PEOPLE ARE TIRED OF TRUST DOMINATION

Poindexter and Warburton Carry Clallam County. Bishop Has Big Majority in the District.

The Insurgent wave has reached the state of Washington and the standpatters, the administration forces, have gone down in defeat. The result means that probably the entire Washington delegation in Congress, with the lone exception of Senator Jones, will next year be in the insurgent column. And there is a possibility that even Mr. Jones may accept the notice from the voters and join the insurgent ranks.

Congressman Miles Poindexter, insurgent, who was kicked out of the recent Republican (?) State Convention at Olympia, has carried the state by a plurality over Judge Thomas Burke, standpatter, of more than 35,000, and by a majority over all five of his opposing candidates. He has carried King county, Judge Burke's home, by more than 5,000; he has carried Pierce, General J. M. Ashton's home county; Spokane, his home county, by seven to one, and has carried all of Eastern Washington by nearly four to one. From present indications he has carried every county in the state except Thurston, carried by Ashton, and Jefferson, which county gave Burke a narrow margin of about 50 plurality. In Clallam county his plurality will be about 200.

Since four-fifths of the successful legislative candidates were pledged to support the party choice at the primaries, Poindexter's nomination is assured by the state legislature.

The three insurgent congressmen have apparently been nominated, but it may require the official count to determine whether W. E. Humphrey, present incumbent, has been renominated, or T. P. Revelle, insurgent, has defeated him for national representative from the First district.

In the second, this district, Stanton Warburton, insurgent, has carried the district by something like 3,000. In this county it was practically a tie between Warburton and McCredie.

W. L. LaFollette, insurgent, leads all of his opponents in the third, or eastern district, on both first and second choice.

The result in this, the 24th state senatorial district, is not a surprise. Mr. Bishop of Jefferson county, who announced his candidacy early, had the situation well in hand before Mr. Smith of this county decided to be a candidate, and the result is as many predicted. Mr. Bishop carries his home county, Jefferson, by 525 majority, and Mr. Smith carried Clallam by 215. In San Juan county the vote was very close, Mr. Bishop carrying the county by three majority, with one precinct to hear from.

The three cornered fight for representative in the state legislature from this county, resulted in the renomination of E.-E. Fisher by a majority of about 50 over his opponents, Messrs. Cochran and Lawrence.

For commissioner from the first district Frank Lotzgesell won out, receiving from Blyn 10 votes, Dungeness 128, Lost Mountain 5, Rena 19, Sequim 54, VanKuren 11, total 235.

P. S. Govan received 164 votes, 41 from Blyn, Dungeness 9, Lost Mountain 3, Rena 5, Sequim 106.

Fred Machenheimer, Sr., did not make any effort to obtain the nomination but received 28 votes.

In the second commissioner's district Hansen had 351 votes and Haynes 206. Haynes carried Elwha by a vote of 4 to 2, Port Crescent by 41 to 28. Hansen carried the remaining precincts, the vote being 22 to 17 in Bellview, 10 to 4 in Edgewood, Eden 19 to 16, Weaver 11 to 10, First Ward 54 to 18, Second 62 to 37, Third 28 to 15, Fourth 44 to 24, Fifth 37 to 14, Sixth 34 to 6.

The contest between C. L. Babcock and Frank Thompson for treasurer was very close, and rendered all the more interesting by the fact that Babcock, whether with or without his consent, had the endorsement of the timber men. So far as reports had been received up to last evening, Ozette and Gettysburg still lacking, Babcock has 6 votes the best of Thompson.

Gallagher has 212 majority for sheriff; Cook 69 majority for assessor; McNutt 282 majority for superintendent of schools, and White, McLaughlin, Ritchie and Willson, for clerk, auditor, attorney and coroner, having no opposition, receiv-

BOULDER HOT SPRINGS GROWING IN POPULARITY

A New Asset for Port Angeles Being Developed in Olympic Mountains Back of Town.

Another valuable asset of Clallam county and one that is destined in the near future to become one of the many popular outing resorts of the Olympic mountains, is the Olympic hot springs, possibly better known in Port Angeles as the Boulder hot springs, opened to the public for the first time last season. Already has this resort become known outside the county until this season a number of tourists and pleasure seekers, as well as others seeking aid from the curative properties of their mineral waters for various ailments, have visited the springs from Seattle, Bellingham, Everett, Mt. Vernon, Tacoma, Auburn and elsewhere in this state, and from Los Angeles, Calif.

The springs are located on Boulder creek, in a heavily timbered district in the Olympic forest reserve, about 22½ miles from Port Angeles. To reach the springs from here one may take an auto or team over the splendid auto road for the "Mountain Inn," near what is known as McDonald's bridge, over the Elwha river, conducted by Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Sisson. From this point, if one wishes to ride, it must be on the back of a pony over the narrow mountain trail that leads to the springs, twelve miles distant; provisions and all camp luggage must be carried over the trail in the same way. The trail is a fairly good one, and the route through one of the grandest, most scenic and awe-inspiring forests of the Olympic peninsula.

There are several of the Olympic hot springs as well as a number of cold ones, and the flow of water is ample for all purposes. The temperature of the hot springs varies from 113 to 132 degrees fahrenheit. The sprin s are on a narrow bench in a valley about 150 to 200 feet above the bed of Boulder creek, with the mountains rising abruptly on either side.

Wm. Everett of Clearwater, this county, and his brother-in-law, Carl Schoffel of Mt. Vernon, have a permit from Uncle Sam to improve and use the springs for the benefit of the public. Mrs. Everett and Mrs. Schoffel have had charge this season and have made of the springs a popular resort. The ladies are accommodating and painstaking, doing everything in their power to make their guests comfortable and pleased. There are two double bath houses, a combined log and shake cook-house and living rooms, with a large tent for a dining hall, and nine other tents with beds for the accommodation of guests as sleeping quarters.

During the present fall nd coming spring Messrs. Everett and Schoffel contemplate making many improvements, putting in under-drains, clearing and leveling the grounds, building additional bath houses, enlarging the cook-house and beautifying the place generally.

Above the springs about two miles are the Boulder creek falls, where the water takes a sheer plunge of about seventy-five feet down a rocky gorge from two to four feet wide. A beautiful spot. Still higher up is Crystal lake, and green meadows where grass and many varieties of mountain flowers grow luxuriantly, and farther on to the crest of the mountain is perpetual snow and Crystal ridge, from which one obtains a magnificent panoramic view of the Strait of Juan du Fuca, Mt. Olympus, the glaciers, Lake Crescent and the surrounding country. These meadows are the feeding grounds of a band of elk that make their home in this region. Wm. Everett, when up there recently, succeeded in securing seven kodak views of a band of eight elk, and saw a much larger b.nd at some distance. When Mr. E. was kneeling in the act of adjusting a film, the elks became inquisitive and proceeded to investigate the situation by advancing, with out-stretched necks, to within a few feet of him, but scampered away before he could get another picture. He also secured several views of a bear and then wilfully shot bruin when he wouldn't stand for it longer! Mr. Everett is a great hunter. Beside having killed many bear, bob-cats and other wild animals and game, he carries the scalps of fifty-seven cougars under his hunting belt. That's going some for one man.

As showing the beneficial effects of the waters of the springs, and also that he was something of a sprinter, Mr. F. A. Jensen of Port Angeles, on a wager, attempted to walk to Silver creek and back, over an up-hill trail both ways, a distance of a third of a U. S. WILL FORTIFY PANAMA CANAL.

Beverly, Mass., Sept. 10.—That the United States probably will go ahead with the fortification of the Panama canal without consulting the powers in regard to the matter is an intimation that has been given out strongly by the administration.

It is held that the treaty with Great Britain gives the United States the necessary authority to fortify the canal. Consulation with the powers over the matter, it is held by many of the administration advisers, would recognize the right of foreign countries to interfere in American affairs, an end of the Monroe doctrine that they are not at all disposed to bring into question.

President Taft was himself in favor of fortification when he was head of the war department.

GREAT SHAKEUP AMONG NATIONAL BANK EXAMINERS.

Washington, Sept. 10.—Twenty national bank examiners, about one-fifth of the force employed by the government, have been transferred to new fields by order from Lawrence O. Murray, comptroller of the currency.

Following closely on the sudden call for condition of national banks, which was made on September 2, and the announcement of the comptroller that, in the future, he would personally pass on the application of banks which wished to hold reserves, the shakeup among the examiners is taken as another indication of the determination to enforce to the letter the provisions of the national bank act.

The transfer of the twenty examiners will likely be the forerunner of others. The object of the changes, it is said, at the treasury department, was to throw the examiners into fresh fields, where personal acquaintance or possibility of influence was lacking.

Grand Jury to Probe Strike.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY CONSERVATION CONVENTION

St. Paul, Sept. 10.—Following are he resolutions adopted by the National Conservation Congress:

"The second National Conservation Congress, made up of delegates from nearly every state and territory of the United States, met at the call of a great moral issue in session assembled at St. Paul, does hereby adopt and solemnly declare the following platform of opinion and conclusion concerning the inherent rights of the people of the United States:

Declare Principles.

"Heartily accepting the spirit and intent of the constitution and adhering to the principles laid down by Washington and Lincoln, we declare our conviction that we live under a government of the people, by the people, for the people; and we repudiate any and all special or local interests or platforms or policies in conflict with the inherent rights and sovereign will of our people.

