OUTLINED AIMS OF INSURGENTS

Judge White Told Audience Why He Believed Poindexter Should Be Choice of People.

Judge Wm. H. (Warhorse) White of Seattle spoke in the opera house here Tuesday night in the interest of the candidacy of Congressman Miles Poindexter, now candidate for senator. The band was out in force and a gathering of over a hundred all voters, heard the discourse. Mayor Lewis presided as chairman.

Judge White stated that he did not come here to make Republican converts but to confer and advise with the republicans of the county relative to the best interests of the republican party. He had helped organize the first republican party, he said, and therefor thought he could take the privilege of advising with members of that party. Certain interests have secured control of the republican party and are using or have been using it for their own aggrandizement—for the enrichment of a few to the detriment of the many, and naturally certain members of the party have had enough of this—and to the end that the party might again become worthy of trust they have started out to get the party back to first principles. There has been a great deal said about insurgency, said the speaker, but I wish to call your attention to the fact that the republican party was born of insurgency and can only live thru insurgency when the best interests of the people are being ignored. Patrick Henry was an insurgent, and Christ himself, when he overthrew the tables of the money changers, and showed the hypocrisy of the High priests.

Who are the leaders of the movement, he asked, and is there any call for insurgency? Ask yourself the question.

Judge White then called attention to Cushman's great speech on the potency of the rules of the house which made the speaker a czar and the members lilliputians. This was six years ago, and now at the late republican (?) state conventionCushman is extolled for doing what Poindexter has done, and the latter by innuendo is condemned. The speakers at that convention, he said, must have felt or should have felt a blistering of their throats as they spoke of two men so differently—for doing the same thing.

The insurgents have done many things for the good of the party and the people and want to do more. They want a parcels post; they want the elimination of special interests from politics; they want a graduated income tax; an inheritance tax, and a revision of the tariff to a protection tariff—which is a tariff simply covering the difference between cost of production here and abroad; more than this is not protection, it is robbery. President Roosevelt has said in recent speeches that we want these things, and it is significant that he, the best posted man in the world, says we need them, if we do not.

Judge White then spoke of conservation at some length, stating that it is the duty of the government to prevent monopoly. He closed with the statement that the real issue before the people is, "Shall a few wealthy men pass the laws of the land that enrich themselves and impoverish the masses?"

Believe Road will Be Built Soon.

In Irondale it is considered as not unlikely that there is something in the latest rumors concerning early railroad construction, says the Townsend Leader. It is no secret that officials of the Classen ChemicalCompany at Port Hadlock, were promised months ago that the Milwaukee would have a line into this territory, carrying away the products of the by-product plant within a short time after the factory was in operation. As a result of this promise, large quantities of freight shipped from Eastern points to the plant were routed over that line. The time is at hand when the Classen plant will be doing business. Western Steel is creating a traffic of thousands of tons monthly, while the announcement of the floating of the big electrical project of the Olmypic Power and Development Company will attract much attention. Indeed, it can be stated without violating a confidence, that the attention of big men has already been attracted to the Olympic peninsula on account of the floating of this big project.

WESTERN WASHINGTON FAIR 19TH TO 25TH

Splendid Illustration of Farm Products of the Puget Sound Country Promised at Seattle Show.

A monster live stock show, with blue blooded stock from all over the Northwest, a big poultry exhibition, a horticultural and agricultural department, and a daily entertainment program consisting of harness and running races, cowboy relay races, Indian buck and squaw races, high jumping contests, acrobatic performances and live stock parades will be among the features of the second annual Western Washington Fair, to be held in Seattle the week of September 19th to 25th.

The fair management is making preparations to give visitors the time of their lives during fair week in Seattle, and there will be something doing every minute, every day during the fair. Lovers and breeders of live stock will have opportunity to inspect the greatest array of fine bred animals ever assembled in the Northwest, with the possible exception of the exhibition at the Exposition last fall.

Entries of beef and dairy cattle have been received from the majority of the leading breeders of the Northwest and many of these animals will come to Seattle decorated with ribbons they have won at other fairs along the circuit. The horse show will be a corker, for several well known breeders will be on hand with a number of new importations of fancy bred animals that have won many ribbons in foreign shows.

Fruit growers have promised to make an attractive display of their products and the fact that the fair comes late in September will give them an opportunity denied them at fairs earlier in the season. The agricultural display will be a splendid illustration of the farm products of Western Washington.

CONGRESSMAN M'CREEDIE GREETS FRIENDS HERE

Congressman W. W. McCreedie, who is a candidate for re-election to represent this, the second district, was in town the latter part of last week making and renewing the acquaintance of local republicans.

The Judge is a very affable gentleman, of good address, and one who would at once gain the confidence and respect of everyone with whom he came in contact. Not only is he a man who has no rough edges and would fit in as an old member on committee work, but his long experience on the bench would naturally make him a valuable member, and it is in the committee rooms that the work of congress is done.

And Judge McCreedie has been successful. Tho elected only a year ago, to succeed the late Francis Cushman, he has made a good record and got pretty much all that his constituents asked for. He was the only congressman in the country who got three items in the way of appropriations for federal buildings, the rules of the committee allowing but two. His legal experience in hearing condemnation suits enabled him to secure an amendment protecting the homesteader in coal reserves. He materially assisted the Washington delegation in securing the long list of appropriations for rivers and harbors.

Mr. McCreedie believes the rules are all right—he is not an insurgent. He also feels that he has the best chance of securing the nomination. The southwest is for him; he will carry Chehalis and Lewis and doubtless will get a good vote in the straits counties. He also says his supporters assure him he will have close to fifty per cent of the vote in Pierce, the big county, and he figures that thirty per cent there will nominate him.

The Alaska Pacific Steamship Company's steamer Watson ran ashore on Waaddah island, seven miles from Cape Flattery, Thursday night, the 1st. Prompt aid by the Waaddah Island life saving crew under Capt. Geo. MacAfee, resulted in all of the 92 passengers being landed ashore by midnight, or within an hour after striking.

The point where the Watson struck the beach is between jagged reefs which run out several hundred feet from shore. She was pulled off Friday night at high tide by the Snohomish, Capt. Levis commanding. Part of the cargo was thrown overboard to lighten her.

WABASH TOO POOR TO IMPROVE LINES

Chicago, Sept. 3.—Henry Miller, of the Wabash railroad, on the stand here yesterday in the hearing by examiners of the interstate commerce commission to determine the justice of an advance in rates by the Western roads, declared that the revenues of his company were sufficient neither for the maintenance of an adequate service nor for needed improvements.

"Our income," he said, "enables us to maintain the present trackage, buildings and equipment, but leaves practically nothing for replacement or improvements."

Among the items of increased expense enumerated by Mr. Miller were wages of employes, which, according to tables presented by him, increased for the transportation and maintenance of way department $1,642,000 in 1910 over the amount paid in 1903. For the locomotive and car department employes the increase from 1903 to 1910 was $696,165.

EXPERTS OF ABILITY FOR JUDGES AT SPOKANE SHOW

Spokane, Sept. 5.—Five experts of recognized ability and continent-wide experience have been appointed by the board of trustees of the National Apple Show to pass official judgment on all exhibits and award cash prizes and premiums of a total value of $20,000 at the third annual exposition in Spokane, November 14 to 19. Prof. H. E. Van Deman of Washington, D. C., is chief judge, his assistants being J. W. Murphy of Glenwood, Iowa, C. J. Sinsel of Boise, Idaho, Prof. S. A. Beach of Ames, Iowa, and J. Gibb of Kelowna, B. C. The judging will begin at noon on November 14.

Prof. Van Deman, who is conceded to be the foremost authority in America, has been in exposition work since 1884, when he was a judge at the Cotton Centennial Exposition in New Orleans. He is a life member of the American Pomological Society and organized and conducted the division of pomology in the United States department of agriculture for years.

Prof. Beach, who was chairman of the board of judges at the first National Apple Show in Spokane, is horticulturist at the Iowa agricultural experimental station, Ames, and was horticulturist at the New York experimental station, Geneva, for fourteen years prior to 1905, since which time he has been at Ames.

Mr. Murphy was with the Iowa exhibit at the World's Fair, Chicago, in 1893 and assisted in judging fruit at the exposition. He has been associated with Prof. Van Deman in numerous judging contests and is an authority on seedlings.

Mr. Sinsel is among the leading authorities on western apples, particularly commercial varieties, and their marketing. He is an authority on box pack and scores closely.

Mr. Gibb is a practical horticulturist with seven years' experience in selecting and packing prize-winning fruit for exhibitions, including those in Great Britain, Belgium, Toronto, New Westminster, Seattle and Spokane. He had charge of demonstrations in packing for the provincial government of British Columbia last winter and has been retained for this season.

