POWER PROMOTERS MAKE BETTER OFFER

Improvement of Front Street by Raising to Grade Declared to Be an Impossibility.

Councilman Stakemiller introduced a revised draft of the power ordinance, which was, by his motion, read for the first time, and then referred to a secret session of the council, to be held during the week. It will probably be finally acted upon, without discussion, next Tuesday night. The revised proposition increases the amount of current the city is to receive for $500 per month from fifty kilowatts to seventy-five kilowatts, and reduces the cost per kilowatt hour, for the extra twenty-five kilowatts the city must buy when it wants more current, from three cents to two and three-fourths cents. There was more than a suspicion that, at $500 for seventy-five horse power or its equivalent of fifty kilowatts, the city would be paying more than the present cost for a less amount of light than is now being used, hence the revised proposition.

Upon motion, the City Attorney was instructed to prepare papers necessary for creation of an assessment district to raise Front street to grade. Discussion of the matter was precipitated by mention of White creek bridge, the expense of replacing which, it was at first thought, could be included with expense of regrading the street. Councilman Grubb stated that it would be impossible to raise the street at present and that meanwhile the bridge was dangerous and must be fixed at once. Being pressed for reason for his apparent change of front on the street grade question, Mr. Grubb said he had started out with a petition and had been unable to find a single property owner in favor of the improvement. They were in favor of putting the street in decent shape but not of raising street and buildings; they had even started a remonstrance and it had been signed by practically every property owner on the street; he was just as much in favor of the improvement as when he introduced the matter in council at first, but he should consider the wishes of the property owners and vote against the creation of an assessment district; it would require six votes to create such a district and while there were six without his vote, still the measure couldn't be passed. Councilmen Myers, Elliott, Rouse and Harding were in favor of the improvement, Mr. Elliott saying that Front street was today in the same condition it was in eighteen years ago; the residence portions of the town had undergone great improvement, and it was time to do something with the business section; Front street was a disgrace and a detriment to the town, an obstacle to its advancement and growth. Mr. Myers thought the council ought not to quit and lie down simply because some of the property holders were against the improvement; he would go ahead and determine what measure of improvement would be possible. Mr. Harding said the people of Lincoln Heights weren't asking for electric lights or other improvements, but they did think it was about time the property owners on Front street were required to put the street in a permanently good condition; the home owners were tired of paying taxes for annual repairs that were of no permanent benefit. Mr Rouse believed a number of the property owners were in favor of raising the street, and that new buildings would follow the improvement. Stakemiller and Grubb voted against the motion to have the papers prepared; Fitzgerald declined to vote until he knew the cost.

It was ordered that bids be asked for upon the construction of a pile driven bridge across White creek to replace the present dangerous structure. Committee reported that county commissioners had agreed county would pay half the cost.

Another resolution defining the duties of the city electrician, was submitted and passed, it being stated that the resolution adopted last week was not sufficiently clear. The new resolution provides for a five dollar increase in salary, and for payment for all new work at the rate of 40c an hour.

Ordered that city have right-of-way cleared for extension to Race street, to secure an easy grade up onto the bench; the county, it was reported, would build the road. The road in this case leaves the street and becomes in reality a part of the county road to the Westphal home. County Attorney Ritchie was present and entered a protest against proceeding with the work before the right-of-way had been secured.

THREE BREAKWATERS FOR NEAH BAY

Senator Piles Will Endeavor to Secure Two Million for Harbor of Refuge.

Senator Piles introduced an amendment to the rivers and harbors bill—a provision to establish a harbor of refuge at Neah Bay, and giving $200,000 for the first year's work on a project to cost ultimately $1,873,154. The construction of three breakwaters is proposed, one projecting from the western shore of the bay, another from the western shore of Waaddah island and another from Waaddah island to the southern shore of the bay.

SUPERIOR COURT IN SESSION

In the case of the State upon the relation of D. A. Christopher, et al, enjoining the county commissioners from further proceedings in the construction of the Lake Crescent-Port Crescent road, defendants, through their attorneys, Messrs. Trumbull & Trumbull, presented a motion to quash on the grounds that there was no such a writ as an Alternative Injunction, as the paper was named which was served upon the Board; that proper notice of the issuance of the writ had not been given; that suit had not been begun by the filing of a complaint as the law directs, and that the bond was faulty. The plaintiff's attorney scouted the position of the defense, holding that his affidavit was the complaint and set forth the emergency and he did not care whether the paper was called a Writ of Prohibition or Injunction. The court upheld the contention of the defense and dismissed the case upon the following grounds: That the State was not a proper party to the action; that no action was begun by the filing of a complaint as the law contemplates; that proper notice not given the defendants, and a writ should not issue without notice; that the commissioners had done their part, and the contractor should have been enjoined, if it was desired that the work should cease pending a hearing; therefore the case could not be heard upon its merits.

Ida Miller was granted a decree of divorce from Levi Miller upon the grounds of non-support.

Upon the same grounds Charlotte M. Rue was given a decree from F. I. Rue of Billings, Mont.

In C. F. Seal vs. H. McAlmond for slander, the defense asked that the plaintiff set forth more definite and certain the slander complained of, which plaintiff agreed to do.

Minnie McComb was granted a decree of divorce upon the grounds of cruel treatment, but was denied alimony of $15 per as prayed for. Prayer for costs of $125 was allowed.

In the matter of the petition of S. L. Kilby for divorce from Edith Kilby a decree was denied, the statement coming out in the trial, seemingly as a good reason why a divorce should be granted, that the parties had agreed to separate and had made distribution of their property. The law holds no divorce shall be granted where collusion of the parties is shown.

Messrs. R. A. Muskett and Edward Hoare were admitted to citizenship Wednesday upon hearing and testimony of witnesses.

In the case of the Hoko River Boom Co. vs. A. Fairservice, to set aside a tax deed, the defendant demurred to the complaint, holding that the statute of limitation had run The court sustained the demurrer and ordered the case dismissed.

FOUND GOLD AND COPPER

William Kennedy, an old California miner and prospector, after six months in the Olympic mountains, where he prospected along the headwaters of the streams of that region, says he is thoroughly convinced that the Olympics offer an inviting held for prospectors and miners. He found minerals of all kinds, including gold, copper and iron. He says he found the most promising placer deposits near the headwaters of the Hoh river. The district is a difficult one to prospect, the entire country being covered with underbrush, through which one must chop his way. Mr. Kennedy went to Seattle last week and will take an outfit into the mountains when he goes back next May.

The Toppenish Commercial Club, after a heated discusison of the plans of the Northern Pacific for depot and trackage improvements there, voted decisively to approve. The improvements will include a double track through the city limits and a $20,000 passenger station.

VANCOUVER ISLAND MINES BRING ELEVEN MILLIONS

Victoria, B. C., Feb. 12.—In an interesting race for possession of the coal mines of Hon. James Dunsmuir, on Vancouver isalnd, Mackenzie & Mann, backed financially, it is learned, by J. P. Morgan, have won against the Canadian Pacific railroad. Dunsmuir has never been anxious to part with the mines, but recently gave the Canadian Pacific railroad an option. The railroad company takes about 1,000 tons daily from the mines, but allowed its option to lapse.

