DOTS THAT COME OUT

Do you remember that pretty waist you had made of Dotted Swiss? And half of the dots came out in the wash tub? That is likely to happen with the nicest looking material, unless you know that you are buying the kind that has FAST dots.

OUR DOTTED SWISS

is the kind that is "fast." There may be others but when you buy our Dotted Swiss you can be sure—and only then. By a special patented process the dots are inserted in such a manner that you have to use a pair of shears to get them out. The dots come in several sizes and differently spaced, so when you get a piece of our Dotted Swiss made into a dress, you won't have to count the dots before and after washing to make sure that you have them all.

COAL MINES ARE SOLD

BIG EASTERN COMPANY TAKES CHARGE EARLY IN MAY

Will Employ 100 Skilled Miners and Develop Both Fast Clallam and Freshwater Bay Deposits.

The Clallam Bay coal mines have been sold to a company of Pennsylvania operators, who, under supervision of H. O. Watros as western representative and business manager, will immediately commence operations on a large scale.

Mr. O'Brien, who has been upsound the past week waiting for Mr. Watros, returned home yesterday, the papers having been made out and the deal closed. Mr. Watros expects to be back again by May 15th, having returned east to arrange for the shipping of a diamond drill, and the selection of a force of miners.

Mr. Watros' company mined, with their four colonies at Scranton, over 2,000,000 tons of coal last year, or more than the entire output for the state of Washington. They have long desired to get into the business on the Sound, where high prices prevail and cheap transportation may be had. Their expert's report on the size of deposit, quality of coal, and surroundings, was more than satisfactory, and a large force will be put to work at once. The drill will be used to prospect the deposit at Freshwater Bay, which they also acquired, and in other localities.

Mr. O'Brien will remain with the company as manager of the mines. Bunk houses and other buildings will be erected next week.

The Clallam Coal Co., Messrs. D. J. O'Brien, Wm. Barnett and associates, have a tunnel run, commencing about 25 feet above the straits, back into the bluff a distance of 125 feet. The vein, one of three, has increased six inches in thickness in that distance, being 3½ feet thick and of itself a profitable proposition. Several thousand tons could be mined now, without farther development work.

Of Mr. O'Brien's years of work in this field, work prosecuted in the face of difficulties that would have discouraged a less stubborn man, yet prosecuted with the certainty of ultimate success, a certainty based upon a lifetime spent in the coal mining and prospecting business; of his chancing to discover the old mine by finding a piece of iron imbedded in the bank; of the old workings conducted over fifty years ago, when tunnels and cross tunnels were driven, and two or more ship loads of coal taken out before the manager was killed by the Indians and the works closed; of the filling up of tunnels with fine yellow silt and the slide which covered the face of the workings, a splendid newspaper story might be written. Mr. O'Brien is naturally rather reticent about these matters, but Mr. Barnett has promised us a sketch of the old workings, so far as they have been uncovered, and of the Indian legends concerning them.

Accident with Fortunate Ending.

Albert, the six year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Eacrett of Myrtle, had a narrow escape from death Sunday, being accidently shot with a bullet from a 22-rifle. The ball entered just below the left temple and, crossing above the roof of the mouth, came out on the other side. Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Willson brought him to the hospital. The wound didn't seem to bother him to any great extent, for on the way in, after being quiet for a time, he said: "I'll bet Louie will ketch the dickens." Mr. Willson asked him how far away Louie was when the rifle went off and he replied: "About ten feets." He is playing around the hospital now and getting along nicely.

COLD STORAGE LEASED

E. B. DUDDEN OF SEATTLE WILL RUN PLANT THIS YEAR

Will Commence Operations About May 15th. Is Negotiating for 150-foot Steamer to Buy Fish.

The Craig Fish products Co. leased, on Wednesday, their cold storage and ice-making department to E. B. Dudden of Seattle.

Mr. Dudden, who has been identified with the large fish concerns of Seattle for some seven years, and who thoroly understands the business in all its details, states it to be his intention to commence operations about the 15th of May. He will buy all kinds of fish for shipment in cold storage as well as for preparation by the various methods in vogue, and will furnish ice to the fishing schooners, as has heretofore been done by the Craig company.

Mr. Dudden is also the inventor and patentee of a process for the canning of cod, something that has been experimented with for years, but heretofore without success. He had fish from sample cans served at dinner to Mr. Craig in the Hotel Seattle, and Mr. Craig states he never tasted anything nicer. It is Mr. Dudden's intention to prepare fish in this manner as soon as arrangements can be perfected, and thus lay the foundation for what will doubtless develop into a business of great proportions.

Caught Over Three Hundred.

E. E. Fisher, P. Grubb, F. A. Jensen, J. F. Janecke, and Messrs. Sullivan and Burke of Seattle, made up a fishing party to Camp Fisher on Lake Sutherland this week. Mr. Fisher says the roads are dry and hard, weather never was more pleasant, and fish never more plentiful, taking either spoon, fly or eggs, with equal rapacity. They returned Wednesday morning, Sullivan and Burke taking several fine 24-inch trout to Seattle for exhibition.

Crescent Stage Route.

The Lake Crescent stage route, in connection with the Seattle-Angeles steamers, will be handled by Mr. Chambers this year as usual. The price of a round trip to the lake has, however, been advanced, being $6 instead of $5 this year. Mrs. Chambers will conduct the road house at Fisher's landing, expecting to go out next week to get the place in readiness.

For a Cleaner City.

The Civic Club will hold a Cleaning Day the last Saturday of this month. All the boys and girls are asked to assist; those working from 9 to 12:30 can get picnic dinner in the park and enjoy the afternoon.

THE COMING INSTITUTE

Sessions Will Prove Interesting to Everyone Who Can Attend.

The teachers institute comes next week, beginning Monday morning, April 29, closing Friday evening following. Everything has been done to make the institute a success, and its sessions, no doubt, will prove highly interesting and profitable to teachers, parents and others interested in the education of the young.

The talks on "Present Tendencies in Methods of Teaching," "Incentives of Study," "The Story as a Factor in Moral Education," "Books Worth Knowing," Teaching of Manners and Morals to Children," by Prof. F. H. Swift of the State University, cannot fail to interest parents as well as teachers; while all lovers of literature must be delighted with Prof. Daggy's daily lectures on "The Defenders of the Constitution," "The Body and Voice in Reading," "Current Events," "The Lyric in Literature," and "Julius Ceaser."

Among the special features promised for next week, is a nature study lesson, in which a class of pupils will convert raw material into an article of commerce. But it is needless to particularize, so many good things will be presented at the institute that all who attend will find their time profitably and enjoyably spent.

This year's program is gotten up in neat souvenir form, being interspersed with choice selections from favorite poets, and will long be retained as a momento by those so fortunate as to secure one.

The Institute Entertainment.

The musical part of the program is under the supervision of Prof. Wm. A. Lange, and music lovers of Angeles and vicinity know what that means. Prof. Lange never prepares anything in the music line but to please.

Miss Bennett's readings will be a treat to all who are fortunate enough to hear her.

No one can afford to miss this entertainment and concert combined. The best local talent will take part, and, altogether, there will be presented such a combination of good things as to please all.

Tickets on sale at Mathewson's Drug Store, beginning Monday, April 29th.

New Real Estate Firm.

The Chehalis Co-operative Investment Co. is a new real estate firm for Port Angeles, located on north Front street, opposite the opera house. It will be conducted as a branch of a prominent firm at Chehalis, the local representatives being the Lowry Brothers, young men who came from Virginia some 18 months ago, and who cannot express their pleasure in finding so promising a location.

READY FOR CONTRACTOR

ENGINEER FITCH HAS FINISHED LOCATION WORK.

N. P. Can Now Call for Bids Upon Lines from Angeles to Junction City and Lake Crescent.

Engineer Fitch and party of surveyors, of the Northern Pacific, who have been at work in the vicinity of Port Angeles for the past several months, returned to Tacoma the first of the week.

Several preliminary lines were run to Lake Crescent before a satisfactory grade was secured, when final location work followed and that part of the line completed ready for the contractor.

To the eastward, their work ended at Junction City, a more or less mythical point at the head of Discovery Bay, on the Townsend Southern, preliminary lines being run, and final location made from Angeles to Dungeness. About four weeks additional work will be required to finish between Dungeness and Junction City, but as construction will be begun at Angeles, the eastern portion can be attended to later.

A preliminary line has also just been completed to East Clallam, that point having been reached a couple of weeks ago by a second crew. From Clallam Bay southward the N. P. has a preliminary line run in 1901 in connection with the work north of Grays Harbor.

REMOVAL NOTICE

The Angeles Music House, Wm. A. Lange, manager, will move on May 1st to its own building two doors east of skating rink on Front street, where a line of assorted fine Pianos, Organs, Violins, and other small instruments, Edison Phonographs and sheet music will be on sale. We are no agents for any particular manufacturer.

Quality and Price are our guiding points.

