NAVAL LODGE WILL RUN EXCURSION SUNDAY

Round Trip $2.00. Return Good Until Next Saturday. Everybody Should See the Circus.

Naval Lodge has engaged the steamer Whatcom to take all Elks and their friends—and they wish it distinctly understood that everyone is a friend of the Elks on all occasions—to Seattle for the big doings there during the coming week. They have secured a round trip rate of $2, tickets good to return until July 31st, thus giving a whole week at the Exposition. Tickets are on sale at the Morse dock and it behooves every one to secure his early as the number of passengers the Whatcom can carry is limited and there will be a lot of people, anxious to take advantage of the lowest rate that will be made, who cannot go.

$5,000 SUPPLY STATION FOR SNOHOMISH

According to an official announcement from Washington the navy department has consented to the transferring to the treasury department of the warehouses and wharf at Ediz Hook, now controlled by it, to be used as a base of supplies for the life saving tug Snohomish. This establishment will take the place of the one which was planned at Waaddah island, but which presented such difficulties of construction that it was abandoned. The treasury department has recommended an appropriation of $5,000 to improve upon the wharf and warehouse.

WHEN THE PRESIDENT COMES

When President Taft visits Seattle the latter part of September, to attend the Exposition, it is predicted that the largest gathering ever known on the Pacific Coast will congregate. Arrangements are already under way to provide special entertainment for not only the President, but the crowds also. Three previous presidents have visited Seattle while in office: Hayes, Harrison, and Roosevelt. Each visit was a memorable occasion. The records for crowds established on these visits are certain to be shattered when "Big Bill" comes, not that he is a stranger to Seattle and the Northwest, but because he is so well known and so well liked here. The President will leave the East September 15th, stopping at Denver, Salt Lake and Spokane.

PARISH ON TAX COMMISSION

Thomas A. Parish has resigned as assessor of King county to become a member of the State Tax Commission at the invitation of Governor Hay. This promotion comes as a result of Mr. Parish's work in equalizing the taxes of the large corporations. By making them pay their just proportion, he established a precedent which is now being followed by other counties to their advantage. One of Mr. Parish's most notable acts was the raising of timber assessments in the off or personal property year, thus practically treating it as personal property, by which action King county more than paid for its entire cruise of timber.

BLIND PIGS NEAR COUNTY LINE

C. W. Estes of Bellingham, a Deputy U. S. Revenue Collector, was here the early week, after a trip into Western Jefferson county, where he found a "blind pig" operating. A peculiar feature of a trip of this kind is that the government, or the revenue collecting department of the government, only cares for the revenue and not for prosecution. If this man caught pays the government stamp tax of $25 he will be allowed as far as the government is concerned to sell until the expiration of his payment. Only on his refusal to pay the tax will he be prosecuted for illegal selling.

$2.00 FOR A BOX OF SIX PAIRS.

Ladies' Hole Proof Hosiery—guaranteed for six months — are now on sale at Kirschberg's, "on the corner."

A TOUCH OF SEATTLE SPIRIT NEEDED

There's Something to Be Done; Let's Get in and Do it, Should Be the County's Slogan.

J. M. Hutchinson of Port Townsend was in the city Saturday, representing the joint-committee, soliciting exhibits and urging the people to send samples of their fruit and farm and garden products to the Exposition. All contributions intended for the exhibit may be left at Lewis Levy's office and will be cared for and forwarded by Dr. N. K. Mead and A. A. Smith.

Remember the Clallam county exhibit is your exhibit. If it be not a credit to you and your county, the blame is upon you and you alone. No one man or committee of men can attend to the collecting of material for an exhibit and keep it fresh and up-to-date. A creditable exhibit is only to be installed and maintained by co-operation, the small contributions of the many. Those counties which have splendid exhibits — their people are wide awake and have put their shoulders to the wheel. If there is nothing, not one single article, in the display that has been contributed by you, the exhibit is not a credit to you, and you have no right to knock. Get in and boost, and do your share of the work.

WALKED FIVE MILES DURING DINNER

Last Saturday evening the ten young lady members of the Makeagoal Club entertained their gentle men friends at a progressive dinner. The first course, which consisted of oysters, was served by Misses Leah Myers and Margaret Ritchie at the home of the former. From there the young people journeyed up to the home of Miss Helen Trumbull where soup was served by an expert waitress, who afterwards gave the young people a very interesting lecture on "woman's rights." The fish course was served by Miss Lucy Bonker at her home. From here the merry crowd walked up to the home of Miss Laura Polhamus, where they had delicious potato salad; they then went down to Miss Bernice Allen's, who with Miss Jennie Finch, served a sumptous course consisting of meat, potatoes and peas; the young ladies were assisted by a most excellent chef. From here the crowd journeyed up to Miss Alice Swanson's, where a most delicious plum pudding was served; they were then treated to ice cream and cake, as well as participating in some excellent music, at Miss Grace McKechnie's. They then went to the home of Miss Mabel Gehrke for the eighth and last course, which consisted of coffee, candy and nuts. The dinner began at 6:30 p. m. and was completed at 12 p.m., about five miles having been covered in procuring it. One unique feature of the dinner was that partners were changed at each place. The guests were Messrs. McDonald, Filion, McKechnie, MacGillivray, Reuhle, Godfrey, Squires, Clinchard, Barrell and Graham.

With the waters at the entrance of the straits swarming with silver salmon, the Indians are not fishing, as a result of the price offered by buyers. There are several fish buyers at Neah Bay and it is said they combined and are offering the Indians eight cents a fish. The Indians on the other hand have fixed the price at fifteen cents and will not sell at a smaller figure. Reports from Neah Bay state that the run of silver salmon has not been so large for many years as at the present time.—Call.

KILLED BY FALLING TREE

Adolph Anderson, one of Clallam's earliest and most respected pioneers, was killed at the Filion-Wright mill last Saturday noon by a falling tree. He died within a few minutes. Anderson had taken the necessary precaution to hie to a place of safety as a tree was falling, but a limb of the falling tree caught a smaller one and sent it crashing in another direction, striking Mr. Anderson. The funeral was held Tuesday from the undertaking parlors of Willson & Fulmer, the services being conducted by Rev. C. E. Fulmer, and interment had in Ocean View Cemetery. PROTECTION DUE FOOLS SAYS SUPREME COURT

Olympia, July 19.—The supreme court, in a decision rendered last week, announced in effect that its jurisdiction includes the protection of fools from the consequences of their folly, in deciding the case of James T. Wooddy and rife against the Benton Water Company. It says: "No rogue should enjoy his ill gotten plunder for the simple reason that his victim is by chance a fool."

Wooddy traded a Whitman county farm to the Benton company for sitxy acres of land. He brought this suit for damages, claiming that he had been defrauded, as the land was too high to be irrigated from the canal. The defense was that he had personally inspected the land before he closed the deal and that the old rule of "let the purchaser beware" applied. The lower court granted a nonsuit. The supreme court, after announcing the ruling above quoted, reverses this decision and orders a new trial.

STATEMENT BY TAFT

PRESIDENT MAKES CLEAR POSITION ON TARIFF REVISION.

Republican Platform Promised Downward Revision and He Hopes to Be Able to Keep the Promise of His Party As Well As His Personal Assurances.

Washngton, July 17.—All doubt as to where President Taft stands with regard to the downward revision of the tariff was swept away last evening when a statement was given out at the White House setting forth in detail what the president had to say to twenty-three Republican members of congress who called to protest against putting raw materials on the free list.

The president in this statement declared that the Republican party was committed to a downward revision; that he never had any other idea of the Chicago platform, and that he personally has promised a downward revision.

This statement is interpreted in some quarters here as a direct notification to conferees on the tariff bill that if the measure they finally agree upon does not constitute a material reductino in specific duties the president will exercise the power of veto.

Dictated in the third person, the statement concludes with this final word of the president's attitude as outlined to his callers:

"He felt strongly the call of the country for a downward revision within the limits of the protective principles, and he hoped to be able to respond to that call, as he heard it as well in the interests of the party as of the country."

Creates Sensation

The president's statement created a sensation among senators and representatives. Senator Aldrich made no direct comment upon it, but said the conferees had decided to let Mr. Taft deal with schedules upon which they could not agree, it being up to the president to secure the votes necessary to pass the measure in the form in which it would be reported out of conference, as a result of his mediation between the house and senate conferees.

Presdent Taft, up ot this time, has not permitted himself to be quoted in connection with the tariff struggle. This frame of mind was indicated in his New Haven speech on June 30, however, in which he warned the Republican party that if it did not keep its promises it would be relegated to the minority.

The president now asserts for the first time his authority as the titular head of his party. As such he announces his conviction that the party platform meant a revision downward, and that no other interpretation can be placed upon it.

TAFT CONCEDED VICTOR IN TARIFF CONTENTION

Washington, July 17.—President Taft will win his fight for free raw materials or reduced duties. Nearly every member of the tariff conference conceded this today. The indications are that when the new tariff bill becomes a law the rates on the articles which the president desired to come in free will be as follows:

Iron ore, free (present rate 40 cents per ton); oil, free (now protected by countervailing duty); hides, 7½ per cent ad valorem (present rate 15 per cent); coal, 45 cents per ton (present rate 67 cents); lumber, probably $1.25 on rough with senate rates on finished. This would be a material reduction throughout the lumber schedule.

When the conferees transferred to the president's shoulders the responsibility of putting the foregoing raw materials on the free list, it was not believed he would meet with success in swinging congressmen and senators into line.

For several days, however, members of congress have been going to the White House and not a few of them came away convinced that the president was right in insisting on lower duties. It was acknowledged any reduction in rates on these articles would amount to an administration triumph.

Conferees' Warning.

In effect the president was told by the conferees that if iron ore, oil, coal, hides or lumber were put on the free list, or the rates reduced below the figures adopted by the senate he would "have to get the votes."

It was recognized that it would be impossible to put hides, lumber and coal on the free list if the conference report was to be adopted by the senate. Neither was it believed rates on these articles could be reduced.

That a change of sentiment had taken place in the senate in the matter of free iron ore and free oil was a matter of common gossip above the capitol today. It was stated just as confidently that the 15 per cent ad valorem rate on hides be cut in half, although some opponents of free hides are still hopeful of getting a duty of 10 per cent.

Coal at 45 cents a ton, it was declared, would prove satisfactory to every section except Wyoming, which fears the importation of cheap Canadian coal.

President Taft will win another decided victory in the Philippines free trade proposition. The subcommittee that has been considering this section has decided to permit the free admission of 150,000,000 cigars annually, as requested by the president, instead of 70,000,000, as would be admited under a senate amendment adopted at the instance of Mr. La Follette.

It is expected that the Philippine section, as approved by the subcommittee, will be adopted by the conferees on Monday. It provided for the free admission of 300,000 pounds of wrapper tobacco and 1,500,000 pounds of filler tobacco and 300,000 tons of sugar.

