for the worse, for that matter.

* * * * * * *

For a long time I supposed that every member of the political faction which controlled the great city in which I live was a crook or a dolt.

Since then I have learned that many of the leaders are really honest men, who would not take graft under any circumstances, and who are really trying to get bad men out of office and good ones in.

If you will turn back the pages of history you will discover that some of the country's most revered men and women have been politicians.

Lincoln was one. Franklin was another.

Human nature began as human nature, and, as far as I can discover, is likely to remain so.

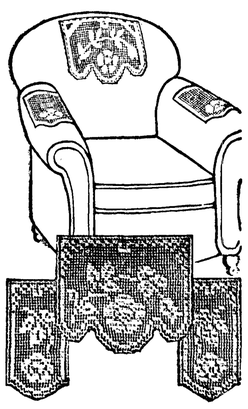
But not every man is office hungry because he wants a fat salary or because he thinks that his personal business will be helped if he joins some particular party.

Many of them are sincere and honest.

They want to do something to make their country better. They want to improve the morals and heighten the ambitions of the men and women around them.

They want to make of their country a better place for their children to grow up in.

HERE'S CHAIR SET EASY TO CROCHET



Since crochet work is again interesting the art needleworkers, why not pick up your No. 8 or 9 steel crochet hook and thread about size 15 and crochet this attractive three-piece set for your living room chair, or for a gift? It will surely be appreciated and admired. Chair backs and arm rests are old decorations but now growing in popularity and are modern. This set is worked in the large filet stitch, works up rapidly and is simple work even for the inexperienced. The center piece measures 14x11 inches, the arm rests 6x11 inches, with about size 15 thread. By using a larger hook and crocheting looser, the finished pieces will be larger, if desired.

In the large filet an open mesh equals 1 triple crochet (thread twice over hook). Chain 3, skip 3. A solid mesh equals 5 triple crochet. Add 4 triple crochet for each additional solid mesh.

Send 10 cents to our Crochet department for directions and working diagram for this No. 805, or if you have no material you can get the entire outfit for 40c, namely, instructions, diagram, crochet hook, and sufficient cream color thread to complete the three pieces.

WRECKS BROUGHT RICHES

Wrecking of two German steamers off a remote island of the Leocadive group in the Indian ocean brought undreamed of prosperity to the islanders. According to a report from Simba, wages skyrocketed from 10 cents a day to 50 cents, the thatched roof of every house has been replaced by an iron one, and old rush lights have been supplanted by hurricane lamps. A German cargo steamer ran aground on a promontory and its cargo was jettisoned. The 3,000 islanders salvaged the floating freight, and many got work at unheard-of wages. The Germans then bought water at two cents a gallon and rice at $10 a bag. A second German vessel, coming to the rescue of the first, also ran aground, had to jettison its cargo and hire more help. After the ships left the natives sold the "treasure" and are rich.

SPORTS HIGHLIGHTS

DOUBLE-MAIN EVENT BEST WRESTLING BILL YET

A double main-event with Tex Porter, local middleweight, matched with Joe Gardinier, St. Louis, and Jack Gorman, Los Angeles, meeting Gorilla Cassu, Eugene, Oregon, will be featured in the Wrestling Smoker to be held Monday night at the Eagles' Hall. In arranging these main events, matchmaker Ernie Lemley has lined up the finest collection of grunt and groaners ever to show here. A good three round preliminary completes the program.

Tex Porter needs no introduction to local fans. Joe Gardinier, 156, St. Louis, his opponent has defeated Herb Burgeson, the Swedish terror, recently, and should give Porter a real fight. Porter and Burgeson drew in a recent battle. Gardinier has wrestled all over the country being a headliner in many bouts in the South and Middle West.

Jack Gorman, 154, Los Angeles has wrestled around Seattle often winning the title of Northwest Champion two years ago. The match between Gorilla Cassu, powerful Eugene, Oregon 152 pounder and Gorman should be a honey.

PORTER TO USE DEATHLOCK

One of Porter's best holds is the Indian death-lock now being popularized by Jagat Singh, Hindu matman wrestling in Seattle. This hold supposedly originated in India where Hindu policemen used it to subdue criminals. One of its best points is that the more the victim struggles the more it hurts, and the tighter it gets.

