Held For Investigation Man Breaks Out of Jail

Slipping a bit under incessant questioning, Walter Dimmell, jail-breaker and suspected insane murderer of Herman Kruse and possibly two others, told questioners early Thursday morning he would lead Mrs. Kruse to her son's body. Dimmell said visitations of spirits had told him the location of the bodies but could not give details that would enable officers to find them.

DEVELOPMENTS

1. Under leadership of county, state, and special investigators bodies of men are scouring the woods near Forks for traces of bodies or clothing. Both soldiers of the 29th Engineers and townsmen are cooperating in the search.

2. A partially built cabin that Dimmell had begun construction on is found three-quarters of a mile west of Forks Prairie. He lived in a cabin near the "loop" where Kruse disappeared.

3. Mrs. Marie Kruse, the missing soldier's mother, receives a letter from a New York spritualist medium, Thursday morning, who tells her the sheriff has the murderer of her son in jail.

4. Sheriff Charles Kemp finds a piece of flesh in a box with bloody clothes near the new cabin.

Dimmell's declaration that he knows where the bodies are added to his confession that he killed a cow to get its liver because spirits tol him to virtually banishes all doubts in the minds of officials that he is the murderer of several men who have disappeared lately in the West End.

BELIEVED SADIST

It is believed that he is a lust murder who kills for the thrill he gets from inflicting cruelty and death.

BREAKS JAIL

A crazed attack on Carl Kirk night jailer, and a dive through a plate glass window to the cement pavement ten feet below, at 2:30 Wednesday morning gained Dimmell temporary freedom from the county jail. The sheriff followed his bloody trail through Peabody Valley and recaptured him three hours later at daybreak. Dimmell was hiding in a used car back of the Port Angeles Motors when found.

Dimmell was brought to the county jail and booked on an open charge for investigation ten days ago. He had been undergoing an intense grilling by the sheriff's office and prosecuting attorney working in relays. At 2:30 Thursday morning he asked permission to go to the toilet, and Carl Kirk escorted him upstairs to the men's lavatory on the main floor of the courthouse. Shortly after entering the lavatory, Dimmell turned upon Kirk and struck him in the eye knocking him down. Then he ran over to the three-eighth inch plate glass window and thrust both hands through it. Kirk battered his head with a sap but not fazed in the least he dove thru the window, got up immediately and ran away.

LAUGHS AT ESCAPE

Despite being of slender build—he weighs 160 pounds—he is noted for his strength. Seemingly rational and sane, he makes insanely clever answers to questions. Despite the intense grilling, he laughed Wednesday night when reference was made to his escape thru the window.

The sheriff has been investigating quietly since Private Herman Kruse of the 29th engineers disappeared under mysterious circumstances, Sunday, February 17.

Private Kruse has given permission to take a stroll around the "loop" a two mile walk, and left camp Sunday afternoon about five o'clock. When he did not return, searching parties were sent out but no trace of him was found. At first it was believed that he had deserted but this theory was abandoned when it was found he had left without his watch, other

American Legion Have Concession Privileges

A street concession covering Front Street from Oak to Laurel will feature the American Legion 4th of July celebration this year. The American Legion was granted sole right to street concessions at that place by the city commission at their meeting Wednesday.

The commission passed the ordinance providing for upkeep of graves by city upon payment of annual assessments by owners.

BUILDING PERMITS

Building permits were granted to the following:

Rose Audett for repair work on Audett Hotel at 202 South Lincoln, $500 (city engineer's estimate.)

K. O. Erickson for a partition in a store building at 136 East First, $100.

Action upon bids for eighth street bridge materials awaits congressional passage of the four billion dollar relief bill.

Sinclair Case Will Be Heard Next Saturday

Hearing of two charges against George Sinclair, hit-run driver last Saturday, was postponed for a week by Judge John M. Ralston because the defense did not have their case prepared. Sinclair is charged with hit-run driving while drunk. The case will be heard next Saturday in Superior Court before Judge Ralston.

Sinclair was the driver of a car that struck down Mrs. George Rogers two weeks ago and failed to stop. Sinclair and the three other passengers in the car were drunk, officials believe.

Scouts Celebrate 25th Anniversary, Here

Troop 477, Boy Scouts of America, gave a party for Port Angeles boy scouts, Wednesday night, to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of Scouting in the United States.

One of the high spots of the evening's entertainment was an instructive discussion by Norman Gibbs on woodcarving and woodworking. He showed scouts a model sailboat on which he was working and described to them the "kick" he got out of fine woodworking. Expensive tools were not necessary, he said, explaining how they might get started in woodcraft. He outlined precautions to take in handling tools.

Ernest Rueberg spoke briefly on the history of Scouting in America. A friendly competition between the three troops was held throughout the evening which ended with a pop feed.

RANDOM SHOTS

Local people turning out in large numbers to see Ken Stuart's KOL Carnival gang. Over 1500 people a new record both for Clyde's and the gang were there. Among those there—Mr. and Mrs. Donald Altick, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Kline, Mr. and Mrs. Schlager, "Service" Johnston, the George Pucketts, the Louie Filions, the Norman Gibbs'.

Plucked at random—Chris Morganroth playing cards at the Elk's Club—Wally Samuelson resting in an easy chair at the same place—over the radio Monday, Ken Stuart dedicating a song, "Sometimes you get a good one", to "Curly" Molchoir of Port Angeles—a convention of truck haulers in the court house—Carl Kirk, night jailer at the county jail, has a beautiful shiner.

Sec. 4. It shall be unlawful for any person to hunt or kill any deer or elk or other big game animal without first having procured from the director of game a metal tag to be known as "Big Game Seal" which metal tag shall be procured in addition to any other license to hunt game ani-

Youth Taken From School; Sent to Jail

Alex Pollock, 18, was removed from the Forks High School, Wednesday, and sent to Yakima County where he is wanted for burglary. State Hiway Patrolman Tiny Bartholet, who made the arrest, brought Pollock to the county jail Wednesday night at 5:30 and took him to Seattle the next day. There he was turned over to Yakima county officials.

The setting of his bail at $1500 indicates the seriousness of the charge. Pollock left Yakima County after committing the crime in December. He attended Forks High School for nearly a month before being arrested.

Baseball Club Looking For Good Southpaw

"Lefthanded pitcher wanted!"

If one doesn't show up soon don't be surprised if you see a sign with those words on it hanging from the fence at the ball park. The Port Angeles Baseball club, roster is neary complete but one big hole, lack of a good southpaw flinger, stands out like a haystack around a needle. Charles Rogers, veteran holdover from last year's squad will handle the righthanded pitching duties.

The club members are working hard to get the field in shape for the first of the league games. The local club has joined the Intercity League composed mostly of Seattle teams and will play a schedule of approximately twenty games here. The games will start sometime around the last of April; dates have not been settled yet.

Other members of the league are The Taiyo Athletic Club, Red & White Stores, Fremont Electric Company, West Seattle Athletic Club, Hope Company, Lang Range Company, Warshal and Sons, Kist Beverages, and Pike Place Market.

The ball club is giving a dance at Clyde's Oriental Gardens on March 30 to arouse enthusiasm and raise money for preliminary expenses. Two prizes, a radio and a bridge lamp will be given away at the dance.

Three Arrested For Game Violations

Three men were arrested and fined last week in justice court for possessing elk meat in violation of the game law.

Jasper Butler, arrested by Fred Rice, was given a sentence of $500 fine or six months in jail. Eugene Kilmer and H. L. Hansbury, arrester by Fred Binkie, were given a fine of $250 which they will serve in jail at the rate of $3 per day.