With the exception of rice and the limitation placed upon tobacco and sugar, all articles, "the growth, product or manufacture of the Philippine islands," will be admitted free. As originally adopted by the house, and later introduced in the senate, the Philippine section contained a provision requiring that manufactured articles, in order to obtain free admission into the United States, should not contain ingredients other than products of the islands.

The tariff conferees today settled the question of giving the secretary of the treasury authority to issue fifty-year 3 per cent bonds to cover the entire cost of the Panama canal.

The effect of the bond provision is to repeal the limit of the bond authorization of the Spooner act, although not interfering with 2 per cent bonds issued under that authority to the amount of $84,631,980. The estimated cost of the canal is $375,201,000, which will be the figure named in the new authorization, and bonds may be issued as they are needed at the rate of 3 per cent to the extent of $290,569,020.

Corporation Tax Sure.

There is no doubt that a 1 per cent tax on the net earnings of corporations will be accepted.

Practically the only subject considered during the forenoon session of the cenference was the woollen schedule. Reductions were made on women's and children's dress goods, tops and yarns.

The metal schedule, with the exception of iron ore and a few of its products, practically had been agreed upon.

The very fact that President Taft's statement was issued at all, and in particular the emphatic conclusion of the remarks of the president thus reiterated, made it clear to all who studied the pronouncement that the president intended it virtually as an ultimatum.

Many read into the statement a barely concealed threat on the part of the president that if the bill reached him in a form which he regarded as unfaithful to the promises of his party and disobedient to the sentiment of the mass of the people he would veto it. Some went so far as to say that the president's stand meant nothing less than the defeat of the bill. One man said:

"Now the stand-patters will become the insurgents; the lines will all have to be reformed and nobody can forecast the outcome."

Enviable Independence.

It is conceded even by the most bitter of the opposition that by his attitude thus far of "hands off" Mr. Taft has attained a position of enviable independence and that he has chosen an advantageous moment when each house of congress has fully discussed the question and placed itself unmistakably on record, and their joint product is in the hands of a conference committee, to present his views not only generally to the people but specifically to those who are in a position to act decisively on the subject matter.

The fact that the president has taken so positive a stand as he has, has had the effect of shifting the controversy of the two branches of congress between themselves to the president and congress as a whole. From this time forward it looks as if the question was not what the house will concede to the senate, or the senate to the house, but how much the president will demand and how much the conferees can concede and still make sure of the acceptance of the conference report by the two houses of congress. It is a good-natured fight, but it is a fight.

The great difficulty of meeting the president's demands will be encountered in the senate, where the raw material states have better proportionate representation and where there is no cloture rule. In the house as a whole, the tendency is toward the president's position, but several of the house conferees lean toward the senatorial view.

ALL FREIGHT CARS WILL SOON BE BUSY, SAYS HILL

Washington, July 19.—"As soon as the tariff is out of the way," said James J. Hill, who has been here for a few days, "this country will enjoy a prosperity which will at least equal that which it knew under the McKinley administration.

"Last month I traveled extensively through the West, and I never saw such activity among the farmers. Everywhere I made inquiry and learned and saw that crops were abundant and the farmers were satisfied. Signs of the financial depression of 1907 are fast fading.

"Freight cars will be at a premium within a few weeks. We of the railroad world judge the prosperity of the nation as much by the number of idle cars as by anything else. Throughout the past year there have been thousands of cars idle, but they will soon be rolling about the country filled with freight."

INCOME TAX DOOMED

AT LEAST SENATORS BELIEVE RATIFICATION IMPOSSIBLE.

With New England Solidly Opposed and Many in Doubtful Column—Legislatures of Three Fourths of the States May Fail To Endorse Measure.

Washington, D. C., July 17.—Senators who led the fight to secure an income tax amendment to the pending tariff bill do not believe that three-fourths of the states of the Union, through their legislatures, will ratify the proposed income tax amendment to the constitution. The refusal of 12 states to ratify such an amendment will defeat it, and they believe that 12 states can readily be held in check by powerful moneyed interests that wield tremendous influence, especially in the East.

To begin with, New England is solidly against the income tax. In addition, it is conceded that Pennsylvania New Jersey and Delaware are of like inclination. It is, of course, true that the bulk of an income tax, if levied by the federal government, would be collected in the states named, because of the excessive wealth and the fabulous incomes of the leading citizens of those nine states. But it is not alone because of this fact that New England and the other states named are counted as sure to refuse to ratify a constitutional amendment.

When the senate was struggling to stave off a vote on the income tax amendment the senators from Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Delaware and New Jersey were always recorded against it. The senators from those states dominate the legislatures. Having this control, and being unequivocally opposed to an income tax, it is very natural to presume that these senatorial bosses will be able, by the sheer exercise of power, to prevent favorable action upon the constitutional amendment which is to be submitted to the various states for ratification.

Need Only Three Others.

With these nine states safely lined up against the income tax amendment, Senator Aldrich and his lieutenants need gain the support or cooperation of three other states and there is little question that this can be done. Illinois, Maryland, West Virginia, Ohio, New York, California and Utah are all regarded as fruitful fields in which to operate, and if need be, it is believed some of the southern states might be prevailed upon to at least refuse to act upon the constitutional amendment.

California and Utah are placed in the doubtful column because of the attitude of their respective senators. The Southern Pacific influence in California—the influence that put Perkins and Flint in the senate—would be antagonistic to the income tax amendment, in all probability. If so, the unprecedented would have to happen in California in order that that state might ratify the proposed amendment.

In Utah the Mormon influence is all powerful. It elected Smoot and Sutherland to the senate. Smoot, to gain a place on the finance committee, had to sell out to Senator Aldrich; he had to become a tool in the hands of the mighty leader. Aldrich will insist that Smoot see to it that Utah does not ratify the amendment, and Smoot in turn will lay the matter before the Mormon leaders. Those Mormons are a grateful lot; they appreciate what has been done for Smoot, one of their apostles, and it is altogether probable that they will see to it that Aldrich's orders are carried out.

As it only requires three states in addition to the nine known to be antagonistic to the income tax amendment, to accomplish its defeat, the situation in the doubtful states named is such as to apparently justify the believers in the income tax in their assumption that the proposed constitutional amendment is doomed.

A preliminary canvass of the situation leads to the conclusion that 27 states are reasonably certain to approve the amendment—eight less than the number needed to ratify.

GOWN MUST BE WORN ULTIMATUM TO JUDGE

Olympia, July 19.—Superior Judge W. W. McCredie, of Clarke county, who has refused to wear the gown required by the new state law, recently wrote to the attorney general asking if an opinin had been rendered that any judge who failed to comply with the law is guilty of a misdemeanor. A letter went back promptly satting that the press reports of such opinion were correct, and state officials expect soon to learn that the Vancouver jurist has placed his order for the robe.

Persian Throne Changes Occupants

Teeheran, July 19.—The national assembly, composed of the chief Mujtehd and the leaders of the Nationalist forces, have proclaimed the crown prince, Sultonahmed Mirza, shah of Persia. Parliamentary Secretary Aazd Ul Matk, head of the Kajar family, was made regent. The fact that the shah of Persia took refuge in the Russian legation here is accepted as tantamount to his abdication of the throne.

TO EXPLAIN EXHIBITS TO SCHOOL CHILDREN

Seattle, July 19.—The department of exploitation of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition has opened the department of education. This is the first time such a department has been attempted by any exposition and the early attendance gives promise of gratifying results.

Miss Anna R. Miller, of the West Seattle schools, and Miss Elizabeth Carey, formerly of the South Seattle schools, were appointed teachers for the opening day. The attendance was so large that James A. Wood found it necessary to name a third teacher to care for the school children presenting themselves to take advantage of the course of instruction.

The classes are being conducted daily and are open to the pupils of any schools of the Northwest. There is no expense incurred other than the customary admission, and any pupil desiring to take advantage of the opportunity may do so by presenting himself or herself at room 8 of the auditorium before 10 a. m.

From the auditorium the children will be conducted to the various exhibits and these will be studied under the direction of the teachers appointed. The different departments of the government building, the many foreign, state, county, mineral and civic exhibits will all receive careful attention and study. A schedule has been arranged whereby many of the best moving picture shows and all the panoramas may be visited. Special demonstrations have been provided by the management, and the officials and exhibitors are co operating with the movement and will make the classes valuable and instructive as possible.

Children belonging to the educational classes will be given a button badge and the classes will be dismissed at 12:30. Many of he Pay Streak attractions having special educational features will either admit the supervised classes free or a small charge will be asked in some instances.

URGE ELECTION FOR SUCCESSOR TO CUSHMAN

Washington, July 20.—Both Senator Jones and Senator Piles believe that the place left vacant in the house of representatives by the death of Representative Cushman should be filled as soon as it is possible to do so, and Senator Jones, in response to a query from Gov. Hay, has telegraphed the state's chief executive favoring the immediate calling of an election for this purpose

The two senators feel that Tacoma and the rest of the Second congressional district should not be without particular representation during the remainder of the year, as was at first suggested, as there are a number of matters in the district which need attention in vairous departments of the government and which have no direct bearing on congress itself.

Other members of the deleagtion have already received a number of communications from constituents of the district asking for assistance. Many of these communications deal with questions which Mr. Cushman was handling prior to his illness.

WORK ON LOLO PASS CUTOFF BEGINS AUGUST 1

Lewiston, Idaho, July 19.—Northern Pacific Surveyor Dorsett, who. with 24 men, is rushing the survey of the Missoula cutoff across the Bitter Root mountains, from the Missoula end, was reported today as within twelve miles of the Boston party which went in from the Kooskia end of the new road, and it is expected that this last link in the final survey will be completed within a few days. The route surveyed between Kooskia and Missoula is 130 miles in length. A long tunnel projected at Lolo pass will reduce the grade about 600 feet. Another tunnel, 22,00 feet in length, is being considered at Kooskia to avoid following the contour of the river. Joseph Smith, right of way agent, is purchasing land in the vicinity of Kooskia.

According to informantion at hand here, actural construction work on the Missoula line may be commenced at any time, but will not be later than August 1. Work will begin simultaneously at the Missoula and Kooskia ends.

BURLINGTON LINE OUT OF BUSINESS IN MONTANA

Helena, Mont., July 20.—The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company has quit the state of Montana, according to a document filed with the sertary of state yesterday, and the inference is that its lines in the southern part of the state will hereafter be conducted by the Great Northern exclusively. The notice filed is the revocation of its appointment of a state agent, and it contains the statement that it has terminated leases to all its lines in Montana. These include the lines extending southward from Billings and which run into Denver and Omaha, and also a branch line into Wyoming.

