BEST EVER HELD WAS VERDICT OF MANY

"Simplicity, Sincerity, Success," the Key Note of High School Graduation Exercises.

No words could better describe the Commencement exercises of the graduating class, Friday evening, than those of the class motto, simple, sincere and successful. Instructors, parents and old friends may well be proud of these young people and the excellence of the program given. Every essay showed careful thought and preparation and addresses were exceptionally well delivered.

The stage was beautifully decorated with vines and flowers, while the class colors, red and black, were draped from center to sides. The class motto, in colors, which extended across the front, was a most artistic piece of work. The floral offerings to the graduates were beautiful indeed and made a grand display as they were banked up across the stage.

Miss Mable Gehrke gave the Salutatory in a very pleasing manner, with an able discussion on the "Girl Labor" question, pointing out and emphasizing the advantages of higher education for young women as well as men.

The class history was very interestingly told by Miss Laura Polhamus and it was her duty to present to the Junior class the spade decorated in Senior colors, with which they were to dig if they were to attain to the fame and success of this class of '09. Miss Flora Stakemiller graciously accepted the spade in behalf of the Juniors.

Simplicity, Sincerity, Success was the subject of Helen Trumbull's essay and it was well handled indeed. Her thoughts were all excellent and would have done credit to an older head.

Leland Beam chose for his oration a subject which is of vital interest to everyone at the present day—"The Conservation of the National Resources. He handled his subject in a very able manner and gave an interesting and concise discussion of the question as it stands at the present time.

With a great deal of expression and feeling, June Stakemiller recited the class poem, of which she is the authoress. It was one of the most pleasing numbers of the program.

Jolliette Glen told of the life of that prominent and interesting character, Helen Keller, and of the many valuable lessons to be learned from her life work. Miss Keller is certainly a fascinating subject for one to study and Miss Glen's essay proved very entertaining.

"Heroes and Heroism," was discussed in a very forceful manner by Alice Swanson in her essay on that topic. A careful study of both history and literature was necessary to give so excellent a paper.

The Class Prophecy was very much enjoyed, as it was well written and well delivered by Juanita Glen. This young lady is to be congratulated upon her wonderful imaginative powers.

Robert Polhamus was Valedictorian and delivered a fine oration on "Specialism." He brought out many excellent ideas and proved himself master of the subject in hand. His delivery showed he has oratorical ability, which we hope will bring him renown. He presented to the Junior Class a class picture of the Seniors, which was accepted with thanks and a pretty speech by Miss Alice Finch.

Miss Allen's vocal solo and Mr. Park's violin solo were both delightful features of the evening's program.

Prof. Geisness made a short address to the audience and also a talk full of kind thoughts and good advice to the graduates, closing with the presentation of the diplomas.

The High School orchestra under Miss Marsh deserve mention for the splendid music furnished by them.

SENIOR CLASS POEM

By June Stakemiller.

We, the class of '09, glory in a boy
who's dark and tall,
Though our class is famed for wisdom,
he's the brighest of us all.

THE GRADUATES

Laura Polhamus Jolliette Glen Helen Trumbull Juanita Glen June Stakemiller
Mabelle Gehrke Leland Beam Robert Polhamus Alice Swanson

Robert is our valedictorian, leader of the class is he,
And his reward comes from Seattle, a free pass to the A.-Y.-P.

Haughty as the king of England, proud,
defiant, yet withal,
Mable showed her truest nature, when she played at basket ball.
How the crowds would cheer and holler
when she made a splendid play,
But the day she won her laurels was when she held Sequim at bay.

Then there's Jolly, bright and pretty, as witty as she's wise,
For to us it is impossible to judge value
by its size.
She's a stately handsome senior, one whom many wish to win,
But to flirt with high-school boys seems to her an awful sin.

Two bright eyes has Helen Trumbull,
that can sparkle up with fun,
But they sometimes glow with anger,
when Prof. Ullery says, "Not well done."
She is Tempest, she is Sunshine—both in
one continuous whirl,
But withal, we love her dearly. Why?
She is a Senior girl.

Now let your thoughts pass on to Leland, stately, dignified and tall,
He is a proud A. A. boy, an expert hand at basket ball.
Oh, he dearly loves to study, always buried in a book,
But he's really much more frivolous than he ever dares to look.

Cheeks as red as blushing roses, such a wealth of golden hair,
Bright blue eyes and smiling dimples
make our Alice wondrous fair.
She never seems to be so happy as when
at a dance or ball;
She dearly loves to two-step, but she likes the home waltz best of all.

Came a lass of deeper thinking than those others, gone before.
She was silent, thoughtful, patient,
busy studying Ullery's lore,
Juanita, it was, who never faltered,
never wearied at her task,
And she could answer any question a teacher cared to ask.

Holding aloof from all the others, studying, planning as she goes, Laura makes us all to realize that she won,t tell all she knows.
But beneath her reserved nature, if you know her as I do,
You will find a heart that's loyal, and to all she loves true blue.

Now among those '09 seniors was a
spunky little lass,
Who always kept her playmates wondering whether she would really pass.
Deutch was surely not her stronghold,
English was not in her line,
But through the kindness of her teachers
she's here to grace the naughty-nine.

Before us in our school days shone a star of brighest rays,
Shone to guide our every action in those short and happy days.
And who was this guide so faithful, so stern, and yet so true?
'Twas none other than Prof. Ullery and to him we give his due.

Miss Vaupell, Prof. Geisness, how those names inspire our awe,
And the three, Bliss, Marsh and Chambers, yes, we knew their word was law.
As in after years we journey out into the paths of fame,
We will gladly pay the honor, some of it to each dear name.

Now before us stands the future, and the door is open wide,
Though we may not wish to enter, all are forced to go inside.
But with never failing courage and honest steadfastness,
'Simplicity' and 'Sincerity' will crown us with 'Success.'

The annual meeting of the Alumni Association was held Monday evening at Haning Hall, when the Class of '09 was duly initiated. Miss Addie Thomas was elected president for the ensuing year, with Leland Beam vice-president and Miss Laurena Ester secretary-treasurer. Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the program and dancing indulged in.

LUMBER FOR CARS

RAILROADS IN MARKET FOR TWELVE MILLION FEET.

Specifications For Bids Received at Seattle Total Quarter Million Dollars For Best Grades—First Large Business for Several Months.

News which pleased the lumbermen and which is taken to indicate the revival of buying in the luber industrmy reached Seattle during the past week in the form of specicfiations for lumber orders aggregating more than 12,000,000 feet and which will bring into the Northwest close to a quarter of a milion dolllars.

The specifications came from car manufacturers in Chicago, St. Louis, Milwaukee and call for car building materials.

The calls for bids from the Chicago and Milwaukee car shops aggregated 10,000,000 feet, 3,600,000 feet of which is for the very best car siding. The ballance of the specifications call for bids on car sills, car framing and car lining, and state that the materials are for use in the manufacture of 1,500 refrigerator cars for the Northern Pacific railroad. The contracts, according to the specifications, will be let about July 10, or about the time the tariff question will probably be settled.

Want the Best Lumber

The very best clear lumber is asked for. Lumbermen say the bill will average at the very lowest estimate $20 per thousand, which is much lower than quotations of that kind two years ago, when the lumber market was active.

Almost simultaneously with the sending out of the inquiries for 10,000,000 feet of lumber from the Chicago and Milwaukee shops, came one from the American Car and Foundry Company, of St. Louis, calling for bids on a bill of lumber aggregating 2,000,000 feet of the best materials.

This is the first large lumber business that has been in sight for the Washington rail mills in nearly a year and the fact that the orders came from the railroads is considered signiciant by lumbermen in that railroads and their allied companies have purchased very little lumber since the burst of buying nearly a year ago, when several millions of feet were taken. Lumbermen believe that the business now in sight heralds the return of the old time activity in the lumber business and that it will be followed soon by trade running ito the hundreds of millions of feet.

Pullman Company Buys 8,000,000 Feet

That the railroads are really in the market for lumber is indicated by the fact that an order for 8,000,000 feet has been placed within the past two weeks with Oregon mills by the Pullman car company This lumber is to be used in the manufacture of cars for the Harriman lines. The fact that the lumber must be hauled over the Union Pacific accounts for the order being placed with Oregon lumbermen.

The Santa Fe railroad has specifications out for orders running into the thousands and a car building company at Baltimore is also in the market for a large bill.

PACIFIC MAIL AGREEMENT TO CONTINUE INDEFINITELY

Washington, June 14.—The traffic agreement between the Pacific Mail teamship Company and the Panama Railroad and Steamship Company regarding a division of rates on freight from San Francisco to New York, by way of the isthmus, which the former notified the war department it desired to terminate August 14 because of its unremunerative character, will be continued indefinitely.

A thorough inquiry will be made into all phases of the question by the government in order to determine whether the company shall be given an increased percentage of the through rate, which it claims should be granted to warrant a continuance of the existing agreement. Sixty days notice will be given of termination of the agreement will be given in the event that an agreement cannot be reached.

BRYAN CANDIDATE FOR UNITED STATDS SENATOR

Omaha, June 12.—William Jennings Bryan, through Richard L. Metcalf, editor of the Commoner, has announced himself as a candidate for the United States senate to succeed Senator Burkett, whose term expires in 1911. Mr. Bryan will run for office under the direct primary law, which is modeled after the Oregon act. Members of the Nebraska legislature are elected in November, 1910. The primaries will be held in September, 1910.

