COUNTY ENGINEER WILL BUILD BRIDGES

Temporary Bridges Now Being Put in Across Dungeness. River to Be Straightened.

Temporary bridges will be completed across the Dungeness river within a week, after which piers will be built for new bridges and contracts let for the superstructures. By declaring that an emergency exists and instructing County Engineer FitzHenry to rebuild the Burlingame and Ward bridges, the commissioners have provided for early relief.

The river will also receive immediate attention—the Board having set aside $2,400 to be available as soon as an equal amount, subscribed by the land owners, is in the bank—the first work being the clearing away of the worst log jams and straightening the course of the river near the town of Dungeness, where the river bed is as high as the streets and the water only held in the channel by banks of drift wood and mud and sand.

Farmers and land owners along the Dungeness are planning to create an assessment district and raise $10,000 a year for five years, with which to clear away all the jams and straighten the river. No work has ever been done on this stream and it winds back and forth across the bottom lands, cutting away acres of farming lands every time there is a freshet. Originally, the banks were held intact by the roots, but since the cutting of timber, it is only necessary for a log or two to lodge and start again and the river cuts into the bank as tho it were composed of granulated sugar, and the soil fills up the old channel. Once the river is straightened out, it is believed there will be little more difficulty.

HAS RECORD MAKING METER

M. J. Kerkes, proprietor of the Angeles Hotel, appeared before the Council Tuesday night with a request for information as to whether or not the Council had any control of the city's electric meters. And right here, lest the unsophisticated might be inclined to take Mr. Kerkes' request as a josh on that estimable body of gentlemen who are running the business affairs of the city, it might be well to state that more than one of the citizens of Port Angeles are in grave doubt on that same question. Anyway, it was no joke to Mr. Kerkes, for his meter had registered $37.75 the first month he had been in the hotel business. He stated his belief that there was another institution down street that was accommodating more guests than he was and burning more lights, yet the meter in the aforesaid institution was not much more than half as active, or words to that effect. If there's any reason why his house should be hitched up to a lineal descendent of Allerton, while his neighbor is given an old skate that, even under a four blocks' handicap, could be easily passed by a stone hitching post, Mr. Kerkes would like to know what it is.

The Eighteenth Annual New Year number of the West Coast Trade, "an independent journal of commerce, devoted to the dessimination of reliable information relating to the commercial and industrial progress and development of the Great Northwest," published at Tacoma, is just out. The publication, filled with fine half tone views of many of the beauty spots of the Northwest, as well as a comprehensive review of the progress of the Empire Commonwealth of the North Pacific Coast, should find its way into the home of every business man in the State. If you are interested in the development and natural resources of the State this holiday number is indispensable.

The Puget Sound Navigation Company has changed the sailing hour of the Whatcom from Seattle on Sunday mornings from 12 m. until 3 a. m. By this change people of this city will receive their Seattle Sunday papers on the day of publication instead of on the following day as heretofore.

Irondale, the steel city of the West Side, is to have a newspaper. Work will begin immediately for the construction of a building for that purpose. It is expected that the first issue will appear within a short time. Business men of Irondale and Port Townsend will finance the enterprise.

FIRST FREIGHT FROM FRISCO

Forty Tons of Alfalfa Brought By Tiverton. Advantages in Favor of Southern Metropolis.

The Dollar Line steamer Tiverton called in Tuesday on her way up from Frisco with forty tons of alfalfa for local distribution.

The above, an innocent enough item in itself, may be taken as the first step that will ultimately lead to the transfer of a large portion of the business of Port Angeles from Seattle merchants to those of San Francisco. Seattle wholesalers have always considered Angeles to be a closed town and prices have been made accordingly. Frisco's commercial men have been shut out of Angeles by reason of the fact that Frisco steamers did not call here. In Port Townsend the bulk of business is done with Frisco houses. After every call of one of the Pacific Coast Co.'s steamers — once a week — the big warehouses are piled full of miscellaneous freight. Townsend merchants route their eastern shipments through Frisco. Paper, for instance, bought in Frisco, can be laid down in Townsend for less money than it could have been had it been bought of one of the same company's branch houses in Seattle. Southern fruits, vegetables, and other goods that are shipped by steamer to Seattle, always sell for less in Townsend than here. There's a saving of some six separate handlings of each piece besides the proportionate share of fixed charges for storage while the goods are in stock at the wholesalers, his profits, and the cost of transportation after the goods are loaded on the local steamers.

C. H. Beck of Tacoma, does not pin much faith in the theory of some people who pretend to believe that business conditions would be injured by the ousting of the saloon, according to the South Bend Journal, which paper says:

"C. H. Beck, a representative of a Tacoma building and loan company, passed up Pe Ell a couple of weeks ago and came on to South Bend and Raymond. Learning that Pe Ell had gone dry he put it back on the building and loan map and went there Monday to establish a local branch of his company. The reason he gave for his change of program was that he found dry towns the best towns for home building and he proposed to be there in time to be on the ground floor. This is a concrete, business argument for towns going dry. There is no sentiment about it. We predicted that Pe Ell would profit by a dry victory but we confess that we hardly expected the march of improvement to begin the next week after election."

As the Olympic-Leader predicted last week, all but two precincts voted dry in the recent Skagit county local option election. The Sedro-Woolley Courier says that "all incorporated towns and precincts, including La-Conner, Bow, Belfast, Belleview, Avon, Concrete, Fir and Harmony, all went against saloons.

"At Bow the dry majority was one vote only, but in the Belleville and Avon precincts, which reported to Burlington, the total vote was eighty-four dry and seven wet, and this was a fair sample of the rural vote the county over."

The net result of the election is that twenty-six saloons will be legally abolished in Skagit county within the next ninety days.

MANN PANAMA CANAL BILL PASSED BY HOUSE

Washington, Jan. 8.—With the Democrats fighting every inch of the way the Mann bill providing for the administration of the Panama canal zone and centralizing the government there in the President of the United States, passed the house by a vote of 199 to 102. The vote was along strict party lines

The minority kept the house in session until 6 o'clock, offering amendment after amendment. A futile effort was made by Representative Richmond, of Alabama, to have the measure recommitted to the committee on foreign and interstate commerce, an aye and nay vote resulting 104 ayes and 136 nays

Section 2 of the bill, which confers on the president military, civil and judicial powers, including the power to make laws, was the object of spirited attack, Representative Keifer, of Ohio, joining the Democrats in the fight.

Washintgon, Jan. 10.—Willis L. Moore, chief of the weather bureau and president of the National Geographic Society, explained to the house committee on agriculture his official estimates for the coming fiscal year, particularly in connection with the Mount Weather, Va., kite observation station.

He suggested to the committee that "we are advancing so rapidly that it is a dangerous thing to say anything is impossible."

"I look forwaard," he said, "to the time when passengers will embark in aluminum cars in aeroplanes, lighted and heated by elctericity, and sail up and around the north pole in from 24 to 36 hours and return t, New York. But we have no estimate here for that kind of work, Mr. Chairman."

SPEECH STARTS FEDERAL PROBE FOR PAPER TRUST

New York, Jan. 5.—Herman Ridder, president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, on December 2 invited the attention of Attorney General Wickershan. to statements made at a banquet of paper dealers in New York in which it was claimed by representatives of the International Paper Company that the president of the International Paper and Pulp Association, A. Charles Atkins, was advising paper mills what paper prices should be. The attorney general referred the matter to United States Attorney Wise, of New York, who asked for specifications. As a result of that request, John Norris, chairman of the committee on paper of the publishers' association, has submitted detailed data purporting to cover the following matters:

1. Restriction of 46 news print mills in use of news print paper—restrictions that make impossible either an open market or public quotations of paper prices.