Deficiency Judgment Ruling

Olympia, July 20.—When a mortgage conntains a clause that there shall be no deficiency judgment, the statute says there shall be none, and when the mortgage says there shall be, the statute permits the same; but where the mortgage is silent, so also is the statute, and the supreme court holds in the Spokane case of Bradley Engineering and Machine Company against F. A. Muzzy, that the plaintiff is not entitled to recover a decfiiency judgment for $1,676.80. It orders the case reversed and dismissed.

GREAT RUSH FOR LAND

MANY THOUSANDS FILE ON THE OPENING DAY OF REGISTRATION.

Number of Applications for Homesteads in Spokane, Coeur d'Alene and Flathead Reservations At Close of First Day Estimated at 28,000.

Spokane, July 17.—At the close of the first day of registration for the Spokane, Coeur d'Alene and Flathead reservation lands it is estimated that 28,000 applications have been filed. Of these, 10,000 are at Spokane, 10,000 at Coeur d'Alene, 4,000 at Missoula and 4,000 at Kalispell. No accurate count is possible, as some notaries do not keep any record of the applications sworn to before them. It is possible that the first day's registration is heavier than it will be on any of the succeeding nineteen days, as many persons seemed possessed of an idea that there was some advantage in being first. In all of the cities where filings are taken the hotels are crowded to overflowing and many temporary sleeping places have been fitted up. The applicants appear to be an excellent class of people, the majority from the East looking like well-to-do farmers or sons of farmers. There has been no disorder, and the police are keeping close watch for crooks. Thousands of the land filers are from Eastern points, and the railroads report many thousands yet coming. From all parts of the Inland Empire there are applicants, and the east territory is sending a large quota. Dr. Charles F. Koch, of Chicago, claims the distinction of being the first to file at Missoula. A noticeable feature is the optimism of the visitors, all expecting to draw prizes. Yet the chances of success may be seen when it is estimated that there will be not less than 300,000 applications, while the aggregate of homesteads in the three reservations is less than 3,000.

56,000 SEEKERS OF LAND REGISTER IN THREE DAYS

Spokane, July 17.—The number of applications for reservation lands today was somewhat smaller than on the preceding days, not only here, but in Coeur d'Alene and Missoula, while Kalispell reported an increase. In Spokane about 5,500 applications were filed; in Coeur d'Alene, 5,500; in Missoula, 2,300, and in Kalispell 1,500. The total for three days in Spokane and Coeur d'Alene is a little more than 23,000 each.

The crowds at the hotels are easing off, and it appears that many persons who have come West to file are passing through to Seattle to see the exposition and are planning to apply on their way back.

At Coeur d'Alene, where serious trouble among the notaries was threatened, an agreement has been reached whereby all will get together, banish competition and pool receipts.

Notaries here say that about one out of every ten applicants is a woman, in almost all cases from the East, seeking a home in the West. Many of the men who apply look upon it as a huge gamble. The women, however, are in earnest. Wisconsin, Minnesota, Illinois and Iowa are the outside states most largely represented, though Oregon and Washington lead. The grand total for three days of registration is about 56,000.

Warden Makes Good as Drummer

Walla Walla, July 19.—All the grain sacks that can be made at the prison by August 15 have been sold to farmers, according to Warden Reed Two and a half mililon of the jute bags have been sold this year, and all on hand have been shipped out as a result of the house-to-house canvass made to sell the bags. Warden Reed and Clerk McCallum this spring went out on the road as traveling men. and succeeded in placing a large number of the sacks. The sacks were sold at a lower figure than quoted by the sack trust, and the farmers, as soon as they heard it, were eager to get the benefit.

To Ask Bond Issue

Washington, July 19.—At a conference between President Taft, Senator Aldrich, Chairman Payne and treasury officials, it has been decided to ask congress to authorize a bond issue to the extent of the latest estimate of the cost ofthe Panama canal, the proposed issue to bear 3 per cent interest. The Goethals estimate of $397,000,000 as the cost of the canal will be used as a basis for the issue. The eixsting canal bond limit its $130,000,000, of which $86,000,000 is out.

Lumber Association Sued

Jackson, Miss., July 19.—The Retail Lumber Dealers' Association of Mississippi and Louisiana has been sued in the chancery court of Holmes county, at Lexington, Miss., under the anti-trust statute, for the recovery of penalties aggregating $14,184,000. The suit is the largest single item of litigation ever brought in Mississippi, although the amount sought to be collected is the minimum under the statute.

MANY SPECIALS ENGAGED FOR IRRIGATION MEETING

Spokane, July 15.—Twenty-seven special trains have been engaged by commercial organizations in various parts of the country to bring their delegations to the seventeenth session of the National Irrigation Congress in Spokane, August 9 to 14, and it is likely that several will be added to the list by points south of the Ohio river and east of the Missouri river.

Worcester, Mass., where the board of trade will send its glee club and the Continentals, has the distinction so far of being the most distant Eastern city to be represented. Its party will make the trip of more than 6,000 miles in a special train, arriving in Spokane on August 10. Rochester, N. Y., Chcago, St. Louis, San Francisco, Pueblo, Colo., and Charleston, S. C., which cities are candidates for the 1910 sessions, will each send special trains, the one from Columbia, S. C., carrying the South Carolina, North Carolina and Florida delegations. Indications are that Kansas will join the Colorado delegates in an effort to land the next congress for Pueblo.

Delegates from El Paso and points in New Mexico and Garden City, Kan., Omaha and points in Nebraska and Iowa will also come to Spokane in special trains, and it is expected that Salt Lake City, Ogden and other cities in Utah will be represented by delegates warranting the running of a special train.

JUDGES CAN APPOINT WATER COMMISSIONER

Olympia, July 19.—The state supreme court has refused to issue an injunction to prohibit the superior court of Okanogan county naming a water commissioner, as asked for by the federal reclamation service under a 1907 state law.

The court finds that under the laws the superior judges may perform a number of duties which are not judicial, such, for instance, as solemnizing marriage, and by inference finds judges may properly make this appointment, but declines at this time to pass upon whether or not the state law is constitutional. That question probably will be determined after the water commissioner has been appointed, should any person then decide to bring suit involving the right of this commissioner to act.

The federal reclamation service seeks the appontment of the commissioner preliminary to its inteniton to use the bed of Salmon creek, Okanogan county, as a storage reseroir. Owners of riparian rights along that stream asked for the writ to protect their rights.

NOT LIKE OTHER EXPOSITIONS SAYS GEN. J. FRANKLIN BELL

"I would deem it a favor to be permitted to express my appreciation of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition," said Maj. Gen. J. Franklin Bell, chief of staff of the United States army after a visit to the fair recently.

"I frankly acknowledge that I didn't come to see the Exposition and didn't expect to take the time to visit the grounds, but now that I have seen them, I feel I wouldn't have missed them for anything.

"I have seen all the expositions in the United States in recent years, with the exception of the one at Portland. In my judgment none surpassed this in beauty or attractiveness, though some were larger. This, to my mind, is by far the most attractive. The flowers make it especially beautiful. Its exhibits are exceedingly interesting and its landscape and architectural effects could not be more effective.

"In saying this I am not inspired by a mere desire to be amiable or polite, but by a genuine enthusiasm aroused by the exposition—because it is clean and fresh and pretty and the flowers impart a perfume to the atmosphere that is perfectly delightful. The cool weather has contributed to my pleasure, as my keenest recollection of other expositions is of the dirt and dust and discomfort due to stifling heat.

"Altogether, the exposition has been a most astounding and agreeable disappointment to me. Where I had expected to see the usual thing, I have found something so charming that I shall never forget it."

INTERSTATE RULING HITS FOUR EXPRESS COMPANIES

Washintgon, July 19.—Rates of the Adams Express Company, the American Epxress Company, Wells Fargo company and the Pacific Express Company, between New York City and Boise, Idaho and points situated in the intermountain territory. according to a decision of the interstate commerce commission, "in almost every instance violate the general discipline that a through rate shall not exceed the lowest combination of local rates between the same points."

This sweeping holding was made in an opinion in the case of the Boise Commercial Club against the epxress companies named.

Big Labor Merger Consumated

Chciago, July 19.—Organiaztion of a railroad employes' department of the American Federation of Labor has been completed by the merger of 25unions of American, Canadian and Mexican railroad men or unions affiliated with railway employes. The new department embraces 52,500,000 union employes on 70,000 miles of railway. The new department will be conducted by a separate governing body from the A. F. of L.

WITNESSES IN PLENTY

JUDGE ROBINSON REVIEWS ATTACK ON COURT JUSTICES.

If Bar Association Tries to Examine All Lawyers Who Have Criticized Supreme Court There Will Be a Lengthy and Interesting Session.

Aberdeen, July 17.—Tacoma attorneys will not be the only ones summoned before the state bar association at its meeting here July 29 to 31.

Partly as a result of charges against members of the supreme court filed by Attorney Herbert DeWolfe, of Tacoma, the association will also ask Judge J. W. Robinson, of Olympia, to furnish proof of acusations made by him against the supreme court in the primary campaign last fall.

De Wolfe will be asked to substantiate his charges made to the legislative investigating committee or face disbarment proceedings.

In addition the association proposes to make a subject of inquiry the causes of the retirement of former Supreme Judge Milo A. Root, of Seattle, the indictment at Spokane of Judge M J. Gordon on a charge of embezzlement in relation to his former service with the Great Northern railway and the connection that existed between the two while Root was on the supreme bench.

No action will probably be brought against Govnor Teats, of Tacoma, who also made damaging statements in regard to former Judge Root and Judge H. D. Crow before the legislative investigating committee. No information of action against A. H. Denman, annother Tacoma lawyer who testified before the house committee, can be obtained.

Blames Bar For Conditions

In a special dispatch to the Aberdeen World from Olympia, Judge J. W. Robinson, who will be asked to appear before the state bar association at its Aberdeen meeting July 29, and furnish proof of his charges made during the primary campaign against Judge Crow and former Judge Root of the state supreme court, says he will be on hand.

Judge Robinson promises that if the association tries to bring before it all lawyers who have criticized the supreme court the session will be exceedingly interesting and lengthy. He says:

"There are crooked jurists in this state because members of the legal fraternity failed to exercise proper courage in demanding a clean judiciary."

He blames the bar for scandals, saying too many leaders among lawyers "are on a salary from those corporations that exert evil influences over the legislature and judiciary of this state."

He says that such leaders "are enabled to do business and secure justice behind closed doors, which, for such purposes, are barred to other lawyers."

RAILROADS WANT SHARE OF KOOTENAI COAL BUSINESS

Spokane, July 19.—D. C. Corbin, Spokane's veteran railroad builder, is planing to construct a line through the rich coal, oil and mining fields of Southwest Kootenai, in British Columbia. The new railway will be 45 miles in length, and will extend from Corbin, in East Kootenai, through the Flathead valley to the international boundary line.

Mr. Corbin last year completed a railroad from the town of Gilvray, on the Crows Nest Pass branch of the Canadian Pacific, to Corbin, fifteen miles. The new line will furnish an outlet to the south from the immense coal mines owned by Mr. Corbin, located at the town which bears his name.