New Steamers for Hawaiian Line

Philadelphia, June 12.—The American-Hawaiian Steamsip Company has contracted with the Pennsylvania Steel Company for the construction of three steamers of 9,000 tons each at a cost of $1,750,000. These vessels will form an addition to the fleet maintained by the American-Hawaiian Company on the Pacific and will ply between the United States and Hawaii. The vessel will be constructed at Sparrow Point, Md.

FISH TAKE LONG TRIP, LANDING AT EXPOSITION

Seattle, June 14.—Bringing several specimens each of 120 varieties of tropical fish from Hawaii to the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition, and losing only four fish on the trip, is the record for live fisth transportation established by B. F. Potter, who had charge of the removal of the Royal aquarium of Honolulu to the exposition. The fish arrived on the transport Dix and have been installed in the Hawaiian building.

Kept in tanks of artificially heated water, with air driven through the water to matintain its freshness, the fish had a complete aquarium of their own on shipboard. From the ship to the epxosition was a perilous move also, for the heating and freshening process could not be be properly attended to. On the fair grounds the big plant was soon in shape to care for them.

The fish from the Honolulu aquarium form the most beautiful and varicolored collection ever displayed, being composed of finny marvels from the tropical seas. They are in all shapes, sizes and shades. One freakish creature with a long fin waving upward from its back suffered the wearing off of about two-thirds of the fin by the bumping and rolling of the voyage.

PRESIDENT URGES TAX ON INCOMES

Washington, June 16—It is annouced that President Taft will today send to congress a message urging the passage of an amendment to the tariff bill imposing a tax of 2 per cent upon the undistributed net earnings of corporations, and the adoption of a resolution submitting to the several states an amendment to he constitution giving congress the power to impose a tax on incomes.

This understanding was reached at a session of the cabinet yesterday and was approved by Republican senate leaders who conferred with the president. Attorney General Wickersham was given the task of drafting both the amendment and resolution.

In view of the emphatic stand taken by President Taft, a number of progressive Republicans have signified their intention of following his recommendations.

The president favors an amendment providing for a tax upon the net earnings of corporations not only because of the added revenue it would produce, but also because he believes it would throw a healthy light of publicity upon the affairs of corporations.

SPOKANE RATE HEARING IS AGAIN POSTPONED

Washington, June 12.—By agreement between all parties concerned, the interstate commerce commission has postponed until early next fall the hearing of the Spokane rate case, which was to have been held Wednesday. The fall hearing will be held in Spokane. As a clause to the agreement, the railroads have agreed to put into operation by July 1 the "class rates," which the interstate commerce commission recently advised as just rates, leaving all commodity rates at the present figure until after the hearing next fall.

Representatives of the Portland Chamber of Commerce and other bodies which have filed similar petitions to those recently filed by Seatttle and Tacoma, protesting against eastbound and local rates, were present and urged that all of these cases should be decided at one time instead of separately. It was urged that each petition revolved around the "water competition" proposition, and that to settle one before another would give advantage to certain localities while other cases were being considered. The commission anounced that it would take this suggestion under consideration.

TRAIN SERVICE ON THREE NEW DIVISIONS

Seattle, June 14.—Today the first Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound train schedule goes into effect, covering the first three divisions out of Seattle. The schedule calls for a daily passenger, Sunday excepted, and a thrice-a-week second class service, being a combination freight and passenger train. The schedule provides for a train to leave Seattle for Malden at 8:35 each week day morning. The 94.7 miles to Cle Elum is made by the passenger train between 8:35 a. m. and 1:30 p. m. The train known as No. 2 will leave the latter point at 1:50 p. m. and reach Othello, a distance of 98 miles, at 6:30 p. m. It will leave Othello immediately after changing engines and crew and make the run to Malden, 103 miles more, arriving at the latter point at 11 p. m. The trains returning will leave Malden at 5:30 a. m. and arrive in Seattle at 10:10 p. m.

To Succeed Judge Reid

Washington, June 12. President Taft yesterday sent to the senate the nomination of Peter D. Overfield to be judge of the Third judicial district in Alaska in place of Judge Silas H. Reed, resigned. Mr. Overfield is a Pennsylvanian, who has practiced law in Nome, Alsaka, for three years. His nomination was recommended by both factions in Alaska.

Coal Prices Cut at San Franciseo

San Francisco, June 12.—Australian coal has been reduced in price by wholesalers from $9 to $7.50 a ton, as the result of a bitter feud which has broken out between the Western Coal Company and the Pacific Coal Company. The latter made the cut above noted. It is understod retail dealers will reduce their rate from $12 to $10.

VETOES MAY COME UP

COTTERILL SAYS SPECIAL SESSION MUST ACT ON THEM

No Expectation, However, That Any of Vetoed Measures Will Get Sufficient Votes to Carry Over Veto—Important Issues Will Probably Lie Dormant.

Portland, Or., June 14—The Sunday Oregonian says:

That the bills passed at the regular session of the Washington legislature and vetoed by Gov. M. E. Hay after the final adjournment will have to be referred to the special session which convenes in Olympia June 23, is the opinion of Senator George F. Cotterill, of Seattle, who is now in Portland.

"The provision of the constitution," said Senator Cotterill, yesterday, "is that bills submitted to the governor within five days before final adjournment and vetoed by the governor after adjournment shall be submitted to the house in which they originated at the next session of the legislature. The word 'regular' is not used preceding the word 'session' and plainly it will be the duty of the secretary of state to transmit the several measures vetoed by Gov. Hay to the special session.

Hopes Vetoes Will Stand

"The three principal bills which were vetoed by the governor, and which were passed by close votes, I believe were bad and were rightly vetoed. They were the oyster land bill, the Potts hotel liquor bill and the Booth ante-campaign pledge bill. I do not believe any of them can secure the necessary two-thirds vote to pass over the governor's veto. Another bill, which I believe was meritorious, was vetoed because of the failure of the president of the senate to affix his signature. This bill, as I recall it, gave counties the right to acquire gravel pits by condemnation for road building purposes.

"I see no reason whatever for attempting to reorganize the senate and I do not believe it will be attempted. The work of the legislature, I believe, should be confined to matters germane to the investigation of state offices and departments.

"The only reason I can think of that would make reorganiaztion advisable would be the discovery by the investigating committee of some connection of the presiding officer of either house with improper or unlawful acts, and I have never heard such a thing intimated.

Officers Have Little Power

"As a matter of fact, the president of the senate in an impeachment proceeding will not have any arbitrary powers that might be absued. If there is an attempt to reorganize either house it will be in the interest of some person who has political ambitions.

"I am not in favor of reopening any of the subjects of contention in the regular session. If the local option issue were reopened, for instance, it would come before the same arbitrators that considered it in the regular session.

"The local option law passed by the legislature is a saloon bill. It was not what the local optionists wanted and it was not what the liquor interests wanted, but it represented what the liquor interests were willing to concede in fear of something far worse in the future.

"The record has been made up on the local option issue and it should stand and the law be given a fair trial. At the next election, if the people are not satisfied with it, they should elect representatives in the legislature at that time to amend it or repeal it as they deem best.

May Attack Reform Laws

"While I do not fully expect it, I should not be surprised if the liquoI interests made some attempt to strike out some of the provisions of the criminal code, such as the one which prohibits obstructions of the view of the interior of the saloons, but just so sure as they do make this attempt they will drive more nails in their own coffin. The great enemy of the liquor traffic is the liquor traffic itself. Every time it shows its hand in attempting to control legislation or dictate politics it does itself more harm than the united opposition of the temperance people can accomplish.

"There is one matter I expect to present to the special legislature which I believe is germane to the investigation and the general subject of official house-cleaning. In the regular session I introduced a bill requiring the summoning of a grand jury each year in every county and as much oftener as might be deemed advisable by the superior court. This bill was reported favorably, but as I was advised by good legal authority that such a bill would be unconstitutional, as the constitution specifically makes the summoning of a grand jury discretionary with the superior court judge. I then prepared a constitutional amendment and secured a favorable report on that also, but it was so late in the session that it was crowded out by other legislation. I shall again present this constitutional amendment.

Amend Accounting Act

"Another matter which is germane to the subject of investigation is an amendment to the public accountancy act which will permit the board of accountancy created by the last legislature to investigate the accounts and acts of county, city and state officers prior to the creation of the board.

"Of course, if there are any matters of actual emergency that have arisen since the adjournment of the legislature but not involved in the investigation they also should be considered."

Senator Cotterill's views on the subject of amending the local option law will probably be taken as indicative of the general opinion in the "dry" faction in the senate. Senator Cotterill was one of the "dry" leaders, and in his personal views he is an ardent prohibitionist. He is also a member of the international executive board of the Good Templars, and was recently appoint by President Taft as a delegate to the twelfth international congress on alcoholism, which convenes in London next month.

"OPEN FACE" LAW NOW BEFORE SPOKANE COURTS

Spokane, June 15.—Making a fight against the enforcement of the new laws regulating the operation of saloons, W. S. Norman, one of the proprietors of the Spokane, the city's big hotel, has had Chief of Police Sullivan temporarily restrained from interfering with the manner in which the hotel bar is being conducted. Chief Sullivan in response to an order will appear in the superior court Wednesday to show cause why the temporary order should not be made permanent.