Mackenzie & Maann have acquired the coal mines and plan iron works on the Coast. With the backing of Morgan this was made possible, and $11,000,000 will be paid before May 1 in cash, as specified by Dunsmuir. In addition more than $5,000,000 will be spent at once to increase the output of the mines and build iron works.

FARMERS MAKE ATTAGK ON COTTON EXCHANGE

Washington, Feb. 12.—"This question involves hundreds of millions of dollars and the welfare of millions of people," declared T. J. Brooks, of Tennessee, speaking for the Farmers' National Union in opening the hearing on the anti-option bills before the house committee on agriculture.

The proposed legislation is designed to prohibit dealing in futures on boards of trade and exchanges. The committee room was crowded with congressmen from states interested.

Mr. Brooks declared that dealings in cotton futures were no more necessary than in wheat and wool and farm implements.

"On moral principle," he asked, "is one class of citizens obliged to make up for the losses of another class? For where one gains another must lose. The original intention of the cotton exchange to bring the buyer and seller together has been eliminated in the development of the present exchange practice."

He declared the exchanges aggravated the natural fluctuations.

Under the shadow of the exchanges competition among local buyers had been eliminated in the South, he said, and he charged the existence of a tacit understanding in the cotton and tobacco belts for division of territory.

Yakima Lands Withdrawn

North Yakima, Feb. 14.—Upon the recommendation of the reclamation service the department of the interior has authorized the withdrawal of over 300,000 acres of government land adjacent to the Yakima valley. The land lies under the proposed high line at points between Ellensburg and Prosser. Notice of withdrawal was received during the past week at the local land office. It is generally conceded that the withdrawal indicates the reclamation service is contemplating action on the high line project

LAWS MADE TO BE OBEYED

PRESIDENT GIVES WARNING TO THOSE WHO THINK OTHERWISE

No Hope of Favoritism Held Out to Illegal Combinations in New York Speech—Payne Tariff Bill Praised and Postal Savings Law Promised.

New York, Feb. 12.—Little hope for illegal combinations and lawbreaking trushts is held out by President Taft, who in his speech at The New York Republican Club's Lincoln Day dinner tonight, declared that "if the enforcement of the law is not consistent with the present method of carrying on business then the business methods must be changed to conform with the law."

A ringing eulogy of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law and a detailed defense of the present administration occupied a great part of the long speech. The president went over the Republican party platform of 1908 plank by plank and pointed out how, step by step, the administration was working toward a fulfillment of its pledges. He took the stand that the Payne bill contained a substantial revision of the tariff and quoted statistics to prove that since the law went into effect there has been a considerable decrease in duties.

Sees Next Campaign Issue

But the president admitted that the tariff bill is going to be blamed by the Democrats for the high cost of living, which will be, he admits, a vital issue in the congressional campaign next fall. "And we must not be blind to the weight of such an argument," he told the Republicans. After a long argument intended to prove that the Payne-Adrich measure was the best tariff law ever inaugurated in the United States, he proceeded to the individual pledges of the platform of 1908. Then without mincing words he took up Wall Street and the trusts. The speaker undertook to answer the flood of questions and criticisms which have been deluging the country relative to the success of the Taft administration. On the Wall Street subject Mr. Taft said:

"From time to time attacks are made upon the administration on the ground that its policy tends to create a panic in Wall Street and disturb business. All I have to say on this subject is: That certainy no one responsible for a government like ours would foolishly run amuck in business and destroy values and confidence just for the pleasure of so doing:

Must Enforce the Law

"No one has a motive as strong as the administration in power to cultivate and strengthen business confidence and prosperity. But it does rest with the national administration to enforce the law, and if the enforcement of the law is not consistent with the present methods of doing business then it does not speak well for the present methods of conducting business and they should be changed to conform to the law.

"There was no promise on the part of the Republican partv to change the anti-trust law except to strengthen it, or to authorize a monopoly and a suppression of competition and the control of prices, and those who look forward to such a change cannot visit the responsibility for their mistake on an innocent person. Of course, the government at Washington can be depended on to enforce the law in the best way calculated to prevent a destruction of public confidence in business, but that it must enforce the law goes without saiyng."

Governor Hughes Praised

Further on the president praised Governor Hughes, who was present, characterizing him as the "greatest asset of the Republican party in New York state."

The postal savings bank and the party pledge on that subject led the president into a discussion of the bill now before congress. He said those who are endeavoring to amend the bill to allow the money deposited to be kept as savings in banks under trustee who shall have no power to use the funds and to allow the funds to be deposited in state and national banks indiscriminately are prejudicing their party intergity. "These," he said, "will put the party in the position where it cannot hope to escape the charge that it is not in good faith seeking the passage of a postal savings bank bill and is not seeking therefore to comply with the promises of the Republican platform in that regard.

Payne Tariff Law Upheld

Speaking of tariff revision, Mr. Taft said: "We did revise the tariff. Nothing was expressly said in the platform that this revision was to be a downward revision. The implication that it was to be generally downward, however, was fairly given by the fact that those who uphold the tariff system defend it by the claim that after an industry has been established by shutting off foreign competition the domestic competition will lead to the reduction in price so as to make the original high tariff unnecessary

"In the new tariff there were 654 decreases, 220 increases and 1,150 items of the dutiable list unchanged, but this did not represent the fair proportion in most of the reductions and increases because the duties were decreased on those articles which had a consupmtion value of nearly five billion dollars, while they were increased on those articles which had a consumption value of less than one billion dollars.

"Certainly it was not promised that the rates on luxuries should be reduced. The revenues were falling off, there was a deficit promised and it was essential that the revenue should be increased. It was no violation of the promise to increase the revenues by increasing the tax on luxuries provided there was downward revision on all other articles. The only substantial defect in compliance with the promise of the platform was the failure to reduce woolens.

Revision Not Perfect

"Does that defect so color the action of the Republican party as to make it a breach of faith leading to its condemnation? I don't think so. Parties are like men—they are not perfect. The change which this tariff affected was a marked change downward in the rate of the duties and it was in recognition by the party that the time had come when instead of increasing duties they must be decreased, when the party recognized in its platform that the proper measure of protection was the difference in cost of production of articles here and abroad, including a fair profit to manufacturers.

More Than Was Promised

Concerning the Republican party's efforts to carry out its promsses with regard to railroad rates, rebates and discrimination, the ppresident said:

"A bill to carry out the platform pledges has been introduced in both the house and senate and is now being considered before the appropriate committees of these two bodies, and there is every hope that the bills thus introduced will pass. Indeed, this railroad measure goes further than the promises of the platform, for while it subjects the issue of stocks and bonds to the restrictive supervision of the commission and prevents future watering of stocks and forbids the acquisition by a railroad company of stock in a competing line, it also puts very much more power into the hands of the commission for the regulation of rates, and it facilitates in every way the ease of supervision by the commission."