2. Action of news print paper mills east of the Rocky mountains in refusing to sell f. o. b. mill for spot cash or in quoting excessive prices, because, presumably, it would interfere with a "gentlemen's agreement."

3. Refusal of many news print paper houses to sell other than 32-pound paper.

4. Restrictions of contracts by many mills to one year periods and inclusion of wrappers on rolls in actual gross weight to be paid for.

Collection by American Paper & Pulp Association of daily reports from practically all news print paper mills—information that apparently has been used as a basis for concerted action in regulating prices.

6. "Trade customs," adopted by paper makers and used by them as a basis for concerted action in regulating prices.

7. Meetings of paper mapkers to discuss prices.

8. Reported agreement upon news print paper prices by two large paper making concerns.

9. Action that seems to be in contempt of court by former members of the General Paper Company and of the fiber and manila pool, through disregard of instructions of prohibition.

Shipments to England during the month aggregated 5,330,440 and were valued at $604,915, as against shipments aggregating 916,800 pounds, valued at only $104,210 in December, 1908.

Hudson Bay Road May Be Built

PRESIDENT SENDS MESSAGE ON INTERSTATE COMMERCE

Washington, Jan. 8.—President Taft yesterday sent to congress his special message on the subject of interstate commerce. Following are the principal recommendations:

"New law providing for federal license for corporations "protecting them from undue influence by states."

The establishment of the United States court of commerce, to be composed of five judges from the federal circuit courts, which shall try interstate commerce and trust cases. Appeals to be made only to the supreme court.

Prohibit corporations from acquiring stock in other corporations.

New law prohibiting the watering of stock by requiring all stocks to be sold at par, or at values determined by the interstate commerce commission.

Passage of the Esch law, giving interstate commervce commission power to standardize the safety appliances of all railroads.

The president says in part:

"It would not be proper to attempt to deprive any corproation of the right of review by a court of any decree which, if undisturbed, would rob it of a reasonable return on its investment or would subject it to burdens that unjustly discriminate against it and in favor of other carriers similarly situated. What is of supreme importance is that the decision of such a question will be as speedy as the nature of the circumstances will admit, and that a conforrmity of decision can be secured, so as to bring about an effective, systematic, scientific enforcement of the commerce law rather than conflicting decisions and uncertainty of final result. For this purpose I recommend the establishment of a court of the United States to be composed of five judges, designated for such purpose from among the circuit judges of the United States, to be known as the United States court of commeree, which court shall be clothed with original and exclusive jurisdiction over the following classes of cases:

For Criminal Punishment

"First—All cases for enforcement, otherwise than by adjudication and for the colletion of penalty or by the infliction of criminal punishment, of any order of the interstate commerce commission other than the payment of money.

"Second—All cases brought to enjoin, set aside, annul, or suspend, any order or requirement of the interstate commerce commission.

"Third—All such cases as under section 3 of the act of February 19, 1903, known as the Elkins act, are authorized to be maintained in a circuit court of the United States.

"Fourth—All such mandamus proceedings as under the provisions of section 20 to section 23 of the interstate commerce law are authorized to be maintained in the circuit court of the United States."

Five Judges to Be Named

The president recommends the appointment of five circuit judges from the districts having the largest volume of business.

He says that the orders should be made final, and subject only to review by the supreme court of the United States, with the provision that the operation of the decree appealed from shall not be stayed except by the supreme court of the United States.

He recommends giving the court power to suspend orders of the interstate commerce commisison which are under review, pending a hearing, but that no such restraining order be made except on notice, and after hearing, unless in a case where irreparable damage will ensue to the petitioner.

In view of the complete control over rate making and other practices of the interstate carriers, established by act of congress, and as contemplated by this communication, the president says.

"I see no reason why agreements between carriers subject to this act, specifying classification of freight and the rates, fares and charges for transportation of passengers and freight, which they may agree to establish, should not be permitted, provided copies of such agreements be promptly filed with the commission, but subject to all provisions of the interstate commerce act, and subject to the rights of any of the parties to such an agreement to cancel it, as to any and all agreed rates, by notice in writing to the other parties and to the commission."

For the Shipper's Benefit

The president suggests that the railroads be required to quote rates in writing on the application of any shipper, with a fine of $250 for misquoting.

He recommends the empowering of the interstate commerce commission to inquire into the reasonableness of rates

The message recommends definitely that shippers be given the right to select routes over which their shipments are to be handled.

It is propossed that after passage of the suggested bill no railroad shall be permitted to acquire any interest of any kind, directly or indirectly, in the capital stock, or purchase or lease any railroad, or any other corporation which competes with it, with the proviso that the law shall not operate to prevent any corporation which, at the date of the passage of the act, owns half the entire stock of a company from securing the rest of it, nor prohibiting any railroad company which is oprating railroads under lease at the time o the passage of the act from acquiring a reversionary ownership of such roads.

Would Prohibit Watered Stock

The message recommends the enactment of a law prohibiting the watering of stock by requiring all stocks to be sold at par, or at a value determined by the commission, for money, or if anything else is tendered, or if services are paid in return for stock, it must be valued by the commission.

In addition the commission is to supervise the issue of all stocks and bonds. The president also recommends the passage by the senate of the Esch bills passed a few weeks ago by the house, giving the interstate commerce commission power to standardize the safety appilances of all railroads The president says that Attorney General Wickerrsham has prepared a bill embodying all these ideas, which is now ready for congress.

In discussing the anti-trust law the president says that it needs no amendments.

"The object of the law is to suppress abuses of business and not to interfere with a great volume of capital which, concentrated under one organiaztion, has reduced costs of production and made its profits thereby, and took no advantage of its size to stifle competition. I conceive that nothing could happen more destructive to the prosperity of this country than the loss of that great economy in production which has been, and will be, effected in all manufacturing lines by the employment of large capital under one management."

After declaring that the decisions of the supreme court upheld the law, the president says:

"The value of the statute, which is rendered more and more certain by a long line of decisions by the supreme court of the United States, furnishes strong reasons for leaving the act as it is."

He declares that it is the duty of the department of justice, under the present law, to investigate all trusts, and says:

"But such an investigation and possible prosecution of corporations whose prosperity affects the comfort not only of the stockholders, but of millions of wage earners and employes and associared tradesmen, must necessarily tend to disturb confidence in the business community and dry up the new flowing sources of capital from its place of hoarding, and produce a halt in our prosperity that will cause suffering and strained circumstances among the innocent for the faults of the guilty few.

He says he desires to procure a means of bringing corporations into the pale of the law, and to prevent any business disasters. He offers the proposition of the federal charter as the means of gaining this purpose.

Therefore the president recommends the enactment of a law for the formation of corporations engaged in interstate trade under federal license, protecting them from undue interference by the state and providing for the issue of stock only for the paid in value in cash or property when they have been ascertained by the federal authorities.

In discussing the possible objections to his plans, the president says that recent decisions have been so sweeping that only three doors are open to corporations. They must resolve themselves into their component parts with loss to themselves "and to the country," they must run in defiance of the law, or, as a third possibility they can accept his charter plan.

CHINO-JAPANESE TREATY OPPOSED BY AMERICA

Washington, Jan. 8.—State department officials maintain close secrecy in regard to the diplomatic situation arising from the era of railroad construction in Manchuria. Developments have been followed with the keenest attention because of the determination to maintin the "open door" policy.

Secretary Knox has been considering carefully the treaty recently entered into by China and Japan relating to railroads in Manchuria. It was reported weeks ago that the United States would protest to China and Japan against this treaty on the ground that it interfered with the equal opportunities in Manchuria.