Surveyors for the Milwaukee and Great Northern companies have recently been in the Southwest Kootenai district, and officials of these railroads are planning to build branch lines to the coal fields.

College Buildings Being Rushed

State College, Pullman, July 19.—The work of repairing buildings, improving the college grounds and giving the final touches of completion to new buildings is being hastened at Washington State College, the intention being to have the greater part of this work done by the time school opens in September. The wing of the veterinary building is completed up to the third story, and the 150-foot chimney for the new heating plant is built to a height of ninety feet. The 250-horse power boiler for the plant has just arrived.

Great Telephone Merger Looked For

New York, July 19.—The merging of the Bell telephone companies of the country into a gigantic corporation representing a capitalization of $970,000,000 is believed to be foreshadowed by the action taken by the American Bell Telephone Company, in providing for the absorption of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company.

Federal "Loafers" Get Shaking Up

Washngton, July 19.—A "shakeup" in the personnel of the department of commerce and labor took place the past week, when approximately 100 employes were reduced and resignations of about 10 others accepted. The reductions were made, it is stated, because the employes loafed on the job.

Many wise men have made lists of the "hundred best books," but few of the lists are wise. Dr. S. M. Crothers discourses, in the Atlantic Monthly, on the "hundred worst books." He argues that for the guidance of the reader "the reefs and shoals should be properly marked." Then, like a true humorist, he refrains from giving the list of the "hundred worst." Each reader can make a list for himself.

Between ten and fifteen million dollars a year are required to pay for work on new public buildings erected by the national government, which is one of the largest builders in the world, and is therefore deeply interested in the strength of the materials used in its structures. Plans have been completed for a machine to be used at the Geological Survey station in Pittsburg for testing steel, concrete, brick and stone columns to discover which are best adapted to use under differing circumstances. The machine, which will be the largest in America, will be capable of exercising a pressure of ten million pounds, or much more than any column is likely to be called upon to bear.

Science makes such quick work of theories nowadays that no wise parent dares dogmatize on anything but the rule of three. Therefore it is that when President Eliot is reported to have protested against the intermarriage of the races and given it as his opinion that Irish should not marry with Americans of English descent, Germans with Italians, the Jews with the French, we must swallow our ejaculation of dissent and wait until Johnny comes home from school with his newest text book. In our own unlearned day we had thought all great races were composites. Our simple midcentury notion was that the Norse mixed with the Gaul and the Norman with the Saxon-Dane of England to make the great English race. We had thought a blend of Teuton and Latin gave us the renaissance; while the mixture of races in the Saxon-Dutch-Swedish - French - Irish-German-American of colonial ancestry has not seemed within our knowledge of individual cases to have made for weakness. Certainly if the distinguished ex-president of Harvard is right we shall have to pitch overboard one of our most cherished illusions—if it is an illusion. Do we not all believe in the future American chiefly because he will be a blend of all the races under the happy condition of political freedom and social opportunity? Perhaps there are ethical differences not to be composed, as between negro, Caucasian, Indian, Mongol. But do not ask us to draw the racial line too narrowly. Intermarriage is an important factor in America's scheme.

A speaker at a public meeting in an Eastern city recently made a statement which fell with a shock of dismay upon many ears. He declared that the time-honored occupation of sawing wood is fast becoming obsolete. The speaker himself, he said, had been brought up at the wood-pile; he had sawed wood all through his boyhood—had, literally, sawed a large part of his way through college; but to-day his own boy could not saw wood if he wished to do so. There is in that city, as in many others, no wood to saw. An experiment made not long ago by a certain other city is an interesting commentary upon the speaker's declaration. The matter of public playgrounds was under debate, and it was finally decided, with a strange misapprehension of the significance and value of play, that it would be better to give its boys an opportunity for exercise than for recreation. It was therefore determined to give them the privilege of sawing wood. Whether the boys appreciated their opportunity, the record does not state, but the expense of securing and distributing the wood and supplying the implements wherewith to saw made the experiment too costly to be repeated. Current fiction, that most accurate mirror of any age, has already taken cognizance—although perhaps unconsciously—of the vanishing wood pile. No longer do we find a hero of to-day sawing his way to fame. The comic papers, equally sensitive in many ways, but still dominated by the ghosts of ancient jokes, have not yet divorced the wood pile and the tramp, but doubtless they will in time. It is a trifle bewildering, of course. So long have we associated the wood pile with greatness that we wonder perplexedly what substitute the new days can offer for its salutary discipline; how, without its stern friendliness, our heroes can achieve distinction. Yet somehow, after all, we still seem to have men among us, and every emergency reveals its master, steady-handed, at the helm. What the future will substitute for the wood pile none can yet foretell. It is ours, however, speeding the old with courage, to greet the new with cheerful hearts. The wood pile has gone. Yet somehow "discipline must be maintained," and life will not fail to furnish the means.

THE "CENT SCHOOL."

A "cent school" is not so common now as it once was. It was so called, says a writer in the Atlantic Monthly, because the children who came to it brought a cent each, tightly clutched in the hand or knotted in a handkerchief corner. This cent paid the tuition for the day. If it was forgotten the child was sent home for it. The school was kept by an old lady.

The smallest children used to go to it. The cent school might be described as a great-aunt of the present kindergarten, although Eunice Swain, who kept this particular one, would have thought a kindergarten foolishness. Her children did not come to be amused, but to work. They were put on benches in the kitchen, because it was warm there, and she herself sat in the dining-room door, and taught them, or punished them, as the spirit bade her.

She taught the three R's, and manners, and truth-telling, and, above all, humility, impressing on these infants daily that they belonged to a generation, not of vipers exactly, but of weaklings.

"Thee will never be what thy grandfather was, Zenas Macy!" cried Miss Swain to a freckled lad with sea-blue eyes. "He owned his ship, and made seven voyages round the world. And what is thee?"

The boy wriggled uneasily on his bench.

"Mary, 'Liza Hussey, say nine times. Thee can't! Say seven times. Thee can't! Thy great-aunt, 'Liza Mary, was at the head of the arithmetic class when I went to school."

The children of the cent school outgrew it in a year or two, and went somewhere else, and other little children took their places. They were always young children there, but Eunice Swain grew older and smaller and more bent than ever.

She sat in the doorway with a handkerchief tied round her head because of drafts. On the table were her pennies and a stinging switch. It is not on record that any of her children loved her, but some of them, let us hope all, looked back on her kindly when they were grown up.

A Test of Faith.

"Flossie!" exclaimed Mrs. De Fashen, "you don't mean to say you're beginning to doubt the Bible?"

"Well," replied Miss De Fashen, examining the fit of her new fall gown with great satisfaction, "it's certainly hard to believe, ma, that Eve was compelled to wear clothes as a punishment."—Philadelphia Press.

PERSIAN CATS.

How They Are Classified—Points of a Fine Animal.

Long haired Persian cats may be classified as blacks, blues, whites, silvers, oranges, cream or fawn, tortoise shell, tortoise shell and white, brown tabbies, any other color.

The silvers are subdivided into minor classes as follows: chinchillas, shaded silvers, silver tabbies, masked silvers, smoke.

The coat of the long haired Persian cat should be long and thick, its texture fine and soft. There should be tufts of hair projecting from the inside of the ears, also around the jaws.

There should be a frill of long hair around the throat, extending back to the shoulders and down the chest to where the front legs join the body. There should be tufts of hair growing upward from between the toes.

The head should be massive but sound, with great width of skull between the ears, says Country Life in America; the ears should be small and set low. From the forehead to the nose the line should be slightly concave, the nose itself being short.

The back should be broad and level but not too short, legs short, paws round, brush of tail of medium length, wide and carried low. The eyes should be large, round, luminous and set level. The expression of the face, taken as a whole, should be gentle and sweet. The general appearance of the animal should be cobby and its movements easy and graceful.

In disposition the Persian cat is naturally inclined to be loving and gentle, but as they are very high strung it is an easy matter to spoil their disposition entirely by rough or unkind treatment.

LITERARY LITTLE BITS

Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin has completed a new story, which will be published next season.

There is an interesting rumor that Mrs. Humphry Ward has written a new novel which she will call "Robert Elsmere Twenty-three Years After." It will not be published until the autumn.

"The Biography of Silver Fox," Ernest Thompson Seton's story, will be published in book form at once. In it the author seeks to portray the romance of an ideal life union of two noble animals.

"The Story of an African Farm" was a book which in its day caused much talk. Its author, Miss Olive Schreiner, has produced nothing so effective since. She is now about to bring out in "Closer Union for South Africa" a volume dealing with politics.

"Pam"—the ever daring and delightful—to whom Bettina von Hutten introduced us some four years ago, appears again in Baroness von Hutten's new story of "Kingsmead." There is a little "Pam" in this story and a lot of the people interesting to know who spend their Christmas holidays at Lord Kingsmead's fine old English country place.

This is a remarkable centennial year. In 1809 Lord Byron was writing "Childe Harold," Sir Walter Scott was composing "The Lady of the Lake," Goethe had finished the first part of "Faust," and was experimenting with fiction, Cuvier and Humboldt were making their contributions to science, and Hegel and Fichte were working out their philosophical ideas.

"The Empire Builders and Other Poems" is the significant title of a collection of timely verse from the pen of Robert J. C. Stead, a true son of the West, who has realized the poetry and pathos of life on the prairie, and expressed it with vigor and sincerity in the short, swinging poems, twenty-five in number, included in the present volume. The key-note of the author's purpose is sounded in the dedication, from which we quote the concluding lines:

"Where'er Endeavor bares her arm
And grapples with the Things To Be,
At desk or counter, forge or farm,
And men press onward, undismayed,
On veldt or prairie, land or sea,
The Empire Builder plies his trade."

Mr. Stead sings with no uncertain sound of the life that he knows, and his work will, no doubt, appeal strongly to those who have shared his experiences as a pioneer in the last great west. A breezy wholesomeness and directness pervade the pages of his book, in refreshing contrast to the ultra-refined and subtly suggestive character of the usual brand of poetry served to us in the magazines and other publications of our day.

A Historic Schoolhouse.

On the Isle of Wight stands the old Jacobean grammar school where Charles I. held his court during the abortive negotiations with the parliamentary commissioners who sat at the old town hall. The schoolhouse stands on the road to Carisbrooke castle, where the king was a prisoner. The royal apartments were in the gabled front facing the street leading to Cowes, and the schoolroom was used as the king's presence chamber.

Roumania.

Roumania has about 33,000,000 acres of the richest soil in Europe, and were it not for the recurrence of summer droughts it would be the most productive of any of the European countries.

Reclamation In Bible Lands.

