RECEIVED THEIR DIPLOMAS

Twelve Pupils are Graduated from the High. Parents and Friends Fairly Pack the Opera House.

The tenth of June dawned bright and early and the sun in all its beauty shone down upon land and sea, givng to the former an air of quiet summer and to the latter, as one turned toward it, a sense of rest and beauty. As day gave place to evening, the sense of rest and quiet deepened and formed a fitting setting, indeed, for the sweet and solemn exercises of the Commencement. How truly the class motto, Nur Anfang, which, in the class colors of red and white, decorated the front of the stage on that evening, expressed to these young people the thought that they are "Only Beginning."

On either side of the front of the stage great masses of Scotch broom hid the walls and in the rear a lattice work, again in red and white, formed a dainty background for the graduating class, who, as they filed in, preceded by Rev. Smith and School Directors Beam and Stakemiller, presented an attractive appearance, and when seated formed two rows across the cente of the back of the stage. To the left front in all their dignity sat the faculty, Professors Geisness and Peterson and Misses Heyes and Chambers. The front of the stage was banked high with beautiful flowers for the different members of the "Class of 1910."

At the first note of the piano solo by Miss Stakemiller, the crowded house sat silent, and, when Rev Smith of the Congregational Church, with a few solemn words invoked the Divine blessing, the audience was stirred to its depths.

As the clear sweet voice of Jennie McLeod told of the intellectual progress of the human race, we were carried back to a remote period when man was but a trifle higher than the animal, and on and on until finally he has reached the stage of cultivation and intelligence of today. Miss McLeod dwelt on the importance of placing high grade literature before our rising generations and of its importance in the degree of intellectual progress.

The class history, as told by Lorena Fulmer, dwelt with a period in the high school life from four years ago when nineteen little "Freshies" entered the school. With quiet humor she related some of the pranks and class jokes of which they were fond of indulging in.

Alyce Finch, in dealing with "Our Public Schools," traced our growth along this line and in comparing these, our schools in the great northwest, likened Pullman college and the University of Washington to the schools of the east and aptly spoke of Whitman as the "Yale of the West."

Modern astronomy, well and strongly handled by Olive Laufeldt, was described and awakened deep interest. As a subject usually ascribed to be handled by men, Miss Laufeldt showed that in still another thing, the former may be outgeneraled.

The last will and testament of the Class of 1910, as read by Robert Gould with clear force and easy grace, bequeathed to various classes, Junior, Sophomore and Freshman and grave Seniers, their dignity acquired in high school, their seats with which associations were so dear, and, said Mr. Gould, perhaps in some dark corner some lucky fellow might find a chunk of "spearimeut." The spade of previous classes was again presented and gracefully received by Miss Margaret Fitzgerald in behalf of the Junior class. The high school, also, was presented with a picture of the class, the largest yet graduated from the Port Angeles High School.

Miss Ethel Welch, the talented young singer, rendered in her usual sweet way "Spring Song" by Mendelssohn.

"Our Great Northwest," as dwelt with by Grace Babcock, showed that we are advancing rapidly and told of the many opportunities and undevel-

A PROMINET PHYSICIAN'S DIAGNOSIS

The Saloon Puts Out of Business Four Times As Many As It Gives Work To.

There is a very strong trait in some men which allows them to make and sell for gain a narcotic poison that is the cause of more than one-half of the domestic trouble, of the crime, and of a large percent of the sickness and death. It is stranger still that the immensely larger majority, over 99 per cent, will permit an insignificant minority to deliberately work this enormous damage.

In the wet and dry move in Chicago the cry was that 50,000 men would be thrown out of work if the 7,000 saloons are closed. The other side of the question is that over a million people are yearly disabled from work because of this saloon business. Which is better, for a smaller number of men to lose their positions, simply by closing an outlawed business, or for that business to continue and a larger number of men be forced to lose their positions through crime, sickness, insanity and other calamities, caused by that business, by selling that poison?

It is estimated that there are 3,000,000 hard drinkers in this country. We will be very lenient and say that there are only 1,000,000. What about a senseless and useless business that throws 1,000,000 people out of employment by disabling them?

Out of 149,691 prisoners in 1900 the records show that 23 per cent —over 34,000—were drunk when arrested. How much sickness and trouble come from drink? No one knows. How many are disabled from work? It is impossible to say. But here are some figures which anyone can verify:

One million sick of tuberculosis (estimated); 90,000 die anually of tuberculosis; 1,000,000 hard drinkers, which represents one-third of the estimated number; 40,000 epiletics; 74,000 imprisoned for crime; 40,000 paupers; 36,000 insane; total 2,280,000.

Here are 2,280,000 which represents the average number annually who lose their jobs, their health, their morals, their lives. And this is only a very small part of the wrong that is laid up against alcohol. It represents the loss of wages of only a part of the drinkers who have been disabled through drinking this narcotic poison. It can easily be demonstrated that workmen of all kinds who drink three or four glasses of beer daily produce at least 10 per cent less work than they can produce when they do not drink. What is there in this alcohol business that should make it deserve special privilege in this work of destructive poisoning? What is it that justifies putting this number out of commission and making them a burden and cost upon the state? Is there enough pleasure or good in it to offset the cost of maintaining even these 200,000 at $200,000 a day, to say absolutely nothing about the worry and pain and suffering to families, friends and victims.

Probably the saloon keeper is ready to argue that he is philanthropic and that he wants to pay a large part of the costs of running the government, which in 1903 amounted to $506,396,674. He is probably not willing to acknowledge that if two billions of gallons of alcoholics were not yearly drunk, the cost of maintaining the machinery of the law and state necessary for the crop of mental, moral and physical degenerates that his business makes, the state would not be put to such enormous expense. From an economical standpoint he costs the state and society immensely more than he pays in licenses and taxes. As a rule one-half of all arrests made are for drunkeness. In 1898 in Suffolk county, Boston, the net expenses for arresting and maintaining drunks was $316,012—only a part of the actual cost and damage. Other cities are under similar expense.

Minor Happenings of the Week

Former Congressman J. Adam Bede of Minnesota has decided to become a candidate for the Minnesota state legislature.

Rev. E. H. Todd of Grace M. E. Church, Seattle, has been elected president of Willamette university at Salem, Ore.

Mrs. Alice Potter of Elgin, Ill., has entered her name in the contest for $25,000 for the first aeroplane flight from New York to Chicago.

The sale of the Beatson Bonanza copper mine to the Guggenheims for $1,000,000 cash and $2,000,000 stock in a $5,000,000 company has been confirmed.

The wrecked steamer Yucatan, her afterpart gutted to a shell, has been placed in the Esquimalt dry dock. Her salvage has cost $35,000 and repairs will total $125,000.

Prof. Oscar Bolsea has been granted a life vacation on full salary by the University of Chicago, the first such honor ever given by the school. He will spend the rest of his life in Germany.

By imperial decree the study of English has been made compulsory in all provincial scientific and technical high schools in Chica, according to a dispatch received at New York. English is to be the official language.

Formal charges against Senator William Lorimer, of Illinois, are before the United States senate, awaiting consideration. One was presented by Senator Cullom; the other by Clifford W. Barnes, of Chicago, president of the Illinois Legislative Voters' League.

The resignation of Maurice B. O'Connell, solicitor of the treasury department, has been accepted by President Taft. O'Connell was appointed in 1897, and has held his position longer than any man in the history of that division of the treasury department.

TWO SUGAR TRUST OFFICIALS GUILTY

New York, June 13.—Charles R. Heike, the white-haired secretary of the American Sugar Refining Company, has been convicted on one count of an indictment charging conspiracy to defraud the government of customs duty on sugar.

Ernest W. Gerbracht, former superintendent of the Williamsburg (Brooklyn) refinery, was convicted on all six counts.

For James F. Bendernagel, former cashier of the refinery, the jury stood seven to five for acquittal. He will be tried again.

This ends the government's second attempt to imprison the group of men responsible for the vast underweighing frauds to which the so-called trust virtually has confessed by the restitution of more than $2,000,000 in duties. Heike is the highest official of the company upon whom blame has been fixed, and he now faces a possible sentence of two years in the federal penitentiary and a fine of $10,000. He is 65 years old, and broken in health and spirits. His counsel in summing up declared repeatedly that a prison term meant nothing less than death.

Convicted on all six counts, Gerbracht can be sentenced to twelve years in prison, with a maximum fine of $10,00. He is 63 years old.

HAY FAVORS RECALL; LIMIT DIRECT VOTE

Spokane, June 11.—In a letter to the state grange in session at Pullman Governor M. E. Hay declares:

"I am in favor of the recall over our public officials.

"Should the legislature pass a direct legislation bill, I shall certainly approve it.

"I am in favor of changing the constitution and nominating by direct vote only United States senators, congressmen, governor and lieutenant governor, state legislative and county tickets. The balance of state officials and the supreme court judges should be appointed by the governor."

Stevens Heads New Road.

Portland, Ore., June 13.—John F. Stevens has been elected president of the Pacific & Eastern Railroad company, a road which is being constructed eastward from Medford, Ore., toward a connection with the Oregon Trunk Line railroad in Central Oregon. Mr. Stevens is now the head of all the Hill railroads that are strictly Oregon properties.

New Viceroy of India Named.

London, June 13.—The appointment of Sir Charles Hardinge, permanent under secretary of state for foreign affairs, as viceroy of India in succession to the Earl of Minto, is officially announced.

Washington State News Items

C. A. Opperman, a Tacoma contractor, has begun work on a $10,000 high school at Oakville.

F. H. Winslow was elected president of the Association of Washington Pioneers at the annual meeting at Seattle.

Through the efforts of Senator Piles the appropriation for Mount Rainier National park will be increased $5,000, the increase to be applied to road construction.

At a joint meeting of the Commercial Club and Citizens' Club at Chehalis a plan was adopted for an 18-foot concrete roadway from Chehalis to Centralia, to cost $40,000.

Permits for $362,785 worth of repairs and building have been issued by the North Yakima city building inspector since the first of the year. Of this amount $124.400 was for repairs and $238,385 for new buildings.

Service by gasoline motor car carrying mail, express and passengers between Seattle and Fremont and points on the east shore of Lake Washington is planned for the near future by the traffic and operating departments of the Northern Pacific Railway Company.

Tacoma was chosen as its next convention city by the grand lodge of Odd Fellows in annual session at North Yakima. In addition to the grand lodge, the grand encampment, Rebekah assembly department council of the Patriarchs Militant and the Patriarchs Militant selected the same city as a matter of course.

ROOSEVELT PARTY HOMEWARD BOUND

London, June 11.—Theodore Roosevelt's visit to England just ended, though coinciding with the period of national mourning, and for that reason shorn of much splendor that would have accompanied it under happier circumstances, was one of the most noteworthy foreign visits paid to Great Britain in recent years.

No foreign ruler could have aroused more universal attention, received a warmer welcome or achieved a greater popularity among every class of society. It is true that his strictures on Egyptian affairs occasioned political resentment in some quarters, but he left no rancor behind, because he was regarded as a privileged guest, in whom no unworthy or unfriendly motive could be suspected, and the frankness of his utterances is taken as a measure of the strength of friendship binding the two nations.

The death of King Edward compelled the curtailment of public demonstrations and entertainments projected in Mr. Roosevelt's honor. Even so, he was unable to accept half the invitations showered upon him.

Mr. Roosevelt and party sailed for home on the Kaiserine Augusta Victoria, leaving Southampton yesterday.

REPORT SAYS IDITAROD RICHNESS WAS EXAGGERATED

Fairbanks, Alaska, June 11.—The steamer White Seal, which wintered in the Iditarod river, has arrived at Fairbanks, being the first boat from the new camp. She brought letters from miners, who say that the reports of the richness of the new diggings are exaggerated. Pay has been found in shallow ground on five creeks, but only in spots.

According to the letters, the spring cleanup will amount to only $100,000, and the camp will never be large. However, a vast area of country remains to be prospected.

The fleet of steamers which went to the Innoko and Iditarod last fall, during the first stampede, and which were frozen in and obliged to pass the winter in the ice of the small rivers, have started to return to Fairbanks. The steamers have not been heard from since June 1, and are now five days overdue at Kaltag, on the Yukon.

It is feared that the channel of the Iditarod has been blocked by the stranding of a barge, and that the outbound steamers may be detained throughout the season.

REPORT SAYS HARDWOOD FAMINE IS IMMINENT

Louisville, Ky., June 11.—A hardwood famine, as the result of the reckless waste of timber by lumbermen in the United States, is predicted in the report of J. H. Stimson, of Indiana, submitted to the National Hardwood Lumber Association, in annual session here.

His report suggested reforestation and exemption from taxation of holdings of standing hardwood timber as remedies. The report has not been acted on.

The ever recurrent question of a uniform system of inspection and grading of lumber apparently stands some chance of being settled at this meeting.

Arrange for Rifle Range.

Walla Walla, June 11.—Arrangements have been made for the militia company to use the United States rifle range at Toll Gate, as none could be secured nearer the city. Militiamen will be conveyed to the range in autos at the expense of the state, and after shooting, Sunday, will be brought back.

POSTAL SAVINGS BILL PASSED

HOUSE GIVES GREAT MAJORITY FOR ANOTHER ADMINISTRATION MEASURE.

No Republicans Vote With Minority on Final Passage—Money Accumulated to Be Deposited in Banks and Will Draw Interest at Rate of 2½ Per Cent—Government Bonds in Small Denominations.

Washington, D. C., June 11.—By the overwhelming majority of 195 to 101, the house passed the postal savings bill, as recently agreed upon by the Republican caucus of the house. Not a single Republican voted against the measure on the final roll call.

Prior to this action the house, by 113 to 196, rejected the Democratic substitute for the bill proposed by the majority.

