ALBION FOR VICTORIA RUN

That the Albion will soon be making tri weekly trips to Victoria now seems to be practically assured. On her present schedule between Angeles and Seattle she is lying at the docks here from early morning till evening on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and thus has ample time to make the run to our neighboring city, eighteen miles across the straits. But there are expenses other than those ordinarily incurred by the local steamers, notably pilotage and the customs fees for entrance and clearance at both ends, and the Angeles Brewing and Malting Co., owners of the Albion, have been in doubt as to whether there would be sufficient business to justify their incurring the expense. It is, however, believed that the running of a boat to Victoria, now that that city is enjoying something of a boom and is attracting eastern investors, would result in a considerable number of these people visiting Port Angeles and making investments here. Since the steamer has been rebuilt, affording good passenger accommodations, local people have taken the matter up and have raised nearly the amount the company asks to contract the service, at a fare of one dollar each way, for a term of six months.

MEN'S CLUB OF CONG'L CHURCH

That interest in the Men's Club of the Congregational church is not lagging was demonstrated by the number present, at a called meeting Monday evening. Committees have been appointed and work laid out for them. A number of new names for membership were presented. Messrs. D. W. Morse, F. A. Stiles, L. M. Campbell, Cecil McNutt, A. J. Cosser constitute the membership committee and will receive application for membership. The next open meeting of the club will occur on the third Monday in December, the 19th, when it is expected that a speaker of prominence will be present and the meeting probably held in the opera house.

The cold wave that is sweeping the country this week from off the North Pacific coast, as usual, gave Angeles the go-by. While the near-by mountains are covered with snow, roses and other flowers are still in bloom in many of the gardens in Angeles, and lawns and commons are as green as in June.

BAND CONCERT AND DANCE

Opera House, Saturday Evening, December 10th. Turn Out and Help the Boys.

The Port Angeles Marine Band, S. E. Wright, director, will give a concert and dance at the opera house, Saturday evening, at 8:30, December 10th.

PROGRAM.

March, Pettibones Compliments, Bellstedt.

Overture, Poet and Peasant, Suppe.

Duet, Two Thoughts (for clarinets), Strong—Messrs. Miles and Farmer.

Selection, Lucia Di Lammermoor, Donizeth. Introducing Mad Scene and famous Sextette.

Vocal Solo, Selected—Miss Ada Thomas.

Waltz, Italian Nights, Tobani.

Medley, The Jolly Minstrel, Barnhouse.

Fantasia, Auld Lang Syne (Solos for all instruments), Dalbey.

The band boys have been running under an expense of $65 per month, practically all of which has been put up out of their own pockets. Of late they have run somewhat behind, and have had to borrow a hundred dollars to meet their obligations.

Besides the advantage of having a band in town when occasion arises for the same, we are all indebted to the boys for the pleasure of the many Sunday afternoon concerts given during the summer months. They have not asked for assistance and are only doing so now when they are able to give full value for money received. The program speaks for itself; that they are able to render it is sufficient evidence of the good progress made. The band is now, and will be yet more, a credit to the town. Everyone should buy a bunch of tickets, whether he will be able to take in the concert or not, for without substantial encouragement at this time the band must disband.

PRACTICED DANCING FOR BASKET BALL GAME

Our basket ball team returned Saturday, after a four days absence to Seattle and Port Townsend where they met defeat and came home a more experienced as well as with a slightly reduced opinion of their ability. They have come to the conclusion that dancing ever-so-often is not the best kind of training. That without practice basket ball is a fizzle and that strange floors seem even stranger with the lack of sleep and the only way to get into good condition is to get down to hard work. Then we may be able to play with some of the best teams in the Northwest the coming season. There will be another game with the Co. A. team from Seattle to determine the superiority of the teams, each team now having won one game. The remaining game will be played off on the home floor some time in January.

There will also be a return game here with the Port Townsend team at a later date. We hope our boys will overlook the Townsend spirit and do their best to entertain the team when it comes here, showing them that there is nothing small about PortAngeles and we are at least hospitable at all times. Paul Farmer needs mention for the good hard game he played at Townsend.

The ladies of the St. Andrew's Guild invite you to inspect the articles for sale at their annual bazaar to be held on the evening of December 5th and the following afternoon, December 6th, at Parish Hall.

There will be a fine display of fancy articles—aprons of all descriptions and a special feature will be the doll sale. Dressed dolls and dolls' wearing apparel will be for sale; Also a full line of the celebrated home candy. Tea will be served December 6th.

GRAVELING FRONT STREET

Doctors Disagree—Meanwhile Public Wades Thru the Mud. Worst Road in the County.

The proposition to clean, gutter, and gravel Front street, submitted to the City Council by L. R Thompson, Tuesday evening, precipitated a renewal of hostilities between the hill people and those whose chief interest is centered in the mud flats, and with very little prospect of reaching an agreement.

Mr. Thomuson proposed to clean off the filth, the city furnishing a hose and water from the hydrants, and to put in gutters twelve inches wide by four deep, with drainage holes, grading with gravel to a depth of six inches in the center. He would give a bond to complete the work for $50 for each fifty foot lot.

While such work could only be undertaken by the creation of an assessment district (unless the resident owners should be willing to pay the entire expense) and would necessarily be let to the lowest bidder, still Mr. Thompson's proposition serves the purpose of giving a definite idea as to the cost of the improvement asked for by the property owners in their petition to the council last March, which was as follows:

"We, the undersigned property owners on Front street between Oak street and a point 150 feet east of Lincoln street, request your honorable body to improve said portion of Front street by scraping and removing the mud therefrom, rounding up said street and placing one foot of gravel mixed with crude petroleum thereon, and by constructing open gutters on the edges of the street of

AMERICAN WOMAN'S LEAGUE

The Port Angeles branch of the American Woman's League now numbers thirty-nine. We hope to have more join us, and a Chapter House (club house) will be built for us here, something that is needed and what we have long wanted.

This is a business and educational affair. There are now several thousand women in different parts of the United States taking advantage of the educational courses, of which there are over two hundred; the best of instructors are employed. When we get our Chapter House, classes will be formed where there are two or more interested in any of the courses. A phonograph will be furnished to help in the correspondence courses, and for music as well; lecture courses will be provided also. These are just a few of the advantages of membership, all free to members and their minor children for life.

Until further notice meetings will be held at the residence of Mrs. L. T. Haynes, corner Front and Peabody, the first Friday of each month at 2:30 p. m. All are welcome.

JUST WHAT WE NEEDED

From the Vancouver, B. C., World we learn that the Canadian Home Builders Association, Limited, has "recently acquired possession of 465 lots in Port Angeles for the purpose of establishing a townsite here. This property is to be placed on sale within sixty days." Also that this same association has recently made the survey and laid out a townsite on the Great Northern railway near Vancouver. Prominently identified with the Canadian Home Builders in the promotion of these projects are the following well known names: Robt. Kelly, J. A. Crow, Dr. A. R. Baker, M. F. Keeley and Major James Hills.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED BY NATIONAL GRANGE

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 27.—Resolutions calling for drastic regulations of railroads and giving the interstate commerce commission power to nullify extortionate freight and passenger rates were adopted by the National Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, the other day.

Radical changes in tariff and physical valuation of railroad trunk lines were also urged.

Federal aid for road improvement, the parcels post, conservation of natural resources, a national income tax, direct election of United States senators, agricultural extension and nonpartisan tariff commission were also favored.

The speedy construction of a ship canal connecting the Mississippi river with the Great Lakes, canal lines and the dredging of navigable rivers were indorsed.

The proposal of the insurgent members to spend $60,000 of the $118,000 surplus in grange extension during 1911 was defeated, but plans for an energetic campaign were adopted.

ALL BUILDINGS OF CEMENT IN TOWN OF METALINE

Spokane, Wash., Nov. 26.—Every store, office and business building and dwelling at Metaline Falls, a new town in Stevens county, Wash., 100 miles north of Spokane, will be veneered with cement block, the product of a $1,000,000 plant under construction there. The sidewalks and curbing also will be of cement. The factory, which covers 30 acres, will be in operation next February. An electric plant, costing $350,000, designed to generate 10,000 horsepower, is nearing completion. Two lumber yards have been opened and with all kinds of materials on hand there is much building activity. Lewis P. Larsen of Spokane, owner of the townsite, was formerly a miner in Colorado and Northern Idaho. He discovered vast deposits of materials for the manufacture of cement and lime on a heavily timbered mountain a year ago and was successful in interesting Pittsburg and Chicago capitalists, who are investing thousands of dollars in assisting in developing the district tributary to the new town, which has rail and water facilities.

The indictments, besides containing the general conspiracy charge, also contain two counts that the men accused operated a "confidence game." The bonds in each case were fixed at $20,000.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE IS PROCLAIMED

GOVERNOR HAY FORMALLY ANNOUNCES ADOPTION OF AMENDMENT.

Attorney General Holds Registration Law Is Amended by Implication so as to Include Women—Vote on Amendment was 52,299 to 29,676.

Olympia, Nov. 29.—Women of the state of Washington over the age of 21 years now have the right to vote. Upon receiving, late yesterday afternoon, the official count of the votes cast at the election on November 8 for and against the constitutional amendment granting women the right to vote, and finding that it had carried by a majority of 22,623, there being 52,299 for and 29,676 against, Gov. M. E. Hay issued the proclamation declaring the constitutional amendment carried.