A vast region in Asiatic Turkey, having for its center Bagdad, which for centuries has been arid, is to be brought back to cultivation if engineering and irrigation experts have their say. Modern methods will be used, but they can only serve to put in operation the forces of nature which the ancients once manipulated so as to transform a primeval desert into a garden. Consul Magelssen, writing from Bagdad, calls attention to a vast irrigation programme which engineers have declared feasible. He says:

In ancient times, when the whole of Babylonia-Mesopotamia and the greater portion of the country lying between the Tigris river and the mountains of Persia and Kurdistan were artificially irrigated, these parts held the principal granaries of the world. The luxurious growth of grain upon these alluvial flats excited the wonder of the Greek travelers who visited the east, and, according to Herodotus, the soil yielded commonly two hundred fold and sometimes three hundred fold. Herodotus would not tell the whole truth for fear that his veracity might be doubted. When the Chaldeans peopled the delta of the Tigris and the Euphrates they constructed vast irrigation works, which turned the whole land from a desolate waste into one huge garden. The whole plain was studded with prosperous and populous cities, set in the midst of engirdling areas under wheat; for it is from this region that wheat, at first found in a wild and uncultivated state, was taken and gradually transplanted all over the world.

In those days the land was protected against the inundations of the rivers and watered in seasons of drought by a stupendous system of dikes and canals, which at the present day, in a ruined and sand choked condition, cover like a network the face of the country. Once the crown of the possessions of the powers which swayed the east, it is now a barren waste. The irrigation works of the ancients perished because the country was so torn asunder by strife that they ceased to keep them in repair. The scene of the sudden destruction which overwhelmed the cities of the plain is still visible. The river Tigris burst its bonds and temporarily engulfed a great area, and from that day to this desolation reigns supreme around ancient Opis.

It seems that the Euphrates changed its course some years ago, and valuable date gardens as well as rice lands are dying out. One of the schemes proposed for temporary relief while the larger works are under construction is to pump water into the old bed of the Euphrates during the dry months.

The man on the end of the street car seat is with us once again as the summer cars are brought out and the people take to the trolleys for pleasure. He sits as tight as ever and refuses to budge. He minds not the knees that bump into his own, or the feet that tread upon his feet, or the black looks cast his way, or the sarcastic remarks that fall for his correction. He is case hardened, oblivious, indifferent. He recks not the discomfort he causes so long as he maintains what he considers his rights. Perhaps in time he may be softened by repeated applications of heel and toe as congested passengers make their way past him, but only such treatment is likely to be effective.

THE GRANGE

Conducted by
J. W. DARROW, Chatham, N. Y.,
Press Correspondent New York State Grange

THE NATIONAL GRANGE

A Movement to Increase Number of Delegates.

The Michigan State Grange Is Procuring the Sentiment of Every Subordinate Grange In the United States on Representation In the National Body.

The Michigan state grange at its annual meeting voted to memorialize the Order throughout the United States in behalf of such revision of the constitution as will provide for and establish a more just and equitable representation in the national grange than now prevails. The following resolution was adopted:

Resolved by the Michigan state grange in annual session assembled, That we favor amending the constitution of the national grange by increasing the number of delegates in the national body in proportion to membership in the various states by adding to the master and his wife from each state organized, as is now provided, an additional delegate and his wife for each 10,000 members over and above the first 10,000.

Resolved, That we hereby instruct the executive committee of the Michigan state grange to place before each subordinate and Pomona grange in the United States the sentiment in the above preamble and resolutions and, if favored, request that the delegates to the next national grange be instructed as above.

The founders of the Order doubtless had in mind the federal system of our national government when drafting the grange constitution. They provided for the representation of each state as in the United States senate, but for the reason already referred to failed to provide for a separate representation of the membership as provided by the house of representatives in the national congress. The plan proposed by the Michigan state grange is to combine the two. Let each state have, as now, representation by its master and his wife, who are to be the only representatives from states having 10,000 members or less, and in addition one representative and his wife for each additional 10,000 members. This will not unduly increase the size of the national grange, adding only thirty-four members to that body, and will not increase the expenses to a point that will be at all burdensome, the approximate additional cost being about $5,000.

C. M. FREEMAN.
[Secretary national grange.]

This is not a plan, say the promoters of it, to discourage the weak states, but rather to give additional incentive to building up the Order, each state vying with the others and striving to increase its membership and influence in the national body. This will encourage effort and put a premium on grange zeal and enthusiasm. It will open a new era in the history of the national grange, sending, as it will, new members to each session and infusing new life, new energy and new thought into the governing body, making it more representative of the Order and more responsive to the progressive thought of its membership. More than this, it gives simple justice to those states which have carried the grange banner forward against discouragement and opposition and won for the Order recognition and influence.

In accordance with the above resolution the executive committee of the Michigan state grange is asking every subordinate grange in the United States to take action in this matter of increasing the representation. There are five states now that have as many members combined as all the other organized grange states in the Union, yet the five have only ten delegates, while the other twenty-two, with only about one-third the total membership, have forty-four. Is it right, the committee, asks, that New York state, with about 70,000 members and contributing about $3,500 to the national grange treasury every year, should have no larger representation than a state paying only about $20 annually into the national treasury?

PACIFIC NORTHWEST COMMERCE

"Pacific Northwest Commerce" is the title of the new monthly magazine and bulletin for the Seattle Chamber of Commerce, the first number of which, a handsome and attractive publication, has just been issued. While the official organ of the Chamber, its plans contemplate the exploitation of the entire Pacific Northwest, and its communities, and the promotion of the commercial interests of all.

The publication will be of purely commercial character. It will comprise special and illustrated articles, by recognized authorities and talented writers on matters of commercial interest. In addition to a digest of the proceedings of the Chamber, it will give the gist of all business inquiries and a first class service on business and manufacturing concerns seeking a location. It will be the purpose of the publication to broaden the scope of the Made in Seattle campaign to include the whole state so that all sections will be benefitted.

Wood & Reber, the well known publicity firm, are the publishers, who request the support and co-operation of the people of the state in making it a success. The subscription price is $1.50 a year.

MOST BEAUTIFUL OF ALL

Hon. H. A. Taylor, Secretary of the Treasury in the McKinley cabinet and Interstate Commerce Commissioner under several administrations, is in Seattle on his way home after a world tour. He came to stay for a day and is remaining for a fortnight for the Exposition.

"The Exposition is magnificent," said Mr. Taylor. "More than that, it is satisfying. I come away from it each day satisfied right to the inside of me. It is a beautifully painted picture of the near future and as such it is startling to those of the East who have not wakened to the call of the West. I have had some experience at expositions. I was chairman of the U. S. Government Board at Chicago, St. Louis and Portland and I have attended the great expositions in England, Italy, France, and Japan. Of all those, Seattle's is the most beautiful. It is not as large but is as comprehensive as any. And I like your 'funny streak.' None of us ever gets so old that amusement does not appeal to him and I have been having a lot of fun."

The most impressive exhibit on the grounds at the Seattle Fair is the miracle painting "In the Shadow of the Cross," by Henry Ahl. It is to be seen in the Swedish building. The picture is of Christ and the outlines of the figure and the cross may be distinctly seen in the darkness. So bright is the light radiating from the picture that a photograph has been made of the picture by this light.

EXPERTS READY FOR WORK

Will Make Close Study of Logged-off Lands Problem in Endeavor to Reduce Cost of Clearing.

Harry Tompson, government expert in charge of investigations being made jointly by the federal and state governments looking to improvement of methods for clearing and using logged off lands and the saving of chemical and lumber values in waste woods, arrived in Everett last week, where he will establish headquarters for carrying on the work, which is financed by a $10,000 appropriation, borne equally by the nation and state. He will be assisted by Mr. Johnson, who has for several years made a close study of the clearing and cultivation of the uplands.

"Manifestly the government cannot go into the manufacture of experimental devices," says Mr. Tompson, "and it will remain for the large owners of logged off lands and the communities interested in the early cultivation and occupation of such non-productive lands, to render every possible assistance in putting into practice the suggestions and improvements which may result from the work of the experts who will be at work during the next two years. If a saving of $25 per acre over present conditions of land clearing could be accomplished thru the improvement in methods and savings of waste material, this would represent on the 250,000 acres of unoccupied logged off land in this county an added value of 6,250,000, not mentioning the vastly greater item of community profit arising thru the settlement and cultivation of such lands.

COLONEL SELLERS BELVIN

A Chicago dispatch of the 20th reports "our friend Belvin" to be again in trouble, having been ejected from the office of James A. Patten, the wheat operator. In police court he claimed to be a resident of New York and President of the Port Angeles and Eastern railroad, and that he had recently lost $500,000 in speculation. The name of the railroad was not to be found in the official railway guide.

Commenting on the above, the Seattle Times says that William Wayne Belvin, some fifteen years ago, was a standing joke in Seattle. In the East he represented himself as president of the Port Angeles and Eastern, which was to be a great transcontinental line. So far as old Seattle residents can remember, the road was never even incorporated, and existed only in the imagination of Belvin, who was a sort of Colonel Mulberry Sellers. In the old days he was given to talking of his great wealth, but was never known to have any ready money. His greatest happiness in life was in occasionally deluding an unsophisticated newspaper into publishing an interview with him on the possibilities of his great railroad.

"Port Townsend Day" at the Exposition has been set for Wednesday of next week when it is hoped to secure an attendance of at least a thousand people from the Key City. By proclamation of the mayor every business house will be closed tighter than a drum, it being the avowed intention to make Townsend Day something more than an "also ran" proposition. The Townsend city council appropriated $250 to go towards advertising the city on that day. The question was raised as to whether the city council had power to make such an appropriation — for Townsend has her knockers as well as other places — but Mayor Gerson silenced the opposition with the statement that should it prove illegal he would pay it out of his own pocket, and the motion carried.

The business men of Sedro-Woolley have revived the market day feature which a year ago was in successful operation there, giving a program of small sports with prizes and each house advertising special bargain features — bargains that really are bargains—for the one day only. The Courier says the market days had the effect of establishing better relations between the business men and the neighboring ranchers and this is a consummation that should be kept in mind at all times. Thru the agency of a regular and permanent market day this can be done better than in any other way.

To prepare an entirely different menu for each day, is what the chef cooking canned salmon in the Alaska building at the Seattle World's Fair has to do to hold his job. The dishes of salmon are for distribution to visitors.

There are about 750 flags floating over the different buildings and about the grounds of the Exposition and more than a million electric lights are used.

Athletes from Yale, Harvard, Pennsylvania, Chicago, Minnesota and other colleges will participate in the great A.A.U. meet at the Exposition in August.

EUROPEAN ARMIES STARVING THE SCHOOLS.

WHAT EUROPEAN POWERS SPEND FOR MILITARISM AND FOR EDUCATION.