The vote upon the several motions involved in the disposition of the measure followed six hours of debate, in which many Republicans and Democrats recorded their views upon the bill of the majority and the substitute supported by a large portion of the minority.

Democrats Disagree.

The large defection among the Democrats was shown when the Democratic senate bill was voted upon, twenty-one of them joining the Republicans in voting against the measure.

Most of these were opposed to a postal savings bank system of any kind.

Terms of Bill.

Under the terms of the bill a board of trustees is created, consisting of the postmaster general, the secretary of the treasury and the attorney general, who shall declare what postoffices shall become postal savings banks.

Deposits in these banks made by any one person shall not be more than $100 a month or exceed a total of $500. The account may be opened with $1, but stamps of 10 cents each will be issued for those desiring to accumulate money to be deposited. On deposits 2 per cent interest is to be paid.

Bonds for Public.

Any depositor so desiring can exchange his deposits for government bonds to be issued in denominations of $20, $40, $60, $80, $100 or $500, to bear interest at 2½ per cent.

The money accumulated in the postal savings bank is to be deposited in both national and state banks in the vicinity of postoffices in which the money is deposited by the people, such banks to pay 2¼ per cent interest.

Five per cent of the total deposits is to be retained by the secretary of the treasury as a cash reserve.

Not more than 30 per cent of these deposits may be withdrawn by the government at any one time for investment in bonds of the United States, the remaining 65 per cent to remain on deposit in the banks.

Banks Must Secure Funds.

The banks are required to give as security for the deposits they receive "public bonds or other security supported by the taxing power," which restricts the securities to some form of national, state, municipal or other such bonds approved by the board of trustees in charge of the postal savings banks.

The bill passed by the house as a substitute for the senate bill differs from the senate measure in many particulars, chiefly in respect of the nature of securities that may be given by banks for deposits of postal savings funds.

In addition to the government, state and municipal bonds, various other classes of securities, such as mortgages, etc., may be received.

MIKADO RECALLS PRINCE ON URGENT BUSINESS

Boston, June 13.—Prince and Princess Fushimi of Japan have received important dispatches from home and announced that they must cut short their visit in this country. Tuesday they will leave direct for Seattle. Trips to Niagara Falls and Chicago will be canceled. The nature of the dispatches that call the price home was not disclosed.

Liquor Test Case Thrown Out.

Olympia, June 11.—Attempt to test whether or not druggists must pay $25 annual state liquor license failed when the supreme court threw out the test case on technicalities without in any way passing on the constitutionality of the statute. This was in the petition of J. R. Putnam, of Seattle, for habeas corpus following his arrest for selling liquor at his drug store without a license.

Two Fly 106 Miles.

Paris, June 11.—The first cross country military flight was made Thursday by Capt. Harconet and Lieut. Fuquant. They flew from Chalons to Vincennes, a distance of 106 miles, in 2½ hours.

No Peruvian War.

Lima, Peru, June 13.—The government is disbanding the volunteers in the infantry, cavalry and artillery. One of the mediating ministers stated that war between Peru and Ecuador was impossible.

OFFICIAL WELCOMERS OF ROOSEVELT TO BE MANY

New York June 13.—Secretary Cosby of the Roosevelt reception committee, estimates that between 15,000 and 20,000 persons will be in the official line along Fifth avenue next Saturday afternoon during the parade in honor of Roosevelt's return.

R. A. C. Smith, chairman of the harbor display committee, places the estimate of boats at something over a hundred.

Many of the organizations will be in uniform, and nearly all will have bands. To each organization comprising more than 100 persons a block has been assigned on Fifth avenue. They will not march, but will stand in their places as Col. Roosevelt, the Rough Riders and other Spanish war veterans go past.

The Hamilton Club of Chicago will send 100 members, who will go down the bay on the steamship Commodore and later have a stand on Fifth avenue. The Pittsburg Business Men's Association will send 500. Omaha will send a delegation, and Philadelphia, Cincinnati and other cities will be represented.

The Army and Navy Union asked for a place for between 200 and 300; the Spanish war veterans, who are to march, will turn out about 2,000, and the Roosevelt Neighbors' Association of Oyster Bay, with a delegation from the Nassau county board of supervisors will have 600 men.

Representatives of governors will be given positions on the stand at the Battery, as will the governors who are present. They will also go down the bay on one of the cutters to greet the former president. Secretary Wilson and Secretary Meyer have been assigned positions on the stand and will also go down the bay.

Among the gubernatorial representatives will be F. E. Godell, of Spokane, who will represent Gov. Hay of Washington.

VICE PRESIDENT SAYS INSURGENCY IS DYING

Utica, N. Y., June 13.—"I believe the insurgent movement, so-called, is subsiding," said Vice President Sherman, who came to Utica Saturday to attend the wedding of his niece.

"We do not notice the change so much in Washington, where the insurgents are still insurging, despite assertions that they are standing by the president, but from my observations on my recent Western trip, I am convinced the movement is on the wane.

"I rather expected to find in Wisconsin a predominant feeling of insurgency, because most of the Republican representatives from Wisconsin in congress have been prominent in that movement.

"I have twice before within a few weeks been in the Middle West and I have found the sentiment to be decidedly in favor of a continuance of the protective policy. The outcome in Iowa where the primaries were held Tuesday and where the regulars were successful in every district in the state where there was a contest, save one—successful in choosing a state committee the majority of whom were regulars—was strongly indicative of continued belief in Republican policies.

BIG MUNICIPAL DOCK FOR SEATTLE IS PLAN

Seattle, June 13.—For the purpose of constructing and operating a municipal dock at which ocean-going vessels of any size may receive and discharge freight without delay at a minimum charge, C. B. Lamont, of the Moran Company, will ask members of the city council at the meeting next Monday night to arrange for preliminary plans for a dock of large proportions, operating freight carriers of the latest modern pattern.

Congressman W. E. Humphrey, through correspondence with local vessel owners and shippers, has given his emphatic approval to the plan, and declares that he will aid in any manner within his power. "I regard this project," he said in a letter to Mr. Lamont, "as an absolute necessity, if Seattle is not to be handicapped in her race for commercial supremacy of the Pacific. San Francisco and New Orleans have already found such steps necessary, and Seattle cannot afford to neglect the opportunity."

JAPAN TO RENOUNCE AMERICAN TREATY

Washington, June 13.—The Japanese government, according to the present program, on Friday will renounce the existing treaty with the United States.

The act of the Japanese is no mark of hostility, but is part of an effort by that government to revise and bring up to date its whole fabric of foreign treaties.

The present treaty was negotiated by Secretary Gresham in the last Cleveland administration. Before that time the status of Japan in its world relations had been that of a semi-barbarous country.

Western Union Indicted.

Washington, June 11.—The federal grand jury returned indictments against the Western Union Telegraph Company on forty-two charges of having violated the federal laws against bucket shops on March 1. The wire service of the Western Union is alleged to have supplied data to the offices of Edward Altemus and Lewis Cella, who are alleged to have operated as standard stock and grain dealers in the District of Columbia and other cities.

END OF SESSION IN SIGHT

MEMBERS OF CONGRESS NOW FIGURING ON TIME OF ADJOURNMENT.

With Agreement on Railroad Measure in Sight Other Matters Are Expected to Be Quickly Dispatched—Probable Disposition of Other Important Matters.

Washington, June 13.—Conferees of the administration railroad bill were in session over six hours Sunday. The progress made indicates they probably will report by Wednesday. In the tentative draft, the only questions remaining in serious dispute are those relating to long and short hauls and the period increases in rates should be suspended to give the interstate commerce commission time to pass upon them.

With an agreement on the railroad bill in sight, members of congress are beginning to figure on adjournment. Few members expect the session to last longer than June 30, and not a few have put their guesses as early as June 25.

Few other matters of legislation are expected to consume much time.

A canvass of the senate indicated a decided sentiment in favor of adopting the house amendments to the postal savings bill. This course would avoid a conference. The sundry civil bill probably will be passed by the senate today.

The bill to authorize the president to withdraw public lands for conservation purposes is the only conservation measure slated to go through this session.

To that will be added, it is expected, the bill that has already passed the senate to issue certificates of indebtedness to the amount of $30,000,000 to complete reclamation projects.

The opposition to the conversation bill, based upon the statement by former Forester Pinchot, that it would authorize the filing of mineral claims on certain water power sites, known to be underlaid with minerals, apparently has not been generally accepted as a serious criticism. Advocates of the bill assert few water power sites would be affected, and in those cases it would be necessary for the claimant to prove the tract more valuable for minerals than for development of power.

No decision has been reached on statehood legislation, but is the impression that nothing will be done at this session. Even if the bill reported from the senate committee on territories should pass, it differs so from the house bill there would be slight chance for agreement in conference.

The railroad bill, therefore, appears to be the key to the adjournment situation, just as it has been for nearly four months.

14,000 SQUARE MILES IN CANADIAN RESERVE

An area of 14,000 square miles on the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains and extending from the United States boundary to the fifty-fourth parallel of latitude, has been set aside as a reserve by the Canadian government, according to a Victoria, B. C., dispatch. Across the border from this immense tract in the Glacier National Park, reserved by the United States government, and consisting of 14,000 square miles of wild land. Thus, in the heart of the American continent there is now a section of 28,400 square miles which, for all time, will be closed to settlement and exploitation in the usual manner.

The area reserved by the Dominion government equals two-thirds of Nova Scotia and more than seven-eighths of Vancouver Island. The most northerly boundary of the reserve is between forty and fifty miles north of the latitude of Edmonton and about 100 miles northwest of Yellow Head Pass. The western boundary is between Alberta and British Columbia. The width of the strip set aside varies from ten to thirty miles between the international border and the latitude of Calgary, and from there north widens to from thirty to fifty miles.

It is not the intention to withdraw the resources of this area from use. The building materials, under certain specified restrictions, will not only be allowed but will be encouraged. For hunting and trapping it will be necessary to have permits.

Half Million for Farm Machinery.

Walla Walla, June 11.—Local dealers report that orders aggregating a half million dollars have been placed with them for farm machinery this summer. Over 125 harvesters and 250 combines have been contracted for and are being delivered as rapidly as possible. This beats all previous seasons. Harvest here will commence in less than a month.

Board Appoints Dental Examiner.

Olympia, June 11.—The state board of control has created the position of state dental examiner and it confirmed the selection of Dr. L. E. Gilroy, of Seattle, which was made by the state dental board, for the office. Dr. Gilroy will assume his duties of office immediately and will first examine the teeth of the children in the state training school at Chehalis. He will then visit the other state instituuions.

FRUIT CROP PROSPECTS GOOD ON BOTH COASTS

The splendid prospects for fruit in New England and the Pacific Coast states almost counterbalances the poor showing of the Central states, where early frost got in telling work, according to a report made public by the department of agriculture on general crop growth. The condition of the apple crop is reported to be more than eight points below last year or 53.0, as compared with a normal condition. The ten-year average for apples is 69.8. In New England and on the Pacific Coast, the crop promises to be immense, but in such big apple states as Ohio and Missouri there will be only about one-third of a crop.

On the other hand, the peach crop, due to the excellent prospects in such states as Georgia and Delaware, promises to be larger than last year, the condition on June 1 being 62.0, as compared with 54.1 last year, and a ten-year average of 65.0. The Central states will produce a poor crop, it appears now.

Frost evidently nipped the briar blossoms, for the condition of blackberries was estimated at 80.0, as compared with 90.0 last year and for the last four years.

Raspberries were estimated at 79.2, as compared with 88.4 last year and 82.1 the four years' average.

The watermelon and the cantaloupe crops will be slightly off, it appears, as the former were estimated at 70.4, as compared with 81.5 a year ago, and the latter 77.8 as compared with 81.8 a year ago.

Sugar cane was reported at 84.7, as compared with 90.6, and sugar beets at 90.5, as compared with 89.0.

RAILROADS TRYING TO OBEY THE LAWS

Olympia, June 11.—According to A. W. Perley, inspector of track and safety appliances in the state, who arrived in the city from Eastern Washington, the railroads of the state are making an effort to comply with the laws. Mr. Perley has spent some time in going over roads on the east side of the mountains and states that he found conditions better than he had anticipated. Since the state assumed control of the inspection of the railroads in the state, numerous betterments have been made and many new safeguards for the protection of the traveling public have been raised. Mr. Perley will spend some time in making inspections in Western Washington.

START BIG MOVEMENT TO PURIFY POLITICS

Washington, June 13.—The first concerted step toward suppressing graft in all its forms throughout the country was taken here last week when the organization whose future name probably will be the National Anti-Graft movement, will open offices here. Harry W. Walker will be in charge.

The movement is the direct result of an anti-graft speech made last week by former Governor Folk, of Missouri, at a banquet tendered him by the Missouri Democracy.

Among those said to be identified with the movement are Perry Belmont, Rudolph Spreckels, Augustus Thomas, the playwright; Joseph G. Willett, of Alabama and Norman Hapgood.

ROOSEVELT WILL NOT MAKE KEYNOTE SPEECH

London, June 11.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt will not deliver the "keynote" speech at the opening of the congressional campaign. He authorized the United Press today to deny that he has accepted an invitation to deliver such a speech at the annual convention of the Republican clubs, which will be held in New York in July. He further asked the United Press to deny the story that he had planned a political speaking tour which would include cities as far west as the Rocky mountains.

Roosevelt has made no plans for delivering political speeches. No such plans will be made until after he has returned to Oyster Bay.

PREDICTS ABOLITION OF MANCHU DYNASTY

Walla Walla, June 11.—"The Manchu dynasty in China must go," declares Marion Keees, American missionary here visiting old friends for a short time. Mr. Kees had just returned from Canton, where he saw a number of street riots and could get a good idea of the situation.