HAMILTON RECEIVES PRISON SENTENCE

Olympia, Jan. 5.—Ortis Hamilton former adjutant general of Washington, has been sentenced to from one to ten years at hard labor at the state penitentiary on his recent conviction after trial upon the charge of embezzlement of state moneys.

The new state bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices has completed a rough draft of its report upon the investigation of accounts, showing that Hamilton was short between $37,000 and $38,000.

CHIEF FORESTER DISMISSED

PRESIDENT NOTIFIES PINCHOT SERVICES NOT NEEDED

Executive Claims Dignity of Presidential Office Was Attacked. Insurgents Win First Victory in House Over Speaker Cannon. They Celebrate.

Washington, Jatn. 8.—Gifford Pinchot, chief forester, last night was dismissed from the esrvice of the United States by President Taft for insubordinaiton and conspiracy. Associate Forester Overton W. Price and Assistant Law Officer Alexander C. Shaw, Pinchot's immediate assistants in the foresrtzy bureau, followed their chief out of the government employ.

Thoroughly indignant over the action of Mr. Pinchot in inducing Senator Dolliver to read a letter from him in the senate Thursday, President Taft would listen to no advice that the forester's violation of executive orders be overlooked, pending the inquiry soon to be taken up by congress.

Presidential Dignity Attacked

He declaerd the dignity of the presidential office was attacked, and he would be unfaithful to his trust if he submitted longer.

Mr. Taft undoubtedly realizes fully what the dismissal of Forester Pinchot means in a political way. He has been convinced for some time that the so-called "insurgents" and other critics of his administration had enlisted the services of Mr. Pinnchot and practically were defying him to dismiss Pinchot from office. The latter's letter, few here doubt, was written with the direct purpose of "putting it square up to the president."

The president sought to avoid the threatened war as long as he could, but declared yesterday that patience had ceased to be a virtue.

All Ready for Fray

He picked up the gauge of battle thrown down by Mr. Pinnchot, through the hand of Senator Dolliver in the senate, and with the administration supporters is ready for the coming fray.

Political observers in Washingon declare that the situation cerated by these developments is the most tense in many years. What the outcme will be no one is willing to prophesy.

In the house yesterday Speaker Cannon lost his first fight to the insurgents, who, combining with the Democrats, caused to be adopted an amendment to the Ballinger-Pinchot inquiry so as to take from the speaker the power to appoint the house members of the joint special committee of investigation.

Insurgents Celebrate Victory

The margin of victory was narrow—three votes; but the insurgents and Democrats alike are jubilant. The dismissal of Pinchot has lent fuel to the flame of their celebration, and they are venturing all manner of predictions as to what will happen.

Three Republicans, not classed as "insurgents," but who profess their friendship for Pinchot, voted with the "insurgents" and Democrats for the adoption of the amendment, which calls for the selection of the house investigators from the floor.

The cabinet was in session practically all the afternoon, following the regular sesison of the morning. Secretary Ballinger, cognizant of the action that was to be taken, remained away from the afternoon session. It was at the end of this special sitting that the president gave out the letter he had written to Mr. Pinchot notifying him that his usefulness as a public servant under the present administration was at an end.

PINCHOT LETTER CAUSES SENSATION IN SENATE

The Ballinger-Pinchot controversy was made doubly intense by the reading on Thursday in the senate of a letter addressed by Mr. Pinchot to Senator Dolliver, in which the course adopted by L. R. Galvis, with the assistance of Messrs. Price and Shaw, of the bureau of forestry, was warmly approved.

In this communication the chief forrester not only upheld the criticism of Secretarry Ballinger, but suggested that the president himself had been mistaken in the facts when he remedv Mr. Glavis from the public service.

Mr. Pinchot's letter brought Senator Hale to his feet with a severe ebuke to the chief forester for having ignored a recent order by the president directing that no subordinate officer should give information concerning affairs of the government except to his superior officers. He also suggested that the adoption of this course tended to forestall and prejudice public opinion in relation to the Ballinger-Piuchot controversy.

Preceding the incident Senator Jones' joint resolution for an investigation of the interior department and the forestry bureau was referred to the committee on public lands The reference was not made until after much discussion of a resolution by Senator Newlands instructing the committee on public lands to report within two weeks bills putting into effect Secretarry Ballinger's recommendations in his annual report on the conservation of natural resources. The Newlands resolution was also referred to the committee on public lands

In the senate Mr. Pinchot's letter caused a genuine sensation. In addressing his ledtter to Senator Dolliver, Mr. Pinchot indicated that it had been written at the quest of the Iowa senator, but it was addressed to him as chairman of the committee on agriculture, thus making it an official document. He said that Mesrss. Price and Shaw had prepared an official report upon their actions which he was transmitting to the secretary of agriculture.

"This report shows that Messrs. Price and Shaw made public certain information regarding the so-called Cunningham claims for coal lands in Alaska," said Mr. Pinchot. "The effect of the publication was to direct critical public attention to the action of the interior department.

Glavis' Warning Sanctioned

"It shows that they countenanced the publication by L. R. Glavis of certain facts concerning these claims after he had been dismissed from office and that in other ways they endeavored to direct public attention to the imminent danger that the Alaska coal fields still in government ownership might pass forever into private hands with little or no compensation to the public."

This information, Mr. Pinchot adds, was of a nature proper to be made public, "unless there are secrets which the people of the United States are not entitled to know concerning the source, nature and progress of claims made for portions of the public lands."

METHOD PROPOSED TO SOLVE MANCHURIAN PROBLEMS

St. Petersburg, Jan 8—The Russian foreign office has received a memorandum from United States government, proposing as a solution of the Manchurian problem the neutralization of railroads in Manchuria by their sale to China, financed by an internationl syndicte. The United States invites Russian participation in such a scheme. A supervision of railroads would thus be placed in the hands of the powers responsible for the financial arrangement, who would see that the lines were conducted on a purely business basis and not used for political or strategic purposes.

Russia Offers to Sell

Last October, when a meeting was arranged at Harbin between M. Kobosoff, the Russian minister of finance, and the late Prince Ito, then president of the privy crouncil of Japan, the sale of the Russian railroad interests in Manchuria was connsidered seriously. The success of the present plan is dependent upon Japan's assent.

The advantages of such an agreement from the viewpoint of international relations are believed to be many. It would remove a constant source of friction between Russia and Japan, the doctrine of equal opportunity would be safeguarded by the powers, and by closing the line to transportation of troops and munitions, Russia's anxiety with reference to a Japanese attack upon Siberia would be relieved.

Experts Work on Suggestion

Russia, however, is not willing to accept the suggestion of the United States government without giving the subject careful study. An answer to the suggestion may be expected within a week, perhaps a month, for experts are engaged in an investigation of the whole matter, and the cabinet has taken cognizance of the memorandum

The American memorandum further announces that a syndicate composed of Americans and Englishmen has obtained the concession for the construction of a railroad from Aigun, in northern Manchuria, to Chin Chow Fu, and that the British and American governments intend to support it diplomatically.

Would Menace Frontier

This part of the memorandum has been received less favoratbly by Russia, for, while no statement has been made in regard to it, officials in discussing this feature have asserted that Russia would strenuously oppose the crossing of the Russian railroad at Taitsikhar and would be unwilling for a railroad to approach the weak Amur frontier. This would force a heavy concentration of troops at the boundary.

LABOR'S TRUST FIGHT CARRIED TO PRESIDENT

Washington, Jan. 10.—The American Federation of Labor, through a committee headed by Samuel Gompers, James O'Connell and other leaders has carried its fight against the United States Steel Corporation to President Taft.