Referendum Bill Passed.

JOHN L. WILSON WITHDRAWS FRON SENATORSHIP CONTEST

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 5.—Former United States Senator John L. Wilson formally announced his withdrawal from the race for the Republican senatorial nomination Saturday. He sent a telegram to Secretary of State I. M. Howell, requesting that official to notify county auditors to remove Senator Wilson's name from the primary ballots and from this time until the close of the campaign Mr. Wilson will work for the nomination of Judge Thomas Burke.

Senator Wilson's announcement, coming as a result of several days' conference and the suggestion of party leaders throughout the country, including the president of the United States, that discord be avoided as much as possible, was not unexpected. But it came only after a thorough and careful canvass of the situation in which all those called into conference agreed was advisable.

Wilson's Statement.

After sending a telegram to Secretary of State I. M. Howell asking his name be withdrawn from the primary ticket, Senator Wilson gave out the following statement:

To the Republicans of Washington:

We have been in a campaign under the direct primary law for United States senator for the past five or six months. When the campaign started I was of the impression that it would be confined to Republicans voting for Republican candidates, and Democrats voting for Democratic candidates, because the spirit of the direct primary law is that such primaries are in force and effect party nominating conventions.

As the campaign has progressed, it has become apparent that anything would be done that could be done to overthrow the Republican party in the state of Washington. Some of those who professed allegiance to, and held office by the suffrage of the Republican party, owing to the conditions of the times, were, if possible, to be elected for the reason that, while masquerading as Republicans, they were in point of fact near Democrats.

For some days it has to my mind been apparent that with three candidates in the county of King the election of any one of them was impossible. I think that those in opposition to my candidacy were of the same opinion. The constant and continual pressure from Republicans outside of King county, who are earnestly solicitous for the success of the Republican party, was of such a character and so pronounced that it could not be passed by. I, therefore, called the chairman of the state Republican committe into conference, and through him entered inot conference with Judge Thomas Burke. The consensus of opinion was that neither of us could be elected, with both in the field. I then suggested that Judge Burke name five of his friends and I would name five citizens of Seattle, who had not been actively in charge of my political campaign, and that we should present to them the situation and ask their kindly offices in trying to untangle the situation. At a considerable sacrifice of their time and personal affairs they have met and discussed the situation in all of its phases.

Lacked Only Clear Field.

I am not desiring in any manner or in any way to enter into discussion, yet I think that it was the consensus of opinion that, while Judge Burke, on the face of the lead, might have a slight advantage over me in the county of King, nevertheless, it was admitted that in the outside counties, especially in Eastern Washington and in the county of Spokane, I was the stronger candidate. If I could have a clear field in the county of King, I felt absolutely certain that with the large vote that I had reason to expect in Eastern Washington, I could be nominated.

I do not deny that there were some differences of opinion in regard to this, but there were throughout the state forces that, in a large measure, stood for votes that favored me. These included the old Republican organization of this state and the acquaintances and identification with the Republican party in the state for almost thirty years.

At the outset of the conference it was demonstrated that under no conditions or circumstances would Judge Burke withdraw, and with us both in the field it was evident to me that the election of either of us was hopeless. In addition to this, a request has come to me from the head of the Republican party of the United States to endeavor to adjust the situation, and I, therefore, have to say to the Republicans and say to my many friends in the Republican party, I have made again the sacrifice of my personal ambitions.

I have been unable to reach and consult with my friends throughout the state, and this is the keenest disappointment that I have. If my friends could have reached within the time necessary, a consultation with a large number of my fellow Republicans, whose steadfast loyalty to my aspirations has been unquestioned, and to whom I am profoundly grateful, would have been exceedingly desirable; but I hope that all take the will for the deed.

They, at least, will not, however, have to say that I stood in the way of the success of the Republican party, to which I am devotedly attached, in the State of Washington.

I sincerely hope and trust the action taken will redound to the great good of our party and the success of the candidate; and that, if my retirement from the contest will aid and assist in any way in bringing success, I will have no regrets for myself.

To my friends or supporters who may see this statement, I can only say I thank you, one and all. I shall never forget your cordial and sincere support, and I trust the future will bring to you prosperity, happiness and contentment. God bless you, every one.

JNO. L. WILSON.

Unorganized Workers Get Increase.

Pueblo, Colo., Sept. 3.—All unorganized employes of the Missouri Pacific railway, from superintendents to stenographers, received an increase of 6 per cent. when they got their pay envelopes yesterday. The increase does not affect the organized workmen.

Population of New York.

Washington, Sept. 3.—Census figures show the following: Manhattan borough, 2,331,542; Bronx borough, 430,980; Brooklyn borough, 1,634,351; Richmond borough, 85,965; Queens borough, 284,041. Greater New York, 4,766,883, increase 1,329,681, or 38.7 per cent., as compared with 3,437,202 in 1900.

MAY HAVE TO CHANGE RULES OF THE GAME

Osawatomie, Kan., Sept. 1.—From the time of his arrival here yesterday morning until he was escorted to the Masonic temple, Col. Roosevelt remained in his car at the station, while a large crowd of men and women were outside, shouting for him to speak. The colonel was kept busy talking to members of Gov. Stubbs' party, but to entertain the assemblage, several speakers delivered short speeches.

Follow John Brown.

"We fellows are taking up the work where it was laid down by John Brown fifty years ago," said William Allen White in a five-minute address.

Col. Roosevelt's speech is regarded by those who heard it as a studied declaration of the principles for which he stands. Since his return from Africa, more than two months ago, he has been silent in regard to his views on specific issues of the day, except in a few cases, in which he has spoken of particular local issues. The former president broke his silence yesterday in a speech which left no doubt as to where he stands. He made no direct reference to the Taft administration, although he expressed his views emphatically on a number of questions with which the administration has been and is dealing.

"I stand for the square deal. But when I say that I am for the square deal I mean not merely that I stand for fair play under the present rules of the game, but that I stand for having those rules changed so as to work for a more substantial equality of opportunity, and of reward for equally good service.

Must Be Rid of Special Interests.

"This means that our governments, national and state, must be freed from the sinister influence or control of special interests. Exactly as the special interests of cotton and slavery threatened our political integrity before the civil war, so now the great special business interests too often control and corrupt the men and methods of government for their own profit. We must drive the special interests out of politics. That is one of our tasks today.

"Every special interest is entitled to justice—full, fair and complete—but not one is entitled to a vote in congress, a voice on the bench, or to representation in any public office. The constitution guarantees protection to property, and we must make that promise good. But it does not give the right of suffrage to any corporation."

Specific Measures Favored.

After saying that in order to insure equal opportunity for all men the present "rules must be changed," Col. Roosevelt put himself on record in favor of the following proposals:

1. Elimination of special interests from politics.

2. Complete and effective publicity of corporation affairs.

3. Passage of laws prohibiting the use of corporate funds directly or indirectly for political purposes.

4. Government supervision of the capitalization not only of public service corporations, but of all corporations doing an interstate business.

5. Personal responsibility of officers of corporations which break the law.

6. Increase in the power of the federal bureau of corporations and the interstate commerce commission to control combinations in industry more effectively.

7. Revision of the tariff, one schedule at a time, on the basis of information furnished by an expert tariff commission.

8. Graduated income tax and graduated inheritance tax.

9. Readjustment of the country's financial system in such a way as to prevent repetition of periodical financial panics.

10. Maintenance of an efficient army and navy large enough to insure for the nation the respect of other nations as a guarantee of peace.

11. Use of national resources for the benefit of all the people.

12. Extension of the work of the department of agriculture of the national and state governments, and of the agricultural colleges and experiment stations, so as to take in all phases of life on the farm.

Compensate Workers.

13. Regulation of the terms and conditions of labor by means of comprehensive workmen's compensation acts, state and national laws to regulate child labor and the work of women, enforcement of better sanitary conditions for workers and extension of the use of safety appliances in industry and commerce, both within and between the states.

14. Clear division of authority between the national and the various state governments.

15. Direct primaries, associated with corrupt practices acts.

16. Publicity of campaign contributions, not only after election, but before election as well.

Remove Incompetents.

17. Prompt removal of unfaithful or incompetent public servants.

18. Provisions against the performance of any service for interstate corporations or the reception of any compensation from such corporations by national officers.

Gob. Stubbs introduced the colonel as "the greatest man, not only in Kansas and the United States, but in the world today."

INSURGENT PLATFORM BY KANSAS REPUBLICANS

Topeka, Kan., Aug. 31.—With the insurgent faction of the Republican party of Kansas in complete control, the state party council yesterday adopted a platform decidedly progressive.