Although women now have the right to register and to vote, it is not likely that they will be able to exercise it until the legislature meets next year. All of the registration books in the cities are now closed, and an informal opinion of the attorney general holds that women who registered previous to the issuance of the proclamation do not have the right to vote at the coming elections.

He holds that the registration law where it reads "male citizen" is amended by implication.

The Proclamation.

The proclamation follows:

Whereas, The legislature of the state of Washington, by chapter 18 of the session laws of 1909, submitted to the voters of the state the proposition of amending article 6 of the constitution of said state, the same to be held on the 8th day of November, 1910; and,

Whereas, It appears from the ballots cast at said election that a majority of the qualified electors voting upon the question of the adoption of said amendment have voted in favor of the same:

Now therefore, I, M. E. Hay, governor of the state of Washington, have proclaimed, and do hereby proclaim, that said amendment has been adopted, and that the same is now a part of the constitution of the state of Washington.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of state to be hereunto affixed, at Olympia, this 28th day of November, 1910.

FEDERATION OT LABOR ADOPTS RESOLUTIONS

St. Louis, Nov. 28.—The American Federation of Labor closed the 30th annual convention here Saturday night by choosing Atlanta, Ga., as its meeting place for next year. The entire list of officers, including President Gompers, Secretary Morrison and Treasurer Lennon, were re-elected.

The Western Federation of Miners' application for charter was referred to the executive council with authority to act and the first meeting of that body on the controversy was held yesterday.

The contest between Atlanta, Washington and Rochester, N. Y., for next year's meeting was the feature of the last afternoon's session. Delegations representing the three cities made vigorous fights on the floor of the convention, but the Southern city won with a vote of 8,738 against 5,357 for Rochester and 265 for Washington.

Fraternal delegates to the British Trades Union Congress were chosen in William R. McFarland (Carpenters) of Buffalo and Daniel J. Tobin (Teamsters) of Boston. William J. Tracey (Plumbers) of Philadelphia was elected fraternal delegate to the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress, while Vice-President James Duncan was selected as the Federation's delegate to the International Labor Secretarial to be held at Budapest in August, 1911.

The administration ticket was elected throughout with the exception of one instance, when Owen Miller (Musicians) of St. Louis was defeated as a candidate for fraternal delegate to the British Congress by Tobin, of Boston.

The convention by unanimous vote indorsed woman suffrage and later placed itself on record as favoring the organization of all classes of labor in this country, including negro. Some of the Pacific Coast delegates objected to the proposition to include the Asiatic races and it was suggested that the remedy was the exclusion of Orientals.

The Western Federation argument, which had been carried over from Friday, on a point of law by President O'Connell of the Machinists, was taken up shortly before noon, when President Gompers decided that O'Connell's point was not well taken.

This point was that in the case of the Western Federation's application for charter, the written consent of the officials of the other organizations whose jurisdiction may not be affected, had not first been obtained.

The executive council of the Federation, which began its sessions yesterday, will remain here nearly a week closing up business referred to it by the convention. President Gompers and the other officials form the council.

DOES NOT INDORSE WOMEN FOR OFFICE AT PRESENT

Spokane, Wash., Nov. 26.—"Women voters should remember that they are like the boys casting their first vote and are not capable of holding offices at the present time, and I would not think of supporting a woman for commissioner in case the commission form of government is adopted," said May Arkwright Hutton of Spokane, president of the Washington Political Equality league, in speaking of questions that have arisen since the right to vote franchise has been given to women of this state, adding: "Women must not abuse their privileges. Any right-minded woman will realize that she is in the class with a boy of 21 who is casting his first vote, and the first thing to do is to study conditions and gain information, which will take much time." When asked if she would favor a woman commissioner under any conditions, Mrs. Hutton said: "Absolutely not at this time. I was for votes for American women. The questions in such an office would be new to the women. My idea was not that women should immediately seek political honors, but that they should support honorable, capable men for such positions."

SEATTLE, 237,197; PORTLAND, 207,214

Washington, Nov. 28.—The population of Portland is 207,214, compared with 90,426 in 1900, and 46,385 in 1890. The increase from 1900 to 1910 therefore is 116,788, or 129.2 per cent, as compared with an increase for the preceding decade of 44,041, or 94.9 per cent.

The population of Seattle is 237,194, an increase of 156,532, or 194 per cent over 80,671 in 1900. The population in 1890 was 37,834.

The revision of the Portland figures resulted in the elimination of 15,745 names. The number taken from Seattle's count was 11,188.

"GREAT APPLE WAY" TO TRAVERSE SPOKANE VALLEY

Spokane, Wash., Nov. 26.—Two modern thoroughfares, each 34 miles in length, to be known as "The Great Apple Way," will be built the length of the Spokane valley, between Spokane and Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, at a cost of $350,000. The preliminary work will be taken up in a few days, and it is expected that actual construction will begin early next spring. The funds required will be contributed as follows: States, 50 per cent, counties, 35 per cent, and landowners, 15 per cent.

The roads will be of oil macadam, 24-foot center with four-foot shoulders and lined on both sides with apple and elm trees, making two of the most unique highways in America. Orchardists and nurseries and irrigation companies operating in the valley have contributed trees and water, and the work of caring for them will be done by ranchers along the routes. The work on the Washington side will cost about $200,000 and will be done unden the direction of the state highway commission and the Spokane County Good Roads association.

"The first road to be built will be the extension of East Sprague avenue," said J. A. Perry, secretary of the Spokane County Good Roads association. "The property owners there have contributed $34,000, or about $9000 more than the proprietors on the Trent road. The route has been surveyed and work will be pushed next spring. This road will be 15 miles in length to the Idaho line.

"The Spokane & Inland Electric Railway company has donated a bridge across the Spokane river and this span will be maintained by the states of Washington and Idaho. We have also received substantial contributions from other sources and are now in position to say that the two roads will be completed."

TELLS OF COMPANY PLAN FOR A NEW BOND ISSUE

New York, Nov. 26.—R. S. Lovett, president of the Union Pacific railroad, today gave out a statement explaining the purpose of the incorporation in Oregon on Wednesday of the Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation company. The new company is capitalized at $50,000,000, and is controlled by the Union Pacific.

Judge Lovett's statement says:

"The Oregon Railroad & Navigation company mortgage, which limited the bonds issued under it to $24,000,000, made no adequate provision for new lines. Consequently, branches and other extensions have been constructed from time to time by a separate corporation, so that the system in Oregon and Washington, while operated as a unit, is really owned by several different companies, whose stock is held by the Union Pacific.

"The purpose now is to vest the title to these several pieces of railroad in a single corporation and provide for further construction and expansion to keep pace with the rapid development of the Northwest by an issue of bonds under a mortgage that will cover an entire and compact system.

"No arrangements have been made for the issuing of such bonds. We are merely getting ready to deal promptly with conditions as they arise. We are taking similar action, and for the same reasons, with respect to the Oregon Short Line System in Utah, Idaho and Montana."

NORTH COAST ROAD OWNERSHIP

NOW FORMALLY ACKNOWLEDGED PART OF HARRIMAN SYSTEM.

Judge Lovett, Who Succeeded Harriman as Executive Head, Gives Out Statement Announcing Policy of Extension with New Bond Issue as Basis — Holding Company Incorporated.

Seattle, Nov. 26.—Formal acknowledgment that the Harriman interests own the North Coast railroad was made during the week when articles of incorporation were filed at Salem, Ore., for the consolidation of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation company, the North Coast and 14 subsidiary companies of the O. R. & N. The consolidation embraces the O. R. & N. mileage in Washington, Oregon and Idaho, as well as the North Coast properties in those states. The total mileage affected by the new consolidation is 3079 miles.

The building and operating of the North Coast has always been surrounded with mystery, and President Strahorn, the only official visible, got a wide reputation for refusing to talk. That it was an independent road with unknown capital behind it, that it was built by the Milwaukee, the Chicago Great Western, the Canadian Pacific, were some of the surmises offered at different times, which were not finally settled till this week.

CONSOLIDATION PLANNED TO RAISE MORE FUNDS

That the purpose of the consolidation of the Harriman lines in the Pacific Northwest, together with the North Coast, is for the purpose of raising large sums from bond issues with which to continue construction is indicated in the official statement issued the other afternoon from Harriman headquarters in Portland. This statement says:

"In 1896, when the Oregon Railway & Navigation company was reorganized under the name Oregon Railroad & Navigation company, a bond issue of $24,000,000 was provided for. At that time an issue of $20,000,000 was made, and since then further issues aggregating $23,380,000.

During this time the mileage controlled by the Oregon Railroad & Navigation company had grown from a total rail and water of 1144 miles in 1896 to 3097 in 1910.

More Money Wanted.

Further bond issues being required to carry on new roads and extensions now under way and those projected, it was found necessary to form a corporation with enlarged powers, one especially having the right to make a larger bond issue.

A total of more than 1000 miles of new railroad in this state, to be constructed at some time in the indefinite future, is described in the following official statement issued last night by President R. E. Strahorn of the North Coast, at Spokane:

It is apparent that the Harriman interests propose no longer to play second fiddle to any railroad aggregation in this part of the country, no matter how large it may be. Besides the numerous new lines provided for in Oregon and Western Washington, the following, specifically designated as North Coast railroad extensions, are of particular moment to the city of Spokane and the Inland Empire.