Rice and Binkie, the arresting officers, are state game protectors. The men were sentenced by Justice Fred Filion, Saturday.

Progressive Demos Will Meet Monday

The Progressive Democratic club will hold its regular meeting next Monday evening in Eagles Hall, and a live and interesting program will be presented. The first meeting of the newly formed Townsend Club will be held at the same place, and members and friends are urged to attend.

Local Scouts To See Original Organizer

Through the courtesy of the U. S. Coast Guard, twenty-five local boy scouts will be given an opportunity to see Chief Scout of the World, Lord Robert Baden Powell, organizer of the Boy Scout movement.

The famous Englishman will stop over in Seattle to attend the annual Scout Circus, to be held here April 8 and 9. Lieutenant Commander J. E. Whitbeck, commander of the local coast guard base, in a letter to H. B. Molchoir, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, informed local scouts that the Coast Guard would furnish transportation to the Scout Circus for twenty-five Port Angeles Boy Scouts. The boys will leave here April 8 at 3 a. m. on a 75 fot patrol boat and arrive home the next day at 3 p. m.

Baden Powell's brief Seattle stay is his only American stopoff and may be his last visit to America. Past seventy but still the active leader of scouting, he is on his way through Canada to Australia for the Australian Jamboree which will be held this summer.

U. S. Civil Service Sends Out Warning

WASHINGTON, D. C.—1935—The United States Civil Service Commission says that numerous letters received at its office from different parts of the country indicate that misleading information is being given to the public by agents of some of the correspondence schools which give instruction in preparation for civil-service examinations.

To guard against the loss of money paid for tuition of this kind, the Civil Service Commission informs the public as follows:

No one can promise appointments to positions for which the United States Civil Service Commission holds examinations. The claim that such assurance can be given brands the person making it as a fraud.

Information regarding examinations for the United States Civil Service may be obtained from the Boards of United States Civil Service Examiners. There is such a Board in each community which has a post office of the first or second class. In nearly all cities the civil service board is located at the post office.

Before paying money for tuition, or signing a contract, it is advisable to make inquiry concerning the prospect of examinations. There is reason to believe that agents of some schools deceive the public as to the probability of early examinations.

No school has advance information regarding the need for employees or the probability of examinations.

Our Motto: A Fearless Presentation of the Truth, With Fairness to Everyone

THE TOWNSEND PLAN: A REMEDY

This nation is facing a crisis—socially, economically and politically.

The Old Deal miserably failed and was discounted and forever discarded.

The New Deal was swept into power and the Congress gave President Roosevelt blanket authority to execute the New Deal plan for recovery. There were no strings or restrictions.

After two years of experimenting, huge expenditures and re-organization of every department of our whole industrial system, the nation continues its uneasy course in the depths of depression.

The costs of living are mounting and the relief rolls are growing. The burdens of government are multiplying and the masses are now restive under conditions considered intolerable to a free people.

Without any semblance of disloyalty to the administration of President Roosevelt, we suggest that since the proposed plans for recovery have not worked out as expected, and since the chief aim of the administration is the return of prosperity and the recovery of business, why not try the Townsend Old Age Pension Plan as a recovery measure—fix a time limit as in the case of the other recovery measures, and if it doesn't work out it would automatically pass out. We challenge the politicians to give it a chance to demonstrate its efficacy to remedy the ills—social and economic—which now afflict the nation.

The Townsend Old Age Pension Plan would do at least three things which would lift the nation out of the depression within 60 days:

1. It would release more than a billion dollars per month in liquid purchasing power through the trade channels of the nation. This purchasing power would not be seasonal or spasmodic, but continuous under the Townsend plan. It would be regular, certain and fixed in amount and time. It would release a tremendous stream of legal tender—in other words, it would put money into circulation and keep it in circulation.

2. This increased and regular demand for commodities, goods, and services, to be paid for in cash, would start the wheels of industry humming to supply goods to meet the demand. The manufacturer would enlarge his plant, double his shifts and work overtime to keep up with the growing demands of the public. This would not apply to any particular line, but to every line of industry.

3. When the money starts flowing—the people spending—the manufacturer starts making goods, and this will call for workers, so that every available man will be given a job. If the goods are moving and sold for cash, the manufacturers will pay high wages and give steady employment. It doesn't take Solomon to see that these are the three main difficulties in our present situation.

We suggest that the United States Government pay the pension by the issuance of treasury certificates, which will be serially numbered and dated, so that if the pension money is not spent within a given period, it is null and void. This would prevent hoarding and would prevent the financial shysters from grafting. This money would be printed by the Government and secured by the credit of the country. Why should the bankers be permitted to dip into the treasury of the United States, and fill their filthy coffers with the interest charges of billions of dollars annually? This country belongs to the people who pioneered, suffered and slaved to lay the foundations of a commonwealth of nations, "dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal," and in no sense belongs to the financial oligarchy which has brought us all the misery and distress we now have, and who would continue to plunder and exploit the people. This is the chief reason why this group is concentrating its fire on the Townsend plan, and brands all those who believe in it as crack-brains, silly and fantastic. The people will not be fooled for much longer. The light is breaking and the new day is dawning.

We wish to utter a word of warning to the politicians who lend their ears to the voice of the masters of Wall Street and turn a deaf ear to the pleas of the common masses who have borne the burdens of our unjust economic system almost to the breaking point.—C. L. V.

WE WANT TO KNOW WHY

We have no axes to grind and no political ambitions to satisfy. We want to serve the public and make this paper an open forum for the masses. Therefore, we most respectfully ask those gentlemen who were sent to Olympia to represent us in the Legislature the following pertinent questions:

First: Why was it necessary to fritter away about 40 days of the 60-day session on non-essentials and then undertake to formulate and pass the major bills in the final jam which always overtakes the Legislature? Was it a lack of leadership or too much leadership? It seems a sorry spectacle to the average voter and taxpayer to see a group of men loafing on the job when it costs the state about $5.00 per minute for the time they are there.

Second: Why did our representatives promise the people prior to election that they WOULD NOT vote for a general SALES TAX, and then go down to Olympia and vote for one of the most vicious and unmitigated SALES TAX bills that ever came out of a legislative hall? Were these vote-seeking politicians playing with the people, or were they yielding to political pressure?

Third: Why did our representatives at Olympia pile up the cost of government to previously unknown figures? In 1929 the total cost of government in this state was set at $85,000,000, a new high at that date. In this year the biennium cost is set at $131,000,000, an all-time high mark. This shows that the average cost of government for the past five depression years has increased $9,000,000 per year, a total increase of $45,000,000. Where is the economy that was so glibly promised the trusting public? What departments have been consolidated and reorganized? What public payrolls have been lopped off?

Fourth: In the INIQUITOUS SALES TAX bill why did our representatives discriminate between the small business man and the poor devil who is trying to keep off the relief rolls by taxing their GROSS business, while the corporations and banks were taxed on their NET income?

The SALES TAX bill, after wild bedlam and jargon, which held the Legislature in session six days overtime was thrown into the lap of Governor Martin, and he signed it, but in his generosity he vetoed the chain store tax and excluded cosmetics from the list. It was a master stroke, but we wonder if the chain store tax clause was vetoed for the reason given by the Governor.

It now resolves itself into something like the following proposition: We may eat white bread, drink raw or canned milk, eat carrots and potatoes, butter and cheese, and powder our noses without the added tax. If we eat a doughnut it will cost us extra. Well, we never cared for doughnuts anyway.