When the Turkish soldiers in Asia Minor sack and burn the schools people are horrified at their sad lack of civilization, but a French writer comes forward to remind us just at this time that the so-called civilized nations are robbing the schools to support their soldiers, which comes to about the same thing. If a man spent five times as much for guns as for his children's schooling he would be considered a lunatic or a desperado, yet it appears that this is precisely what the powers of Europe are doing. The Paris review, Mon Dimanche, says:

"France spends about five times as much on her army as she does on the intellectual training of her children. Germany gives to educational purposes one-third of the amount she devotes to military purposes. In Austria and Russia the proportion between school and caserne expenditure is as two to nine. Italy spends upon her army nine times as much as she devotes to public education. Belgium is exemplary in that her military and education budget stand as eight to four. The only exception to this rule of priority in military expenditure is Switzerland, which devotes twice as much to the education of her children as she lays out on the purchase of powder and shot and the pay of her defenders.

THE STRUGGLE.

Say not, the struggle naught availeth,
The labor and the wounds are vain,
The enemy faints not, nor faileth,
And as things have been they remain

If hopes were dupes, fears may be liars;
It may be, in yon smoke concealed,
Your comrades chase e'en now the fliers,
And but for you possess the field.

For while the tired waves, vainly breaking,
Seem here no painful inch to gain,
Far back, through creeks and inlets making,
Comes silent, flooding in, the main.

And not by eastern windows only,
When daylight comes, comes in the light;
In front, the sun climbs, how slowly,
But westward, look, the land is bright.
—Arthur Hugh Clough.

Humble Pie

"I overheard the offer my father made you. You think the device is worth more?"

"Very much more."

"I have some money lying idle, Mr. Andrus, money I would be glad to invest. It is my own, left me by my Grandfather Atwood. Will you—wait, please—let me buy an interest in your device?"

The young man's face flushed.

He stared at her.

"You are quite in earnest about this?" he murmured.

"Your question is not complimentary," said the girl. "I am in earnest, however, and assure you that the investigation conducted by my lawyer will be a painstaking one. Does that meet with your approval?"

"Thoroughly," he quickly answered. "But is it possible that you really mean all this?"

"At 10 o'clock to-morrow morning you will be at the law office of John Dalafield, in the Cranston building. Mr. Dalafield is my adviser and holds my legacy in trust for me. I will notify him of your coming. Is that understood?"

She watched him narrowly.

"Yes," he answered, "unless I wake up and find this is all a dream."

"I trust," she gravely said, "that you will not forget our verbal understanding. If your device can be shown up to the full satisfaction of my adviser you are to sell me a half interest in the Andrus transmitter for $20,000 cash. Is this your understanding?"

He was quite overwhelmed by her directness.

"That is my understanding," he answered. "Shall I put it on paper?"

She shook her pretty head.

"This is a test transaction," she said. "You have faith in your device and I have faith in you."

It was a year later and Everett Carter sat before the blazing hearth log. But the rheumatic leg was no longer resting on the cushioned stool.

A soft footfall drew his attention.

"Come in, Florence," he called.

The girl came and sat by his side on the low stool.

"Hullo, daddy," she said.

She rested her brown head against his arm.

"Well, dearie?"

His hand lovingly stroked the brown hair.

"Feeling pretty good, daddy?"

"Yes, dearie?"

"No twinges?"

"Not for a long time."

They watched the crackling blaze.

"You didn't eat much dinner, daddy."

"Didn't I?"

"I'm quite sure you didn't."

He laughed.

"Perhaps the humble pie I ate today spoiled my appetite."

"Humple pie, daddy?"

"I guess that's what they call it."

"Tell me about it."

He laughed again.

"It doesn't put your daddy in a very flattering light. But I'll tell you about it. I had an appointment this afternoon with a certain party at your old friend Delafield's. I was a little early in getting there—I wanted to ask Delafield some questions."

"Yes, daddy."

"Well, the certain party——"

"The man you were to meet?"

"Yes. He's a young man. His name is Andrus."

"Andrus?"

"That's it, Robert Andrus. He wasn't there when I arrived, and that gave Delafield an opportunity to tell me about him. If Delafield is right, he's a remarkable worthy young fellow—straight, honest and fine as silk. What's the matter, dearie?"

"The fire makes my face burn, daddy. I'll move a little back."

"Perhaps you don't care for the story?"

"Oh, yes, daddy, go on."

"Well, the funny part of it is that I once turned this same young fellow down cold. It happened one day when I was home here with the misery in my leg. And there I was in Delafield's office, keeping an appointment with the very same youngster."

"Go on, daddy."

"The boy had perfected a valuable device, a transmitter of a remarkably ingenious type. He brought it to me. He thought the Carter Motor Company could use it. I knew it was a good thing the instant I looked at it. But you know, daddy isn't exactly himself when the rheumatism nips him."

"I know, daddy."

"Well, I gave him to understand that we didn't want his device. But I offered to buy it from him and destroy it. He wouldn't sell. Somehow

"TELL ME ABOUT IT."

I felt sure he would come back and accept my offer. I was positive he couldn't get the capital he needed to start a plant and manufacture the thing—and that's where I was wrong. Somebody let him have the money."

"Who was it, daddy?"

"I don't know. But the plant was built and proved a good thing from the very start. The boy found a market for his invention almost immediately, and the little factory has been working right up to its limit. It got me scared some time ago. And I was still more scared when I heard that the National Engine Company wanted the factory's entire output. The Carter Motor Company couldn't stand by and let that happen. And so I was there in your old friend's office, prepared to arrange a deal with this gifted youngster. Well, he came in presently—a fine looking lad, manly and scrupulously polite. He really seemed glad to see me—which might be wondered at. Well, I made up my mind in less than no time that there was nothing to be gained by beating about the bush, and so I came right out and offered him $200,000 for his plant and his patents, and, in addition to this, the position of manager of our works with a $10,000 salary."

The girl suddenly laughed.

"Why, that was fine, daddy. And what did the gifted young man do?"

"The gifted young man never turned a hair. If he was surprised at my offer he carefully concealed the fact. He thanked me, but added that he would be guided entirely by his partner, who owns a half interest in the factory and patents. He promised to let me know his partner's decision very soon, and I had to be satisfied with this promise. And that dearie, is what I call eating humble pie—and lots of it."

There was a little silence.

"Daddy," said the girl, "I want your advice."

"But I know nothing about hats or gowns."

She softly laughed.

"It's a money matter this time, daddy. I bought a half interest in a manufacturing plant a year ago and I've been offered 400 per cent profit on my investment if I sell out."

The old man stared down at her.

"That sounds good. What's the plant called?"

The girl hesitated.

"It's the Andrus Transmitter Company, daddy."

"What!"

"Yes, daddy. I'm the partner who must be consulted."

"You!"

"Yes, daddy. What do you advise me to do?"

"Let me get my breath, you rascal!"

"All right, daddy. Take your time." She looked toward the door. "Robert!" she called. And Robert Andrus entered the room. "Here is my partner, daddy."

The old man stared at the newcomer.

"Well, well," he muttered.

"And, daddy, Robert's price has gone up. I—I found it out this afternoon. He wants me, too!"

The old man stared from Robert to the girl. Her arm stole around his neck.

"Say it's all right, daddy."

He sank back with a sigh of resignation.

"More humble pie," he murmured.

Doctoring by the Contract.

Suppose we pay the doctor by the week
To doctor us however great or slight is
Our ailment—health insurance, so to speak;
We'd probably have less appendicitis.

Likewise if things could just be thus fixed up
So we on the installment plan could buy a
Good bunch of health 'tis likely that our cup
Would not be bitter from neurasthenia.

It certainly's a most attractive scheme
Thus to avoid the periodic shadedown
From bills that break us, so we'd never dream
Of suffering again from general breakdown.

The joy of living it would color so
'Twould seem that we saw life's light through a prism,
And yet we have some dire doubts, don't you know,
About our darned old chronic rheumatism.

But let us pay the doctor by the week,
As we pay for our furniture and fixtures,
And maybe we the druggist need not seek
So often, for those queer prescription mixtures.

His Model.

Many a youth is taken with the desire to write. Often he does not know exactly what he wishes to compose, but the itch for the pen is strong. The Bellman tells the story of an ambitious young man who called upon a Chicago publisher.

He informed the publisher that he had decided to write a book.

"May I venture to inquire as to the nature of the book you propose to write?" asked the publisher, very politely.

"Oh," came in an offhand way from the aspirant to literary fame, "I think of doing something on the line of 'Les Miserables,' only livelier, you know."

Never Say Dye.

"Yes," he chattered, "I will love you just as much when you are old and gray!"

"Well," said she, decisively, "I may live to be old, but I'll never be gray!"

When Grandpa Plays.

I don't know what makes grandpa tired;
he's hardly done a thing
Except to put some hammocks up and help us children swing;
He only came an hour ago, and we've been here all day.
He says we're most too much for him,
and thinks he'll hardly stay.
He just played drop-the-handkerchief and blind man's buff, but he Says: My, we've got him out of breath and tired as he can be.
He says it's most too much for him to play leapfrog and ball,
But we've been here all day long, and we're not tired at all.

He started to play hide and seek, and first he had to blind,
And then he ran with all his might to see who he could find,
And Tommy Watkins beat him in from there behind a tree,
Till grandpa had to give it up and say:
"All's out's in free."
And then he sat down on a stump and said he's tired to death.
He had to hold his sides a while till he could catch his breath.
He said he'd like to shake a tree and make some apples fall,
But he's too tired, and we boys here are hardly tired at all.

He only ran in under once when we were in the swing,
And then he had to rest because he's tired as everything;
And once he showed us how to climb a great, tall tree, but when He only got a few feet up he slid right down again.
He said he used to climb a tree, oh, very,
very tall,
And sit across a branch way up and never tire at all,
But now he's out of practice, and his legs won't stay around
The trunk, and he feels safer when he stays down on the ground.

And sometimes when he goes back home
and holds us by the hand,
All wringing wet and out of breath, our ma says: "Goodness, land;
I think you are the youngest boy of all the boys in sight."
But grandpa rubs his legs and arms and limps and says "Not quite."
And sometimes in the parlor, why, he says he was so strong
When he was just a boy they used to take him right along
To lift the heavy things and do the hardest work, you know.
But now us boys'll tire him out in just an hour or so.
—J. W. Foley.

An Order for the Grocer.

Good morning, Mr. Grocer Boy! My order's long to-day.
My pantry's nearly empty now, because
I've been away.
I want a pound of nice white flour, and yeast to make some bread,
Ten pounds of currants for a cake, some icing powder red.

Of butter give me half a pound, of sugar
most a ton,
I must make candy right away before the morning's done.
Potatoes? Why, of course I don't. And codfish? No, indeed.
You interrupt and bother me. I know the things I need.

A quart of strong vanilla bring; and honey, too, and spice;
A pound of nutmeg, don't forget, it makes things taste so nice.
I want ten dozen freshest eggs, some
'vaporated cream,
And apples, 'bout a peck or two; some dumplings I must steam.