Mr. Taft expressed the belief that the platform pledges regarding conservation of natural resources would also be kept.

MEYER NAVAL PLAN TO BE GIVEN TRIAL

Washington, Feb. 12.—The long drawn out dispute in the house committee on naval affairs over the subject of indorsing the plan of Secretary Meyer for the reorganiaztion of the navy is practically settled, it is stated, and the committee will take action next week which will be in effect tentative approval of the secretary's ideas.

The secretary will be given the opportunity to demonstrate in the next year the worth of his plans. Representative Dawson of Iowa furnished the suggestion by which the committee and the secretary reached a common understanding. Under Mr. Dawsonn's plan, which it is expected the committee will adopt, appropriations for 1911 will be made under the old system, but Secretary Meyer will be vested with authority to distribute the expenditures as he may see fit. To guard against a diversion of funds from their proper channels, it will be required that the money be spent solely for the purpose intended by congress.

This will permit the secretary to divert the funds from one bureau to another, in accordance with his plan, and will still confine them to the objects intended. The committee is expected to require further that when the secretary submits his estimates to congress for the year 1912 he must do so under the existing apportionment. This will avoid giving sanction of law to the Meyer plan and at the same time will give the secretary the opportunity of trying out his reorganization idea for a year.

The Meyer plan provides for the abolition of the bureau of equipment, the placing of all naval construction under the direction of line officers and a rearrangement of the duties of some other departments.

Rear Admiral Hutch I. Cone, chief of the bureau of steam engineering, was before the committee in an endeavor to refute charges made by Admiral Capps, chief of the bureau of construction, who told the committee some days ago that Admiral Cone's figures on certain estimates and expenditures were incorrect. Admiral Cone's explanations seemed to be satisfactory to the committee.

SEEK TO WIND UP BIG OREGON LAND COMPANY

Portland, Or., Feb. 12.—Suit has been filed in the United States circuit court here asking a receiver for the Deschutes Irrigation & Power Company, which holds 100,000 acres in Crook county, Oregon. The affairs of the company have been in litigation for some time. It is the complaint in the present case that the company has defaulted in payment on bonds due March 1 and September 1, 1909. The court is asked to foreclose a mortgage given by the company in 1904, as well as to appoint a receiver.

Turner Starts for Hague

Washington, Feb. 12.—Senator Geo. Turner, of Spokane, is in Washington for a final conference with President Taft before sailing for The Hague to act as chief counsel for the United States in the arbitration of the long standing dispute with England as to construction of the New Foundland fisheries treaty of 1818.

PUBLICITY WOULD HELP THEM

BETTER STANDING FOR CORPORATIONS IF PEOPLE KNEW.

Commissioner Smith Outlines a Plan to Bring About Federal Supervision Which Involves No Drastic Action—Federal Control Imperative.

Washington, Feb. 12.—That great interstate industries can be brought under a permanent federal supervision through a system of regular reports to a federal agency, in a rational, effective way, which will involve no drastic action, but, on the contrary, will forestall it, is thec onclusion drawn in the annual report of Herbert Knox Smith, commissioner of corporations to the secretarry of commerce and labor, just made public.

"Publiccity will improve the standing of our corporate securities both at home and abroad," Mr. Smith declares, "and will help give our business machinery that foundation of fairness and openness and public confidence which it must have if it is to be a permanent factor in our national advance.

"It will bring together the government and the corporate manager in conference and co-operation, which alone can serve to adjust continuously the complex and changing relationship between our buisness forces and the public welfare."

Mrv. Smith contends that already, under public condemnation, made possible by facts plainly stated, great corporate abuses have been abandoned. He says that a giant system of railroad rate discriminations has been wiped out and numerous forms of commercial oppression diminished. Corporate managers themselves, says Mr. Smith, are frankly advocating a more open accounting. Continuing, he says:

Outlines Plan of System

"The situation is thus ready for a complete system where (1) all important interstate commerce corporations shall regularly make reports to a federal agency; where (2) that agency shall have the further right to verify and extend the facts presented; where (3) business transactions of public interest shall be made public, safeguarding at the same time all proper business secrets; where (4) there will be a permanent meeting ground for co-operation and adjustment between the government and business interests, and (5) whereby those corporations that deal fairly and openly shall correspondingly acquire public confidence and support.

"The exact form of this system is of little importance. The information must be had for the primary purposes of the government and the citizen. Co-operation must also be had, publictiy should as far as possible be voluntary. Corporate managers are recognizing the value of government publicity. To profit by this new spirit, the system of supervision must provide for co-operation. Prosecution is indeed necessary to destroy unfair methods, but it should be reserved as the last resort rather than used as the normal instrument. In short, our great interstate industries must come under permanent national supervision.

Fedbral Action Imperative

"The corporation has concentrated enormous commercial power in the hands of a few men. At the same time it has lessened their personal responsibility for the proper use of that power. Sense of personal obligation to the community becmes submerged in vast corporate entities. The resulting abuses call for some restraint that shall take the place of te old personal obligation. Government supervision and publicity of corporations must be that substitute.

"The issue is national; action by the federal government is imperative under its unquestioned power and duty to regulate interstate commerce. The federal government is the only adequate authority; one of the primary motives for its creation was for a national control of national business Those directing our great corporations have deliberately nationalized them in size and scope; they cannot now be heard to object to a centralized control which they themselves have made necessary. They have made their business truly governmental in their effect on the people. They cannot now deny that the government is concerned therein."

Find Coal Seam on Island

Vancouver, B. C., Feb. 14.—At the camp on Charlotte islands, between Masset and Yukon, three seams of excellent coking and steam coal are reported, the largest being nine and a half feet wide, 600 feet below the surface. The coal area is extensive, and this and other collieries are to be opened up this spring. Many claims are being staked.

Islands to Decide as to Prohibition

Washington, Feb. 15.—Whether the Hawaiian islands shall be "dry" will be left to the Hawaiian people themselves and will not be determined by congress. This has been decided by the senate committee on Pacific islands and Porto Rico, by the adoption of a report providing that the question shall be submsitted to a special election.

FOR RIVERS AND HARBORS

WASHINGTON STATE GETS $2,645,000 AS ITS SHARE.

Projects Undertaken in State Total $11,019,563, First Named Amount Being Appropriated for this Year's Work—Lake Washington Canal Gets Start.

Washington, Feb. 12.—Because of its great total, the rivers and harbors bill may have a hard time getting through congress. If it is passed as reported the state of Washington will get a total of $2,645,500, with an assurance of getting finally $11,019,563 to complete the work undertaken. The committee reports favorably the Chittenden plan for the Lake Washington canal, estimating the cost at $2,275,000, and appropriates $150,000 for the years work. The total cost does not provide for a power plant. The locks located at the narrows.