"Recognizing the natural resources of the country as the prime basis of property and opportunity, we hold the rights of the people in these resources to be natural and inherent, and justly inalienable and indefensible, and we insist that the resources should and shall be developed, used and conserved in ways consistent both with current welfare and with the perpetuity of the people.

Water Rights Named.

"Recognizing the waters of the country as a great natural resource, we approve and indorse the opinion that all the waters belong to all the people, and hold that they should be used in the interest of the people.

"Realizing that all parts of each drainage basin are related and interdependent, we hold that each stream should be regarded and treated as a unit from its source to its mouth; and, since the waters are essentially mobile and transitory and are generally interstate, we hold that in all cases of divided or doubtful jurisdiction, the waters should be administered by co-operation between states and federal agencies.

Uses Defined.

"Recognizing the interdependence of the various uses of the waters of the country, we hold that the primary uses are for domestic supply and for agriculture, through irrigation or otherwise, and that the uses for navigation, and for power, in which water is not consumed, are secondary; and we commend the modern view that each use of the waters should be made with reference to all other uses for the public welfare in accordance with the principle of the greatest good to the greatest number for the longest time. Viewing purity of water supply as essential to the public health and general welfare, we urge upon all municipal, state and federal authorities and on individuals and corporations, requisite action toward purifying and preventing contamination of the water supply.

"Approving the successful efforts of the United States to provide homes on arid lands through irrigation, we indorse and commend the reclamation service and urge its continuance and the extension of the same policy to the drainage of swamp and overflow lands, to be carired forward so far as appropriate through co-operation between states and federal agencies.

"Viewing adequate and economical transportation facilities as among the means of conservation and realizing that the growth of the country has exceeded the development of the transportation facilities, we approve the prompt adoption of a comprehensive plan for developing navigation throughout the rivers and lakes of the United States, proceeding in the order of their magnitude and commercial importance.

For Federal Control.

"Recognizing the vast economic benefit to the people of the water power derived largely from interstate streams no less than from navigable rivers, we favor federal control of water power development; we deny the right of states or federal government to continue alienating or conveying water by granting franchises for the use thereof in perpetuity, and we demand that the use of water rights be permitted only for limited periods with just compensation in the interests of the people.

"We demand the maintenance of the federal commission empowered to deal with all uses of the waters, and to coordinate these uses for the public welfare in co-operation with similar commissions or other agency and maintained by the states.

Withdrawals Approved.

"Approving the withdrawal of public lands pending classification and the separation of surface rights from mineral, forests and water rights, including water power sites, we recommend legislation for the classification and leasing for grazing purposes of unreserved public lands suitable chiefly for this purpose, subject to the reports of homesteaders and settlers or the acquisition thereof under the laws of the United States, and we hold that arid and nonirrigable public grazing lands should be administered by the government in the interest of small stock men and homeseekers until they have passed into the possession of actual settlers.

Mineral Rights.

"We hold that the deposits of minerals underlying, particularly fuels, iron ores and phosphate deposits, should be leased for limited periods not exceeding fifty years, but subject to renewal, the royalty to be adjusted at more frequent intervals, such leases to be in such amounts and subject to such regulations as to prevent monopoly and unnecessary waste.

"We hold that phosphate deposits underlying the public lands should be safeguarded for the American people by appropriate legislation, and we recommend the early opening of the Alaska and other coal fields belonging to the people of the United States for commercial purposes, on a system of leasing, national ownership to be retained.

As to Smelters.

"We urge immediate investigation by the federal government of the damage done by the smelting of copper ores and the feasibility of so improving methods as to utilize the injurious by-products in connection with phosphatic fertilizers.

"We favor co-operative action on the part of the states and the federal government looking to the preservation and better utilization of the soils by approved scientific methods.

"We approve of the continuance of the control of the national forests by the federal government, and approve the policy of restoring to settlement such public lands as are more valuable for agriculture.

For Reforestation.

"We earnestly recommend that the states and federal government acquire for reforestation lands not more valuable for other purposes and that all existing forests publicly and privately owned be fully protected by state and federal governments as are more valuable for agriculture.

"We earnestly recommend that the states and federal government acquire for reforestation lands not more valuable for other purposes and that all existing forests, publicly and privately owned, be fully protected by state and federal governments.

Praise Forest Service.

"We recognize the valuable service of the forest service to the people and earnestly recommend that it be more generously supported by the federal government, and that state, federal and private fire patrol be more generously provided for the preservation of forests and human life, and appreciate and approve of the continuance of the service of the United States army in fire control in emergencies.

"We favor the repeal of the timber and stone law.

"We indorse the proposition for the preservation by the federal government of the Southern Appalachian and White mountain forests.

To Conserve Birds.

"We recommend that the federal government conserve migratory birds and wild game animals. We recommend that public and private schools instruct the youth of the land in the fundamental doctrines of conservation. We realize that the fullest enjoyment of our natural resources depend upon the life and development of the people physically, intellectually and morally, and in order to promote this purpose, we recommend that the training and protection of the people, and whatever pertains to the health and general efficiency be encouraged by methods and legislation, suitable to this end. Child labor should be prevented and child life protected and developed.

Waste of Life.

"Regarding the waste of life in transportation and mining operations, we recommend legislation increasing the use of proper safeguards for the conservation of life. And we also recommend that in order to make better provision for procuring the health of the nation, a department of public health be established by the national government.

"We recommend the adequate maintenance of a national conservation commission to investigate natural resources of the country and co-operate with the work of the state conservation commisisons; and we urge the legal establishment and maintenance of conservation commissions or corresponding agencies on the part of all of the states of the union.

States Not Questioned.

"Nothing in these resolutions to be construed as questioning the rights of the states or the people of the United States guaranteed under the federal constitution."

HAY AND GRAIN GRADES ARE MADE PERMANENT.

That the present grades of hay, wheat and other grains, with a few slight exceptions, are to become fixed and permanent, and to be known as the Washington state grades, was the announcement made by the state railroad and grain commission at its annual meeting held at Tacoma.

The announcement was embodied in a resolution, unanimously adopted, favoring the policy of retaining the same grades as now established and continuing them from year to year without change, unless unforseen contingencies should arise. It was further decided that the grades be known as Washington state grades, and that they be made permanent.

Previous to the passing of the resolution the board unanimously decided to establish the same grades as last year, with a few exceptions in oats and barley. Wheat and hay standards were left untouched. The present standard weight for No. 1 wheat is 58 pounds to the bushel; No. 2, 56 pounds, and No. 3, 54 pounds.

A new grade of oats was decided upon, to be known as choice feed oats, too light for milling. It is to be either white, gray, black or red and free from wild oats and other grains, and to be sound, sweet and dry.

Work Starts on Hatt Slough Dam.

Stanwood, Sept. 10.—Government engineers have commenced work on the large dam at the head of Hatt slough, where that stream of water branches off of the Stillaguamish river two miles from the mouth. The object of this dam is to throw the main volume of water back into the old river channel, which is now rapidly filling up, greatly impairing navigation and transportation facilities of this city. Ten thousand tons of rock and brush will be used in the foundation construction.

NEWSPAPERS DECLARED BEST TRADE-BRINGERS

Springfield, O., Sept. 13.—Newspaper advertising was declared the best trade-bearing medium for the trade in a resolution adopted by the Ohio Retail Shoe Dealers' Association, which closed its annual convention here yesterday.

Many of the members stated that they had tried other forms of advertising, but that the results from the newspapers overshadowed all other kinds. It was also decided to dispense with bazaar contributions and programme advertising.

Columbus will get the next meeting on March 1, 1911.

DEMOCRATS WIN MAINE ELECTION

They Have Governor and Three Out of Four Congressmen—Possibly United States Senator

Portland, Me., Sept. 13.—Maine went Democratic yesterday. It elected Frederick W. Plaisted, of Augusta, a Democrat, as governor, upset the hitherto solid Republican congressional delegation in at least two, and possibly all four of the districts, and, to the surprise of the political leaders, Democratic as well as Republican, the returns late last night indicated the possibility that the next state legislature will be Democratic. The senate surely will have a Democratic majority. The house complexion is in doubt.

Returns from all but forty-eight of the election districts of the state showed a plurality for Plaisted for governor of 8,500.

In the Second district Daniel J. McGillicuddy was elected congressman by 3,000 over John P. Swasey, the incumbent, and Congressman Edwin C. Burleigh, who has represented the Third district since 1892, was defeated by Samuel W. Gould, Democrat, by a small majority.

Result in Doubt.

The result in the First and Fourth district was much in doubt late last night, although the indications were that Asher C. Hinds, Republican, had won over William H. Pennell, Democrat, in the former, and that Congressman Frank E. Guernsey, Republican, had been defeated in the latter by George M. Hanson, Democrat, by a small vote. There will be at least sixteen Democratic senators out of thirty-one, and forty-five Democratic representatives out of 151 in the next legislature, with indications that the Democratic party will have the choosing of a successor to United States Senator Hale next winter.

Col. Plaisted, the governor-elect, has a plurality larger than that given two years ago to his defeated Republican opponent, Gov. Bert M. Fernald, of Portland.

Leaders at Loss.

The Republican leaders were at a loss to account for their overwhelming defeat. The weatner was perfect and they offered no excuse along that line. The issues were well understood and most of the speakers had confined themselves to state matters, scarcely mentioning national affairs.