The president promised to take the matter up with the secretary of commerce and labor and with Labor Commissioner Neill.

Alberta Oats for Philippines

Vancouver, B. C., Jan. 8.—Three tousand tons of Alberta oats have been contracted for shipment to the Philippine islands via Vancover and Seattle and the movement of this grain westward to this port has already commenced. The shortage of oats in the Philippines is said to have prompted the placing of a rush order for the Alberta product for the United States government.

State Banks in Good Condition

Wal a Walla, Jan. 10.—"Banks of the state of Washington are in in better conditinoo than they have ever been," said State Bank Examiner Mohundro, while in the city last week. "According to the recent reports of state and national banks, they are several hundred per cent better off than for several years."

FATHER TIME LOOKS BACKWARD IN HIS FLIGHT

RECORD OF MOST IMPORTANT EVENTS OF THE YEAR 1909

The year 1909 is destined to figure as an important one in history. What a twelvemonth it has been, and how great its manifold wonders of happening and accomplishment: Flying a certainty; the North Pole discovered; Turkey reformed; Persia reformed; England's ideas of the ethics of taxation upset; India restive; China subjected to a mass of new impressions; Belgium passing under a new and, it is to be hoped, more beneficent rule; events now in progress in Nicaragua that may lead to a further extension of civilization and peace; the distance across the Atlantic further shortened; the distance across our own country about to be decreased; wireless telegraphy entering into the realm of common utility; efforts now being made for the better protection of life in mines and on the great waters. If the cave man lived to-day he could hardly repeat his now famous declaration, "Romance is dead." By science, contrary to many fears, wonder and mystery have been increased.

Prize for Tuberculosis Cure.

Yale University has become the custodian of a prize of $100,000, the name of the donor remaining a secret, but known to be an alumnus of Yale, which is to be given to the person who first discovers a cure for tuberculosis. The trustees have invited many well-known physicians to become members of a board whose duty it will be to pass on the merits of cures submitted. The interest on the money will be used in investigating such cures and to pay the expenses of quarterly meetings of the Advisory Board. To prevent the consideration of bogus remedies, one condition is that any remedy to be considered must have been in use five years and backed up by testimonials that it has resulted in cures. The object of the prize is to encourage the seeking of a cure.

Charles P. Taft, brother of the President, has purchased a rare portrait, probably the finest of its kind in the world, in Limoges enamel, for which it is understood me paid $100,000. It is a portrait of the Duke of Nevers, by Limousin, a sixteenth century artist.

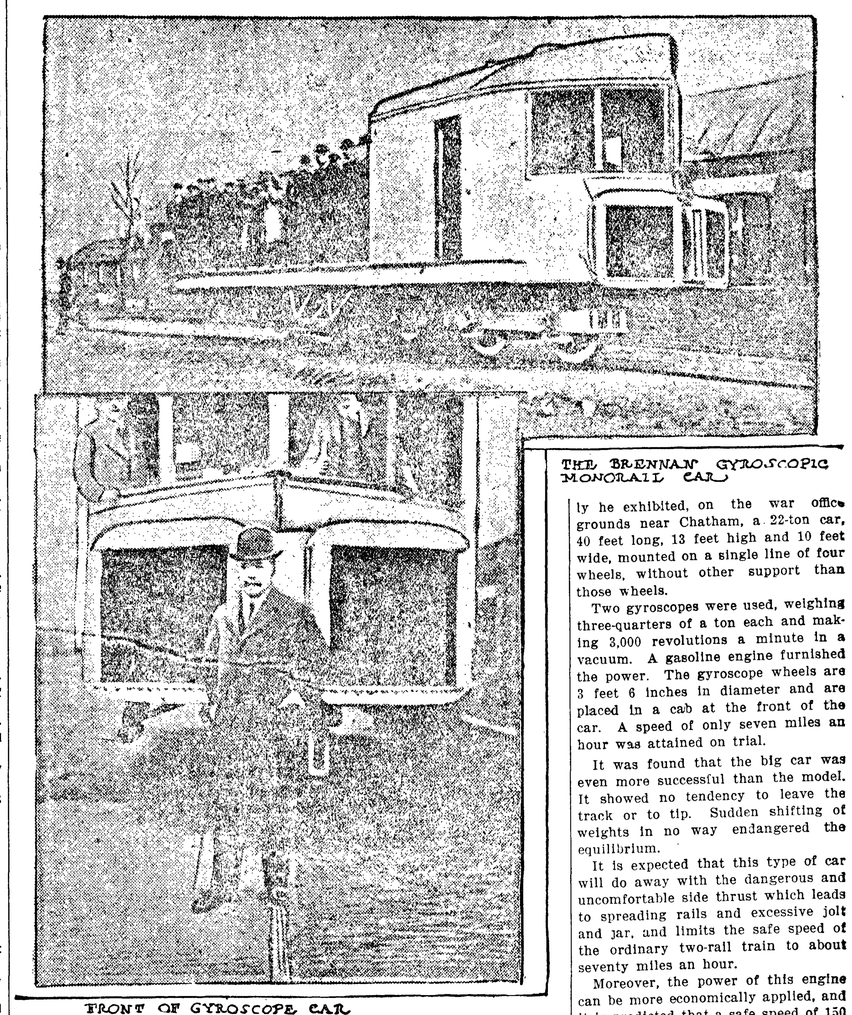
MONORAIL GYROSCOPE CAR STIRS U. S. RAIL MEN

Test in England Proves It a Success—Speed of 150 Miles an Hour Predicted for Trains Using This Principle—Spinning Wheels Keep Equilibrium.



THE BRENNAN GYROSCOPIC MONORAIL CAR

FRONT OF GYROSCOPE CAR

Great interest has been manifested among American railroad men lately in the monorail car tried out by Louis Brennan, C. B., before the Royal Society of England. Many believe that the principle of the gyroscope thus adapted to a full-sized car for the first time is about to revolutionize railroad construction.

Mr. Brennan first demonstrated the idea with a small model before the society in the spring of 1907. Recently he exhibited, on the war office grounds near Chatham, a 22-ton car, 40 feet long, 13 feet high and 10 feet wide, mounted on a single line of four wheels, without other support than those wheels.

Two gyroscopes were used, weighing three-quarters of a ton each and making 3,000 revolutions a minute in a vacuum. A gasoline engine furnished the power. The gyroscope wheels are 3 feet 6 inches in diameter and are placed in a cab at the front of the car. A speed of only seven miles an hour was attained on trial.

It was found that the big car was even more successful than the model. It showed no tendency to leave the track or to tip. Sudden shifting of weights in no way endangered the equilibrium.

It is expected that this type of car will do away with the dangerous and uncomfortable side thrust which leads to spreading rails and excessive jolt and jar, and limits the safe speed of the ordinary two-rail train to about seventy miles an hour.

Moreover, the power of this engine can be more economically applied, and it is predicted that a safe speed of 150 miles an hour can be attained.

The gyroscope employed is on the same principle as the toy of that name and of the ordinary spinning top. It lends stability to the supporting car through the fact that a revolving wheel tends to remain in one place.

SPORT THAT SAVED A NATION.

Skeeing Freed Norway from Foes Ready to Overwhelm Her.

Surely Norwegians should know what's what in skeeing. Have they not made history with their skee? Would they be the united, free and independent little country they are today had it not been for the skee and their army's ability to use them? Would they not be merely a succession of ice-free ports maintained for the convenience of England, Germany, and, most of all, Russia? They had a pretty hot little war all their own in 1807-08, and if it was short they have only their commander, Prince Christian Augustus and their infantry on skee to thank, says Charles F. Peters in Outing.