"People in China generally recognize this fact," he said. "They have been looking for the storm to break for some time. A revolution in the Flowery Kingdom is impending. It may come soon, but that it will come within a few years is certain. The present trouble may be put down, but the young Chinese will finally win out and throw off the yoke of the foreign Manchus who have sucked the life blood of the nation for hundreds of years."

Canada Wants Treaty.

Washington, June 11.—The Canadian government has indicated to the secretary of state its desire to take up as early as possible the subject of the negotiation of a trade treaty with the United States. Formal action may be delayed until autumn because of the anticipated absence of Finance Minister Fielding and Customs Minister Patterson.

GRANGERS FAVOR CO-OPERATION

STATE MEETING ENDORSES FARMERS' UNION METHOD OF DOING BUSINESS.

Prediction That Consolidation of Two Great Farmers' Organizations May Be Brought About—Tri-State Farmers' Union Convention at Coeur d'Alene Adopts Resolutions.

Pullman, Wash., June 13.—What is regarded by members as the most important action taken by the State Grange in its convention, was the adoption of resolutions favoring "statewide and nation-wide co-operation" in buying farm supplies and selling farm products, to the end that the middleman and his profits may be entirely eliminated.

This resolution was adopted after much discussion by a vote practically unanimous. This means that the grange will follow the example of the farmers' union and build, buy or lease grain warehouses and handle the grain of its members, selling direct to exporters, millers and consumers. It means that the grange members will buy their farm machinery, twine, sacks, coal, wood, posts and other supplies at wholesale and in carload lots, cutting out the profits of the middleman in that line, too. The action is regarded as an important step, following as it does, the success of the farmers' union in these lines, and will revolutionize the methods of handling grain. Some profess to foresee the union of the two great farmers' organizations as a result of this movement.

In Snohomish Next Year.

Snohomish was selected as the place for holding the next state convention, the second Tuesday in June, 1911.

J. C. Farr of Pullman was re-elected executive committeeman for three years. Mrs. B. B. Lord, past lecturer of the New York State Grange, who has been in grange work for more than 25 years, addressed the convention this evening.

The fire association of the State Grange, which has been in existence since 1893, was found to be in excellent condition, with more than $3,350,000 insurance held by members. This is a co-operative insurance association, confined strictly to members of the grange. Losses of more than $2,000 have been paid this year, and claims for $1,300 were allowed at this meeting. The question of action to be taken on good roads will be taken up for a vote tomorrow. The grange will finish its work tomorrow evening.

Mrs. Mary Arkwright Hutton of Spokane came down with her automobile covered with banners calling for "Votes for Women," but she was not given an opportunity to speak. Three factions of the women suffrage movement wanted to address the grange but all were denied, but R. B. Martin of Spokane, a leader in the fight for equal suffrage and township organization, and a member of the grange, addressed the convention at length and when put to a vote every man and woman delegate voted in favor of equal suffrage. The delegates were not content with a "viva voce" vote, but insisted upon standing and having the vote recorded as unanimous. This brought forth much enthusiasm and good feeling. The votes on referendum and the initiative were carried by the same method and unanimously.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED AT FARMERS' UNION MEETING

After electing officers and adopting resolutions prepared by its committee, the tri-state convention of the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union at Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, has adjourned.

The only contest in the election of officers was for the presidency, in which L. C. Crow of Palouse, Wash., the present head of the union, defeated N. B. Atkins, 94 to 40. Other officers are: Riley Rice of Cottonwood, Idaho, vice president; A. D. Crow of St. Andrews, Wash., secretary-treasurer; Robert Brumley of Pullman, Wash., chaplain; G. L. Reid of Spangle, Wash., state organizer; W. D. Wallace, conductor, and A. P. Hill, doorkeeper. P. W. Cox was elected delegate to the national convention. The executive committee is P. W. Cox, W. B. Davis, H. J. Herman and W. C. Cotton.

The meeting place of the tri-state convention next year was not settled. The residents of Coeur d'Alene are making strong effort to have the farmers come back here and it is more than possible that Coeur d'Alene will be given the meeting next year as a central point and easily accessible. It was decided to hold the convention earlier next year, probably the first week in May. The resolutions adopted at the final session were:

Oppose Present Bonding System.

"Resolved, That we wish to put ourselves on record as opposed to the present bonding system and recognize in it a scheme to perpetuate the national debt.

"Resolved, That we demand legislation to prohibit gambling in futures.

"Resolved, That we demand conservation of our national resources.

"Resolved, That we demand the election of the president and United States senators by direct vote of the people.

"Resolved, That we resent the action of the state railroad commission in making the appointment of grain inspector without consulting us as interested parties, and we condemn the practice of appointing as deputies the agents of the corporations that have so unmercifully exploited us in the past; and we demand that this position be filled by a man from our own ranks.

"Resolved, That we indorse the issue of direct legislation; and we recommend that our members, as individuals and citizens, unite and co-operate with the Washington Direct Legislation League in securing the same.

"Resolved, That we demand the submission to a vote of the people an amendment to the constitution providing for state-wide prohibition of the liquor traffic.

Indorse Woman Suffrage.

"Resolved, That we indorse the issue of universal suffrage and hail it as the dawn of universal justice.

"Resolved, That we favor township organizations and believe that the same will solve the question of good roads.

"Resolved, That we condemn the present road and state aid road law as wrong in theory and woefully wanting in practice and demand the repeal of same at the next legislative session.

"Whereas, The farmers of the jurisdiction are, to a very great extent, the depositors in the banks of the Northwest, and, whereas, the rate of interest is generally excessive and a discrimination made against the farmers; therefore, be it

"Resolved, (1) That each local make a persistent effort to lower the rate on local bank loans to 8 per cent. (2) That we refuse to patronize such banks as discriminate against the farmers in the matter of interest.

For Co-operative Buying.

"Resolved, That we recommend that each local in the jurisdiction prepare a statement of products for sale and supplies to be purchased and file the same with the state secretary, and that from these statements the secretary compile and send to each local the information thus collected upon application.

"Resolved, That in organizing Farmers' Union stock companies we recommend that no shares be sold to persons who are not members of the union in good standing.

"Resolved, That we recommend that a standing legislative committee be appointed or elected, consisting of one member in each county within the jurisdiction of this union for the general purpose of promoting such legislation as may be demanded by our organization."

HYBRID EXPERIMENTS AT PUYALLUP STATION

Puyallup, June 13.—One of the most interesting and productive experiments now being conducted at the Western Washington experiment station is the growth of hybrid seeds. Superintendent W. H. Lawrence says there are 800 hybrid berry sprouts planted in the hot house and in outdoor frames. There are also several experiments in corn hybrids in progress that may develop new species of corn especially successful in the Puyallup valley.

The berry hybrids are in different stages of advancement. Some are not yet out of the ground, while others are well started toward bushes. Mr. Lawrence says the sprouts may grow into loganberries or blackberries or into red raspberries. It will be two years before some of those now well along will mature, although they may give some fruit in a year. The 800 seedlings planted represent 89 different crosses. There are some plants grown to a height of several feet in the hot house that have three or four kinds of berries on one branch. This difference is produced by dropping the pollen from one kind upon the blossom of another.

Christian Westergaard, the soil expert, was recently at the Anderson farm, near Renton, where co-operative experiments in legumes are being carried out. Legumes is the name of all vegetables coming in the pod class, such as peas, beans, vetches, etc. The legumes are used on the new land to introduce nitrogen or nitrate materials into the soil. On the roots of the plants are carried little nodules whose function is to extract nitrogen from the air and put it into the soil. This is but one phase of the experiment, as it is also to be determined which plants are the most successful to cultivate and under what conditions. The value of the experiment station to the valley farmers is becoming more apparent each year.

Tacoma Stadium Dedicated.

Tacoma, June 11.—The dedication of the Tacoma high school stadium, completed at a cost of $135,000, raised by popular subscription, began Friday afternoon and continued through Saturday. Seven thousand school children took art in the exercises, which consisted of singing, calesthenics and athletics. The stadium has six and a half miles of seats, all of concrete, and 26,000 persons can be seated. In the great structure will be held the military tournament arranged for next month.

Venezuela to Settle.

Paris, June 13.—The foreign office has been officially advised of the appointment of Gen. M. A. Matos as foreign minister in President Gomez's cabinet in Venezuela. It is assumed that this means a complete change of policy, and an early settlement of Venezuela's differences with foreign powers.

FUTURE BRIGHT TO PINCHOT

EX-FORESTER COUNTS ON YOUNG MEN TO WAGE WAR ON "SPECIAL INTERESTS."

Monopoly, Says Speaker at Roosevelt Club Dinner, Rests on Unregulated Control of Resources—New Party Is Suggested—Publicity One Remedy—Morality Has Broken Into Politics.

St. Paul, June 13.—Ex-Forester Pinchot and ex-Secretary of the Interior James R. Garfield were guests of honor at a banquet given by the St. Paul Roosevelt Club at the Ryan Hotel. The decorations of the speakers' table consisted of miniature mountains, forests, water falls and roads, with a miniature train propelled by electricity whizzing past. Justice E. A. Jaggard, of the Minnesota supreme court, was toastmaster.

Introducing Judge Jaggard, President Halberg of the Roosevelt Club awakened the enthusiasm of the banqueters by a reference to an unnamed new party, "some of the leaders of which," he said, "were present."

New Party Suggested.

"The Roosevelt Club has consistently stood for the conservation of resources and against plunder and graft," he said.

"This country has lived on its capital, but has awakened to the fact that it will soon exhaust its natural resources by the inequitable distribution of its wealth in direct violation of the law of equal opportunity of its citizens. This condition has brought about the formation of a new party without name, but not without an issue nor without leaders.

"That party may be unnamed, but its leaders are Theodore Roosevelt and our honored guests, Gifford Pinchot and James R. Garfield."

Mr. Garfield talked on the "Ultimate Results of Conservation" and the set address was that by Mr. Pinchot, who spoke on "Our Natural Resources and How to Conserve Them."

"Special Interests" in Politics.

Pinchot said in opening that conservation had "captured the nation." "All monopoly," he added, "rests on the unregulated control of natural resources and natural advantages—and such control by the special interests is impossible without the help of politics. The alliance between business and politics is the most dangerous thing in our political life. It is the snake that we must kill. The special interests must get out of politics, or the American people will put them out of business. There is no third course."

Pinchot said that because the special interests were in politics the nation had lost confidence in congress. The tariff, meant originally to raise the rate of wages, had been made a tool to increase the cost of living, he said. He declared that the steel trust secured by a trick an indefensible increase in the tariff on steel; that the sugar trust stole from the government like a petty thief, while a dishonest schedule continued to protect it, that the cotton cloth schedule was increased in the face of testimony of the manufacturers that it ought to remain unchanged, and that "for a dozen years the demand of the nation for the pure food and drug bill was outweighed in congress by the interests which asserted their right to poison the people for a profit."

"The whole nation," said the speaker, "is in favor of protecting the coal and other natural resources of Alaska, yet they are still in grave danger of being absorbed by the special interests. And, as for the general conservation movement, congress not only refused to help it on, but tried to forbid any progress without its help. Fortunately for us all, in this attempt it has utterly failed."

Morality Has Its Day.

Pinchot said more about politics being for revenue only. While some of the men responsible for the union of business and politics were profoundly dishonest, more of them were not, he added. "They were trained in a wrong school," he said, "and cannot forget their training. Clay hardens by immobility—men's minds by standing pat. Both lose the power to take new impressions."

Pinchot said that there was little to choose between the two parties. He was optimistic, however. He added:

"Morality has broken into politics. Political leaders, trust-bred and trust-fed, find it harder and harder to conceal their actual character. The brass-bound collar of privilege has become plain upon their necks for all men to see. They are known for what they are, and their time is short. But when they come to be retired it will be of little use to replace an unfaithful public servant with the same collar around his neck. Above all, what we need in every office is free men representing a free people."

The speaker said it was a vast undertaking to drive the special interests out of politics. There were two remedies. The first was honesty in public men; the second, complete publicity. He concluded:

"The special interests must be put out of politics. I believe the young men will do it."

REGULARS CLAIM VICTORY; INSURGENTS DISPUTE IT

Des Moines, Ia., June 11.—With semi-official returns in from every county in the state, both the "progressives" and "stand-patters" are claiming control of the state convention August 3.

Frank D. Jackson declared that the "stand-patters" would have a majority of 150. The managers of Garst-Dolliver-Cummins scoff at the claim.

The convention will be made up of 1,383 delegates, and it will take 692 to control it.

Ex-Gov. Jackson, when asked if the "stand-patters" would pass resolutions condemning the senators and insurgent congressmen, replied:

"There is no disposition on our part to humble any one or to stir up any more trouble. I believe the convention will be satisfied to say nothing about Iowa and to confine its action to an indorsement of President Taft."

Carroll's majority will reach almost 4,000.

COLORADO LABOR LAW IS DECLARED INVALID

Denver, June 11.—The Colorado anti-coercion law, enacted twenty years ago, which provides that no employer shall discharge any employe because he belongs to a labor union or attends labor meetings, has been declared invalid by Judge Sullivan, of Mesa county. This law, regarded as the strongest in Colorado for the protection of labor unions, has never before been attacked.

The decision resulted from a suit brought by State Labor Commissioner Brake against McNeill Bros., operators of a coal mine at Cameo, near Palisades, who on April 26 discharged and evicted twenty-three men in their employ.

The suit was brought at Grand Junction under the coercion statute. Judge Sullivan decided that the coercion act was unconstitutional, but upheld the eight-hour law.