We do no hesitate to say that this TAX RAID on the great masses of our people will obscure any other good thing which the 1935 Legislature accomplished while they were in Olympia 66 days. With a rising cost of living and no corresponding increase in revenue and wages, it simply means that the scant living many people now have will be thinner while the public is asked to dig up $65,000,000 per year for the tax grabbers—and for what?

The TAX MONSTER will also add another army of men to the public payroll, who will snoop and pry into the private affairs of the citizens of this state, until the free-born American citizens balk and refuse to submit to it. We believe in adequately supporting an efficient government, but we denounce these wholesale tax raids on the people who are burdend to the breaking point, as pointing toward disaster and collapse of our representative form of government unless the people rescue their rights from the politicians who seek nothing beyond their own emoluments. May God save the day!

The double-taxing, triple-taxing, discriminatory so-called revenue bill is a challenge to every free-born citizen to rise up in revolt against it. Those who are responsible for it should be prompty and definitely repudiated by the voters if and when they offer themselves for office again.—C. L. V.

OUR TROUBLED WORLD

Serious-minded people cannot escape the conviction that the nations of the earth are passing through a tragic and perilous period. Threat of war and economic fear grip the minds of men everywhere. Darkness deepens on the plans and hopes of men, and we are forced to ask: Where is the hope of humankind? It seems to us that the solution can only be found in an earnest and humble return to the God of all the earth whom we have forsaken. The world needs a mighty spiritual purging of its sin and sordid selfishness and no man-made expedient will suffice. There must be the regenerating and cleansing power of God made manifest in a consuming passion for righteousness, truth, justice and right living among all men.—C. L. V.

Editor Clallam County Journal:

I see in the Clallam County Journal where the Washington State Bank pays a dividend. It brings me back to 1925. I was working for the Oxanford Brothers. I hadn't drawn any money for some time, and had a stake coming which I could draw any minute by asking for it. I also had a deed in my pocket which I paid the President of the Washington State Bank Twelve Hundred ($1,200) Dollars for. I stepped into the Washington State Bank and asked for a loan of $100 for three days. I was told to see Mr. Hansen. I told Mr. Hansen I wanted a loan of $100 for three days. Mr. Hansen put his thumbs in his suspenders and turned his back on me and said, "Huh, not today." I started to walk out and Mr. Hansen grabbed me by the shoulder and as I turned around he said, "What have you for security for a $100 loan?" I said, do you think I would ask a skunk like you for a nickle without security? Mr. Hansen said, "Don't get mad Martin, I will let you have the $100 out of my own pocket.

I walked out and went to the First National Bank, walked in and to Mr. Jensen, I want a loan of $100. Mr. Jensen said, "All right, glad to oblige you. What have you for security?" I told him what I had and he said, "Your security is good. I shall make a note and have you sign it." Just then Mr. Dun, who was listening, stepped up and handed me $100. I told Mr. Jensen I was obliged to him, just the same, and he said, "We always have money to loan to the public on good security." Say, he never said a word about certain people. Compare the two banks today, and you will see the bank that deals with certain people is busted, and the bank that deals in good security and with the public is doing a big business. So, if you start to deal with the public and favor certain people you will go broke. If you get elected on election day by the public and then do as certain people want you to do, next election day you won't be elected. If you publish a newspaper in Port Angeles to suit certain people, the Clallam County Journal will have your scalp in a short time. The Journal is the first newspaper I have seen in 20 years that gives the workers a break in Clallam County. You must remember that times have changed, and the working people have started to vote. Money can't elect you next election, neither can certain people. It takes the public to elect you. Mr. Welsh cries in the "Rare-Bits" about the NRA, grand jury, the relief work and has shed many bitter tears over the Grand Coulee dam, but it doesn't appeal to the public, and it isn't supposed to. It is supposed to please certain people. When you find a man who knows just exactly how to run the whole world, and tells you everyone is wrong but him, why he has a very bad case of "gand-jure" of the brain. Don't mind him with certain people. Let's all go for better times.

—MARTIN DOYLE.

BOLSHEVIKS

With a picture from the P. I. I started out to seek
Those shock-haired, beetle-browed, bushy-whiskered Bolsheviks.
With that picture always with me to guide me on my way
I started in the morning, and I searched the town all day
But not a single whisker did I meet upon the way.
Our town is patriotic, and there's not a Red within
For our men are all bald-headed, and their whiskers are too thin.

Oh! Mr. Hearst how could you give me such an awful scare,
That I shiver in the day-time, and at night have the nightmare?
In my dreams those whiskered demons I see roosting in the trees,
Till the sweat it starts a oozing, and I tremble at the knees,
Then in terror fall a quivering from my bed, and then awake
With the sweat a dripping from me, and my head one great big ache.
Oh! my hair is getting weak and thin
And I blame those whiskered Demons for the misery that I'm in
But still I save those pictures, and and stagger round each day
Searching for those Bolshevikis, but they never come my way
I wouldn't be so frightened, wouldn't be in such despair
If I could find those Bolsheviks, and track them to their lair
Then with Mr. Hearst to guard them, and Forbes and Brisbane too.
I'd cuddle up and go to sleep the way I used to do.
What's getting me so jittery is this terrible suspense
And I can't afford a body guard, for I can't stand the expense,
For my stomach it is empty, and my purse is just the same
And I know from what you tell me that those Bolshes are to blame.
I'm so nervous I could holler, and I'd drop dead upon the floor
If a bushy-whiskered fellow came a knocking at my door.
I am full of fear and trembling, for I'm under such a strain,
And those Bolsheviks will get me if I dare to sign my name.

The highway patrol officers are busy again weighing the truckers.

The truckers were arrested last week and went to trial Monday afternoon. The truckers' lawyer asked the judge if he would set the trial for April 1st. The trial was postponed until April Fool's Day, so somebody may get fooled.

Gov. Martin vetoes the chain store tax. There are hundreds of chain stores in Washington and Mr. Martin sells thousands of sacks of flour from his big flour mills, so you can figure that one out for yourself.

GOOD OLD DAYS

Oh, Give me back the good old days!
I want the simple life,
The care-free times before we knew
Bacteria were rife.
We never boiled the crystal stream
The Oaken bucket drew,
And our pies reeked with germs,
At least we never knew.
But now we boil and bake and steam,
And disinfect and burn;
We wash and spray and shake
And stir
And fume and scrape and churn.
We think it will prolong our days.
No nook or cranny shirk and
Just as every microbe flees,
We die of overwork.

SYNOPSIS

Theodore Gatlin adopts a baby, "Penelope," in an effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But his wife has never wanted her, and their affairs end in the divorce court. Ten-year-old Penelope is given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin. At a baseball game a ball strikes Penelope on the nose and Mrs. Gatlin removes her from the hospital and spirits her to Europe. Gatlin is about to begin a search for his daughter when a motor accident ends his life. Ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt is a rising young psychiatrist. Dan McNamara, chief of police, brings him a patient—Nance Belden, a girl with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" is in part responsible. McNamara does not think she is a criminal and obtains Burt's expert testimony in court. Lanny, the doctor's office nurse, is won over to Nance's cause, but the girl's criminal record outweighs Doctor Burt's explanation of her case and she is sent to San Quentin penitentiary. She escapes, although shot, and goes to Lanny's apartment. Lanny tells Chief McNamara, who orders her to bring Nance to his apartment. One of the men who helped Nance escape has been wounded and his partners take him to Burt's office, where McNamara finds them. He learns that Nance's real name is Penelope Gatlin. Tracing her, he learns from a banker that she is heiress to $750,000. The girl fears McNamara, in his official capacity, and runs away. Lanny finds her, in her apartment, asleep. McNamara aids Nance to escape detectives searching for her. She disappears. McNamara learns definitely that she is living in Paris, having drawn a large sum from her American bankers.