It is to your interest to buy from us, either on easy installments or for cash at considerable cash allowances. Most of the pianos, organs, etc., that were sold last fall by Seattle piano houses had to be overhauled by our repairmen at considerable expense to purchasers. Buy from us and save expense and annoyance.

OUR PANNIKIN O' TEA.

Off to the Banks on the Betsy B., with a cargo of salt to wet;
The cod and the hake when they see our wake are glad that we're gone, you bet!
For there isn't a crew from Glo'ster-town that ladies them out of the sea,
Barrel on barrel and flake on flake like the crew of the Betsy B.
That's we!
And our cook sets up the tea.

After a day in the mist and spume, pulling a dragging trawl,
With a dory full, away we pull, for it's aboard, men, all!
The cuddy smoke is away ahead as far as we can see,
And we know it means that cook is primed with a pannikin of tea.
That's he!
At the rail of the Betsy B.

Now all good fishers when you sail 'way off to the Banks so drear,
Be sure you have in your cuddy stores a plenty of wholesome cheer.
The CHASE & SANBORN kind's the best, as sure as sure can be,
And the skipper's wise who always buys that honest King of Tea.

Three Crews at Head of Hood Canal.

The Call has positive information that three large railroad surveying crews are engaged in running lines between Elma and the southern end of Hood Canal. One of them, which started north from Elma four weeks ago, is known to be in the employ of the Northern Pacific, but the name of the company or companies for which the two other crews are working has not been divulged. It is a pretty safe guess to say that one of the latter is surveying for the Milwaukee's line, and the other one for the North Coast, which is believed to be a Northwestern or Western Pacific project.

The Northern Pacific engineers are now camped a few miles south of the Homa Homa river, while the other two crews are following up close behind.—Townsend Call.

S. A. KEAN'S BID OF $84,080.00 IS ACCEPTED

May Possibly Be Question as to Understanding of Character of Bonds Offered by City.

The following bid of S. A. Kean, a Chicago dealer in municipal and corporate bonds, was submitted to the City Council Tuesday evening, and city attorney instructed to notify Mr. Kean of acceptance:

C. W. Fields, City Clerk,
Port Angeles.

Dear Sir: — For the $80,000 6 per cent Waterworks 5-25 year serial bonds to be dated April 1, 1907, and to be sold on April 22nd, I will pay 105.10, or $84,080, and blank bonds furnished free of charge, the city agreeing to furnish me prior to the delivery of the bonds with the usual legal papers, satisfactorily evidencing the legality of their issue and with satisfactory statement as per enclosed blank. Bonds to be delivered at Chicago. This bid is made subject to prompt acceptance. Yours truly,

S. A. KEAN.

Mr. Kean's reference to "5-25 year serial bonds" brought up the question as to whether he fully understands their character, as, being subject to payment on call, they cannot be so termed. He had been furnished with all details concerning proposed issue, including copy of ordinance, and, in response to inquiry, had been given facts as to assessed valuation of city, and other matters concerning local conditions, and it seems hardly possible that he could have overlooked the fact that the bonds may not, and probably will not, run the full length of time stated.

The estimated receipts from water and power plant, with present population, are $20,000 per year, that figure being based upon income of present water system and expense of running city's electric light plant. Interest would amount to $4,800, and expenses, repairs, and an allowance for emergencies, being placed at $3,000, leaves over $10,000 annually to be applied as principal. The water plant would easily supply a city of 50,000 people, hence in event of rapid increase in population, the increased earnings, which under the law must be used in taking up the bonds, would greatly reduce the length of time they would have to run. This possibility of a short-time loan is considered to be their chief drawback. In all other respects the waterworks bonds are far superior to municipal bonds. Of course, if it be found that the possibility of rapid cancellation would prevent their sale, the yearly net income could be reduced, the greater aggregate sum paid out in interest being offset by the saving in the cost of water.

The deposit of $100, required before consideration of a franchise, having been made by the N. P. Ry., thru T. T. Aldwell, their skeleton franchise was read first time to get the matter before the council and it was decided to take ordinance up at a meeting of committee of the whole Thursday evening.

Check accompanying street railway franchise was ordered returned for certification.

Cemetery committee reported present ordinance to be sufficient, it having been found the city has no right to deed plats therein to lodges or other parties.

Application of D. W. Morse for 10-year wharfage franchise ordered filed; the present franchise expires May 14.

Street committee recommended expenditure of $207.50 on following streets, report being accepted: On Francis, 1st to 2nd and 4th to 8th; Laurel, 6th to 9th; A, 4th to 5th; 5th, A to B; B, 5th to 7th; Oak and Laurel street zig-zags.

Bills allowed: Streets $209; wood $75; oil $6.20; office work $15; advertising bond issue $31; Albright fire $24.

Spring Medicine

The best is Hood's Sarsaparilla. It is the best because it does the most good.

While it makes the blood pure, fresh and lively, it tones the stomach to better digestion, creates an appetite, stimulates the kidneys and liver, gives new brain, nerve and digestive strength.

An unequaled list of cures—40,366 testimonials in two years—proves its merit.

Sarsatabs—For those who prefer medicine in tablet form, Hood's Sarsaparilla is now put up in chocolated tablets called Sarsatabs, as well as in the usual liquid form. Sarsatabs have identically the same curative properties as the liquid form, besides accuracy of dose, convenience, economy,—there being no loss by evaporation, breakage, or leakage. Sold by druggists or sent by mail. C. I. Hood Co., Lowell, Mass.

Mrs. J. F. Gee, 50 Gould Street, Stoneham, Mass., says: "In 25 years experience I have never known Hood's Sarsaparilla to fail, for spring humors and as a general blood purifier; it cures scrofula, eczema; has no equal as a general spring medicine. It gives me genuine satisfaction to say this."

How to Grind an Ax.

To get the best results in grinding an ax we must have a long, thin bevel, says a correspondent of the American Cultivator. To have this bevel usable the tool must be of the best steel, properly tempered. Now to the second point. We say that our bevel must vary according to the hardness or softness of the wood to be worked. Why? Because in an ax the cutting edge simply consists of the middle layer of fibers in the blade; next to them is the next layer, a little farther back, and so on right through.

Thus we can see that the edge only keeps sharp because the layer of fibers lying next to it overlies it and prevents it from beaking away by lending it part of its elasticity. The third layer does so to the second, and so on right through. The harder the timber the shorter the bevel, the softer the timber the longer, in reason. Hold the ax as shown in the second cut and keep the edge at right angles to the stone; travel the blade up or down a little when grinding the corners. Always turn the stone toward the edge; this applies to all edge tools, for two reasons: Turning from the edge will always grind a round, coarse bevel; the points of the fibers are left much more loose and open, thus giving much less elasticity than when compacted together as they are by the stone turning to them. Never grind dry; it heats the steel thereby, as shown by taking the temper out of it. Never grind in the center of the stone, as so many do, with the edge parallel to the stone, as it spoils the stone for grinding and twists the fibers of the steel at right angles to their proper cutting angle. Always give the blade (not the eye) a dip in clean water after grinding.

The blade clean, now take a slip, oil stone or ax stone and gently rub straight across the bevel and then up and down, to rub off any wire edge and to inlock the edge fibers. Make the first rubs the hardest and the last the lightest. The practice so common of giving the edge a few light turns on the grindstone, parallel to the stone, to rub off the wire edge and save rubbing on the finer stone is a bad one even when the stone is a very fine grit, as it disturbs the edge fibers and roughens them up into little saw teeth which soon chew off in use.

Milk Records.

Several methods of estimating yearly records from a few weighings and test have been proposed. The only absolutely accurate way to tell the amount of milk and butter fat produced by a cow is to weigh and test the milk at every milking. Cows vary so much in the amount and quality of their milk from one milking to another, owing to various causes, many of which are uncontrollable, that entirely accurate results cannot be secured by weighing and testing the milk secured at a few milkings and using the results as a basis for estimating the total production for a lactation period or even a month. Many dairymen, however, do not feel they can take the time to secure daily records; nor is this necessary if it is simply desired to obtain a reasonably accurate estimate of a cow's performance at the end of the year. An approximate record is sufficient for comparing one cow with another or for determining whether a cow is up to the profit standard.—C. B. Lane, United States Department of Agriculture.

Plants for Honey Bees.

The plants that serve as forage for honey bees are: For March, the willows, soft maple, elm, alder and dogtooth violets; for April, the above and the June berry, crimson clover, dandelion, gooseberry, currant, apple, pear, peach, cherry, plum and rhododendron, although some years they may not bloom until May, much depending upon the section and climate. During May those mentioned will be re-enforced by the holly, tulip tree, raspberry, persimmon, grape vine, blackberry, alsike, clover, strawberry and white clover. Along in the summer, beginning the latter part of May and the first part of June, the magnolia, cow pea, catalpa, daisy, alfalfa, milk weed, cucumber, melon, sweet clover, corn, buckwheat and numerous flowers keep up the supply until late in the season.