REPORTED THAT PRESIDENT BRYAN WILL RETIRE

State College, Pullman, June 11.—It is now known that President E. A. Bryan expects to retire from the State college on January 1, 1911. The information comes as an entire surprise. When asked to confirm the report, President Bryan refused to be quoted with either confirmation or denial. It is known, however, that for some time the president has been considering the advisability of retiring, and that he has at length decided to do so. Immediately upon his retirement the president expects to go abroad with his family for the dual purpose of giving Mrs. Bryan an opportunity to regain her health, and to continue in certain economic literary work in which he is interested.

To Issue Small Bills.

Washington, June 13.—The treasury department has taken steps to increase the supply of small bills.

Best Indian Pudding.

Put one pint sweet milk in double boiler on stove. Then take two tablespoonfuls corn meal, one-half cup molasses, a little salt, one-half teaspoonful cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful ginger. Mix these and add to milk; stir until it thickens; when cool add one beaten egg, one cup cold milk and one teaspoonful butter. Put into buttered dish and bake slowly one and one-half or two hours. Cover until last half hour.

There is much that millions can't buy. For instance, the wife of a millionaire for nine successive nights has suffered from insomnia. Sleep cannot be purchased, and yet it is the boon of the humblest working woman.

FASHION HINTS

The back view of this little dress is so attractive that it deserves a word all by itself.

The jackety tab at the waist, and the cute little knot of the girdle that crushes up to it, are very distinctive.

VALUE OF SOCIAL QUALITIES

Every Mother Should See That Her Daughter Possesses Them.

Thank goodness we are getting away from the idea that to be frivolous is wicked and nowadays up-to-date parents insist that their children shall face life with a laugh rather than a serious face and that they shall have accomplishments as well as virtues.

This question of accomplishments is a very important one in a world which is selfish and exacting and doesn't want to give without receiving in return, the Duluth News-Tribune says.

Who has not seen the wallflower girl, who, when others were entertaining the company, replied solemnly: "I have no parlor tricks," which trite saying veiled very thinly the fact that she was secretly envious of the cleverness of the others and wished she could unlimber and do something herself.

Now, whose fault is it—the girl's? No, indeed—her mother.

No doubt that estimable maternal relative was of the sort who believe it their "duty" to see that the child tells the truth, is neat, punctual and obedient. No frills was her motto, but a thorough drilling in the three Rs, and, as she often observed to her little girl, "handsome is as handsome does."

Well, that may have often been the case in her day, but just now we are thinking of a great deal of the veneer, it would seem.

It is very easy for a clever mother to cultivate social talents in her children. Most little ones show a leaning in some direction, and it is a matter of patience and tact to cultivate this. The main thing is to free the child from the dreaded curse of self-consciousness, which prevents so many women fro mmaking a success, no matter how gifted the yare.

Encourage the children to give little entertainments for the family in which each one does his part.

Never laugh at mistakes, but enter into the spirit of the children themselves. Home concerts are splendid things, wit hmother playing the piano and every one, eve nthe tiniest tot, joining in the singing.

Make the boys and girls feel they have no right to hide their gifts, but should give them unselfishly toward the entertainment of their relatives and friends. In this way you will bring to them the true spirit of social life, which is an even mixture of give and take.

A LAUGH ALL AROUND.

And, as Usual, Those Who Laughed Last Laughed Best.

"Common decency is cheap abroad," said the man who had just returned from his first trip to Europe. "During all the time I was on the continent I was subjected to discourtesy in but one instance, and I think I got away with it then, at that.

"We were crossing one of the Swiss passes by diligence, or coach, and stopped off for luncheon at some little town. It was hot, and I suppose I made rather a comical sight in my shirt sleeves and black glasses, with a handkerchief over my collar, as I stepped out of the vehicle to the road. I suppose, too, that the brand of French in which I tried to ask questions was pretty ragged.

"Anyway, a group of young Frenchmen waiting in a carriage while their team was changed saw in me their long lost original scream, and the way they laughed was convincing, if not flattering. They weren't backward about pointing out the real, racy bits in the picture either, and they only laughed harder when I glared at them mildly. Another American and I trudged off for lunch, and when we came back there was a bunch ready to take up the howl at me again. I looked at my compatriot and he at me. I don't think either of us put the idea in words, but we began.

"We began to laugh. We fell into each other's arms and laughed. We held each other up and laughed. We laughed till the tears rolled down our cheeks. We laughed till we couldn't stand. We rolled into our coach, still laughing, taking inspiration for each outburst from a glance at the Frenchmen.

Well, sir, that bunch of Frenchmen just wilted. First they closed their mouths; then they lost their grins; then each one began squinting at the other, trying to make out what was wrong. Before we'd been at it two minutes they all discovered they needed a drink and sneaked off to the little hotel. We laughed till we saw the last of them, and then we laughed at the way we had turned the trick."—Chicago Tribune.

An Unnecessary Adjunct.

Many of us have heard of the woman traveler who, while riding through the Yosemite, exclaimed, "Oh, I do love scenery; it adds so!" M. C. M. Simpson, in "Many Memories of Many People," instances an opposite case where the scenery was considered not only unneeded, but rather obtrusive. In speaking of Sir George Cornewall Lewis, the famous English statesman, the writer says:

Although greatly beloved, he had a very cold manner. He was a marked contrast to his enthusiastic wife, Lady Theresa, who once complained that a tree overshadowed a window of the drawing room of their country house, and interfered with the view. Said Lewis, calmly and rather contemptuously:

"Why can't you, when you come into the country, sit with your back to the window and read a book?"

Some smart men do not properly estimate the importance of politeness.

ANCIENTS SURPASSED US.

Many Secrets They Possessed Are Lost to Modern Times.

Many secrets the ancients possessed are lost to modern times and many things they did cannot be equaled today. Thousands of years ago the Egyptians used to embalm the bodies of their dead kings and nobility so perfectly that the bodies are in wonderful preservation to-day, as may be seen at the British museum. Clever as we are in this age, we cannot do the same. The valuable secret is lost, and modern science cannot recover the lost knowledge. Bodies embalmed nowadays will not be preserved for more than a few years at most; very many of the bodies of Egyptians embalmed before the birth of Christ are still so perfect that the lines of the faces are marked as clearly as when they were first embalmed.

Sheffield turns out the finest, hardest and most perfect steel the world produces, but Sheffield cannot produce a sword blade to compare with those the Saracens made and used hundreds of years ago, and the Saracens never possessed the machinery we have, nor had the advantage of knowing so much about metals as we are supposed to know. A huge fortune awaits the man who discovers the secret which enabled the Saracens to make sword blades so keen and hard that they would cut in two most of the swords used in our army to-day.

There are a dozen different methods of making artificial diamonds, but none of the stones produced by these methods can compare with those made of old French paste, the secret of which is lost. So perfect were paste diamonds that it was difficult for even a person with expert knowledge of diamonds to tell that they were artificially produced, whereas most of the modern artificial diamonds can be detected easily, and their durability is nothing like so great as the old paste diamond.

Probably not one out of every ten thousand buildings standing in all parts of the world and built by modern masons will be standing 500 years hence. We do not know how to put stones and bricks together as the ancients did, and consequently the building we raise nowadays will be in ruins when the ancient buildings in Greece and Italy, which were built thousands of years ago, are in as good condition as they are now. The secret is not in the bricks or stone, but in the cement and mortar, neither of which essentials can we make as the ancients made them.

Chemistry, one might imagine, is the science which has made the greatest strides in the last five or six decades. Yet modern chemists cannot compound such dyes as were commonly used when the great nations of today were still unborn. Now and again it happens that searchers after antiquities come across fragments of fabrics which were dyed thousands of years ago, and they are astonished by the wonderful richness of the colors of the cloths, which, despite their age, are brighter and purer than anything we can produce.

Modern artists buy their colors ready made and spend large sums of money on pigments with which to color their canvasses. The pictures of modern artists will be colorless when many of the works of ancient masters are as bright as they are to-day. Just as the secret of dyeing has been lost, so has the secret of preserving the colors of artists' paints. Yet the secret was known to every ancient artist, for they all mixed their own colors.

COUNSELS SON BY WIRELESS.

Marconi Connection Between Father and Boy at College.

"10:20 p. m.—Joe, what are you studying now? Don't forget your French. Good night. DAD."

This message, or one somewhat like it, the Philadelphia Bulletin asserts, is likely to be roaming about the atmosphere by wireless any evening. At present it is likely to be transmitted only by Dr. Walter Webb of Sharon Hill to his son, Joseph S. Webb, a freshman at Swarthmore College.

The finer details of this minute-by-minute parental guidance were completed recently when a receiving station was installed in young Webb's room in Wharton Hall, the boy's dormitory at Swarthmore College. He and his father have had a station at their home for some time and they have installed one at college so that the son will not grow rusty in handling the key.

The beauty of the scheme is seen after a little thought. Suppose the young man writes home that, owing to the press of studies, he will not be able to visit the old folks over Sunday. Then on Monday his father clicks out a message inquiring whether Joe had received one which was sent the previous day. What excuse could be offered?

Of course, this is not likely in this particular case, because Webb is a diligent student and does what he says he intends to do. But when the practice of having wireless stations at all homes and all schools is common what will the average boy do?

At present Joseph Webb, at school, has only a receiving station. Dr. Webb can counsel and admonish him to his heart's content and there will be no "back talk."

And so it may go on. Inventive fathers may devise a thousand and one ways of keeping the son at college up to scratch. When such home and school connection becomes general it is hard to say how unbearable a college boy's life will become.

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN CLALLAM COUNTY.

OFFICIAL PAPER

Published Every Friday at Port Angeles by The Webster Publishing Co.

FRIDAY, JUNE 17, 1910

SOMETHING RETROSPECTIVE.

The special local option elections for Port Angeles and Clallam county will be held next Monday, June 20. This will be the last issue of the Olympic-Leader until after these elections, and the people have decided at the polls whether or not they want the saloons to continue. It is to be hoped that the result of these elections may fairly and honestly represent the sentiments of legal voters only, and that there will not be an attempt, as some fear, and we think with reason, to carry the election in Port Angeles or Clallam county by fraud. There can be no question but that more than one man, in fact a number of men, have registered here in Angeles who have no moral or legal right to vote on next Monday. The judges appointed to superintend the election in the city have a duty to perform, and we trust that they will perform that duty as honorable men, and we have no fear of the result.

As our readers well know, the Olympic-Leader has decided opinions upon the temperance or anti-saloon question, as it has upon all questions of public concern, and that it has not been backward in expressing those opinions, regardless of what one or two narrow-minded readers might say or do; no fair-minded man will question this right. On the contrary, we believe that by far the larger majority of the readers of either a great city daily or a country weekly paper prefer the one that has decided opinions upon all moral, social, religious, economic or political questions, and has the courage of its convictions in expressing them, whether those opinions exactly coincide with the readers' views or not. The world applauds a fighter, but loathes a coward.

We also believe that a paper that has no opinion on a live, moral and economic question, such as is the temperance question—one that vitally concerns all its readers—has no opinion worth while on any question, political or otherwise.

The Olympic-Leader has endeavored to be fair in what it has had to say on the temperance question since the campaign against the saloon opened in the county, and has not allowed personalities to enter into the discussion, although the saloon and some of its patrons have offered material in plenty for such a discussion. We expect to come out of the fight with clean hands and with colors flying. If the cause of temperance has lost, and lost fairly, we will abide the result with good grace and with malice toward no man, but ever ready and willing to renew the campaign for 1912 for moral reform and civic righteousness.

THE COTTERRILL MEETING.

Hon. George F. Cotterill will speak on the local option question in the opera house next Sunday night at 8:30 o'clock.

GONE TO HER REWARD.

Mrs. Jane Jarvis passed quietly away at the little home built for her on the G. V. Smith homestead Monday morning, after a lingering illness of several years, during the past six months of which time she has constantly prayed to pass to the great beyond. The funeral was held Wednesday and was largely attended. Mrs. Jarvis was a Christian woman who has found the one great comfort in the closing days of her helplessness in her great faith in the hereafter, and she was ready and anxious to meet her Master. She had no relatives here, her husband having preceded her in death some fourteen years ago. She has been a resident of this city for the past twenty years.

WILL THEY DO IT?

We are told that the saloon men propose putting on a counter attraction Sunday evening, and have secured the band for a concert on down town streets Sunday evening. The "wets" have advertised a speaking meeting in the opera house for Saturday evening, and the "drys" have advertised one for the same place on Sunday evening. Did any one ever hear of the temperance people—the law and order people, who believe in fair play—attempting in any way to disturb or detract from a public meeting of any kind or description?

REPUBLICAN CO. CONVENTION.

The Republican County Central Committee met at the Auditor's office in the court house on Friday, the 10th, and decided to hold a county convention on July 10th, at 2 p. m., for the purpose of selecting eleven delegates to represent the county at the state convention to be held in Tacoma August 3rd, for the purpose of nominating five candidates for the supreme judgship, and transacting other business that may come before the convention.

WILL CELEBRATE THE FOURTH

It has been definitely decided that Angeles will celebrate the coming Fourth in grand style. Full particulars next week.

One of the beautifully conceived methods of campaign lately adopted by our friends of the saloon interests is that of misrepresenting the position of certain supporters of the local option movement in an endeavor to create the impression that all the support of the business community is on the side of the liquor venders, whereas in truth the greater percentage of the business men are favorable to the elimination of the saloon. There is probably not a man of any standing supporting the dry movement openly and above board but has been reported by the agents of the interest as having flopped and now seeing the error of his way. Of course, such argument counts for naught with some, but there are a great many who want to be on the winning side, and it is for these that these stories are manufactured, and our only purpose in calling attention to the position is to put these on their guard.

A BOOMERANG

Deception the Policy of Booze Promoters.