To comply with the chief's orders Norman says he will be put to great expense and inconvenience, and that it is impossible without entirely remodeling that part of the house to obey the demands made upon him.

"I am glad the law is to be tested at once," said Chief Sullivan. "If it is defective and cannot be enforced then we ought to quit bluffing the people. If the law can stand a test in the courts it should be enforced as long as it is the law and I will do my best to see that it is obeyed by all alike."

KANSAS WHEAT CROP ESTIMATED AT $70,000,000

Topeka, Kan., June 15.—Farmers of Kansas will this year harvest 70,000,000 bushels of wheat. This is the average estimate placed on the probable state yield by men who accompanied the great wheat special through the Kansas wheat belt. These estimates are made up from the reports of farmers and elevator men in all sections.

Guesses on the total yield run from 60,000,000 to 80,000,000 bushels, but it is believed that 70,000,000 bushels is a conservative estimate. This means $70,000,000 for wheat farmers, as the crop is being contracted for at $1 a bushel. The state will need 17,000 extra men to help harvest the crop.

NO MERGER INTENTIONS, SAYS LOUIS W. HILL

St. Paul, June 12.—Louis W. Hill, president of the Great Northern Railroad Company, has emphatically denied the report from New York that J. J. Hill, chairman of the Great Northern board of directors, had found a way to merge in a single corporation the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and the Colorado & Southern railways under the broad charter provisions of the latter road.

"We don't intend to form such a merger," said Mr. Hill, "even under so broad a charter as that of the Colrado & Southern, for that would mean a great amount of litigation."

O. R. & N. Aftor Suburban Traffic

Spokane, June 12.—A chain of suburban towns stringing from Spokane across the Couer d'Alene Indian reservation, soon to be opened, supplied by one of the fastest train services—the gasoline motor—is the plan of the O. R. & N. for holding and regaining precedence in its territory between Spokane and Wallace, Idaho. The electric roads and the proposed new line from Couer d'Alene to Wallace have cut into the traffic of the pioneer steam line and the company has started into a campaign to regain its territory and put on a better service than can be furnished by the electric road. To this end the cutoff from Lockwood to Windy Bay has been started.

Mills to Close for Lumbermen's Day

Hoquiam, June 15.—In accepting an invitation sent out by the State Lumber Association practically every mill in Hoquiam will suspend operations July 1 in order that the many thousands of employes of the mills and adjacent camps may be enabled to visit the Seattle exposition. As the same arrangement affects practically every mill and camp in the state, it is estimated that some 20,000 men will be at liberty to visit the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association session, which opens in Seattle July 12.

Flagstaff Presented to University

Seattle, June 15.—The big flagstaff which stands in the circle between the Idaho, California, Spokane and Yakima buildings at the exposition grounds was yesterday formally presented to the University of Washington by the Sons of the American Revolution and the Page Lumber Company. The flagstaff is of native fir and taller than any other single piece staff in this country. It is set in a concrete base.

Heney To Be a Candidate

San Francisco, June 12.—The announcement is made positively that F. J. Heney will be a candidte for district attorney at the coming election. He says he has consented to enter the field as he wishes to continue the graft prosecution in which he is now engaged. It is generally understood that he will run as a Republican.

MANY QUAKE VICTIMS

HUNDREDS PERISH IN TREMBLOR WHICH SHOOK FRANCE

Stricken Area Reaches From Alps to Atlantic—Hail and Lower Temperature Follow Quake, Causing Much Suffering—Troops Hasten With Assistance.

Marseilles, France, June 14.—From 75 to 100 dead and as many injured are estimated casualties as the result of the earthquake which devastated several towns in the southern part of France, particlarly in the departments of Herault and Bouches du Rhone.

Great suffering is reported owing to a lack of bread and other necessaries of life. The casualties may be considerably increased, as the ruins have not yet been entirely searched. The villages of St. Cannat and Rognes were completely demolished, and Lambes, which is twelve miles from Aix, suffered heavily.

According to advices received from a number of places wounded are still imprisoned in the ruins, and soldiers are working desperately to rescue them.

Survivors are finding shelter in tents. In many places the streets have been torn up and are encumbered by masses of rocks, making them impassable. Houses and public buildings were crumbled to pieces.

Among the villages seriuosly damaare Vauvenargues, Venelles, Pelissanne, Puy Ste Reparde and Arguilles.

The chateau at Valmouz, near St. Cannat, was badly damaged. The communhal chateau at Arguilles was split in two. The historic villade of Vernegues was wrecked but no one was killed.

The shocks were serious enough in many places to demolish houses and at Denelles the cathedral collapsed.

People were thrown into panic everywhere and many spent the remainder of the night in the open, fearing to return to their homes. A sharp drop in temperature followed immediately after the shock and hail fell in torrents, adding to the discomfort of the refuges. At Lisbon the quakes were distinctly felt and subterranean rumblings terrorized the inhabitants.

GOVERNORS WILL ATTEND DRY FARMING CONGRESS

Billings, Mont., June 14.—The governors of ten western states have responded to Gov. Norris' invitation to attend the Fourth Dry Farming Congress at Billings, October 26-28, 1909. Oregon, Colorado, Wyoming, Nebraska, Washington, Utah, South Dakota, Minnesota, Idaho and North Dakota will be represented at the congress either by the state's chief executive or his personal representative. The governors of all other Western states have been invited to come to Billings and a number whose responses have not yet been received are expected to accept.

Arizona, New Mexico and Texas are preparing extensively to send exhibits to the Second International Exposition of Dry Farm Products, which will be held in connection with the congress. Nevada also will be represented, dry farming having made great progress in that state this year.

In the West it is estimated that a population of 35,000,000 people can be supported in the territory to be reclaimed through the work of the dry farmers. The area under cultivation is being increased at a rapid rate.

SEATTLE FAIR IS MOST INTERESTING, SAYS M'CREA

Seattle, June 12.—President James McCrea, of the Pennsylvania railroad, was a visitor this week in Seattle, with his daughter, as the guests of Bernard Pelly, the British consul. Mr. McCrea visited the exposition grounds and was the guest of honor at an informal luncheon given by Mr. Josiah Collins on the balcony of the New York building. The noted railroad man expressed his great surprise and pleasure at the extent and beauty of Seattle's exposition, which he pronounced the most interesting he had ever seen.

Loeb Turns Down Politicians

New York, June 12.—Protest against the action of Collector Loeb in reducing 73 customs inspectors from positions paying salaries of $1,460 and $1,825 a year to the rank of watchmen, has been made by several prominent politicians, who endeavored to obtain a reversal of the order. Mr. Loeb refused to restore any of the inspectors. It is understood that the intervention of President Taft will be invoked.

Tacoman for Tea Inspector

Port Townsend, June 15.—Collector of Customs F. C Harper has announced the selection and appointment of Leonard G. Fenton, of Tacoma, to be tea expert and inspector for the customs district of Puget Sound. Headquarters offices of the inspector will be continued at Tacoma. The office, through a resignation, has been vacant three months.

Australian Warship Offer Accepted

Melbnourne, June12 .—A cablegram has been received from the imperial government accepting the formal offer of a Dreadnaught or an equivalent addition to the British navy.

MAKES OWN RATES

MILWAUKEE NOT TO JOIN RAILWAY TRAFFIC ASSOCIATION.

No Cut In Rates Contemplated, But Road Wishes More Freedom While Developing Territory Than Would Be Possible As Member of Traffic Bureau.

Chicago, June 12.—Some interesting possibilities of competition for the Hill and Harriman railroads in the struggle for transcontinental traffic are suggested by a decision reached by the traffic and executive officers of the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound railway, the newly completed Pacific coast extension of the Milwaukee road, to maintain an independent attitude in regard to the making of rates to the West.

Ever since the construction of the line was started, it has been predicted in railroad circles that the road would become a rate making factor to be reckoned with. This has been borne out by the official anouncement that the Puget Sound, for the present at least, will not become a member of the transcontinental freight bureau, the traffic organiaztion by which the Western roads make and maintain freight rates, but will make and publish its own rates so as to be free to change them as it sees fit, or as conditions may demand, observing only the statutory requirement of thirty days notice to the interstate commerce commission, instead of submitting a proposed rate to a conference with the representatives of other lines.

This determination was made by E. S. Keeley, vice president, who explained that, while the road had no intention of becoming a rate disturber, and had started out by adopting the same rates as those maintained by the other carriers, it was necessary for a new road with a territory to be developed to be able to make rates suited to its peculiar conditions, and to be able to change them without the unnecessary delay of conferences and the protracted machinery of a traffic association.

One of the most important considerations which influenced the decision of the traffic officers in their determination to maintain an independent rate position was that the road proposes to make some extremely low rates on Oriental export business.

In order to carry out its plans, the Milwaukee is having built in Japan six large freight carrying vessels, the first of which is expected to arrive in Seattle ready to take back a cargo about August 1. This will be known as the "Tacoma Maru." The second of the fleet, the "Seattle Maru," will arrive shortly afterward.

WASHINGTON FISHERIES OUTPUT WORTH $8,000,000

Seattle, June 15—The average value of the products of the fishing industry in this state amounts to $8,000,000; the industry provides employment for $5,000,000 capital, and from 12,000 to 15,000 men received about $4,000,000 in wages, according to the annual report of John L. Riseland, state fish commissioner, covering the period between March 31, 1908 and March 31, 1909. Commissioner Riseland's report is one of the most voluminous ever made on the fishing industry in the state. It covers most features of the work, explaining in detail what is done at the various fish hatcheries during the year and what is expected of them during the coming year; it also includes a large number of statistics.