I'll take a box of oranges, and chocolate,
five cakes,
And desiccated cocoanut, such lovely things is makes.
Now hurry up my order, please. I want them very soon,
So I can get them all cooked by luncheon-time this noon.

Secret Writing.

Who knows what a cryptograph is? The word comes from two Greek words which mean "hidden writing." There are a number of different kinds of cryptographs, some hard to understand and puzzle out, and others simple and easy when once understood. It is the easy ones that we are interested in now.

Suppose you should receive a letter from Cyril, who had been away from school a couple of days, which read:

"Rm lonz Vtx:

"B' go hixnbjoi rm njwao. Ytro tgoz dt hxiioz. Cztrh. Ymbza."

Unless you knew something about cryptograph or ciphers, it would probably take you till long after supper time to make out the meaning, and that would be provoking, wouldn't it?

The simplest way to translate the cipher like the above is to write the alphabet out on a sheet of paper, putting it all on one line to avoid confusion. Some letters can be seen at a glance; if there is a capital standing alone it must be an "I;" if a small letter, "a;" if a letter at the end of a word is separated from it by an apostrophe it must be "s." There are no such letters in the above crytograph, so we must look for the letter that occurs oftenest, which is almost sure to be "e." In the cipher given the "o," which is oftenest quoted, is really "o." The first words give you a clue, for it is a letter and they are sure to be "my dear." Then the third word looks as if it might be a name, and two letters in it are alike. Puzzle the rest of it out yourself and Farmyard Game.

This game, if carried out properly, will cause great amusement. One of the party announces that he will whisper to each person the name of some animal, which, at a given signal, must be imitated as loudly as possible. Instead, however, of giving the name of an animal, to each, he whispers to all the company, with the exception of one, to keep perfectly silent. To this one he whispers that the animal he is to imitate is the donkey.

After a short time, so that all may be in readiness, the signal is given. Instead of all the party making the sounds of various animals, nothing is heard but a laud bray from one unfortunate member of the company.—Chicago News.

SICILIAN FARM-HANDS

There is something idyllic in stories of Sicilian life, which it takes more than an earthquake to shake. Pastoral life in that land of Theocritus, shepherds tending their flocks on the high slopes, oranges, almonds, historic ruins, art treasures, long and lazy days in golden sunshine—all are mingled in a hazy idea of existence. In plain prose, however, the farmer of Sicily sleeps not upon a bed of roses. Laborers in America may not be so picturesque, but they are far more comfortable. Mrs. Alec Tweedie gives in "Sunny Sicily" a glimpse of farm life which does not seem at all poetical:

The lower part of this typical Sicilian farmhouse is used for storage purposes. An outside staircase leads to the upper floor, where the family lives. The house takes up one side of a square yard in which the cattle and pigs live; the odors may be healthy, but they are not pleasant.

On another side of the yard is the common room of the farm-hands. In it is a big oven, where the general baking is done. The fire is lighted on mother earth, and the smoke escapes by a hole in the wall. Round three sides of the room run wooden tables and benches. The young, unmarried men sleep at night on the benches or the tables or the floor. The married couples have homes of their own, supposed to be more comfortable.

"Where are they?" I asked.

"There," said the farmer, pointing to what I supposed to be pigsties round the yard. There were six little doors in the wall on one side, and four on the other. The walls were built of lava; the roofs were of thatch, loosely put together so that the smoke might escape.

What a house! Any self-respecting Berkshire pig would turn up its inelegant little nose at such a home. But in just such places the Sicilian farm-hand lives. The pigs, goats and chickens are allowed to share the dwelling, or to remain outside at will.

As for pay, he is a lucky man who gets tenpence a day.

WHY THE JEW SAVES.

At a London Meeting Bishop Stepney Gives the Reason.

The Bishop of Stepney, speaking at the annual meeting of the East London fund for the Jews, held at Church house, Westminster, said he believed that the Jew's love of money was partly due to the very terror which had come upon him through the age-long hunting, the London Mail says. He hoarded because we had thieved and he saved because he never knew when and where he might be stranded in destitution. He believed that we were largely to blame for the Jew's tenacity in regard to money.

The Bishop of London said that they had met in support of the most unpopular, the most difficult and yet the most repaying work connected with the church of England.

It was unpopular for three reasons. Some people did not like the Jews at all, and would have nothing to do with them. Others felt that, as the Jews had a religion, why should they interfere with it? Others, again, thought they ought not to use the fact that they were showing hospitality to a people to force a religion upon them.

He would like to answer those three things. In the first place, no Christian had any right to dislike the Jews; Christ, when he came to earth, saw fit to be born a Jew. As to the Jews having a religion, we were paying the greatest honor to that religion by showing them the completion of it, the coping stone. With regard to the hospitality argument, we were, in offering them Christianity, offering them the best we had got. The Jews had wonderful energy and wonderful power, and if they could be won over they would make the Jewish portion of East London the most forward and spiritual of all.

It sometimes happens that a bald-headed actor has a good part.

BITS FOR BOOKWORMS

The increasing desire of modern man to become known is evidenced by the many editions of "Who's Who," in different countries. The English "Who's Who" was founded in 1849; the American edition appeared in 1901. "Wer ist's" appeared in Leipzig in 1905; "Qui Etes-vous" came out in Paris last year, and now Italy is represented by "Chie E," published by Signor Biagi at Rome. There are also a Catholic "Who's Who," an agricultural "Who's Who" and a "Who's Who in Business." Evidently everybody is somebody and wants to be catalogued.

President Nicholas Murray Butler's book on "The American as He Is" will soon be read in seven languages—Danish, French and German translations are ready for immediate publication, and the book is now being turned into Italian, Spanish, Russian and Japanese. The significance of the tribute paid to President Butler's work is emphasized by the high standing of the foreign scholars working upon it. The Danish translation has been made by Prof. Otto Jesperson of the University of Copenhagen. Prof. Boutreux of the Sorbonne and Prof. Paszkowski of the University of Berlin have prepared the French and German editions, respectively.

The death of Swinburne took place five days after the celebration of the poet's seventy-second birthday and four days after the publication of his latest book. Swinburne's first published volume, "Rosamond and the Queen's Mother," appeared forty-eight years ago, and at least one volume from his pen has appeared every year since that time until the last year of his life, when three volumes were brought out. The lifelong friendship which he enjoyed with Watts-Dunton and his love for quiet country life sometimes obscure the fact of his intimate relations with other literary men. He was an admirer of Browning, a companion of Walter Savage Landor and the cherished friend of George Meredith. Swinburne left a book ready for publication which will be brought out immediately, under the title, "Three Plays of Shakespeare."

William Mercer tells a characteristic anecdote of Marion Crawford in the Athenaeum. "My acquaintance with him began in 1877 in this wise," writes Mr. Mercer. "We found ourselves seated in the compartment of the celebrated Caffe Greco in Via Condotte, Rome, yclept the 'omnibus'—in that corner where Thackeray, Gibson, the sculptor, and hundreds of other noted English and American writers and artists have assembled for fully a century past. Presently Crawford elongated his brawny limbs and addressed me thus: 'You are Mercer and I am Crawford; it is not of much use waiting for an introduction; will you play me a game of chess?' I did. Crawford was utterly unknown to fame then and only scribbled a little for the London papers."

Wit of the Youngsters

Stranger—Isn't your father a lawyer? Small Boy—Most of the time; but when I misbehave he's a tanner.

"Tommy," said the teacher of the juvenile class, "when water becomes ice, what is the great change that takes place?" "The change in price," replied Tommy.

Small Harold—I guess mamma's sorry I'm not deaf and dumb. Visitor (astonished)—Why, how's that? Small Harold—She's always saying that I should be seen and not heard.

Little Walter was whispering into the ear of his dog. "What are you saying to Rover, dear?" asked his mother. "Oh, I was just telling him how lucky he was," replied Walter, "'cause he didn't have to have his neck washed and his hair combed or go to school."

No Locusts!

Some years ago, in one of the South American republics, there was a sudden and devastating plague of locusts. They came, nobody knew whence, in millions, and soon stripped the territory over which they swept of every speck of green.

It happened that a planter was staying in one of the cities over which the locusts swarmed. As soon as the first disquieting news came to him from the neighboring plantations he sent a telegram to the major-domo of his own estate, asking whether any locusts had appeared. The major-domo replied that he had seen no signs of locusts.

Then, worse news came. Locusts had appeared at plantation after plantation, causing awful damage. Again the planter, more worried than ever, telegraphed to his plantation: "Have the locusts appeared?"

Again the major-domo at once answered "No."

Soon after that the planter heard that a plantation contiguous to his own had been ravaged frightfully. Again he telegraphed.

This was the answer from the major-domo:

"No, sir; no locusts have been seen, but there are millions of little yellow grasshoppers here, which are ruining the coffee crop."

Gold mining seems to be in a prosperous condition, according to some recent figures issued by the government. For a century prior to the discovery of gold in California the average annual production of gold was about twelve million dollars. Between 1850 and 1890 it averaged a hundred millions, and since then it has been increasing rapidly, till last year it was more than four hundred and twenty-five million dollars. Within twenty-five years the world's stock of gold has doubled. The amount now on hand is worth about eleven billion dollars. The United States has more of it than any other country.

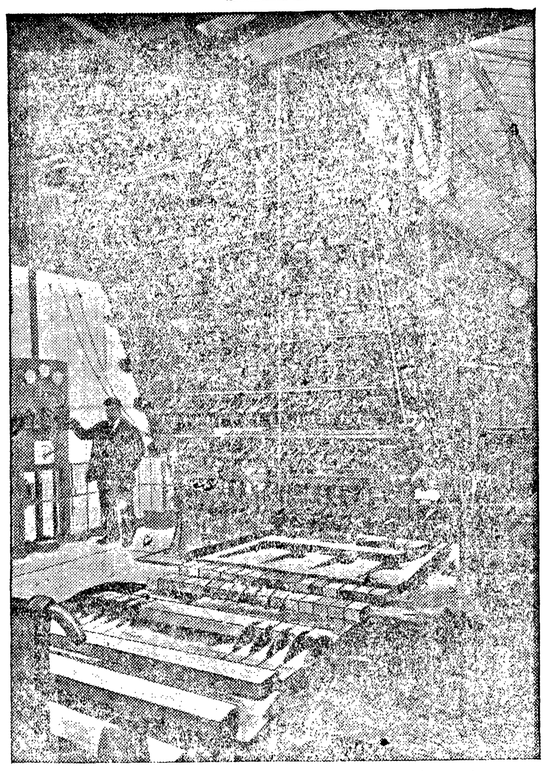
CUTTING WOODEN PAVING BLOCKS.



This machine, which can cut 240,000 wooden blocks in ten hours, consists of a series of circular saws fed with wooden battens. These are kept in the right direction by the frame, which in the picture is raised in order to show the sawing apparatus. The battens move up an inclined plane towards the saws and the finished blocks are delivered down a similar plane at the other end. The motive power is electricity.