Gov. Stubbs was elected chairman. Later he resigned and Senator Bristow was chosen to preside over the council during the rest of the session.

When Senator Bristow took the chair he spoke on party issues. He upheld the inheritance tax, condemned monopolistic control and declared that more legislation should be enacted regulating the railroads.

"The tariff bill enacted by the congress of 1909 did not follow the standard fixed in the national platform," he said, "and was a violation of its pledges. I believe that a new tariff measure should be passed and mean to fight for it just as long as I am in the senate.

"Moreover, I believe we should be allowed to vote on every section of a tariff bill separately."

Favors Oregon Senator Plan.

In closing, Senator Bristow declared in favor of the Oregon plan of electing United States senators and for a graduated income tax.

Following the Bristow speech, the committee on resolutions submitted its report. The platform that had been prepared by the committee was adopted without change.

The platform, which was prepared by William Allen White, the Emporia editor, approves the action of the insurgents in house and senate, declares in favor of a tariff commission, advocates jail sentences for violation of anti-trust laws; advocates further amendment of the interstate commerce law which will give power and money to the interstate commerce commission to ascertain the physical valuation of the railroads.

The Roosevelt brand of conservation is approved and Roosevelt himself indorsed as a champion of human rights

ROOSEVELT ARRAIGNED BY WILLIAM BARNES

New York, Sept. 3.—William Barnes, jr., Republican state committeman and leader of Albany, issued a statement tonight in which he declared that "hysteria has run riot throughout this country," and that the question to be decided at the coming Republican state convention at Saratoga is "whether the Republican party will fight the disease or succumb in the interests of politicians seeking office or temporary acclaim."

The character of the recent addresses of Theodore Roosevelt in the West, Mr. Barnes aid, "has startled all thoughtful men and impressed them with the frightful danger which lies in his political ascendency."

When he talked with Col. Roosevelt after the meeting that selected Vice President Sherman as temporary chairman of the convention over Col. Roosevelt, and learned his attitude toward "public matters," Mr. Barnes says he told the former president that he never could have voted for him.

Has Divers Forms.

Mr. Barnes' statement, in part, says:

"Hysteria has run riot throughout this country, expressing itself in one form or another, such as 'direct nominations,' 'initiative and referendum,' the 'initiative and recall'—it matters not what particular form the hysteria takes. The question to be decided at Saratoga is whether the Republican party will fight the disease or succumb in the interest of politicians seeking office or temporary acclaim.

"The recent attack upon the supreme court of the United States by a keen-witted and aspiring citizen, could not have been made without a purpose well thought out. It was an appeal to passion. If this appeal against judicial decisions is popular and is not rebuked there is no reason whatsoever, if a direct primary law should be enacted in this state, that candidates for judicial offices, compelled to run the gauntlet of a district or statewide primary, would not, in order to appeal to the temporary sentiments of the moment, declare in advance their attitude upon matters which would come before them for judicial review."

Survey Parties Homeward Bound.

Dawson, Sept. 3.—The geological and international boundary survey parties are expected here en route south by the end of this month.

LOWER TAXES NOW AN ISSUE

FORMER COMMISSIONER EASTERDAY DECLARES STATE IS A SPENDTHRIFT

Not Getting Value Received for Immense Sums Expended—State Tax Commission Holds Out Hope for Slight Decrease in Tax Levy the Coming Year—Valuation Is Greater.

Olympia, Sept. 3.—J. H. Easterday, former state tax commissioner and now candidate for legislative nomination from Pierce county, said:

"A blind man can see that the paramount state issue is one of lower taxes. This state enjoys the distinction of paying twice as much for government as any other state in the Union. Six years ago, where it cost us $2,000,000 to run the state, it now costs us $10,000,000. Are we getting value received for this tremendous difference? We are far from being on a cash basis and even the school debt has crept up until today the bonded debt of the school districts amounts to more than $35 for each school child.

"I am familiar with every department of government from the highest to the lowest, and every institution in the state; I know their needs, desires and extravagance and am prepared to say that each and every one of them is costing more money than it should. If any one takes issue with this statement, I shall be pleased to furnish a bill of particulars or discuss the matter publicly.

STATE TAX COMMISSION HOPES TO SHADE LEVY

Olympia, Sept. 3.—About $850,000 must be levied for the state highway fund this year, and probably $170,000 for the national guard, but the state tax commission announced through Chairman Rockwell that it hoped to be able to reduce the state direct levy for common schools and for state general expenses below the figures of 1909.

The state good roads levy was doubled by the last legislature and is made mandatory, the military tax is not to exceed one-fifth of a mill, the school tax is such a sum as with other sources of revenue will produce $10 for each person of school age in the state, irrespective of the number who attend school.

The state board of equalization consists of the three tax commissioners, land commissioner and auditor. It will meet next week to consider the levy. Mr. Rockwell said that returns from the counties show a big increase in assessed valuations. He added:

"Last year the total assessed valuations approximated $790,000,000, and this year I expect it to approximate $850,000,000.

"Last year we were under the necessity of levying the limit of 3 mills for the general fund, but this year we hope to reduce this somewhat. It may also be possible to slightly reduce the state school tax, which last year was 3½ mills, I believe. The state road tax levy is fixed by law at 1 mill. The military fund is fixed at not more than 1-5 mill, and we cannot tell yet whether the entire levy will be required or not."

CABINET MEN SURPRISED BY TRIP THROUGH ALASKA

Cordova, Sept. 3.—Attorney General George W. Wickersham and Secretary of Commerce and Labor Charles Nagel sailed for Seattle Thursday on the government steamship Albatross. They are due at Seattle Monday. Both officials said they were unable to express their surprise at the wonderful things they had seen in Alaska.

"We came to see a little place called Alaska, but discovered an empire," said Attorney General Wickersham. "I realize more and more the importance of opening the coal lands, and after we have a talk with the president, he may have some recommendations that will result in straightening out the present tangle.

"The one great need of Alaska is railroad transportation, as upon it depends the adequate development of Alaska's mineral and agricultural lands. It is evident that this transportation cannot be furnished until the coal lands are opened up, for cheap coal is required to operate a railroad. I am in hopes that something will be done in this matter this winter."

Secretary Nagel said that he hopes to be able to return to Alaska next year, and Mr. Wickersham expressed the same wish. Both expressed gratification at the cordial welcome given them by Alaskans, and said that as a result of their visit they are now more able to understand Alaska's needs.

To Plan Greater Seattle.

The Seattle civic plans commission has instructed City Engineer R. H. Thomson to open negotiations with Virgil G. Bogue, civil engineer, to take charge of the planning of Greater Seattle. Mr. Bogue was among the number who submitted a bid to the commission for this work and because of his national reputation he was chosen. His services will cost the city at least $1,500 a month, exclusive of expenses, office rent and help.

MAKES APPEAL TO COMMON SENSE

PRESIDENT TAFT SPEAKS AT NATIONAL CONSERVATION CONVENTION.

Also Makes Address to Great Crowd at State Fair Grounds—No Intention to Prosecute Workingmen Under Law Against Various Unjust Combinations.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 6.—After speaking at the conservation congress in St. Paul yesterday afternoon and later at the Minnesota state fair grounds, outside this city, President Taft left for Beverly last night by way of Chicago.

In his conservation address the president won a quick response from his thousands of hearers by an appeal to practical common sense in dealing with conservation problems.

In the opinion of many who heard him, he also made answer to the recent agitation for a "new nationalism," or a federal centralization of power, by declaring that the only safe course to pursue was to hold fast to the limitations of the constitution and to regard as sacred the power of the states.

Mr. Taft, amid applause, made reference to the efforts of Theodore Roosevelt in the cause of conservation, but he declared the time for rhapsodies and glittering generalities had passed. He suggested to the congress that it should invite its speakers to come down to details, to specific evils and to specific remedies.

Hearers Respond.

These sentiments by the president seemed to receive the approval of nearly all his hearers. They came near the end of a long detailed and exhaustive discussion of conservation, and he ended his speech with the audience on its feet.

Mr. Taft did not attempt to solve the problem of water power site control, as between the states and the general government, but after stating the arguments advanced on both sides of the subject, he said he would submit the whole matter to the federal congress for determination.

At the fair grounds the president delivered a Labor day address, the most notable utterance of which was a statement that he knew of no intention on the part of the government to prosecute labor leaders under the anti-trust law. At the same time the president said he did not believe labor organizations should be exempted from such prosecution by specific statute. He declared that such a provision of law would smack of class legislation.

He did not believe labor unions desired or needed class legislation, and said he counted on their help in preventing such legislation.

St. Paul Welcomes.