The constructed, partly constructed and telegraph lines of the North Coast Railroad company are:

To Build Branch Lines.

A line from Attalia, a point on the line of the Snake River Valley Railroad company, in Walla Walla county, Wash., to North Yakima.

A line from Sunnyside Junction, a point on the last named line in Yakima county, Wash., to Sunnyside, Wash.

A line from North Prosser, Wash., to Prosser, Wash.

A line from Granger, Wash., through Toppenish to a point near Fort Simcoe, Wash.

A line from some point hereafter to be selected on the line from Granger-Fort Simcoe, in Washington, thence northerly to Parker Siding in said state, to a point on the Attalia-Yakima line, south of Yakima City.

A line from Benton through Hanford, White Bluffs, Beverly and Wenatchee to the mouth of the Okanogan river, all in Washington.

RAILWAYS FAIL TO GET COMMISSION ENJOINED

San Francisco, Nov. 26.—Ruling that none of the allegations of the railroad companies had been proved, Judges Ross, Gilbert and Morrow, sitting en banc in the United State circuit court here, declined to enjoin the interstate commerce commission from reducing freight rates on certain commodities between Missouri river shipping points and terminals in Washington, Oregon, Nevada and Arizona.

Judge Gilbert, who delivered the decision, orally, declared that the decision of the interstate commerce commission to reduce the rate was neither confiscatory, arbitrary nor discriminating. He ruled that none of the bills submitted by the attorneys for the railroads showed that the reduced rates would prove confiscatory.

That the rates were arbitrary might be possible, but so long as no law was transgressed the court held that the commission is empowered, in its discretion, to enforce rates which are arbitrary. The contention of the railroads that the blanket rate fixed by the commission is discriminatory is held by the court to be a matter for its future decision, as the railroads, by fixing rates below the figure set by the commission, could obviate the blanket feature.

MODEL SUBURBAN CITY PLANNED BY MRS. SAGE

New York, Nov. 26.—Preliminary plans of the Russell Sage Foundation, established by Mrs. Sage as a memorial to her husband for the establishment of a model suburban city, providing healthful and beautiful homes for persons of moderate means, have been announced.

Briefly, the project is to utilize a tract of 412 acres in Forest Hill gardens, Long Island, nine miles from New York City, in laying out a town for 1500 families.

First Expenses.

The initial financial expenditures for the purpose, it is announced, now amount to $2,250,000. How much more will be needed to carry the plans to completion is not known, but the foundation trustees state that Mrs. Sage is prepared to supply all the funds required to carry out her ideas.

Through the announcement it is made plain that the enterprise is not a charity, but is to be made self-supporting and is to yield a fair return on the investment. Its purpose is to enable persons in moderate circumstances to own their own homes at a minimum cost, but amid ideal surroundings.

The minimum cost of paying for a home there, it is estimated, will be $25 a month, including principal and interest.

For the present, laboring men whose wages are small, will not benefit directly from Mrs. Sage's enterprise. The cost of land in Forest Hill, it is explained, precludes provision for the working class. Intimation that they will be cared for later, however, is given in the trustees' statement.

Spotless Town.

Forest Hill Gardens is to be made a real "spotless" town as nearly as money and skill can make it. It has been laid out by a landscape gardener, and its architectural development will be scrutinized by an expert. Applicants for homes will have to submit to examinations as to their character and antecedents.

The present plans contemplate the opening of the model town early next year.

MUNICIPAL DANCE PROVES SUCCESSFUL

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 28.—Milwaukee's first municipal dance was a decided success.

Juneau hall, one of the smallest halls of the city auditorium, in which it was given, proved too small, and Kilbourne hall, adjoining, was thrown open.

The grand march, in which 250 couples took part, was led by Louis W. Vizay, 82 years old, Milwaukee's oldest dancing master, and Mrs. C. B. Whitnall, one of the leading figures in the Association of Public Play and Social Education, under whose auspices the dances are given.

Several leading Socialists and their wives attended.

The dances are given by the Playground Association to afford young people an opportunity to break away from the evils customarily attending Saturday night dances.

New York State Grows.

Washington, Nov. 26.—The population of the state of New York is 9,113,297, according to statistics of the thirteenth census. This is an increase of 1,844,385, or 25.4 per cent over 7,268,894 in 1900. The increase from 1890 to 1900 was 1,265,257, or 21.1 per cent.

ELECTION OFFICERS APPOINTED

Hereafter Corpse Must Pay Seven Dollars Down or Sleep Out in the Cold.

City Council met in regular session Tuesday evening, ordering city light line extended on 7th to Chambers street, also ordering the purchase of a transformer.

Clerk, Surveyor and Street Supt. ordered to procure pipe for the ditch on alley between Front and Georgiana streets.

Street superintendent instructed to employ someone to clean street crossings in business quarter where not already kept in passible condition.

Petition for four foot walk on south side of 3rd street, between Laurel and Oak granted.

Finance committee put their O. K. on Clerk and Treasurer's reports for quarter ending October 31st.

Councilman Harding offered resolution, which was adopted, to the effect that hereafter upon the application of a burial permit in Ocean View, the city clerk shall collect the fee including the sexton's charges amounting to $7.00, for such permit before issuing same.

The council went into committee of the whole for the purpose of considering a proposition from Lew R. Thompson to put Front street, from Oak to Lincoln, in proper condition. After much discussion pro and con and the usual amount of scrapping indulged in by members of the council whenever this matter is before that august body, the meeting adjourned without action.

Election officers, for the city election to be held December 6th, were appointed as follows:

First ward—H. Baker inspector; S. E. Wright, Wm. Tyrrell, judges.

Second ward—W. T. Belford inspector; H.W. Doty, J.M. Bell, judges.

Third ward—J. A. Smith inspector; A. Pinyard, J. M. Gardner, judges.

Fourth ward—J. J. MacKechnie inspector; H. S. McLeod, Fred Schuler, judges.

Fifth ward—Tom Olson inspector; J. W. Hayne, John Hitch, judges.

four inch planks with sufficient drain holes. We agree to pay the cost thereof in proportion to our respective holdings, not exceeding two dollars per front foot of abutting property to be so improved on said street as herein specified."

The petition was signed by Lewis Levy, S. J. Lütz & Co., D. W. Morse, C. W. Thompson, J. M. Bell, Phelps Dry Goods Co., R. D. Willson, E. D. Short, Mrs. A. Goldwater, B. P. Grubb, W. R. Clark, T. T. Aldwell, Chas. Brandt, A. R. Pringle, P. J. Wold, D. McInnes, N. Nelson, Minna Lange, Marion J. Bell, Herman Fisher, W. B. Smith, C. E. Nailor, Wm. Graham, Otto Erickson, James Stewart and Albert Goldwater, the list including nearly all the resident property owners and representing by far the greater part of the abutting property.

The people on the hill, which includes, practically speaking, every citizen of Port Angeles other than the actual owners of Front and First street property, believe the streets should be raised to grade. They say the condition of Front street, more than anything else, has prevented the growth of the town. That permanent buildings cannot be built on the present street level; that without a fair proportion of permanent buildings and some slight evidence of further improvement, homeseekers and investors will not stop here but will go to some other place. They maintain that the expense, divided in ten annual installments, would not be burdensome, and that as to the few property owners on the two streets who have buildings to raise, while they may not be able to afford the expense at present, they never will be able to get higher rentals until the improvement is made.

On the other hand, the owners say they cannot afford to raise the buildings at the present time; that business conditions do not justify it. They say a temporary improvement is sufficient for the present and that to raise every building on the street nine feet is just now the height of folly.

The hill people, and also a number of owners of property on the streets in question, don't believe gravel will be of any value, no matter what the grade, and that plank or pavement is the only thing to be thought of.

There are many other points raised on both sides and both sides are in a measure right. There ought to be some common sense middle ground upon which all could agree.

ANYTHING GOES HERE.

In connection with the announcement of the population of Seattle, given at 237,194, Director Durand of the census bureau makes the statement that the original returns were padded, containing 248,382 names, or 11,188 more than the final figures. One of the causes of inaccuracy was the numeration of persons on vessels not having Seattle as their home port.

Director Durand is altogether too particular, according to the code in effect in Port Angeles. Here in Angeles these "persons on vessels not having Seattle (nor PortAngeles,) as their home port" often make it convenient to anchor in our harbor and "help out" on city election days, especially when some one in the Second ward has an axe to grind.

Seattle counts 'em, and Port Angeles votes 'em.

THE SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS.

The spirit of Christmas is beginning to show itself in the store windows. Our merchants are making an attractive display of their holiday goods. It ought to be useless to emphasize the advantage of doing all one's Christmas buying early and at home By so doing you asists in building up your town. Reciprocity should be the watchword of our citizens.

The price of meat may come down, but the chances are that the man who raises the stock will be the only one to see it demonstrated.

BUY RED CROSS SEALS.