In the Seattle P. I. of last Sunday was a dispatch from Kent, telling how the boot leggers were getting in their work since the place went dry, and how the police were unable to cope with lawlessness in the city. Kent went dry less than three months ago, and still has the saloon. But there is probably as much truth in this statement from Kent as in the one from Oregon printed in last week's Tribue-Times as 'news' under the head of "Paid Advertisement."

Prof. C. S. Bown, formerly a teacher in Port Angeles schools, now superintendent of the schools at O'Brien, but residing in Kent, with Mrs. Bown and two daughters, Ruth and Elanor, are here for two weeks, camping at their old home on Lincoln Heights. A representative of the Olympic-Leader called Prof. Bown's attention to the above mentioned dispatch and he pronounced it a pure fabrication and without any semblance of truth. He says that at the first meeting of the town council after Kent voted dry, the police force of the place was reduced and that there has been no need for them since; that the town is highly prosperous and that the voting out of the saloon has not injured business; that $40,000 will be expended in street improvements this summer; that the city's water system is being extended; that a new sewerage system, to cost $70,000 is being put in, all to be completed within the year.

The facts are every town in the state of Washington that has voted dry during the past two years has gone forward in a business way thereafter even beyond the expectations of the drys. There is not an instance on record where the business of the town has been "killed" by voting out the saloon. Of the eleven dry towns in the state which have voted on the local option question the second time, all have gone dry by increased majorities, save Yakima City alone, where the wets squeezed through with three majority.

According to statistics the temperance question is sweeping the country to a far greater degree than most people realize. There are now four states where constitutional prohibition exists, which means that they will have to amend the constitution before they can do away with the law. There are five other states where statutory prohibition exists There are three other states where local option is given in various forms, and one state, Iowa, under prohibition except under the Mulct law. In Alaska all licenses are granted by the courts; in the District of Columbia by the commissioners; in Hawaii congress prohibits except under the territorial license; in Nevada the only dry town is that of the Southern Pacific terminal, where the deeds have a prohibitory clause. The city of Reno has a saloon for every 20, and a gambler for every 10 male adults and yet there are 2,000 empty rooms in the place; New Jersey, license promiscuous; New Mexico and Wyoming, license only in incorporated towns; Pennsylvania promiscuous. A study of these states will convince the most skeptical of the value of the saloon.

In the states and counties where the sale of intoxicating liquors are most nearly prohibited, a far greater per cent of the people own their own homes. This fact is shown by the U. S. statistics. New Jersey, Connecticut and Rhode Island, all liquor states or nearly so, have a percentage of 33, 38 and 28 respectively; while Maine, North Dakota, Kansas, Iowa, Vermont and South Dakota, all dry or nearly so, come to the front with the greatly increased per cents of 63, 74, 58, 58, 59, 69, respectively. Pauperism in the same states shows a far greater per cent in wet states than in dry. Do you see the moral?

School attendance is considerable larger in no-license cities than in cities where the saloon exists. Statistics gathered in twenty cities in Massachusetts, half wet and half dry, ranging in population from 3,000 to 100,000 show attendance per centage of from 88 to 95 in dry cities to as low as from 55 to 87 per cent in wet cities, the latter being Boston. Is it strange? Not at all. And when it comes to high schools it is considerably worse.

Statistics show that after the first year or so dry cities are better managed, more work done, and taxes are lower than under the wet regime. And this without any revenue from the saloon license. The grafters are intimately associated with the saloon, and most dark and illegitimate deeds are perpetrated in the saloon.

I hereby announce myself as a Republican candidate for the office of Sheriff at the ensuing primary election, September 13. My candidacy is based on a rigid enforcement of the law, irrespective of who it may please or displease.

JAS. R. GALLAGHER.

I will be a candidate at the ensuing primary election on the Republican ticket for the office of Sheriff of Clallam county.

If nominated and elected to that office I shall, without fear or favor, and to the best of my ability enforce the observance of all criminal laws in force in our state.

I heartily endorse and approve the liquor laws passed by our legislature; and the local option law of the last session, which is in effect but the guaranteed right of a majority to rule on that as well as other questions of a public nature effecting the public good.

I have as game warden impartially enforced the game and fish laws within the county.

The people look to the sheriff for proper and prompt enforcement of our laws. If elected to that office I shall do all in my power to secure a strict observance of all law, regardless of whom or whose interests it may effect.

Many people who feel that they have no very strong reason for putting the saloon out of business will do so upon one point. That the saloon is always in politics; it is not satisfied with being tolerated, it wants to control, and has controlled many officers of the city' county, state and nation. Every election has been a continued fight against saloon domination, sometimes not as clear-cut as at others, but always the same slimy hand is apparent.

The question, "Do Saloon's Benefit or Retard Towns, Cities and Counties in a Business Way?" will be discussed by well posted local option speakers at the following times and places:

Sequim, opera house, Friday at 8:30 p. m., June 17; Blyn, school house, Saturday at 8:30 p. m., June 18; Dungeness, Woodmen's hall, Sunday at 8:30 p. m., June 19.

Birthday parties seemed to be in order Tuesday. Miss Margaret Delabarre entertained a number of young ladies in honor of her 15th anniversary. Twenty ten-year-olds assembled on the lawn of the Cosser home to assist Harold celebrate, and a like number were entertained by Mrs. Mathewson in honor of her daughter Doris' eighth birthday. May all see many continued events of a like nature.

Mr. Howard Campbell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Campbell of this city, is expected soon to return to his home here and will give a piano recital at the opera house for the benefit of the Congregational Church. Mr. Campbell is an accomplished musician, having studied the famous Leschetizky method. As a pianist he has won marked success and his appearance here will be anticipated by all lovers of good music. The date of this recital and further details will be given in next week's issue.

Thos. J. Adswell returned Wednesday from his eastern visit, greatly enthused over the outcome of his visit and the future possibilities of his electrical project.

The graduating exercises of the eighth grade were given in the opera house on Tuesday evening. The class, composed of forty members, formed two complete semi circles around the stage, which was prettily decorated for the occasion. The program was well rendered, indeed, and especially appreciated were the vocal solo and encore by Miss Francis Hoare and the song by the girls of the class.

The Whatcom brought down an excursion party from Seattle Sunday arriving here at 1:30, and leaving at 5 o'clock. Some 250 excursionists took advantage of the cheap rate of $1 to visit the Gate city, and a very desirable looking crowd it proved. Eiler's fast aggregation of ball players was billed to come down and cross bats with the local team on this trip, but for some reason it did not appear, and the excursionists took in the city instead. Occasional excursions during the summer are planned for this district and on down to the ocean.

Among those former residents here who took advantage of the trip, we noted Mrs. Burch and daughter, Mrs. Wolff, mother of Mrs. Aldwell, Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Griswold, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Grinnold, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Belford, Mrs. M. J. Carrigan, Miss Fances Dye, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Draper, Miss Krajewski, Miss Ruth Lyster Pierce and brother Frank, Chas. Watts, H. Fathers, C. R. Jones C. Coble, Lou Cole, E. M. Cook, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hoffman, J. Bell and J. C. Morse also returned from Seatlte on the excursion steamer.

THE ALUMNI RECEPTION.

The tenth annual reception of the Alumni Association of the P. A. H. S. was held on Monday evening last at Hauing hall, the room being decorated in the class colors of red and white, with the class motto "Only Beginning" prominent in the foreground. The entertainment of the evening consisted of an address by Prof. Geisness, in which he introduced individually each member of the graduating class with a few remarks about each; instrumental music by Mrs. C. P. Brown and Miss Pearl Stakemiller, followed by the initiation of the new members of the Alumni. Herbert Wood, acting as Master of Ceremonies, had this interesting work in hand and though he performed his part well, the Class of 1910 proved itself equal to even such arduous tasks as making a mechanical drawing of a horse, of drawing the picture of an ideal man as seen through a mirror, of telling an impromptu love story, or even teaching the fundamentals of singing to a primary class. Following the initiations, the Alumni joined hands in singing Auld Lang Syne. Then, although some of the gentlemen of the Alumni were conspicuous by their absence, dancing and refreshments were enjoyed until a late hour.

Whe hear a good one on one of our liverymen, who in an unguarded moment said, "O, well, I will probably have better success in collecting livery bills from shingle weavers if the town goes dry." Not sooner said than repremanded by two or three saloonists. "Can't a man say anything," replied Mr. Liveryman. "Well, if that is your opinion," was the reply. "for God's sake keep still about it until after election."

THE SEVEN AGES OF MOTHERHOOD.

Oh, mother, that I could do for thee
The things thou hast done for me;
That I could pay back a thousandth part
Of the love thou bearest me;

That I could give the strength I hold,
Now that thou growest old;
That I could strengthen thy feeble step
And let not thy hand grow cold!

Oh, mother, that I could give to thee,
Now that thou canst not see—
That I could give back the sight, my dear,
That thou hast given me!

Oh, mother, that I could give to thee,
Now that thou leavest me—
Oh. mother, that I could give to thee
The life thou hast given me!

THE MESSENGER.

O ship, ship, ship,
That travelest over the sea,
What are the tidings, I pray thee
Thou bearest hither to me?

Are they tidings of comfort and joy,
That shall make me seem to see
The sweet lips softly moving
And whispering love to me?

Or are they of trouble and grief,
Estrangement, sorrow and doubt,
To turn into torture my hopes
And drive me from paradise out?

O ship, ship, ship,
Thou comest over the sea,
Whatever it be thou bringest,
Come quickly with it to me.

HER CONVENIENT EXCUSE

"It's awfully sweet of you to think of it and I should love to go if I were well," said Mrs. Buckley over the telephone. "Oh, no, nothing serious, but I don't feel quite able to go out ——. Oh, yes, I shall be all right in a day or two. Thank you so much for asking me. Good-by."

Mrs. Buckley hung up the receiver with a sigh of relief. "I'm glad I had the presence of mind to decline," she said to herself. "I don't care at all for a stupid drive with Mrs. Drake. Besides, with the Hendersons coming to dinner to-night I've got too much to do this afternoon to waste time going round the park behind her old slow-coach horses."

Two hours later Mrs. Buckley was assisting the cook in the manufacture of a wonderfully complicated dessert when her husband burst into the room with an anxious frown on his brow.

"I've been looking all through the house for you, Nan," he said, a little impatiently. "I didn't expect to find you in the kitchen."

"Why not? How did you happen to come home so early, Tom?"

"I heard you were ill."

"Ill! Why I'm not a bit ill."

"So I see. But I met Drake at lunch and he told me you were so sick you couldn't go out for a drive with his wife. I naturally thought you had some sudden attack and no one had had sense enough to call me up, so I rushed home."

"You poor old dear," Mrs. Buckley laughed indulgently, as she continued to whip cream. "I had no idea you were so easily alarmed."

"Any one would have been alarmed by what Drake said. How in the world did he ever get the idea that you were sick?"

"Mrs. Drake telephoned me this morning, asking me to go driving, and as I didn't feel like it I said I wasn't well."

"Oh, that's it? Why didn't you say you didn't feel like it?"

"You know you can't say such things, Tom."

"Well, I rather think I can. However, since you're in no immediate danger I'll console myself with a little golf the rest of the afternoon."

"Very well, but come home early. You know the Hender——" Mrs. Buckley ceased speaking as the door closed none too gently behind her husband. "Any one would think," she smilingly mused, "that Tom was disappointed because I'm not sick."

At 6:30, after an extremely busy afternoon, Mrs. Buckley was dressed and waiting for husband and guests.

"Why in the world doesn't Tom come?" she fretted. "He'll surely keep dinner waiting while he's changing his clothes."

At 7 o'clock neither he nor the expected guests had arrived and Mrs. Buckley, tired and nervous, walked the floor of her flower-bedecked rooms.

"Well, here you are at last," she cried as Buckley appeared at 7:30. "What detained you? I've been almost wild."

"I didn't suppose you'd worry, Nan. You see, we started a foursome so late that——"

"But you knew you had to dress for dinner, Tom?"

"Dress for dinner? To-night?"

"Yes, of course. You know as well as I do that the Hendersons are coming. I can't understand why they're so late. It's inexcusable. I'll think twice before I invite them again. They should have been here an hour ago."

"But, Nan, they aren't coming."

"Aren't coming? What makes you think they're not coming?"

"Well, you see, after I left Drake to-day I ran into Henderson and I told him I was hurrying home because you were ill. He said he'd telephone his wife that the dinner was off. It was thoughtful of him, wasn't it?"

"Oh, very!" Mrs. Buckley spoke with much sarcasm. "It would have been very thoughtful of you to have mentioned to me that the Hendersons were not coming. Perhaps you think I like to work all day getting up a dinner for people who aren't coming."

For a moment Buckley looked a little crestfallen. Then, making a strong recovery, he said boldly: "But, my dear girl, I was so delighted to find you weren't really sick that the sense of relief drove every other thought out of my head."

"Except the thought of golf."

Again Buckley looked somewhat nonplussed, but in an instant he rallied

"Hang it all, Nan, we wouldn't have had this muddle if you had told Mrs. Drake the truth in the first place."

"I can promise one thing, Thomas, dear; I won't indulge in another innocent fabrication very soon if I think there's the slightest possibility of its falling into your clumsy keeping."

"I RATHER THINK I CAN."

"Well, then, truth is once more triumphant," laughed Tom. "And your company dinner won't be wasted, my dear, for I'm ravenous."—Chicago Daily News.

Science AND Invention

An acre of 12-inch ice usually will provide a harvest of 1,000 tons.