The president received a demonstrative, but not an uproarious welcome at St. Paul. The streets were lined from the depot to the reviewing stand, where Mr. Taft witnessed the passing of the Labor day parade. At the conservation congress the president was welcomed with prolonged cheering. After luncheon in St. Paul he rode by automobile to the state fair grounds, and received a tumultous greeting from a throng which filled the grandstand and overflowed into the racetrack and infield.

On the way to Minneapolis from the fair grounds the president was greeted noisily along the way. He dined at a hotel here this evening informally and then was driven direct to his train.

EASIER PAYMENTS ON IRRIGATION SOUGHT

Malott, Wash., Sept. 6.—The Okanogan Water Users' Association is endeavoring to bring about a general request to the United States reclamation department to obtain a reduction in payments for water supplied for irrigation by various government projects. Communications have been addressed to officials in a position to assist, and the matter will be pushed, if possible, until a bill accomplishing the desired result is introduced in congress.

The present law requires the water charge, which, under the Okanogan project, is $65 per acre, to be paid in ten annual installments without interest, plus a yearly maintenance fee of $1.50 per acre. It has been suggested that the payments be extended over a longer period, or so arranged that only the maintenance fee shall be due during the first four or five years.

In fruit districts the latter plan would be of great benefit, as the payments could often be made from bearing orchards, and the heavy financial drain to bring trees to the productive age would be lessened.

Agriculture in High School.

Medford, Or., Sept. 6.—The Medford high school when it opens its doors for the fall term will offer a one year's course in agriculture, with special emphasis upon tree culture. S. H. Hall, a well-known ex-athlete of the Oregon Agricultural College, has been placed in charge of the new branch of training. Medford is the first high school in the state to present a course in agriculture.

GARMENT WORKERS' STRIKE OFF

AFTER NINE MONTHS' IDLENESS STRIKERS WIN SIGNAL VICTORY.

Seventy Thousand Will Return to Work Under Improved Conditions—In the Readjustment the Sweatshop Is Abolished—"Preferential Union Shop."

New York, Sept. 3.—The cloakmakers' strike, one of the greatest industrial disturbances in the history of American labor, was settled tonight. Seventy thousand garment makers who have been idle for nine months, will return to work. Ten thousand, and those dependent upon them—50,000 souls in all—were on the point of eviction, and hundreds had already been forced onto the streets. The industrial loss to employers and employes has run high into the millions. In loss of wages alone, the total has been estimated at more than $10,000,000, while the loss to manufacturers, jobbers and retailers the country over have been computed at ten times that amount.

Peaceable Strike.

In spite of the stupendous readjustment involved, the strike has been in the main notable for peaceableness.

Julius Henry Cohen, counsel for the Manufacturers' Association, describes the agreement signed by him and representatives of the strikers in this sentence:

"No principle has been surrendered by the manufacturers, yet the union may truly claim they have won a great victory for their people. The manufacturers believe in the union and in the principle that all who desire its benefits should share in its burdens."

One essential of this victory and one important not only to the strikers, but to the nation at large, is the abolition of all contract work at home. Hereafter garments made in New York will be manufactured under sanitary conditions. There will be no more sweatshops.

Rock Avoided.

The rock on which all previous efforts at mutual conciliation have split has been the closed shop. That rock has now been avoided by the adoption of the "preferential union shop" idea, for which Richard D. Brandeis, of Boston, formerly counsel for Glavis in the Pinchot-Ballinger hearing, is given full credit.

In the articles of agreement the idea is thus described: "Each member of the manufacturers is to maintain union shops, union shops being understood to refer to a shop where union standards as to working conditions, hours of labor and rates of wages prevail, and where in hiring help union men are preferred, it being understood that since there are differences of degree of skill, employers shall have the freedom of selection as between one union man and another, and shall not be confined to any list nor bound to follow any prescribed order."

Other Agreements.

Other articles provide for these more important points:

1, electric power free; 2, no work at home; 3, discipline of any manufacturer proved guilty of discrimination among his employes; 4, six days' work a week and a cash weekly payday; 5, all subcontracting within shops abolished; 6, nine hours' work a day, five days a week, and five hours the sixth day; 7, the price of piece work to be agreed upon by a committee of employes and their employers; 8, double pay for overtime.

Clarke Pioneers to Organize.

Vancouver, Wash., Sept. 6.—The Clarke County Pioneers' Association will be formed at a picnic to be held for that purpose at Orchards, September 24. A call has been issued for all old settlers to be present and the invitation includes the newcomers, who are expected to assist in forming this association.

FASHION HINTS

The wardrobe of the summer girl who hasn't one or more little dresses on the order of the one sketched here, is decidedly incomplete.

This is of light blue handkerchief linen, plentifully trimmed with Irish lace, but carried out very simply. The style is one that is not extreme but always dainty and becoming.

NATIONAL FORESTS ARE BECOMING POPULAR

Before the year's outing season is over, nearly half a million persons will have sought recreation in the national forests of the United States. According to the record of the United States department of agriculture, the total last year was, in close figures, 406,775. With the finest mountain scenery and much of the best fishing and big game hunting in the United States, the national forests, made more and more accessible each year through protection and development by the government, are fast becoming great national playgrounds for the people.

The use of the forests for recreation is as yet in its beginning, but is growing steadily and rapidly, in some of the forests at the rate of 100 per cent. per annum. The day seems not far distant when 1,000,000 persons will annually visit them.

By principal states the national forest visitors numbered 23,000 in Arizona, 103,000 in California, 140,000 in Colorado, 19,000 in Montana, 10,000 in New Mexico, 33,000 in Oregon, 22,000 in Idaho, 16,000 in Utah and 12,000 in Washington.

Of the natural wonders and landmarks of interest in the national forests several have been set apart as national monuments, among them Cinder Cone, a great lava basin in California; the Gila cliff dwellings, extensive remains of a prehistoric race in New Mexico; the unsurpassed Grand canyon of the Colorado, in Arizona; Jewel cave, South Dakota; Lassen peak, the terminus of a long line of extinct volcanoes in the Cascades; the Pinnacles, a collection of remarkable jagged peaks in California; and the Tonto, a group of prehistoric ruins in the Tonto forest in Arizona.

The big trees, Glacier park, the petrified forest, the Oregon caves and numerous other phenomena serve to attract other hosts of visitors.

A record of 9,218 miles of trail cut, 1,236 miles of road laid out, and 4,851 miles of telephone line strung tells what the government has done in the way of pushing the conveniences of civilization into the primeval forest.

HADLEY, OF YALE, HEADS NEW RAILROAD BOARD

Springfield, Mass, Sept. 3.—President Taft has announced his appointments to the new stock and bond commission, which will investigate the question of bringing future issue of railroad securities under the supervision and control of the inter-state commerce commission.

The announcement was made shortly after the president left Boston for St. Paul, where he will speak before the national conservation congress.

Dr. Arthur T. Hadley, president of Yale university, is named as chairman of the commission.

The other members are Frederick N. Judson, of St. Louis; Frederick Strauss of New York; Walter L. Fisher, of Chicago, and Prof. B. H. Meyers, of Madison, Wis. The president is particularly gratified at obtaining the consent of all these gentlemen to serve. More than 200 names were considered before he arrived at a choice.

Mr. Taft regards the commission as representative both as to conservative and progressive thought in railroad regulation.

The president's train had hardly pulled out of Boston before he was in the thick of a series of political conferences. Senator W. Murray Crane, his most intimate political adviser boarded the train here to ride to Pittsfield, and Gov. Hughes, of New York, rode from Pittsfield to Albany.

RUMOR IS LUMBER RATE WILL ADVANCE

Washington, Sept. 5.—According to private advices received by the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Hill and Harriman railroads contemplate again advancing the rate on lumber shipped east from Pacific coast points when the existing rates fixed by the commission expire automatically on October 15.

It is reported that the railroads contemplate advancing the rates even beyond the point which they sought to attain two years ago, at the time when the commission made material reductions in their schedules as filed.

In the event that this attempt is [illegible]er in- [illegible] com- [illegible]nd it [illegible] two [illegible]ustify [illegible]bliged [illegible] since [illegible] present rates, October 15, 1908.

Commission Not Suspicious.

Chicago, Sept. 5.—Interstate Commerce Commissioner Prouty, who attended the railroad rate hearing here, said the commission was approaching the rate investigation with an open mind.

"There is absolutely no suspicion in my mind," he declared, "or as far as I know, in the minds of any of the commissioners, that the accounts of the railroads have been padded or juggled in any way.

"There is a large appropriation which is used in paying for the examination of railroad books of account, but our force is not sufficient to keep the check right up to date. In my judgment, however, all suspicion that the railroads are trying to do such a thing should be set at rest at once."