Fertilizing Problems.

Without manure or fertilizer there is no farm capable of producing crops year after year, for all soils must be supplied with that which should take the place of the substances removed during the growth of crops. Plants, like animals, have life, are possessed of organs and vessels in which circulates a fluid, and which, aided by an appropriate nourishment, develop an organic mass in a given time. The most fruitful soil will be that which in the same time will have produced the most considerable weight of organic matter reduced to a dry state. All manure put into the earth should be in a state of humus and as soluble in water as possible, so that the plants can seize upon it and appropriate it to themselves. Manure consists of all the elements of vegetable matter. As soon as it is soluble the roots absorb it and communicate it to the interior organs of the plant, which secrete it in the parts in which it has need to develop itself; hence the more a piece of land is mixed with soluble manure, the more it produces plants and vegetable qualifications, only the consumption of the manure is not the same in all. In order to derive crops from the soil, therefore, the weight of the plant foods added to the soil, either in the forms of manure or fertilizer, should be equal to the plant foods of the crop to be obtained; in other terms, when one wishes to obtain from a field which has no trace of manure a production of given weight it is necessary to carry and place in this field other organic matters produced elsewhere and of an equal weight, or the soil will lose in fertility.

The Hogs' Bath Tub.

Dipping hogs is at best nasty work, and by providing a properly constructed bath tub much, if not all, of this work may be avoided, says the Prairie Farmer. Construct a tank of any width and length you please, just so it is large enough, but be careful not to get it more than 15 inches deep. A good size to make is 5 feet wide by 10 feet long and 15 inches deep, using lumber 2 inches thick and 15 inches wide for the sides and ends, and flooring of galvanized iron for the bottom. Set this in the ground under a shed near where the hogs are fed and fill to a depth of about 10 inches with water and on top of this place half an inch of crude oil.

During summer and fall, and even on real warm days in winter, hogs will gladly use this to wallow in if shut away from mudholes, and it is sure death to lice and skin diseases. The advantage of this tub over pouring the crude oil into mudholes as has been suggested, is that it is more economical and is cleaner, besides being more effective.

Pop Corn.

Pop corn is a good crop to grow, especially if the grower is able to keep it a season or two in case of low prices. Only the white varieties are suitable for market, as most of the corn goes into pop-corn balls, and the nearer white the better, colored varieties being sure to spoil the effect and sale of the popped article. In culture some readily-available fertilizer should be planted with the seed, as the young plants are not so sturdy as the sprouts of other corn. A good start does wonders for the corn. Too much hoeing can hardly be given. The drill system is the easiest and most profitable, and three feet between the rows is sufficient. Rice corn, which is the most desirable of any for planting, can stand thirteen to sixteen inches apart in the drill, and do well if the soil is good. Buyers' demands are imperative and must be met. They are that the corn must be at least one year old, to pop well, and entirely free from mold, staining by mice, or mice odors, free from silk and husks, and in every way sweet and bright.

Our Rival to the South.

The Argentine Republic threatens to be a greater rival of the United States than is appreciated by most persons. Because of the location of the country, the climate is a little less subject to great variations than that of the United States, and all crops that can be raised in this country can be grown in the Argentine Republic with much less risk than here. The cereal crops and cattle-raising are very flourishing, and a very promising market is being opened up in Europe.

Water for Fowls.

In the composition of an egg there is a large percentage of water. We often think that hens in winter are not provided with enough pure water. Without water they can no more furnish eggs than without corn or wheat. It behooves, then, to see that the fowls are provided with plenty of fine water, and that it is not in a congealed form, for it is very hard, if not impossible, for a fowl to partake of it when in a solid form.

Bees on the Farm.

Every farmer should have a hive of bees on the farm, even if he attaches but little value to the honey. The bees are excellent foragers and carry pollen from one plant to another. In communities where no bees are kept there will be found orchards that do not bear, the cause being unknown, while a hive or two of bees in the neighborhood would change the conditions.

One paper figures that at $5,000 a year it will take a man 200 years to earn $1,000,000. It looks as if the only honest way to get a million is to borrow or steal it.

The man who acquires a military title by serving on the governor's staff, or being an old-time auctioneer, is more particular to be addressed by that title than the man who served in the war.

CATARRH BLOOD DISEASED AND SYSTEM DISORDERED

Catarrh is not merely an inflammation of the tissues of the head and throat, as the symptoms of ringing noises in the ears, mucous dropping back into the throat, continual hawking and spitting, etc., would seem to indicate; it is a blood disease in which the entire circulation and the greater part of the system are involved. Catarrh is due to the presence of an excess of uric acid in the blood. The Liver, Kidneys and Bowels frequently become torpid and dull in their action and instead of carrying off the refuse and waste of the body, leave it to sour and form uric acid in the system. This is taken up by the blood and through its circulation distributed to all parts of the system. These impurities in the blood irritate and inflame the different membranes and tissues of the body, and the contracting of a cold will start the secretions and other disgusting and disagreeable symptoms of Catarrh. As the blood goes to all parts of the body the catarrhal poison affects all parts of the system. The head has a tight, full feeling, nose continually stopped up, pains above the eyes, slight fever comes and goes, the stomach is upset and the entire system disordered and affected by this disease. It is a waste of time to try to cure Catarrh with sprays, washes, inhalations, etc. Such treatment does not reach the blood, and can, therefore, do nothing more than temporarily relieve the discomfort of the trouble. To cure Catarrh permanently the blood must be thoroughly purified and the system cleansed of all poisons, and at the same time strengthened and built up. Nothing equals S. S. S. for this purpose. It attacks the disease at its head, goes down to the very bottom of the trouble and makes a complete and lasting cure. S. S. S. removes every particle of the catarrhal poison from the blood, making this vital stream pure, fresh and healthy. Then the inflamed membranes begin to heal, the head is loosened and cleared, the hawking and spitting cease, every symptom disappears, the constitution is built up and vigorous health restored. S. S. S. also tones up the stomach and digestion and acts as a fine tonic to the entire system. If you are suffering with Catarrh begin the use of S. S. S. and write us a statement of your case and our physicians will send you literature about Catarrh, and give you special medical advice without charge. S. S. S. is for sale at all first class drug stores.

I had Catarrh for about fifteen years, and no man could have been worse. I tried everything I could hear of, but no good resulted. I then began S. S. S., and could see a little improvement from the first bottle, and after taking it a short while was cured. This was six years ago, and I am as well today as any man. I think Catarrh is a blood disease, and know there is nothing on earth better for the blood than S. S. S. Nobody thinks more of S. S. S. than I do. M. MATSON, Lapeer, Mich.

JAMES HARVEY GONE HOME

Death Came Unexpectedly Within a Few Hours After His Arrival Here.

James Harvey, only son of D. G. Harvey of this place arrived Angelss last Monday from Arizona, and passed away Thursday morning shortly after 12 o'clock, of Bright's disease and pneumonia complications. He had been in poor health for two years and went to Arizona, where an uncle resided, with the hope that he might be benefitted. But that was not to be, and he came here for a change of climate, by way of San Francisco, on a steamer to Seattle.

Mr. Harvey had been expecting his son and went to Seattle on Monday to meet him, not knowing just what day he would arrive. They passed at Port Williams. Telegrams failed to reach Mr. Harvey and he returned yesterday noon, only to learn that his son had arrived in his absence, and had gone to meet his Maker, who gave him. Who can tell of the great sorrow of a parent under such circumstances! Mr. Harvey has the sincere sympathy of all his friends. He had not seen his son for seven years.

James Harvey was born at Carlysle, Ohio, July 23, 1887, and moved with his parents to Angeles. His mother died when he was but four and a half years of age, when he, with his sister Della, was taken to Carlysle, the place of his birth, to make their home with an aunt, where they have since resided, and where James graduated from the High school; and was attending college when taken sick. He was a manly young man of excellent habits, fine physique, and a bright and manly face. Thus, in the prime of young manhood was he taken.

Funeral services will be on Sunday, April 21st, at 11 a. m., at the Congregational church.

The Ben Hur Entertainment.

The "Ben Hur entertainment" given Friday evening by the Twentieth Century Co., assisted by and under the auspices of the Civic Club, was a decided success in every way. Every reserved seat was sold, and every seat in the opera house was occupied. The colored illustrations depicting the life of Ben Hur were very interesting, as also were the moving pictures of the Prodigal Son, the Country School, etc. But by far the most enjoyable part of the program were the solos, "The Holy City," with beautiful illustrations, "When the Rhododendrons Bloom Upon the Hills," words and music by Mr. Cole, sung by Mrs. Cushing, and the Indian girl's song, "Happy Heart," sung by Angeline Ritchie.

Mr. and Mrs. Cole leave in a few days for a tour of the Northwest; they have made many friends during their residence in this city, who will hope that their trip may be limited to the summer months and that they may be with us again "When the Snow Falls Upon the Hills.

Change in Post Office Force.