"And that's a seal that'll get by, too." Dan was embarrassed. Lanny was, too—so she took a hasty departure.

The two men stared after her, admiration in their eyes. "A d—d fine woman, that. None finer," said McNamara.

"Why don't you marry her?" The suggestion popped out of Doctor Burt as suddenly as it had occurred to him.

"Now, there's an idea," McNamara mumbled dazedly. "How long have you been mulling it over?"

"Subconsciously, since you entered the office. I caught a gleam in Lanny's eyes—and when she kissed you, the subconscious crystalized into the conscious."

"I'll think it over."

"You'll not think it over, Mac. You'll make up your mind now. And I can get along without her, although the going will be pretty skiddy. But of course she'll marry you if you ask her. Lanny never proffers her friendships or her loves on the half shell. And there's still time, my boy, still time."

"Not if she goes to Paris."

"I've heard of police chiefs securing a leave of absence for six months."

"I couldn't take a six months' honeymoon to Paris, lad. I've saved eight thousand dollars—"

"What? You a chief of police and only worth eight thousand dollars?"

"God help me, boy, I'm honest."

Stephen roared his merriment. "Why, you great jackass, I know that. I wouldn't let every man have Lanny. But don't you worry about money. Lanny is a business woman. She's managed me since I was a boy, and that includes my finances. I'm loaded up with good dividend paying stocks. You know, I could be a mighty good friend to the man who would be good to Lanny."

"I'll consider the proposition," the cautious Celt replied, "although I'd rather be a bachelor than a disappointed lover."

"Tell you what to do, Mac," Stephen advised. "Send her a nice photograph of yourself. If she puts it in a silver frame you may proceed with confidence."

"How will I know, my boy?"

"If it's in a silver frame on the dressing table in her bedroom, it'll be a cinch."

"How'll I get into her bedroom, you blockhead?"

"I'll steal her latchkey and have a duplicate made. Then you can investigate."

McNamara rose and held out his hand. "'Tis a pity, Stephen, my boy, you aren't in my detective bureau. Good night."

The annual parade of the police force was but a week distant, and during that week Dan lived entirely on orange juice and spent his nights in a Turkish bath. As a result he dropped eight pounds off his northern elevation. Very erect and martial he sat on a milk-white charger, while a photographer took several exposures of him and his command.

When the prints were delivered to him, he sent them all to Lanny with a note saying:

"Now that we are both in the same crooked conspiracy, I thought you might be interested in having the latest photograph of the biggest crook of them all."

The following day Stephen Burt sent him a key, and the following afternoon McNamara let himself into Lanny's house and discovered one of the photos on her dressing table—and in a gold frame! Another print in a silver frame appeared in her drawing room.

"Holy Moses!" he soliloquized. "I'm in for it now! God help me, there's no escape!"

CHAPTER IX

UPON his return to his office McNamara found in his mail a photograph of Lanny, indorsed: "To dear old Dan—from his partner in crime—Lanny." While he was gazing upon it and telling himself how little justice the portrait did the beloved subject Stephen telephoned, demanding that he come to the office.

Lanny was in tears. "I've just had another visit from Mrs. Merton, Dan," Stephen began. "It seems that after two years of inactivity, during which time she had elected to believe Penelope Gatlin dead, she has developed a crazy notion to prove it. She wants to get Penelope's fortune."

"You questioned her about her daughter?"

"Yes, but she doesn't know it," said Stephen. "I hypnotized her first and spent an hour questioning her, and it appears that this morning she visited your captain of detectives and asked him to throw out a dragnet to locate Penelope Gatlin. She brought him some snapshots of the girl—told him her real name—all about her money—the girl's habits and peculiarities — everything. When I'd discovered enough to put Lanny in tears, I awakened Mrs. Merton and sent her away happy, but with this command firmly planted in her subconscious mind—she must not think of the name Penelope Gatlin. When I awakened her I asked her if she had an adopted daughter. She replied, surprised, that she had. I then asked her the name of this adopted daughter—and a look of terror came over her face. For the life of her she couldn't think of the name and begged me not to mention it if I knew it."

"It's a pity you didn't think of doing that before she went to the detective bureau with her information," McNamara cried, and called up the Security Trust company.

"The captain of detectives has put Flynn and Angelloti on the case," he announced drearily when he had hung up, "and Flynn has already been to the bank, making inquiries. When he presented his credentials the cashier showed him everything. They'll identify that girl as Nance Belden, trace her to Paris as readily as I did, and the French government will be notified that Penelope is an escaped convict. They will immediately deport her and Flynn will meet her at Hoboken."

"But can't you do anything about it, Dan?" Lanny pleaded.

"Nothing! Flynn and Angelloti are on the trail officially now." He stared at Lanny tragically. "I'm out of the picture now and can do nothing but advise you. Send two cables—one to Nance Belden in Paris and the other to Penelope Gatlin at the same address. Say: 'Come at once — Lanny dying—cable name vessel on which leaving,' and sign it 'Steve.'

"I'll meet her at the dock," Stephen decided. "I'm due in New York next week."

"You'll do nothing of the sort," said Dan. "I'll send that convict in my house." He shuddered and grimaced in his distress. "I could handle the wop with money, but Flynn has sworn an oath! And because I've made a monkey out of him he'll keep it. He'd rather make a monkey out of me now than acquire great riches—and if I'm broke, most likely the captain of detectives will step into my shoes, and Flynn will stand a good chance of becoming captain of detectives. Oh, murderation, Lanny darling, have you a little whisky in the house? I'm faint, so I am."

"You're suffering from heart trouble, you egg," Lanny cried savagely. "Yes! A weak heart, a soft heart, a human heart."

"Send that cable," he roared.

"Yes, get busy, Lanny," Stephen urged. "The bird of time has but a little way to flutter—and the wretched fowl is on the way."

After Dan McNamara had left his office, Doctor Stephen Burt gazed with mild disapproval upon Lanny.

"Unlike you and Dan McNamara," he said, "I dislike having the peaceful tenor of my life disturbed. You and Dan love a fight for its own sweet sake, but I do not. I have a particular aversion to grand jury indictments, and it is a possibility you and your boy friend have let me in for."

"Fiddlesticks!"

"Lanny, I'll be angry with you in a minute. Now, listen to me, and whatever you do, do not talk back. Dan McNamara has run out on us. I mean you. He's through. Dan's rattled. If he hadn't been he'd never have ordered the sending of such a fool cablegram."

"Dan McNamara knows his way about," Lanny defended. "He's more than nine years old."

"So do I. Lanny, it will be highly dangerous to send that cablegram. How is she to know it isn't a message to decoy her back to the penitentiary? If she receives it while she's Penelope Gatlin, she is extremely liable to cable for confirmation before acting on it. That would mean a delay of not less than twenty-four hours. On the other hand, if she is Nance Belden when she receives it, she will leave Paris openly and walk right into the hands of the New York police. I'm not much of a detective, but tonight I'm a better one than that McNamara idiot."