Teddies Beat Forks; Cinch Playoff Spot

The Port Angeles Teddies remained at the top of the western division of the Peninsula conference a few points ahead of Clallam Bay when they defeated Forks 16-4 on the Spartan floor. The Teddies were definitely "on" as far as defensive work goes, holding their opponents to four points, two in each half. Don Loghry and Ralph Gallaci each scored enough points to win, making six apiece to lead the scoring parade. By this victory, the Teddies cinched a place in the Peninsula Tournament.

six each. Gus Priebe left the game in the third quarter with four personal fouls and Younce whom he had been guarding followed him in the fourth quarter.

The Redskin second team beat the Teddy seconds 16-7 in the preliminary game. Jensen, football star, was high with eight points.

In my opinion, a game such as tennis, which is universally played with the same rules all over the world, can have a really great effect in making different nations understand each other's best qualities.—Jean Borotra, in Rotarian Magazine.

CLALLAM BAY WINS WILD GAME FROM TEDDIES

SCORE:
Angeles 23, Clallam Bay 29.

This is the story of that basketball game. This is the story of a basektball game that was more like a hockey game. Not that the players tried to slide down the floor, they were trying to stand up. Nor did they wear skates upon an ice surface, they wore rubber soled shoes upon a wet surface. This is the the story of that game in nine parts or rather nine fables including the referees decisions.

Part 1. Don Loghry, one of the best guards in the conference, allowed his man Wilson to score twelve points.

Part 2. The fouls: for Angeles, Gallaci-2, McLennan-3, Vasilatos, Priebe, Loghry, and Tobias, 1 each; a total of nine.

For Clallam Bay, Wilson-2, R. Auchter-1, Klock-1, Morris-4, F. Auchter-2, and R. Murray-2, a total of twelve.

Part 3. The Referees decision: on second thought nothing will be said about the referees decisions. Referee--Dick Krekow of Clallam.

Part 4. Art Tobias: the Teddy center threw the ball at the referee—and missed. A technical foul was called.

Part 5. The roof: a heavy rain and a leaky roof nearly flooded the spectators out of the bleachers. Two students tried to mop up the water on the floor with towels but couldn't mop fast enough.

Part 6. Don Loghry again: he lies on his back in a pool of water, saying, "Who hit me?"

7. This is the standing of the two teams before the game.

	W	L	Pct.
1. Angeles	4	1	.800
2. Clallam Bay	3	1	.750

Part 8. The Box Score:

ANGELES		Clallam Bay
Gallaci (5)	F	Wilson (12)
McLennan (4)	F	R. Auchter(3)
Vasilatos (4)	C	Klock (2)
Priebe	G	R. Murray(2)

Subs: Angeles, Peyton, F. Loghry, Tobias (2); Clallam Bay, Morris, Hasselberg, Rasmussen.

Track Team Will Have Real Competition

Teddy cinder athletes will have some real competition this spring if present plans of Principal Forrest Breakey work out. Breakey has written to Olympia and Bremerton asking for meets with them. The Teddies have beaten Bremerton several times before but have never met Olympia. In addition to these an Olympic Peninsula meet will be held on May 4 and dual meets with Port Townsend, Sequim, Forks and Joyce will probably be scheduled.

PAST TEAMS RANKED HIGH

In the past the local track team has had very little competition. Since starting track three years ago, the Teddies have never lost either a dual meet or a Peninsula meet and have sent large representations to the District meets each year. For the past two years Angeles has been represented in the state meet by Don Horton, lanky discus thrower.

Cowboys, Redskins Tied

Chimacum and Port Townsend are tied for second place in the Eastern Division of the League. As only the first and second place team can compete in the tournament, these teams will have a playoff probably at the end of the week to decide which will enter.

HOW they stand:
EASTERN DIVISION

	W	L	Pct.
Sequim	6	0	1.000
Chimacum	3	3	.500
Townsend	3	3	.500
Quilcene	0	6	.000

Total: Angeles 23—Clallam Bay 29

Part 9. Conclusion: The standings after the game:

Clallam Bay	4	1	.800
Angeles	4	2	.667
Forks	2	3	.400
Joyce	1	5	.167

You don't understand it? Neither would you understand the game.

LOCAL ARCHERS IN FOURTH PLACE

The Greenwod Archery Club of Port Angeles placed fourth in last weeks Olympic Bowmen League Tournament nosing out the Twin City, Minn. archers by four points. The local bowmen have compiled an enviable record in this nationwide tournament since starting competition on January 19. Shooting against big-time competition, they have never placed worse than fifth.

The local four-man team includes Rex Abraham Beverly Estes, Clive McLeod, and Aaron Markham. Each week they send in their scores for 15 rounds of six arrows to the headquarters of the Olympic Bowmen League, where they are compiled with the other club's scores and the standings figured.

Following are the standings in last week's tournament:
