THE CHRISTIAN AND THE SOCIAL PROBLEMS

Address by Vanderveer Custis at St. Andrew's Church, Sunday, November the 14th.

It is an honor of which I am not unappreciative for a layman to be asked to make an address in this place; and though I come not with authority as a priest to declare the love of God or the duty of man, I hope that I may be able to throw a little light on the way in which man may do his duty and in doing it show forth the love of God. As a preliminary step, however, it is necessary to say a few words on the former subject; and here I shall follow closely the argument advanced by Professor Richard T. Ely, in his Social Aspects of Christianity.

In regard to the duty of man, hear what our Lord Jesus Christ saith:

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it. Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the Law and the prophets."

Here we have what may be regarded as the central teaching of Christianity. One part of it, however, is so often neglected that it needs emphasis; the second commandment is like unto the first. Indeed it is so like unto it that St. John declares that "If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar * *"; [I John iv 20] and St. Paul constantly emphasises the love of one's neighbor as the great duty of man, and places charity above either faith or hope. [I Corinthians, xiii 12. See also Romans xiii 9.]

It is this second commandment, so inextricably bound up with the first, that we are to consider this morning, and in order that we may see clearly what it involves, I wish to read to you a parable that has a very direct bearing on the subject: (Mathew xxv 31-46.]

When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory;

And before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats:

And he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left.

Then shall the King say to them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world:

For I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in:

Naked, and ye clothed me: I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison and ye came unto me.

Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungred, and fed thee? or thirsty, and gave thee drink?

When saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in? or naked, and clothed thee?

Or when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee?

And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.

Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels:

For I was an hungered, and ye gave me no meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink:

I was a stranger, and ye took me not in: naked, and ye clothed me not: sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not.

Then shall they also answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered or athirst, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did not minister unto thee?

Then shall he answer them, saying, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me.

And these shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal.

You will notice here what sort of love for man our Lord desires. It is the love that realizes itself in actual service to men in this world. The parable is of course not intended to be a catalog of the things that God requires; but furnishes an illustration of the sort of things that we ought to do. We should never lose sight of the fact that love must lie at the foundation of it all.

If I am right in this view, the attitude of the Christian towards his fellow men obviously cannot be one of indifference; and it follows that it cannot be one of ignorance. If, indeed, service to them is a duty, the first step is to learn what are their needs, and the second step is to learn how those needs can be met. In the search for evils we have not far to go. Every city of any importance can show an abundance of sin and misery. There is poverty, which but a little knowledge of economics makes clear enough is a source of continued poverty; and many of us who are especially devoted to this science believe that it will yet show us how poverty may be abolished. There is tuberculosis, which is a disease of poverty and a cause of more deaths than is any other disease in this country, yet is, I understand, a preventable disease. There is a penal system which, I think it no exaggeration to say, is "the outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual disgrace"—at once a result of ignorance, indifference, and anti-Christian views of crime and its punishment; and a cause of increased crime, misery, poverty, and degredation. There is a system of taxation which, though recently much improved in this State. is still in great need of reform. There is political corruption, which soils men's souls, and stands squarely in the way of many reforms that would greatly improve the health, both moral and physical, and the happiness of the community. Indeed, I might spend all the time that is left in pointing to evils that hinder the full establishment of the Kingdom of God in this State and country.

Some of you may feel that these are large matters, whereas the parable I have quoted deals with individual cases. It is true that individual cases need attention; but what I wish to indicate at this point is the sort of problem that our society presents; and to emphasize the fact that the true spirit of service will lead us to consider these problems in order that the evils which they represent may be abolished. Is it not a parody on the whole spirit of the parable to say that we should feed the hungry, but need take no interest in the reasons why our fellow men are thrown on our charity; that we should visit the sick, but need do nothing to prevent sickness; that we should visit those in prison; but need do nothing to make imprisonment unnecessary?

If we really love our fellow men we will desire to serve them in the most effective manner possible; and this may require the employment of an expert. If those we love are sick we will not be content with visiting them personally; but will provide a physician and a nurse. If we cannot do this as individuals we may club together for the purpose; or may, perhaps tax ourselves in order that hospitals may be provided. It is not otherwise with poverty. Poverty is in many respects like a disease: and to simply give money to the poor is often one of the worst things we can do. It is, indeed, not unlike giving intoxicating liquor to the drunkard, or opium or cocaine to the drug fiend. Please notice: I do not say that the needs of the poor should not be provided for; but I do say that we should give what will benefit, not what will injure. To determine what is needed is one of the purposes of a charity organization society; and to support such a society, and to turn over to it the unknown application for alms, is generally much better than to attempt to administer relief directly. The principle is the same as that which would lead up to provide public hospitals, and to send sick strangers there. Where no such society exists we must often undertake the work ourselves; but whether we personally give or withhold relief, we must be guided by our view as to which policy is likely to be the more productive of good.

While the indiscriminate giving of money is often condemned on the same ground that the ignorant giving of powerful drugs would be condemned, I think it is worthy of note that such giving is commonly due to the wrong motive. In some cases it is giving from mere good nature, associated with a large amount of indifference to the real welfare of the recipient of the alms. In other cases it is really selfish giving; it may be giving to the poor in order to gain a reward or avoid a penalty in a future life—something, as someone has suggested, on the order of fire insurance. It need only be mentioned how roundly our Lord would condemn giving to the poor to receive honor from men. The matter is really simple: "all our doings without charity are nothing worth"; and with charity the aim will be to give what is needed in the way that will do the most good.

I suggested a few moments ago that not only should we wish to relieve suffering, but we should endeavor to prevent it and to create happiness. This opens up a tremendous field of activity; and it will be impossible to make even a superficial survey of that field this morning. It includes plans of social reform generally; such as the opening up of parks and playgrounds, the provision of proper education facilities; factory and other labor legislation, the reform of our penal system, the regulation of railroads and other corporations, and the organization of government on a better and purer basis. Indeed, there is hardly any phase of social life that it does not touch. Some of the problems are peculiar to one city, some peculiar to one state; but there is probably no inhabited part of the country in which there is not enough to be done to require all the time and energy that can be devoted to the work.

THE CHRISTIAN AND THE SOCIAL PROBLEMS

For most of us the effort to make this world a better place in which to live means that we must give our attention to some particular problem, or to a small number of problems, and think about it, read about it, and talk about it. In a country in which public opinion is as influential as it is in this country it means a great deal for the people to give their attention to almost any subject.

Let us take, as an illustration, our penal system. This, as I said a few moments ago, is a disgrace to our civilization. It is a disgrace, not because it is wholly bad, but because it is so much worse than it ought to be. It is better than none, crime must be made unpopular; and the existing system does much to accomplish this. For the great majority it makes the non-criminal life more satisfactory than the criminal life. It keeps, for a time at least, some anti-social individuals where their opportunities to prey on society are greatly limited. On the other hand, it commonly strenghtens the criminal tendencies of those who fall within its grasp. It is a cause of great suffering; and suffering cannot be justified merely by the fact that the individual has done wrong. Society has a right to inflict pain only where it is necessary, either for the good of society or that of the offender, or possibly that of a third party who has a legitimate interest in the matter. Now society does all the harm I have suggested, and more, where it might do much good. By proper treatment many a man who has been started on a criminal career could be made into a useful citizen.

By proper treatment I do not mean that the criminal should be coddled, and told that society is really to blame for his faults. I do not mean that the prison should be a place where men will want to stay. It should be a place, however, where the offender is taught, not simply that the way of the transgressor is hard, but that the way of the righteous is a possibility for him. He should be taught as far as possible, to like clean decent living. He should be taught how to conquer his weaknesses, and to avoid temptation. Do not forget that he is taught something now. Too often he is taught that society is the enemy of those who offend it; that he is an offender; that he is bad; that the good things of life are not for him. His will is commonly broken, though it may have been a weak will that resulted in his fall. The result not infrequently is that he leaves the prison accustomed to hard usage; taught that it is his natural portion in life; with little hope for the future, and little power to resist temptation. Society is his enemy; and all that he gets from it he must get by force or cunning. The most that he can hope for by reasonably good behavior is to escape special notice. Is such a man likely to make a good member of society?

Doubtless there are few of us who would be competent to say what would be a good system; but if we realize that our present system is bad we shall have taken a long step toward reform. Each of us has some influence—possibly more than he is wont to suppose. We cannot all be generals, or even captains, in the struggle for better conditions; but we can be privates and remember, no general can win the fight single-handed. It is because public opinion has demanded it that many of our greatest reforms have come, and each of us helps to make up public opinion.

In our country, in the city of Denver, the importance of the people in the reform of at least one part of our penal system is illustrated by the development of the method of dealing with the children who have committed offenses against the law. In this case the leader was Judge Ben Lindsey, a man of whom you all ought to know a good deal. His autobiography, under the title of "The Beast and the Jungle," is now running in Everybody's Magazine. Judge Lindsey found that a number of children were brought before him charged with serious crimes. For example, after his interest had been aroused by the case of a boy whom he calls Tony Costello, who was charged with larceny for taking some coal from the railroad tracks to keep a suffering family warm, three small boys were brought before him charged with burglary. They were accused of stealing pigeons from a man who was regarded as the enemy of all boys; and two of these alleged burglars said that he had been stealing their pigeons. No doubt the boys had done wrong; but was it proper to say that they were burglars, and to pass sentence accordingly? Listen to what Judge Lindsey himself says (The Beast and the Jungle, Everybody's Magazine.)

"I began to search the statutes for the laws in the matter, to frequent the jails in order to see how the children were treated there, and to compile statistics of the cost to the county of these trials and the cost to society of this way of making criminals of little children. And the deeper I went into the matter the more astonished I became.

"I found boys in the city jail, in cells reeking with filth and crawling with vermin, awaiting trial for some such infantile offenses as these I have described. I found boys in the county jail, locked up with men of the vilest immorality, listening to obscene stories, subject to the most degrading personal indignities, and taking lessons in a high school of vice with all the receptive eagerness of innocence. I found that the older boys, now almost confirmed in viciousness, but began their careers as Tony Costello had, or these burglars of the pigeon roost. And I found that many of the hardened criminals were merely the perfect graduates of the system of which I had been a sort of proud superintendent.

"It kept me awake at night. It possessed me with a remorseful horror. I went about talking, "agitating", investigating, pestering the jailors, spending my Sundays in the cells among the criminals, trying to draft reform laws and in every way making myself a nuisance to everybody. I put into this work all the balked enthusiam that my unsuccessful legislative reforms had left me. I could help the children, if I could not help the "grown-ups".

"Some of those "grown-ups", whom my activites annoyed, began to say I was crazy. Our family physician came, on that report, to remonstrate with me. A relative, very much alarmed, asked me to be careful of myself, not to "overdo". And I felt as if I were standing before a burning building, with children crying for help in the flames at the upper windows, while my friends remonstrated, "Be calm! Don't excite yourself so. People will think you're not sane."

"Not sane? Well, it depends on what you consider "sane." One very sane thing to do would have been to turn my back on the fire and the children perishing in it, blame the inefficiency of the fire department, shrug a shoulder as if to say, "Well, it's none of my business," and go home to my dinner. I know THAT sort of sanity. I have seen it, many times, myself. But in the transports of my so-called insanity I found a section of the Colorado school law of April 12, 1899, by means of which I could get a ladder up to those doomed children."

I cannot stop to give you the history of this fight. I wish you would read it for yourselves. I am citing it to show you what the evil was and what the people did about it. There were many other reforms in which Judge Lindsey was interested, among them being the doing away with wine rooms where young girls were drugged and ruined. As a result of his activity he incurred the anger of a powerful class of politicians. Let me quote a little further to show you what was the outcome of this particular battle, not of war on evil, for this battle led to harder ones and the fight is not over.

"As election day approached, it became apparent to every politician that I was hobelessly 'out of the running.' My republican opponent was speaking every night—particularly from the bars of saloons—to enthusiastic audiences. I was posted in every dive in Denver as the one man on the Democratic ticket who was not 'right.' Sample ballots were put up, showing how to scratch me. The Democratic workers, to whom I had refused the spoils of office in the County Court, were working openly against me. It was cheerfully predicted at Democratic headquarters that I could not possibly pull through, but that I should run away behind the ticket. After looking over the situation myself, I decided that I had not the shadow of a chance; and I went to bed early, on election night, without waiting to hear the returns.

"It was not until the following morning, when I came down to breakfast, that I learned, from the newspaper reports, what had happened. The lower wards had knifed me unmercifully; but in the upper districts, among the homes, unexpected thousands had rallied to save the "kids' court" and rebuke the "wine room gang." Instead of running behind my ticket, I had run 2,000 votes ahead of it.

"When I saw those headlines my heart leaped to a beat that almost suffocated me—not because the result was so unforseen—such an unheard of thing for Denver — so startling a shock even to professional politicians, with an ear always to the ground—but because it was to me a warrant of renewed faith in the people, the first sign of an aroused public opinion on which I might rely, the resurrection call to all my dead hopes of reform. It was as if there had come — out of blind darkness — with a flash of a stroke of lightning — the full day! The people were with me! (Even the Denver Republican, the paper that had opposed me, later conceded that 'Lindsey was honestly elected' — 'one officer who did not owe his advancement to illegal votes'—endorsed by 'honest Democratic and Republican voters alike.') I gulped my morning coffee as a boy gulps his emotion, with a pain in the throat. I had broken the system. I had sent the Beast to shelter, limping, with its tail between its legs.

"Or rather, I thought I had. As I walked down to my court that morning the streets looked cleaner, the air seemed purer, life seemed more than ever good to live. My work was waiting for me, and thousands of good citizens were waiting to help me with it."

This is an illustration. It comes from Denver; but are there no such problems nearer home? Is Port Angeles, for example, really the Angels' port? If so, is it a port of entry, or a port of departure? In Seattle, at any rate, the conditions, as regards the prison system in general, are not all that might be desired. We have, however, a juvenile court; and it may interest you to know that it was established as a result of an agitation in which the women's clubs and organizations of that sort played a considerable part. I might add that one of the organizations that took part in the agitation was the Sociological Society, a men's club of the First Presbyterian Church.

It is not in things pertaining to government only that a problem presents itself to the individual. Take, for example, the labor union. If you are a laboring man in a trade in which there is a union, the question comes to you in the practical form of whether or not you ought to join the union; but in any case you are likely to be placed in a position in which you must throw the weight of your influence for or against unionism. I shall not attempt to answer the question for you; but I may say that, in my personal opinion, the labor union, in its better form, is a powerful instrument for good. Of course the unions, even the best of them, make mistakes. We ought to have a fellow feeling for them there. Of course the unions, even the best of them, do things of which we cannot approve. Do you know of any human organization that does not? I would even say that there are bad unions. But does this condemn unionism? What you shall do about unionism is a question for you to decide; but you should answer the question as honestly and intelligently as possible, with a keen regard, not only for the way in which it will affect your personal interests, but for the way in which it will affect the interests of others.

It is sometimes said that the Church should not concern itself with matters of this sort; and especially that it should keep out of politics. If those who advance this view mean that the Church, as an organized body, should not become a partizan, enforcing its mandates with ecclesiastical pains and penalties, I am inclined to agree with them. In nearly every case the attitude of the Church in regard to any particular policy should depend upon how that policy will work; and how it will work is for science to say. Where science cannot determine what the outcame will be the Church is not ordinarily in a position to form a judgment that will be binding on the souls of men. The Church should be open to all except those who are wilfully and clearly in the wrong; and it must take an interest even in these. It may, however, properly require of its members that they form their judgments on Christian principles.

I fear that those who say the Church should take no stand in social matters commonly mean a great deal more than this. They sometimes express the view that the Church should confine itself to saving men's souls. This, not infrequently, means that they are willing that the Church should have what is left of men after the world gets done with them. Here, surely, is false doctrine, if not dangerous heresy.

But if the Church, as an organized body, imposing ecclesiastical penalties, may not deal with these questions, it does not follow that it should do nothing. It may and should be active in stimulating an interest in the social problems; in furnishing a point of view with which they should be approached; and in doing what it can to aid the people as individuals in forming their judgments. It may insist that its members deal with these questions in a truly Christian spirit. I believe that it is in many cases desirable that it take an active hand in social matters through its clubs and guilds. I think that a civic guild of some sort, perhaps in the form of a men's club, would be a decidedly proper adjunct to almost any parish. In some cases a club to deal with a particular problem is desirable; and if there are members of a club who differ radically, or if the clubs of separate parishes, or two clubs of the same parish, honestly fail to agree, there is no reason for hard feeling. Remember, truth rarely, if ever, suffers in a controversy. Truth is commonly the fittest; and the fittest need not fear the struggle for survival.

I would even go so far as to say the parish priest may deal with particular problems in his pulpit; but he should do it in a fair-minded spirit, remembering that in regard to these matters he is not the infallible mouthpiece of God. Of course he needs great discretion. He should remember that his words carry some weight because of his office. The main point is that he should adopt the attitude of the fair-minded investigator, not that of the advocate.

In regard to the view that the Church should not enter into controversy, let us remember that it is not here to keep the peace with the devil; and that if the forces of evil do not hate it it does not amount to much. Bear in mind that we have no reason for thinking that the powers of evil have given commands to their followers to love their enemies.

What, then, is the conclusion of the matter? The two great commandments, to love God and to love our neighbor, are alike unto each other, and obediance to the one implies obediance to the other. If we love our fellow men we will endeavor to serve them in the most effective way. We cannot be indifferent; we cannot be ignorant. We must help to establish the rule of the Kingdom of God here, on this earth, by actual deeds that will make the world a better and happier place for this life, as well as for the life to come. This implies the taking an interest in plans for social betterment, and, as individuals, there are few of us who can find nothing to do. We cannot all be leaders; but we can do our part. The Church should be a source of inspiration, and probably through its subsidiary organizations — certainly through its members, lay and clerical — should concern itself with definite problems. All this means work and sometimes means fight. It is for us to see to it that the good shall triumph, here, among men, and that sin, misery, and all other forms of evil shall be utterly destroyed.

"The Son of God goes forth to war,
A kingly crown to gain;
His blood-red banner streams afar;
Who follows in his train?"

PUGET SOUND AS A FRUIT COUNTRY

"Build up the farms and our cities become great," said Joseph Manning, superintendent of horticulture in the King county building at the exposition, when notified of the long list of awards for fruits and vegetables that were exhibited by the growers of that county.

"It has been demonstrated that by the same care given to the raising of fruits in this country as is given east of the mountains, we can raise the finest apples, pears, quinces, plums, prunes, certain varieties of peaches and grapes, and English walnuts," said Mr. Manning. "Nowhere in the country are the Gravenstein and King apples raised in this county excelled. Also there are raised here specimens of crab apples and plums that cannot be surpassed for quality and size.

Prof. VonDeman, who was the judge of fruits and vegetables for the A.-Y.-P. Exposition commission, and who is regarded as the most competent person in the country as a pomologist, declares that certain varieties of apples and nearly all kinds of pears can be raised successfully in this section. He further says that in no place in the world can English walnuts be raised to better advantage than in favored sections of the Puget Sound country.

What Mr. Manning says as to the raising of fruits in King county can be said with equal force throughout the entire Puget Sound country, and certainly that part known as the Olympic peninsula.

The Puget Sound country has always been noted for its superior production in fruits and vegetables. It has the soil and climate necessary for growing the best of everything, and requires only the application of scientific agriculture to bring satisfactory financial results. The collection of grains, fruits, and vegetables at the exposition simply indicates what can be done any where that the farms are given proper attention. The object lesson is of more than ordinary importance as it opens possibilities for men and women who will enter upon the land and reap of its abundant harvests. It indicates the great future of farming in the valleys and logged-off lands of Western Washington. Speaking upon this subject the Seattle P.-I. says:

"Agriculture is destined to take a leading place in the money producing industries of Western Washington. It has been held back in the past because of other natural resources being so easily accessible. The pioneers engaged in lumbering, and that introduced an area of commercial energy that has accomplished a great industrial work." (This year the value of the salmon industry alone is estimated at over $11,000,000.)

"There are opportunities in every section where farming lands are obtainable. The demands for products of the dairy, orchard and garden are increasing, and the openings for every form of special crops are becoming more numerous. Clearing the logged-off lands will assist in solving an intricate problem of where to place the farmers and open up the pathway to the production of even greater agricultural crops than presented at the Exposition. Here is another of the many opportunities for the young men of today to enter upon lands and build homes and secure fame and fortune."

The question of labor and the saloon was discussed at a mass meeting at Toronto, Ont., on the 14th inst. Vice-president John Mitchell and Treasurer John B. Lemon, of the American Federation of Labor, and President Thomas L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers of America, made addresses. Mr. Mitchell declared that organized labor, in its fight for better conditions for wage earners, was doing more to promote temperance than any other organization. He denied that shorter hours of labor and increased wages resulted in added profits to the saloon. Mr. Lennon said the liquor business lowered the efficiency of the working men, and prophesied that the time would come when labor would be arrayed against the saloon. The United Mine Workers, Mr. Lewis said, have prohibited their members from selling intoxicants, even at picnics.

The union Thanksgiving services of the First Methodist Episcopal and Congregational churches will be held this year at the Congregational church, Thursday, Nov. 25, at 11 a. m. Preaching by the Methodist pastor, Rev. H. Jackson Hartsell.

The Indiana map is whitening rapidly. Of the 92 counties in the state, 70 are dry, 13 have voted to retain the saloons, and 9 others have as yet not voted on the question.

Although it was a very stormy night the Angeles folk were royally received. A sumptuous hot dinner was prepared in the McDonald hall, after which the ladies of the W. C. T. U. repaired to the opera house which was beautifully decorated, appropriately for the occasion. The beautiful bouquets which were presented to the speakers, reminded us that we were in a country where out-of-door flowers were in season the year around. Everybody had such a good time that Angeles surely expects Sequim to return the compliment in the near future. Those going to Sequim were Misses Juanita Glen and Laurena Ester and Mesdames Graves, Filion and McKechnie and Lloyd McKechnie.

The National Magazine, in an article on the rapidly deforesting of the pine lands of the south, advances a point which is completely disregarded by the more radical conservationists, although it is thoroughly understood in this state of Washington, where the conditions referred to are some what similar to those in Georgia. Says the National Magazine: "The pine lands of Georgia have a far greater future as farms than forests. It must be remembered, too, that the great West has practically no more timber, and yet, its lands are vastly more valuable than the timber lands of the Pacific coast."

This is true, with these additions: The deforested lands of Western Washington are much more productive and much more valuable for farming purposes than the pine lands of Georgia; and the timber lands of the northern Pacific coast, when deforested and reduced to cultivation, are more valuable and produce out of all proportion a greater annual value per acre than the prairie lands of any portion of the Middle West.

But these points are absolutely ignored in the discusson of the conservation question by too many theorists who are making a fad of that proposition at the present time. It is an economic question of much greater breadth than is generally allowed it in these discussions. It is assumed, as a matter of course, that the general economic interests of the country will be advanced by holding these lands perpetually in timber, while as a matter of fact, in the great majority of cases, the economic advantage is precisely the other way. As a sociological question, the conservationists, on this proposition, also have the worst of it. Whenever it is possible to establish a family in comfort, with the certainty of making a livelihood on a piece of land, now in forest, the forest should in every instance give way to the home, and the interests of the country, from every conceivable standpoint, will be advanced by so doing. In Western Washington it is the rule that the land which grows our greatest forests will respond to cultivation and is more valuable, ten to one, under the plow than it ever was in the forest.

For the Season of Long Evenings

There are no lonely winter evenings in the homes where The Youth's Companion is a weekly visitor, and there need be no idle hours. The variety of the paper's contents appeals to every member of the household, and before one issue is exhausted the next is waiting at the post office. During the winter season The Companion prints nearly a hundred complete stories of considerable length, besides the absorbing serials, some 25 articles by men and women of renown, and almost twice as many short character and humorous sketches as there are winter nights. Such an article as "Winter Gardening" suggests an interesting occupation which can be carried on in Alaska with snow twenty feet deep and without the cost of a dollar. It is well "worth while" to read a paper so carefully and ably edited.

Send your subscription ($1.75) at once so as to receive free all the issues of The Companion for the remaining weeks of 1909, as well as The Companion's "Venetian" Calendar for 1910, lithographed in thirteen colors and gold.

FRIDAY, Nov. 19, 1909

This is Thanksgiving month. Surely as a people we have many things to be thankful for. On the whole this has been a good year. Some of us may be light in pocket, and near to the prayer of the poor man who thanked God "we are as well off as we are, for we might be worse off." If we have done some one a kindness, helped some stumbling burden-bearer over a hard place, we can be thankful for that. There is abundant reason each year to every American to give thanks to the Great Ruler of the Universe for His providential care and goodness to this, our favored country. And especially may those give thanks whose lot has been cast in the pleasant places of this great Northwest country.

Dr. Custis was greeted with a large and appreciative audience at St. Andrews Episcopal church last Sunday morning, when he delivered his address on "The Relation of Christianity to Social Problems." So great was the crowd that extra chairs were provided for the comfort of the people. Special music was provided for the occasion. The sweet voices of the little girls in vestments, commingled with those of the older members of the choir, was an inspiration and a delight, as was the solo by Miss Powell.

Dr. Custis is a man of pleasant address, and a public speaker whose personal magnetism charms his hearers and commands the closest attention. His address (which we print in full in another part of this paper) was a masterly one, grandly delivered; it was uplifting, full of inspiration and good thoughts; and, withal, as its title would indicate, one in which the people are particularly interested at this time. Moreover, his reference to Judge Lindsey and his work at Denver for the reformation of juvenile offenders, as well as for civic righteousness, and his subsequent endorsement by the people of the upper wards of that city, was much the same as was the vote in the recent primaries in Angeles. Judge Lindsey was condemned and reviled in the lower wards of Denver in the same spirit as was the Olympic-Leader in the lower ward of Angeles for its efforts to arouse the people for moral reform and good government, and right and righteousness will ultimately prevail here, as at Denver.

We wish that every voter in Clallam county could have heard Dr. Custis. A few more such addresses in Angeles and even the voters of the second ward would endorse local option.

The city council of Vancouver, this state, which city recently voted to remain in the "wet" column, on last Monday evening raised the saloon license to $1000. All phonographs, music, chairs, free lunches, and treating are prohibited. The saloons will be allowed to be open from 7 a. m. until 10 p. m., daily, and closed Sunday.

If there is a good and valid reason why the saloon license in Angeles, the metropolis of the county and the center of population, should be only $300 while those engaged in the same business in sparsely settled districts of the county are compelled to pay a license fee of $600, the people would like to be informed. If the license fee at Clallam Bay, Seguim or Dungeness is fixed at $600 per year, why should it be just half that amount in Angeles with a population exceeding all three of these points, and, presumably, with an equally as high rate of profit to the saloon keeper. As a certain noted advertiser would say, "There's a Reason." Possibly our new city council will be able to solve the problem.

"Seattle has been having its first 'cold' weather of the season; and the figures on the subject may be of interest to those who desire to contrast climatic conditions here with those in other parts of the country," says the P.-I. "At 6 o'clock on Sunday morning the thermometer in the weather bureau office in this city registered 29 degrees above zero. This was the coldest weather ever recorded during the first half of November in any year since the weather bureau was established in this city on November 18, 1891. It was also the first frost of the season. Up to that time, the tenderest of flowers and plants had suffered nothing in the open air.

"But cold weather is such an unusual experience here that when the frost came it took every one by surprise. People were going around shivering, when the thermometer stood at forty above, during the middle of the day, wondering whether or not the climate was changing, and bringing to Seattle the severe winters of the East, instead of the gentle rainfall to which we have been accustomed. But after all, 29 degrees above zero is not so desperately cold, although there have been many winters on Puget sound when the thermometer did not get down to that level.

The local real estate market shows signs of activity. Real estate transfers are good evidence of business revival and prosperity. Nobody buys real estate in really dull times. Scarcely a day passes but some stranger from the East is looking up bargains in real estate, and they all go away with a good opinion of Port Angeles. We are rapidly approaching an era of prosperity. The number of realty transfers proves this. Cheer up, and go to work.

"There is no better luck for a town than to have a lot of business men, each endowed with the qualities that go to make a model public spirited citizen, who can get together and do good team work without fuss, feathers, or friction," truthfully suggests the Sedro-Woolley Courier. That the business men of that city are liberal and open handed on matters effecting the public interests, and original in matters adopted for cultivating the trade of the surrounding country is evidenced in the way they have taken hold of their Bargain Day proposition this season, started last year. A horse show and a big fruit and vegetable exhibition will be the prominent features at their coming bargain day, next Saturday. Forty-five dollars will be given in premiums to those who enter colts on that day, and the merchants are offering prizes for the best grains, fruits and vegetables exhibited, beside offering special inducements to bargain buyers in their various lines of merchandizing.

What Port Angeles needs is a little more unanimity, a little closer working together of the business interests. Everyone should have a good word of encouragement for those endeavoring to build up our city. Our business men have equal ability, energy and liberality with those of other places, but isn't it true that there is too much the spirit in Angeles of working at cross purposes with each other and to squabble about matters hardly worth while. We know of a number of good people in this city—and we could make a list of them right here and so could you, good reader—who have more ways of throwing cold water on other people's enthusiasm than we can count. It does not make the slightest difference what the proposition may be, they can administer a cold douche with absolute precision. Let us resolve to do away with all of this and instead have a little of the Sedro-Woolley spirit.

Sunday, November 21st, will be Local Option Day in the city churches—of Victoria. The Ministerial Association at its last meeting discussed the matter of bringing this subject before the congregation, and decided to ask every church to observe the 21st as Local Option Day. In many of the churches preparations are being made to have special speakers who will bring the matter to the attention of the congregations.—Daily Times.

The Palouse local of the Farmer's Educational and Co-operative Union of Whitman county unanimously adopted a resolution at their meeting on the 7th condemning the liquor traffic, putting the union on record officially favoring local option.

ANGELES SCHOOL NOTES

Home Team Defeats Townsend High by Score of 17 to 3.

The score tells the story of the football game last Saturday. It was rather one sided though the opposing team played a good game and kept their nerve to the end. The team which was considered outclassed by their opponents at Townsend when the game resulted in a score of 11 to 0, very clearly outclassed the Townsend team last Saturday and won by a decisive score. Thus the favor of the gods vary with time and place and he who boasts too insolently of a victory is made to taste the disappointment of defeat. It was a victory well earned for our team and showed the results of hard and conscientious work. The teams played 25 and 30 minute halves and with the exception of one player who was slightly injured during the game, the boys were all in good condition at the end of the contest. Ross McKechnie was conspicuous for his tackling and James Lotzgesell did excellent headwork for the team. The three points made by Townsend were made on a place kick and was a very pretty play. Attendance about one hundred. The following is the line up: Ben Wilcox c, Clyde Sewell r g, Walter Tuttle l g, Louis Mona r t, Paul Farmer l t, Ross McKechnie r e, Duane Allen l e, James Lotzgesell quarter and captain, Robert Gould r h, Trevor Bayton l h, Grubb, full, Lloyd McKechnie and F. B. Carlisle referees.

Next Thursday the team goes to Burton to play the return game with Vashon college. This will be our last game this season.

The faculty's challenge for a game of basket ball for Friday, December 3, has been accepted by the high school boys and preparations are being made for a fierce contest. The faculty is said to be taking secret practice and will probably spring a surprise when the game occurs.

Contest Friday evening, November 19, to select a team to represent the high school in state debates. The following are the contestants: Harry Stiles, Lorena Fulmer, Floyd Hayne, Grace Babcock, Jennie McLeod and Leola Foster. The judges will be Rev. Rogers, Prof. Peterson and Miss Chambers.

School will close on Friday for one week Thanksgiving vacation. A number of the faculty will spend the week at their homes.

Patrons of the school have asked if visitors are allowed in the manual training department. Visitors are always welcome in this and every other department of the school. The superintendent and teachers are all pleased to have patons of the school come and see the work that is being done.

At a meeting of the Philomathea Literary Society Friday, Supt. Geisness advocated organizing an athletic board of control for the high school, whose power it should be, among others, to grant to certain students a letter or monogram to be worn exclusively by the students to whom granted, as a special sign of distinction for having successfully and honorably taken part in the different athletic contests in the high school. The school acted favorably and a letter or monogram will soon be adopted.

The proprietor of the Terminal hotel, located at Birmington, Alabama, has changed his mind in regard to the necessity of the saloon from a business standpoint. Before Birmingham went dry under the local option law, this man along with most other hotel proprietors opposed the abolition of the saloon, urging that to eliminate such an institution would be to paralyze business. The following statement shows how completely he has changed his mind on this question:

"I was opposed to prohibition when the election was held. I didn't believe the law would be enforced. We have a large city with a great many foreigners. Beside the panic we had a coal strike that lasted several months. Statistics show that under prohibition 1908, there have been more goods bought and paid for, collections better, arrests and police court cases diminished nearly half. I had an idea that it would hurt our city in a general way, but it is not so. I believe that if we were to hold an election here now, prohibition would get a big majority.