Following is the schedule of appropriations for the state:

Grays harbor and Chehalis river, half of engineers estimate; Cowlitz and Lewis rivers, $7,500; Grays River, $500; Puget Sound and tributary waters, $100,000, a reduction from $120,000 (the item including $75,000 for a snagboat and dredge); Swinomish slough, $10,000; Skagit river, $100,000; Snohomish river, $25,000 on a project to cost ultimately $280,000, being the improvement of Everett's waterfront; Chehalis river to Montesano, $7,000 on a project to cost $50,000; Cowlitz river, $7,500 on a project to cost $31,000, and to go as high as Toledo; Bellingham bay, $15,000 on a project to cost $92,000, and to give a 24-foot chanel to the long wharf; Hammersley inlet, $9,000; Willapa harbor, $25,000 instead of $50,000 asked by the board, on a project to cost $223,632; Olympia harbor, $15,000 on a project to cost $58,000; Snake river, $7,500, instead of the $15,000 estimated. Columbia river, Wenatchee to Bridgeport, $25,000; Bridgeport to Kettle Falls, $50,000 on a project to cost $175,000; Celilo Falls to Snake river, $90,000 on a project to cost $280,000; at the Dalles, $600,000 instead of the $1,000,000 asked, on a project to cost $3,780,392; Cascades, $50,000 or a reduction of $100,000 from the estimates on a project to cost 199,260; at Vancouver, $7,500, half of the estimate; below Portland, including Willamette, $175,000 on a project to cost $1,498,509; at the mouth of the river, $1,200,000, which is $360,000 less than the estimates on a project to cost $2,013,920; gauging Columbia river, $1,000.

For the year this gives $492,000 for Puget sound and small rivers, and $2,153,500 for the Columbia river. The bill also provides for surveys for several projects in this state.

SOME FOREST LANDS RESTORED TO ENTRY

Washington, Feb. 12.—As a result of conferences between the secretaries of the interior and of agriculture with the president, at least four million acres of agricultural lands within national forests are to be restored to entry. Approximately 600,000 acres of these lands lie in the states of Oregon and Washington. The exact definition of the boundaries of areas to be restored are not yet fixed. Statements that the land has already been restored are in error.

The lands to be restored are some that the forestry bureau itself has determined are best suited for argiculture, and not needed for forestry purposes. It is possible other restorations will be made later

Black Ball for Dual Phone

Vancouver, B. C., Feb. 14.—After securing advice from Seattle, Portland and Los Angeles on the dual telephone system, the Board of Trade of Vancouver has decided against the proposal of a new company to install an automatic system here Seattle reported against the second system. Portland was on the fence, while Los Angeles was strongly in favor.

Bill Makes Peary Rear Admiral.

Washington. Feb. 12.—The senate has passed a bill introduced by Senator Hale to make Commander Robert E. Peary a rear admiral and place him on the retired list in recognition of his discovery of the north pole. The house committee, however, has reported the bill unfavorably.

Big Demand for Irrigated Tracts

Kettle Falls, Feb. 12—The demand for irriagted tracts south of this place along the Columbia is more active than ever before since the completion of the irrigation ditch. Several large sales were reported last week. The prospects of a railroad through this place are very encouraging.

To Give Exposition of By-Products

Tacoma, Feb. 12.—Claiming that there are more by-products from fir than from any other kind of timber the Chamber of Commerce here is arranging an exhibit showing the character of these by-products and the money there is in their manufacture.

A liquor monopoly for the exclusive manufacture in Sweden of spirits has been organized at Stockholm with a capital approximating $4,000,000.

Correct Pruning in Orchard Practice

W. S. Thornber, Horticulturist. State College, Pullman, Wash.

Pruning is one of the most important and yet least understood crafts that is practiced in the growing of fruits. There are many erroneous notions and theories practiced every year in the orchards of this state, some of them contrary to nature and the best good of the orchard, while others are vain attempts at securing results that can be easily obtained.

Every tree is a rule unto itself and no two trees can always be pruned exactly the same. The pruner should be quick to detect the weaknesses as well as the strong marks of a variety or individual. He must be elastic in thought and perception as well as application, or he will ruin a valuable tree. His duty is to make the best of every individual tree reagrdless of its condition or shape.

While it may be possibe to grow a successful orchard in some places without pruning, it is an absolute impossibility here in the West. The successful grower must prune, and prune every year at least once, if he would have perfect trees.

There can be no best time to prune all varieties and ages of trees in all climates. The vigorous growers and shy bearers on rich, moist soil should be summer pruned as well as winter pruned, or at least summer pruned, while the slow growers and heavy bearers should always be pruned during the winter. One must constantly remember that heavy winter pruning tends to exhilerate wood growth, while heavy summer prunig tends to develop fruit buds, and consequently, fruit.

The essential thing in a young tree is that it make strong, rapid growth. Therefore it should be pruned during the dormant, or winter season, to induce growth. As soon as it becomes large enough and old enough to bear, this winter pruning may or may not be modified, or even supplemented by summer pruning. The essential thing in an old apple tree is that it produce fruit, and it should be pruned in such a manner that it will produce fruit. In Eastern Washington and most of the irrigated valleys the trees produce fruit too young and tend to overbear, while in Western Washington the reverse is true. With these facts before us it is easy to see why it is best to prune the young trees and most of the old ones in the central and eastern parts of the state during the winter and all of the bearing trees in Western Washington during the summer season.

Pruning is an operation that should not be done carelessly or hurriedly. The pruner should study each tree as he prunes it, and each branch as he removes it. When heading back young trees or cutting off the tops of last year's growth, the cut should always be made slanting away from and about one-sixteenth of an inch above the first bud that is intended to grow. A longer stub than this will dry, crack and form an entrance for fungi, bacteria and similar annoyances. A shorter stub will usually result in the death of the first bud.

When pruning trees that have a dense, upright habit of growth, like the Wagner, Rome Beauty, etc, cut to strong outer buds in order to spread the naturally narrow, compact top, but when pruning spreading or slender growing trees, cut to buds that point toward the center of the tree in order to throw the limbs inward and upward.

Severe Pruning May Be Necessary

Weak growing trees or weak branches in strong trees may be compelled to produce strong growths by severe winter pruning. In the removal of lateral branches from either young or old trees, cut parallel with and close to the main stems. Never leave stubs from one to two inches long in hopes that they will develop into fruit spurs, since less than 5 per cent ever become fruit spurs, and the other 95 per cent die, drying up and leaving excellent gateways for the entrance of disease into the wood of the tree. Young lateral branches, when shortened back, especially after the spring growth has taken place, very frequently develop fruit buds and spurs.

In the removal of large branches from old or bearing trees, always make the cut parallel with the branch or main stem from which the one is removed. This frequently means a larger wound than it would make if the cut is made at right angles to the limb that is to be removed, but such wounds will heal quicker and are less injurious to the tree than the much smaller ones that leave the collar of the branch to be covered with healing tissue. Do not hesitate to remove large useless or superfluous limbs from trees, but always make smooth, clean cuts with a saw, and if necessary to prevent splitting the stem or peeling the bark, make two cuts—the first from six to twelve inches out from where the limb is to be finally cut off. Nothing can be applied to the wound to hasten the healing. Wounds an inch or less in diameter need not be treated, while larger wounds may be advantageously treated with a thick coat of lead paint. Cheap mineral paint or tar should not be used, as it kills the young, tender bark, while grafting waxes crack and peel off before the wound has healed. Any antiseptic that will keep the moisture out makes an excellent coating.