He drew a sheet of paper toward him and commenced writing, while Lanny glowered at him. Presently he sat up and read:

"Grave danger stop beat it some other country traveling by motor stop upon arrival cable address stop if need funds will cable them stop leave Paris establishment going concern stop go out for walk and disappear stop unless these instructions followed you leave trail for persecutors to follow.

"Mac."

Lanny relented. "You might make a detective, at that."

With Dan McNamara definitely out of the fight, Stephen felt lonely and apprehensive. He wondered why the girl had fled to Paris in the face of Dan McNamara's instructions to flee to Lower California, to enter which no passport is required. He asked Lanny.

"Oh, that's no mystery, Stevie. I brought home from the office, intending to show it to Dan, an article by a celebrated plastic surgeon of Paris. Penelope read it with great interest. She went to Paris to consult this French plastic surgeon and also to have samples of her new nose drawn by a competent artist."

When the captain of detectives called in Detective Sergeant P. Flynn and related to him the tale told to him by Mrs. Rudolph Merton, Flynn gave no sign of being particularly interested. Carefully and methodically he arranged in his mind the facts as stated, and when he left the presence of his superior, all he knew was that he was to strive to recover a lost heiress by name Penelope Gatlin, and that she had a nose that should make her recognizable anywhere.

Instantly Something Clicked in His Brain and He Knew He Was on the Trail of Nance Belden Again.

After nine hours of refreshing slumber, Flynn proceeded to ponder the case of Penelope Gatlin of the saddle nose. "I seem to be getting my fill of girls with saddle noses who disappeared mysteriously," he decided lazily—and instantly something clicked in his brain and he knew he was on the trail of Nance Belden again. An heiress, eh? McNamara had hinted at powerful influences back of Nance Belden, and she certainly must have hired the expert help she had had in her escape from San Quentin penitentiary.

"McNamara knows who she is," Flynn decided. "He's getting his—in chunks—for helping her. I'll bet it's the same girl."

Employing identically the same means McNamara had employed, he traced Penelope Gatlin to Paris within three days. But he had now to prove that Penelope Gatlin and Nance Belden were one and the same person, so he interviewed the United States marshal, who secured for him one of the girl's passport photographs. Armed with this, Flynn crossed the bay to San Quentin.

"Is that Nance Belden?" he asked the matron.

"That is Nance Belden," was the reply.

Flynn was somewhat irritated. He knew Penelope Gatlin was at 27 Rue St. Honore, Paris, but he did not know that Nance Belden was! Suddenly it occurred to him that he had had an official interview with everybody connected with this mysterious case, except Dr. Stephen Burt.

"You're a long time getting around to see me, Sergeant," Stephen charged, and indicated a large, comfortable armchair.

"I called on you once, Doctor, but you didn't know it. That was the night after Nance Belden escaped from San Quentin. Me an' my partner trailed you to the chief's house."

Flynn, with great deliberation, produced Penelope's photograph.

"Do you know the lady?" he queried.

"I think I do, Sergeant."

"Who is she?"

"Is there any reason why I should express an opinion?"

"Not unless you choose to be good-natured. I suppose you know you're in Dutch for aiding and abetting an escaped convict."

"Well?"

"Naturally we don't want to make the going hard for a man of your standing," Flynn continued.

"Dan McNamara is my friend."

"Well, Mac is out of it. He can't protect you because he must protect himself. It might interest you to know that Nance Belden and a lost heiress, Penelope Gatlin, are the same person, and I have the Paris police watching her right now."

"Are you quite certain the girl is still at that Paris address?" asked Stephen.

"I know it."

"I know she isn't—and the Paris police do not know where she is."

"Do you?"

"No, but if I did I wouldn't tell you."

They looked at each other searchingly, then both laughed. "I see there ain't much use pumpin' you, Doc," Flynn admitted. "Well, a fellow can't be ruled off for trying."

"When were you to see a doctor last?"

"At the age of twenty-two. Why?"

"How old are you?"

"Forty-two."

"Well, just to prove I'm friendly I'll give you a quick physical examination. It may save you a fee later from some other physician. Mind if I give you a quick look-see?"

"Go to it," said Flynn.

Stephen tested Flynn's heart action and lungs and took his blood pressure.

"You're up thirty-six points," he told him.

Flynn was distinctly perturbed. "What does that mean?"

"It means that you have a fairly well developed case of hardening of the arteries. If you were to be reexamined physically, for promotion, you might be retired on pension."

"I couldn't afford that," cried Flynn. "I've got a wife and five children."

"Nevertheless, I would suggest you apply for a six months' leave of absence and have me treat you. How's your eyesight?"

"Grand," P. Flynn mumbled.

"I doubt it, Sergeant. I'll bet you a hundred dollars you cannot look into this little mirror fifteen minutes without averting your gaze. Want to earn the hundred?"

"I can't afford that much of a bet, Doc."

"Well, then, we'll not bet, but if you can I'll give you a hundred dollars."

Stephen produced a hand mirror and held it two feet in front of Flynn and about six inches above the level of his glance. He took out his watch. "Go!" he said. "And remember I'm watching you. If you get through this test successfully there's hope for your arteriosclerosis."

P. Flynn grinned and gazed. In three minutes the effort oppressed him. Stephen's voice reached him as from a distance.

"You are going to sleep, Sergeant. You're going to sleep, I tell you—to sleep."

"I'm not," Flynn protested drowsily, just as his eyes closed and his head fell forward on his breast.

Stephen's soft hands stroked the detective's brow. "Why did you call to see me?"

"To get you to identify the photograph," Flynn's voice was faint.

"Why was that necessary?"

Flynn hesitated, struggled a little, but lay back quietly again as Stephen's facile hands resumed their light massaging. "Are you going to oppose me, Sergeant?"

"No, Doctor."

The tones were dead and lifeless, for Flynn slept a hypnotic sleep.

"Why was it necessary that I should identify the photograph?"

"I've got to know before I act, Doctor. The matron at San Quentin says it's Nance Belden, but the photograph is on the passport of Penelope Gatlin."

"That name, Penelope Gatlin, is bad luck," Stephen warned. "Never repeat it to a human soul. If you do it may mean your death. And your oldest child will be kidnaped, tortured and killed."

MEDICAL SOCIETY HAILS VITAMIN E AS SEX FACTOR

Vitamin E, whose alphabetical brothers can make you crave a steak or bring sunshine into your life, soon may be the means of pre-determining sex.

The Illinois States Medical society has announced that the lowly vitamin, plentiful in the oily substance of wheat, appears from "the most ethical laboratory experiments" to have strange powers of determining whether an unborn child will be a boy or a girl.

Research has shown that mother rats give birth to males and females in direct ratio to the sparse or overabundant supply of vitamin E in the diet, it was explained.

"Apparently hypo-vitaminosis, or sparse supply, in the case of vitamin E tends to produce male offspring just as hyper-vitaminosis, or an abundant supply, tends to produce females," the journal said.

An experiment in England was reported, in which two women unable to bear children were treated with the vitamin and each gave birth to a child.

The society also claimed that research has shown that children born to mothers treated with the vitamin are more intelligent than "those just born."

"It seems clear that undoubtedly the obstetricians, by supplying vitamin E liberally to expectant mothers, have a great opportunity to enhance the child's capacity for learning," it was pointed out.

Environment and Mentality

From the writings of Sir Walter Scott, J. F. Rogers has gleaned the following quotation, "As for mind and body I fancy I might as well inquire whether the fiddle or the fiddlestick makes the tune," and from this he takes his title, "Fiddle or Fiddle-Stick," for an article in Hygeia Magazine.