Stick a Red Cross Seal on the back of every letter you write before Christmas. They are beautiful stickers, printed in holiday colors, red and green, and bid Merry Christmas and Happy New Year. They cost but a cent each and the results of the thirty day sale, extending over the entire state of Washington, will help to block the progress of the worst scourge that threatens humanity. Every cent will be expended by the Washington Association for the prevention and relief of Tuberculosis, and the countyleagues, in waging an aggressive campaign of education against the disease, and in relieving those who have already fallen victims to it. Seals are on sale in this city. Ask for them. Every piece of mail and every package and gift sent out during the campaign should bear a Red Cross Seal.

A WISE SUGGESTION.

Projectors of the monorail scheme of transportation on the Olympic peninsula are still seeking encouragement from towns and cities on the West Side. A representative has again been in Port Angeles seeking a franchise—the home of railroad franchises. Now then, it behooves Port Angeles, as well as the other towns and cities, to be mighty careful in granting rights to monorail people, to prevent the tying up of rights that standard guage railroads might seek. The monorail may be all right as a passenger road, but what the Olympic peninsula needs are freight transportation lines on which lumber may be shipped direct to Eastern markets.—Megaphone.

THE TRADESMAN'S LIVING.

The argument as to saloons bringing prosperity to tradesmen is fallacious The saloon produces no wealth but merely harvests the wealth produced by the brain and brawn of the community, and is a syphon through which a goodly part of it flows to the coffers of the brewer, never to return. The liquor business not only lives on industry but is an impediment to the same, as every logger, millman and contractor will testify; therefore it cannot, by any stretch of imagination, be said to produce prosperity.

It is not right to assume that the average laboring man is absolutely determined to hunt some place to squander his money. It is but reasonable to suppose that many of them, were liquor taken from under their nose, would either put their money in the bank or spend it in a way to do themselves and the community some good, instead of working like horses as mere chattel slaves of liquor-fired appetite.

We have considered the matter thus entirely from the standpoint of the dollar, but there is a moral aspect to the question that cannot be disregarded. Col. Roosevelt said at Indianapolis the other day: "I believe in material prosperity but I believe in it as a means of grace and not as an end of grace. I believe that material prosperity is absolutely necessary, but upon it you must build a higher life." Thus speaks a man whom we all honor—prosperity as a means to a higher life and not prosperity at the expense of a higher life—that is his doctrine and the only doctrine that becomes a community in this enlightened age.

You spread murrain among our dairy herds, destroy the fertility of our soil or cause our mills and camps to cease operation and you will injure the prosperity of Arlington, but you close the saloons and the sources of our prosperity will remain untouched.—The Arlington Times.

TROY'S LANDSLIDE.

The heart of the most sanguine did not contemplate with any degree of certainty, the great and complete "land slide" that was in store for Hon. D. S. Troy, the newly elected State senator, over Wm. Bishop, his opponent. Bishop and his supporters claimed to have Clallam county "bottled up," as it were. But Troy evidently had some boosters in that neck of the woods who knew where the votes were located, thereby being successful in carrying the entire county by a majority of 400. Out of 30 precincts heard from he carried 27 by nearly two to one vote, with one of the three precincts lost by only one vote, the other two by three and four respectively. His majority in Jefferson county is estimated at 150 with Port Townsend as his strong-hold, coming out of that city with 95 votes to the good. Beyond any question of a doubt Mr. Troy is not a party's choice, and we do not hesitate to say "they chose wisely" and that he will be impartial to the interest of the entire district."—Friday Harbor Journal, republican.

With the stores and the majority of other business places closed all day Thanksgiving, Port Angeles people generally observed the day in a quiet manner around home firesides or at the homes of friends and relatives. Many family dinners were the order and a number of out of town guests were in the city to partake of the hospitality of the occasion. The home coming of the young people away attending school or engaged in the active pursuits of earning a livelihood is always a pleasure on such occasions.

Governor Hay has formally announced that women of legal age in the State of Washington have now the right to vote, a proclamation to that effect appearing in another part of this paper. However, women cannot vote at our coming city election, owing to the fact that the registration books closed before the governor's proclamation was issued. The law requires that registration books must close twenty days prior to any general election, but that they may remain open until the day before a city primary election.

In 1909 the poultry of the United States aggregated in value $600,000,000! That is $119,000,000 in excess of the entire gold output of our country for the last ten years! The lumber output is annually sold at $500,000,000 or $100,000,000 less than the poultry products! Hog sales are the same as lumber. Cotton sales aggregate $400,000,000 annually.

Weather fine, plenty of fruit, and all prosperity advancing, People coming in all the time. Fruit lands selling at from $100 to $600 per acre. I am glad to know that Port Angeles is improving in the way of street work and sidewalks, the latter catching me for about 350 ft. of walk, which I am more than glad to put in."

A distinct shaking, trembling or concussion of the earth was felt in this region early Thursday morning. The tremblor awakened light sleepers in Port Angeles about 12:04 A. M. The vibrations, which were from east to west, were very distinct, lasting a few seconds, one awakened listener claiming that he counted thirty-six before the vibrations ceased. The quake was accompanied by a rumbling sound, windows were shaken and dishes rattled on the shelves. Those who were up say that the temperature changed to much warmer immediately after the disturbance.

The Olympic-Leader is sorry to learn that Judge J. E. Cochran is confined to his home with a very serious attack of stomach trouble, to which he has been subjected for some years. The disease has taken such a hold as to cause severe hemorrhage. His friends will all anxiously await tidings from the sick bed chamber and hope for news of the improved condition of the patient and for his speedy and complete restoration to health. Two of Mr. Cochran's former Nebraska friends, now residents of Seattle, came down Wednesday to see him.

Mr. J.V.A.Smith, cashier of the Northwest Trust and Safe Deposit Co., Seattle, who was interested in the formation of the Men's Club of the Congregational church of this city, writes the Olympic-Leader that he was very much impressed with Port Angeles and her people, and adds that "as the character of the men of the city is the greatest factor in the upbuilding of a city, I expect to see Port Angeles one of the large cities of the Sound as soon as it has improved transportation facilities and railroad connection with the outside world." Mr. Smith is a member of the Plymouth Congregational Church, Seattle, and is a well-informed, earnest Christian gentleman.

Some business men measure the value of an advertisement by the direct returns they get from it, and, after a short trial, withdraw it from the paper on the ground that it does not pay. The indirect benefit derived from keeping the name before the public is out of all proportion to the direct returns received and the more successful advertisers are those who keep themselves so constantly before the public that their names become as familiar as a household word. This was demonstrated anew only last week. A young man residing in Seattle, temporarily in our city, who was accustomed to reading the Olympic-Leader, had occasion to purchase an article of gentleman's wear, and straightway visited Mr. Muskett's store. The Times Clothing Mart was a household word with him, and Mr. Muskett sold the goods.

A most delightful evening was spent by a number of friends at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Ritchie, last Saturday evening. Good music, furnished by Mr. Howard Campbell, Miss Ada Thomas, Mr. B. F. Edgar, Mr. Cecil McNutt, Miss Ruth Dover, and Mr. William Ritchie, Jr., was highly appreciated, after which light refreshments were served, which did not include the forbidden cake.

A dispatch from Hoquiam of local interest says: "Mrs. Grader, wife of Contractor Grader, of this city, demonstrated that she had pluck and courage yesterday when she walked across the gap in the Northern Pacific road where the washout occurred Sunday night. Mrs. Grader was forced to make many jumps which might well test the strength and endurance of many men. She says that in many places ties were washed away and she walked the rails."

The Graders recently removed from Forks to Hoquiam, where Mr. Chas. Grader is a contractor.

If reports emanating from Washington are to be believed, and, at all events, they are very plausible, Speaker Cannon will help reform the speakership by taking the power to appoint committees away from the presiding officer, the move that at the last session was so strenuously endorsed by democrats and insurgents and opposed by the speaker and the regulars. But now the situation is different. Cannon must vacate the speakership and Champ Clark, democrat, undoubtedly will be his successor. So, instead of having the club in the other fellow's hands, the democrats will have it in their own. It remains to be seen in what lofty Jeffersonian spirit they face this rather irritating situation.—Everett Daily Herald.

CONGRESS TO MEET NEXT MONDAY

WHAT WILL BE ACCOMPLISHED AT SHORT SESSION IS PROBLEMATIC.

Much to Depend on Character of Message Submitted by President Taft—Defeated Members Not Apt to Be Inclined to Help Much.

Washington, Nov. 28.—When Congress meets a week from today it will have three months in which to perform whatever may be the demands of a Republican administration. After that the fate of the Taft legislative program will depend on the will of a Democratic house and a Republican senate.

The success or failure of the approaching short session of Congress is believed to rest with the character of the executive message to be sent to the legislative bodies.

May Be Unruly.

Many of the Republicans, defeated in the recent elections, are not expected to carry with the best of grace the blows so harshly administered, and this gives the president a difficult task.

Realizing that he will be criticised if he fails to demand of congress further revision of the tariff—especially of the wool and woollen schedules—and fully cognizant that the prospects will be all against the success of such a program if submitted, the president, it is said, has not made up his mind definitely what his course will be.

President May Wait.

The chances are that he will not insist upon action within the approaching session, but that he will offer to the Democratic house and the Republican senate, a year hence, a program for tariff revision which will be bolstered up with facts and figures gathered by the tariff board.