The Badge of Honesty

Is on every wrapper of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery because a full list of the ingredients composing it is printed there in plain English. Forty years of experience has proven its superior worth as a blood purifier and invigorating tonic for the cure of stomach disorders and all liver ills. It builds up the run-down system as no other tonic can in which alcohol is used. The active medicinal principles of native roots such as Golden Seal and Queen's root, Stone and Mandrake root, Bloodroot and Black Cherrybark are extracted and preserved by the use of chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce at Buffalo, N. Y., for free booklet which quotes extracts from well-recognized medical authorities such as Drs. Bartholow, King, Scudder, Coe, Ellingwood and a host of others, showing that these roots can be depended upon for their curative action in all weak states of the stomach, accompanied by indigestion or dyspepsia as well as in all bilious or liver complaints and in all "wasting diseases" where there is loss of flesh and gradual running down of the strength and system.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" makes rich, pure blood and so invigorates and regulates the stomach, liver and bowels, and, through them, the whole system. Thus all skin affections, blotches, pimples and eruptions as well as scrofulous swellings and old open running sores or ulcers are cured and healed. In treating old running sores, or ulcers, it is well to insure their healing to apply to them Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve. If your druggist don't happen to have this Salve in stock, send fifty-four cents in postage stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and a large box of the "All-Healing Salve" will reach you by return post.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic, medicine of KNOWN COMPOSITION, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take as candy.

At the recent playgrounds congress Miss Maude Summers of Cincinnati raised a vigorous protest against certain features which appear in some of the Sunday comic supplements of the city newspapers. Her strictures have received the support of many newspapers which do not offer in their pages anything that might be vulgar or demoralizing to set before the young, either in the shape of comic text or droll picture. Some newspapers issue a page or even a supplement for juniors which aims to be and is supplementary aid to parents and teachers in instructing and entertaining children. These are good supplements, and what Miss Summers and those who agree with her object to are supplements bad for children.

Some comic supplements cater chiefly to adult tastes and go to extremes in depicting the license taken by the "bad boy" class. In fact, a boy who would act upon the suggestions for mischief which he sees in prints of this character would surely be invited into the wood shed. But fun may be had which is wholly free from harmful excitement and vicious tendencies, and where this is depicted the comic supplement may be wholesome for the entire family any day of the week.

We Must Set Fewer Fires.

On an average fire burned up nearly $20,000,000 every month of 190' There were no great conflagrations like those of Chicago, Boston, Baltimore and San Francisco to swell the total. To this loss should be added the cost of fire fighting, which is about $300,000,000 a year, and the price of insurance protection, a big item, largely governed by the prevalence of fires.

Directly and indirectly the fire fiend cost the United States about $700,000,000 last year, and the average per month was kept up for the first half of this year. Our fire fighting machinery in the exposed districts is probably the best that can be devised. We cannot stop the ravage once it is begun. But we might see to it that fewer fires are started. Fires are so often and so easily quenched when the right aids are at hand that many people get careless about handling sparks near inflammables. A match or a lamp may go wrong time and again without burning a house down, but that is no excuse for neglecting a single precaution. One slip more may burn up a town and wipe out fortunes.

A Shaft by the Suwanee For Foster.

No danger of overdoing the tribute to America's singer of immortal melodies, Stephen Collins Foster, even if it be with him, as with the author of the "Iliad," that countless localities ennobled by his verse shall be eager to honor him after his pen is silent. "Seven Grecian cities vied for Homer dead." Already "My Old Kentucky Home" has earned Foster a monument in one state, and "The Suwanee River" is likely to be commemorated by a shaft to its gifted author in another state.

Foster was not born in Kentucky, neither in Florida, but in Pennsylvania. Dead he does not belong to any one of these states nor to all of them more than to the whole Union, and it should not be difficult to raise a national fund to place a suitable shaft on the banks of the Suwanee. A niche in the American singers' hall of fame is the sure destiny of this prince among the world's popular melodists, but a few granite markers scattered here and there will have definite significance and be worth the cost.

We could make clothes

expressly for you here at home, but a local tailor shop today is impractical and unprofitable.

It has no labor market from which to secure desirable cutters and tailors—

It cannot afford to install a modern plant designed to reduce cost of production—

It doesn't do sufficient business to enable it to buy woolens direct from the mills—

It cannot keep abreast of metropolitan styles and workmanship.

Therefore, we send our orders for fine made-to-measure clothes to Ed. V. Price & Co., of Chicago.

We can take your measure the same way we would if running shops here, and furnish you your clothes, made as you want them, at 50% less than we could make them locally. Won't you call today?

The five year old son of Rev. H. R. Merrill ran a stick into his throat Friday. But for the fact that it was of cedar and broke when he fell he might have been badly hurt. Moral, do not let the children run or play with sharp sticks, knives or sissors in their hands.

SEQUIM

The Board of Trade met at the G. A. R. hall Nov. 12, with P. W. Gallup in the chair. The motion was made and carried that the chair appoint a committee of three to draft a resolution in regard to our mail service at this place and to get all the signers possible. The chair appointed Jack Knapman, J. L. Keeler and G. A. Hannum. It is surely time that something were done so the people of Sequim and vicinity could get their mail every day. What is the use of a daily paper if you have to go three days without getting it as they had to do last week? The news gets stale before one gets it. Long live the Board of Trade; let everyone turn out and encourage it. The Port Angeles papers that should get to Sequim on Saturday never reached their readers until Monday. Surely there is some thing exceedingly wrong with the steamboat company. Let every man, woman and child who gets mail west of Port Townsend raise up a cry that can be heard in Washington, D. C.