W. B. Moore, who has come to be regarded as a fixture in the post office, where his quiet and unassuming manner and rapid transaction of the money order and registry business have made him friends only limited in number by the total number of patrons of the office, has resigned his position, to take effect Saturday night, in order to take a clerkship in the Bank of Clallam County. Major Harding has been most fortunate in securing the services of Henry R. Tucker, for three years mail clerk on the Seattle-Neah Bay run, to take Mr. Moore's place. Mr. Tucker is here getting acquainted with his duties and his wife and little boy are expected next Monday.

EXPOSURE

To cold draughts of air, to keen and cutting winds, sudden changes of the temperature, scanty clothing, undue exposure of the throat and neck after public speaking and singing, bring on coughs and colds. Bollard's Horehound Syrup is the best cure. Mrs. A. Barr, Houston, Texas, writes, Jan. 31, 1902: "One bottle of Ballard's Horehound Syrup cured me of a very bad cough. It is very pleasant to take.

WILL YET BECOME UNIVERSAL

Equal Suffrage Gaining Ground in Both America and Europe.

Years ago Garfield saw the woman question "looming up on the horizon larger than the size of a man's hand," and predicted that "some solution this question ere long must find." The solution may still be far in the future, but that it has assumed proportions larger thau any man's hand cannot be denied.

In one form or another the question has been before the 1906-7 legislatures of Indiana, Kansas, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Hampshire, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Texas, Vermont and West Virginia.

It was debated in the Chicago City Charter Convention, and was the subject which aroused the most feeling in the Constitutional convention of Oklahoma.

The California legislature has just voted in favor of full suffrage for women by a vote of 19 to 15 in the senate and 47 to 28 in the house. Many organizations of women had petitioned for the measure, and four out of the five political parties had put a woman suffrage plank in their state platforms.

A few days ago it was the subject of debate in the Italian Chamber of Deputies and at about the same time the Labor party of the United Kingdom in conference at Belfast, Ireland, adopted resolutions favoring the extension of the franchise to adult men and women.

The movement has so far progressed in England that the editor of the North American Review says: "That women will vote at the next general election in Great Britain may now be accepted as a virtual certainty."

Is Class Legislation.

Judge Snell of the Pierce county Superior court holds that the barber law of this state, passed two years ago, is unconstitutional. Carrie Walker kept a barber shop in Tacoma without license, supporting herself and daughter at the trade. Information was filed against her in the superior court. In handing down his decision Judge Snell well said:

"I find for this defendant because the law licensing barbers combines class legislation, and because the barbers are not subject to the police powers of the state. Morals are not peddled with a haircut and are not necessarily part of a shave, and therefore the police have no power to interfere.

Mrs. Sarah Marter.

Funeral services of Mrs. Sarah Marter, who died at eight o'clock Tuesday morning, will be held at residence, 2nd street, between Oak and Laurel, at five o'clock this afternoon. Mrs. Marter, who was 80 years of age, has made her home in Angeles for several years. Ethyl Ebner, her granddaughter, who is attending the University, was here to care for her. O. C. Palmer of Seattle, and Lillian Ebner of Alaska, son and daughter, are here to attend the funeral.

Lecture in Haning Hall.

Hon. Walter Thomas Mills will deliver a lecture on the Economic Class Struggle, at Haning Hall, May 1st, at 8 p. m.

His failure to deliver this lecture on the third of the present month was caused by one of those unavoidable railroad accidents.

The people of Angeles are certainly imbued with a spirit of improvement and progress just at present. On every hand in the residence section new houses are springing up, others are being planned, and many other improvements made. Just watch Angeles grow.

Donald McInnes, while in Olympia recently, was quoted as estimating the Jersey stock in the region of Dungeness at 2,400 head, all high grade or full-blooded. No wonder Dungeness has one of the largest creameries in the state with a product recognized as the standard of quality.

Miss Elly Lawatschek, a teacher very highly recommended by Prof. Daggy of the University, who says her work will come up to the highest standard, arrived Tuesday, enroute to Lake Crescent, being engaged to teach at Piedmont.

Home Quarrels.

The home should never be the scene of a quarrel. A man cannot afford to quarrel with his wife; it is undignified. A woman cannot afford to quarrel with her husband; it is unladylike. Parents cannot afford to quarrel in the presence of their children; it gives them wrong views of life, and weakens their respect for home. Every quarrel leaves an ugly scar, no matter how well it may be patched up. Small differences must occur in every household, but they can hardly be called quarrels. To quarrel with the person who stands nearest and dearest to you is to put a strain on love that in the long run snaps it.

There is no sadder sight than to see two people who have grown so used to bickering that they do it almost mechanically. When a man and woman make up their minds to tread life's path together they should make up their minds to make it as sunny a path as possible, and to avoid all the stumbling blocks to happiness that they possibly can. Marriage is the best thing in the world, but it cannot be improved by quarrels. A quarrel brings out the ugliest, meanest side of a person's nature, and surely no one can find virtue in anything that does that.

Embroidered and lace-trimmed lingerie blouses will be worn, but it is no longer necessary to have always the most expensive sort of waist. For the morning, for instance, with a plain skirt, a decidedly severe model waist has just recently come into vogue. This summer, for tennis and golf, when it is played, the regulation tailor-made bodice will be smart once more, for the stiff cuffs and collar on waists of rather heavy material are so infinitely more sensible than the blouses that have been fashionable during the last few seasons, that its return to favor was inevitable.

The bottom of a silk skirt will be improved by interlining the hem with flannel rather than lining. Crinoline should never be used, as it would cut through too quickly. Heavier skirts that are to be finished with many rows of stitching should have flannel basted on the wrong side as deep as the stitching will be, then skirt and interlining are stitched in rows, having an easy tension on the machine; the hem is then turned up and lightly hemmed down, or if very heavy, sew a bias strip of lining to the raw edge of the hem and sew the other edge of the lining down to the skirt.

Wisdom's Wise Whispers.

Women abuse men merely to appear original and independent.

A man is at his best when he has a purpose in being agreeable.

Men dearly love to be referred to as an authority on odd questions.

The man most austere in business is usually most genial in private life.

A man talks about dress as though he felt ashamed of the conversation.

Men want to be regarded as capable of pointing out the errors of others.

Few women have the capacity for carrying dates and events in the mind.

Women like to talk of the days when they had beaux galore—even if they never had them.

Every woman wants the world to give to her the consideration she thinks belongs to her sex.

When a woman reaches a commanding position she regards marriage as the next best thing.

Bedroom Drapery.

For country house bedrooms that are furnished in colonial style no fabric approaches more closely the old-time dimity, of which our foremothers made their bedspreads, than the fleece-lined or other heavy striped or barred piques found on the modern counter. These materials are used by decorators who are given carte blanche in carrying out their schemes for bedspreads, bureau and stand covers, etc. The edges of all the pieces are scalloped and button-holed or are finished with a narrow white cotton fringe.

"Bonds" for Matrimony.

How manners and customs change in a generation! In talking with Congressman Green the other day, he recalled the fact that his mother and father were married in Massachusetts and his father was required to give a bond of $125 before the ceremony could be performed. If this requirement were enforced at the present time, and every young man who desired to enter the blessed state of matrimony had to prove that he was possessed of $125 spare cash, it is to be feared that many of our young people would have little left to purchase a housekeeping equipment, says the National Magazine. In those old days, they regarded marriage as something more than a pastime, and entered upon it as a real and serious responsibility.

There is much variety in the shape and style of coats for spring.

Madeira work, which is much like the broderie anglaise of last summer, is coming in on the new waists.

For school wear serviceable brown or blue linens trimmed with stitching and a black or red tie are very smart.

Tight-fitting coats, buttoned simply down the front, some rather long, others short, will be worn with severe tailored costumes.

For best frocks for the little girls a fine white material daintily trimmed with good embroidery of valenciennes lace is the very prettiest of all.

Silkier and more attractive than ever are the new cottons, though "cotton" is no longer evidence of their cheapness, for these will make very dressy gowns.

Unique will be the woman arrayed in the latest importation in English suitings, which is a huge check, three inches square, alternating white with some pale color like lavender or brown.

Children's frocks are made of the prettiest stripes and plaids imaginable, linens in rainbow-striped coloring and the most brilliantly tinted small plaids being used, with white embroidery trimmings.

References to Age.

It has come to be a piece of rudeness to question one on age; it is tactful to ignore the delicate subject altogether, and accept what is offered by word of mouth or appearance. Women as well as men are as old as they look and seem these days, these days, and if we can manage to dress in a fashion that has no hint of age about it, we can pass muster among the keenest-eyed.

The Stout and Slender.

Nothing is prettier and more becoming to a fair, slight woman, with a pretty complexion than white; but white gowns must be carefully avoided by her sister of too ample charms. Black is the color for the stout woman, especially if she be of the black-eyed and black-haired type. A black gown will make her look slighter than anything else, while pale blue, light gray and nearly every shade of red will make her "too, too solid flesh" most undesirably self-assertive. A subdued shade of blue, heliotrope and olive green, with black, may all be advantageously worn by the stout woman.