Within the short session fourteen regular appropriation bills, carrying an aggregate of a billion dollars or more, must be passed. Otherwise there would be necessity for an extra session next spring. The result of such a session would be to bring the Democrats face to face with the necessity of doing something nine months in advance of the time they would ordinarily be called upon to assume responsibility. For many reasons neither Democrats nor Republicans want to precipitate this situation.

Democrats Might Have to Help.

Leaving the appropriation bills out of consideration, the Democrats are disposed to take the broad position that legislation of a general character should be postponed until they come in.

But the Democratic leaders are much embarrassed by the president's position in favor of beginning the revision of the tariff by schedules. They go even further than Mr. Taft in their denunciation of the woollen schedule, and while preferring themselves to designate the way of its amendment, they admit that they will find it difficult to resist an effort at reduction whensoever and by whomsoever it might be undertaken. Such also is the case with reference to other schedules; they could scarcely do less than cooperate in reductions at any time.

Canal Forts Mooted Point.

Among the measures to be pressed are those providing for the fortification of the Panama canal, and this, it is conceded, will provoke controversy; the amendment of the postal laws so as to provide for a parcels post along rural delivery routes and for increased postage on the advertising portions of magazines; the granting of ship subsidies; the pensioning of superannuated employes of the civil service; the creation of a public land court, and the establishment of forest reserves in the White mountains in the North and in the Appalachians in the South.

Opposition to the naval program for the addition of two battleships to the navy may be expected, but it probably will not be effective in the approaching session.

The forest reserve bill occupies a favorable position, and probably will become a law. It has passed the house, and a day for a vote on it by the senate has been fixed.

Ship Subsidy Means Fight.

The ship subsidy bill is the unfinished business in the senate, but some of the Democrats say even now that any present effort to pass it would result in an extra session. They are ready to talk it to death.

This bill also is expected to be presented to the house for a vote in the session, and the chances there are doubtful. The measure has once passed the house, and has been once defeated by that body, the majority being small in both instances.

State to Receive Rebate.

Washington, Nov. 26.—As an offset to the loss of income from taxable property sustained by the state through the withdrawal of forest land from entry under the public land laws, the state of Washington will receive for state and road purposes from the federal government the sum of $23,671.89, which is its pro rata share of 25 per cent of the national forest revenue set aside for this purpose each year. Idaho will receive $66,074 and Oregon $39,635.

LAST WORD FROM TOLSTOI

HIS KNOWN VIEWS ON CAPITAL PUNISHMENT ARE GIVEN IN DETAIL.

Subject is Hangmen—Description of Revolting Crimes Gives Them More Pay for Their Revolting and Inhuman Job—Love Would Reform the World.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 26.—The Associated Press received early Saturday from Vladimir Tschertkoff, literary agent of the late Count Tolstoi, the last article written by Tolstoi. It is entitled "Effective Means." It was written by Tolstoi in the Optina Monastery on November 11, shortly after he began his self-imposed exile from home. The article was given the Associated Press by M. T. Schertkoff at the express wish of Count Tolstoi for dissemination to mankind. It says:

"I am naturally anxious to do all I can against evil, which tortures the best spirits of our time.

"I think the present effective war against capital punishment does not need forcing; there is no need for an expression of indignation against its immorality, cruelty and absurdity.

"Every sincere, thinking person; everybody knowing from youth the sixth commandment, needs no explanation of its absurdity and immorality. There is no need of descriptions of the horrors of executions as they only affect the hangman, so men will more unwillingly become executioners and governments will be obliged to compensate them more dearly for their services.

"Therefore I think that neither the expression of indignation against the murder of our fellow men nor the suggestion of its horror is mainly needed, but something totally different.

"As Kantwell says, there are delusions which cannot be disproved and we must communicate to the deluded mind knowledge which will enlighten and then the delusions will vanish by themselves.

"What knowledge need we communicate to the deluded human mind regarding the indispensableness, usefulness or justice of capital punishment in order that said delusion may destroy itself?

"Such knowledge, in my opinion, is this:

"The knowledge of what is man, what his surrounding world; what his destiny; hence, what man can and must do and principally what he cannot and must not do.

"Therefore, we should oppose punishment by inculcating this knowledge in all men, especially to hangmen's managers and sympathizers, who wrongfully think they are maintaining their position, thanks to capital punishment.

Not Easy Task.

"I know this is not an easy task. The employers and approvers of hangmen with the instinct of self-preservation feel that this knowledge will make impossible the maintenance of the position which they occupy, hence not only will they themselves not adopt it, but by all means in their power, by violence, by deceit, cruelty and lies, they will try to hide from the people this knowledge, distorting it and exposing its disseminators to all kinds of privations and sufferings. Therefore if we wish readily to destroy the delusion of capital punishment and if we possess the knowledge which destroys this delusion, let us, in spite of all menaces, deprivations and sufferings, teach the people this knowledge, because it is solely the effective means in the fight.

"LEO TOLSTOI.

"Optina Monastery, November 11."

APPRAISAL OF RAILROADS DESIRED BY COMMISSIONER

Washington, Nov. 29.—"The interstate commerce commission believes that a physical valuation of the railroad properties of the United States is the first step toward adequate regulation of rates; and I believe the same principle applies to the establishment of a basis for the control of stock and bond issues," said Judson C. Clements, of the interstate commerce commission, at the first public meeting of the new railroad securities commission.

President Hadley Presides.

The commission began hearings yesterday, at which members of the interstate commerce commission and state commissioners from Massachusetts and other states will present their views of federal control of the issuance of railroad securities. President Arthur T. Hadley, of Yale university, presided.

"We have not agreed upon a remedy for the present situation regarding stock and bond issues," said Commissioner Clements. "If we had solved the problem there would have been no need for the appointment of a commission such as this one. There is no dissenting voice on the interstate commerce commission, however, to the proposition that regulation and control of securities is necessary."

No Definite Plans.

Walter L. Fisher, of Chicago; F. N. Judson, of St. Louis; Frederick Strauss, of New York, and B. H. Meyer, of Madison, Wis., the other four members of the securities commission, were present. They asked whether the interstate commerce commission had made plans for a general valuation of the property of the railroads.

Mr. Clements said it had not, but that experts could be employed who would be able to fix a value that would give shippers and government authorities a basis for the defense or condemnation of rates.

SUGAR TRUST FACES FIGHT FOR EXISTENCE

New York, Nov. 29.—The federal government began yesterday one of its most important actions against the great corporations which are said to have violated the Sherman anti-trust law. Henry Wise, United States district attorney, filed in the United States district court for the Southern district of New York, a petition asking for the dissolution of the American Sugar Refining Company and twenty-nine otner corporations which compose the so-called sugar trust.

The petition charges an illegal combination in restraint of trade and asks for court relief in whatever form may be necessary, including a receivership, if deemed advisable.

Aggregate Capital $230,000,000.

The thirty companies composing the sugar combine have an aggregate capitalization of $230,000,000, and control a large percentage of the output of sugar in this country. This combine is also, the government alleges, able to fix prices arbitrarily. The petition charges that for years the companies have violated the law and suppressed competitors, grinding them out of existence. Railroad rebates and customs frauds are mentioned as devices which were employed to raise the combine to the commanding position which it occupies today.

Long Litigation Expected.

The present suit, which it is estimated will be in the courts for two years before a final adjudication is reached, is the result of many weeks of preparation. District Attorney Wise made his investigation under the direction of Attorney General Wickersham and spent several hours in Washington last week conferring with the attorney general on the final plans. The suit is expected to rank in importance with those of the government against the Standard Oil Company, which are now pending in the supreme court.

Gompers Succeeds Himself.

St. Louis, Nov. 28.—Samuel Gompers has been re-elected president of the American Federation of Labor. James Duncan, John Mitchell and James O'Connell were re-elected as first, second and third vice presidents by unanimous vote.

Tawney Favors Neutral Canal.

Panama, Nov. 26.—In an interview published, here, Representative Tawney, chairman of the appropriations committee of the house of representatives, is quoted as having said he was in favor of making the Panama canal zone neutral territory and with dispensing with the fortifications.

Estimate on Cotton.

New York, Nov. 29.—A total of 11,445,000 bales is the final estimate of the Times-Democrat for the cotton crop of 1910, as based on reports from correspondents throughout the cotton belt.

Light Attracts Customers.

In the downtown section of a city the theater audiences come and go through two avenues leading to car lines. A haberdasher has a shop in a side street between these two channels of travel, at a much more reasonable rent than he would have to pay on the avenues. Study of the conditions convinced him that the theatergoers took those avenues, not because they were especially convenient, nor as a matter of habit, but simply because they were light. When he put up an electric sign big enough to light his section of the dark side street he diverted enough travel past his windows every night to increase materially the daily sales.—Saturday Evening Post.

GOV. CLARK'S ANNUAL REPORT

WANT OF FUEL IS ONE GREAT DRAWBACK TO ALASKA DEVELOPMENT.

Gov. Clark Pleads for Opening of Coal Fields—Declares Natural Resources of North Are Needed for the Proper Development of the Country.

Juneau, Nov. 28.—Gov. Walter E. Clark, in his annual report, says:

"The want of cheap fuel and the delay in opening the Alaska coal fields are the strongest adverse factors in the present problem of territorial progress."

He estimates the white population of Alaska at 30,507.