HOPES TO ESTABLISH SEAL INDUSTRY

FEDERAL FISH COMMISSIONER SURE THEY CAN BE RAISED IN FRESH WATER

Twenty Pups From Pribiloffs Soon to Arrive at Seattle Will Be Distributed Among Aquaria—Cost of Raising a Seal About the Same as Raising a Sheep—Profit Would Be Much More.

Seattle, Sept. 3.—The Washington correspondent of the Post-Intelligencer says:

Although Fish Commissioner Bowers was unable to induce any of the English fur seal experts to establish a plant in the United States for curing, plucking and dying the skins, he has returned from Europe more enthusiastic than ever over the future of the fur seal industry.

The government having abolished the fur seal monopoly on the Pribilof islands has that industry now in its own hands. Mr. Bowers, though intent on building it up as a revenue producer for the government, believes from what he has observed and learned that his idea of getting private persons in various parts of the country to engage in seal farming is perfectly practicable.

"Our two seal pups from Bering sea now in the fisheries building here," said he, "have proved that infant seal can be raised and kept healthy in a habitat far distant from their native rookeries. Any animal that can thrive in the Potomac river water can thrive, I believe, even in Kentucky whiskey. But we have no intention of trying the latter experiment.

"The twenty pups we have ordered from the Pribiloffs will arrive at Seattle about the middle of September on a revenue cutter. I have ordered one of our fisheries cars to Seattle to meet them. The pups will be brought East and distributed among the aquaria in the large cities and elsewhere to demonstrate that fur seal can thrive in fresh water. I have no doubt that aquaria in New York, Boston and other places will be glad to get a pair each.

To Consult Nagle.

"I think it is safe to say that seal will thrive in any body of fresh water that does not freeze completely over in winter. The only difficulty will be in confning them, but the expense of building a seal-tight fence would be amply repaid by the profits. A farmer receives perhaps $5 for a lamb, while the value of a fur seal pelt is about $40 in the raw state, and it should not cost much more to raise a seal than a sheep after the industry is started."

Commissioner Bowers has not completed details of the manner in which the 10,000 or 12,000 skins taken by the government in the Pribiloffs this season will be sold. This will be announced after he consults with Secretary Nagle at Seattle on the secretary's arrival there about next Monday. The skins may be sold in San Francisco, but more probably they will be sent to the larger market in London, where they have to go eventually for treatment.

Answers Attacks.

The commissioner regards the attacks made by W. T. Hornaday, of New York, and the Camp Fire Club of America, on the department killing so many seal this year as absurd. He points out that no females are being killed and that the killing of surplus males is but following the practice of stock breeders, who retain but the selected males in their herds.

"If," said he, "the surplus males are not killed by the government they will kill each other or be captured by the pelagic sealers. If conservation is the object of Hornaday and his friends, they should seek to put the pelagic sealers out of business. If the surplus bulls are not killed when young their pelts become valueless except for crude purposes."

Market Fish Better Abroad.

During his absence Mr. Bowers visited England, France, Belgium and other countries, inspecting the fish markets of the various cities. "There is one thing in which they excel American markets," said he, "and that is in the method of handling fresh water fish. These are kept in water and sold alive, so that it is possible for a purchaser to select a fish or eel that is swimming about and have it killed and dressed immediately. Nowhere did I find either game or food fish that excel our American fish, but by reason of superior cooking the European fish often taste better to the educated and discriminating palate.

"I believe that the European sole would be a welcome addition to our markets. I shall recommend that we try to propagate it in this country."

Wenatchee Apples for Australia.

Wenatchee, Sept. 3.—The first carload of apples for the Australian market has been loaded and within the next week preparations will be made to load fifteen or sixteen cars for the three weeks trip across the ocean. These apples are being shipped by E. Wagner, of this city, who has established agencies in Melbourne and Sydney. William Edmunds will begin loading cars this week for the English market.

NOTHING NEW UNDER THE SUN.

Many "Inventions" Improvements on Things Existing Long Ago.

There is no new thing under the sun. Many of our boasted new "inventions" are simply second editions of things which were invented a thousand years ago, Pearson's Weekly says.

The taxicab is by no means a new idea. A German pr essor has written a letter to the Frankfort Gazette, in which he says he has discovered that Vitruvius, the Roman historian, describes a taximeter cab in use in Rome the year 79 A. D.

The mechanism of the taximeter caused a stone to drop into a box under the carriage every thousand paces. At the end of the journey the driver counted the stones which had fallen into the box, and in this way was able to calculate the fare.

Within the last fifty years an Englishman produced a particular kind of pin, which he called a "safety" pin. For this admirable service to mankind he was highly honored and fetes and favors have showered upon him.

However, when some one was poking about among the ruins of Pompeii they came upon a large number of bronze safety pins They were quite up-to-date pins, too. There was a coiled spring at one end and a catch at the other—just like those in constant use at the present day.

Thimbles have been found in prehistoric mounds and combs and hairpins were in existence before the Christian era. It is guessed with some certainty that the first needle must have been threaded by a thrifty housewife about 5,000 years ago.

The combination locks we use today, which can only be opened by a combination of certain numbers and letters, were well known and used extensively by the Chinese many centuries ago.

In China, too, they illuminated their houses a couple of thousand years ago with natural gas, which was conveyed to the consumer's house by means of bamboo tubes.

It is calculated that some shorthand systems go back to somewhere about 500 B. C. At any rate, there seems no doubt that the orations of Cicero were written with as much skill and rapidity as the modern stenographer could boast.

The ancients knew about electricity and, though we usually credit Watts with the discovery of steam as a motive power, Nero of Alexandria described machines driven by steam 2,000 years before Watts was born.

This same gentleman invented a double-force pump, such as is used nowadays as a fire engine, and he anticipated the modern turbine wheel.

FACE THAT WAS FAMILIAR.

Quite Sure She Had Met the Man and So She Really Had.

Two richly dressed young girls whose breeding and beauty would pass unquestioned anywhere were among the crowd at an exhibition of paintings last week. Suddenly the taller of them lifted her eyes and exclaimed to her companion, as she caught sight of a man entering the room: "Why, there's some one I ought to know real well."

She was looking directly at a man who had not yet seen her, says the New York Press. He was well worth looking at—strong, broad of shoulder, fair as a Norseman, with an air far more material than artistic. The girl's steady eyes compelled the man's gaze. As their glances met she bowed. He looked surprised, but made no response. She bowed again with gentle insistence, smiling the while. He was almost up within touch of her as he returned her greeting with seeming protest at doing so. A sudden pressing together of the crowd brought them close to each other, and she purred up to him.

"Don't you think that on the average this year's exhibition is an improvement on the last?" she asked.

"I don't know, Miss Kirkie," he returned, simply, with a shyness of manner that seemed strangely enough unsuited to so superb a physical specimen. "I'm no judge. I just came in just because I was given a ticket."

"Y-e-s?" she drawled out. Then hurriedly, as she put out her hand, which he failed to see: "You really will pardon me, won't you? But I can't recall where I met you or anything—even your name has slipped my memory. And yet I ought to know it, since you haven't forgotten mine, I see. And your face is so familiar!"

She broke off and looked up at him with eager expectance, as though she were questioning him. Finally he broke what promised to be an icy silence.

"Yes, miss, you used to see me very often when you lived in the apartment on 72d street. I was—I still am—the janitor there."

Purdie's Panacea.

Tom Purdie, an old man servant in Sir Walter Scott's household, used to talk of the famous "Waverley Novels" as "our books," and said that the reading of them was the greatest comfort to him.

"Whenever I am off my sleep," he confided to James Skene, the author of "Memories of Sir Walter Scott," "I have only to take one of the novels, and before I have read two pages it is sure to set me asleep."

SOME COMFORT TO KNOW THIS

Woman with Wonderful Jewels May Not Have a Beautiful Neck.

"I have come to regard some of the women who sit on the horseshoe at the opera as our greatest public benefactors," said the bachelor man, according to the New York Press.

"I suppose you are driving at something metaphysical?"

"Both physical and metaphysical, I think. You see, when some of them wear decolete gowns, in spite of the fact that their necks really are not fit for publication, it gives those of us who have to sit down in the orchestra—or perchance up among the 'true music lovers'—such a comfortable feeling to observe that money will not buy everything. If we see an ugly neck banded with diamonds as big as English walnuts or circled with pigeon egg rubies we chuckle inwardly as we realize that our cheap little gown conceals a swan-like grace and beauty of neck for which madame gladly would surrender half the jewels of her house. If through our glasses we discern lines of care, hardness and worry, we sit back complacently and look as pretty as we know how, letting youth and good looks compensate us for lacking the cares of state or estate. Or, even if we have no conspicuous good looks, we still may know that the question of magnificent dressing and display is merely one of price. We also could adorn the horseshoe as well as half of those who sit therein if we had the expense. It is not a question of intelligence, talent, birth, greatness of soul, love for humanity, dignity of character, worth in the world or to mankind—but simply and solely of price. We therefore may look at them without envy, without bitterness, without dissatisfaction with either them or ourselves; simply with the understanding that they represent what they have paid for and what they have been willing to pay for—and so do we; which seems to me perfectly fair all around. As they thus furnish us a basis for contentment, I regard them public benefactors."