More Woe for Man.

An excited man writing in London Truth, announces with an exclamation point that "it appears that the halo-like arrangement which decorates the women of the time is formed by wrapping the hair around a frame! How much more of their general appearance is created by frame contrivances?" he asks.

The editor tries to reassure him by saying that while man is necessarily ignorant of the secrets of the modern woman's surface composition, this circumstance need not throw him into a panic. Since beauty is but skin deep it may be hinted that it really makes little difference whether that little be of wire, wool, buckram or "rats."

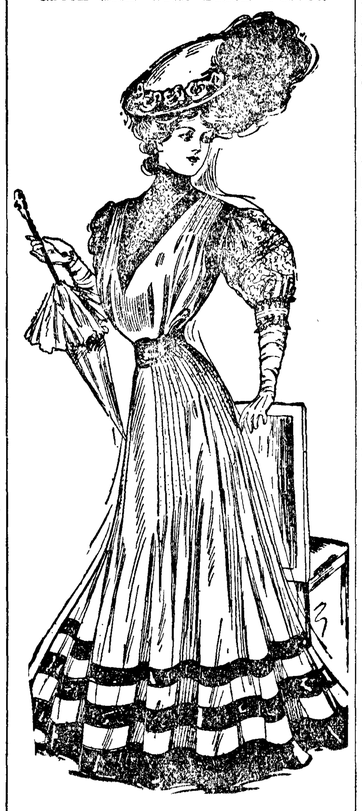
Too Particular.

The overparticular housekeepers should not be too severe in keeping the house in order. Let it be kept clean and orderly, so that no one will suffer discomfort for lack of these things; but it has been observed that "a home is not rightly governed and quite fails in its true mission when conducted in a spirit of combat, even against dirt. Cleanliness does not stand next to godliness when gained at a constant expense of nerves and temper, at the cost of every other comfort."

Keeping Dresses Fresh.

One of the nicest ways of keeping dresses—especially evening ones—fresh is to sew throughout the lining tiny perfumed silk sachets. Any odd bit of silk does for this purpose. Make the sachet about one inch square. Put in a layer of soft white wadding, into which has been sprinkled some sachet powder. Sew up and tack firmly to various places in skirt and bodice. This gives the delicate elusive fragrance to your frock which is rather hard to attain when liquid perfume is used. It also has additional benefit of keeping away destructive moths when the garment is laid aside for a time.

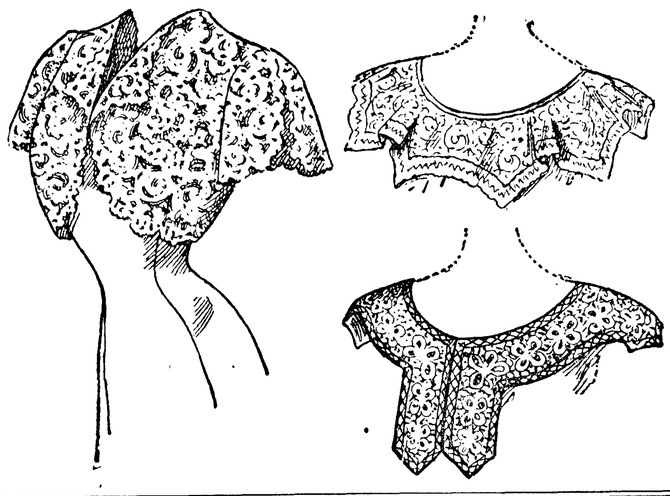
Green Silk with Black Velvet.



Have a Pattern Bag.

The woman who is furnishing a sewing-room will find the pattern bag a necessary article. A simple but commodious one is made of a square yard of green denim, on which are two rows of pockets of the same material and deep enough to conceal the patterns entirely. All edges and the tops of pockets are bound with red tape and brass rings are stitched on at the corners by which to hang it on the door or wall. Each pocket has the name of its contents worked on it in red embraidery cotton—aprons, underwear, coats or shirtwaists.

DAINTY BOLEROS AND BERTHAS.



New Kind of Work for Women.

Some genius has constructed a machine that it is said will do away with the stenographer and the office boy. This machine is partly a phonograph, through which the man talks, and his message is then automatically written out by a typewriter attachment. Well, there is the consolation that it will take women to make the parts of this machine, and possibly the work will be more congenial than the stenographic work.

Woman Kills Wild Beasts.

Mrs. Carl E. Ackerly, wife of the member of the Field Columbian Museum, went with her husband to the wilds of British East Africa, from which they have just returned. Some of the finest specimens of native animals which they brought home were killed by Mrs. Ackerly, who is an expert in the use of the rifle.

Another Prodigal.

A boy who had wandered far away in sin had a praying mother who, despite the years her prodigal had been away from her, persisted in intercession for his conversion. The boy got word one night in the saloon where he was drinking that his mother was dying. He was thousands of miles from home. He had to "rustle" for money to pay his fare back to the old homestead, and when he reached the place in which he had spent his boyhood he found that his mother was dead and laid away in the churchyard. In his agony (for he was repentant now) he went to the old room above the kitchen in which she had been accustomed to pray. He saw the old arm-chair and the rug on which she had kneeled a thousand times in intercession for him, and as he stood, his eyes half-blinded with tears, he fancied he could see the bent form still and the threadbare shawl, and he thought he heard the same sad voice lifted in prayer for him. His frame shook with his sobs. With a convulsive effort he flung himself down at the old chair and wept as though his heart would break. Morning came and found him praying. As the first gray streaks of dawn stole into the room a new joy came into his heart and as he rose from his knees he felt that he had finally, and when too late to tell her, answered his mother's last prayer. The prodigal had at last come home.

A Grateful Pussy's Gift.

Nearly every child is fond of cats, and many own these household pets. A pretty story is told of the gratitude of a cat to a kind friend who helped it in distress.

One day the cate ate some rat poison, and its sufferings were so great that it would dip its paws in water to cool them, though cats are not very fond of water.

At last she went to the lady, and, looking up in a pitiful way, seemed to ask for help. The lady bound it up in wet cloths and gave it medicine and gruel, and took the best care of it until it was well again.

One night after the lady had gone upstairs she heard a meow at the window, and, as she opened it, the cast jumped in with a mouse in her mouth and laid it at the lady's feet.

She did this every day for a long time, and when she afterward caught mice for kittens, one was always laid aside for the lady.

If the kittens tried to eat this she gave them a little pat. After a while the lady would take the mouse and then give it to the kittens, the cat seemingly much pleased to see them eat it.—Detroit News-Tribune.

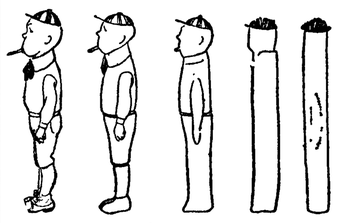
When My Dad Was a Boy.

Wonder why I don't have fun
Like my pa sez he had
When he wuz some one else's son
An' got spanked by his dad.
Pa sez it use' to snow so deep
The houses wuz all hid
Jest in the night when he's asleep—
When my dad wuz a kid.

An' nex' day he'd climb out the roof
Wif snow so high about,
They made big fires—an' that's the troof—
To melt my grandma out;
An' nen, he sez, he tuk his sleigh
Up top a hill, an' slid,
An' slid, an' never stopped all day—
When my dad wuz a kid.

An' nen pa made a big snow-man,
More'n seventy feet high,
Wif reg'lar stairs inside wot ran
Most clean up to the sky.
Oh, golly! wouldn't I jes' shout
To have fun like pa did!
I guess it snowed the snow all out
When my dad wuz a kid!

The Boy Who Smoked.



THE BOY'S EVOLUTION.

Do you know any little boy that smokes cigarettes? If you do, just show him this picture. It is the sad story of little Dick Sillypate. He saw another boy smoking a cigarette, and thought it looked so manly that he could try it himself. The picture shows what happened to him at the end of five months.

They Didn't Bag the Birds.

Two New Jersey boys found a woodcock's nest with four eggs in it, and laid a plan to capture a pair of woodcock as well as the eggs. John was going to place a bag over the female bird while she sat on her nest, Will was going to do the same to the male when he came to take his mate's place on the eggs, and then the boys intended to carry the nest and birds to the barn and see the birds raise their young.

The boys found the female on the nest, and John was about to bag her, when she shot into the brush so suddenly that two little fledglings fell out of the nest. John's shout of surprise brought Will to the spot, but before they could replace the birds, the parent woodcock came whirring through the bushes and darted at the intruders. They aimed at the boys' faces with their sharp bills, and the boys were incapable of defense. After trying in vain to shield themselves, they ran away in a panic. The next day they recovered their courage and stole up to the nest again, but found that the woodcock had taken the little birds away.

Spiritual Need.