All Europe was busy trying to keep Napoleon from smudging out the lines of the map, and nobody would help Norway, except the already besieged Denmark. She, although willing, was prevented from sending food and ammunition by the English war vessels that blockaded the Norse coast, and with Sweden battering them by land and England by sea, poor little Norway could only sit tight and wait for the approach of the season when Thor should throw the hammer and the frost giants of Jotunheim would fight her battles for her.

And lo! the Swedes allowed themselves to be outwitted. Just as their army of the west, which outnumbered the Norsemen ten to one, arrived at the frontier and brought up their heavy field artillery, the White Bear from the land east of the sun and west of the moon sent his feathery flakes and brought confusion and defeat to the invading forces.

Their fieldpieces were buried, their men could only flounder about in the deepening drifts, and, to add to their discomfiture, little flocks of green dots began to appear upon the surrounding mountain crests, to skim down within range, fire carefully aimed rifles, and glide away again before resistance could be attempted by the demoralized Swedish hosts. Thus the entire war consisted of much starvation, but only three battles, in all of which Norway was completely victorious, and peace was made before the year ended.

RAGS, THE NAVY YARD DOG.

Able Seaman Jones Tells Some Large Stories of the Canine.

The battleship Massachusetts was floated out of dry dock at the New York navy yard in Brooklyn yesterday. Shortly afterward there came out of the pumped-out dock a little, lanky dog. A little fish dangled in his teeth. The dog was Rags, the canine Izaak Walton of the marine guard.

"Where away, sir? Didn't hear 'bout Rags, our dog that fishes?" said "Toddy" Jones, able sailorman, to the inquisitive visitor. "Wallop me, yer pilot-house ain't got all the charts this cruise. Why, there are more real live fish in a dry dock when it is pumped out than there are in them there harbor craft that go out with a cargo of landlubbers and come back with all the ballast in their foretops. Them fish get shanghaied in the undertow when the dry dock is opened, and when she is pumped out and all closed they are left marooned on the bottom. This dog, he just goes down and gets 'em.

"Rags is all right. He's low in the freeboard, 'bout a foot of draught, and three feet in length, and his armor plate he must have swiped by jumping in a glue pot and then rolling in a rag yard. But he's cute. He got a job here on his face two years ago from the marine guard. And that dog can laugh, mister—leastwise he never stopped since he run afoul of government rations. He goes around the yard every time a picket is posted and sees them marines do their duty.

"When he was piped off that the Massy was being floated that dog full steams down to the dock. He shinnies down the steps leading to the bottom and takes an observation between the keel blocks. Then he tooted his siren.

"Quick as falling off a yard Rags dove his bow in 'tween the keel blocks. Up he comes with a four-inch feller in his teeth. He flung it contemptuous-like on the dry floor. Then he dove again and flung a six-inch feller. Mister, he puts six of them in a row, and then he just turns around, and whacks them dead with his tail. Sure, he's a great dog. All the seacops will have fish for supper. Want an affidavy?"—New York Times.

Generous at Wife's Expense.

"Yes," said the tired-looking woman, "I have a very generous husband, and this is the way he gets that reputation. The other day I worked and slaved in the kitchen for about ten hours making jelly. It was my first attempt, so I had considerable trouble and burned my fingers about seventeen times. It turned out pretty good, however, and of course I was proud and delighted. That night I put some on the table for dinner, and husband got enthusiastic.

"Next day he was visiting a sick friend of his, a man, by the way, quite able to buy anything he might want and whose wife never lifts her finger. On leaving, Mr. Generous Husband says: 'Wife made some pretty good jelly the other day. You might like some. I'll send you up half a dozen jars.'

"Now, wouldn't that frost you, or rasp you, or whatever they say? Half a dozen jars! After all my work, to hand that jelly over to a man whose wife is too lazy to breathe! I made exactly eight jars, so we will have one more, unless he has already promised it to somebody else."

FAITH CURIST TESTS CREED.

J. C. Wilson declared that his faith in Christian Science had been strengthened by a test he made in stepping in front of a speeding New Orleans trolley car. Surgeons at the hospital, where the man was removed, say he has concussion of the brain, gashes and cuts about the head and face and that the left leg may have to be amputated if he recovers from the injury to his skull. Wilson affirms that he does not feel any pain. "I left my lodgings in the morning with the lines of true thought running through my brain," he said. "I saw the car coming and instantly resolved to put my belief to a test. As it drew within a few feet of me I stepped onto the tracks. I heard the clanging of gongs, the shouts of the motorman and the screaming of women as I sprang head first at the car. Then I woke up here."

The Usefulness of "Central."

The telephone subscriber has come to regard "Central" as an ever available bureau of information. The score of the ball game, the latest election returns, the location of the big fire the light from which can be seen on the horizon, and even the exact time, are all points on which the long-suffering operator must be posted.

The other day, according to the Operating Bulletin of the Chicago Telephone Company, a man called up a suburban exchange, and said, despair in his voice:

"My wife has gone out, leaving word for me to cook the spinach for dinner, but I do not know how long to boil it."

The operator switched the subscriber to the supervisor, who had been to cooking school, and she promptly told the man all he needed to know about the treatment of spinach.

His Role.

"That man made an immense fortune out of a simple little invention."

"Indeed! What did he invent?"

"Invent? Nothing, you dub! He was the promoter."—Cleveland Leader.

A SIMILAR CASE.

Publication of Mayor Lewis' statement that the electric light plant is producing more current than is accounted for by the receipts, and the Clerk's annual report showing there are over ten thousand dollars worth of warrants outstanding, has caused no end of comment the past week. The effort which has been made, by fulsome flattery of those responsible for the deplorable condition of the light funds, to cover up the true state of affairs, is being condemned on all sides.

There probably never existed a similar case of such complete disregard of the interests of the citizens and property owners of the town as a whole as this was shown to be. For purposes of comparison one can only imagine the existance of a like condition.

Suppose the county commissioners should appoint a so-called committee of one to take charge of some one department of the county's business. Perhaps the building of roads in different parts of the county under an assessment district plan, the people interested paying in to the county treasurer some five thousand dollars each year.

This member of the board of commissioners goes down to the treasurer's or auditor's office where the books are required by law to be kept, and where the officer required to keep the books is under bonds to secure the people of the county against loss by theft, and, himself being placed under no bonds whatever, gathers up all the books pertaining to that department and packs them off home.

Suppose the treasurer or auditor, being under bonds, and not caring to take chances on this commissioner's juggling with his records of receipts since the first of the year, demanded of the board of commissioners that they first audit his books, and they refused, or failed to do so. (That's rather a hard assumption for the average citizen to swallow, but it is exactly what occurred in the case of the city.)

Suppose this commissioner proceeded to collect some five thousand dollars a year from the people of the county, and occasionally, once in two or three months, turning in to the county treasurer the money collected, or what he purports to have been collected. The treasurer, elected by the people of the county to collect and take charge of the county's funds and being under bonds, has no means of knowing whether the money turned in is all that has been collected or not; he can only record the amount he received.

The commissioner buys materials and employs labor amounting to thousands of dollars. He is not under bonds. If he is honest — and in the absence of any proof to the contrary it is assumed that he is — he buys materials at the very lowest price possible and employs the most efficient and economical labor. If he is not honest and buys at high prices under rake-off agreements and demands a rake-off from his employees, and there have been such men in public employ in the past, then God pity the tax-payer! (There are times and conditions under which profanity is justifiable.)