Not many years ago only natural indigo was known, but already the manufacture of artificial indigo has reached a point where it has threatened ruin to many of the cultivators of the indigo plant in India. Nevertheless, the superiority of the natural product in some respects has induced continued investigation of improved methods of cultivation and preparation. It is now predicted that a new era of prosperity for the natural indigo industry it at hand. The introduction of Java-Natal indigo is said to have reduced the expenses of cultivation, and to have increased the production one-half. It is predicted that in the future it will cost less to produce natural indigo than the synthetic dye. Science has played a part on both sides in this competition.

Comparative immunity for a hundred years seems to have made the French forgetful of the danger to their great capital from sudden floods in the River Seine. But the lesson taught this year will evidently have important consequences. It is suggested, among other things, that a large channel be constructed to lead off the floodwaters from a point above the city to a junction with the regular channel below the city limits. The cost of this is reckoned at, at least, $20,000,000. But Paris lies in a great basin, and the proposed cut-off would not save some of the suburbs from inundation. Another suggested solution is to construct in the higher valleys, through which the Seine and its two principal tributaries, the Yonne and the Marne, flow, great reservoirs, to be filled in times of flood. This water, it is argued, would be useful for irrigation purposes, as it could be distributed at will any time after the inundation had ceased. It is probable, also that local protection will be secured by means of higher embankments within the city.

During 1910 it is expected that strenuous efforts will be made to improve the already great efficiency of the gas-engine. Although this form of engine enjoyed a triumph in 1909 through the achievements of the aeroplanes, yet it is pointed out that its old rival, the steam engine, at the same time greatly advanced in fuel economy, achieving a thermal efficiency of 19 per cent, a figure hitherto associated with gas rather than with steam engine tests. It has recently been discovered that, owing to erroneous assumptions, the gas engine has not been credited with having approached as close to the theoretic limit of thermal efficiency attainable by the prevailing four-stroke cycle as it really has approached. Thus it has been shown that a gas engine which by the old standard of efficiency was supposed to have attained 30 points out of a possible 50, has really attained 30 out of a possible 35. This leaves so little room for improvement that experimenters are turning their attention to radical changes in the method of operation which will afford a larger margin for advance.

A HUMAN HOOPSNAKE.

William Gordon, 10 years old, of Clinton, N. J., saw a picture of a human hoopsnake on a circus poster and he stole into the hayloft when his brother Sanford and his sister Belle went to the Sunday school. There wasn't much hay in the loft, and the boy, after a few preliminary stunts in the hand-springing line, buckled his heels to the back of his neck with a strap and began to roll around in imitation of a hoopsnake. On the third lap William inadvertently rolled across a corner of the hatchway and lamost went through. He bumped his ribs on the edges of the opening in the loft. That scared him and made him very tired. When he tried to unbuckle his legs from his neck he found he was too near exhaustion to loose the strap. He rolled up near a window opening toward the farm house and tried to shout for help, but his voice was all in and the hoarse squeak could not be heard ten yards away. In a panic the boy decided on a desperate measure. He rolled himself over to the head of the stairs, and then, closing his eyes, let himself go bumpety-bump to the bottom. He had such momentum he rolled right on out through the door of the barn and over between the legs of Ketchup and Solferino, the team of horses the elder Gordon was hitching up. Gordon gave a shout of astonishment, yanked the human hoopsnake out of danger and cut the strap with his knife. Then he laid the young hopeful across his knee and fanned him with a shingle until the boy had no other pain save that.

NOVEL FRENCH CLOCKS.

Of Wonderful Mechanism, They Tell Many Things Besides the Time.

The clock of Lyons cathedral is a wonderful piece of mechanism and the legend describing it is as follows, an exchange says: The clock crows, the bell sounds the hours, the little bells, the "Sancte Spiritus," the angel opens the gate to salute the Virgin Mary. The two heads of the lions move the eyes and tongue. The astrolabe shows the hours in its degree and the movement of the moon. Moreover, the perpetual calendar shows all the days of the year, the feast days and the bissextile. The hour at which the chimes are complete are 5 and 6 o'clock in the morning, midday and 1 and 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The chimes at the other hours are restricted so as not to interfere with the cathedral services.

Complicated indeed is the clock of Beauvais cathedral. It is said to be composed of 92,000 separate pieces on the fifty-two dial plates, the hour, the day, the week and the month; the rising and setting of the sun, phases of the moon, the tides, the time in the principal capitals of the world, together with a series of terrestrial and astronomical evolutions. The framework is of carved oak, eight meters by five meters, or 26 by 16½ feet.

When the clock strikes all the "edifice" seems in movement. The designer wished to depict the "Last Judgment." This wonderful work recalls the work of Strasburg and is of modern construction. It is the work of a Beauvasian, M. Verite, who was in the engineering department of th Nord Railway. He died in 1887.

Electricity Wins Washing Race.

At the recent electrical show in Chicago electricity won a very pretty race with hand labor to see who could wash the most clothes in a given time.

Five pretty girls, operating new types of electric washing machines and motor-driven wringers, raced with six ladies of pronounced color who did their work by the world-old hand method, using the old fashioned wash tubs, wash boards and hand wringers. The girls started the electric motors to work on the clothes and spent the most of their time laughing and chatting with the visitors while the machines ran themselves. The colored women worked as hard as ever they could, for if they washed half as many clothes as the girls and electricity did they were to get one hundred dollars. The suds flew fast and furious about the colored girls but when time was called they had not washed a third as many clothes as their contemporaries did, so they lost the prize, but were handsomely rewarded for their honest work, demonstrating the vast difference between ancient and modern laundry methods.

ODD FIVE-FOOT LIBRARY.

English, Russian and Yiddish Mingled in Girls' Collections.

Since Dr. Eliot came to the front with his interesting assertion that a five-foot shelf is large enough to hold all the books required for a liberal education, there have been published many lists of small libraries, the Scrap Book remarks. One of the most unusual was that of the collection made by four Russian girls, none of whom had been in this country more than six years.

These girls were involved in the New York city shirt-waist strike, and it was a mishap which befell one of the quartet which led reporters to their little rooms on the crowded east side, and the discovery of what may be termed "the ambitious immigrant's five-foot library."

First on the shelf and occupying the place of honor is Webster's unabridged dictionary. Next is "The Talmud." Then in order, "Lexicon of the Christian Bible" in Yiddish; Ruskin's "Queen of the Air," Owen Meredith's "Lucile," Walter Scott's "Anne of Geierstein," complete set of Shakespeare, Karl Marx's "Capital," in Russian with Hebrew notations; Charlotte M. Braeme's "Wedded and Parted" and "Weaker Than a Woman," Conan Doyle's "A Study in Scarlet," Charles and Mary Lamb's "Tales from Shakespeare," Washington Irving's "Rip Van Winkle," Elias Peretz's "Sketches," humorous, in Yiddish (not Hebrew); Oscar Wilde's "The Love," in Yiddish translation; Nathaniel Hawthorne's "Wonder Book for Girls and Boys," Jacob Sheffel's "The Moon and Stars" in Hebrew (not Yiddish); Leo Tolstoi's "The Resurrection," Oscar Wilde's play, "Salome," in English; D. M. Haramelan's "Free Love," in Hebrew; an English-Jewish dictionary, prayer book for the holidays in Hebrew; Martin G. Brumbaugh's "English Fifth Reader," "Lives and Stories Worth Remembering," a symposium of famous people; William H. Maxwell's "Introductory Lessons in English," Alonzo Reed's (Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute), "Higher Lessons in English," Margaret Stockman Dickson's "A Hundred Years of Warfare," Westall and Stepniak's "The Blind Musician," James Otis' "The Revolutionist" and many Hebrew and Russian religious books.

In the room were two plaster busts, bought, like books, with money saved from the daily cost of living by girls earning at most a dollar a day. The busts are of George Washington and Beethoven.

The variety betrays with really remarkable fidelity the intellectual thirst of the younger generation of Russians as well as its wide range of interests.

BUENOS AIRES TO VALPARAISO.

Wonderful Railroad Spanning South America to Be Finished Soon.

The most wonderful railway in the world will be completed, if all goes well, in the course of the next week or two, Pearson's Weekly says.

It is the first line to be carried across the continent of South America, and it has taken over thirty years to build. But its chief interest lies in the immense elevation it reaches in crossing the Andes.

Here the passenger will be literally and actually traveling above the clouds. At one point it soars to a height of 12,000 feet, more than 4,000 feet higher than the world-famous Great St. Bernard Pass.

The Atlantic terminus is at Buenos Aires in Argentina, the Pacific at Valparaiso in Chile, both tropical towns; yet the line runs for hundreds of miles through a region of eternal snow and ice.

Avalanches sweep the track at intervals at these immense altitudes. So, in order to protect the trains, sloping wooden sheds, enormously strong, have been built at these points. Under them engine and carriages will be able to travel in safety, even while the snowslides are actually thundering overhead.

Among the other wonders of this most wonderful line are a spiral tunnel, absolutely unique of its kind, that cost over £1,000,000 to bore, and a string of 118 bridges, linked together by short stretches of solid, permanent way over a distance of thirty miles.

At one point, too, the track is carried over a deep and wide ravine on a huge arch of living rock, which constitutes a natural bridge.

Rice Waffles.

These rice waffles, which are specially popular served as a course at a luncheon with brown sugar or maple syrup, are not at all difficult to achieve. Add to one cupful of freshly boiled rice, still hot, an ounce of butter and three eggs beaten to a froth. Add to two cupfuls of sour milk or cream a teaspoonful of salt and soda, then combine the two mixtures. Lastly, add flour to make a rather thick batter, turn into the well-greased and heated irons and bake.

Potato Soup.

Wash, peel and cut four medium-sized potatoes into small pieces, cover with cold water, salted, and cook until done. Have ready a pint of milk scalded in a double boiler, together with a tablespoonful of minced onion and a little celery or celery seed to flavor. Take the potatoes from the fire, turn off the water and mash. Thicken the milk with a tablespoonful of melted butter with a tablespoonful of flour, then add to the potato and mix. Add a tablespoonful of fine minced parsley and serve with crackers or croutons.

Soft Cornbread.

Put one pint of milk over the fire. When ready to boil add a little salt and one-half cupful of sifted corn meal stirred in slowly. Let this boil up once. Take from the fire and add the yolks of three eggs, one at a time, and without beating them. Stir the eggs well into the meal and milk. Beat the whites to a stiff froth and add last. Pour into an ungreased pan and bake in a moderate oven. This is really like a corn meal omelet.

MEDICINE AND THE PRESS.

Good Deal of Unjustifiable Talk About Newspaper Blunders.

One of the medical journals devotes a long and scornful article in its current issue to the anatomical and pathological blunders of newspapers. Some of those blunders, it must be admitted, have no little richness of humor. A small western paper, for example, recently accused a man of dying of "pleurisy of the brain." Another announced that a sick man, locallly prominent, was recovering from a bad attack of staphlocous (staphylococcus?) A third paper, this time in the south, recorded a case of "petrification of the heart." News of other hair-raising marvels, of incredible maladies and impossible operations crops up every day on all sides.

It is to be lamented, of course, says the Baltimore Sun, that newspapers are not more accurate in their medical and chirurgical reports, but the fault, we believe, is not always theirs. Too often the doctors who laugh so loudly are to blame. Many of them still cling to the ancient hocus-pocus of the mediaeval leeches. Medicine, as it is practiced, is still marked by meaningless incantations, absurd circumlocutions, unintelligible dog Latin. The young doctors like to roll sounding words upon their tongues that they may cause the vulgar to marvel, and too often they are never cured of the vice. Just observe the bulletins issued by the learned consultants while a great man lies dying. Very often they are entirely incomprehensible, despite the fact that the information they ordinarily convey might be expressed very well in language easily understood by any layman.

No; the newspapers are not always to blame for their medical errors and when they are their blunders do a great deal less harm than those of the doctors themselves. A newspaper never gouges out the wrong eye or cuts off the wrong leg. Its mistakes in diagnosis fill no graveyards. It may be comic, but it is never homicidal.

AN INTELLIGENT REPTILE.

Do animals possess the power of logical judgment, or, as we oftener say, reason? Naturalists—and others—have long debated the question, and are still divided. A writer in Science, without committing himself on the point, tells what he saw on a country road in Georgia, and every reader will agree with him that it was remarkable.

A commotion in the underbrush beside the road attracted his attention. He investigated the cause, and saw a coachwhip snake about four feet long struggling with a lizard less than a foot long. They were not fighting; the snake was trying to eat the lizard.

Occasionally the lizard would get away, but the snake would at once give chase and recapture him. The snake invariably caught his prey by the body; he acted as if he knew that if he seized him by the tail the lizard would break off the tail and escape.

Finally the lizard, escaping from the snake, darted up a tree; the snake followed. Here the four jointed legs of the lizard gave him the advantage. After darting up the tree a short distance he paused and glanced backward. As often as the snake approached he would again dart forward, stop, and look backward; this happened several times.

Then all of a sudden the snake dropped to the ground. The lizard continued to gaze downward. About a foot from the tree on which the lizard was resting, head downward, there stood another tree. Spirally up this tree the snake climbed until it was a few inches above the level of the lizard, which was still gazing scrutinizingly downward.

Quietly and quickly the snake extended the front of its body, and with a sudden thrust of its head knocked the lizard to the ground, and before it had time to recover from the unexpected blow the snake had dropped to the ground and recaptured it.

A Matter of Dates.

Going assiduously to galleries and exhibitions does not necessarily make an art critic of the amateur, nor does it always firmly fix his historical knowledge, as the following anecdote shows:

A certain wealthy man has a remarkable collection of paintings that have recently attracted much attention. A short time ago the members of a club in his city asked to be allowed to inspect his treasures with their wives, their sisters, their cousins and their aunts. Their request was granted.