GREAT BRITAIN WINS DECISION AT HAGUE.

Washington, Sept. 10.—A substantial victory for Great Britain in perhaps the two most important points, a consolatory triumph for the United States in the other five points, with a prospect of another arbitration later at the instance of the United States government is the way the decision of The Hague tribunal in the New Foundland fisheries case is viewed here. The decision eliminated the right of the United States to share in the making and enforcement of "reasonable regulations" governing the fisheries in the disputed territory, and it is that qualification "reasonable" that may permit this government to reopen the question.

One Thousand Miles of Fence.

El Paso, Tex., Sept. 12.—The government is preparing to build what will be the longest fence ever constructed in the world. It will extend from this city to the Pacific coast and will divide the United States and Mexico, a distance of over 1,000 miles. The fence will be of barbed wire, five strands.

Roosevelt's Order Denounced.

Chicago, Sept. 10.—Members of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks in annual convention passed resoltuions denouncing an executive order issued by President Roosevelt in 1902. The order prohibits postoffice clerks under civil service to solicit increases in salaries or betterment of conditions.

Coast Business Men in Korea.

Tokyo, Sept. 10.—The delegation of American business men representing several chambers of commerce of the Pacific coast, on arrival in Korea, en route to China, was welcomed and entertained by Baron Shibusawa, the economist, and others of the Japanese who have visited America.

To Start Iditarod Trail.

Seward, Sept. 12.—Maj. W. P. Richardson, United States road commissioner for Alaska, cables from Valdez that work will be begun at once on a winter mail trail between Seward and the Iditarod.

NEW NATIONALISM IS EXPLAINED

ROOSEVELT TELLS AT CINCINNATI WHY FEDERAL CONTROL IS NECESSARY.

Increasing Power of Corporations Makes Increase of Authority for Their Control Inperative—Corporations Would Escape All Control by Dividing Responsibility—Instance of Two Railroads.

Cincinnati, Sept. 10.—Former President Roosevelt defended his doctrine of "new nationalism" in a speech at the Ohio Valley exposition here. He also commended President Taft for his appointments of two public officers.

Col. Roosevelt's day in Cincinnati was one of the quietest he has had on his Western tour. The colonel's tour has been a severe one and it was at his own request that the programme of the day was simplified. He left the train at a suburb, and spent the morning with Congressman Longworth. Then he went to the exposition grounds, attended a luncheon and attended a reception in the music hall.

Col. Roosevelt, in defending "new nationalism," replied to those who oppose his plan of increasing the power of the central government for the purpose of dealing with conservation, the control of corporations and others.

"They say, 'do not give the government too much power,'" he said. "Certainly not, I do not want to give the government any more power than is necessary. You would not have to have so much power in the national government if you were dealing with individuals, none of whom were very rich, but when you get an aggregation of rich individuals you must master them through the government.

Gives Government Chance.

"Some of the people will say that interfers with individualism. It does not. It is giving the government a chance. The individual has not a chance if you permit a business monopoly to be established or permit it to develop so that a single man is powerless against it or can be crushed by it. Under the law there has grown up a system of enormous monopoly, which, in fact, is the very negation of individualism, and the government is required to regulate these great concerns to permit the average individual citizen to retain his rights unimpaired.

"I am not speaking in hostility to corporations. I recognize the right of a corporation as a necessary instrument in modern individualism. Our conditions are new and we need this instrument of the corporation, but also we need the complete control by the people through the government of the corporations. I cheerfully admit one new thing is necessary, only I insist that the other new thing is necessary, too."

Indorses Hadley.

Col. Roosevelt indorsed the appointment by President Taft of President Arthur T. Hadley, of Yale university, as head of the commission to investigate the capitalization of railroads, and of Joseph A. Holmes as chief of the bureau of mines.

"I am exceedingly glad," he continued, "that the president has appointed a man like Mr. Hadley to look into the question of railroad capitalization. You will find some worthy people who are willing to have the government look into this question of capitalization, but they want it left to the states to deal with.

Coast Case Cited.

"There is an instance of two railroads that run from Minnesota westward to Puget sound, and they were violating the laws of the federal government and violating the laws of the states through which they run. The government started to bring suit against them. It was at once contended that often it was merely a matter for the states, and while the railroads ran through Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, Idaho and Washington, they were incorporated in New Jersey. They have not a single mile of track within 1,000 miles of New Jersey.

Government Only Power.

"There is only one power that could deal with that kind of a corporation, and that is the national government. There is only one power that can deal with business carried on in interstate limits, and that is the national government. Anything that can be dealt with by the states, I favor dealing with in that way. But big business is now centralized. New York regulates business done in Colorado and throughout the country. Now that business has been centralized, we have to centralize the authority to control it."

California's Sixtieth Birthday.

San Francisco, Sept. 10.—Queen California and King Carnival reigned in San Francisco Saturday and hundreds of thousands of their subjects were engaged in one of the most brilliant celebrations San Francisco has ever known. The event is in honor of the Golden state's sixtieth birthday. More than 20,000 Native Sons and Daughters of the Golden West marched in the parade, which, nearly three miles long, wound through the streets of the business section for two solid hours.

APPLE EXPOSITION AT CHICAGO

NOVEMBER 28 TO DECEMBER 4 UNDER MANAGEMENT OF NATIONAL APPLE SHOW.

Thirty-Five Northwestern Districts to Be Represented—Displays Will Include Winners of Big Prizes at Spokane—Purpose Is to Show Middle Western States Methods and Results of Intensive Cultivation.

Commercial orchards in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana and British Columbia will be represented by thirty-five prominent districts at the exposition in First Regiment Armory, Chicago, November 28 to December 4, under the management of the National Apple Show, Inc. Among the displays will be six carloads, including the winner of the sweepstake of $1,000 and world's championship, and special district exhibits taking prizes in various competitions for premiums of a total value of $20,000 offered at the third annual show in Spokane, November 14 to 19.

The primary purpose of the Chicago exposition is to give the people of the middle western states a more intimate acquaintance with intensive cultivation, as practiced in the Pacific Northwest, also to show the highly successful and profitable results of scientific cultivation on irrigated and sub-irrigated lands and the proper methods of packing apples for the market. Some of the exhibits will be accompanied by men and women who own and cultivate the orchards in which the products were grown. Land selling will not be permitted.

Horticultural associations, boards of county commissioners and growers in all parts of the western country are cooperating with the management of the National Apple Show, headed this year by Howard Elliott, president of the Northern Pacific Railway company, in an effort to make the two shows the best of their kind in the history of fruit expositions. They realize the fact that the exhibitions are not money-making enterprises, but are educational in character and designed to be of benefit to the Northwest and to the country as a whole.

Naturally, the orchardists and farmers in the Northwest are proud of what they have accomplished upon the former sage brush wastes and in the foothills and the valleys, where only a few years ago coyotes and other wild things were the sole inhabitants. They have been actively identified with the settlement, growth and development of many agricultural districts, especially that vast expanse west of the Rocky mountains, where irrigation and other modern methods of tillage have worked such remarkable transformations.

As a forerunner of the Chicago exposition is the Spokane show, where 2,000,000 apples of standard varieties and sizes, the flower of the commercial orchards of America, will be displayed. The area required to house the exhibits equals three and a half acres of floor space. The various contests, ranging from a full carload of 210 barrels or 630 boxes to single plates of five apples, are free and open to the world.

R. H. Rice, secretary and manager of the show, announces there will be more than 1,400 entries, including 20 in the carload classes, thus making it the largest display of apples ever gathered together for exhibition purposes in the history of the world. In addition there will be demonstrations of orchard machinery, concerts by two bands and high-class amusement features.

The winner of the sweepstake event on carloads will receive a purse of $1,000 and a gold medal banner, emblematic of the championship of the world. The second prize is $300 and a silver medal banner. There will also be carload contests with cash prizes of $250 to firsts and $100 to seconds on eight standard varieties. All carload entries are eligible for the sweepstake and the silver trophy cup, presented by the Chicago Association of Commerce, to be awarded to the exhibit scoring highest on packing.

Experts will compete for the world's championship in a packing contest. The first prize is a medallion watch charm and $100 in gold, the second being $50 and the third $25. A. P. Bateham, of Mosier, Ore., is chief judge. Another feature is a free apple packing school in charge of Mr. Bateham and J. M. Carroll, of Mosier.

Exhibitors will discuss the proposed revision of quality ratings, for adoption by the American Horticultural Society at its meeting in Tampa, Fla., in January, 1911, and there will be sessions of the Country Life Commission of the state of Washington to discuss the proposed community center and consolidated rural school to be established near Spokane.

Gold Coinage May Stop.

Washington, Sept. 10.—Coinage of gold in the United States will be suspended indefinitely, if plans of the treasury department are carried out. The project is to curtail expenses.

Marines to Quit Bluefields.

Washington, Sept. 10.—The detachment of American marines at Bluefields, Nicaragua, will be withdrawn shortly and returned to Camp Elliott, in the Canal Zone.

INSANITY A DEFENSE SAYS SUPREME COURT

Olympia, Sept. 12.—The 1909 statute making insanity not a defense in a criminal prosecution has been declared unconstitutional by the supreme court, although not more than three of the nine members of the court united on the same grounds upon which the statute is based. Although every member of the court held to the unconstitutionality of the law, three separate opinions were incorporated in the decisions, and most of the other concurring judges only concurred in the result.