Book News and Reviews.

M. Maeterlinck's version of "Macbeth" as it was produced at his country home, Saint Wandrille, is to be published immediately in Paris.

The memorial which Englishmen have designed for Tennyson is the restoration of the little Somersby church near which he was born, and the placing therein of a reproduction in bronze of Woolner's bust of the poet. Three-quarters of the necessary sum has been raised—and there the subscription halts.

"How Americans Are Governed" is the title of a forthcoming book written by Crittenden Marriott, whose most recent work for youthful readers was called "Uncle Sam's Business." The new volume will tell the story of the methods and power of national, State and city government in a way to command the attention of the young.

At the sale in London the other day of twenty-four letters written by Beethoven, Herr Kinsky of the Bologne Museum proved to be the fortunate bidder. He paid $3,300 for them. They deal chiefly with family matters connected with the composer's worthless nephew, Karl, whom he loved in spite of the youth's worthlessness. A long memorandum extending to forty-six pages is the longest manuscript in Beethoven's handwriting that is known.

Frederick Greenwood was asked by four different publishers to write his "reminiscences," but after some hesitation he declined, writing only fragments of such a book. Mr. Greenwood, after Thackeray resigned the Cornhill, took up the duties of editor. Later he became absorbed in the Pall Mall Gazette. Mr. Greenwood, it will be remembered, put the final touches to two great stories "left half told"—the "Dennis Duval" of Thackeray and the "Wiles and Daughters" of Mrs. Gaskell.

The British Museum will shortly become the possessor of Nelson's memorandum on the action of Trafalgar. This is the document which Frank Sabin purchased three years ago for $18,000. An outcry arose from those who felt that it ought to belong to the British nation, and Mr. Sabin offered it to the museum at the price he had himself paid. The authorities were not able to find the money, and an Englishman, B. M. Woollan, bought the memorandum at the price mentioned, agreeing to leave it to the museum. His death brings the precious bit of paper to its final home.

Gilbert K. Chesterton, whose recent novel, "The Cross and the Ball," is delighting the epicures of literary unexpected flavors, promises a new volume to be published under the title, "What Is Wrong." The ball of the new novel is the dome of St. Paul's, the cross the religious emblem which surmounts. The two leading characters, a monk and Lucifer, arrive in an airship, and the old monk, fresh from his hermitage in the society of wild animals, is left clinging to the cross to find his way down the ball to look on at this wicked world and its various absurdities and conventions.

Will Have to Unite to Win.

There is one fight in the primary elections this month that we wish to call the attention of the people to, and that is the election of a candidate for representative. If we are satisfied with our present incumbent, of course all's well, but if we desire a change, it is apparent that with two candidates opposing there is little chance unless these wishing a change unite upon one of the two. While the primary law permits anyone who desires to do so to file for any office he may set his heart upon, common sense must tell him that unless he is called into the fight by any considerable following, he is not only already defeated but he is jeopardizing the chances of his cause, namely, a change. As far as we can learn there has been no demand whatever for the appearance of Mr. Lawrence into the fight and his entering simply tends that much to insure Mr. Fisher's nomination. On the other hand, Mr. Cochran has been importuned by a host of friends in all parts of the county to make the race and the element that Mr. Lawrence must depend upon for support had already spoken to Mr. Cochran to make the race, believing him to be the most available candidate. He had preferred that they would unite upon some other candidate but they were convinced that he was much the stronger and so united upon him.

Mr. Lawrence, however, made haste to file his candidacy, without consulting any of those who should be his friends, and now he expects those friends to get behind him and they can not do it. He refuses to consider withdrawing from the race, has persistently refused, and now it is too late. Those who desire a change will now have to unite upon Judge Cochran, or accept the inevitable result—defeat.

Priority of filing does not entitle a candidate to support. Geographical location, professional training, experience, adaptability and political strength are some of the elements which should inter into the selection—and Judge Cochran has these.

The Post-Intelligencer is putting up a bitter wail because, as it alleges, Judge Thomas Burke is spending money in large chunks on his campaign.

This reminds me of a story I once heard on Ike Hill, assistant sergeant-at-arms of the house of representatives. Ike was a democrat through and through, but he was a philosophical democrat.

When anybody asked him how he thought the vote would go he would invariably reply:

"By gosh, I think we've got them, if they don't buy us off."—Seattle Argus.

CLALLAM COUNTY PIVOTAL

Townsend Leader Gives Seventeen Reasons, All Bad, why Bishop Will Carry the County.

From reliable reports which have reached this city from Clallam county, the situation there looks extremely bright for the success at the polls on the 13th of William Bishop, republican candidate from Jefferson county for the state senatorship. Election bets have been made in Port Angeles, friends of Mr. Bishop wagering that A. A. Smith will not receive more than sixty per cent. of the vote in Clallam county. Should this prove to be the case, the nominaton of Mr. Bishop is a certainty, as his opponent cannot expect to make very heavy inroads in Jefferson. With San Juan badly split by factions, either man is likely to receive the plurality, so it is not improbable that the contest will really be decided in Clallam, instead of by the smaller Island county vote.

A number of things are declared to have combined in Mr. Bishop's favor in Clallam. In the first place Mr. Smith has conducted a newspaper in a small town for twenty years. In this time, despite the exercise of the very ripest judgment in the world, any newspaper publisher will amass a considerable number of political enemies, anxious for the time to arise when they can give him the hook. From accounts, Mr. Smith has some small share of these. Some time ago the Tribune-Times conducted a fight for the raising of the assessment on timber lands in Clallam, and while there is very little doubt, provided conditions were the same in Clallam that they were in other counties, that this was highly commendable and made strictly in favor of the people, it did not tend to promote a vast amount of love in the hearts of the timber barons of Clallam, who, it is an open secret, are now out openly fighting Smith for the part his paper took in the proceedings. Some weeks ago there was a local option election in both units in Clallam county. The Olympic-Leader, Mr. Smith's opposition in Port Angeles, was rabidly "dry". The Tribune-Times said practically nothing, with inferences slightly toward the "wet" side of the controversy. This is said to have aroused opposition of both factions, the "wets" because nothing to speak of was done in their interests, and the "drys" because Smith was supposed to be against them on general principle. Another factor will be the Poindexter votes, which, if rumor is correct, will number quite a few in Clallam. Smith did not file his pledge vote for the people's choice for senator in time to have it recorded on the ballot. The Poindexter people construe this to mean that Smith is unpledged, despite his printed announcement in his own paper that such is the case, and all this support has been promised to Bishop. Then, again, Smith has warmely advocated the election of John L. Wilson, and this is not calculated to solidly line up the followers of the other half-dozen candidates for high office.

Besides all these considerations, William Bishop has a whole lot of good friends in Clallam county himself. His firm did business in Gettysburg for eighteen years, employing all that time an average of fifty men. He himself resided on the Lyre river for two whole years, while proving upon a homestead, and has had a large number of heavy business dealings in other parts of the county, which give abundant assurance that he is not altogether unknown to the great rank and file of the voters. All these considerations together make the situation look especially bright for the Jefferson county man, and come very near assuring him the nomination on the republican ticket.

A Few of the Many Reasons Why Garfield A. Davis Should Be Elected Sheriff.

He has made good as Game Warden—a very difficult office to get results in.

He is peculiarly fitted for an office of this kind.

He is free from all entanglement that would embarass him in doing his full duty.

He has never compromised a case—or showed any favoritsm.

He has always had the courage of his convictions.

He has no other business (being now an officer) to prevent him giving his full time to the duties of the office.

He is a property owner and taxpayer of Clallam county, reports to the contrary notwithstanding.

He is familiar with all parts of the county through long residence here.

He is the head of a family, and deserving of the support of every law abiding citizen.

He has always been a consistent Republican.

He is supported by some of the best citizens of the county.

He is opposed by the vending liquor interests which is SUFFICIENT REASON IN ITSELF.

He will enforce all laws as they appear on the statute books! That's what you want, is it not?

VOTE FOR HIM—You will not regret it. CHAS. DOUGHERTY.

As the Insurgent Sees It.