Meanwhile there arises a great murmur of discontent. People paying for road work are unable to derive any benefit from the roads. They are told they can't have the use of them. Thereafter, they find that other people, at later dates, have been connected with the roads. They hear that this man, who is using the roads, pays a top notch price, while another man who receives twice the benefit, pays half as much. They go to the county treasurer — he knows nothing about it. They go to the county auditor — he hasn't the books; they were packed out of his office. They ask if the board of commissioners knows anything about the matter— the auditor can't tell them; he has no record of the county commissioners' having audited the books since they were packed out of the court house.

The citizen hears that the commissioner is charging the county for the keeping of the books and collecting of the money. And the citizen knows he and the other tax-payers are already paying an auditor and treasurer to keep the books.

Then he learns that, whereas, three years ago there was outstanding $574 in warrants against this road fund with $279 on hand leaving a net indebtedness of $295, to day there is outstanding on warrants $10,225 with $780 on hand. He looks over the estimate of expenses for the ensuing year and finds no provision made for the payment of these ten thousand dollars worth of warrants. He finds no provision made for the payment of the accumulating interest on these warrants. He finds no provision made for the payment of the three thousand dollars that will be added to this warrant indebtedness this coming year. He finds no provision made for the loss the county will sustain when succeeding warrants will not be accepted at par.

He goes to one of the commissioners to find out why, after taking an oath to properly guard the people's interests, he allows this condition of affairs to exist. The commissioner tells him he knows nothing about it, but he presumes the big debt is caused by building more road than the receipts pay for. Then the citizen wants to know why if more roads have been built and more people are using them the receipts are diminishing. (The electric light receipts as shown by the city treasurer's report, were nearly a thousand dollars less in 1909 than in 1908!) The commissioner knows nothing about it; nor does he apparently care.

Then the citizen goes to the other commissioner and says to him: "You're a business man; you have a $3000 stock of goods; you're turning your stock over every year at an annual loss; you are continually buying new fixtures; you have run behind $10,000 in three years, and are running behind every month; you keep adding other lines to your stock so you can sell more goods yet you sold $1,000 worth less last year than the year before; your bookkeeper keeps your accounts at home and you don't know——" And as the citizen picks himself up out of the hog wallow known as Front street he hears the commissioner say, "Why, the man takes me for a blankety blanked fool!" And it was even so, for the commissioner had divined the truth.

Mayor Lewis again submitted to the council Tuesday night the nomination of Wm. Fowler as street superintendent; Councilmen Myers and Elliott voted for confirmation and the other members against. The Mayor then nominated J. D. McQueen and the council laid the matter over another week.

Should a business man, selling gasoline, and also lighting his store therewith, add the cost of his own light to his invoices in determining the price per gallon to his customers? If so, and the sale of gasoline was not sufficient to pay his invoices from the Union Oil Co., should he raise the price of gasoline to his patrons or quit selling and burning the stuff and close shop at sundown? If he raised the price would he hold his customers; if he locked the doors at dusk and went home what would become of his trade in other lines of merchandise? Fool questions? On a par with asking why a black hen lays a white egg? Perhaps, but will you tell us why the city council does not charge the current expense fund with the cost of lighting the city? Or if not with the entire cost, which would be something better than three thousand a year, at least with the amount the city would have to pay a private company? In other words, what's the object in not conducting the affairs of the city on a business basis?

Walla Walla, which city recently went "wet," will also endeavor to reduce the number of grog shops, to the end that the authorities may better govern and control those in existence. A petition from the business men's committee, filed with the city council asks that the licenses be raised until the income of the saloons will be wiped out or reduced to such an extent that but few can afford to pay the license. The petition also has a number of provisions which look to the better regulation of the liquor traffic in Walla Walla.

CITY CLERK'S SALARY UNKNOWN QUANTITY

In this issue of the Olympic-Leader will be found the official publication of the "salary ordinance for 1910," as termed in its title, which further records that it was introduced by Councilman C. S. Stakemiller, had its first reading and was referred to the ordinance committee on October 5, 1909, was approved by ordinance committee—Jno. Hallahan and G.M. Rouse — and passed December 14, 1909. It was neither approved nor vetoed by Mayor Seevers, and became valid at the expiration of ten days after passage.

It was not drawn up by, submitted to or approved by the city attorney, tho the law expressly provides that "No ordinance shall be passed without first being submitted to the city attorney."

The law provides that "No ordinance shall be revised or amended unless the . . ordinance so amended shall be repealed." It will be noted that the former salary ordinance is repealed.

The salary of the city clerk was raised from $480 to $780. The other officers' salaries were not changed.

The law says the salaries of city officers "shall not be increased or diminished after their election."

The law further says "All ordinances shall be published. . No ordinance shall take effect until after five days from and after the date of its last publication." As this ordinance was originally written, it specified that it should take effect five days after publication. This, however, was cancelled, and the date, January 1, 1910, was inserted before action was taken by the council. The ordinance will take effect, not when it says it will, but on the 20th inst.

These things being true — and they are—these three questions arise:

1. Is this Salary Ordinance for 1910 legal; is it the law of the city, of full force and effect?

2. This ordinance No. 370 being legal, all former salary ordinances are repealed; the specified salary of $780 for the clerk being illegal, and there being no ordinance under which he can draw any less sum, can he legally make himself out a warrant for any sum, and if he does can the mayor legally sign it?

3. The present city clerk says he cannot draw the $780 salary, and will not. The time — the number of hours that the office must be kept open, without regard to the amount of work done or the degree of ability required — being admittedly worth more than $40 a month, and some one or more members of the council having, presumably, in furtherance of a political deal agreed to see that the salary was raised, what does the council propose to do about it? Will it repeal the ordinance, thus acknowledging that it is hopelessly inadequate to transact even a simple little matter of business like this? Will it repudiate the political agreement one or more of its members is presumed to have made? Or will it leave the city clerk to take his own chances and run his own risk between a salary ordinance which he believes to be illegal and one which has been repealed?

After which, Mrs. Minnie Smith was called to the platform, expecting to make a presentation to Mrs. Burdick, Mrs. Burdick expecting to make a presentation to Mrs. Smith, neither one knowing of the intention of the other. Mrs. Smith being just a little the best talker, managed to get ahead, and in a few well chosen words presented to Mrs. Burdick, in behalf of the Corps, a beautiful china berry set, leaving Mrs. Burdick so surprized she hardly knew where she was "at," but someone kindly assured her it was all right, and so with a few kind words she presented Mrs. Smith with a gift of the same in behalf of the Corps, after which a sumptious repast was served to over a hundred members of the Post and Corps and their friends. MT. PLEASANT HALL BURNED

The citizens of the Mount Pleasant district and of this city were much distressed to find by dawn Sunday morning that some miscreant had set fire to the social hall at Mount Pleasant, completely destroying that edifice, together with a piano and some $100 of other personal property. A dance took place at the hall Saturday night, the last of the dancers leaving between 3:00 and 3:30. Shortly after 4:00 the country was lit up by the blaze, which seemed to envelop the whole building at once. No effort was made to save anything as the fire had gotten beyond control.

For some weeks conditions of animosity have been bringing on the result of Sunday morning: no one, however, believed that it would go to the extent which it did. An election of officers recently took place an it is alleged that the old officers ignored the new in the calling of a dance. Some resented this action on the part of the old officers and the night before quantities of water were spread upon the dance floor and ice formed. This was discovered in time and the floor cleared for dancing. Later another dance was announced and the city billed for same. This time it was sought to prevent the dance by the smearing of pitch on the floor. This, too, was discovered and the floor cleared for the dance. The fact that the program was carried out despite the efforts of some one or more who opposed it seems to have rankled in the hearts of the conspirators with the result that they planned to put the hall out of business entirely.