He says in the article, "If a group of school children who are, on the average, physically and mentally superior to their fellows are studied as to their origin, it will be found that, on the average, they come from homes where there is more and better food, better air, more sunshine and more sources of interest than do their fellows. On the other hand, the children with smaller and more defective bodies come, on the average, from homes where the sanitation is relatively poor and where they receive inferior physical and mental attention."

Few Couples Celebrate Their "Golden Wedding"

Once in a while we read or hear of some couple celebrating their golden wedding anniversary. Despite the fact that the American life span has been extended golden wedding anniversaries are becoming fewer and far between. Unless they marry very, very young, the chance that a couple will live to celebrate the fiftieth wedding anniversary together (the large number of divorces not being considered) is about one in six. A New York life insurance company has recently released some interesting statistics on this subject. If a couple is married when the bride is eighteen and the groom twenty-three, they have a one to four chance of surviving to their golden wedding day. When they join up when the bride is twenty-two and the groom twenty-five, the chances are one to six. And those marrying after thirty-six, the figures show, have no right to expect a golden wedding at all. But 93 out of 100 couples can expect to enjoy their tenth or tin wedding together, while 777 out of each thousand couples can expect to see and celebrate their twenty-fifth or silver wedding anniversary.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Wagner Visions New Labor Risings Unless Rights Are Protected

He Tells Senate Committee Employers Have Shattered Labor Provisions—Labor Board Prevented from Enforcing Its Rulings.

New Bill Clarifies Section 7-A and Extends Its Scope—Outlaws Company Unions—Bans Unfair Practices—Gives Board Power to Enforce

Washington—Convincing arguments for the speedy enactment of the Wagner Labor Relations Bill as a method of coping with increasing industrial discontent were presented to the Senate Committee on Education and Labor by Senator Wagner himself, the author of the measure, at the opening of the hearings.

SCOPE OF THE ACT

In explaining the bill Senator Wagner pointed out that its main provisions re-enact Section 7-A of the Recovery Act in clarified form, and make it of general application to all industries affecting commerce, rather than merely to codiffied industries outlaw the company-dominated union; firmly establish the principle of majority rule; center the protection of all collective bargaining rights in a permanent and independent National Labor Relations Board, with power of subpoena and investigation, and to issue cease and desist orders against violations enforceible in the federal courts; and provide that the activities of the various industrial boards in handling cases of the 7-A type shall be subject to the supreme national board entrusted with final administrative interpretation of the law.

SECTION 7-A SHATTERED

Declaring that the opposition of certain employers to Section 7-A had been so successful that its guarantees to the workers were completely shattered Mr. Wagner said this action "is unjust to employes who have seen what was handed them as a new charter being treated as a meaningless gesture." He added that it was "unfair to the vast majority of employers who are anxious and willing to obey the law, and who are faced with the destructive competition of those who seek to gain advantage by disobeying it."

BOARD DECISIONS DISOBEYED

Stressing the necessity of clarifying Section 7-A, which he said had broken down, Mr. Wagner asserted that the National Labor Relations Board and other labor boards had been drastically blocked in their attempts to secure adequate enforcement of that section. He said that of 68 decisions made by the National Labor Board, 43 had been disobeyed, 21 had been sent to the Recovery Blue Eagle and only one of 19 cases sent to the Department of Justice had been taken into court.

ELECTIONS BLOCKED

He also pointed out that the authority of the National Labor Board to hold elections to choose representatives for collective bargaining had been so beligerently fought by anti-labor employers through resort to the courts that only two elections out of eight had been held. He emphasized the fact that although Congress in enacting Resolution No. 44 last summer guaranteed the right to hold elections for collective bargaining representatives by employes of the iron and steel industry, the big corporations in the industry were so unified in opposing the plan that the National Steel Labor Board had been unable to hold even one of the elections it had recommended.

Multiplicity of Enforcing Agencies

In addition to the National Labor Board there were 13 other boards, Mr. Wagner said, delegated to handle cases coming under Section 7-A. Moreover there were 103 codes of fair practice which provided for the establishment of industrial boards. He declared that confusion was the only result of having several hundred boards authorized to interpret and administer the same law. This multiplicity of enforcing bodies was completely remedied by his bill, which set up the National Labor Relations Board as a separate and independent body with exclusive enforcement powers to handle every case coming under its jurisdiction.

Remedy for Industrial Discontent

Pointing out that the rising tide of industrial discontent was poignantly demonstrated by reliable statistics which showed that of the "812,137 workers who were involved in the strike during 1933 over 17 per cent walked out during the second half of the year," and that "in 1934 the number rose to 1,277,344." Mr. Wagner added:

"Our alternatives are clear. If we allow Section 7-A to languish, we shall be confronted by intermittent periods of peace at the price of economic liberty, dangerous industrial warfare, and dire depressions.

"On the other hand, if we clarify that law, and bolster it by adequate enforcement agencies, we shall do much to round out the program for a balanced economic system founded upon fair dealing and common business sense.

"The latter course is chartered by the National Labor Relations Bill."

RIGHT TO ORGANIZE

Mr. Wagner asserted that his bill reaffirmed the right of workers to organize in labor organizations, bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and carry on the concerted activities normally connected with trade union work.

Unfair Practices Prohibited

The unfair practices section, he said, prohibited employers from interfering with the right of employes to organize and bargain collectively, from dominating or interfering with the formation or administration of labor organizations and from using discrimination to either encourage or discourage membership in a labor organization. This last prohibition was designed to outlaw the company-dominated union. The National Labor Relations Board, which the bill sets up, was given exclusive jurisdiction to prevent employers from applying the inhibited practices.

ELECTIONS GUARANTEED

To implement the machinery for collective bargaining which has been broken down in the administration of Section 7-A by court procedure resorted to by anti-labor employers, Mr. Wagner stated that his bill gave the National Labor Relations Board complete power to hold elections for the choice of collective bargaining representatives with the courts barred from interfering.

Majority Rule Is Not New

He also pointed out that the majority rule in collective bargaining procedure, provided by his bill, was not new, being incorporated in President Roosevelt's executive order creating the National Labor Board and envisioned in Public Resolution No. 44 by authority of which the present National Labor Relations Board was established.

In concluding his argument, Mr. Wagner said:

WILL BENEFIT EVERYONE

"I am sure that this review of the proposed legislation and its purposes will make people wonder why it has caused such opposition in some quarters.

"It has been branded radical by some and ultra-conservative by others, but every one of its principles has been sanctioned by a long train of laws of Congress.

"It has been called inopportune and hasty. But is it not time to act upon the ominous industrial disturbances of last summer, when blood ran freely in the streets and martial law was in the offing?

"Is it not time to note that during the last half of 1934 and the first month of this year almost three-fourths of a million workers were sent back to their jobs or kept from leaving them by the National Labor Relations Board and its regional agencies?

"The new law will apply the healing balm of an upright, impartial and peaceful forum to industry and labor, and thus will benefit employers, workers, and the country at large."

Before the Announcer proceeds with this program, I advise we be as liberal as Mr. Vaughan, the publisher, subscribe when possible for one year for the paper, and read the ads and patronize as much as possible, the merchants who run their ads in this liberal and progressive paper. There will be girls soliciting subscriptions fo the Clallam County Journal soon. Treat them with courtesy and give them a dollar for one year's subscription to this progressive paper. Through our support for the Clallam County Journal it is made possible for labor to have space granted for our use or mis-use as we see fit.