The decision comes down in the King county case against Martin Strasburg, charged with assault in the first degree.

The Case of Strasburg.

Strasburg shot a man and, under section 2359, Rem. and Bal. Code, laws of 1909, he was denied the right to plead insanity. The law, which was directly against the insanity plea providing that it shall be "no defense to a criminal charge that the person charged was at the time of the commission of offense unable by reason of insanity, idiocy or imbecility to comprehend the nature and quality of the act committed."

The law was attacked on appeal as in controvention of the constitution because of abridgment of the right of trial by jury and due process of law. On this ground Justice Park, writing the opinion, held the law unconstitutional and Justices Crow and Mount concur in the opinion.

Chief Justice Rudkin wrote another opinion, in which he holds that the legislature had the right to make insanity not a defense, but the law is unconstitutional because it abridges the right of trial by jury, the trial judge, under this law, and not the jury, determining the question of insanity independent of the trial for the crime charged.

Judge Chadwick Concurs.

Justice Chadwick concurred in this opinion, Justice Dunbar concurs in the first ground discussed by the chief justice and Justice Gose concurred in the chief justice opinion.

The law was framed by the 1909 legislature to remedy abuses of the insanity plea evidenced in a number of sensational cases throughout the state.

PORK BECOMING AN IMPORTANT PRODUCT.

Dayton, Sept. 10.—Development of the hogh-raising industry is a notable feature in connection with the changing farm methods in Southeastern Washington. This is due to the continued high quotations and especially to the growth of the packing industry on the Coast, which affords more convenient and profitable markets.

It is estimated the gross revenue from hogs in the Dayton and Waitsburg districts this season will reach $150,000, whereas three or four years ago a season's shipping rarely reached the $1,500 mark.

Awakening to the immense profits possible, farmers are going in for hog raising on an extensive scale. Nearly every one is raising some hogs for market now. If, as predicted, the grain market in the succeeding years show a continued weakening, and the price of pork is maintained, it is probable two years more will see a half million dollars' worth of live stock shipped annually from this region to the Coast.

TOO POORLY PAID, MANY PREACHERS QUIT

Charles City, Ia., Sept. 12.—When the Upper Iowa Methodist Conference convenes in Charles City during the week, it will find itself face to face with a decided shortage in the number of preachers necessary to make up the quota of the district and 57 charges in the conference will have to be filled from a source not known at present.

Fifty-seven men, the greater part of them young and in the prime of life, a number of them only a few years out of university and seminary, will quit the ministry at this time and will take up lines of secular work. The complaint is that the salary paid is not sufficient to maintain a decent standard of living for a minister and his family, and to educate children.

The resignation of these ministers will leave the district in a depleted condition. Like complaints have been received from pastors of the South Dakota Conference. Salaries average between $450 and $1200 yearly.

Orient Flour Trade Grows.

Proof that the flour trade of the United States with the Orient is growing rapidly is contained in the fact that the steamship Kamakura Maru, sailing from Seattle Saturday for the Far East carried as part cargo 75,000 sacks of flour, consigned to mercantile establishments in Yokohama, Japan.

The cargo also included seven head of pedigreed cattle, being imported into Japan for breeding purposes.

Oregon Lands Restored.

Washington, Sept. 13.—Oregon lands aggregating 1,873,280 acres were thrown open to settlement yesterday under the provisions of the enlarged homestead act by authority of Acting Secretary Pierce, of the interior department. This brings the total of lands in Oregon which have been restored to date up to 11,040,240 acres.

Exhibition Opened.

St. John, N. B., Sept. 10.—The Dominion exhibition was formally opened by Lemuel J. Tweedle, lieutenant governor of New Brunswick. The exhibits fill ten large buildings and represent the resources and products of the entire Dominion.

FEDERAL BANKING LAWS CRITICIZED

Washington, Sept. 13.—Addressing the bank supervisors of twenty-five states, gathered in convention here, Lawrence O. Murray, comptroller of the currency, declared the results under the banking laws of this country were in a large measure unsatisfactory. He intimated the fault might be in a weak administration of the law.

In proposing a working co-operation between the national banking system and the state supervisors, the comptroller mentioned some practices he considered highly objectionable. The June call for condition of national banks showed $26,000,000 in overdrafts, he said, and there is no statute which allows his office to control such a condition. There are some state laws prohibiting overdrafts, and he urged co-operation with the supervisors on that point.

Weak banks should be forced into liquidation, Mr. Murray declared, and he said he would use every power conferred on his office to force unsteady institutions to discontinue business before they failed. Bank promoters he condemned in unmistakable terms.

GRAND JURY INDICTS BIG MEAT PACKERS

Chicago, Sept. 13.—The federal grand jury which has been investigating Chicago packers, has returned indictments against ten high officials of the Swift, Armour and Morris concerns.

There are three indictments against each, charging combination, conspiracy and illegal monopoly.

TIMBER CLAIMANTS LOSE $600,000 CASE

Portland, Sept. 13.—That C. A Smith, a wealthy timberman of Minneapolis, and his associates lose title to thirty-seven timber claims in Linn and Lane counties, valued at more than $600,000, was the decision of Judge R. S. Bean, in the United States circuit court, yesterday.

This is the first decision in the big timber land cases which has been pending two years. Eight other claims owned by Smith are held to be protected by statute of limitations.

The motion of David Eccles, the beet sugar magnate of Salt Lake City, and his associates to quash the indictment recently returned against them alleging conspiracy to take government land contrary to law was overruled. The case is thus put before the court on its merits and the defendants will be forced to appear in court.

Prince Cuts Off Queue.

Pekin, Sept. 12.—Prince Trai Tao, the chief of the Chinese military mission, which has spent two months in visiting America and the principal European countries, has cut off his pigtail. The news was received with delight at Pekin by the officers of the Chinese army, of which the prince is commander in chief. They anticipate the time when they can follow his example.

On the Alert.

"That handsome doctor at the hotel seems to be an object of interest to the young ladies."

"He claims to be investigating the theory of germ transmission by kissing."

"Well?"

"They're hoping he'll call for volunteers."

FASHION HINTS

If you want the very newest thing in a white lingerie dress, trim yours with black. It may be chiffon, lace or ribbon, as long as it is black. The dress in the sketch is trimmed with a deep flouncing of Brussels applique on the skirt, and touches of the same on the waist.

CARE GIVEN LINEN

DARNING OF FINE CLOTH IS FASCINATING WORK.

Wear of Tablecloth Is Prolonged If Several Stitches Are Taken in Fold—Proper Repairing of Worn Napkins.

Every housekeeper is proud of her linen closet, undoubtedly, and to keep the contents in good condition is more often considered a pleasure than a task, especially when the stitch-in-time-saves-nine rule is applied. Darning fine linen is really fascinating work if one will only take pains to do it well.

Table cloths are apt to show the first signs of wear in the fold down the middle, but an actual break may be prolonged if a few threads—half a dozen or so—are neatly darned in down this fold. Some housekeepers reinforce in this way after a few washings only, but as the damask then is apt to be thick, the darning is a little harder to do than when the cloth has reached the half-worn stage.

The thread known as flourishing cotton is used for repairing all kinds of house linen, and will be found to look almost exactly like a thread drawn from damask. Every one is acquainted with the device of cutting a couple of inches from one end and one side of a tablecloth when it begins to wear, but this shortening may be put off for a long time if the middle fold is strengthened while the cloth is still in good condition.

Then there are others who never iron the cloth directly through the middle, but fold it so that it measures from one to two inches wider on one part, because, of course, it is the constant pressing of the iron on the one line that causes the wear.

The next sign of wear is indicated by broken threads. If these are allowed to remain unnoticed the result will be a hole in no time, while if a few stitches are set in the ravage will be concealed and the damask look like new again. A simple in and out, upper and under stitch is used, the work being done on the wrong side of the cloth. This is "the stitch in time." When both woof and warp break, a hole having ragged edges is the result. When this happens there is nothing to do but cut away the frayed part and fill in the space with the darning stitch.

Unless the thread used for working has been shrunken loops should be left all around the edges of the hole. The wise plan is to leave the loops any way, because the ironing is apt to stretch the thread and the loops will allow plenty of "give," while a tight thread will cause a drawing that will in time tear the material mended part away. As the cloth is always thin around a hole, the darning should extend beyond it for half an inch or more on all sides.

Worn napkins are repaired in the same way as tablecloths.

Spanish Chocolate Cake.

First Part.—One cup of brown sugar, half cup of sweet milk, one cup of bitter chocolate that has been grated, one teaspoonful of vanilla extract. Second Part.—One cup of brown sugar, half cup of butter. Cream these two together; two eggs, one cup of milk, two cups of flour. After you have them well mixed together add the first part, or what you might call custard part. Cook the first part about ten minutes, and be sure it is cool before adding it to the second part. Lastly, add one teaspoonful of baking soda that has been dissolved in a little water. Bake in layers and also in a moderate oven. Make any kind of a white filling for between layers and on top of the cake.

Cooking Helps.

Serve a loaf of baked dressing with your roast of beef.

Try a spoonful or perhaps two or maple sirup on your warm apple pie.

Arrange cold rice in balls, roll in cocoanut, and serve with boiled custard.