GRUBB-MALONE SUIT

The case of Jewel Maylone against F. L. Grubb for breach of promise was decided against the plaintiff by the Superior Court Wednesday. In giving judgment against the plaintiff the Court stated that he regretted that he could not give judgment for the plaintiff as under the law he believed he was prohibited from doing so. There is no doubt, he said, that the promise to marry was repeatedly made and that they lived together under this agreement, and that the defendant lived with plaintiff at the expense of the plaintiff, but the promise and agreement of marriage was made while plaintiff was under the disability of law to make such an agreement, at first being married and later being prohibited by law for six months, after divorce. Judgment was given for defendant on both causes of action, the latter being for return of money advanced.

ANGELES SCHOOL NOTES

The High School debating team will meet LaConner Friday evening, January 21st. The debate will be held in the opera house and an admission of 25 cents charged to pay the expenses of visiting team and judges. The question is the same as for all the state debates this year: "Resolved, that cities of the Northwest containing fifty thousand inhabitants or over should institute a commission form of city government modeled after the plan of DesMoines: Provided, that the negative shall propose no other form of commission government." The team chosen at the preliminary try-out to represent Port Angeles High School consists of Lorena Fulmer, Jennie McLeod and Grace Babcock. As we have already won one debate by default and since the rules of the debate are that in all subsequent debates there are to be only two speakers only two of the local team will participate. This is the first time in many years that Port Angeles H. S. has met an outside institution in debate and we hope that they may make a good showing and the attendance be sufficient to give our team the support that is necessary financially and morally.

Ask Mr. McLaughlin where he got the new Masonic badge which he is wearing and he will tell you it was a present from the teachers of Central school. Mr. McLaughlin says this was the best Christmas he has spent for a long time and it is evident the children who partook of his Christmas treats think so to.

At a recent meeting of the Board of Athletic Control for the High School the following were elected as being entitled to wear the Monogram of the High School for successful and honorable conduct in High School athletics: James Lotzgesell, Duane Allen, Ben Wilcox, Paul Farmer, Clyde Sewell, Ross McKechnie, Floyd Hayne, Howard Farmer, Walter Tuttle, Robert Gould. The badge will be presented to the boys officially by the President of the Board at a meeting of the Philomathea Society.

They will leave early in February.

At the regular annual meeting of the First Congregational Church held at the church parlors Thursday night the following officers were elected: Clerk, Miss Cora Tillman; Treasurer, D. W. Morse; Trustee, term 3 years, A. J. Cosser; Deacon, 3 years, D. W. Morse; Deaconess, 3 years, Mrs. Elizabeth Fowler; Church Chorister, N. H. Bonnett. In the case of H. L. Mitchell et al vs. The Board of County Commissioners for a review of the Board's action in the establishment of the new Lake Crescent-Port Crescent road, the Court held that as the action of the Board was purely ministerial the Court could not review its action; adding that a writ of injunction or restraining order might lie, but not a writ of review. Relators will appeal, they say.

In the Matter of the Estate of Manassee Swank deceased.

Upon reading and filing the petition of Lincoln W. Swank, the duly appointed administrator of the estate of Manassee Swank, deceased, praying for an Order to sell certain real estate to pay the debts of the deceased and the costs of administration; and it appearing from said Petition that there is not any personal estate in the hands of the administrator to pay the debts outstanding against the deceased and the expenses of administration, and that it is necessary to sell the whole of the real estate of the deceased to provide funds for the payment of such debts, It is therefore ordered that all persons interested in said real estate be and appear at the Superior Court of King County, Probate Department, in the Court House, at the City of Seattle, on the 17th day of January, 1910, at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M. and show cause, if any there be, why an Order should not be granted to the Administrator to sell the real estate of the deceased, or so much thereof as shall be necessary to pay the charges and debts. Said Order shall be published for four successive weeks in the "Olympic-Leader," a newspaper published and printed in City of Port Angeles, Clallam County, Washington, where said real estate is situated.

ROBERT H. LINDSAY,
Court Commissioner.

Down to Sleep.

November woods are bare and still;
November days are clear and bright;
Each noon burns up the morning chill;
The morning's snow is gone by night;
Each day my steps grow slow, grow light,
As through the woods I reverent creep,
Watching all things lie down to sleep.

I never knew before what beds,
Fragrant to swell, and soft to touch,
The forest sifts and shapes and spreads;
I never knew before how much
Of human sound there is in such
Low tones as through the forest sweep
When all wild things lie down to sleep.

Each day I find new coverlids
Tucked in, and more sweet eyes shut tight;
Sometimes the viewless mother bids
Her ferns kneel down, full in my sight;
I hear their chorus of "good-night;"
And half I smile, and half I weep,
Listening while they lie down to sleep.

November woods are mare and still;
November days are bright and good;
Life's noon burns up life's morning chill;
Life's night rests feet which long have stood;
Some warm soft bed, in field or wood,
The mother will not fail to keep,
Where we can lay us down to sleep.

Fame.

(From Lycidas.)

Alas! what boots it with incessant care
To tend the homely slighted shepherd's trade,
And strictly meditate the thankless Muse?
Were it not better done, as others use,
To sport with Amaryllis in the shade,
Or with the tangles of Neaera's hair?
Fame is the spur that the clear spirit doth raise—
That last infirmity of noble mind—
To scorn delights and live laborious days;
But the fair guerdon when we hope to find,
And think to burst out into sudden blaze,
Comes the blind Fury with the abhorred shears,
And slits the thin-spun life. "But not the praise,"
Phoebus replied, and touch'd my trembling ears;
"Fame is no plant that grows on mortal soil,
Nor in the glistening foil
Set off to the world, nor in broad rumor lies,
But lives and spreads aloft by those pure eyes
And perfect witness of all-judging Jove;
As he pronounces lastly on each deed,
Of so much fame in heaven expect thy meed."

—John Milton.

MEMORIAL FOR JOHN FITCH.

Thinks Honors in Steam Navigation Should Go to Philadelphia.

The case of John Fitch is a sad one. He was the pioneer and was successful. He ran his boat on the Delaware river for months, but he was received with derision. There was then no man in this city—probably not in the whole country—with the prophetic vision of Chancellor Livingston at a later day who possessed the wealth and influence to impress the fact of Fitch's success on the public, the Philadelphia Inquirer says. It argues ill for the state of enlightenment at that time that there was no one who could foresee the possibilities of steam navigation. If some Philadelphian had arisen at that moment to do what Livingston did subsequently in New York, much of our history might have been changed. We should have had steamboats on the western waters nearly twenty years earlier than we did, the events of the War of 1812 might have been more decided, and Napoleon might have had his steamers to cross the channel from Boulogne.

It is idle to speculate on what might have been, but it is certain that this city owes something to the memory of Fitch, the prophet whom it rejected. The least that can be done is to rear a monument to his memory and to place a headstone over his grave. In the library of the Historical Society to-day reposes the combined diary and autobiography of this man. It is one of the most pathetic of human documents. It shows the mighty soul of a man struggling against the stupidity and conservatism of his age. We think the Historical Society should take the initiative in the matter, and we believe that a reasonable sum can be secured for a suitable memorial to a man who was born out of due season, who deserved so much and got the worst.