Mr. Riseland makes few recommendations for new laws, stating in his opinion the laws of the state covering the fishing industry are ample. On this point he says: "We have on the statute books a splendid set of laws governing the fishing industry. I consider frequent changes in the laws harmful and inadvisable. I think, however, that we will soon be compelled to prohibit altogether fishing with gear of smaller mesh than three inches during the months of April, May and June, as nets of mesh of that size catch many immature fish."

Mr. Riseland calls attention to recent legislation covering the regulation of fishing on the Columbia river, and states that it has been his aim to see that the laws were strictly enforced. The commissioner gives it as his opinion that the Columbia river fishing laws are now ample to cover all phases of the situation, and that further trouble is not apt to occur.

To Retire Southern Pacific Preferred

New York, June 12.—The retirement of the company's preferred stock has been decided upon by the directors of the Southern Pacific, effective July 15. Holders of the stock will have the option of accepting $115 per share in cash, or $20 in cash and $100 per share in 4½ per cent bonds, or to exchange the preferred for the common stock share for share. Dividend on the common stock is at the rate of 6 per cent per annum.

Soldiers to Embark at Seattle

Washington, June 12.—Orders have been issued by the war department for the Third infantry and the 105th and 150th companies of coast artillery to embark on the transport Buford at Seattle about August 5. The infantrymen are going to Manila and the artillerymen to Honolulu.

The Cheapest Camp.

There lives hardly a boy who does not hanker to build a camp—not necessarily in the woods, though that is fine, but somewhere out of doors, where he can "keep house" when occasion permits. In the case of many, however, there is difficulty both in the matter of knowledge as to how to build a camp, and also difficulty in arranging for the expense that would be incurred in the building of most of the boys' camps that are described.

It may sound like a fairy tale when I state that the camp I am going to describe is covered with paper. But wait a moment. It is the red, resin-sized, heavy paper that comes in rolls, as shown in Fig. 1. Carpenters use this paper in their building operations, and the writer has used it to cover just such a little building as is herewith described, so he knows that it is perfectly feasible to make a camp in this way. The paper is waterproof, and so stout and strong that it can be laid over by a light framework and secured in place by careful handling. When in place, it seems to grow tougher and stronger by exposure to the weather.

Begin the making of the camp by driving stakes into the ground in the way suggested in Fig. II., allowing the two inner stakes at each end to extend high enough to reach and be nailed to the "rafters," when these are put in place, as shown in Fig. III. These stakes may be common round poles with the bark left on, provided they are reasonably straight and smooth, or two-by-three-inch stuff may be used, as shown in Fig. III. This cut also shows how the roof is put on. The side stakes are sawed off at an equal height, and a narrow strip of inch board is nailed along the tops. Strips of board also make good "rafters," and these should be put on so as to bring a rafter under each edge of the paper, and one under the middle of each strip of paper, allowing the paper to lap at the edges two or three inches for safety.

Each strip of paper can extend from the ground on one side up over the roof and down to the ground on the other side, thus giving no chance for the water to get in. But put on the end coverings before the roof, so that the upper edges of the end strips may lap over onto the roof, and be covered by the roof paper when this is put in place. This will make a tight joint. Over all edges of paper nail common laths, as shown in Fig. IV., which represents the camp finished. Instead of windows, make a doorway in each end in the way suggested in the cuts showing framing. Fit a light frame of narrow strips of board to each doorway and cover them with paper. "Strap" hinges can be put on the outside as shown, and wire hooks. Laths can be put around the edges of the doorway and around the edges of the doors. Select a dry, well-drained spot for the camp, and build according to instructions. Make the house of any size desired, but don't try too large a house at first. Make it of the right length and width to be covered by the paper, without cutting the latter.

Canvas may also be used in place of the paper, but this is more expensive.

The Game of "Celebrities."

Since biography is "history teaching by example," and since intelligent people are supposed to know something about the men and women who stand as representatives of the world's progress, it is always worth while to learn about them.

An easy and amusing way is to play "Celebrities," a game which is entirely home-made, and requires no equipment but a dictionary of biography, such as is found in any of the larger dictionaries, and a church year book, town report, telephone list, city directory, or almost any volume that contains a collection of names.

The leader gives a surname, say "Simpson," and calls on a player to add a Christian name that will complete the name of a man or woman who appears in the biographical dictionary or some current record of celebrities.

The response is, "Matthew," and the player scores a point, Matthew Simpson having been one of the most noted bishops of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Then the leader asks the next player to take the Christian name, "Matthew," which has just been given, and couple with it a different surname to make the name of another celebrity. "Matthew Arnold" is suggested, and this player also scores a point.

To the third player a new surname is given. In brief, the old-numbered players have surnames to which to add Christian names, and each even-numbered player takes the Christian name given by his predecessor, and fits it with a new surname. For each success a point is scored.

But some persons "have a bad memory for names," as the saying is, and in this kind of a game fall far behind. In fairness to them, the leader, after each name has been completed, calls the roll for interesting facts about the celebrity, and the player who supplies a fact scores a point.

The principal of a public school devised the game of "Celebrities" after hearing one of his teachers speak of "James G. Whittier," and another dilate upon the oratory of "Darius Webster." He has taught the game to scholars who are not well-informed, as well as to the teachers who were sometimes careless, and has found that it interested all and did them good.

"Knowledge that is not accurate is not very useful," the principal says. But his game does more than promote accuracy; it introduces players to men and women who, heretofore, had been "less than a name," leads to the study of their lives, and thus provides the students with new examples, ideals and inspirations.—Youth's Companion.

Shadowgraphs.

At an evening party shadowgraphs are great fun. They are something like the effect produced by those curious mirrors of which you have all heard, which, at any one's merely moving backward or forward in front of them will make him or her short and stout or tall and thin, according to where the person is sanding.

All you need to make shadow pictures is a sheet or any large piece of rather thin white cloth, and a strong light. Suspend the cloth from the ceiling and place behind it the light. Now try receding from the screen and you will seem to be turning into a giant. If you move up nearer so that you are the same distance from the screen that the light is your outline will become distinct, and if you move up still nearer you will seem to have entirely disappeared. All sorts of funny potions can be shown which all will enjoy, and a whole play may be acted in pantomime by the moving shadows.

Quite Too Too.

"Where shall I meet you to-morrow?" asked Tom of Jack.

"Why," answered Jack, "I am going at 22222222ley street. Why don't you come, too?"

Where did they meet?

When Jack told Tom he was going to-morrow at 22222222ley street, Tom understood him to mean that at two minutes to 2 o'clock he was going to No. 222 Tooley street. Accordingly he had no difficuly in finding him at that address at the time specified.

White Women at Kabul.

A singular romance is related in connection with the announcement in the Irish newspapers of the death "at Kabul, Afghanistan, of Emily, widow of Henry Simpson Lincoln."

Some twelve years ago a young Indian Mohammedan studying at the Royal College of Surgeons at Dublin resided with Mrs. Lincoln, who was about 70 years of age, the London Daily Mail says. When the young Indian finished his studies she determined to accompany him back to India and left the Unitarian church for Mohammedanism. In the course of time the Indian obtained a position in Kabul as secretary to the amir of Afghanistan, and there Mrs. Lincoln followed him, braving the formidable journey from Lahore to Kabul by horse and palanquin, although about 80 years of age.

Arriving at Kabul, she was obliged to live in the retirement observed by Mohamedan women and saw the young Indian no more, though she was allowed to talk with him unseen.

Her last letters to her Dublin friends told of loneliness beyond expression and of her belief of approaching death. Almost immediately afterward came a telegram stating that she had passed away.

Enterprising Editor.

A stroke of journalistic enterprise that exceeds even Yankee inventiveness is reported by a traveler recently returned from France. He visited a small French village, and reports that when almost everybody was at work in the fields the local newspaper announced that in the busy season all the important news would be condensed in a single short paragraph, and that the rest of the sheet would be smeared with a fly-killing compound, instead of printer's ink.

In a brief article the editor explained his plan.

"In this way," he said, "we shall be able to give our readers appreciable advantages, which are: First, the possibility of learning all the news of the day in a few minutes; second, the means of reducing the plague of noisome insects which poison the countryside and disseminate many diseases."

If such a book has not been written, some historian might make an interesting volume on the various European influences for and against the independence of America. One of the friends of America who does not appear in many of the popular histories was Jean Luzac of Leyden University. He was a correspondent of Washington, Jefferson and Adams, and through his newspaper helped the American cause on the continent of Europe. Washington thanked him for his services. Now the Netherland Society of Philadelphia and the Netherland Society of Letters at Leyden have united to erect a tablet to his memory at Leyden University.