Keep a box of parsley growing in your kitchen window or on your back porch and use it for dressing tomatoes, bacon, or chopped for sandwich filling.

Cut side salt pork thin and fry a crispy brown. Garnish with lemon quarters and parsley and you will not miss the more expensive bacon.

Stewed Apples.

The cores should be removed from the apples before peeling. When peeling be careful not to break them. Cover with water in which a cupful of sugar is dissolved, and stew gently until the apples are transparent. Lift them from the syrup with a strainer and place in a glass bowl. When perfectly cold fill the centers with red jelly and, if desired, mask the tops with a spoonful of orange marmalade. Stew down the syrup until it is quite thick, season with lemon juice and pour it around the apples.

Salted Veal.

Put one tablespoonful of butter in the chafing dish, when hot add three tablespoonfuls of cream, seasoning of salt and pepper, dust of powdered mace and red pepper. When very hot add one cupful of veal cut in dice, allow to heat thoroughly and serve. This is a delicious way of serving veal, and will often taste so much like chicken that it can scarcely be recognized as anything else.

WIDE VARIETY OF BEVERAGES

For Fruit Water Use Currants, Grapes, Raspberries and Apple Jellies—Drink for an Invalid.

Broth and beef tea contain less nourishment than many people suppose, but they act as a slight tonic, and are otherwise beneficial. For beef or mutton broth cut a pound of lean beef or mutton into pieces size of a pea, or run through a food chopper, put into a covered dish with two quarts of cold water and a little salt. Let it warm gradually and simmer for a couple of hours, care being taken that it does not boil. Strain and serve hot. If rice is to be served in it it should be cooked in water and not with the beef.

Among the purely refreshing drinks is fruit punch. To make it use one quart of water, two cupfuls of sugar, one and one-half cupful of chopped pineapple. Boil 20 minutes. Add one-half cupful of lemon juice and one cupful of orange juice. Cool and strain. Dilute with cold water when served. The white of an egg beaten to a froth and sweetened may be served in the glass with this or any of the before-given recipes, and thus add to their value.

A fruit water for immediate use may be made of currants, grapes, raspberries or apple jellies. Pour one-half a pint of boiling water on two tablespoonfuls of jelly desired and stir until it is dissolved. Serve cold.

The most important of the nutritious drinks is, of course, milk. When the patient is so ill that even milk is too rich, it is customary to dilute it with a third or half of the amount of vichy or lime water. Another nutritive drink is barley water. Onto a tablespoonful of pearl barley, the rind of a lemon and two or three teaspoonfuls of sugar, pour a quart of boiling water. Let it stand seven or eight hours and strain. The juice of the lemon may be added to taste. Rice may be used in place of barley.

RECIPE FOR CHICKEN STEW

Also How to Make Stuffed Dumplings—Fowl or Veal May Be Used—To Make Similar Dish.

Clean and cut in pieces two tender chicken. Put in a stew pan and boil ten minutes. Chop fine one large onion, one piece of garlic, one green pepper—seeds removed—and a small bunch of parsley. Put in with chicken and let simmer over a slow fire. In another saucepan put a cup of stock from the chicken, one large can of mushrooms, and one-half can of truffles, cut fine, a little chopped parsley, a pinch of red pepper, a tablespoonful of butter and salt enough to taste. Let this simmer slowly ten minutes, then thicken it with two teaspoons of flour wet with a little water. To the chicken in stewpan add pepper, salt, a cooking spoonful of butter and a pinch of mace. Let this cook until tender.

The Dumplings—Sift one pint of flour, one full teaspoon of baking powder, and one-half teaspoon salt together three times. Make into soft dough with one beaten egg and a little milk. Roll out thin. Cut into four inch squares. Put one tablespoon of the mushroom mixture in center of each square. Wet edges and roll up into balls. Put a steamer over boiling water. Put the dumplings in steamer. Cover well, and let the water boil rapidly 15 minutes. Beat well two eggs, add to what is left of the mushroom mixture. Stir this into the chicken. Let simmer a few minutes. Dish on center of large platter. Put dumplings around edge of dish. Sprinkle parsley over all. This can be made of game fowl or veal.—National Food Magazine.

Maraschino Cherry Cake.

One cupful sugar, one tablespoonful butter, one cupful milk, two cupfuls flour, two teaspoonfuls baking powder, one well-beaten egg. Bake in three layers.

Filling—Boil two cupfuls of sugar with ten tablespoonfuls of water until it threads. When done pour the sirup over the well-beaten whites of two eggs, then add one cupful of whole Maraschino cherries. Beat until it begins to cream and turn a light pink, then quickly place between and on top of layers.

Cream Cake.

One cupful sugar, one cupful sour cream, one-half teaspoon soda, two cupfuls flour, one teaspoonful vanilla. Bake in long shallow pan and when cool cover with any desired icing. Add more flour to above recipe for excellent cookies. Economical when eggs are high.

Maine Chicken.

Select your chickens, cut each chicken in six pieces, dip each piece in milk, roll in flour. Fry some pieces of salt pork. When very hot put in the chicken, cover and put on back of stove where it will cook slowly. Brown on both sides. When done, remove to a hot dish.

German Chop Suey.

Two pounds hamburger, fry a nice brown, three onions, one-half box of noodles, one small bunch of celery chopped up in small pieces, one can tomatoes, salt and pepper; boil one hour.

White Cake.

One cup of sugar, one-half cup of butter, one cup of sweet milk, the whites of four eggs, two teaspoons baking powder, two cups of flour or more. Flavor with vanilla

MACAROON DESSERT

DELICIOUS LITTLE CAKE IS USED IN VARIOUS WAYS.

Pounded Crumbs Most Delightful Addition to Many French Desserts—Delicious Recipe for Pudding—Numerous Other Ways Given.

A macaroon, plain and unadorned, is such a delicious little cake that many housewives will consider it useless labor to elaborate it further. Nevertheless, it serves as a foundation for or an addition to many dishes which seem particularly appropriate for summer dinners.

In the hands of the up-to-date confectioner the macaroon has been dressed up beyond recognition. Some of these little cakes are flavored with chocolate and almond and decorated on top with citron. Others are flavored with almonds only and filled with a combination of candied fruits. Still others have pink and white bonbons embedded in them or are decorated on top with a crown of yellow and white frosting, often in fancy shape. Sometimes, too, macaroons are pressed togther, with fancy colored icings between them.

Pounded macaroon crumbs are a most delightful addition to a great many French desserts, either sprinkled over the top or used as a thickening instead of bread-crumbs. With their crisp, almond flavor they are a distinct addition to a dessert. Bavarian creams, ice cold custard and many ice cream dishes may be improved by a sprinkling of pounded macaroons, while the popular ice cream croquette is made by rolling croquette shaped moulds of ice cream in powdered macaroon crumbs until they are thoroughly coated and are exact reproduction of real croquettes.

Here is a delicious macaroon dessert: Whip half a cupful of cream till stiff and sweeten with three level teaspoonfuls of powdered sugar. Flavor with a little vanilla and stir in six macaroons that have been broken into small pieces—not powdered. This will serve three persons. Pile it into three sherbet glasses and decorate each with three or four candied cherries.

For another macaroon dessert take half a dozen macaroons in just barely enough cold milk to cover them. Prepare a pint of corn starch custard in a double boiler and add the soaked macaroons to it. Stir it well to insure smoothness and remove from the fire. Sprinkle the bottom of a pretty dish with half a cupful of sugar. Pour the custard pudding into it and sprinkle another scant half cupful of sugar over the dessert. Peel three large ripe and finely flavored peaches and slice them over all while the pudding is still hot. Other summer fruits may be used, but the peaches seem to be the best. Properly made this is a delicious and refreshing sweet. It should be thoroughly chilled in the refrigerator before serving.

FOR THE VEGETARIAN.

Dessert.—A pretty desert for a vegetarian dinner may be made in the following manner: Cook rice in water without stirring and form it in circles on fruit plate. Fill in the center with fresh strawberries and pour over all a ladleful of pineapple juice which has been sweetened. Serve very cold.

Diced Beets.—To three-fourths cupful of cooked diced beets take one-fourth cupful of bread crumbs. Place these in alternate layers in a baking dish, arranging the crumbs on top. Then pour over them one-half cupful of hot milk, to which has been added one tablespoonful of butter, one teaspoonful of salt and one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper. Bake 20 or 30 minutes.

Vegetarian Pie.—Take any one of the flaked, ready cooked breakfast foods and mix with about half the quantity of rich cream to form a moist paste. With this line a well greased pie plate, molding it around the edges as you would pie crust. Pour in a filling of custard, cocoanut, cream, lemon, or apple, and bake as an ordinary pie. While the filling is cooking the cereal will bake out dry and crisp, becoming firm enough to hold the pie when cut. The indigestible qualities of an ordinary pie crust are missing and a delicious light pastry is the result. A meringue should be placed on top instead of a crust.

Make Your Mirror Bright.

To clean looking glasses take off the dust, then dip a sponge or clean cloth into hot water, wring it dry and dip it into some spirits of wine and rub well over the glass. Now dust the glass with some powdered blue or whiting crushed fine and sifted through muslin, wipe the powder quickly off again, rub the glass once more and then polish with a bit of silk or chamois leather. This method takes very little longer than when the glass is cleaned in the every day way, and keeps clean much longer and looks infinitely nicer.

Housekeepers' Hands.