One man was looking at a picture which bore the inscription, "1723—Sir Joshua Reynolds—1792," the dates, of course, being those of the birth and death of the artist.

"Ah," he said to his companion, whom he evidently wished to impress with his knowledge of art, "I know the original well. You see, it was painted in 1723, and this copy was made in 1792."

Dear Money.

Mrs. Anthony Hope, American wife of the well known English novelist, is as celebrated as her husband for her bon-mots.

At a dinner in New York on her American visit, the young lady expressed her disapproval of mercenary marriages.

"Never marry for money," she said. "You can borrow cheaper."

A small boy's idea of an entertainment is any kind of a gathering where refreshments are served.

UNCLE JOE'S SPEECH.

"This is the most comfortable chair, Uncle Joe. Won't you take it?" Uncle Joe looked at his nephew with a suspicion of a glare. He was a cheerful, bluff old gentlemanfl who was making a visit in his nephew's family, and had just come in from a brisk walk in the country. Now he strode to the fireplace and stood in front of it, warming his coat tails. His niece was busy with some fancy work near the window, and his nephew had just laid aside the afternoon paper.

"Do sit down in the most comfortable chair," urged the young woman with the fancy work.

"I prefer to stand up," said Uncle Joe. "Any objection?"

"Why, no," said his nephew. "Of course if you wish to stand up——"

"Your intentions," said Uncle Joe, "are good, but with your permission I'm going to make a speech. There is such a thing as having too good intentions."

"What do you mean, uncle?" asked the voice from the window. "I'm sure we want you to be perfectly comfortable."

"So I am," said the old gentleman, "but you forget that I am old enough, and not yet too old, I hope, to judge for myself.

"When I want to sit down I know enough to sit down, and as a matter of fact, I consider some of the other chairs quite as comfortable as the one you are always compelling me to sit down in.

"When I am at dinner I know when I have had enough to eat, and I don't like to be told that I have a poor appetite if I don't eat twice as much as anybody else.

"When I go out to walk I am still capable of deciding whether or not to wear rubbers. And when I stay in the house, it's my own fault if I sit in a draft.

"I like this place, and I should like to prolong this visit several days longer. That's my speech," finished the old gentleman.

There was a moment's silence.

"And a mighty good speech, too," said the younger man suddenly. "I hadn't thought of it that way before, but chasing people to make them comfortable is a rather oppressive kind of hospitality. Sit down in any old chair you like, Uncle Joseph, and I guess hereafter Maud and I will be able to restrain our impulse to pick it for you."

"I shouldn't have mentioned it," said Uncle Joe, with a twinkle, "if I hadn't been sure that such sensible young people would agree with me."—Youth's Companion.

Optimist—I don't believe in climbing over an obstruction until one comes to it. Pessimist—And, judging from your appearance, I should say that you never see an obstruction until you bump against it.—Chicago Record-Herald.

"Johnny," said the boy's mother, "I hope you have been a nice, quiet boy at school this morning?" "That's what I was," answered Johnny. "I went to sleep and the teacher said she'd whip any boy in the room who waked me up."

"I say, Jones, dine with me at the house to-night, will you?" "Certainly, with pleasure. Will your wife expect me?" "No; that's the beauty of it. We had a quarrel this morning and I want to make her mad."—Peekskill Palladium.

Mr. Crimsonbeak—A hunter in Newfoundland who has lost his bearings, or finds himself in a fog, has no difficulty in finding the way, as owing to the constant west winds the tops of all the trees point east. Mrs. Crimsonbeak—But suppose he doesn't want to go east?—Yonkers Statesman.

Green Pea Soup.

Soak over night one-half pound of dried green peas and put on to boil in three pints of water with one small onion, into which have been pressed three cloves. When the peas are well done put all through a colander. Return to the fire a few minutes before serving, adding one level tablespoon of flour and a teaspoon of butter worked to a cream. Season to taste.

Cement for Tinware.

An excellent cement for mending tinware is made by mixing litharge and glycerin to the consistency of thick cream or putty. The mended article must not be used until the cement has had time to dry, which may be a week or more. The litharge can be secured at drug stores.

The appendix, thinking the human race has not enough trouble of its own just now, has started to make more by inventing for itself a new and exclusive disease. This disease the doctors have agreed to call "appendicular gastralgia," and there is small doubt that those who wish to keep strictly up to date will contract it without delay. Indeed, appendicitis may go quite out of fashion.

Mothers will find Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup the best remedy to use for their children during the teething period.

"Every time you get cold feet," says a Chicago health department bulletin, "mark it down and see how often you get a cold. Do the same thing every time you get your feet wet. You will find that your ideas about cold feet or wet feet have been more wrong than right." How does the Chicago health department know what our ideas have been about cold feet?

Rhubarb Pie.

One cup chopped rhubarb (all solid, no juice), one cup of sugar, yolks of two eggs, one dessertspoonful of flour; mix well and flavor with lemon extract. Beat two whites and brown. If you do not care for the meringue on top, use only one egg. Tastes like lemon pie.

Cheese Souffle.

Two tablespoons of butter in a double boiler. Add one heaping tablespoonful of flour. When smooth add one-half cup of milk, one-half teaspoonful of salt, a little pepper. Cook two minutes. Add the yolks of three eggs, well beaten, one cup of good grated cheese. Set away till cool. Then add the whites of three eggs, well beaten. Turn into a buttered dish and bake twenty-five to thirty minutes.

Cream of Indian Soup.

Mix together a tablespoonful of flour, a quarter cupful of corn meal and a half teaspoonful of salt. Stir gradually into a quart of boiling water, and after boiling up well put into a double boiler and cook an hour and a half. Add a cupful of rich milk or cream and serve with popcorn or croutons

Baked White Fish.

Salt pork finely chopped, mixed with bread crumbs; a little summer savory, salt and a pinch of white pepper. Don't use sage, as it gives a bitter taste. Put in stuffing, and sew up. Baste with butter, and use flour to dredge. Baste often during the hour and a quarter needed for cooking; melted butter, with chopped eggs.

SEQUIM

The M. E. church was beautifully decorated last Sunday in honor of Children's Day and the memorial service of the Modern Woodmen of America. The exercises by the children were enjoyed very much and Rev. C. M. Goulder gave a fine discourse for the Woodmen, which was appreciated by a large house full of people.

Mr. Herman Sinders, Sr., who has been very sick is reported to be on the mend, which will please his many friends.

CHILDREN'S DAY.

Children's Day was observed last Sunday at the Congregational church both morning and evening. The church was made attractive by a profusion of ferns and flowers. In the morning the pastor preached especially to the younger members of the congregation. An impressive part of the service was the christening of George Boyd Cosser and Russel Ferguson Smith, after which Miss Allen very sweetly sang those familiar words "I Think When I Read that Sweet Story of Old," the choir also singing the chorus. The duet which Mrs. Farmer and Miss Allen sang at the Methodist church a week ago, they kindly repeated for this service and many words of appreciation were heard. In the evening the Sunday school gave a very successful concert, Superintendent Cosser presiding. The children, including those of the infant class, taking part unusually well. Mr. George Parks, accompanied by Mr. Lange on the organ, gave a violin solo. The two instruments blended exquisitely and their selection was especially enjoyed. We have learned since that the beautiful piece which they played was Mr. Lange's own composition. The Sunday school was assisted in the music by a chorus choir. The pastor made a few brief remarks and a collection was taken for the "S. S. and Publishing Society" amounting to $9. A good audience in the morning and a full house in the evening gave interest to the services.

Mrs. T.J. Appleton came to attend the graduating exercises of her sister, Ethel Welch. She returned Sunday to Diamond Point, the quarantine station, where the doctor is now stationed; her mother accompanied her for a week's visit.

NOTICE OF LOCAL OPTION ELECTION

Notice is hereby given that a special election will be held within and for the incorporated city of Port Angeles, County of Clallam, State of Washington, at N. R. Smith's Building, Front street, in the First Ward; at Council Chambers in the Second Ward; Roods' Shop in the Third Ward; at Cabin on 6th, between Peabody and Vine, in the Fourth Ward; at Pringle's Cabin in the Fifth Ward, and at Old School House in the Sixth Ward, on the 20th day of June, A. D. 1910, between the hours of 9 a. m. and 7 p. m., on said day, at which time will be submitted to the qualified electors of said City the question, "Shall the Sale of intoxicating Liquor be Licensed within the City of Port Angeles, County of Clallam, State of Washington?"

C. E. SHIELDS, City Clerk.
Dated this 12th day of May, A. D., 1910.

We understand that a certain East End saloon keeper was in town one day last week "hot under the collar" because the saloon men of this city had "rounded-up" and registered in Port Angeles all the "wet" shingle-weavers and loggers in the county unit, leaving the "drys" out in the woods, thus insuring, as he expressed it, a "wet" city and a "dry" county. Well, the registration in the Second ward would indicate as much. But are law abiding citizens to stand by and witnesss the spectacle without entering a protest? We guess not.

Call for Bids.

The School Board of Dist. 7 will receive bids up to 12 M., June 30th, for the construction of an addition to the Lincoln Heights school building. Said building to be constructed according to plans and specifications on file in the Clerk's office at the Fisher Pharmacy.

A PROMINENT PHYSICIAN'S DIAGNOSIS

No one can know what the best solution of this complicated question is. Whatever plan is proposed should be carried out. Constantly working at an evil will finally evolve some method to handle it. Each side, as it fights, is, of course, using unjust, fanatical, unlawful, inhuman, diabolical means in the judgment of the other. Here is the greatest evil on earth. Something must and will be done with it.

oped possibilities of which this part of the country is capable.

Miss Tirzah MacKechnie delivered the class poem, dealing with the four phases of high school life, that of Freshman, Sophomore, Junior and Senior.

Clyde Sewell took for the subject of his essay "Socialists and Socialism," a subject difficult for many to handle, and Mr. Sewell's delivery showed much deep thinking on the subject.

"Wanted, A Government for Alaska" by Floyd Haynes truly showed our lack of consideration for this portion of our country. It is true, indeed, that out of the amount of money and articles of commercial value received from Alaska, a little more might be spent there.

Miss Bernice Allen rendered a charming solo.

How well, indeed, did Beatrice Allen prophesy for the Class of 1910, carrying us almost into the mystical as she followed the shadowy figure of the "Fates" into the destiny of each of her classmates.

The valedictory, "Rowing not Drifting," by which Flora Stakemiller addressed the audience, showed the Class of 1910 eager and willing to take up the burdens of life with a light heart and put the shoulder to the wheel and push. In a few well chosen words, Miss Stakemiller thanked her teachers and at the same time addressed them as such for the last time. May they, indeed, be rowers and not drifters.

Superintendent Thos. Geisness spoke a few words of congratulation and praise to the class after which he presented to them individually the diplomas, tied with the class colors, which they were so well worthy to receive.

After the benediction by Rev. Smith, friends crowded around the young graduates and with loving smiles and words of praise congratulated them upon their success.

NOTICE OF HEARING.

No. 433.

In the Superior Court of the State of Washington for Clallam County.

In the Matter of the Guardianship of Lewis H. Cays and Morris E. Cays, Minors.

Arthur W. Cays, guardian of the above named minors, having on the 23d day of May, 1910, presented to and filed in this Court a petition, duly verified by his oath, praying for an order to sell certain real estate belonging to said minors and to reinvest the proceeds of said sale for the support, maintenance and education of said minors, and the Honorable Court Commissioner of Clallam County having made and entered herein an order fixing Saturday, the 18th day of June, 1910, at 10 o'clock a. m. of said day, at the court house in Port Angeles, Washington, as the time and place for the hearing upon said petition and ordering notice thereof to be duly given; Now, in pursuance of said order,

Notice is hereby given that said petition will be heard on said 18th day of June, 1910, at the hour and place above named, at which time and place the next of kin of said minors and all persons interested herein or in the estate of said minors may appear and file their objections in writing, if any they have, and show cause why the prayer of said petition should not be granted.

Witness my hand and the seal of said Superior Court this 25th day of May, 1910. HORACE WHITE, Clerk.

Is A Constitutional Disease.

It manifests itself in local aches and pains,—inflamed joints and stiff muscles,—but it cannot be cured by local applications.

It requires constitutional treatment, and the best is a course of the great blood purifying and tonic medicine

It has been found that the late Henry H. Rogers, vice president of the Standard Oil Company, was worth only about $36,000,000, instead of $100,000,000 or $200,000,00, as was publicly supposed at the time of his death. Let us be more charitable to Mr. Archbold. Instead of being wealthy he may be skimping along on $25,000,000 or $30,000,000.

WAX MADE FROM WEEDS.

Mexican Product in Great Demand for Phonograph Records.

The most gigantic project for utilizing the desert lands and soil of Mexico ever undertaken is now on foot near Torreon. L. Vallareal Madero, who owns a ranch of 1,200,000 acres, situated on the outskirts of the valley of the Nazas river, is preparing to spend more than $3,000,000 gold in the erection of twelve factories upon his land for the converting into commercial products desert plants and in constructing a system of irrigation that will reclaim 200,000 acres of land that are situated in a valley that is tributary to that of the Nazas river. Mr. Madero has interested a number of Los Angeles (Cal.) men in the big project, says a Torreon (Tex.) correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Of the factories that are to be erected upon the ranch six will be devoted to the extracting of wax from the candelilla weed, which grows profusely upon many thousand acres. It was only about two years ago that the discovery was made that a high grade wax could be manufactured from this weed. A number of factories are now in operation in this part of Mexico, and the wax product is shipped in large quantities to the United States and Europe, where it commands big prizes. The refined wax from the candelilla is pure white and is said to be superior to any other known wax. It is in great demand for use in the manufacture of phonograph records and various lines of industry which require a wax of unusual hardness. In some localities the candelilla weed grows so thick that one acre of it will produce an output valued at $200 to $300. It is stated that it reproduces itself quickly after being harvested, and that there is no likelihood of the supply of crude material being exhausted or even diminished materially. The six wax factories that Mr. Madero and associates will erect will have an aggregate daily output of about twelve tons of unrefined wax, it is stated.