LAND CLEARING BULLETIN FROM PUYALLUP STATION

The first bulletin to be issued this year by the Western Washington Experiment Station, located at Puyallup, entitled "Clearing Logged-Off Land by the Aid of a Donkey Engine," has been finished by Superintendent W. H. Lawrence, superintendent of the station, and will be ready for distribution shortly. It is a bulletin of the special series class and is not incuded in the regular mailng list, copies being obtainable either from the experiment station at Pullman or at the local station. Other bulletins in the regular and technical series will be published later. Prof. Lawrence and Prof. H. L. Blanchard have already written other bulletins to be distributed later in the year.

Superintendent Lawrence, in his bulletin, states that a bare 5 per cent of the 8,500,000 acres of accessible land west of the Cascade mountains in this state is being utilized for farm land or improved pasture land. One of the reasons for this is the fact that the expense of clearing the logged-off lands is so great. Mr. Lawrence explains the method used in clearing 13 acres of upland at the experiment station by means of a donkey engine and stump powder. A compound road engine 9x10, with 160 pounds of steam, was used to pull out the stumps after the roots had been loosened with powder. The average cost per acre of clearing the land by this method was $71.90, or for the 13 acres a total of $934.85.

In conclusion, the bulletin says:

"A donkey engine built for logging purposes is not properly constructed for land clearing. Clearing land with a donkey engine poorly operated is very expensive, while such a machine properly manned by a good crew is, on the whole, quite satisfactory. The usual way of pulling and burning stumps and other debris destroys the soil. The clearing of land by the aid of a donkey engine is not so expensive a method as the impression gained from estimates generally given. Stumping powder and the donkey enigne are quite satisfactory and rapid, but rather expensive agents to use in the clearing of logged-off lands."

SPEAKER MAKES SPEECH

CANNON DROPS GAVEL TO MAKE A FEW REMARKS ON FLOOR.

Talks For Rivers and Harbors and Incidentally About Other Matters—He Emphasizes Need For For Breadth of View in Making Waterway Appropriations.

Washington, Feb. 15.—"If we lose sight of our own importance and of our own position for the time being, there will come in cur places better and wiser men, who will not lose sight of the necessity to provide for an orderly procedure, under which a majority can work its will; where responsibility rests there must be power with the majority to move on, being responsible."

"Uncle Joe" Cannon, laiyng aside his gavel and speaking from the floor of the house yesterday merely as "the gentleman from Illinois," sounded this warning to his colleagues.

Mr. Cannon arose for the purpose of lending his approval to the pending rivers and harbors appropriation bill, but during his speech, which lasted about twenty minutes, he took occasion to refer lightly to magazine and newspaper criticism and to remind the minority members that power of the majority was futile unless engineered by a well oiled machine.

It was while Representative Fitzgerald, of New York, had the floor that members were surprised to see the speaker rise from a seat on the floor and inquire: "Will the gentleman from New York yield to me?"

"I will yield to the gentleman—I believe from Illinois, replied Mr. Fitzgrald smilingly.

Mr. Cannon told the house how he voted for a rivrs and harbors bill during President Arthurs administration, and explained he had voted to pass that measure over the president's veto. He said he had some trouble in justifiyng that vote before his constituents, but said he did so.

"I thanked God then, and I thank God now," said Mr. Cannon, 'that that constituency, agricultural district as it is today, had the patriot sm, crossed with breadth and intellingence, to stand by me at the polls."

As the speaker was enlarging upon the need of breadth of view to obtain approval all over the country for appropriations for river and harbor improvements, Representative Dalzell, of Pennsylvania, who occupied the chair, began hammering the desk before him with the speakers gavel.

"The time of the gentleman has expired," he exclaimed, in mock severity.

"May I have a minute more?" pleaded the speaker.

Mr. Fitzgerald then secured consent to have his time extended for five minutes, and Mr. Cannon proceeded.

With the eye of prophesy he saw the nation's population growing from 90,000,000 to 500,000,000. Already we have almost half the railroad mileage of this earth, he said, carrying almost one-third of the products of the civilized world back and forth to market.

"Long before the 500,000,000 are here," he said, "if we are to depend on railroad transportation alone, we will have the railway milage multiplied by three, multiplied by four. It is a long work to add to nature sufficient depth of water to carry the great and constantly increasng commerce."

In connecton with newspaper attacks on his trip down the Mississippi with President Taft, Mr. Cannon said:

"When I turned to come back from New Orleans, from the criticism I received, founded on incorrect information, I wondered whether I was afoot or hroseback, whether I was I, or body else.

"I suppose I will continue to receive all kinds of fake information that our great metropolitan journals may continue, some of them, to make their papers from day to day, like the Yankee made his razors—to sell. But I desire to say to the gentlemen on both sides of the house that in the last analysis, from the two great organizations, the minority from time to time putting the majority on its good behavior, seeking to become the majority, will come correct legislation and correct appropriations for the greatest good of the people of the republic."

Protest from Porto Rico

San Juan, Porto Rico, Feb. 15.—There is wide protest here against Secretary Dickinson's draft of a bill, whih President Taft has indorsed, amending the organic act to replace the Foraker act. The house of delegates has instructed the speaker, Senor DeDiego, to cable the committee on insular affairs to that effect.

Fined for Remarrying

William Black, of Seattle, has been sentenced to pay a fine of $100 for contempt of court, for disregarding the inhibition against remarriage within six months after his divorce. It was admitted by Black that he remarried at Vancouver, B. C., 28 days after divorce.

PAPERS BY THE PEOPLE

FEMININE GRACES THE RESULT OF SERVITUDE.

By Helen Armstrong.

Marie Dow in her role of an Oriental captive maid pictured the whole history of feminine psychology. It was by trying to please her lord and master. It was by exercising every beguiling grace and charming wile that she overcame him. Without the gentle power of her silence and the soft suasion of her winsomeness the little prisoner would have been powerless. Every woman has been a captive maid. Her fortunes have depended upon the will of lord and master. And the more primitive the man the more need she had for every personal appeal, for every fascination. For the man had the less sympathy. He had to be pleased to be good and kind.

Women may mold the world according to their own ideas instead of being molded by it contrary to their natures. They may put into the office some of the coziness and charm they give to a home. They may do away with the grime that consorts so ill with their dainty frocks. They may put an end to street noises. They may even instill some of their sympathy and goodness into business deals and political campaigns. But even if women should not do much to soften the big world, somehow, it is softening anyhow. It is growing gentler. It is refining. It is civilizing.

EAST PURPLE SPOT IN COLORLESS WORLD.

By Lord Killanin.