If the hands are thoroughly greased with vaseline before using dyes it will prevent the stain penetrating deeply into the skin.

After washing clothes the hands are generally disagreebly rough. If a little olive oil is rubbed well into the skin and left for ten minutes, then rubbed with a cut lemon and well washed with hot water and soap, the hands will become smooth and white again.

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN CLALLAM COUNTY.

OFFICIAL PAPER

Published Every Friday at Port Angeles by The Webster Publishing Co.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1910

The small Democratic vote in Clallam county was a notable feature of the primary election Tuesday.

No man should have the support of a good citizen unless he stands right on moral questions. Party regularity cannot atone for moral crookedness.

Apparently many are waiting to vote for the next State Senator, D.S. Troy. Over 200 voters refused to vote for either Republican candidate at the primaries.

Intrenchment and reform seems to have been the watchword with the voters on Tuesday. The people are after the trusts and demand an accounting for extravagance in public officials. Will the Republican party in the state and nation take notice. Insurgency had much to do in determining the result in this state.

The election Tuesday in Maine resulted in a sweeping victory for the Democratic ticket. Late reports give Plaisted, Dem., for governor, a plurality of 8,732; the Democrats electing a secretary of state, state treasurer, an attorney general and a commissioner of agriculture. That party will also have a majority of 36 on joint ballot in the state legislature, which body will elect a United States senator to succeed Eugene Hale.

THE COUNTY TICKETS

ed the nominations as a matter of course.

While but few candidates filed for office on the Democratic ticket, and while the figures of the count cannot be given before the official returns are canvassed, it is apparent that nearly a full ticket has been nominated. D. S. Troy for joint senator, E. A. FitzHenry for county engineer, John Hallahan for assessor, and Chris Miller of Sequim for commissioner first district, having no opposition, of course received the full vote for their respective offices. In the two contests, George F. Cotterill seems to have the majority in the county for preference for U. S. senator, and Alfred I. Filion wins against Stephen Land and Claus Skavdal for commissioner second district. For representative there seems to have been three candidates named, Dr. F. S. Lewis, Frank Dustman and A. J. Cosser. It will take the official count to determine the nominee. Others nominated are, sheriff, Jilson White of Sequim; treasurer, A. J. Cosser; auditor, Hayes Evans of Sequim. In order for those not formally announced to get on the ballot it will be necessary that they file and pay the fee, and it is thought that one or two will not do this.

The Socialists did not vote their ticket very strong as there were no contests. The four original candidates are E. Ridenour for representative, Will H. Rice for sheriff, John Ward commissioner first district, H. C. Hansen commissioner second district. Mr. Ward was also nominated for state senator, but will not file for that office, it is thought. He cannot run for both offices. J. C. Leyman was named for treasurer.

Insurgency is not dying out, as was predicted by many. On the contrary, the returns indicate that insurgency is gaining in popularity among the people.

mile from camp, in twenty-five minutes, and he could have made it easily had he not tarried too long by the way to gossip with some ladies.

Mr. Lewis Leland, of the well known firm of Christophersen & Leland, while not much of a sprinter, claims to be an expert at mounting a pony on the trail. In making one attempt, from the hill side, Mr. Leland missed the pony and landed in the valley below, not much the worse for his experience.

Among the patrons at the springs last week were Lewis Leland, F. A. Jensen, Henry Hoffman, Mrs. Annie Black and daughter Miss Mary M. Black, Mrs. McNutt and son Cecil McNutt, Port Angeles; Edgar McNutt, Michigan, alias Boyd Edgar, a popular instructor in the Port Angeles schools; Mrs. Elizabeth Schoffel, Clearwater; Miss Ida Robinson, Eden; Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Parish, Seattle; John Doak, Bellingham; John and Al Gustofson, Auburn; W. B. Webster, Mrs. W. B. Webster, Thos. Boland, Port Angeles; Indian Joe Sampson and family, Freshwater, who were there gathering Pine Lilly or Squaw grass for basket making. The visitors were Ed Isabell and family of Elwha with their friends, making a party of thirteen; Mr. and Mrs. Stringham, also of Elwha; Mrs. Chas. Oxenford and little daughter and Miss Janette Everett, Clearwater.

WASHINGTON'S FRUIT CROP.

The fruit crop of Washington is exceeding even the greatest early expectations, and will prove a big asset to the state this year, when the wheat crop will run below the average. F. W. Graham, northwest industrial agent of the Great Northern, in an interview with the Post-Intelligencer, declares that the output of the Wenatchee valley will be worth $2,500,000 this year. Mr. Graham is in close touch with the situation, as the railroads are constantly at work getting advance information on the crop and preparing to handle it. With Wenatchee shipping 2500 to 3000 cars this year, the state's crop, if other regions are equally prosperous, will far surpass any previous yield. And only about one-fourth of the planted trees are in full bearing this year. With new trees coming into bearing each year, and the railroads bringing new settlers into the fruit districts almost as fast as their trains can carry them across the continent, Washington is certain to develop into what nature intended her to be, one of the world's great fruit centers.—Irondale News.

Our farmers and others should not let the opportunity pass of properly advertising the products of the county by failing to make a proper display of Clallam products, grains, fruits, vegetables, etc., at the Western Washington State Fair, Seattle, next week. Prepare your exhibits and take them up with you, or leave Mr. Levy send them on the excursion steamer for you next Tuesday. Clallam county soil produces the goods [illegible] a little personal pride and public [illegible] to advertise Clallam county as it should be. [illegible] show that [illegible]

[illegible] the campaign was a little slow in getting under way, it certainly made a whirlwind finish.

Senator Burroughs and Senator Hale have met their Waterloo. How have the mighty fallen!

The request of Mr. J. W. Christian for action on the part of the people of this section, looking toward an agitation of the necessity for early completion of the state road which will give both Jefferson and Clallam connection with the outside world, is one which should appeal to every patriotic citizen of the West Side.

It is true that the state of Washington is building this highway; it is true to date the officials having charge of the work have not shown a disposition to force matters. The hands of the people of this section are tied, so far as getting desirable results are concerned, should those in charge of the work not feel disposed to haste matters. It is more than probable, however, that a good, live healthy agitation, coupled with all the co-operation possible with state officials will do a great deal of good.

The road is a necessity for the Olympic peninsula. It will mean the development of an immediate source of revenue which is almost impossible to estimate. The Olympic mountains are fast gaining a reputation as the natural outing ground for the West. With automobiling in its present state of development the construction of proper highways into his section will mean a continuous stream of motor cars during a considerable period of the year, freighted with people who are willing and able to pay the price for proper entertainment. This prospect is one of the most glowing for even a section which numbers the possibilities of the Olympic peninsula.—Port Townsend Leader.

Since the 8-hour law became effective, and since the Wireless companies are establishing stations throughout the country there is a great shortage of telegraphers. The National Telegraph Institute of Portland, Ore., operates six official institutes in America, under supervision of R. R. and Wireless Officials and places all graduates into positions. In the matter of application for transportation of John Hagadorn to the State Institution for Feeble Minded, the Board finds that said child resides with its mother at Quillayute, Washington; that his name was duly reported to the County School Superintendent of Clallam county by the Clerk of school District at Quillayute, who made full report of such child to this Board:

It further appearing to the satisfaction of the Board that it is a proper person to be sent to said institution and that the parents are unable to bear the expense of sending said child, whereby it becomes our duty to send said school;

A RECORD RUTA-BAGA

Editor of the Olympic-Leader:—Herewith I hand you a vegetable known by the name of ruta-baga. It was grown and cultivated on the lot which contains the residence where I now reside. In the month of March a small space, which had been used as a grass lawn for the past thirteen years, was prepared and the seed sown in drils about the 15th of May. With proper cultivation and the necessary amount of moisture obtained from the city hydrant we have in evidence a vegetable that weighs a fraction over eight pounds, and its circumference is twenty-five inches. I present it to you not for its intrinsic value, but for the purpose of calling the attention of the tillers of the soil to the large area that lies on the plateau between Crescent Bay and Dungeness Valley

When the waters of the Dungeness and Elwha rivers, besides many of the smaller streams, have been diverted from their present channels by a system of irrigating canals and side ditches, then the area above mentioned will become a paradise that saints and sinners will esteem as a ideal locality to enjoy the products of the soil, with pure air and water in abundance.

Men and woman that have passed the four score mile stone may not live to witness the marvelous change that is coming for Clallamites, but little "tots" that can be seen on the porches of our city residence during a pleasant afternoon practicing their little playful antics, are sure to enjoy the benefits above stated.

Respectfully,
C. W. B.

P. S. The ruta-baga may be seen in the window of the Olympic-Leader office.

Mr. Hansen, the tinner, has bought the Coble property on 12th and Pine street and is remodeling the house, giving it a coat of paint and making many other improvements.

Her Feminine Prerogative

By CONSTANCE MORTON

"Then you won't go with me, Rose?"

The girl's face flushed warmly and then paled as she realized the importance of the question.

"Oh, Dick—why must you be in such a horrid business? The Bermudas are so far away from home and I will miss my people so much!"

"I thought it was to be your home—our home," he said steadily.

"Of course—but I have spent all my life here and I shall miss my friends—and couldn't you get a position in one of the company's offices in New York—then we could go to housekeeping at once? Do say you will, dear Dick!"