George O'Donnell, the actor, tells the following story of his 4-year-old niece, whose mother is the wife of a clergyman.

One night Edith wasn't feeling very well and so was put to bed rather early. As her mother was about to leave her, she called her back.

"Mamma, I want to see papa."

"No, dear," her mother replied, "your father is busy and must not be disturbed."

"But, mamma," the child persisted, "I want to see him."

As before, the mother replied, "No, your father must not be disturbed."

"Mamma," declared her daughter, solemnly, "I am a sick woman and I want to see my minister."—Harper's Weekly.

Quieting Waves.

You have all heard, no doubt, that oil, if poured on the water, has the effect of quieting the waves. The reason is that the oil forms a floating film, which protects the surface of the water from the currents of air. This greatly diminishes the friction between the wind and the waves, just as oil diminishes the friction between solids. It was recently discovered that soapsuds also have a quieting effect on the waves. When soap is mixed with water it greatly increases the cohesive power of the particles and the suds therefore form a thin film, just as oil does, with a similar effect.

Truthful Tommy.

"Tommy," said a father to his son, "have you been at those six peaches I put in the cupboard?"

"Father," said Tommy, looking into his eyes. "I have not touched one."

"Then how is it your mother found five peach stones in your bedroom, and there is only one peach left on the plate?"

"That," said Tommy, as he dashed wildly for the door, "is the one I didn't touch.—Tit-Bits.

Salt a Luxury.

Salt is the greatest luxury known in Central Africa. In some sections among the poorer inhabitants salt is never used. Even among the better classes, a man who eats salt with his food is considered a rich individual. In some tribes where salt is not so scarce children are so fond of it that they may be seen eating it just as our American children would eat pieces of lump sugar.

HANDLING OF YOUNG PLANTS.

Hints Helpful to the Beginner and Those More Experienced.

In the handling of young plants after they have come from the soil you must be guided very largely by the kind of plant with which you are working, says the Housekeeper. If one of the coarse, large kinds, such as the aster, geranium and coleus, they should be transplanted early and should be thinned out as soon as they have made the second leaf, but if of the finer leafed varieties, such as alyssum or ageratum, allow them to grow until they have shown their fourth leaf and do not thin them out until they touch one another. The above are the best rules which can be given covering the handling of young seedlings, of a general nature, as in practice no two kinds of plants are handled alike. The differences are those which are inherent in the plants themselves, and will be plain to every observant person.

As soon as the young seedlings have attained their fourth leaf, or a height of four inches, they will be ready for potting off. This potting is a very necessary thing if it is desired to have them in bud or bloom by the time they should be set out into the open beds or borders. For the pots use the two-inch ones for the finer ones and the two and a half for the coarser ones. The soil should be the same, as far as possible, as that used for the seed flats, or at least be as rich and porous. In the bottom of each pot put over the hole a small piece of broken pot or a stone of suitable size, but not in such a manner as to interfere with the drainage.

Set the pot before you and take the plant in the left hand, holding it over the pot, on which the hand may rest, so that the bottom of the roots will be half-way down in the pot. Sift in soil until the roots are reached, then spread them out on the soil and sift more soil over them until the pot is heaping full. It should then be pressed down with the thumbs until firm all around, and be given a good soaking, and set away in a light, moderately warm place to grow on without any checking. As soon as these pots are filled with roots the plants will need to be shifted on. For bedding stock we shift closer than for others.

MYTHICAL PRIZE OF A MILLION.

Old Yarn About a Fortune Offered for a Nonrefillable Bottle.

The conversation among a number of druggists and ex-druggists the other day turned on the non-refillable bottle. "In some way," said one of the talkers, "no one knows how the myth started—there certainly was no foundation for it—inventors all over the land have got it into their heads that there is somewhere, offered by some mysterious somebody, $1,000,000 for the genius who will devise a bottle that, once emptied, cannot again be filled.

"Every now and then you pick up a newspaper and read that somebody has invented a non-refillable bottle, and his fingers are almost touching that $1,000,000. In recent years innumerable genuises have wasted no end of time—and time, we are told, is money—in pursuit of this ignus fatuus. They are as keen in their chase as the old astrologers were after the philosopher's stone which was to transmute dull base metals to glittering gold, or the later inventor for a machine with perpetual motion.

"Every now and then there have been such cases in Indiana. Some backwods druggist would get in touch with a correspondent and the public would be informed that the discovery had been made, and that John Jones would get a million or more.

"Now, I have been keeping 'tab' for some time on the non-refillable bottle business. For five weeks, week after week, I have scanned the pages of a New York publication devoted to patents and trade marks. In all that time I do not believe a week has passed that I have not found one or more patents issued to inventors of these bottles."—Indianapolis News.

MEMORIES OF THE FARM.

Yes, they still "go to mill" away back yonder, the grain in a bag and the boy on a razor-back horse. Odd, but down on the farm there is always one horse with a ridge-pole back and stumbling hoofs, and the heaves and a fine assortment of ringbones and spavins. And they keep the animal for "the boys" to ride. Think of that, you folks who are not satisfied with a six-cylinder 60-horsepower auto, and then ask, "Why do the boys leave the farm?"—Bushnell, in Cincinnati Post.

A TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE.

How a Veteran Was Saved the Amputation of a Limb.

B. Frank Doremus, veteran, of Roosevelt Ave., Indianapolis, Ind., says: "I had been showing symptoms of kidney trouble from the time I was mustered out of the army, but in all my life I never suffered as in 1897. Headaches, dizziness and sleeplessness, first, and then dropsy. I was weak and helpless, having run down from 180 to 125 pounds. I was having terrible pain in the kidneys, and the secretions passed almost involuntarily. My left leg swelled until it was 34 inches around, and the doctor tapped it night and morning until I could no longer stand it, and then he advised amputation. I refused, and began using Doan's Kidney Pills. The swelling subsided gradually, the urine became natural, and all my pains and aches disappeared. I have been well now for nine years since using Doan's Kidney Pills.

MAY DROP PROJECT

MILWAUKEE DIRECTORS REPORTED TO BE DISSATISFIED.

Possibility that Coast Line May Not Be Completed--Leading Members of Board Opposed to Further Outlay Unless Legislatures Will Be Good.

New York, April 13.—Directors of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road said yesterday that while the company had not decided to discontinue work on the Pacific coast extension, as reported the previous day in dispatches from Chicago, the matter was under serious consideration. It would undoubtedly come before the board, it was said, in the near future and there was a chance that discontinuance of the work might be approved.

The company has no intention of turning the part of the extension already built and the rights of way of the remainder over to any other railroad system, nor, as is well known, is it concerned about money, the recent $100,000,000 stock issue having provided ample funds. The sole reason for considering the proposition, directors said, was the restrictive legislation proposed in several states.

Fought by Its Beneficiaries

"Other companies which have built transcontinental lines," said one of the most prominent directors, "have been aided by federal and state governments. We are encountering hostile measures, even from the states which the construction of the road would most benefit. We believe that the construction of the road would greatly help the people along its route, but, of course, we cannot look upon it altogether as a one-sided undertaking. We must see some profit for our stockholders, and if we are to be deprived of the chance to profit, we cannot in justice to our stockholders go ahead with the expenditure of their money."

The route of the Pacific extension is from Glenham, S. D., to Seattle. Work was begun about a year and a half ago and several millions have been spent on construction. Last year the company bought the Montana railroad, with the idea of using half this line for the extension. The western terminus of this road is close to the foothills of the Rocky mountains. The director above quoted was asked if he thought it good business to have the western terminus of the road in the foothills of the Rocky mountains or to have an occasional disconnected branch running from nowhere to nowhere.

"We will stop construction at the foothills of the Rockies," he repleid, "or at any unheard of spot on the prairies before we will spend more money in an enterprise practically proscribed by the state governments. We see no business in throwing good money after bad."

The directors of the road are: Roswell Miller; J. Ogden Armour, John A Stewartt, Frank S. Bond, Herman S. Leroy, Albert J. Earling, Peter Geddes, Charles W. Harkness, Frederick Layton, Joseph Millbank, William Rockefeller and Henry H. Rogers. The most influential are believed to hold the opinion above quoted.

In railroad circles apart from the Milwaukee, however, it was believed that several of the directors would object to the change of program. Many millions have already been put into the extension, which has long been a cherished dream of the managers of the road, and it was thought that several of the directors would advocate the continuation of the work as more profitable under any circumstances than the loss of the money placed in it.

BRYAN EXPLAINS PLANS FOR GOV'T OWNERSHIP

New York, April 12.—The Wall Street Journal prints a letter from W. J. Bryan, dated at Lincoln, Neb., April 6, giving Mr. Bryan's policy, especially with regard to railroads and their relation to the government. Parts of the letter follow:

"We are not at the end of railroad development, but rather at its beginning, and I feel, as I have always felt, that ownership and operation by the federal government of all railroads now constructed and to be constructed, would go far toward the obliteration of state lines and I regard the preservation of our dual form of government as necessary to the perpetuity of the Republic.