"Insurgency is not a whim. It is a principle for the right, and right never dies. Insurgency is not a new political theory. It is a law as old as creation. And since the time of Moses no man has discovered a rule or plan that would justify transgressing the law. Insurgency is a popular demand for the fulfillment of the law. Betrayal of public trust is not a redemption of a sacred party pledge. Insurgency is partisan contrition, an honest confession of partisan infidelity. Insurgency is a disapproval of partisan delinquency, by partisan adherents who believe the party should be purged of unfaithful leaders. Insurgency will succeed because the people demand honest government.

We owe it to the community in which we live to do everything we can in every way possible that will be to its advantage. Our neighbor's prosperity means a great deal more to us than someone's who lives elsewhere. We should bear this in mind in buying our goods. We can afford to pay our home man a firm price for his wares rather than send our money away, knowing as we do that every dollar our citizen makes will help in sustaining our schools, churches and public institutions. It pays richly to patronize home industry.

The ballots for the coming primary election having been printed when the news of John L. Wilson's withdrawal from the senatorial race was received here, Auditor Hawkins refused to tamper with them in the least. The law gives up to fifteen days before the election to withdraw; after that time the auditor holds he has no right to make any changes.

"Gentlemen, you need not give yourselves any trouble about the revenue. The question of revenue must never stand in the way of needed reforms; but give me a sober population, not wasting their earnings in strong drink, and I shall know where to obtain the revenue."—Gladstone.

The opponents of Judge Poindexter aver that he offers no solutions for the problems that confront the republican party. That is untrue. The greatest of these is the pertinent suggestion of partisan integrity. No party could hope for success that violates its promises to the American people.—Mt. Vernon Argus.

The program rendered in the Lincoln Heights Methodist church last Friday night, given for the benefit of the Sunday school, was in every way a success, due largely to the careful training given the children by Mrs. Thwing and her sons, who have done much to assist the local church during their summer vacation here. The proceeds of the evening, amounting to fifteen dollars, go to secure supplies for the Sunday schools. The Sunday school has grown from a dozen to about sixty in the past two months, so that much more literature is demanded for the school, which this will supply. The pastor, Rev. Hartsell, will preach in the church next Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

SOUR STOMACH

"I used Cascarets and feel like a new man. I have been a sufferer from dyspepsia and sour stomach for the last two years. I have been taking medicine and other drugs, but could find no relief only for a short time. I will recommend Cascarets to my friends as the only thing for indigestion and sour stomach and to keep the bowels in good condition. They are very nice to eat."

BIRDS AND FRUIT INDUSTRY.

Feathered Denizens Destroy Great Numbers of Harmful Insects and Noxious Seeds.

The United States Department of Agriculture, having concluded its investigations as to the harmful or beneficial effect of California birds upon the fruit industry of that state, has issued the second and final part of its report in Bulletin No. 34 of the Biological Survey. Seventy species of the feathered denizens, among them some of the most important birds of the state from the farmers' and fruit growers' standpoint, were systematically investigated. It is true that many of them have not been charged with the destruction or injury of fruit or any other farm product, but as almost all destroy great numbers of harmful insects, or devour seeds of noxious weeds, they are important as a factor in farm economics, and the aim has been to collect all data possible on the food of the several species, so that a just verdict might be rendered as to the birds' economic relations.

Few birds are always and everywhere so destructive that their extermination can be urged on sound economic principles; some, like the swallows, swifts, wrens, and chickadees, are so strictly insectivorous that they are exceedingly beneficial, while others may injure crops at certain times of the year, but the loss is exceedingly small, and if by its insectivorous habits the bird prevents much greater destruction than it inflicts, the farmer should be willing to bear the lesser loss.

A reasonable way of viewing the relation of birds to the farmer is to consider them as servants, employed to destroy weeds and insects, for whom sufficient food and needed protection is generously provided. In the long run, no part of the capital invested in the farm or orchard is more certain to pay big interest than the small sum collected as toll by the birds that harbor near the premises. Deductions from the extensive investigations undertaken in response to numerous complaints concerning depredations by birds in orchards and vineyards on the Pacific coast, show that the food habits of the seventy species, whose stomach contents were under examination, indicate that but four species common in California can be regarded as of doubtful utility. These are the linnet, California jay, stellar jay, and red-breasted sapsucker. Therefore, when all the known methods of protecting fruit have been exhausted, or can not be profitably employed, a reasonable reduction of the numbers of these offending birds is permissible; but the more the food habits of birds are studied, the more evident is the fact that with a normal distribution of species and a fair supply of natural food, the damage to agricultural products by birds is small as compared with the benefit.

HER RUINED CHANCE

By RUTH MERWYN

(Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.)

"Wait, a jiffy, girls, till I get my war paint on," called out Marian Van Hor nas she hurried across the veranda and through the low French window of the drawing room, nearly knocking over a young man standing inside.

"Marian Van Horn!"

At her mother's horrified tones Marian quickly took in the situation. The Ladies' Research club was holding a meeting in the Van Horn drawing room. Her mother, as president, sat bolt upright, her face a brilliant scarlet as she glared at her offending daughter.

"Why, mamsie, I didn't know there was a soul here." Marian's voice sounded contrite, but her dark eyes danced as she saw the reproving faces.

"Professor Craig, let me introduce to you my daughter, Marian Van Horn." The president's voice showed she was making an effort at self-control.

Marian gave a start at the youthful appearance of the professor whose coming had been so long heralded by the Research club. She had imagined him as a gray-haired, middle-aged man.

"Beg your pardon, Prof. Craig, for nearly bowling you over, but it's one of my unbreakable rules never to enter the house by a door if there's a window handier."

"Prof. Craig was about to begin his talk on ethnology," ejaculated Mrs. Van Horn impatiently. "Sit down, Marian."

"But, mamsie, I can't. The girls are waiting for a game of tennis."

"Have them come in, too, Marian," artfully suggested the youngest member of the Research club, Aleda Gregg, whose straw-colored hair was tightly drawn back from her high forehead and whose pale blue eyes were regarding the young professor admiringly.

"Are You a Tennis Fiend, Professor?"

"Surely they will be only too glad to give up a paltry game of tennis to hear Prof. Craig lecture."

"Oh, no," replied Marian hastily, "they wouldn't care to."

"Just think of a girl choosing a game of tennis to Professor Craig's lecture," murmured Aleda.

"Lucky for me that I'm not a Research lady," giggled Marian as she went upstairs.

A few hours later when Marian went into the house she was unpleasantly surprised to find the young man still there.

"We are to have the great pleasure, Marian," explained Mrs. Van Horn, "of Prof. Craig's company during his lectures here."

"Oh," exclaimed the nonplussed girl, "how—how delightful."

Prof. Craig gazed admiringly at Marian, whose scarlet "tam" was perched sidewise on a mass of dark, rippling hair.

"Are you a tennis fiend, professor?" asked Marian, a little disconcerted at the prolonged gaze.

"I've never played tennis, Miss Van Horn. "Somehow I haven't found time."

"Oh, I never stop to find time for the things I really want to do," exclaimed Marian. "I just take any old time I happen to have on hand; then, if my supply runs out, it's the things I don't want to do that are left undone."

"Marian," remonstrated Mrs. Van Horn.

"Honestly, Mamsie, it's a splendid rule. Better try it a while and see if you don't have a heap more fun."

"Im sorry, professor," Mrs. Van Horn turned appealingly to the young man, "that I am not able to persuade Marian to join our club and probe deep into the mysteries of life!"

"You see, professor," explained Marian, "Mamsie goes in for the heavy intellectual, so I have to do the athletic to keep things properly balanced. Otherwise the Van Horn family would grow lop-sided!"

"Come, Marion," said Mrs. Van Horn, meeting her daughter a few hours later in the hall. "It's time to get ready for Prof. Craig's lecture."

"But, Mamsie, I'm not going."

"Not going? Don't you know it's the chance of a lifetime? Marian, your indifference toward rare intellectual opportunities grieves me beyond measure."

"Poor Mamsie!" Marian patted her mother's hand. "You ought to have a daughter like Aleda Gregg. But I will go to Prof. Craig's lecture tonight to please you and I'll stay clear through, no matter how tiresome it is, though it does seem a shame to waste this glorious evening in a stuffy lecture room listening to a spiel on a subject I don't care a picayune for!"

Marian glanced down the hall. The door of Prof. Craig's room was open. Clutching her mother's arm she hurried her away. "Jiminy," she gasped, "you don't suppose that the professor heard, do you?"

"Doubtless he did," answered Mrs. Van Horn, "but it doesn't make any difference. You ruined your last chance this afternoon."

"My chance? What chance?"