John D. Rockefeller, the organizer of the greatest trust, has created, named and defined the one good trust. He calls it in his Reminiscences the "Benevolent Trust," an organization managed and supported by successful business men for the sole purpose of directing philanthropic work in the most practical and useful lines, of financing approved charities and placing money donated for benevolent objects where it will do the most good. He sees in his mind's eye the best business men of the country devoting their energies and means to the task of efficiently meeting all the philanthropic and educational needs of the country. That a useful trust with an enormous income and a wide field of operation might be organized on this plan is shown by the list of benefactions for last year. Although a year of business depression, the aggregate of gifts reached a total of $90,932,000. This was $50,000,000 less than the year previous, in the record of which were several exceptional benefactions, and less than the two preceding years, but it was a fine record for a bad year. The great aggregate of $441,502,115, nearly half a billion, devoted to public benefactions points to an endowment for charity, scientific research and educational desources and opportunities which staggers the imagination. It indicates the growth of the altruism and idealism leavening American money-madness, and foreshadows an era of social development hitherto undreamt of.

Ten or fifteen years ago the farm mortgage in the West was synonymous with ruin. That was because the rapid development of Western States by men with little or no capital had been checked by a series of years of crop failure combined with nation-wide industrial depression. Only too many of the borrowers found themselves without resources to tide over the hard times. Then came a period of recuperation on the basis of splendid crops for many successive years. The debotrs put all their energies at work to pay off their creditors, and some of the Western States got themselves into such a condition that a farm mortgage was almost as hard to find as a farm without a mortgage had been a few years previously. When that stage had been reached the fortunate farmers, along with the townspeople who shared their prosperity, found themselves accumulating funds which needed investment. Purchases of adjoining lands sent land values rapidly upward, and in many cases farmers began to purchase cheap lands still farther West for their sons. In this way Nebraska and Kansas and Dakota are engaged in doing now what Illinois and Indiana and Ohio did a generation ago. Such purchases often involve temporary debts, and so the farm mortgage now begins to become a little more frequent, but with an entirely different significance from what it had two decades ago. The Nebraska bureau of labor and industrial statistics reports that last year the farm mortgages filed amounted to a total of $34,400,000, as against $30,700,000 released, a slight increase. The city real estate mortgages filed amount to almost $14,000,000, as against $9,000,000 released, which indicates an era of home building, partly due to farmers moving into the city and acquiring town homes, while at the same time keeping their farms as a source of income. Chattel mortgages filed amounted to $34,400,000, as against $19,000,000 released, a large part of which may properly be attributed to the appearance of tenants on the farms which the owners are ceasing to work with their own hand. This mortgage extension is one stage in the movement of prosperity. There are no indications that States like Nebraska and Kansas can ever again suffier such depression as that of the '90s.

"There's Many a Slip."

This phrase originated with a poor slave. It was prophesied of a king, and the prophecy was fulfilled. When Ancaeus was King of Samos in the Grecian Archipelago, he planted an extensive vineyard, and oppressed his slaves so heavily in its cultivation that one of the bolder ones prophesied that he would never live to taste any of the wines. The King laughed and had the slave beaten. Then at last, when the wine was made, he sent for the slave to witness him drink the first glass of it in order to show him that the prophecy was false. When the servant appeared, the King, raising his glass of wine, said, "What do you think of your prophecy now?" "There is many a slip 'twixt cup and lip," was the answer. The words were scarcely uttered when Ancaeus was informed that a wild boar had broken into the vineyard and was ruining it. Dropping the wine untasted the King hastened to the scene to drive out the boar, but he was killed in the encounter, and the slave's prophecy was fulfilled.

The First Scapegoat.

The word "scapegoat" originated in an ancient Hebrew custom practiced at the feast of the Passover. Placing a young goat upon the altar, the priests would pray over it, asking that all the sins of the people be visited upon the goat. Then, after each member of the tribe had transferred his guilt to the victim by laying on his hands, the animal was turned loose in the forests to be devoured by wild beasts.

Trade Terms.

"How much," began the lady to Baxter, in temporary charge of the coal yard, "how much is stove coal now?"

"That depends," said Baxter, with whom language is often a vehicle of confusion. "A la carte, it's seven an' a half. Cul-de-sac, it'll cost you fifty cents extry."

CURTAINS DRAWN ASIDE.

The observance of the anti-curtain or open saloon window was taken into consideration Saturday, and compliance with the act was made in a somewhat half hearted way by most of the saloon men of the city. Only two made a complete sweep of their curtains, the others leaving their doors or portions of their windows obstructed. Nothing will be done in the matter by the officers pending an opinion asked from the attorney general as to the right of one of the local saloon men in boarding up his window in lieu of the curtains, leaving a space in the door only. The law says no obstruction of the interior of a saloon shall be made that will obstruct the view of such interior from the street. The attorney general, in a published summary of a decision, says no partition, screen or other devise is permissible, while local dealers claim that one window left unobstructed where one can go and get an unobstructed view of the interior is a full compliance of the law. This latter view is held by some local attorneys, including the prosecutor, while the sheriff holds that the intent of the law is that where windows existed prior to the passage of the act such windows should be unobstructed now.

COUNTY ROAD WORK.

"One of the best roads in the county," is the way Engineeer FitzHenry sizes up the Burnt Mountain cut-off, just completed by Dave Govan. "The contract calls for a sixteen foot road, but he has made it twenty feet wide most of the way." Referring to the Coventon contract on Indian creek, a portion of the Lake Crescent road, which had just been completed, Mr. FitzHenry stated he had been compelled to reject the work as it stands, as about half of it is not so wide as the contract calls for.

"I hated to do it," he said, "as Coventon has done good work. The grade doesn't vary a half inch from the survey. But when it is gravelled there will be roadway for only one team at a time. We have a similar instance in a road in the West End which has just been graveled. It's too bad the contract was taken so low, but the road must be of the proper width."

The Townsend Commercial Club cannot see its way clear to accept the proposition of the Angeles Club to match its pledge of $300 a month, made in an endeavor to secure a fast boat from Seattle to Victoria, stopping at Townsend and Angeles, and the matter has been dropped.

MRS. LINA HOARE AT REST.

Mrs. Lina Hoare, who has been in poor health for the past year or two, and who has been gradually failing for several months, passed away in this city Sunday morning, June 13th.

Lina G. Hisner was born in Germany, June 1, 1844, and came to this country with her parents when quite young. She was married to Edward Hoare at Sangatuck, Mich., in 1865. In 1889 they moved to Tacoma, Wash., and to Port Angeles in 1892. Deceased was the mother of five children, Edward Hoare and Mrs. Ellen Kenney of Seattle, and Mrs. Sarah Silverwood of this city survive her. She buried two sons at Sangatuck, and her husband in Ocean View cemetery, in the spring of 1906.

In early life she gave her heart to God, uniting with the German Lutheran church, and was a faithful and consistent Christian. Coming to Angeles she affiliated with the membership of the M. E. Church until the organization of the first Lutheran church in Angeles, of which organization she was largely instrumental. She was a member of the Woman's Relief Corps for twenty-two years, and a charter member, her name appearing first upon the list, of Degree of Honor of this state; through her efforts the local order was organized.

Thus, after a lingering illness, borne with Christian meekness, this most excellent woman has passed from the world of the dying to the land of the ever-living, a loving wife, a tender mother and a devoted Christian. While relatives and friends mourn her departure, the eye of faith beholds her radiant among the pure spirits, whose names are recorded in the Lamb's book of life.

Funeral services were held at the M. E. Church Tuesday, conducted by Rev. C. E. Fulmer, assisted by Rev. J. M. Hixson. The Relief Corps and the Degree of Honor, attended the services as organizations. The floral tributes were beautiful in design and generous in abundance. Interment was in Ocean View beside the grave of her husband.

Card of Thanks—We wish to extend our most heartfelt thanks for the many courtesies and kind favors shown to our beloved mother, as well as ourselves, during her illness and at the time of her death.

Edward Hoare.
Sarah Silverwood.
Ellen Kenney.

Mrs. August Palmquist of Ozette was in the city Wednesday in interest of her property on Ozette Lake. The Grays Harbor and Puget Sound Railway company has a right-of-way over her premises, and now seeks to obtain an additional 32 acres or all her lands facing on the water and in order to condemn this property have made a V-shaped switch at that particular point. Mrs. Palmquist is willing to give what is right to assist a railroad coming into the county, but feels that she should not give up all of her best and most valuable property. This property is destined to become very valuable as a stragetic point and she feels that it should not be taken from her at anywhere near the present values.

The Children's Day observances at the M. E. church Sunday evening were of a most pleasing character. The program, prepared by Mrs. Hixson, was a good one and well rendered. The exercises were almost entirely by the children of the Sunday school, and were very interesting. The church was filled to the doors and everybody seemed to enjoy the service.

Misses Powell, Russell and Robinson, of the Angeles schools, left yesterday for Bellingham, where they will attend the summer school at the Normal; Miss Marsh went up to Seattle to meet her sisters, who are coming ont from Michigan to see the Exposition.

George Lamb, formerly deputy under Treasurer Dorsey, was here Tuesday from his ranch home on the Hoko on business.

R. D. Willson, Worshipful Master of the Angeles lodge, is attending the Masonic meetings at Seattle this week.

Miss Mary McClure returned Saturday from a two-week's visit at Seattle and other up sound points.

Foley's Honey and Tar is especially recommended for chronic throat and lung troubles and many sufferers from bronchitis, asthma and consumption have found comfort and relief, by using Foley's Honey and Tar.

ALBION IN COLLISION.