"My plan, according to which the federal government is to own only the necessary trunk lines and the several states the remainder of the roads, is consistent with our form of government, and instead of leading to centraliaztion promises to build up the states and thus offer a sure bulwark against centralization.

"It is not necesasry that there should be many trunk lines. Only enough trunk lines are necssary to give each state an outlet for its merchandise. While it is not likely that adjoining states would have any difficulty in making joint traffic agreements, still the operation of a few federal trunk lines would give each state an independent position.

Acquire Them Gradually

"As to the acquiring of lines, I suppose that all would agree that the system should be inaugurated gradually, so that the government could profit by experience. It is probable that the commencement would be made with one transcontinental line, with a possible cross line. A line from the Atlantic to the Pacific crossed by a line from the Lakes to the Gulf will do more to demonstrate the wisdom or folly of government ownership than all the arguments that could be made for or against the system. If the government is incompetent to attend to such matters and too extravagant in public work, private roads need not be afraid of competition.

These experimental lines can be bought or built, whichever government officials think best. The government might buy a controlling interest in a line—that is the way the railroad magnates do. If it built a new line the success of the new line would largely determine the value of other lines offered for sale to the nation or to the various states.

"If it was thought best, the government could do as France did: Authorize lines, guaranteeing fair dividends and contributing to a sinking fund which at the end of a term of years would give the government title to the roads.

"It is needless to say that no confiscation is proposed. There is no disposition under either strict regulation or government ownership to do injustice to investors in railroad securities, and the courts will prevent injustice even if it were attempted."

FIVE YEARS ENOUGH TO DIG PANAMA CANAL

Washington, April 16.—Chairman Tawney, of the house committee on appropriations, and Representative Olcott, who have recently returned from a visit to the Isthmus of Panama discussed with the president conditions as they found them. Mr. Tawney is favorably impressed with the progress being made in the canal work, and told the preident he thought that at the present rate the waterway should be completed in five years.

He regarded it as unfortunate that the engineering world had been representing to the people an almost impossible engineering problem confronting it. The principal conditions now to be met, he said, were those of sufficient railroad capacity to take care of the dirt excavated and sanitation, with the view to keeping the place in a healthful condition.

Mr. Tawney also discussed with the president questions affecting congressional appropriations for the canal work. It is likely that some legislation bearing on the subject will be recommended to congress as the result of the visit of the two representatives to the isthmus.

LAST VESTIGE OF WAR REMOVED

Japan Transfers Control of Manchurian Railway to Private Company.

Tokyo, April 17 —When the management of the Manchurian railways was transferred to Baron Goto's company a few days ago, the Japanese government commenced withdrawing the remnant of the troops employed in Manchuria. This work was completed last week, whereupon the imperial government at Peking warmly thanked Japan, which it is expected will reduce its railway guard to less than half the number of men stipulated by the treaty of Portsmouth. In an interview Baron Goto said:

"The last vestige of war in this section has now been removed. Fair play is my guiding principle. In promoting the peaceful development of Manchuria through which our railway runs, national differences will be entirely ignored. Manchuria will be made a field for competition of all nations. In order that we my carry out this principle, I crave patience on the part of those interested. Remember that the management of the road was only transferred to us on the first of the present month. The allownace of sufficient time will insure the realization of our plans, and we dread nothing more than impatient interference."

NORTHERN PACIFIC TO IGNORE MONTANA LAW

Butte, Mont., April 17.—A Helena special to the Miner says that Attorney General Albert J. Galen, in an opinion rendered yesterday, holds the recent enactment by the legislature of the statute limiting the hours of employment of railway employes to sixteen hours to be valid. William Wallace, Jr., counsel for the Northern Pacific, has served notice on the board of railway commissioners that the company will ignore the statute. Mr. Galen has advised the commissioners at once to begin a test case against the railway.

McGill University Again Visited

Montreal, April 17.—The disastrous fire that visited McGill university early yesterday practically destroyed the medical building, one of the oldest and most valuable of the college group. Besides the equipment, the museum, one of the best on the continent, containing many priceless specimens, was destroyed. The magnificent medical library, however, was saved. Immediately after the recent fire, which wiped out the engineering building, the university authorities, it is understood, placed half a million etxra insurance on the whole universityplant. The medical building will share in this.

MILLIONS IN FINES

STANDARD OIL COMPANY CONVICTED ON MANY COUNTS.

Result of Trial a Great Victory for the Government--In Trial One Technical Point After Another Was Raised and Swept Away.

Chicago, April 15.—On the basis of a verdict returned by a jury Saturday night in the federal court presided over by Judge Landis, the Standard Oil Company may be fined anywhere from $1,400,000 to $28,000,000 for violations of the Elkins law.

After a trial that has been long drawn out and bitterly contested by government attorneys and counsel for the Standard Oil Company, the case went to the jury late Saturday afternoon and at 10 o'clock in the evening a verdict was returned in which the defer dant corporation is found guilty on every one of the 1,463 counts in the indictment that had not been quashed by Judge Landis.

As the matter now stands it is one of the most sweeping victories yet secured by the federal government in its contest against corporations. This is not the end, however. The defendants filed a motion for a new trial and the arguments on this motion will be heard probably early this week

The charges in the indictment were that the Standard Oil Company accepted a lower rate for shipments of oil from Whiting, Ind., to East St. Louis than is allowed in the published tariff for the haul.

Can't Get Immunity Bath.

Originally there were over 1,800 counts in the indictment, but nearly 400 of these were ruled out by Judge Landis and hearing of the case proceeded on the others.

Counsel for defense made every effort to have the whole indictment quashed on the ground that it was faulty. John S. Miller, of "immunity bath" fame made an elaborate argument along this line. It also was attempted to be shown that the defendant corporation could not be held guilty of a violation of the law because it had not been proved that the Standard Oil Company had willfully and knowingly accepted lower than the established rate and that it was not incumbent upon the defendant to go further than the office of the railroad involved in order to learn what the rate was.

Last Resort of Standard

As a final resort it was sought to compel the government to choose some single count on which to hang its case, the theory being advanced that in any event there was but a single violation of the law, if any at all; in other words, if there was an offense it was of a continuous character.

It was urged that the corporation was ignorant of the lawful rate for the two years during which it shipped oil from Whiting to St. Louis at one-third the lawful rate. By means of this rate, which had all the effect of a rebate, the Standard Oil Company is charged with having collected about $260,000 from the Chicago & Alton road.

As the case went to the jury there were rumors of an attempt to tamper with the jurors, but these were not taken seriously, although government detectives, as they had done throughout the case, kept close watch of all supsicious movements around the federal building.

The indictments charged that in the shipment of 1903 cars of oil over the Chicago Terminal Transfer and the Chicago & Alton railroads from Whiting, Ind, to East St. Louis, Ills., by way of Chappell, Ills., the Oil company accepted a rate of 6 cents for 100 pounds when the published rate was 18 cents. The jury was out less than three hours and reached the verdict on the first ballot.

St. Paul, April 13.—The senate has passed the bill already passed by the house providing for a reduction of 10 per cent of the railroad freight rate in Minnesota.

Passing of the Louisiana State Lottery

History of the Scheme which took More Money from the People than the "Mississippi Bubble" and which Uncle Sam has just Suppressed

THE BLIND BOY AND THE PRIZE TUBE

The Honduras National Lottery Company, better known under its original name of the Louisiana State Lottery, has been forced out of business by the Federal government. Twenty of the officers and employes of the concern are under indictment. The death knell of this biggest lottery company in the world has been sounded.

Bigger than the "Mississippi bubble." potent in State and national affairs, known in every civilized land, the Honduras company has made probably not less than $25,000,000 for its owners during its existence of more than thirty years. With its operations have been associated some of the great men of Civil War times, and throughout its life the names of some of the proudest of the New Orleans creole families have been linked with it without effort at concealment. In the place of its birth, New Orleans, the lottery company was an institution. As a lawbreaker its place in the nation has been unique and its history of absorbing interest.

The forerunner of the old Louisiana State Lottery was that known as the Alabama lottery. This concern has been lost to the memory of the present generation, although it did an enormous business, especially in the South, in the days following the Civil War. The charter of the Louisiana company gave it a monopoly not only of the lottery business but of the "policy" business in New Orleans. This policy privilege was of enormous value, but in the end proved the undoing of the lottery company.

In formulating his original plan, the shrewd Dr. Dauphin had considered well the fact that the lottery company must depend for its ultimate success on a belief on the part of the public that the drawings of the company were, in fact, pure chance, and that all prizes would be paid without quibble to the holders of "lucky numbers." He knew that the concern could prosper only as the public had confidence in it. Dr. Dauphin hit on the plan of placing the drawings under the supervision of men whose very names would be a guarantee to the public that the lottery was as honestly conducted as was possible.