His eyes evaded the pleading in her blue ones and he turned away with a little shrug of the shoulders. When he spoke again his voice was coldly indifferent.

"I won't plead with you, Rose—I won't beg you to come with me; but you have said you loved me and you have promised to marry me. We have been engaged a year and now there is no reason why we should not be married—only you are afraid to go alone with me. You are afraid you will be lonely with only me, eh?"

"I will go the next trip, Dick—the very next," she promised brokenly. "I will get more used to the idea of going out there among so many strange people; don't be angry with me, now. I love you—indeed—I do—only—"

"Very well, Rose; I will wait, but you know I have been waiting a year now. Remember you are not taking a lasting farewell of your people. We shall return four times a year and the society down there is delightful and the climate is paradise most of the time."

"You will be back again in three months, Dick, and I shall be ready for you—remember that," she promised, and Dick Hayes had to be content with that answer.

He was to sail on the twentieth and it was now the fifteenth of the month. Business demanded most of his attention up to the very hour of sailing and he found little time to run up the Hudson to the suburban town where the girl lived. Rose was charming in her devotion to him, and as the days sped she grew wistful with the dread of parting from him.

On the 18th he did not come at all, but her dearest friend, Ella Dunning, came up from the city to spend the night with Rose. When they retired every topic of interest had been worn threadbare. Rose displayed the dainty trousseau tucked away in drawers and chests and then the lights were put out and they crept into bed to lay awake and gossip after the manner of girls.

"We thought you would be married this time, Rose," suggested Ella. "It seems a shame to let poor Dick go back to the islands all alone. When is it really to be?"

"The next trip home, Ella," returned Rose, rather pettishly. "You wouldn't want to go away down there and leave all your people behind. I want to get used to the idea. No one seems to understand how I feel!"

"If you feel the way you ought to, dear, you would rather be alone with Dick down there than here with everybody but him! That's the way I'd feel—I know I should!"

"I hope you'll be put to the test, Ella! I shall go the next trip. It's all arranged and I know it will be lonely so far away from New York!"

"You are spoiled!" laughed her friend, pinching the soft cheek. "Dick ought to come up here to Sweetcliff and carry you off. Once on the high seas with him, you would not come back for anything in the world! That's the way I'd feel about a man if I cared enough about him to promise to marry him!"

Rose sniffed scornfully in the darkness.

She felt quite secure in the possession of Dick Hayes' love and loyalty, and she knew if she kept him waiting 25 years he would be meekly patient until she lifted her pretty finger.

"It's too bad you didn't decide to go down with Dick this trip, dear," pursued Ella, after a little pause. "I met Louise Payne yesterday—you know her brother is in the same office with Dick down there in Hamilton, and Louise is going to sail day after tomorrow. She will join her mother in Hamilton and perhaps spend a year there—you know her health is not very good. Remember what a pale pretty little thing she is?"

"Yes," said Rose, sleepily, and the next time Ella spoke, Rose made no response at all. But while Ella slept Rose did not. Her eyes were wide open the whole night through and it was the longest night she had ever known.

She was aware of something that Ella had no knowledge of, that once upon a time—before he had met Rose—Dick Hayes had thought he was in love with Louise Payen; but he had met Rose in the very nick of time.

She decided to call Dick on the telephone the first thing in the morning and say that she would be quietly married that very day and sail with him the day after! Then—it would be just as she and Dick so often planned; they would sail away over tropical seas into a beautiful fairyland of love and romance!

The next morning Rose was singing like a lark in spite of her sleepless night. She accompanied Ella Dunning to an early train, and on her way home from the station stopped in a telephone booth to talk to Dick in New York.

"Mr. Hayes is not in this morning—perhaps you will leave a message for him," suggested the voice at the other end if the wire.

Rose hesitated. How could she word her message so Dick would understand and there would be no mistake? Her face blushed crimson as a thought came into her head, but there was no time to be lost.

"Please tell Mr. Hayes to come up to Sweetcliff this afternoon. "Tell him his—his wife has decided to sail with him," faltered Rose.

"Very well, Mrs. Hayes. I have written down the message and will see that your husband gets it as soon as he comes in," was the courteous reply, and with hot cheeks and shining eyes Rose stole out of the booth and hurried home.

Once at home she hesitated to tell her stepmother of her decision. What if Dick should not receive her message after all? She had no father or brothers and her stepmother was kindness itself, but too much absorbed in her own affairs to wish to be turned topsy-turvy by a hurried wedding that did not come off. She would try to catch Dick at his hotel—perhaps they would know there.

This time she went into the library and closed the door. When the hotel operator responded, she asked for Dick.

"Mr. Hayes went out about an hour ago," was the response. "No we don't know just when he will return—it is understood he is to be married this morning and sail with his bride tomorrow. I have just been told that Mr. Hayes will not return to the hotel."

Rose sank back in the chair with white cheeks. He had lost no time in finding another bride! An hour ago, he had gone forth to be married and it was only a brief 20 minutes since she had talked with the man in the company's office. What would Dick think when he received her message to come to Sweetcliff for his wife?

With a strangled cry of misery and dispair Rose flew up to her room and locked the door. She remained there the whole day, pleading a headache. Every nerve on the alert, she listened in vain for the sound of the telephone bell or the click of the gate latch. A few hours longer and the steamer would sail away with Dick Hayes and his bride—but the bride would be Louise Payne instead of Rose!

Just before sunset Mrs. Welkes knocked hastily on the door. "Rose, dear, let me in—you must!"

Dry-eyed, but pale and worn, Rose unlocked the door and admitted her stepmother. The elder woman was flushed with excitement she could not conceal.

"My dear—why did you not confide in me that you expected to marry Dick tonight? It has upset me terribly—it is hardly fair, you know!"

Rose stared doubtfully. "I expected to, mother—but something happened—and my plans were changed. You see—Dick has married some one else this very day!" Rose broke down and sobbed her story on Mrs. Welkes' comfortable bosom.

When she concluded, that lady was smiling broadly. "That may be, my dead—but I am sure you have mixed matters up in your poor little head. Dick Hayes is downstairs with your own minister to perform the ceremony; and he has fetched along Louise Payne and her new husband—she was married this morning and they are going to sail with you tomorrow—to form the wedding party! Now, you let met help you dress. What will you wear? The white lace gown will be just the thing—and if you will tell what you want to take I will pack your trunk after the ceremony."

Talking busily all the while, Mrs. Welkes helped Rose to prepare for her wedding. Blushes had followed swiftly upon the recital of her absurd mistake; and when at last she was arrayed, very charming and sweet in her bridal attire, her stepmother left her and sent Dick upstairs to fetch his bride.

Blissfully happy, he dashed into the room and gathered her into his arms.

"I could not let you go alone, after all, Dick," she whispered. "Did you not think me dreadful to telephone as I did?"

"Dreadful?" he repeated, joyfully; "I was the happiest chap in the world when I heard—that—my wife would sail with me tomorrow!"

"I didn't know how much I really cared, Dick, dear," whispered Rose to his coat collar, "until I claimed to be your wife! Then, I knew!"

BIGNESS OF THE WEST.

A Few Stories, Veracious of Course, Leave No Room for Doubt.

The great west is big. Every year the east hears a new crop of stories about the bigness of the west that makes it marvel. Here is a portion of this last season's crop of big stories of the things of the west, says the Los Angeles correspondence of the New York Herald.

During corn growing time a Kansas newspaper printed a startling dispatch from the southern part of that State saying that a boy climbed a cornstalk to see how the clouds looked and that the stalk was growing faster than the boy could climb down.

At the date of the dispatch the boy was clear out of sight. Three men were engaged to cut down the cornstalk with axes to save the boy from starvation, but the stalk grew so rapidly that they could not hit twice in the same place. The boy was living on green corn alone and had already thrown down more than four bushels of cobs.

The later fate of the boy is not known. That is of minor importance, anyway. The great and burning question is: Does corn really grow that fast in Kansas?

A man whose word has never been disputed with any degree of success went east with this story from south western Kansas. His two brothers were working clearing out the weeds in a deserted pasture lot. After a trip to the farmhouse one of the brothers returned to find the other missing.

"Where are you, Ed?" he shouted.

"Here I am," he heard the answering voice of Ed. coming from somewhere near the fence.

"Well, shake a weed, so I can tell where you are," commanded the brother.

They tell down east that if a farmer in the west plants his ground with corn and takes first class care of it he will get 100 bushels to the acre, and if he takes middling care of it he will get seventy-five bushels to the acre, and if he does not plant at all he will get fifty.

It is also told in the east that western farmers have been known to start out in the spring and plow a furrow until fall and turn around and harvest back; while a man in Detroit has a friend in Dakota who owned a farm on which he had to give a mortgage and the mortgage was due on one end before they could get it recorded on the other.

Not so long ago a man—perhaps it was the same man—was telling some acquaintances about a pathetic scene he witnessed on one of those big Dakota farms three years ago. He said he saw an entire family prostrated with grief—women yelling, children bawling and dogs barking. One man had his camp outfit placed on seven four-mule wagons and was going around bidding everybody good-bye.

"Where is he going?" asked one of the party."

"Half way across the farm to feed the pigs," was the answer.

Some one wanted to know if he ever got back to his family again, but the narrator said it was not time for him to get back yet.