William Long sold 135 acres of land with the home to Ovel Dean.

George Pears had quite an accident Wednesday morning. He tied his young horse in front of the Bugge Mercantile Store. The horse became frightened, pulled back and broke the halter and ran away, smashing the new buggy very badly and breaking the harness and injuring the horse.

Mr. Reeves is getting ready to start his saw mill. The men are in the woods getting logs ready and the tracks laid for logging. As soon as completed they will begin to turn out lumber.

Mr. Wilmot, Eck and Joe Doran have rented Frank Doran's ranch in Happy Valley.

Frank Babcock, our popular young druggist, was a business visitor in Seattle the first of the week.

Ned Pilcher has been appointed deputy game warden for the mountain district.

Charles McDougal has accepted the position as foreman of the wood crew of Mr. Reeves' camp.

Dr. McGillivray was in Sequim Sunday.

Mrs. Alice Bell and family have moved back to their ranch.

1375 boxes of apples have been shipped over the wharf at Port Williams from Sequim and vicinity this fall, and there are a good many more boxes yet to be sent way.

Joe Keeler has installed in the Hotel Sinclair a fine large range and other substantial improvements in the kitchen.

There are a good many strangers in Sequim looking for homes.

Friday last Richard McAvoy, our worthy constable, had a sale of all his household furniture, intending to go to Seattle, where he thinks he can do better.

William Long's sale was well attended and everything sold for a good price. Jack Knapman was the auctioneer. Mr. Long will be missed as he gave employment to a large number of men.

Mrs. Willie Wilder and children left Sunday for Port Townsend to visit her sister, Mrs. Ernest Ware, for few days. Willie met her and they will go with her father, William Long.

The ladies of the W. R. C. will give a farewell reception in the G. A. R. hall Thursday evening, the 18th, in honor of Mrs. Dick McAvoy.

P. W. Gallup sold his fine home and ten acres of land to E. D. French of Tacoma. Sequim will miss him as he is a progressive citizen and has taken active part in all moves for the benefit of the community.

Earl Blake met with a very painful accident, being kicked in the face by a horse.

Mr. Payne has been very sick for the past week and as he was worse on Wednesday morning, two of his daughters were sent for.

Mr. William Long and family left Monday. Frank Swanson took the five horses Wednesday. Their goods left on the same boat as the horses.

FORKS.

Jim Heurie was on the sick list several days last week.

Mr. Bills, the carpenter, finished his work on the Woodmen's hall building and left for Seattle on Tuesday.

Oscar Klasell was acting post master Sunday in the absence of Mr. Ackerly at Shuwab. "Ack" is afraid he will not be able to continue his Sunday trip to our pleasant suburb (?) frequenty from now on.

A bridge is being constructed over Colby creek near Quillayute. Oscar Klasell went over Monday to assist in the work.

Mrs. Clark and sons of Quillayute went to Port Angeles last week to reside. Mrs. Clark is an old resident here and is highly esteemed.

When in want of anything in the fresh or salt meat line, just drop into James Fitzgerald's shop, the Bell building, on Front street. Our motto is, the best of meats and courteous attention to the wants of our customers.

BROWNRIGG-GOLDWATER

Married, the 14th of November, 1909, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Amelia Goldwater, her daughter Sadie to Mr. Eugene Bernard Brownrigg, of Port Crescent.

To the sweet strains of the wedding march, played by Mrs. Rogers, the bride and groom took their stand under a beautiful floral bell, the rooms being tastfully decorated with vines and flowers. Miss Minnie Fowler was bridesmaid and Mr. Mannie Goldwater, brother of the bride, was best man. The words that made the happy couple man and wife were spoken by Rev. Rogers of St. Andrews, the ring service of the Episcopal church being used. A number of friends were present to witness the interesting ceremony.

Mrs. Goldwater-Brownrigg is a young lady highly respected by all who know her and is gifted with those charms which make and grace a home. Mr. Brownrigg is a young man with sterling qualities and great ambition. He is at present a faithful book-keeper for the P. S. M. & T. Co., Port Crescent.

Following congratulations and best wishes refreshments were served and a pleasant social evening passed. The young couple will be at home after December 1st at Markham Hotel, Port Crescent.

Thursday was really the worst day in the week for a hostess to have selected for entertaining as it stormed most of the day and was disagreeable without. But this fact did not deter the forty ladies who were bidden by Mrs. T. T. Aldwell to attend a card party at her home from putting in an appearance, and all were fully repaid for their pains, as the event was one of the most enjoyable of the season. The spacious rooms of this beautiful home were the seene of a lively bout with cards, after which the winners at the games were awarded beautiful favors. Elegant refreshments were served, and Mrs. Aldwell pronounced a charming hostess.

Carl Kaemele, the aged German who has been residing with his family on and caring for the T. T. Aldwell ranch on the school land just back of Pine hill, was killed by dynamite Monday while blasting and clearing. Just after noon several shots were fired blowing as many stumps, the last blast, however, hung fire, and exploded while he was examining it. When first found Mr. Kaemele was thought to have been killed instantly, but later showing signs of life help was summoned by telephone and arrived quickly. One hour after the arrival of Dr. McGillivray, however, he succumbed to his injuries. The injured man was terribly mangled about the head and arms and legs. Deceased leaves a wife and several grown children. The funeral took place from the farm.