"Upon the sound theory that the investment of capital in a frontier country should be encouraged in proportion to the natural obstacles which are to be encountered," says the governor, "it would seem that givernment aid for railroad construction in Alaska is not only justifiable, but absolutely necessary to the early development of the territory's great resources and to the settlement of the country.

"Assistance should be in the form of a guarantee of interest on the bonds of railroads, the construction of which upon routes selected by a government board, should be authorized only after competitive bidding."

Government Not Mentioned.

The question of a territorial form of government is not mentioned.

The report says that conditions do not warrant a large influx of laborers.

Special legislation is declared necessary to compel the attendance of native children at school.

Gov. Clark recommends that 5 per cent of the Alaska fund be placed under the supervision of the governor for the purpose of relieving destitute whites.

"The law provides a rebate of a portion of the tax on canned salmon to the canneries maintaining private hatcheries," says the report, "but does not provide for any check on statements as to the number of salmon fry released each year, upon which rebate depends. This defect should be amended by providing that the bureau of fisheries determine the accuracy of the claims of the owners of private hatcheries as to the number of fry released, or by repealing the provision of the law, purchasing hatcheries and turning them over to the bureau to operate."

Power of Attorney Evil.

Gov. Clark holds that better treatment for Alaska's insane could be obtained on Puget sound than is possible in the unfavorable Alaska weather.

"Many of the rules and requirements of federal forest supervision which rightly apply in settled countries are out of place in Alaska and should be either abolished or modified," he says.

Power of attorney staking and association claims are said to result in grave evils.

"The ill-advised policy of forbidding all development of large coal resources of Alaska," says the report, "or of placing such restrictions upon development as to make embarkation of private capital impossible, is to be deprecated, while the policy of conversation by proper use is to be encouraged.

"This coal is needed for the industries of the territory and for the physical comfort of our people, and on no account should it be withheld from these uses.

Should Mine Own Coal.

"A sufficient amount of our coal should be mined to meet the needs of the present generation. A large part of the coal used in Alaska is imported from British Columbia and is made all the more expensive to the consumer because of the payment of duty.

"By reason of conditions in the British Columbia mines, there was an intermitten coal famine in nearly all of the coast towns last winter, even at Cordova, which is situated within a few miles of the largest coal fields, and where the price of soft coal is regularly as high as $18 per ton."

The governor lauds the construction of trails by the road commission. He wants more aids to navigation, commends the cable service and urges the registration of vital statistics. He asks for five game wardens.

MEXICAN REBELS ROUTED IN SIX HOURS BATTLE

Chihuahua, Mexico, Nov. 28.—In an engagement near this city yesterday which lasted from 9 o'clock in the morning until 3 o'clock in the afternoon 600 federal troops routed a force of 400 Maderistas, driving them repeatedly from strong positions and compelling them to take to the mountains. The revolutionists lost fifteen killed and many wounded. There were no fatalties on the federal side, but several, including three officers, were wounded.

Ohio's Population 4,767,121.

Washington, Nov. 26.—The population of the state of Ohio is 4,767,121, according to the statistics of the thirteenth census as made public by Director Durand. This is an increase of 609,576, or 14.7 per cent, over 4,157,545 in 1900. The increase from 1890 to 1900 was 485,229, or 13.2 per cent.

PEASANT FINDS A QUEEN

Covered With Jewels, Her Body Lay Buried Near Ancient Gaza in Palestine.

The chance discovery near ancient Gaza, in Palestine, of a tomb containing the embalmed body of a woman yearing a crown and rich ornaments is like an Arabian Nights tale.

The discovery was made by a man named Musa-el-Burtu while digging on his land, and this is a translation of the account of it sent from Jerusalem by Prof. Macalister to the Palestine exploration fund:

"When Musa went to his land and was working and digging in it he found a little door. He entered by it into a cave divided into two chambers, and entering through the second door he found a coffin of hardwood.

"And he opened it, and in the coffin was another of crystal. And he broke this and inside it he found one of the old queens embalmed, and on her head a crown adorned with precious stones and on her neck a necklace of pearls and three chains beside on her breast, and above her head was a candlestick of gold and another at her foot."

Another account from Mr. Knesevich of Gaza says that the sarcophagus was of pure white marble and was strongly protected by a sort of vault of huge stones built over it. The lid of sarcophagus was artistically carved in the exact form of the mummy, which was in excellent preservation.

The hair was loose and the head bound with a filet the form of which suggested that the mummy was Roman, but the shoes were Egyptian. No inscription was on the sarcophagus, but a book is said to have been found in it.—New York Sun.

PAYING FOR ANCIENT CRIME

Blood Tax Still Exacted From Bearn Shepherds for Murder of 700 Years Ago.

Seven hundred years ago some shepherds of the valley of Roncal, in Navarre, were murdered by shepherds of the valley of Bareton, in Bearn, the crime taking place on the high pasture lands of Arlas, in the Pyrenees. It would have been difficult to bring the murderers individually to justice, and the Spaniards were preparing to make war upon the valley from which the French murderers had come, when the French villages proposed that peace be maintained at the price of a yearly tax or tribute, to endure for all time, and this proposition was accepted.

The payment of this blood tax—originally three white mares, but later three cows of a particular breed and color—has been made ever since, the custom (it is nothing more) having survived even the great wars in which both France and Spain have engaged, and the storm of the French revolution.

Yearly the representative men of the two valleys meet on the frontier, at a certain stone remote from any town, and go through the ceremony of presenting and receiving the cattle. The order of procedure, which is elaborate and impressive, is fixed by a document bearing the date 1375, though the tax was paid a hundred years prior to that time. The records of each yearly meeting and payment are duly attested and deposited in the archives of Roncalais.

Paying by Check.

The peanut vender had a white elephant on his hands in the shape of a check for $1.05.

"Disa t'ing no good," he said. "I wanta da mon."

Having ascertained just where the check came from, a systematic customer passed over "da mon" in exchange for the check and then started an investigation of somebody's reasons for buying five-cent bags of peanuts on time. Finally the woman who had introduced a new wrinkle into the credit system was cornered for an interview.

"I pay for everything by the month," she said, "absolutely everything—groceries, dry goods, drugs, stationery, hair dressing, and church dues, and I see no reason why I should make an exception in peanuts."

The Migration of Storks.

Reference has been made to the departure of the storks from Alsace. The ornithological bureau of Budapest has recently published the results of an interesting experiment. To the leg of a number of young birds a light disk was attached, stating the place of origin and in the event of capture asking that the label might be detached and forwarded to Budapest.

The rings returned show that the birds have reached Basutoland, the Transvaal and Cape Colony. Unfortunately only two of the ten captured birds escaped death. Eight of those graceful creatures had fallen to the unpitying and unerring aim of the sportsman, improperly so called.

Magpie Superstitions.

It would appear that some amount of superstition is associated with the magpie in country folklore; somehow or other the bird has acquired a more or less sinister reputation.

This may be due to its sable plumage or perhaps to its artfulness. Thus, according to one doggerel relic of superstition which one often hears in the south, the appearanec of one magpie signifies sadiness, two augur mirth, three foretell a death and four herald a birth.—Agricultural Economist.

HANDLING OF FARM MANURE

Farmer Should Appreciate More Fully Its Value and Its Distribution Over Soil.

(By M. F. MILLER.)

The farmer should appreciate more fully the value of manure and of proper methods of handling it. He should figure it as worth at least two dollars per ton and should get that amount or in many cases much more than that out of it by proper handling. Just how it shall be handled will depend upon conditions.

The best methods where cattle are fed in barns, sheds or lots, is to haul the manure to the fields day by day. There is the least loss in handling it in this way. The next best plan is to feed under an open shed where the manure may accumulate and where it will be kept tramped down compactly by the animals. Under such a plan it will be kept sufficiently compact and moist to prevent rapid fermentation, and next to hauling it to the fields as made, this is the plan which gives the least loss of fertilizing constituents.

One of the cheapest plans is to feed directly back of the fields but too often in this case the feeding is done on some hillside, where washing and leaching carries away the larger part of the fertilizing constituents contained, or the cattle are fed in some sheltered wood lot where the manure is lost to the fields.

In this connection it should be said that a manure spreader will pay on the average farm of 100 acres or over, and where much stock is kept it will pay handsome returns on farms of much smaller size.

Most men think that the value of a manure spreader lies in the saving of labor, and, while this is one important reason for its use, it is not the only one.

A reason that is important is the fact that manure put on evenly or rather lightly over a large area will give larger returns per ton of manure applied than the same manure put on heavily and irregularly over a smaller area. The difference in returns will frequently pay for the spreader in a single season.

Another good reason why a man should own a spreader is that when he has money invested in such an implement he will almost invariably take better care of the manure his farm produces.

CHOICE YOUNG LAMB DEMAND

Industry Has In Recent Years Developed Feature in Meat Supply That Has No Limit.

In speaking of the demand for choice young lambs the Live Stock Report says:

"The mutton lamb industry has in recent years developed a feature in meat supply that seems to have no limit in price or demand. The consumer wants lamb, and the smaller and younger the better his sense of taste seems to be satisfied. This industry now offers great opportunity for the farmer sheep raiser who can keep a small ewe flock and produce a few lambs for the market that will fit in any time from the early winter to the early summer. The fat, light weight lamb is in best demand, and this kind of meat is now so fixed in the taste of the mutton-eater that price is no barrier. The large western flocks that supply the general market with the young class of mutton cannot compete in the young lamb supply because they are too remote from the market, and because this class of lamb is quickly produced by extra feed and care. There is a good demand for the 40 or 50 pound lamb, and this lamb can best be produced where feed is plenty and shed and housing suitable to grow it without any of the checks or embarrassments that too frequently accompany such work where large flocks are handled.