It is well for the Western, greedy, ambitious, jealous, noisy, sordid, vulgar, busy, practical, aggressive, mundane Western to visit the East, where the sole wish is to escape from a world of desire and action, of possessions and distinction. We came from the West, complacently absorbed in the innumerable affairs and details of our elaborate society and governance of public life and we find a people to whom our civilization, all our social, and political, and economical, and commercial, and scientific development is foolish and contemptible, and who cannot condescend to give it any thought or attention, while the mystery of life, the nature and destiny of the soul confronts us.

And of course the Eastern view is essentially right. For with all our modern devices and inducements and arguments we cannot hoodwink ourselves into a denial and oblivion of the great spiritual problems of life. However denuded, and ensnared, and overloaded by the pomposity, and trappings, and luxuries of a rich external life we may be, however occupied with chattels, trade, professions, undertakings, the mysteries are there all the same and appertain to each human soul. And as long as that is so it can never seem reasonable to shirk or ignore them.

We know that the wise men came from the East. Here life is simple. Commercial values and social interests and differences begin to wane. At last our spiritual apprehension can grow and expand at its ease, and everything about us does not jar with our new ecstasy. Life is a mystery everywhere, but in the East you are allowed to think so openly, and to attend to and occupy yourself with the same. In the West it is difficult if not impossible for a man to save his soul.

A PARADISE FOR HUSBANDS.

By F. M. Colby.

England is the happy hunting-ground of husbands, the land where on moderate incomes the men have valets and the women hardly any clothes. For the great capacity to rule, to conquer and to colonize can, he thinks, be traced directly to the male ascendency in the English home. Groomed, well-fed, exercised, never thwarted, and with the wife always in her proper place, the English husband is, like the fire engine horse, always in the pink of condition, and ready at an instant's moral alarm to rush forth to the most distant part of the world and kill a colored man. This explains the British Empire, and, per contra, I may add, it explains the imperial shortcomings of the United States, for here having once provided for the wife in that station of life to which it has pleased her to call him, and having served without offense as handy man about the house, the American husband has not the time left, still less the spirit, to be off shooting Matabeles. Thus the question of empire is fought out in the home, and you often meet a husband, now utterly domesticated, whose abilities might, if his wife would only set them loose, make him a colonial Governor. We have the manhood, could it but be disengaged.—Bookman.

FACTS THE SAME HOWEVER EXPRESSED.

By Ada May Krecker.

It is the fashion nowadays to require scientific formulas for nearly all our thoughts. That is because we are developing our scientific consciousness. We are thinking in scientific terms, talking in scientific language. But this scientific habit and mannerism of ours does not invalidate truths that are not scientifically stated. It does not affect the accuracy of our poetic idea. It does not affect the verity of our ideals, of our unproved hopes, of our undemonstrated secret yearnings, of our unclassified experiences.

Our minds are filled with sweet dreamings, with lovely idealities, with wonderful yearnings and hopes. Science has said nothing about them. But this silence of science in nowise discredits them. It does not render them untrue or unbelievable. George Eliot wondered whether it were possible for us poor earthworms to think, to conceive of anything which the illimitable universe wherein we dwell could not furnish out into reality.

Is it not remarkable as well as delightful to suppose that the big universe has far more than the earthworms and earthwormlets can guess?

THE POET'S FAITH.

Oh, yet we trust that somehow good
Will be the final goal of ill,
To pangs of nature, sins of will,
Defects of doubt, and taints of blood;

That nothing walks with aimless feet;
That not one life shall be destroy'd,
Or cast as rubbish to the void,
When God hath made the pile complete;

That not a worm is cloven in vain;
That not a moth with vain desire
Is shrivel'd in a fruitless fire,
Or but subserves another's gain.

Behold we know not anything;
I can but trust that good shall fall
At last—far off—at last, to all,
And every winter change to spring.

So runs my dream: but what am I?
An infant crying in the night:
An infant crying for the light:
And with no language but a cry.
—Tennyson, "In Memoriam."

His Needless Worry

Sam Bradley looked up from his books and cast a furtive glance toward the telephone booth. All he could see was a mass of puffs bobbing about fetchingly, a small pink ear, against which the receiver was held, and a nervous-looking little back that seemed never to be still for a second, but instinctively Bradley knew that the occupant of the booth was Miss Burton and he felt a sudden jealous pang.

"I wonder if she's talking to that fellow of hers?" There was a decided tinge of bitterness in Bradley's thought. "I bet he's a lazy skate. Seems like he don't have nothin' to do but lallygag half the time." He strained his ears and was rewarded by hearing the soft voice raised slightly.

"All right. I'll be there at five after 5. Good-by." The speaker hung up the receiver and came out of the telephone booth, her little high heels click-click-clicking across the uncarpeted floor. She waved a gay little hand in Bardley's direction and called "Hello, there," with apparently no more definite intention than to evidence the fact that there was no hard feeling. Then she clicked back to her desk and presently her hands were flashing over the keyboard, her rings giving back a joyous twinkle in response to the friendly advances of the electric light.

Bradley raised his head again and refreshed himself with a long look at her. To him the sight of her variegated plumage was an unmitigated pleasure. Others might scoff at her weird combination of blues and greens and purples, or even more terrifying things, but to him they were as satisfying as the gorgeous coloring of a flower or of a tropical bird. He reveled in them as he would have reveled in the vividness of an old-fashioned flower garden and was cheered and invigorated thereby.

When she had been a member of the office force a month, although he had exchanged probably no more than a dozen sentences with her, Bradley's hitherto untouched heart was hers.

And here is where the tragedy began, for Miss Burton already had a "fellow." Every day about luncheon time he called her up, and, while their conversations were short, apparently merely to make an appointment for luncheon, or to meet and go home together, there was a peculiarly intimate tone to them that made Bradley's heart leap and his pulses quicken sickeningly when he heard the sharp tap, tap, tap of the little heels as she trotted over to the telephone booth.

Bradley met them on the street one day, the young man with his hand tucked under her elbow and leaning over the blonde curls with a most devoted air, the girl's face wearing a pleased, rather absent smile. She bowed cheerfully to the somber Bradley.

"Reg'lar candy kid," thought Bradley, as he turned half around to look after the couple. "How can a nice girl like her stand for a fellow that looks as if he didn't do nothin' but comb his hair and manicure his finger nails?"

For several days afterward he went through a mental struggle, trying to persuade himself that a girl who could be content with the affection of a "sissy" was not worth thinking of, and during that time he failed to note any conversations between the two. However, about the third day, happening to pass the telephone booth, he heard her say: "Well, we gotta start early. I want to be there when the curtain goes up."

BESIDE HER SAT THE HATED "CANDY KID."

It may have been a desire to drown his sorrows in ragtime or, perhaps, the chance of spending the evening in moody contemplation of another's happiness, that caused Bradley to go forth and purchase for himself a gallery ticket to the most popular "show" in town. If Miss Burton and her swain had chosen this particular performance he might, perchance, gaze down upon their heads from his lofty but humble haunt. Almost with a shudder Bradley admitted to himself that he was deliberately "tagging."