Four factories for the extraction of fiber from the ixtle plant will be erected upon the ranch. This is another desert plant that thrives upon the land embraced in this big ranch. It is claimed that there are enough ixtle plants now growing there to keep the four factories busy for more than twenty-five years. Auxiliary to these four fiber factories will be erected two alcohol distilleries. The refuse of the fiber factories will be subject to treatment for the purpose of obtaining alcohol from it.

A St. Louis woman is advertising for pure buttermilk. The advertiser recites that no dairyman need apply. She says she has tried all the dairies in St. Louis and has been half around the world in a vain search for buttermilk of the good old-fashioned kind churned in the good old-fashioned way, wtih little pieces of butter floating around in it.

Dr. Sophie Herzog of Brazoria, Tex., is said to be the only woman railroad surgeon in the world. She is a native of Austria, came to this country in 1886, studied medicine and surgery and for nine years after graduation practiced medicine in New York. Soon after moving to Texas her work as a surgeon attracted the attention of the St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexican railroad, and she was appointed surgeon for the road.

Professor Arloing, director of the Veterinary school at Lyons, France, maintains he has perfected a method of successfully protecting cattle against tuberculosis. He employs vaccines obtained by special cultural processes from certain kinds of bovine bacilli. These vaccines are introduced into the cattle either by the mouth, by intravenous injection or by subcutaneous injection. Intravenous injections appear to be the most effective. At a meeting of the French Academy of Sciences, Professor Chauveau confirmed Professor Arloing's claims.

Australia is looming as a wheat-producing and cattle-breeding country. The 1909-1910 season, it is estimated, will eclipse all former records. In Victoria the output of wheat is estimated at 25,000,000 bushels, while South Australia will produce 20,000,000 bushels, and New South Wales 26,000,000. Including miscellaneous sources of supply on the Australian continent, the total harvest is expected to yield 78,000,000 bushels, of which 50,000,000 bushels will be available for export. Prices of cereals being high, in addition to a record crop as to weight, the growers will receive a larger profit than usual.

Much human hair is sent from Prague to America. It is collected by hair merchants, regularly licensed, who make trips through the country, going from house to house to induce peasant women and girls to part with their tresses. The price paid depends upon the length of the hair and the color, principally the latter. The entire head of hair is not sold at one time, usually but one braid being disposed of at once, leaving the other to be cut off about four years later. The price paid for braids varies from $2 to $21 each. Prices paid by the pound vary from $11.60 to $80; the latter price being paid for blond or gray hair, ranging from 24 to 28 inches in length. All of the native hair is shipped in its natural state, without being bleached or dyed. The estimated annual exports are 13,000 pounds.—Consular Reports.

Muscat is famed as the hotbed of smugglers in the Persian gulf, the nearby desert tribes being regularly supplied with arms despite the efforts of the British patrol. But to the writer, reared on a Missouri farm, the odd antics of the cows of Muscat seemed nothing short of freakish. They actually eat fish. No grass grows, so the wily Arab teaches his family cow to subsist on dates and dried fish. The milk tastes queer to a foreigner, which is probably why the Arab likes it. He also claims it is richer and makes more butter, but most ridiculous of all is the deception practiced on cows when the calves are "weaned." A calfskin, or sometimes a goatskin, is stuffed with rags and tied not far from where the mother cow is anchored. This effigy of her late lamented offspring soothes her nerves and keeps her from "going dry," according to Arabic tradition.—San Francisco Chronicle.

A perfectly serious dress reformer and earnest student of sociology proposes coats for men buttoning down the back. His argument is that if women had to help their husbands dress, as husbands have to help their wives, reciprocity of conjugal affection would be promoted, and the divorce rate cut in half. This is reasoning which will not convince everybody. It is bad enough to have half the family losing its temper over endless rows of tiny buttons. What if the wife's disposition were subjected to a similar strain?

SEQUIM

A complete surprise party was given to Miss Ivey Jones Monday evening, the 6th, in honor of her 16th birthday. There were twenty-four girls and boys walked in. She had retired but it did not take the girls long to arouse her. She was well remembered by her schoolmates with many beautiful and useful presents. Then a dainty and delicious lunch was served and all having had a grand time, wished her many happy returns of the day and started for their homes about one o'clock.

The crowd that gathered at the cemetery last Thursday did a good job and made it look better, but could not finish. They had another meeting this Thursday and will try to keep the good work going on

Is Sequim going to celebrate on the Fourth? If so, then it is surely time to get to work as Dungeness will celebrate on Saturday, the 2nd. This gives everyone a chance to come to Sequim on Monday, the 4th. Let everybody turn out and get ready to have a grand and glorious time on the 4th. The business men of our little burg should take hold of this and call a meeting and get things started as it is only three weeks off.

F. T. Balch and son True and M. Fleming and daughter Lizzie left Monday afternoon for Seattle to attend the regular annual meeting of the Pioneer Association. One of the main exercises this year will be the dedication of the new Washington Pioneer Hall, including the unveiling of the Tablets on the front of the building.

Next Sunday is Children's Day and the hours of the exercises will be from ten to eleven and the Woodmen will have memorial services from eleven to twelve.

Rev. C. M. Gouldr of Port Townsend will fill the pulpit this summer.

Dr. Dunton gave a fine temperance lecture last Sunday in the M. E. church.

DUNGENESS

Mrs. Chas. Cays is visiting relatives in Sequim.

Miss Ritchie is spending the week with Mrs. F. E. Knight.

Capt. Pointdexter will leave the light house soon. He will serve on a light ship.

The grammar and high schools will close this week.

Mrs. T Evans is helping Mrs. A. Cays at the hotel this week.

Work has been started on the covered bridge.

J. Knolph is in Seattle on business.

Edmond Haltor Mapes, father of J. B. Mapes, died at the home of the latter on Saturday morning and was buried in the Dungeness cemetery Sunday afternoon. The deceased lived a long useful life. He was born in Orange county, N. J., in 1817, being ninety-three years old when he died.

Smith's Building, Front street, in the First Ward; at Council Chambers in the Second Ward; Roods' Shop in the Third Ward; at Cabin on 6th, between Peabody and Vine, in the Fourth Ward; at Pringle's Cabin in the Fifth Ward, and at Old School House in the Sixth Ward, on the 20th day of June, A. D. 1910, between the hours of 9 a. m. and 7 p. m., on said day, at which time will be submitted to the qualified electors of said City the question, "Shall the Sale of intoxicating Liquor be Licensed within the City of Port Angeles, County of Clallam, State of Washington?"

C. E. SHIELDS, City Clerk.
Dated this 12th day of May, A. D., 1910.

A FALSE ALARM FROM THE SALOON

What Prominent Men, Representing the Best Thought of this Nation Say of the Evil of Saloons.

Sample copies of the Washington Saturday Review, a paper published at Olympia by A. S. Ruth, the saloon advocate, burdened the mails into Port Angeles last week, in the interests of the saloons.

The paper gives a definition of prohibition and personal liberty, as applied to the saloon, that is at variance with the advanced thought of the best thinking men of this nation. That paper says:

"Because the prohibition principal is contrary to the spirit of our free institutions, it cannot be enforced. Like decrees to regulate religious worship, the people will have none of it; the very men who will vote to put a community dry, are among the first to break the law. No sensible man can sincerely believe that he has a moral or legal right to say to another what he shall eat, drink or wear any more than he may dictate how that other shall worship God."

"An assault upon personal liberty, no matter from what source it comes, is unjustifiable. * * * The following from the pen of Theodore Roosevelt is a grand sermon on liberty, and is worthy of careful study and analysis:"

"The good citizen will demand liberty for himself, and as a matter of pride he will see to it that others receive the liberty which he thus claims as his own. *

"Not only should there be complete liberty in matters of religion and opinion, but complete liberty for each man to lead his life as he desires, PROVIDED ONLY THAT IN SO DOING HE DOES NOT WRONG HIS NEIGHBOR. Persecution is bad because it is persecution, and without reference to which side happens at the moment to be the persecutor and which the persecuted.

"In a republic, to be successful we must learn to combine intensity of conviction with a broad tolerance of difference of conviction. Wide difference of opinion in matters of religious, political and soeial belief must exist if conscience or intellect alike are not to be stunted, if there is to be room for healthy growth. Bitter internecine hatreds, based on such differences, are signs, not of earnestness of belief, but of that fanaticism which, whether religious or anti-religious, democratic or anti-democratic, is itself but a manifestation of the gloomy bigotry which has been the chief factor in the downfall of so many, many nations."

When Theodore Roosevelt gave utterance to the above he did so in a general way; but, a little further along, when speaking more specifically of the saloon, he said:

"The friends of the saloonkeepers denounce their opponents for not treating the saloon business like any other. The best answer to this is that the business is not like any other business, and that the actions of the saloonkeepers themselves conclusively prove this to be the case. The business tends to produce criminality in the population at large and law breaking among the saloon keepers themselves. When the liquor men are allowed to do as they wish, they are sure to debauch, not only the body social, but the body politic also.

"The most powerful saloonkeeper controlled the politicians and the police, while the latter, in turn, terrorized and blackmailed all other saloon keepers. If the American people do not control it, it will control them."

The Supreme Court of the United States in a judgment, says on this subject:

"By the general concurrance of opinion of every civilized and Christian community, there are few sources of crime and misery to society equal to the dramshop, where intoxicating liquors in small quantities, to be drunk at the time, are sold indiscriminately to all parties applying. The statistics of every State show a greater amount of crime and misery attributable to the use of ardent spirits obtained at these retail liquor saloons than to any other source. * * * There is no inherent right in a citizen to thus sell intoxicating liquors by retail; it is not a privilege of a citizen of the United States. As it is a business attended with danger to the community, it may as already said, be entirely prohibited under such conditions as will limit to the utmost its evils."

"If a loss of revenue should accrue to the United States from a diminished consumption of ardent spirits, she will be a gainer a thousand fold in the health, wealth and happiness of the people."—Supreme Court of the United States, 5 How., 632.

"By legalizing this traffic we agree to share with the liquor seller the responsibilities and evils of his business. Every man who votes for licence becomes, of necessity, a partner to the liquor traffic and all its consequences—the most degrading and ruinous of all human pursuits."—William McKinley.

"It is absolutly impossible to have a permanent, decent municipal government where the saloon dominates municipal politics. Elimination of the saloon will help municipal politics everywhere."—Governor Hoke Smith, Georgia.

"It is a business the natural tendency of which is toward lawlessness, and the time has come when it will either run the politics of the state or be run out of the politics of the state."—Governor Folk, Missouri.

"The great cause of social crime is drink. When I hear of a family broken up, and ask the cause—drink. If I go to the gallows and ask its victim the cause, the answer—drink. Then I ask myself in perfect wonderment, Why do not men put a stop to this thing?"—Archbishop Ireland.

We could easily fill an entire page of the paper with similar quotations from eminent men. We have the clippings laid away for future reference.

A GREAT TEMPERANCE RALLY SUNDAY

point where a drinking man will have a hard row to hoe, and the poor fellow who has aquired an appetite that has the best of him will see his family going hungry because he is barred from a chance to earn a livelihood through his known habit. Let us therefore take heed, that we do away with the saloon and stop making men drunkards, and thereby imperiling their families. I was over to the city of Wilbur, Gov. Hay's home town in eastern Washington, during the local option campaign there, and I was to speak in a church, one of the popular churches of the city. It was a union service, and on the platform with me were several preachers and several women. We had a good meeting and some enthusiasm was apparent. I was invited to stay over the next night. A committee of business men said to me, 'We are going to have another meeting tomorrow night and we want you to speak', and when I mounted the platform in the largest hall in the city, seated there were the business men of the city, sixteen of them, and it is needless to say that the meeting was a rousing one, and that the town voted dry by a good majority. Gov. Hay telegraphed his congratulations, saying he was prouder than ever of his home city. We have the business men with us, and we have the governors now. There is only one scalawag governor in office who will not give the temperance people a fair shake, he of Tennessee, and at the coming election he will be snowed under so hard h'ell never be heard of any more.

"Senator Ruth is to speak here soon. He is publishing a liquor men's paper at Olympia. He will tell you that he is for 'temperance' and against prohibition. Well, let him come. While he was off on a recent trip in the interest of the saloons, his home county voted dry by a substantial majority, as I expect you will down here."

Baker will trade you a new stove for the old one.

NOTICE OF HEARING.

No. 433.

In the Superior Court of the State of Washington for Clallam County.

Arthur W. Cays, guardian of the above named minors, having on the 23d day of May, 1910, presented to and filed in this Court a petition, duly verified by his oath, praying for an order to sell certain real estate belonging to said minors and to reinvest the proceeds of said sale for the support, maintenance and education of said minors, and the Honorable Court Commissioner of Clallam County having made and entered herein an order fixing Saturday, the 18th day of June, 1910, at 10 o'clock a. m. of said day, at the court house in Port Angeles, Washington, as the time and place for the hearing upon said petition and ordering notice thereof to be duly given; Now, in pursuance of said order,

Notice is hereby given that said petition will be heard on said 18th day of June, 1910, at the hour and place above named, at which time and place the next of kin of said minors and all persons interested herein or in the estate of said minors may appear and file their objections in writing, if any they have, and show cause why the prayer of said petition should not be granted.

Witness my hand and the seal of said Superior Court this 25th day of May, 1910. HORACE WHITE, Clerk.