Come let's make the labor page a page people will turn to and read. Let's make it both educational and entertaining. We have not yet appreciated the paper and the opportunity we have.

So my fellow citizens, another week has passed. All is quiet, yes, very quiet. In our state and our Longshoreman local. Our Senators and Representatives have gone home and the Longshoremen haven't had time, since we have a new dispatcher, to start a good squabble and it is still another week before our meeting, but there is always something to take the job out of life. There are a few horrible United States Senators and Representatives who want to pay their bonuses in real money, not usury money, those horrible greenbacks that have 120,000,000 of industrious people in a continent of natural resources unequalled by any other nation. Back of them we have GLORIFIED A CREDIT SYSTEM, IDOLIZED GOLD AND WORSHIPED A JOB UNTIL MANY OF US HAVE NEITHER CREDIT, GOLD NOR A JOB.

For your education and entertainment, the announcer is going to put in a conversation that took place in a zoo. The characters in this play are the Monk, the big Gorilla, a billionaire and his family, Mr. $ucce$$, Mrs. $ucce$$, and the little $ucce$$', two body guards, and the monk's keepers and trainers.

Mr $. and the Mrs. with little $.' and two body guards were strolling along in a zoo looking over the birds and beasts.

"Look, said Mrs. $., there is an eagle, what a noble bird is he, it is well he is engraved on our coins."

"Yes, said the little $., why is he such a noble bird when he lives on innocent birds, rabbits and even catches lambs, and just think, he sits on a high place around a lake and robs a mother fish hawk that is carrying a fish that she has caught for her little ones, at least, that is what a history book taught me, it seems to me he is a bird of prey and shouldn't be called a noble bird at all."

"Did you hear what she said?" daddy?'" asked Mrs. $.

"Yes, yes, I heard her, she has been talking to some of those kids on the street and you had better see about the company she keeps."

Passing on, they come up in front of a parrot. "Hello," said the polly. Mr. $. talks to the parrot. The parrot was witty, used cuss words and modern slang that she had been taught.

"Wonderful how Polly can talk," said Mrs. $., "Yes," said little $., "She is like a lot of people, even me, they are supposed to repeat words they are taught to say."

Mrs. $.—"Daddy, just listen to this youngster of ours, what are we going to do with her?"

The $. family passed the animals and admired them. Finally they stopped in front of a lion cage.

"Look, the King of Beasts," says daddy $.

"Yes," said mamma, "he looks ferocious."

"He looks like he is able to kill a zebra or most any thing, he may want to attack even an elephant," little $. piped up. "He kills to satisfy his power and hunger for God created him a beast of prey; but why should humans kill one another like they do every day and in time of war?"

"Listen to that youngster, dad."

Daddy gives the youngster a shake and said, "Next time we will leave you home with the Governess."

Passing on they come to the monkeys.

"Oh, look mamma, those monkeys look like humans."

"Yes," said mother, "look at the difference in the way we live in comparison to them."

The $ucce$$ family paused in front of the Monk's cage, the big gorilla. Monk grabs the bars of his cage and shakes them until the whole cage rattles. Mamma clings to daddy and the little $. stands still.

"Mamma why be afraid of Monk, he is in a cage and there is our body guard."

"He is such a horrible beast," says Mrs. $.

"A horrible beast," says Monk, "We are at peace with the world in our native land." " Indeed we must protect ourselves from the beasts of prey, but after all man, you very $. people are our worst fear. The beast of prey, we meet them on common ground, hand to claw, but you men, called man, shoot us at a distance, capture us with your traps and snares, then cage us up for a show, even try to train us to do like you do. Just think of it, you have a wonderful name. How much are you worth Mr. $ucce$$, a billion dollars? How many workers do you employ?"

"Ah, I employ a very few, my money works for me."

"Let's see," says Monk, "you do some figuring for me. How many acres of land will a billion dollars buy at $50 per acre?"

"That's easy," says little $., "it will buy twenty million acres."

"Say one monkey family could live on 20 acres. How many homes would that supply?"

"It would furnish one million homes."

"So you see, Mr. $., four million monkeys could live in peace and harmony on what you claim for yourself and family."

"You see, Mrs. $., the monkey tribe does not slave in their inhabitance, we do not work the child monk or mother monk, so we don't have some with such a wonderful name that you have. We are all free and equal. Then you so-called civilized men shoot us for sport and cage us up for a show. If we monkeys believed in the system you do, I could make a fortune capturing some of you and caging you up for a show."

"Listen," Mr. Monk," said little $., "they would hunt you down as a kidnaped and probably hang you, you see dad's body guards here with us?"

The monkey—Just wait till the keeper tries to get me to act like you folks, you will see what I do to him.

Little $ucce$$—Be careful that you don't hurt him in any way because you will be severely punished. Be careful and goodbye Monk.

P. S. It is indeed a funny business to serve our fellowmen to make so few successful men. Our young people are taught to go out and serve your fellowmen and get into business so someday they will be successful men and raise a family of little $ucce$$', so they too can climb the ladder of success and direct our nation to a grand and glorious $ucce$$.

I. L. A. signing off at 11:30 Tuesday, March 26. Don't fail to tune in on this station next week. Here's hoping for all of you a grand and glorious $ucce$$.—S. E. COX, announcer.

WHO ARE YOU?

Are you an active member,
A Brother and a Pard,
Or are you quite contented
Just to have a "working card"?
Do you attend the meetings
And mingle with the flock
Or do you always stay at home
And criticize and knock?
Do you take an active part
To help the work along
Or are you satisfied to be
The kind that "just belong"?
Do you help your fellow members
To draft things out and plan
Or leave the work to just a few
Who do the best they can?
Attend the meetings often
And help with hand and heart;
Don't be "just a member"
But take an active part.
Now think this problem over.
You all know right from wrong.
Then be an active member,
Not just an "I belong."

MUSICIANS

For the benefit of those who didn't read their last issue of the International Musician, we want to call your attention to the new tax regulation covering traveling bands, it is as follows:

NEW TAX REGULATION

"All dance engagements, single, weekly, or seasonal, played in public dance halls, in auditoriums or halls connected with an institution or amusement resort, and all engagements of whatever kind in hotels, restaurants, cafes, clubs or inns, are considered traveling engagements and the 10 per cent Tax Law of the Federation applies thereto. However, if in a hotel or inn a private function of any society, lodge, association or individual, and an orchestra is engaged for same by the parties giving the function and not by the proprietor or anyone else connected with such hotel or inn, then the 10 per cent Law of the Federation does not apply.

"All laws of the Federations, as well as interpretations, opinions or decisions given in reference to the same subject matter up to March 15, 1935, are herewith set aside.

"All laws of the Federation, interpretations, opinions and decisions in reference to the same subject matter not in contradiction with this rule remain in full force and effect, which includes the law that on all engagements, whether single or permanent, which obliges members to be on the road for six days or longer, they must carry traveling cards.

Although this change does not apply directly to our local, it is a good thing to keep the main points clear in one's mind. The change was brought about by the negligence of the larger locals, to send in the tax on bands coming into their territories.

The next regular meeting of the Musicians Union will be on April 2. Be there.

Thanks to the regular issue of the Musicians magazine, your musical reporter has been able to give you a conception of the Week in Brief. Until next week, Happy Union.

Shingle Weavers

Mr. Andy Bowdish, Ed Muscutt and F. J. Muscutt returned from Aberdeen where they attended the Loggers' and Sawmill Workers' convention, which was held on March 22nd and 23rd.