It was in this way that Generals Beauregard and Early were brought into the scheme. The former lived in New Orleans and the latter in Virginia. Both were men of much popularity, especially in the South, where they were popular idols. Their distinguished services for the Confederacy in the Civil War placed them in positions in the public mind but little below that which had been occupied by General Robert E. Lee. Financially both of these distinguished soldiers were in straitened circumstances. The Louisiana Lottery Company offered each one of them $30,000 a year to act as commissioner for the company and to supervise the drawings. This was as far as the connection of either with the company went. Not more than two days' work each month was required of them, and for these two days they each received $2,500.

Spectacular Drawings.

In the early days of the lottery the public monthly drawings were held in the various New Orleans theaters, but later the company erected a building for administrative purposes in St. Charles street, and in this building a hall for the drawings was provided. Generals Beauregard and Early were in complete charge of the drawings. The plan of the drawing was this:

On 100,000 slips of paper an inch wide and six inches long were printed that many numbers. The numbers were in large type. Each of these 100,000 slips was rolled tightly with the number on the inside, and the roll was inserted in a case consisting of a section of small rubber hose about an inch long. These 100,000 tubes were then dumped in a hollow wheel about five feet in diameter and two feet thick.

The wheel was made of two glass discs joined at the periphery with a thin wooden band as wide as the wheel. In this band was arranged a slide which could be opened and a hand inserted into the hollow wheel. On the stage near this "number wheel" stood a similarly constructed wheel one-third the size. In all the scheme called for the giving of 3,434 prizes at each drawing; and the smaller, or "prize wheel," contained that many of the small rubber tubes minus the number of "terminal" and "approximation" prizes. In each of these tubes was a slip of paper containing figures representing each prize.

Thus equipped, the commissioners were ready to begin the drawing. For spectacular effect two boys from the local asylum for the blind were chosen to draw the tubes from the wheels. A robust negro turned the cranks, mixing the rubber tubes in the wheels thoroughly. Then one of the blind boys drew a tube from the big wheel. A man selected by the commissioners for the purpose extracted the rolled slip from the tube, held it up before the audience and announced the number. At the same time the other blind boy drew a tube from the "prize wheel" and the announcer called out the sum called for by this slip. This prize, then, was drawn by the number drawn from the other wheel at the same time. The drawing required hours and usually was largely attended.

So thoroughly were advertised the features provided for the insuring of an honest drawing that the public soon became convinced that there was no chance for jugglery, and so long as the company existed the buyers of tickets purchased in the utmost confidence that if they did not win it was not because of unfair drawings.

During the late '80s the feeling against the policy part of the scheme had grown strong in New Orleans. Policy gambling had run riot for years. It had taken such a hold on the servant and poorer classes that they could not be trusted with either their own or other people's money. A maid sent to the store for supplies stopped on the way to play policy with the money given her by her mistress. The city was demoralized. It was at this time, under the Howard administration, that the lottery got into politics. The "lottery" and "anti-lottery" parties sprang into being. The leader of the latter was United States District Attorney Parlange, a Christian gentleman to whom the evils of policy appealed most strongly.

Death Blow to the Lottery.

The issue was whether the charter of the company was to be renewed by the State of Louisiana. The scandals of this fight—the charges of bribery and other muck-throwing—are still fresh in the minds of many. It was at this time that the company came into malodor throughout the nation. When the smoke cleared away it was found that the "anti-lottery" party had won.

The finish of this fight compelled the Louisiana company to find a new base of operation. Experienced lottery men declare that Mexico would have been the logical location, for there lottery was looked upon as legitimate, and the government accepted from the lottery companies a tax on gross receipts. But Honduras, instead of Mexico, was chosen. This was fifteen years ago, since which time the concern has been known as the Honduras National Lottery.

Its legal residence abroad, however, did not change the fact that most of its sales were in the United States. The enactment of the Federal law prohibiting the transmission of lottery matter through the mails was a severe blow to the business, but not as serious as was supposed at the time, as the express companies promptly began the work of carrying the contraband matter. As the government fight grew fiercer even the express companies declined to handle the tickets and lists, and the company was forced to distribute them by messenger.

The profits of the Louisiana lottery crowd during the years of its existence can be approximated from known figures. For instance, the largest month's business ever done by the company was the last month before the removal to Honduras, when $2,400,000 was taken in by the lottery. It is probable that the profits from the lottery have not been less than $25,000,000, all told. The plan of operation called for the distribution each month of 55 per cent of all money taken in for prizes. Agents' commissions averaged 20 per cent, administrative and miscellaneous expenses averaged 5 per cent, which left 20 per cent of net profit. The gross income of the company figured on this basis must, then, have been at least $125,000,000 during its life.

Before the government began its fight on the Louisiana company a winning ticket was known to be as good as a certified check and express companies and many banks cashed them. It is not only likely, but almost certain, that had the Louisiana company not debauched the State with policy it would have secured a twenty-five-year extension of its charter. But the policy game forced it into a fight in which it was compelled to buy Congressmen and government officials. The secret pay roll of this company would be a most interesting and sensational document.—Chicago Record-Herald.

OUR PANNIKIN O' TEA.

Off to the Banks on the Betsy B., with a cargo of salt to wet;
The cod and the hake when they see our wake are glad that we're gone, you bet!
For there isn't a crew from Glo'ster-town that ladles them out of the sea,
Barrel on barrel and flake on flake like the crew of the Betsy B.
That's we!
And our cook sets up the tea.

After a day in the mist and spume, pulling a dragging trawl,
With a dory full, away we pull, for it's aboard, men, all!
The cuddy smoke is away ahead as far as we can see,
And we know it means that cook is primed with a pannikin of tea.
That's he!
At the rail of the Betsy B.

Now all good fishers when you sail 'way off to the Banks so drear,
Be sure you have in your cuddy stores a plenty of wholesome cheer.
The CHASE & SANBORN kind's the best, as sure as sure can be,
And the skipper's wise who always buys that honest King of Tea.
You'll see
That brand on the Betsy B.

FRIDAY, APRIL 19, 1907

The Milwaukee timber agents still continue their lumber buying in Lewis county. A deal recently announced was the purchase of a farm near Salkum, for its timber, the consideration being $7,000.

Senator Piles and Congressman Humphrey were tendered a banquet by the Rainier Club, Seattle, Tuesday evening last. The affair was given as a home-coming welcome to the King county members of Congress. It was a social evening, and politics took a back seat.

Good cities are made by men who give them the right character and influence. So is it with towns. Many times enterprise is lacking just where it is needed and where it would cost nothing. It takes aggressive, united effort to get results. It is hard to characterize as good anything that is dirty. Filth is a mighty handicap. Mayor Krouse says clean up. SEGUIN NOTES.

Are we booming? — no decidedly not—it is a pure healthy growth, that is all. People are just finding out what irrigation will do on this prairie land and as a result are not loth to pay the one hundred dollars per acre. They are not all strangers that are buying, but home people, who know what the land is worth.

A. W. Horne paid three hundred dollars per acre for ten acres of improved land and he has been here long enough to know what he is doing.

Mr. S. B. Stare has purchased the livery and feed stable of Walter Myers and succeeded to the mail contract between Port Williams and Seguin.

The three irrigation companies have combined on the waste ditch to be constructed in the near future.

The Sequim Manufacturing and Lighting Co. began the manufacturing of lumber on Wednesday last. They have a large force of men at work and expect to ship lumber in the near future.

J. L. Keeler disposed of several town lots last week, among the purchasers was F. J. Knight, the hustling grocer of Dungeness, who paid $500.00 for a choice double corner.

H. M. Fisher, the Abstract and Insurance man of Angeles, paid us a two days visit the past week.

The Seguin Stars will reorganize the base ball team for 1907, at the Seguin hall, Tuesday evening next. All ball players are requested to be present as we will play for place. We want a good team this year and the "Rooter's" are with us.

Seguin will celebrate May first with a basket picnic and sports of all kinds. Come and enjoy yourselves with us.

H. Keeler, who has been visiting his children, Mrs. Bowman and J. L. Keeler, for the past two weeks returned to his home in Townsend on Thursday last.

Northwest Leads in Railroad Building.

According to the annual compilation of the Railway Age, the Pacific Coast is to be the theater of greatest activity in construction of new lines of transportation during the immediate future, and the State of Washington heads the list of new mileage projected and under contract. The total already provided for in this state is 990 miles, of which 700 miles will be built by the Hill and Harriman interests and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, while the nearest approach made by any state is Texas with 850 miles, followed by Montana with 719 miles, and California with 602 miles, while Oregon has 353 miles under contract. In the Pacific group of states there are now 2,866 miles of new road under contract, or one-fourth of the aggregate for the whole United States, while there is an additional proposed mileage of 3,061 miles classed under the head of live projects, as compared with 8,766 for the country at large. Probably no section of the country has so far outgrown its transportation facilities as has the Pacific Northwest, and the imperitive necessity of meetiny requirements here will result in a maintenance of activities.—West Coast Trade.