With a hole in her bow, the steamboat Albion, owned by the Port Angeles Brewing & Malting Company and operated by Capt. Stetson between this city and Port Angeles with freight, was beached Friday night in the nick of time near Luna Park after running into a scow off Dungeness Head while going from the city dock on her trip. In referring to the condition of the vessel, Attorney Thomas B. McMahon of West Seattle, who in his daily swim in the bay, inspected the Albion this morning said:

"She was lucky in having been beached before going to the bottom. She is high and dry on the beach and the condition of the hull below the water line indicates that she had a miraculous escape."—Seattle Times.

The funeral services of George E. Winters, who died Monday evening, the 14th, were held at the First M. E. Church Wednesday, Rev. J. M. Hixson officiating; burial was at Ocean View. Mr. Winters was born at Fort Madison, Iowa, in 1855; came to Port Angeles in 1844, thus being one of the city's earliest residents. He helped to build the Globe Hotel, the first building on the West Front street. He has lived on the home ranch, three miles east of Angeles, for the past 24 years. He leaves wife and five children: Mrs. Jas. Page, Mrs. J. W. Pike, Oscar, John and Robert.

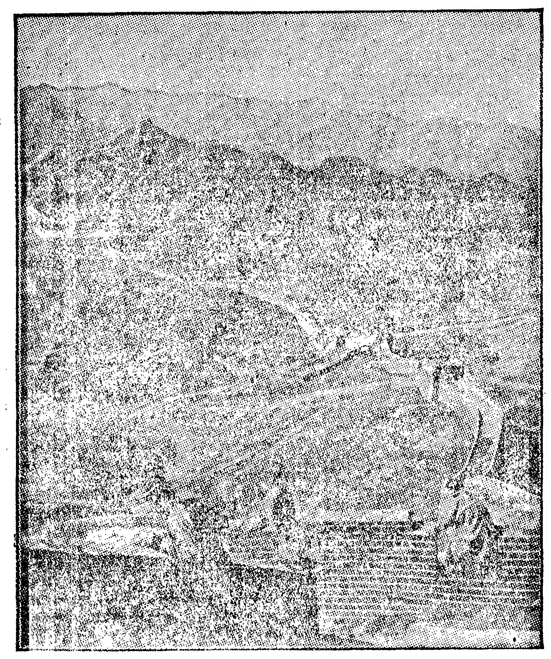
WHAT ANY PEOPLE ON MARS MIGHT SEE.



A Section of the Great Chinese Wall.

The Great Wall of China, an eighth wonder of the world, owes its being to Shi-Hwang-Ti, the first Emperor of United China, "who cut the grand canals that still intersect China; who built palaces and roads, walled cities and ships, and then, jealous of the fame which the founders of the earlier dynasties had earned in the hearts of his letter-loving population, ordered the famous burning of the books." So says B. L. Putnam Weale's "The Re-Shaping of the Far East." The wall is 1,800 miles long, and was constructed between the years 214 and 204 B. C. Dealing with it in "China, the Long-Lived Empire," Miss E. R. Scidmore describes it as "the one artificial construction on the face of the earth that may be seen by the inhabitants of Mars," an opinion that gains additional interest from Prof. Lowell's recent experiments to prove that narrow lines (such as the Great Wall) can be seen from great distances, provided always that their length is greatly out of proportion to their width.—London Illustrated News.

Marvelous, Quaint and Curious.

Scriptural Antiquities.

The rude musical instruments here represented have been collected by modern travelers, and are but little changed from the ancient forms. The drum or timbre! marked A is made of thin baked clay, something in the shape of a bottle, with parchment stretched over the wider part. On being struck with the finger this instrument makes a remarkably loud sound. These relics are lodged in the London Scriptural Museum, and are all ticketed with the texts they serve to illustrate. This arrangement is very judicious, and gives a great additional interest to the sacred objects while under inspection.

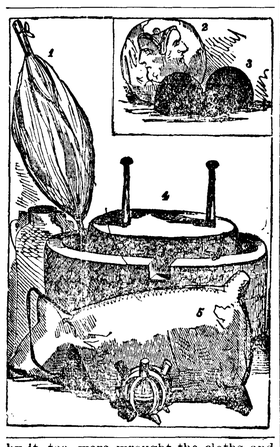
The distaff was the instrument which wrought the materials for the robes of the Egyptian kings, and for the "little coat" which Hannah made for Samuel;



by it, too, were wrought the cloths and other fabrics used in Solomon's temple. By reference to the engraving it will be seen that nothing can be more simple than this ancient instrument, which is a sort of wooden skewer, round which the flax is wrapped; it is then spun on the ground in the same manner as a boy's top, and the thread wrought off and wound upon a reel shown in the foreground of the picture.

"Querns," or stone hand-mills of various sizes, similar to that represented in our engraving, have been repeatedly found in connection with Roman, Saxon and other ancient remains in England. They are still to be met with in constant use over the greater part of India, in Africa and also those districts of the East which are more particularly associated with Holy Writ. It may be worth while to mention that this description of mill is an improvement upon the method of simply crushing the corn laid on a flat stone with another held in the hand. The "Quern" is a hard stone roughly rounded, and partly hollowed, into which another stone, which has a handle, is loosely fitted. The corn required to be ground is placed in the hollow receptacle, and the inner stone is moved rapidly round, and, in course of time, by immense labor, the wheat, etc., is ground into flour. The Scripture prophecies mention that of two women grinding at the mill, one shall be left and the other taken—the two-handled mill will explain the meaning of this passage.

HE TRIED TAKING LESS SLEEP.

Easy After Awhile, but Permitted No Sunday Indulgences.

"I've been trying the new theory that it is not only possible, but more healthy to get along with less sleep than the average seven to nine hours we have always believed in," says a young literary man of Germantown, according to the Philadelphia Record. "Perhaps my experience is going to be like the farmer's who was just at the height of success in training his horse to get along without any food at all when the animal interrupted the experiment by dying. However, it may be too early to tell.

"For ten days up to last Sunday I managed to do with four hours a night, sitting up until 4 o'clock and getting up at 8. At first it was an awful pull, and for all work I did I might as well have been in bed, but toward the last it really did seem that I was getting used to it. I lost the sleepy feeling at night, and got up feeling fresh, and didn't seem to suffer in any way. Last Sunday morning, however, I did not get up. I slept, in fact, until 12 o'clock. Then I got up to have some breakfast and immediately afterward I was attacked with drowsiness.

I struggled against it, but only a little, for I suddenly began to realize that no power on earth, no fear of punishment, nor hope of reward, here or hereafter, could keep me out of that bed. Like a drunkard I went back and slept until Monday morning, and only got up then because I had to. I have slept seven hours a day since, but I haven't yet got over the feeling that I could sleep a thousand. If I want to continue the experiment I must get a lot of sleep ahead, and then not let any Sunday luxury interrupt it.

"The advocates of the new theory say you must get and keep a grip on yourself; also they suggest a vegetarian diet. One of them told me when I asked him how little I ought to sleep that Alexander van Humboldt, who died at 80, wrote at 76: 'As I get older I want more sleep—four hours at least. When I was young two hours were quite enough for me."

Some men are so full of conceit that they constitute a parade when walking by themselves.

There are few women who don't pass around apologies for their refreshments.

Race of the Dictionaries.

There are hurdle races, trotting races, bicycle races, and a score of other races, but whoever heard of a dictionary race?

Most simple thing in the world! By looking at the pictures you will get an idea of how this very singular race is conducted. The contestants take the position shown, each with his dictionary "jockey" a-straddle him, and at the word "go" move themselves feet first toward the goal line, which they may see by looking between their knees over the dictionary. The one who reaches the line first and is still mounted by his learned "jockey" wins the race.

This is no easy matter, for the motion a boy creates while in this strange position keeps his stomach working up and down, and the faster he goes the more apt he is to slide the dictionary "jockey" off of it, which instantly puts him out of the race.

DICTIONARY "JOCKEYS" RIDING.

School dictionaries are plenty large enough; indeed, it would be next to impossible for the average boy to ride under such a heavy-weight as the unabridged. But you need not confine the race to dictionaries alone. Think of the other books!

For instance, there's the "Three R's Handcap." The participants in this race are those well known studies, Readin' (represented by the school reader), 'Ritin' (represented by a copy book), and 'Rithmetic (represented by an arithmetic). And it is a real handicap race because the reader and the arithmetic are so much harder to keep in position than the light, flexible copy book.

Besides being very funny, these unique races prove something else, too, in a way, for by them you and your friends can literally see "how fast you get on with your book!"

Impossible Feats.

Many things are harder to do than they at first seem. For your friend who is possessed of a surplus of self-confidence, propose some of these seemingly simple, but really impossible feats

Ask him to rub his ear with his elbow.

Ask him to stand with his heels against the wall and pick a handkerchief up from the floor.

Ask him to stand, blindfolded, for five minutes without moving.

Propose to him that he cannot break a match laid across the nail of his middle finger and under his first and third fingers. He will be pretty sure to try this, but all his efforts will prove in vain.

Ask him to get up from the chair in which he is sitting without bending his body or putting his feet under the chair.

Ask him to stand at the side of the room with both feet placed lengthwise against the wainscoting.

If he is clever, he may possibly be able to stand up when placed facing the wall with his feet about two feet away from it, and his head bent forward until it touches the wall.

A Little Indian Maid.