Fortune favors almost anybody if given sufficient opportunity, so it was quite to be expected that upon his first casual glance over the house Bradley should see the bobbing puffs of Miss Burton. She was sitting almost directly opposite Bradley, and for wonderful raiment she would have had Solomon in all his glory beaten, while beside her sat the hated "candy kid."

Bradley grew chill with disgust. How could any one be so destitute of proper feeling as to ask that beautiful vision to sit in the gallery? He looked hastily away, almost overcome with shame for the one who had done this thing. Then suddenly a wave of satisfaction swept over him.

"Cheap skate," he gloated. "Takin' a lady like her up in the gallery!"

During the remainder of the evening he kept his eyes turned resolutely away from the couple, and at the end of the play he seized his coat and hat and fled for the stairs. Surely she should not be humiliated by the knowledge that he had seen her.

The next morning, greatly to his surprise, Miss Burton came tripping over to Bradley's desk.

"My goodness, ain't you the frost!" she gurgled. "I pretty near killed m'self tryun' to ketch your eye last night. There was an empty seat next to me and I thought it would be a pile of fun if you'd come over and sit with us. But no, it was you for doing the snow-man act and never looking at a person the whole evening. I bet you were afraid I'd ask you to come."

Bradley blushed. "I didn't want to butt in," he said. "Besides, you looked like you was havin' a pretty good time without no third party."

Miss Burton laughed. "Sure we was havin' a good time. Me an' Fred always do. He's an awful nice kid, if he is my brother, but I thought I'd kinda like to have you and him get acquainted."

Bradley's pen dropped from his hand and he stared at her without a word for a moment. "Say," he said finally, "seein' that we missed connection last night, won't you and he make a date and eat lunch with me some day soon? I'd be tickled to death to get acquainted with him. He's just the kind of lookin' chap I like."—Chicago Daily News.

"Does your wife give you Christmas neckties?"

"Invariably. Half a dozen of 'em."

"Pretty hard lot, I suppose?"

"I won't go so far as to say that. You see my wife is color blind and about half the lot isn't so bad."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

OFFICIAL PAPER

Published Every Friday at Port Angeles by The Webster Publishing Co.

FRIDAY, FEB. 18, 1910

That the influx of homeseekers to the northwest from the middlewestern and eastern states this spring will be greater than usual is the opinion of many railroad men. This opinion is caused by the fact that many more inquiries than usual in regard to the transcontinental rates are being received and that the colonization companies are working harder than usual, says the Spokane Spokesman-Review.

The Soldiers Home, located at Port Orchard, was formally dedicated last week and is now open to veterans and their wives. The buildings completed are a main dining hall to seat 600, two cottages to accommodate eight couples each, a main administration building for 250 persons. A power plant, laundry and gravity water supply system have also been installed.

We notice with pleasure that Miss Clara Lunbeck, from Mason City, Iowa, has taken charge of her work in the newly created office of assistant superintendent of the Washington Children's Home Society. Miss Lunbeck was an indefatigable worker for homeless children in Iowa, an earnest platform speaker who always interested her audience in the good work, and had as a hobby a wage system for orphans under her jurisdiction. Much of her work in Iowa was devoted to delivering lectures and securing support for the home.

The Inland Herald, in an able editorial discusses Conservation vs. the State in a way that will meet with approval from many in this section of the state. Among other things, the paper refers to a recent editorial in the Oregonian, containing the following statement: "If the Roosevelt-Pinchot policies had prevailed in former times, the city of Spokane would not now exist. The government would have retained ownership of the great water power that has made the city of Spokane," which statement the Herald endorses, and then goes on to say:

"It is easy enough to talk about the national government exercising a paternal guardianship over the natural resources of this nation—to rise up in righteous protest at the invasion of power trusts, and other trusts that nobody ever heard of except through the newspapers. All this sounds patriotic and arouses a temporary and enthusiatic public sentiment which is serious so long as it lasts. But it must be said that the policy of national conservation as championed not so much by Mr. Pinchot as by the newspapers which have espoused, mis-stated, and in the end, defeated his cause—will not bear analysis.

Suppose great fortunes are made in the development of this country, whether by individuals, corporations, or combinations—what of it? It is a demonstrated fact that irrigable land, for instance, can be reclaimed, irrigated, and cultivated at a total expense of less than $200 per acre and then sold to home seekers in the East for more than twice that amount. Vast fortunes are being made in the State of Washington right now in just this way but there is no other practical way of going about it, and the fruit land for which the homeseeker pays $500 per acre will produce more than $500 per acre in annual crop values. What we need in this country is results. The policy of conservation from the standpoint of an undeveloped state amounts to nothing more than a Chinese wall that excludes private enterprises and capital from doing the things that are absolutely essential to the country's development.

"The real question is, what policy, under existing conditions, will most speedily and certainly bring under cultivation the millions of unoccupied lands in this state. And back of present conditions lies another and exceedingly important consideration and that is the rights of the man who came into this country a generation ago and blazed the trails that today are the great highways. The so-called policy of conservation forgets the pioneer and prospector, and the man who bore the heat and burden of the day when this country was in the making. Just so long as this nation is made up of states and the affairs of each state are regulated according to the conditions and problems within its own confines, just so long must any national policy of necessity be adapted to the local conditions with which it has to deal. There is a question not merely of state rights but of the rights of citizens involved here and even a larger issue than that, and that is the question of the future of the country, that is yet almost unknown. So long as our resources are practically untouched, our lands unoccupied, and the great cry of the whole country is the call "come over into Macedonia and help us," just so long will we have small need for a policy that discourages private enterprise, and excludes the individual from doing the things which has always been the work of the individual and not of the nation.

The City Council of South Bend, recognizing, as many another sensible city council in the State is recognizing, that public sentiment in this country is for a stricter regulation of the saloon and a more closer conformity to existing laws by those engaged in the business, have just passed ordinances relating to the regulation of the saloons in that city: The closing of saloons from 9 o'clock in the evening until six a. m., banishing all eating places in connection therewith, and limiting the number to those at present in existance.

In commenting upon the action of the council the Pilot, among other other things, says:

"The best part of it is the fact that the saloon men themselves are in hearty accord with the passage of the ordinances and have all promised to live up to the letter and spirit of the law. If those who are engaged in the saloon business wish to stave off the day when the city will be turned over to the local optionists they could take no better course than that which they have apparently adopted, which is to conduct their business in a manner that will not antagonize the entire community. The fight that is now being waged against the saloon in this country, may not result in national prohibition, but the next few years will see a big change in the manner in which that business is conducted. The dive will have to go and the dispensing of liquor will conform more nearly to the manner in which other businesses are conducted."

While we believe that the majority of those engaged in the saloon business in this city are men who mean to be fair and law abiding citizens; nevertheless, it is apparent to all that there is a dominating influence extant which says the law and the people be damned; we have got the upper hand and propose to keep it. This spirit was recently exemplified in no mistaken way by the Boss in forcing through the council a closing ordinance of from 1 to 4:30 a. m.! A travesty on justice.