One man, it is said, started in to cut a tree off his place. When he had cut away at one side for about ten days he decided to take a look around the tree, and when he got around on the other side he found a man who had been cutting at that same tree for three weeks and they had not heard the sound of each other's axes.

The quick growth of Western cities is a matter of common talk and the East no longer doubts these tales. An engine driver of a train crossing the prairie was surprised one day to see a town of considerable size just ahead, at a spot where there was nothing the day before. He yelled over to his fireman, asking what town that was, but the fireman was stumped, too. When he pulled into the station there were nearly 1,000 persons waiting to see the first train come in. When they pulled out the conductor stationed a brakeman on the rear platform to watch for any towns that sprang up after the train got by.

They never have anything small or ordinary out in that section at all. Windstorms blow down wire fences, draw stoves out of chimneys and blow the bottoms out of empty bottles. During one of these remarkable windstorms a whisky barrel standing in front of a saloon was sucked out of the bunghole and turned inside out, and the dirt was blown from around a post hole in the hillside, leaving the hole sticking out of the ground about two feet with no dirt around it.

Refused to Be Fooled.

There is no fooling a man who loves fooling. Some one, on that significant date, April 1, sent Henry Ward Beecher a letter containing just a sheet of paper with the two words, "April Fool," says the United Presbyterian.

Mr. Beecher opened it, and then a delighted smile beamed over his face as he exclaimed:

"Well! I've often heard of a man writing a letter and forgetting to sign his name to it, but this is the first case of a man signing his name and forgetting to write the letter."

Make Some One Happy.

Charles Kingsley thus counseled a friend: "Make it a rule and pray to God to help you to keep it, never, if possible, to lie down at night without being able to say, 'I have made one human being at least a little wiser, a little happier or a little better this day.' You will find it easier than you think and pleasanter."

FROZEN SALADS FOR LUNCH

Cool Dainties Not Freakish and Are Inexpensive and Always Palatable.

A "frozen salad" is not a freak in cookery, neither is it an expensive luxury. It is merely the latest and most appetizing way to serve vegetables in very hot weather.

A mayonnaise jelly, a chilled aspic or a sherbet of vegetable juices justifies the name, but in no way indicates the tempting qualities of these eccentrically named delicacies.

A mayonnaise jelly may be served with any frozen salad. Mixed with cubes of celery, cucumbers or any cold cooked vegetables, it may be moulded in forms or cups and served on lettuce; or it may be used to garnish any ordinary soft salad.

To make mayonnaise beat one egg, season it to taste with salt and pepper, mix with half a cup of olive oil, one-eighth teaspoon of mustard, and one teaspoon of granulated gelatin in cold water, dissolve it in hot, and mix with the mayonnaise; harden in a shallow pan and cut in fancy shapes or chill in moulds of fancy form.

For a frozen tomato salad, stew one quart of tomatoes with a slice of onion or any seasoning preferred, and strain when cold. Add a few drops of lemon and vinegar and freeze like a sherbet. Prepare the hearts of lettuce, arrange on a salad plate and serve with cones of the frozen tomato.

For a frozen cheese salad strain one jar of pressed currants to remove the seeds. Mix with cream cheese to the consistency of a smooth thin custard. Freeze and serve upon lettuce garnished with rings cut from olives.

REPORT OF FIRST METHODIST CHURCH

Both Congregation and People of the Town are Anxious for Return of Energetic and Popular Pastor

The annual report of the First Methodist Episcopal church is splendid evidence of the fact that the people of Port Angeles are responsive to the needs of the church, the grand total receipts for the year for all purposes amounting to $1975. This also shows that some one has taken the head and has accomplished results, and no doubt much of the credit is due the pastor, Rev. H. J. Hartsell, who, in addition to the 690 visits, 146 public meetings addressed, five weddings, two funerals, six baptisms, four communion services, forty-six Sundays, eight social functions, soliciting funds to pay off $500 debt on the parsonage, answering 96 frivolous inquiries on the phone and as many more by letter, entertaining twenty-three official guests, listening to the inquiries of book agents, politicians, and women, acted as pastor of the Lincoln Heights church for three months, held ten preaching services at Port Crescent, went fishing, tried to keep on easy terms with his wife, attend all the committee meetings, business meetings, official board, and Quarterly Conferences, and yet not offend a mother-in-law. To play a Christian Hero in a local option campaign and set as a judge of an election as well as vote on Primary Election day for good citizenship, and then turn a good report to his Annual Conference is certainly going some and means much for one who keeps at work every day in the year The local church deserves tobe congratulated on the work of the past year. The church passed a resolution of thanks to those who contributed to the parsonage fund; also a call to the pastor for his return for another year. And the people of Port Angeles generally, church members as well as all others, unite in the call for the return of Rev. Hartsell to his pastorate here for another year. Port Angeles, nor the First Methodist church cannot afford to dispense with his services.

CLEARING LOGGED-OFF LAND

What appears to be somewhere near a record in clearing logged-off land for cultivation is described by a Seattle man who cleared two hundred acres of average stump land inClallam County for $8,638,14 an average of $43.25 an acre. The modern methods of land clearing are rapidly working toward a settlement of the fertile logged-off lands of the county, and no other form of development can do more for the Northwest. The sample of clearing mentioned has been described in detail in an article written by C. F. Whaley of Seattle for Pacific Northwest Commerce. He gives the following as the distribution of the expense of clearing the 200 acre tract:

Labor	5287 77
Powder	2882 41
Fuse	85 77
Caps	38 90

THE STATE FAIR AT NORTH YAKIMA

Will Be Held September 26th to October 1st. Annual Event Increasingly Popular.

When the harvest has been laid aside the farmer and his family are ready for some entertainment and rest. The state fair, combining the features of education with those of entertainment, is the natural place for the annual outing. It is a combination of business and pleasure that exactly fits the farmer's needs and gives his family just the sort of recreation that is wanted.

The modern state fair has taken a strong place in the hearts of the farmers of the country, and in many states there are thousands and tens of thousands who make it an annual event never to be missed.

At one state fair of the middle west more than 90,000 farmers, stockmen, dairymen and fruit growers attend annually. In thousands of cases entire families remain the whole week.

It is to the influence of this class of producing patrons that state fairs have been developed into the clean and attractive shows that now annually exist. The farmer wants clean entertainment, and he wants it along the lines of the work in which he is engaged. He wants his sons to see where the best methods are employed and his daughters to see the work of the women of his state. In fact, it is to his financial interest to go where he can see the very best products and to learn how they were obtained; hence the popularity of the modern state fair.

Following these well established practices the Washington state fair at North Yakima, Sept. 26-Oct. 1, has turned the fair along the lines in which the people of Washington are most deeply interested. The plant has been increased by the addition of $30,000 worth of new buildings for exhibits and for the accommodation and comfort of visitors. More permanent work has been done in the past two years than in the preceding fourteen.

Six live stock barns, each 220 feet long and 40 feet wide, have been erected, and there are now accommodations for 600 head of cattle and horses, 300 sheep and 400 hogs. There is also room for 250 head of race horses.

One of the handsomest structures on the state fair grounds is the new Woman's building, which has been erected and arranged with an eye single to the comfort of the fair sex and a proper showing of the handiwork of the housewife. It is a replica of the Yakima county building at the A. Y. P. E.

Few state fair plants have a finer horticultural building than Washington. It is 200 by 140 and with the showing made this year will certainly excel that of any state in the Union. This great building will have every inch of space filled with the finest fruit products of the greatest fruit state of the country.

The railways have made a rate to the Washington state fair of one and one-third fare for the round trip for passengers and a reduced rate on exhibits.

Can You Judge Live Stock?

An educational feature of the Washington state fair is the students' stock judging contest. Young men under twenty-five years are to pass upon a ring of horses, cattle, sheep and swine and place them in order of quality. They are to write their reasons for classing the animals. Judges of national repute will correct the ratings and explain the reasons therefor. This contest for farmers' sons is one of the very best lessons in live stock work and valuable every day of after life.

The impression that the light harness horse is passing must be erroneous. This type of horse is liberally recognized in the makeup of the Washington state fair, Sept. 26-Oct. 1, at North Yakima.

Four stakes of $1,000 each, the entries for which closed July 1, brought seventy-seven entries, and nine states and British Columbia are represented in the entry list. Two harness races each day will be given on the state fair track, commencing Sept. 26 and closing Oct. 1. Two or more running races will be given in addition to Indian and novelty track contests.

The National Conservation Congress, which met in St. Paul last week, split over the very question which has been of greatest interest to people in the Northwest when Conservation has been discussed. The question was federal versus state control of water power sites. The advocates of federal control won the day, and thereby defeated the group of western governors who met in Salt Lake City previous to the convention and declared themselves in favor of state control. Governor Hay of Washington was the man who called the governors together, and was a strong advocate of state control, but the speeches of Roosevelt and Pinchot opposing his policy and advocating federal control, won the day. The western men had to admit they were out voted, but not that they were wrong. The opposition to the radical policies of Pinchot remains strong and the greatest accomplishment of the convention seems to have been to draw the lines clearly. Never before have the real issues of the conservation doctrine been so clearly outlined. With such leaders of thought as Col. Roosevelt, President Taft, James J. Hill and a score of other noted men expressing their views in the subject, the problem of conserving our natural resources and at the same time making intelligent use of them ought to be worked out in time along fair and satisfactory lines. The St. Paul Convention gathered more notable speakers than any other event of the year.