Colonel Mosby, rough-rider of the Confederacy, might be expected to enjoy the strategy of football, its hurtling onsets, swift deceptions, fierce encounters. But the old master of the foray and captain of guerrillas says football is murder. Also he sneers at athletes as "invincible in peace and invisible in war." There is something in what Mosby says. Men of inordinate muscle are of less use in this age than ever before. Yet we are near a worship of muscle, and there is a cult of brute strength. An instance of the same law of paradox, no doubt, that made the muscle-governed Middle Ages worshipful of mind and learning, of the priest and scribe. Bulging muscles do not connote health. Indeed, the muscle of a Jeffries or a Johnson is developed at the expense of vitality. As for endurance, the soldier who is not exceptionally muscular will outmarch, outlast and outfight the Samson. Strength is less and less the requirement of modern civilization. Skill and knowledge are more and more. The craftsman with the delicate, trained hands, the marksman with the discerning eye, they beat the mere strong man in peace pursuits and in war's game. Nevertheless, we come nigh reverencing strength for strength's sake, as they did in the days of decadent Rome. Perhaps the reason is to be found in the psychological fact that in proportion as a thing becomes useless, it grows ornamental. The orchid is rare and absolutely of no account, and hence it is valued. Much muscle contributes little to effectiveness in modern life, and hence it is highly esteemed.

WOMEN IN FAR ARCTIC REGIONS.

Early Boats Crowded with Northland Housekeepers Hurrying Home.

It is strange the fascination that the Northland exerts on men and women.

The early boats are crowded with those who have been out for the winter and are hurrying back, called by that imperative voice of the Arctic. A smartly dressed woman, whose eyes held a new light every time Dawson was mentioned, was the wife of a man who had made his hundreds of thousands in the Klondike. They had spent the winter at the Waldorf-Astoria, and yet she was glad to get home.

And what was home? Only a cabin again, a one-room cabin on the side of the mountain, a dozen miles from Dawson. Why did she want to get back, away from friends, theaters, music, lectures, when they had ample money to live luxuriously outside? She only smiled at the question and shook her head as though she could not explain to one who did not know:

"I've got to get back, that's all!" she said, simply.

"I've given up a house with four bathrooms to come to a country that hasn't a house with a tub in it," laughed another Arctic housekeeper. "If you want to take a proper bath in even Nome or Dawson you will have to go to the bathhouse to do it. Winters are too long and too cold to bother with plumbing in the cabins."

The towns are all camps, the houses all cabins in the North, but in these days of telephones and electric lights there are few hardships, even on the creeks. Dawson is a Canadian camp, with its cheery afternoon tea, its tennis and cricket, while Nome is distinctively American, with a woman's club, the Kogoayah Kozga, which has its own clubhouse. As for dinners and luncheons, you would never believe what elaborate meals the women can serve in their small kitchens, and all from cans.

The cabins are tiny affairs, one, two, seldom more than three rooms, but from these bandboxes the women appear in smart afternoon gowns or filmy evening frocks. A fur parki drawn over the white satin and the felt shoes give a strangely incongruous touch, but one quite in keeping with the dog sled waiting to convey my lady to her party.—Housekeeper.

Making the Connection.

An enterprising Scotch liquor dealer offered a prize for the best answer to a conundrum: "Why is my whisky like the bridge of Ayr?" A boy sent in, "Because it leads to the poorhouse;" and the unprejudiced umpires gave him the prize. With even readier wit a Yankee saw the connection in a kindred case.

At a certain railway station an anxious man came to the door of the baggage car, and said, "Is there anything for me?"

After some search among boxes and trunks, the baggage master dragged out a demijohn of whisky.

"Anything more?" asked the man.

"Yes," said the baggage man, "here's a grave stone. There's no name on it, but it ought to go with that liquor."

But Seldom.

Prof. Brander Matthews, the brilliant essayist and scholar of Columbia, said at a dinner party, apropos of changes in the meaning of words:

"At the height of our mayoralty campaign a little boy, looking up from his adventure book, said to his father:

"'Father, what's a cormorant?'

"'A cormorant,' the father answered, as he turned the huge pages of his newspapers, 'is a corrupt and hoggish politician.'

"'But,' the lad objected. 'I thought it was a bird.'

"'Oh, yes, to be sure,' the other agreed. 'The word is used in that sense now and then.'"

Happy is the man who is too deaf to hear what others say about him.

NEW POINT RAISED ON LIGHT QUESTION

Editor Olympic-Leader.

Dear Sir:—If you will kindly allow me space in your paper there are one or two things I would like to speak of which I believe the people of this town should pay more attention to. When I came here a few months ago and bought a home I wanted electric light. I have always had electric light wherever I have lived. Electric light is not a convenience. It is like pure water, free from clay and mud. Both are necessities of our modern civilization

The electric light wires run within a block of my house, and there are several families living in that block who could be served with light from the same line. When I applied for light I was told there was none to be had. The machinery was already overloaded.

Some weeks ago I read an article in one of the papers here praising the manager of the electric light plant for having put the plant on its feet and making it, I was led to believe, a paying business. Your paper said the plant was being rottenly managed, but I thought surely if all the light it could produce was being sold it must be paying its way and this talk in your paper and on the street was for election purposes. Then I read the council's estimate of expenses on which taxes were to be based and there was no mention of expense for street lamps or for keeping up the electric light plant and I was sure it was all political talk.

So I was much interested in the Mayor's address in your paper last week and in what you said about it. The Mayor wouldn't go on record saying the plant was producing more light than was sold if it was not so. The City Clerk's report shows the light plant is piling up an enormous debt.

I have to pay my share of this debt, some day. It is like buying a can of oil for myself and paying for half my neighbor's can. Electric light is a necessity. Oil lamps can't take its place. I'm willing to pay my share for street lamps. I'd be more willing to pay my share for twice as many street lamps, for then they would be some good. I don't like to have to pay my share for twice as many street lamps as there are and not have them. My neighbor a block away should pay all his light costs and not make me pay half of it. If he won't pay his light bills at what the light costs, let him get off the line and someone take his place who will pay.

Another thing, they told me there was no light to be had and then in about a month a moving picture show started up and they used and I am told are still using over $30 of light a month. It looks as if I didn't know how to get the light. It looks as if some rotten political ring was running the light plant.

I came here because I liked the location of the town and the climate. I had no friends here, I just came and saw the place and liked it. If I had found I couldn't get light myself but would have to pay half the light bills of my neighbor a block away, I would have bought a home in some other town. I hear people say on the street, and business men say in the stores, there's no use inducing people to come here. It is a good little town but there is only work for just so many and they have to go away again. Let me tell you there are more retired farmers coming to this country than young men who have to work to make a living. They turn the farm over to their boys and go to Washington, or Oregon, or California, where the winter is not so bad. Pneumonia takes off more old people in the country I came from than all other diseases put together. People dont live their life out and die of old age there. So many of them are coming west.

There are more retired business men coming west than laboring men. They have money to buy a home, and money invested back home to live on, and some besides to invest here. They expect to have to pay more here for the necessities of life but they don't want to go back to the days of the tallow candle and have to carry a lantern evenings. They may come here and look around, then they will buy their home somewhere else. One town is as good as another to them if it can provide them with the conveniences they want. Every satisfied man that settles here helps to bring others, his old neighbors. They help to build up the town, the money they have to invest helps to build up the town. They are builders, not laborers. Their days of labor are past. Port Angeles ought to have a thousand such families. A thousand families means better streets, better walks, better waterworks, better light, better schools and churches, better stores, better steamers, better everything. A thousand retired farmers and business men from that country, yes, a quarter that number, would mean no saloons.

If this town is being run by an accursed political ring of grafters, it will do no good to lie about it and cover it up; get the electric light plant on a business basis, then use your hot irons on a few other cancers and burn them out, till conditions are made so the town will attract and not repel.

Yours truly,
CITIZEN AND TAXPAYER.