Halley's comet will pass in review, in full dress parade, before this little world, during the month of May. Its nearest approach to the sun will occur on April 20, and it will be nearest the earth on May 18. Those who saw this comet 75 years ago and were of such an age as to remember the occurrence, say that it was at that time that the great meteoric shower occurred, and that they fell like rain. It is said that the meteors fell to within about six feet of the ground and disappeared, no sign of them reaching the ground was ever found, many people were frightened, believing that the end of the world was at hand. The aerial visitor will sonn be visible to the naked eye, and will be one of the most wonderful spectacles ever witnessed by this generation.—Burlington Journal.

The Inland Herald, Spokane, made its appearance last week. It is a representative, metropolitan daily newspaper, and corresponds favorably with the best in the state. The paper sets high ideals: "It wants to be the advance guard and herald of every good cause and worthy movement. * * Its ambition is to stand for the things that are right, the ends that are worthy. * * It is the friend of every man who is trying to do something worth while." These ideals, closely followed and scrupulously guarded are sure to lead to ultimate success. Long may The Inland Herald wave.

Victorians are boycoting Uncle Sam's silver. At least, the bankers of that city, so says the Victoria Times, in order to put as much American silver out of circulation in Canada as possible, send the coin to New York. The five saloons at Kent were voted out of existence Tuesday by a majority of thirty in a total vote of 436. The saloon men say they were defeated in a square fight and take their defeat philosophically.

As the result of a real estate deal between R.H.Kidd of this place and Harvey Lesure of Clallam Bay, these two families have changed locations. Mr. Lesure and family are now comfortably settled in their recently acquired property on the reserve—the Kidd residence, which they are improving and beautifying. A number of the ranchers living in the Blue Mountain district report having given options on their timber at the rate of $1.25 per thousand feet, the options running till the 10th of March. There is sufficient timber, as yet untouched, in that vicinity to make a very good logging proposition, if it can all be secured by one company. The options include the timber only, not the land. As nothing is known concerning the purchasers, it is believed the Milwaukee is behind the move.

While in the far east the country has been in the iron grasp of winter during the past week, the "recreative hand of spring" is already evident in this part of Uncle Sam's domain. The lawns are fresh and green, buds are about bursting into leaf and tender blossoms are peeping slyly above the surface of the ground. As far south as Pittsburg cars running out of the city on last Sunday were stalled in twelve feet of snow, many of the passengers spending the day in the cars, and churches in neighboring communities abandoned any attempt to hold services. As one writer puts it: "No wonder the sight of green lawns falls soothingly upon the eyes of visitors from less favored parts of the 'continent to which we belong', but from which in many agreeable respects we are far apart."

Although the high schools in the larger cities of Washington have for some time been teaching manual training and domestic science, the studies have not been adopted by the state board of education, but at the meeting on February 21 the matter will be taken up says the P. I. The new suggestive course, which has just been issued from the office of H. B. Dewey, state superintendent of public instruction, proposes a new course with English running through the four years, algebra and geometry for the boys for three years, and physics in the fourth year. For the girls and boys there will be freehand drawing the first year and for the next three years for the girls, while the boy will get mechanical drawing and shop work after the first year. The last three years the girls take domestic science.

Paul was debtor both to the Greeks Paul was "debtor both to the Greeks and to the barbarians," not because of what they had done for him, but because of what God had done for him. God's mercy bestowed makes us debtors to all. Does Not Color Hair

Ayer's Hair Vigor, as now made from our new improved formula, does not stain or color the hair even to the slightest degree. Gray hair, white hair, blonde hair is not made a shade darker. But it certainly does stop falling hair. No question about that.

Does not change the color of the hair.

Ayer's — Formula with each bottle. Show it to your doctor. Ask him about it, then do as he says

Indeed, we believe it will stop every case of falling hair unless there is some very unusual complication, something greatly affecting the general health. Then you should consult your physician. Also ask him about the new Ayer's Hair Vigor.

"Cascarets are certainly fine. I gave a friend one when the doctor was treating him for cancer of the stomach. The next morning he passed four pieces of a tape worm. I use them myself and find them beneficial for most any disease caused by impure blood." Chas. E. Condon, Lewiston, Pa., (Mifflin Co.)

Not Altogether a Treat.

Coming out of one of the large department stores two well dressed women saw a group of street urchins gazing at their automobile and one little girl was heard to say: "Wish I could have a ride in it." The women smiled and then the child was asked if she would really like a ride and was helped into the machine after assuring the women that she would not be missed at home. Her companions set up a cheer as the machine started and it returned half an hour later, bring back the little girl. The women congratulated themselves on having given the little one an extraordinary treat, but were disenchanted when she told them that her father was a chauffeur and that she liked his machine "a great deal better."—New York Tribune

Those who are fortunate enough to secure appointments will benefit in ways quite as important as the money they will earn. They will be brought into personal contact with all classes and conditions of people, and will acquire first-hand knowledge of wages, nationalities, population, and scores of other matters never so well learned from books. If the enumerators are carefully selected, the government also will benefit.

Mrs. L. Campbell, the organizer for the Good Templars, from Seattle, was around Sequim inviting every body to come and get a good lodge started. Thirteen joined and a good many have promised to come in later. Let the good movement go on until every man, woman, and child will take the pledge to never touch, taste, or handle any intoxicants.

W. B Potter and family have moved back to Sequim from Port Townsend; Sequim is good enough for him.

Addie Combs Sindars died very suddenly at her home in Happy Valley, Sequim, Washington, Feo. 11, 1910, of heart failure. She was born in Sun Prairie, Wisconsin, on Nov. 29, 1869, and came to Washington in 1893 where she was married to Otto A. Sindars, April 3, 1896. Four children were born to them, three are living, Harry, Marian and a little babe two weeks old. She leaves, besides her husband and children, an aged mother, four sisters and three brothers to mourn her loss. Funeral services were held in the M. E. church Sunday, Feb. 13, the Rev. Davis officiated. Interment was made in the Sequim cemetery. She will be sadly missed in her home by her mother, sisters and brothers but more sadly will she be missed by her husband and little ones. She was a faithful wife, a kind and affectionate mother and very much respected by all who had the good luck to know her.

Jesus, while our hearts are bleeding
O'er the spoils that death has won,
We would at this solemn meeting
Calmly say: Thy will be done.
Though cast down, we'er not forsaken,
Though afflicted, not alone.
Thou didst give and Thou hast taken,
Blessed Lord Thy will be done

The days may seem weary and cheerless and sad,
With all to make dreary and nought to make glad,
This message I bear,
Ring out sweet and clear,
Your Saviour is with you and she is with him.
And so she is with us each day and each hour,
To strengthen and comfort with wonderful power.
O sad heart take cheer,
Your dear one's as near
As the Saviour to you and she is with him. Rose Hargrave.