"The farm in the corn belt is the place to carry on successfully the early mutton lamb industry. It is the place fitted by crop production to make the mutton lamb industry highly profitable. These farms are now usually fenced into pastures and inclosures to safely handle the breeding flock. There is no kind of stock that can be put onto the farm and be made to produce larger profit for the money and labor invested than a small flock of good mutton quality ewes."

Storage Cellar.

The cellar or other similar room in which vegetables and fruits, either green or canned, are stored for winter should have the windows open on mild days for ventilation and for lowering the temperature of the room for chilling the store. The cooler they are held, without freezing, the better they will keep. Bacteria which cause fermentation and decay cannot grow and multiply in low temperature. Dry cold will always hold them in check.

Fistula of the Milk Duct.

Sometimes the teat of a cow develops a small opening above the natural orifice, through which milk flows when she is milked. This false duct may be obliterated by cauterization when the cow is dry. Meanwhile paint it with flexible collodion twice daily if milk flows from it.

Protection Against Rabbits.

A lime wash which has been found a good protection for trees against rabbits is simply to wet enough unslacked lime to the point of consistency; add a little carbolic acid to the substance and paint the trunks of the orchard trees.

Danger Ahead.

Because the motorman would not heed their expostulations, but kept the car jerking along within bumping distance of the back of the slow-moving wagon which bore a "Danger" sign, half the passengers got off rather than take chances on being blown up in the explosion that was sure to result from the apparently inevitable collision. Out of respect for their determination to save life and limb even at the cost of another carfare the motorman stopped the car and asked if they were willing to give him another trial on his promise to drive cautiously.

They were, and piled into the car. Two minutes later the dangerous wagon pulled off the tracks and allowed them to pass. Then they saw for the first time the name of the combustible material that had driven them into a frenzy of fear. The wagon was an ice wagon.—New York Times.

Sturman-Hancher vs. Hymen

By STACY E. BAKER

(Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.)

There was bad blood between the house of Hancher and the house of Sturman. This, however, did not prevent the respective scions of the families from falling in love with each other.

Mabel, the pride of the Sturman seniors, was a girl whom any youth with red blood in his veins would be proud to call sweetheart. She was as pretty as the break of a June morning. Her eyes were jet black and long-lashed. She was tall, gracefully slim, and walked with the virile spring of youth. Tom Hancher was fortunate.

Tom knew this, but the peppery soul of Father Hancher. inflamed years ago against Sturman, Sr., refused to discriminate between the old grocer and his daughter.

"But you don't know the girl," Tom protested, when the old gentleman had included the maid in his frenzied summing up of the faults of the head of Mabel's family.

"She is her father's daughter," growled Hancher. "I don't need to know more. The blood is bad."

So, once again, the confession that trembled on the lips of the youth was stilled. It would have been a most unfortunate time to explain to this irritable parent that his most hated enemy's daughter was to become his son's wife.

The hatred of Sturman for Hancher, and vice versa, extended back over a dozen years. Both were grocers in the thriving town of Tingsboro. Both had been fast friends. Unfortunately, both had lived in the same ward, and had aspired, at the same time, to the common council. Some one has said that politics makes strange bed fellows. It also undermines strong friendships. After three weeks of mudslinging electioneering, Sturman won the coveted laurels by a majority of one vote.

Sturman and Hancher were friends no longer. Hancher moved out of the ward. Their grocery shops were now at opposite ends of the city.

"Tom Hancher, only son, was now his father's partner. Mabel Sturman, only daughter, was now her father's bookkeeper. The evenings, however, belonged solely to the young people, and they met frequently at the homes of mutual acquaintances with their embittered parents being not a whit the wiser.

"Father is so set," complained the youth. "But never mind, dear, I have enough money of my own, and we will be married first, and tell about it afterward. If the governor has the nerve to object—after seeing you—you know he doesn't even know you by sight—I'll pass up his old grocery, and start one of my own."

All this brought the gratified red to the pretty cheeks of Mabel Sturman, and the light in her eyes was nice to see as she turned to the ardent Thomas.

"All in due time, Tom," she soothed. "There is no great hurry, you know. Why, you are only 22, boy, and I am not yet 20."

The plan of waiting did not appeal to the impetuous young lover. He would like to have to go to Sturman to ask him for his daughter's hand, but a knowledge of the temper of the lean, wiry, East-end grocer told him what would happen if he did this.

Time dragged on. Patience, that pearl among virtues, paled on the love-lorn pair, but still the girl would not consent to a secret marriage. Something might happen.

Something did happen!

Sturman bought an automobile—a big red touring car, at once the pride and envy of the neighborhood. Hancher heard of this. Not to be outshone and outdone by his ancient rival, he invested in the goods of a competing company; a yellow car. The two, although not very proficient, drove their own machines.

For awhile they kept to their own particular neck-or-the-woods, but a mischievous fate one day impishly suggested to each of them that he invade the other's territory, and awe him with his aptness in the control of his machine.

On the same day, and at the same hour, they started, but by different routes. Patiently, lean Sturman honk-honked up and down in front of Hancher's store; persistently, fat Hancher drove his yellow monstrosity past the Sturman grocery—and all to no purpose. Sturman could not catch sight of Hancher; Hancher could not dazzle the eyes of his rival. Puzzled clerks watched the manifestations.

The Sturman store stood on a corner. Hancher, turning his machine close to the curb, and with his back to the walk, failed to notice a tipsy man with a number of long iron rods over his wavering shoulder. The latter staggered around the corner, and the rods, suddenly turning toward the street, struck the unseeing Hancher on the side of his head, precipitating him to the pavement, half unconscious. Instantly a crowd gathered. As is usual with crowds, none seemed inclined to render the luckless one assistance. Suddenly a dainty damsel tripped out of an adjoining store.

"Let me in to him," she said, authoritatively, and the gaping crowd broke before her. In an instant the head of the downed man was lifted to the lap of the girl, and a bottle of strong smelling salts was applied to his nose. Hancher gasped, writhed and attempted to gain his feet.

"One moment," came in a soothing voice. Hancher realized that cool hands were applying a bandage to the slightly bleeding wound on his temple. Gratefully, and with the maid's assistance, the grocer staggered to his feet. His machine, which in falling he had automatically stopped, stood a little distance from him. He turned to thank the girl. She was gone. Dizzily he scrambled into the car, and turned homeward.

Sturman, at the other end of the town, was also having his troubles. At about his third turn in front of his rival's store, something went wrong with the machine. It balked. Covered with perspiration and grime he worked desperately.

"Possibly I can be of assistance to you." Sturman turned to confront a neat young man with pleasant blue eyes, and a half smile on his lips. "I know something about automobiles."

Without waiting for permission the stranger crowded under the car. In a surprisingly short space of time, he had ascertained the error, and the great machine was ready to respond to its owner's hand. Sturman climbed into his seat and tried it. It worked. He turned to thank the youth, but he was gone. Sturman went home.

"He never knew me," Mabel Sturman explained to the younger Hancher that evening.

"And before he could get a chance to thank me, I flew back into the store again."

"He has been talking about you all day," answered her lover.

"Some one told him yesterday that on several occasions I had been seen with you. He ranted terribly. Asked me why I didn't look around for a girl with the sense of the one who had come to his assistance? Swore she was the handsomest girl he had even seen."

Mabel Sturman flushed. "Father has nothing but good words for the youth who repaired his machine. He said his modesty was most commendable. He says that if he finds him—of course he didn't recognize him as the son of his old enemy—he means to introduce him to me." Miss Mabel looked demurely down. "I think," she said softly, "that father believes it is high time for me to marry."

"And so it is," cried young Hancher enthusiastically. "And if Papa Sturman can see a possibility in me he must not be disappointed.

The next morning Hancher, senior, received this surprising message:

"Have married the girl who came to your assistance yesterday. We are waiting at Elder's hotel for you to congratulate us, Tom."

At the same moment Sturman was puzzled over this:

"Married the young man with the 'commendable modesty' of which you spoke. You must come to the Elder hotel at once and congratulate us. Mabel."

It is recorded that the two old enemies celebrated the nuptials of their children, shook hands and were friends again.

Bedtime for Children.

Sunset should be the time for every child under eight years of age. When the chickens go to roost and twilight begins to deepen the country baby's head begins to droop and he is ready for his cot. The more nervous town baby, who has nothing for an example except the sun, and who, at any rate, on rainy days is used to twilight atmosphere at midday, seldom wishes to go to bed with the chickens.

If he lives in an apartment he must hear drifting down the hall the tantalizing voices of his elders at dinner, and the smell of savory things from the kitchen greets his nostrils. But hard as it must seem the city mother must have even more rigid rules about bedtime than the country mother. Her child is at a greater disadvantage in the first place in not living where he can breathe the purest air in the midst of healing country sights and sounds. The distractions of city life are so numerous and so varied that city bred children need more repose than children in smaller towns of the country. Between 6 and 6:30 o'clock they should be undressed and put to bed.