Mr. Roland Watson organizer for the American Federation of Labor was chairman of the convention. Dad Young, the father of organized labor of the northwest was also present and gave a short talk to the delegates. Mr. Young who is over eighty years old has given nearly his whole life to organized labor and has still retained his fighting spirit made him respected by many of the union haters of the West.

Mr. Muir, district vice-president of the Brotherhood of Carpenters, gave an interesting talk, explaining the conditions under which the Carpenters will take over into their International, all unions in the wood working industry who make material for building. Some of the delegates were opposed to this move but after hearing Mr. Muir explain the situation soon changed their minds. By this move all Federal Unions of Lumber Workers, Shingle Weavers, Timber Workers, Sawmill Workers, Veneer Workers, and the like will be transfered over into the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America. This does not mean that all the different unions will be combined into one union. All locals will be under the jurisdiction of the Carpenters International instead of the American Federation of Labor. This set up should be very beneficial to the unions effected, because it combines them all in one unit but they retain their individual locals.

This transfer of the different locals from the American Federation of Labor to the Carpenters International will become effective April 1, 1935.

At the next meeting of the Shingle Weavers Union, which will be held on Friday night, April 5th, an election of officers will be held. All members are requested to attend this meeting.

Dear Sir and Brother:

This is an emergency call for help in a legislative crisis.

We are making a desperate fight for the preservation of the prevailing rate of wages in every community. Proposals are now pending in Congress for the establishment of a low wage to be paid workers employed under the public works relief measure.

We fear that if such a measure is enacted into law it will tend to

These gentlemen are well known in this section and the final results as given out by them will be beyond dispute. In the event any near relatives of any member of the Advisory Board should enter this campaign, it will automatically eliminate that member from being chosen to make the final count of the votes.

Too Many Lessons for Child Will Work Harm

"Recently I overheard a mother of a tiny three-year-old girl boasting that her daughter had started taking dancing lessons and that she was giving the child a half hour's daily practice at the piano in addition. 'I am so afraid that if I don't start her out while she is young to do all the things I want her to do she will never master any of them,'" Fae Decker Dix recounts in her article in Hygeia Magazine on the evils of overburdening children with extracurricular activities.

"Her words did not make sense to me," she says. "Imagine thrusting such a weight onto a three-year-old child who does not even talk plainly yet, whose whole world is a pageantry of strange loveliness to be explored by the questing little feet, hands and senses! It is enough that the three-year-old child copes with each day's play adventures, learns to obey the parental expostulations and to get along well with his fellow playmates.

"To try to thrust little children into new experiences before they are naturally ready for them is a stigma on parental intelligence. Adults who assume more responsibility in any field than their physical strength warrants show a flagrant lack of prudence. The bill collector will certainly come later in the form of inefficiency and ill health, and his interest takes greater toll than any banker or loan company."

Are Exceptions

Second thoughts, despite the proverb, are not always best.

Lowly Snail Factor in Return to "Normalcy"

The lowly snail, famous for his lack of speed, is hurrying the return of better times in the Hersheim, the Pfalz (Germany) district.

The first Weinberg snail farm in Germany was opened there last year when a wine grower hit on the idea of putting the snails under his grapevines to work.

He found that if they were picked up early in the morning or after a rain and segregated to a special "farm," they could be bred and grown systematically.

The first frost last fall found each snail sporting a new jacket, tough enough to stand the knocking around he got when he was shipped to French markets.

Connoisseurs in France report that the German variety is equally tasty when compared with the best French Weinberg snails, and the result is that other wine growers in the Rhine Palatinate are running successful farms of their own.

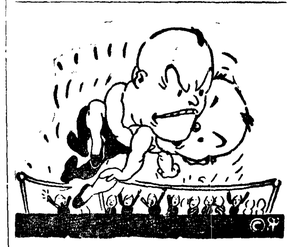
SPORTS HIGHLIGHTS

PORTER LOSES MATCH TO PACIFIC COAST CHAMPION

Before a crowd that taxed the capacity of the Eagle's hall, Ben Sherman, Pacific Coast middleweight champion, battered into submission Tex Porter, pride and joy of local mat fans, Monday night.

HOT DOGS—A STRIKE!

Sherman demonstrated the power and skill that has made him one of the topnotchers in the game. After losing the first fall and having his legs badly twisted by Porter's Indian death-lock, he came back with a rush in the fifth round and smashed the local boy to the mat for a fall with the airplane scissors.



FLYING DROPKICKS DO TRICK

With the count even, Sherman began a vicious attack of flybutts and flying dropkicks that brought him the deciding fall early in the sixth round.

Porter started strong and had a little the best of it in the first three rounds. He went to work on Sherman's legs tying him up repeatedly with keylocks and toe holds. Shortly after the start of the third round he took a fall with the famous Indian death lock. In the fourth round he continued to work on Sherman's legs while Sherman wrenched his arm with hammerlocks. At the end of the round their legs and arms were so hopelessly tangled together that it took the referee several minutes to untwist them.

Like Popeye, Sherman seemed to thrive on the beating he was taking. In the fifth he turned on the heat and took a fall with Jim Browning's famous hold, the airplane scissors. Coming back even stronger in the sixth while Porter was visibly tiring and groggy he began a wide open attack. Porter had no defense against the flying dropkicks and being unable to avoid them, was knocked out.

CURLY WOODS WINS

Curly Woods, Centralia, defeated George Bennett of Oklahoma in the semi-final. Bennett took the first in the second round with a Boston Crab. In the fourth Woods came back strong and knocked Bennett dizzy with shoulder butts to take the fall.

In the fifth round Bennett threw Woods to the mat several times with body slams and then picked him up and whirled him around for an airplane spin. Coming down out of the spin, Woods tangled with the ropes. The Oklahoma boy's knees buckled under him and when they landed Woods was roosting safely on top to take the fall.

Emil Hill, Port Angeles, defeated Scotty Prather, Port Townsend, in the second round of the opener throwing him to the mat with a flying mare.

The show was sponsored jointly by the Eagles and Pulp and Sulphite Workers Union.

personal effects an ninety days undrawn pay.

Moved by advice of a New York spiritualist, his mother, Mrs. Maria Kruse, came West to spur on the searchers. Mrs. Kruse believed that her son was held prisoner in a cave or shack somewhere in the woods. She settled at Forks to stay until her son was found,, and hired a special investigator through the sheriff's office to add impetus to the search.

OTHERS DISAPPEARED

Johnny Swanson, Sapho logger, disappeared shortly after Kruse. He went into the woods suposedly on a prospecting expedition and never returned. Searching parties never found a trace of him.

Verner Bergland, another West End resident, disappeared at about the same time. Although his boat was found floating offshore there was no conclusive evidence to show he had drowned accidently.

Investigators say Dimmell could have killed all three of these men.

A dead cow with its head split open and a bloody wedge and bloody overalls in his cabin first pointed the finger of suspicion at Dimmell. When questioned, he admitted killing the cow, explaining that the spirits had told him to get the liver of a cow and eat it.

Sec. 7. The director of game is hereby authorized and empowered to make all necessary rules and regulations for the enforcement and operation of this act.

Sec. 8. Any persons violating any of the provisions fo this act shall be punished as for a gross misdemeanor, but no fine shall be less than twenty-five ($25) for the first offense, nor less than one hundred fifty dollars ($150) or each subsequent offense nor less than ninety (90) days for each subsequent offense, or both such fine and imprisonment.