Through an official act of the Church of the Brethren in Pennsylvania members of the sect who wear gold rimmed spectacles and eyeglasses are virtually called heretics.

The Brethren, or Dunkards, as they are commonly called, have always been opposed to all forms of ostentatious display. In the rural districts the members of the church adhere faithfully to the old-time regulations, eschewing all ornate features of dress or architecture.

COSTUMES OF THE DUNKARDS.

Those who go to the cities and establish churches there have discontinued many of these customs. The men wear neckties and watch chains, which the older rural members regarded as abominations. The city churches have organs and stained glass windows, which are not tolerated in the rural churches.

In matters touching the conduct of the members the Dunkards are not governed by set rules, but merely by the general sentiment of the church expressed from time to time in its conferences. The only authorized creed of the church is the Bible, and upon the literal interpretation of various passages of Scripture are based the various customs of the church, such as the baptism of adults in a running stream, the opposition to warfare and litigation, the wearing of the plain garb, the love feasts, the feet-washing ceremony and the kiss of charity exchanged by members at church services.

WASHING THE FEET.

Sometimes the district conferences attempt to enforce stringent rules of conduct under pain of excommunication. The Ohio conference has decided that all members shall be expelled unless they agree that the "wearing of hats by sisters, the mustache alone by brethren, all fashionable dressing, wearing of jewelry, gold and unnecessary ornamentation be discontinued and that the sisters wear the prayer cap during religious services."

The question of a paid ministry has been a source of much perplexity to the church. Originally ministers were chosen from the membership of the congregation and served without pay, continuing their previous employment. The city churches found such methods impracticable and to maintain their work were forced to pay their pastors. Officially this is termed a supported ministry and under that designation has been tacitly permitted.

America's Cocoa Consumption.

The imports of crude cocoa into the United States in the calendar year 1908 amounted to 97,419,700 pounds, valued at $12,999,836. The imports the year previous were 912,147 pounds less, but the total value was $2,155,743 greater. In other words the market value of the cocoa imports dropped from 17½ cents per pound in 1907 to 13 1-3 cents in 1908. The United States is the largest consumer of cocoa, the world output of which is about 340,000,000 pounds. The leading countries supplying the American markets are the British West Indies, which sent 27,945,871 pounds in 1908, while 17,026,116 pounds came from elsewhere in the West Indies and Bermuda; Brazil furnished 15,301,524 pounds, while 18,773,986 pounds came from elsewhere in South America. Crude cocoa ranks as twenty-fifth in importance of merchandise into the United States.

Training St. Bernard Dogs.

The training of the rescue dogs on the Hospice of St. Bernard, on the Alps is really very simple. During the summer months, when the monks are not so busy, some of the assistants at the monastery take the young dogs out into the valleys or hollows, where there is always snow. One man will go and lie down in the snow and bury himself in it, and then a dog is sent to look after him. The animal is taught to bark when he has found him, and also to rouse the man up if he is asleep. When the man wakes up and stands on his feet the dog leads him to the hospice, running along in front to show him the way.

Note.

The £1 note is not the smallest issued by the Bank of England. By mistake a note of the value of one penny was made and issued in 1828. It was in circulation for many years, a source of annoyance to the cashiers in making up their accounts. At length the holder of it brought it to the bank, and after considerable argument persuaded the authorities to give him £5 for it.

A convention of noted criminologists in Chicago has been discussing such topics as "The creation of the specific offense of becoming a criminal." New York furnishes a case in point, which has been aired by no less a person than Justice Gaynor of the Supreme Court of the state. Justice Gaynor wrote a letter to the Mayor, making charges against the police force and against Commissioner Bingham to the effect that they were making it impossible for one George Duffy to lead an honest life. The substance of the charge is that Duffy, who is an inoffensive citizen of Brooklyn, who works for a milk company, and who lives quietly at home with his parents, has been the victim of a series of false arrests by the police. The first time he was arrested he was stripped, "mugged" and measured, and his picture inserted in the rogues' gallery. He was then taken before a magistrate and discharged. Another time he was arrested and paraded before a group of detectives with faces muffled, so that the victim could not recognize them. Again he was discharged. On his third arrest he was simply held overnight in a cell with some tough characters and discharged in the morning. Justice Gaynor makes the point that there is no warrant in law for placing Duffy's picture in the rogues' gallery, since he never has been convicted of any offense, and that his repeated arrests are evidences of cruel and tyrannical disposition on the part of the police. It is easy to be seen that if Duffy is an innocent man, all the persecution under which he has suffered tends to make him a dishonest one. His natural tendency would be to give up the fight and become a thief, as the police say he is. If he is already a secret criminal, the police appear to be playing a poor game in arresting him so often without any proof against him. They simply make the public believe the stories that are told of police tyranny. The Duffy case has been made the basis of charges of misconduct against Police Commissioner Bingham and may be the cause of his dismissal. Bingham is the man who recently demanded an enormous appropriation for the establishment of a secret police in New York, on the ground that the personnel of the present force of uniformed and plain-clothes men was so well known to the criminal classes that it was powerless to cope with them. The Duffy case may give a faint idea of what a secret police, with unlimited power of arrest, detention and secret examination, mught accomplish toward Russianizing the United States.

Measuring One Cup.

Young housekeepers are often at a loss when a recipe calls for a cup of anything to tell what kind of a cup to use or how much a cup measures.

The accepted measure is a stone kitchen cup and means that cup filled to the brim. It is equal to one-half pint.

A cup of solid buttermilk, chopped meat or granulated sugar is equal to about half a pound. A cup of sifted flour is equal to a quarter of a pound.

At the home of Mrs. T. F. Trumbull on Oak street, Misses Bernice Allen and Lucy Bonker gave a lawn patry in honor of their joint birthday and also of the 12th anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Trumbull's wedding. The lawn was lighted by Japanese lanterns and electric lights. At each corner was a card table, and during the early part of the evening whist, hearts and flinch were engaged in. At half past nine, just as Miss Trumbull had announced that she had lost the game, silence was called as Miss Allen was going to make a speech. She announced a new game called the "Hidden Mystery," patented by Miss Helen Trumbull, was about to be put on trial. Three objects, an alarm clock, bear, and an elephant were hidden in the woods to the north, east and west within a half block of the house. A first, second and third prize was offered to those who were fortunate enough to find these objects. Forthwith, in twos and threes, the guests went forth into the darkness of the woods seeking for the hidden mysteries. Despite the darkness of the night, the roughness of the walks, and the necessary contact with bushes and stumps, the mysteries were discovered within the hour. Miss Margaret Ritchie won first prize, Mr. Squires second and Mr. Clinchard third. After refreshments, dancing was enjoyed at the Athletic hall

FARMERS' DAY AT THE EXPOSITION

Big Doings Promised for Wednesday, September the 8th. Banner Day of the Fair.

Parades, picnics, music, fireworks and sporting events will mark the celebration of Farmer's Day at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition, September 8th.

G. D. Wilson has been appointed director general of the day and is preparing an elaborate program in which all farmers in the Northwest will be interested. At both the St. Louis and Jamestown expositions all arrangements for the day set aside for the farmers were made by Director General Wilson.

The morning parade at the exposition on Farmer's Day will be participated in by agriculturists from Washington, Idaho, Oregon and British Columbia. Then will come the address of welcome by President Chilberg. Shortly after 12 o'clock the farmers will assemble on the grounds near the shores of Lake Washington for a basket picnic. During the afternoon it is proposed to have an unusual feature known as the Bells of Christendom in which 700 young girls from various parts of the United States will take part. Wire connections will be made with bells in Seattle and about the cities of Puget Sound and at a given signal the young girls will press electric buttons ringing hundreds of bells. The rainbow banquet in the evening will be an international affair, for invitations are to be sent to foreign countries to have representatives present on Farmer's Day.

Farmers from all over the Northwest will come to Seattle in great numbers for the celebration of Farmer's Day and September 8th will no doubt be a banner day in the history of the Pacific World's Fair.

A Bold Step.

To overcome the well-grounded and reasonable objections of the more intelligent to the use of secret, medicinal compounds, Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., some time ago, decided to make a bold departure from the usual course pursued by the makers of put-up medicines for domestic use, and so has published broadcast and openly to the whole world, a full and complete list of all the ingredients entering into the composition of his widely celebrated medicines. Thus he has taken his numerous patrons and patients into his full confidence. Thus too he has removed his medicines from among secret nostrums of doubtful merits, and made them Remedies of Known Composition.

By this bold step Dr. Pierce has shown that his formulas are of such excellence that he is not afraid to subject them to the fullest scrutiny.

Not only does the wrapper of every bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the famous medicine for weak stomach, torpid liver or biliousness and all catarrhal diseases wherever located, have printed upon it, in plain English, a full and complete list of all the ingredients composing it, but a small book has been compiled from numerous standard medical works, of all the different schools of practice, containing very numerous extracts from the writings of leading practitioners of medicine, endorsing in the strongest possible terms, each and every ingredient contained in Dr. Pierce's medicines. One of these little books will be mailed free to any one sending address on postal card or by letter, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and requesting the same. From this little book it will be learned that Dr. Pierce's medicines contain no alcohol, narcotics, mineral agents or other poisonous or injurious agents and that they are made from native, medicinal roots of great value; also that some of the most valuable ingredients contained in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for weak, nervous, over-worked, "run-down," nervous and debilitated women, were employed, long years ago, by the Indians for similar ailments affecting their sisters. In fact, one of the most valuable medicinal plants entering into the composition of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription was known to the Indians as "Squaw-Weed." Our knowledge of the uses of not a few of our most valuable native, medicinal plants was gained from the Indians.

As made up by improved and exact processes, the "Favorite Prescription" is a most efficient remedy for nearly all the womanly functional derangements, displacements, as prolapsus, anteversion and retroversion, overcoming painful periods, toning up the nerves and bringing about a perfect state of health. Paternalism In France.

Indirectly at least the strike of the wine growers in the south of France may be traced to paternalism in government. The French government has long carried paternalism to extreme lengths, and since France became a republic the leaders have kept to the paternal idea. It is not strange that the wine growers should regard the government as the source of commercial prosperity and also of adversity. The central authority was asked to stop the adulteration of wine so as to help the real product of the vine. When this was granted the government was asked to find a profitable market for the wine.

This foolish demand of the wine growers for state aid might have been laughed down but for the fact that a large and densely populated section of the country was touched in its pocket. Village mobs or peasant uprisings may be suppressed, but "you cannot indict a whole people." For the section involved an uprising like that in the south of France has all the evils of a civil war. It may be put down by an iron hand, but the people will insist that they have been outraged.

In view of the situation in their fatherland, Patrick Henry's words, "Gentlemen may cry peace, peace, but there is no peace," would sound pat on the lips of the Russian delegates at The Hague conference.