"To marry Prof. Craig."

"But, mother, who under heavens wants to marry him?"

"You ought to. You, Marian, the professor is the most intellectual man the Research club has ever had here. Mrs. Gregg tried her best to get him at her house, but for your sake I got him here."

Marian flung out both hands. "Don't, Mamsie, for heaven's sake, don't fling me at the head of every young man you see."

"I won't," promised Mrs. Van Horn, wearily. "Prof. Craig is the only man I ever wanted you to marry, and I am positive that he will never look at you after your refusing to stay to his lecture."

As the evening lecture began, Marian settled back with a martyrlike air. Soon, however, she grew interested, in spite of herself. The professor certainly was making the dry facts of ethnology sound entertaining by his terse, clear style and by unexpected bits of humor.

Conscience stricken at her ungracious remark about his "spiel," she started to tell him how interested she had been when Aleda Gregg rushed up.

"Oh, Prof. Craig," she began, clasping her thin hands ecstatically, "your lecture was wonderful."

Marian turned abruptly away. "I'll never tell him that I liked his lecture after Aleda's gush," she declared to herself.

As Prof. Craig, Mrs. Van Horn and Marion started for home, Mrs. Gregg and her daughter joined them.

"Come with me, Mrs. Van Horn," called out Mrs. Gregg. "Aleda wants to ask the professor some questions."

"Yes, Prof. Craig," began Aleda breathlessly, "there are certain points on ethnology that have puzzled me for a long time."

"Yes?" answered the professor.

Aleda began to fire questions at him, using such polysyllable words that Marian gasped at the very sound. When they reached Aleda's home, she was not finished, but called back as she went toward the house, "I've some other questions to ask you next week, professor, on our way home from your lecture."

Each time the professor came Marian went, ostensibly to please her mother. Each time Prof. Craig walked home with her, but Aleda always accompanied them, talking on topics of which Marian knew nothing.

Then came the last lecture of the series. Marian listened with breathless attention, a strange, lonesome feeling possessing her.

"Aleda and Prof. Craig have grown to be such friends," she overheard Mrs. Gregg say to her mother. "It's too bad you insisted on his going to your house, for if he had stayed with me they would have had more time to enjoy each other's company."

"Horrid old cat!" thought Marian. "I'm really sorry for Mamsie."

"Miss Marian!" Prof. Craig hurried up to her. "Don't wait for the others tonight. The Research club is to hold a business meeting now and we're not members, you know."

"But Aleda will want to ask you some more questions."

The professor muttered something beneath his breath. "Never mind Miss Gregg," he begged taking hold of Marian's arm. "Please hurry!"

Once outside, they walked along in silence. Marian bewildered at the unexpected situation. If only she knew a little about ethnology—just enough to ask an intelligent question or two!

At last, to her relief, the professor broke the silence. "Marian!" She started at the word as well as the strange note in his voice. "I had to see you alone tonight to tell you that I love you. I must know before I go away whether I stand a ghost of a chance to win you."

"Why, Prof. Craig!" stammered Marian, "do—do you really mean it? I—I—don't know a blooming thing about ethnology, you know!"

"I'm glad of it," laughed the professor. "I've gone in for 'the heavy intellectual' all my life and I want you to do the 'athletic' so the Craig family won't get lop-sided. I promise I'll never even ask you to listen to one of my 'spiels' that you don't care a picayune about."

Marian blushed furiously in the darkness. A little later she asked: "When did you begin, John, to—to care for me?"

"The first time I saw you," answered the professor, promptly.

Marian gave a delightful little laugh. "Please tell mamsie that and do it when I'm there. It'll be worth millions to see her face!"

PLOW OUT EARLY POTATOES

Excellent Method of Harvesting Tubers and How to Care for Them During Winter.

Plow out the early potatoes as soon as the vines turn yellow. When the skin of the tubers does not rub off they are ripe. The early crop brings a better price at this time of the year. Growers market the crop direct from the field. The small potatoes may be sold to the bakers for 30 cents per bushel. They are largely used in the making of yeast. If you have poultry, boil the small potatoes, mix with wheat bran and a little flaxseed meal and feed in the winter time to the laying hens. If the potatoes are to be stored, gather when dry and store in shed or well-aired dark cellar. They should not be piled too deep, as they will heat and rot in hot, sultry weather. The second and late planting of potatoes should be kept for winter and spring eating. As a rule, the late crop have more solidity and are less liable to rot, and are dry when cooked. As soon as the crop is plowed out harrow the field both ways and sow to turnips. Bone flour and bone phosphate are the favorite turnip fertilizers. Animal manure, unless well rotted, should not be used, as the manure causes a rank growth of top and a bulb of coarse flesh. Bone flour or bone phosphate, on the other hand, produce bulbs of fine grain, sweet and smooth skin. These are the kind wanted by the market, and are also best for family eating. Sow 400 pounds of bone flour, one pound of new-crop turnip seed to the acre. Market gardeners mix two pounds of kale seed, seed, two ounces of black Spanish radish and two ounces of brown Dutch lettuce seed with the turnip seed. All these seeds are well mixed in one peck of wood ashes or the same quantity of coarse sand and sown to the acre. Sow on newly plowed ground or after a rain, when ground is moist. Cover the seed with brush harrow. Sow broadcast. The red or purple flat top turnip is a popular variety; it is a rapid grower, flesh fine grained, sweet and mild. The early white flat variety differs from red top only in color. Improved yellow globe and yellow Aberdeen have yellow flesh, solid, flesh sweet, and keep well. These varieties are largely grown for shipping, also for stock and family use. The Swedes or rutabagas require a cool, moist climate and a deep, rich soil. Our climate is too hot and dry for their profitable culture.

Notice and Summons by Publication.

In the Superior Court of the State of Washington, for Clallam County.
No. 643.
Hamilton S. Collier, plaintiff, vs. J. Mossman, and all persons unknown, if any, having or claiming to have an interest in and to the real property hereinafter described, defendants.

The State of Washington to J. Mossman and all persons unknown, if any, having or claiming to have an interest in and to the real property hereinafter described:

You and each of you are hereby notified that Hamilton S. Collier is the holder of Certificate of Delinquency numbered 2779 issued on the 20th day of February, 1907, by the County of Clallam, State of Washington, for the amount of Three and 67-100 Dollars, the same being the amount then due and delinquent for taxes for the years 1906, 1907 and 1908, together with penalty, interest and costs thereon, upon real property assessed to you and of which you are the owner or reputed owner, situated in said county, and particularly bounded and described as follows, to-wit:

The west half of southwest quarter of southeast quarter of northeast quarter of section 15 in township 30 north, range 7 west of Willamette Meridian, and upon which he has paid taxes assessed against said property as follows:

Year's Tax	Date Paid	Amount
1906	Feb 20, 1910	$ .82
1907	" "	1.20
1908	" "	1.15
1909	Aug. 5, 1910	2.00
For Certificate		.50
Total amount of taxes paid since date of certificate of delinquency		$5.67

All of said amounts bearing interest at the rate of fifteen per cent. per annum; and you are further notified that she will apply to the Superior Court of the State of Washington, in and for said county, for a judgment foreclosing her lien against the property hereinbefore mentioned, and you are hereby summoned to appear within sixty days after the date of first publication of this summons, exclusive of the day of said first publication, and defend this action or pay the amount due, together with costs; and in case of your failure to do so, judgment will be rendered foreclosing the lien for said certificate of delinquency, taxes, penalty, interest and costs, against the lands and premises hereinbefore mentioned. Date of first publication August 19, 1910.

Any pleading or process may be served upon the undersigned at the address hereafter mentioned.

HAMILTON S. COLLIER, Plaintiff.

Order to Show Cause.

No. 463.
In the Superior Court of the State of Washington, for Clallam County.
In the Matter of the Estate of Hermann Linde, deceased.

It appearing to the satisfaction of the Court, from the petition presented and filed herein by James Stewart, the administrator of the estate of Hermann Linde, deceased, that it is necessary to sell the whole or some part of the real estate of said decedent to pay the debts of said estate and the expenses of administration.

It is, therefore, ordered by said Court that all persons interested in said estate, appear before said Superior Court on Saturday the 24th day of September, 1910, at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M. of said day, at the court room of said court, in the City of Port Angeles, Clallam County, Washington, to show cause (if any cause they have) why an order should not be granted to said administrator to sell the whole of said real estate or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the debts of said estate, at private sale, and that a copy of this order be published at least four successive weeks in the Olympic-Leader, a newspaper of general circulation, printed and published in said Clallam county.

Dated August 22, 1910.

[SEAL.]
GEO. VENABLE SMITH,
Court Commissioner for Clallam County, Washington.