The Indian girls were always brought up to think that it is a disgrace to have their hair cut short like a boy's. Little Zitkala-Sa, who was born in a tepee, or Indian wigwam, and lived there with her mother until she was nine years old, came East to a school where Indian children were being taught and trained in the ways of the white children. She arrived late one night, and found it very strange indeed to sleep in such a bed as other children are used to. Next day she was dressed in clothing like the white children's and her own loose bright colored garments and soft beaded moccasins were taken away from her. She felt very shy and strange in the close-fitting brown calico gown, the stiff shoes were most uncomfortable, but the really hard part came when the teacher approached her with a big pair of shears and began clipping off the long, straight, black hair that hung to her waist. Poor little Zitkala-Sa, knowing nothing of the strange tongue that was spoken all around her, and feeling that she must have been very naughty indeed to deserve to lose her hair, crept away from the teacher's room at last looking like quite another child than the merry little maiden who used to ride her pony over the Dakota hills. Running down the long halls, she fled into a dark room at the end and crawled under the bed. She would never come out again to let people see her disgrace, no, never again. When supper time came and the new little girl was nowhere to be found, a search was started, and at last they discovered her, curled up fast asleep under the bed, her sorrows forgotten in sleep. The teachers were used to the shyness and strangeness of the Indian boys and girls, and their kindness soon cheered her warm, loving heart. Before very long she was glad to be free of the troublesome hair and her close-cropped little head bobbed about as merrily as the others in the games of the school yard.

Poor Dolly.

If you were Dolly, wouldn't you
Be cold enough to freeze?
Suppose you had a china head
And double-jointed knees,
With springs that let the air right through
In ev'ry little crack;
You'd have neuralgia all the time
And shivers up your back.

How Dolly keeps her rosy cheeks
I really cannot tell;
I know there must be many days
She can't be very well.
But could you see that blessed child
You surely would not think
That all her life those lovely eyes
Had never slept a wink.

And though I know she won't complain,
I must take care, you see,
For Dolly is the sweetest child,
And very dear to me.
And so I try the wisest way,
And keep her warm and well,
And judge her feelings by my own,
'Cause dollies never tell.

FRESH AIR AND VENTILATION.

Some Directions Relating to Bedrooms and Clothing.

First, and very important: Keep your bed and bedroom warm and dry during the day. An open window and a cold room will make the bed damp and cold, says the Living Church, and will give its unfortunate occupant a severe cold at least, if not worse. A damp bed is a veritable brooding place of bacteria. Many housekeepers, having heard of the necessity of fresh air, leave the bedroom window open during the day, filling it with cold air when none is needed and then close the window for the night, when the room is occupied and fresh air is needed in abundance. Any one can see how contrary to common sense such procedure is.

The custom of some housekeepers to keep the "spare room" closed at all times and then opening it only for warming it just before putting a guest into it, is, to put it mildly, very thoughtless. Cold objects, bedding included, when exposed to sudden heat, condense the moisture in the air and consequently such beds are always damp and cold, and are the most unhealthful and should be avoided even by guests. Better go to an up-to-date hotel or walk home any number of miles than to sleep in such a bed.

Second—All your clothing worn in the daytime, footwear included, open out and hang over chairs, or on hooks near the stove or register to dry and air during the night. If you neglect this simple, sanitary measure your clothing will feel damp and cold in the morning, because it still contains the evaporations from your body during the previous day, and after a while your clothing will have an unpleasant odor from these evaporations. Drying and airing your footwear during the night will keep your feet from sweating, coldness and bad odors.

Third—Your bed and room, warm and dry, should have plenty of lightweight bedding. Then just before retiring close the door and open a window from the bottom. Where more than one person sleeps in a room the window must be raised higher. This will give an abundance of fresh air while you sleep. Place the bed so that the fresh-air current will not strike you directly. Protected in your dry, warm bed—as cozy as a bug in a rug—the air, cold, pure and fresh, freighted with oxygen, a very elixir of life, will quiet your nerves, will rest you, will sooth you and give you healing and strength. When arising in the morning close the window quickly and let the heat come into the room. Then, dressed in your aired and dry day-clothing, you will feel clean, fresh and vigorous.

Fourth—Keep your living rooms well ventilated in day time. If no other provision is made for ventilation, get one of those attachments to a stovepipe or flue which take the cold air from the floor. Foul air being heavier than warm air, naturally sinks near or to the floor and by the above mentioned apparatus escapes to the flue. How many sitting rooms of even well-to-do people have a very offensive odor from lack of ventilation!

Fifth—Our northern wells contain the most excellent mineral waters. Morning and evening, cleanse your nasal passages and gargle the throat with fresh, cold water. This will cure a catarrh without the aid of medicine, and will cure the most colds.

Soon Satisfied.

A poor, half-fed, shrinking German peddler rapped timidly, Mrs. Kelly, whose temper that day was bad, flung open the kitchen door and glowered down at him. Everybody's Magazine tells the story.

"Did yez wish to see me?" she demanded, in threatening tones.

The man backed off a few steps.

"Vell, if I did," he assured her, with an apologetic grin, "I got my vish. Thank you!"

Before demanding your own way, it is well to consider whether you would be willing to grant everyone else the same privilege.

CHILDREN OF THE RICH.

How Some of Them Are Being Prepared for Life's Duties.

An amateur investigator has discovered the following instances of the way in which some New York children are made ready to struggle with life.

"Think of a girl of 13," she said, "who has been taught to believe that all her birthday means is the gift of a beautiful pearl from her grandmother. From her very first birthday that fact has been the most important thing that has happened to mark the anniversary of her entrance into the joys of this life. Her grandmother was like all her family, very rich. It occurred to her that she would like her granddaughter to have a pearl necklace that should be as fine as any that money could buy. So she hit on the idea of presenting the child with a superb pearl every year.

"In the meantime all the childish joy of the child's birthday celebration has been made to lie in the acquisition of that pearl. It has for twelve birthdays been the engrossing event of the celebration.

"Almost as singular in its exhibition of a parent's idea of the right sort of influence for a child is the occupation of a 14-year-old boy that I know. He has been entrusted by his family with the care of all the social duties of his mother and the other members of the family.

"He takes charge of all the cards received at the house, sees to it that cards are sent in return and acts as sort of social secretary for his sisters as well as for the other older members of the family. They are very much amused by the enthusiasm and cleverness with which he relieves them of all social responsibility.

"He is now 14, and that is an age at which seriousness may without too much emphasis be allowed to play some part in a boy's life. Yet his parents apparently think that what he is doing is important enough to be allowed to occupy much of the time that should in fact be spent at his books or in some more serious way. What he will think about when he is 21 it is not possible to say. Perhaps he will outgrow his obsession with cardboard and stationery.

"But what will be the future of the 13-year-old girl who was taken to Europe last summer for her first educational tour? She went with her father and mother, and there was scarcely a corner of Europe they did not visit. They traveled indeed more than 12,000 miles. They are quite sure about that, for they went in a motor and they have the record of the trip.

"Those 12,000 miles were so divided that the usual speed during all their journey was forty miles an hour. What a comprehensive idea of Europe that girl must have got on her first educational trip to Europe! How must her youthful imagination have been stirred by the sight of the strange and quaint sights she saw in those strange lands, traveling at the rate of forty miles an hour!

"With all there is in European travel to stimulate a child's mind if there be the opportunity to enjoy what she sees, think of chasing her across foreign countries at such a breakneck speed! No wonder she is not able to this day to recall a single scene outside of her experiences on the steamer, which are about all of what she remembers."

Meanley—No, sir; I don't believe in paying fancy prices to have clothes made to order. Now, here's a suit I bought, ready made, for $9. If I should tell you I paid $25 for it, wouldn't you believe it? Knox—I might if you told me over the telephone.—Catholic Standard and Times.

A man would rather lose $25 at the race-track than give it to his wife to buy a bonnet.

VISITING HOUSEKEEPER.

A Profitable Profession Followed by a New York Woman.

"My earnings amount to $30 a week and I have named my trade visiting housekeeper to business women," said a young New York widow who has the support and education of four small children to look after. "It was a question of putting my children in an institution or of finding some way by which I could make a living at home. There are several business women who live in the same uptown flat house with me. None of them feels that she is able to keep a regular servant, and the cleaning woman who came to them weekly never did what they wanted.

"They were always envying me my neat rooms. One day the thought struck me and I offered to do their weekly cleaning and mending. My charges were $2 a week for cleaning and 50 cents for mending. To the cleaning woman who always accompanies me I pay $1 a day besides giving her three meals.

"This woman comes in at 8 a. m. and after eating her breakfast helps me to get the children off to school. Then we set my own little flat to rights. After this is properly accomplished we begin the real work of the day making the flats of my patrons shine like new.

"While my woman scrubs, cleans, airs and makes the beds I mend and prepare the clothes, house linen and personal apparel for the laundry. I see that the curtains are kept fresh and clean, that the china and glass are washed and polished. I clean the silver and knives and do the thousand and one little things necessary to make a flat look home-like.

"When I was beginning women refused to consider my proposition because they said that while they trusted me they didn't feel that I could guarantee my cleaner. Although I now trust my cleaning woman and would leave her in my own home without the slightest hesitancy, I see that she has precious few opportunities of pilfering if she should be so inclined."