REVELATION WAS TOO MUCH

Dark Secret of the Past Sundered Two Hearts That Might Have Beat as One.

"Is there anything in your past," she asked, "that you have not dared to tell me?"

"Please don't compel me to answer that question," he pleaded.

"Ah! I guessed it," she said, as she sadly turned away. "Oh, how could you deceive me so? And I thought you were so good, so noble."

"Don't say that you will not be mine, darling. I will not give you up. I could not live without you."

"No, no! It must not be. Ah, why did you not tell me before it was too late—before I had learned to care so much for you? It was cruel of you to keep me in ignorance of this terrible thing—whatever it may be. I can never forgive you—now."

"Sweetheart, don't say that! I will confess all—I will tell you everything."

"Yes, yes," she cried, turning toword him and then suddenly stepping back as he held out his arms to her; "but I must wait until I know the truth."

"Promise me that you will not let it part us forever."

"I cannot—I cannot. But I will try to overlook it, if it is not too terrible."

"Ah, my darling, I fear to begin. Why can't you take me for what I am and never mind what I was?"

"I must know the truth!"

"I was one one of those young men who had spider phaetons and drove two horses tandem!"

On the Potato.

"Among the many pranks of Ma Twain's journalistic days," said a Virginia City editor, "was the concoction of a speech that was put upon a famous senator.

"The senator had attended a Virginia City banquet, but had not spoken. He had a sore throat. A brother from a rival paper reached the banquet late.

"'What did the senator speak about?" the newcomer whispered to Mark Twain.

"'He made a very interesting speech on the potato,' was the reply.

"'The potato, eh? That's odd. Let's have the points, will you?'

"'With pleasure,' said Mark Twain, and he dictated a half column that the reporter duly printed the next morning as the distinguished senator's valuable contribution to agricultural science. The speech began like this:

"'Ladies and gentlemen, had it been my lot to be born and reared in Ireland, where my food would have principally consisted of the potato—that most salubrious and nutritious root—I should now be, instead of the poor, infirm, stunted creature you see before you, a tall, stout, athletic man, able to carry an enormous weight.'"

A Perjured Pair.

Hire Sistem, the great furniture king, having made his pile, had settled down to the pursuit of a country gentleman. He invited his friend, Plane Figger, to make a stay with him.

One day, armed with the latest appliances for dealing out sudden death to anything in the game line, he and his friend trudged over the brown furrows; but at the end of three hours they were still looking for something to start a bag with.

Suddenly a hare got up. Bang! from Plane Figger, and over went the four-footed one.

"My hare!" shouted the ex-furniture king.

"My hare!" cried his friend.

They argued for ten minutes as to whose weapon had worked the mischief. Then the keeper was called up to adjudicate.

"You'd take your oath it's your 'are, would you?' 'he turned to Hire Sistem fiercely.

"If necessary, certainly."

"And you'd swaire 'twas your 'are?" truculently to Plane Figger.

"I would."

"Then, think yourself jolly lucky you're escapin' seven years' apiece for perjury, 'cos it 'appens ter be my dog!"—Spare Moments.

Charity and Business.

One of Sixth avenue's deaf, dumb, blind and legless beggars now presents a new appeal to the public. On the lapel of his coat is pinned a printed sign which says:

"In place of rain carry me into Tony Ferrari's place." Few or those who stop to read this know where Tony Ferrari's place is, but a few of the more curious take the trouble to find out. Tony, they learn, is an Americanized italian who runs a bootblack stand on a side street.

"Did you give nim permission to wear that sign?" some one asked.

"Sure," said Tony. "Why not? It ain't right to let the poor devil sit out there in a pelting rain and get soaked to the skin. Folks used to let him do that, but it ain't right. Nobody wants to give him shelter, but I don't mind. This is a good place for him. He can pick up a few extra nickels here, and, besides," added Tony, Shrewdly, "what's the matter with that sign as an advertisement for my own business!"—New York Sun.

Opulence.

"Does that calf belong to that cow?"

"Certainly."

"Gracious! With milk getting so expensive I don't see how she can afford to keep it."

TALE OF REIGN OF TERROR

Pathos of Little Nicole's Execution Overcame and Nearly Killed Spectator of Iron Nerve.

M. Lenotre's book on the experiences of the Gascon royalist, the Baron de Batz—an English version of which has just appeared—was first published in Paris some years ago, and it is surprising that it was not translatetd before 1910. De Batz was one of the strangest figures of the French revolution. He is said to have used his enormous wealth in bringing about distrust among the revolutionary leaders and in crippling finance, and thus had much to do with the end of the butchery. There was one terrible incident of the executions preceding the fall of Robespierre thus narrated by M. Lenotre in this volume:

"A certain man of great strength and hardness—one of those athletic people who are all muscle and have no nerves—wagered that he would watch the execution at close quarters without flinching. Whether he stood with the executioner or not I do not know. For a long time he bore it unmoved; but when little Nicole came upon the scaffold, and arranged herself upon the plank, and said gently to the executioner: 'Monsieur, shall I be all right like that?' his head swam and his sight failed him, his immense strength gave way, and he fell to the ground. For a moment he was thought to be dead and was carried home."

EXPERIENCES OF LUCINDA

Queer Way In Which She Unintentionally "Swiped" Hatpin From Another Woman In Car.

"Girls," said Lucinda, "I certainly did have an extraordinary experience this morning in a Madison avenue car. Crowded, this car was, full of people, but it seemed not quite so full at the middle, and so I worked my way there, gently; the best I could.

"Standing about a third of the way down the car on the right was a woman who was holding on to a strap and facing outward, so that her back was toward me as I worked along past her. She was about the same height as I, and when I passed her my hat caught on hers and it seemed to cling there for a minute, but then it got free and I passed on, to reach up for a strap myself when I had got just beyond her, and then what do you think?

"When I raised my arm up to reach for the strap, there, lying on the top of my arm was a hatpin, a hatpin from the hat of the woman I had just passed! When my hat caught in her hat it caught under the head of that pin and drew it out and snapped it forward just so that it lodged on my arm.

"Well, I handed the hatpin back to her and she smiled and I smiled and that's all there was to it; but really, now, wasn't that extraordinary?"—New York Sun.

Tale of a Bird.

A little four-year-old boy living in a country town disturbed and took some eggs from under a sitting hen belonging to a neighbor. The neighbor complained to the boy's mother who later called her boy to her and began to reprove him, when he broke in with the question: "Who told you?"

The mother said: "A little bird told me. Now, tell me, how many eggs did you take?"

The little boy, stammering, said: "Well! Well! Why didn't the bird tell you the whole of it?"

Improve Machines.

The occupation of large punching machines used in boiler shops and similar establishments has been greatly improved in efficiency and economy recently by a simple system of electric control. These machines heretofore have been operated by a foot attachment, but this is cut out entirely and the push button placed at a point where it is much more accessible. Two men can, by this arrangement, do the work formerly requiring three, and the work is said to be done in a much more accurate manner.

HOPE ALWAYS THE BEST FOOD

What the Doctor Suggests, Not What He Gives, Has Greatest Effect on Patient.

"Doctor," said one of those self-centered ladies who are always extracting opinions gratis from the medical profession, "what do you consider the best food as a constancy?"

"Hope, madam," returned the doctor, promptly, "at all times and in all places. Not a senseless optimism, but a self-respecting hope. Heaven and Nature intended it to be the chief pabulum of the race." The table dared not smile, and the doctor, having secured a few minutes' immunity, declined "wholesome" prefaces, and fell upon a robust breakfast of bacon and eggs, waffles and hot rolls. The lady regarded him wistfully, for the doctor ate with appetizing gusto. A stomach long trained on other people's theories concerning edibles was not to be trifled with, so she was fain to satisfy herself upon a tasteless cereal, and then nibbled a little dry toast and sipped a woeful substitute for coffee. But the doctor is nothing if not humane, so, between his waffles he looked across at her pleasantly and began: "I said that because what a doctor actually does or gives is infinitely less in its effect than what he suggests. This is a truth old as Hippocrates and Galen, though, perhaps, only in this age are we beginning definitely and intelligently to utilize it. Happiness is the substance and aim of life and living, and hope is nine tenths, say of happiness; its greatest factor; therefore beware of unconsciously dispensing with hope."—Harper's Weekly.

The gymnasium class at the Parish Hall has taken on such large proportions, that Mr. Celisn has decided to give the boys two nights a week instead of one. These exercises are very necessary to their well being, and go a long way toward building up good sturdy, healthful and upright men. The nights chosen are Monday and Thursday at 7:15. The parents as well as friends are always welcome to visit the classes and see the boys under military discipline, and watch the enthusiasm manifested in their games.

A married man ran away with a silly young girl, and after an exciting chase the elopers were finally captured and returned to their homes. Feeling in the town ran high against the man, and a number of neighbors were sitting together one evening discussing the case. Naturally everybody had an idea of his own as to what action should be taken against the married man.

One suggested jail for life, another said ninety years in the penitentiary would do, and a third offered tar and feathers. A little man who sat in the corner looked up and smiled.

"I have a scheme," he remarked, "that beats all of yours a mile."

"What would you do with him?" the chorus asked.

"I would turn him over to his wife's mother," said the quiet little man.—Philadelphia Telegraph.