Legal Information

The possibility of reverter under a deed of property to a church with the proviso that it should revert to the grantor whenever it ceased to be used for church purposes, is held, in North vs. Graham, 235 Ill. 127, 85 N. E. 267, 18 L. R. A. (N. S.) 624, to be within the meaning of a statute providing that estates, both real and personal, of persons dying intestate, "shall descend" and be cast upon the grantor's heirs at the time of his death, and not at the time that he use of the property ceases.

An applicant for life insurance, who from motives of his own has sought and obtained a professional interview with a physician regarding the state of his health, is held in Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. vs. Brubaker (Kan.), 96 Pac. 62, 18 L. R. A. (N. S.) 362, not to be able truthfully to answer in the negative the question, "Have you consulted any other physician?" merely because the interview concerned some temporary ailment or indisposition slight in character and not seriously affecting his health.

Where a horse takes fright, without fault of the driver, at something for which the municipality is not responsible, and gets beyond the control of the driver, runs away and comes in contact with some obstruction or defect in the street, which is there by the negligence of the municipality, it is held, in McDowell vs. Preston, 104 Minn. 263, 116 N. W. 470, 18 L. R. A. (N. S.) 190, that the municipality is liable for the result of the injury if it would not have been sustained except for such negligence.

The repeated posting on a debtor's door, in a public hall, of cards requesting him to call and pay the debt which he has acknowledged to be due, is held, in Slater vs. Taylor, 31 App. D. C. 100, 18 L. R. A. (N. S.) 77, to furnish probable cause for securing arrest of one so doing, under a statute providing for the punishment of one who accuses another of conduct which would tend to disgrace him or in any way render him subject to the contempt of society, with intent to extort frem him anything of value, or compel him to do or refrain from doing any act.

Federal Control of Forests.

At present but one-fifth of the total forest area of the United States is embraced in national forests. The remaining four-fifths have already passed or are most likely to pass into private hands. The average age of the trees felled for lumber this year is not less than 150 years. In other words, observes Caspar Whitney in the Outing Magazine, if he is to secure a second crop of trees of the same size, the lumberman or private forest owner must wait, say, at least 100 years for the second crop to grow.

"Cowes is a well-known watering place."

"There, I knew it!"

The Three Sailor Boys.

Oh, we're three jolly, jolly sailor boys,
And we're newly home from South Amerikee,
With our hearts still tingling with the salt, salt wind
And the tumbling and tossing of the sea.
Oh, honey, we've our pockets full of money;
Will you trip, trip, trip, will you trip it on the quay?
For the wind is in the sail and the thunder in the gale,
And the good ship plunging to be free.

There were three pretty girls in merry Portsmouth town,
And each was like a posey on the tree;
There was great-eyed Margaret and trimset Sal,
And sweet Kitty from the north countree.
No, honey, tho' your pocket's full of money,
We won't trip, trip, trip, we won't trip it on the quay,
Till you've set the clerk a-singing and the wedding bells a-ringing,
And the parson has pocketed his fee.

Then up we spake, we jolly sailor boys,
All arm in arm, so jolly for to see,
"There are girls beside the waters of Janeiro or Gibraltar
Who can dance right merrily as ye.
So, honey, while our pocket's full of money,
Come trip, trip, trip, come and trip it on the quay,
For we sailors love the ocean, and the change and the commotion,
And the good ship plunging on the sea."
—Theo Marzials.

A Builder's Lesson.

"How shall I a habit break?"
As you did that habit make.
As you gathered, you must lose;
As you yielded, now refuse.
Thread by thread the strands we twist,
Till they bind us neck and wrist;
Thread by thread the patient hand
Must untwine ere free we stand.
As we builded, stone by stone,
We must toil unhelped, alone,
Till the wall is overthrown.

But remember, as we try,
Lighter every test goes by;
Wading in, the stream grows deep
Toward the center's downward sweep;
Backward turn, each step ashore
Shallower is than that before.
Ah, the precious years we waste
Leveling what we raised in haste;
Doing what must be undone
Ere content or love be won!
First across the gulf we cast
Kite-borne threads, till lines are passed
And habit builds the bridge at last!
—John Boyle O'Reilly.

LIFE IN A JAPANESE PRISON.

Industrious Convicts Sometimes Support Their Families.

In the bamboo-carving shed was a different class of men. The physiognomy was a revelation—large, intellectual foreheads; bright, intelligent eyes; clear-cut mouths. Only one man reminded me of other convicts I had seen in England. He was short in stature, the eyes were small and oblique, the forehead narrow and receding, the ears large and the jowl flabby. His crime was manslaughter. He was the chief actor in a drama of jealousy that was played to a fatal finish in one of the hovels of Tokyo's east end. A faithless wife, a hypocritical friend, a surprise and in the narrow hovel a fight to the death had been waged, the guilty wife the only witness. He did not look up as I passed him, this humble Othello. With marvelous dexterity he was fashioning in bamboo an angel with outstretched wings, a writer in the Wide World magazine says.

In the weaving department the convicts were making uniforms for the army. Piles of the finished garments lay on the shelves around the shop and here again the workmanship was perfect. And how they worked! The shuttles were thrown through the warps by hand and it was obvious that the weavers were old "lags."

"It pays them to be industrious," said the warden. "The average convict makes 10 sens (5 cents) a day; 4 sens go into his own personal account. A skilled worker will make 20 sens a day, 8 being his own again. Some of these men actually support their families on what they earn in prison! As you know, the average coolie can live on 50 sens a month."

One old man, whose eyebrows reminded me of white feathers laid on the forehead of a bronze statue, was critically regarding a newly-made khaki coat. He was an old burglar, who had spent most of his declining years in the prison. He had become an expert tailor and was held by the authorities in something akin to esteem. He had sons who had fought for the Emperor in Manchuria; one followed Nogi to Port Arthur and never returned. I tried to read the old man's thoughts as I watched his nervous, wispy fingers fold the dun-colored coat. I wondered if he ever pictured in his mind a bruised, shell-maimed, huddled form lying on the slopes of that mighty fortress of the east, a form enfolded in a garment that his old father might have made in the peaceful calm of Sugamo prison.

"When we take charge of the government," says the wise old suffragette, "we will make some changes in the naval bureau." "I should hope so" agrees the enthusiastic young suffragette. "Why, bureaus are hopelessly out of style! We will have a combination wardrobe and chiffonier."

"I understand you have invented an air ship that won't tip over." "That is my belief," replied the cautious inventor. "At least it won't tip over while on the ground, and it hasn't been anywhere else yet." — Philadelphia Ledger.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

In Use For Over 30 Years

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

The Minnesota medical examiner for one of the Eastern life insurance companies lately proposed to a gathering of insurance men that all policy-holders be re-examined by a physician once in five years. If this should be done, the average length of life would, in his opinion, be increased. The presence of grave diseases could be detected in time to check the progress of the incurable ailments and to cure those which will yield to treatment. There is no doubt of the correctness of this view, but the life insurance companies are not yet ready to go to the expense necessary to make the re-examination. The policy holders themselves are more deeply interested in the subject than the companies. In the department of fire insurance the members of various local mutual companies have long realized this. The companies have regulations for the prevention of fires and for the proper safeguarding of all inflammable material stored in the buildings which they insure. Those who will not obey the regulations cannot get insurance in such companies. Those already insured, out of whose payments the losses must be met, will not consent to assume the risk for a careless person. One of the stock insurance companies, hoping that it can assist in reducing the number of fires, has lately been advertising that it will send free to all applicants a book on "Fire Prevention and Fire Insurance," containing instructions for reducing the liability to fire in houses, stores and factories. Lessening the danger of fire and its destructiveness will result in lower insurance rates, which are now much higher here than they are in European countries. The destruction of property by fire can be reduced by known preventive measures, and human life can be prolonged by calling on the physician in time. The application of these remedies would be followed by a great reduction in the rates of life and fire insurance, and would result in preserving the family unbroken for a longer period. But we have not yet reached the wisdom of the Chinese, who pay the physician only so long as he prevents disease.

Tea Rolls.

Heat two cups of milk in double boiler to the scalding point; add a tablespoonful of butter and one of sugar and a level teaspoonful of salt; when cool, add one-half yeast cake dissolved in a little lukewarm water; mix with flour to make a dough that can be kneaded for fifteen minutes; cover and let rise, then shape into rolls; set in a buttered pan and let rise again before baking.

Foredoomed.

There is a man in a Midland town whose name is Burst. It is misfortune that would not have attracted much attention if he had not called his two children Annie May and Ernest Will.—Tid-Bits.

Beef Sandwiches.

To two parts of chopped, lean, rare beef add one part of finely minced celery, salt, pepper and a little made mustard. Place on a lettuce leaf between thin slices of bread and butter.

Don't Pile Hot Dishes.

A point to be given the new waitress is that china plates, cups and saucers should not be piled one upon another while they are hot. They must be cool before they are packed, otherwise the glaze will crack easily.

Rub one-quarter cup of butter in two cups of flour and mix with ice water to make a stiff dough. Turn on to a floured board and roll as thin as possible. Cut in small rounds, lift with a knife to another part of the board, and roll as thin as paper. Lift with a bread knife on to a slightly floured pan and bake in a quick oven.

Fried Cakes.

Mix together a large cup of thick sour cream and a full cup of sugar. Add five small eggs, or four large ones, well beaten, one teaspoonful of baking soda and a little nutmeg. Add enough flour to make the proper thickness for frying. Do not put in too much at first, but try a bit of the dough in the boiling fat and if it is too soft add more flour to the dough.
