FAIR IS DRAWING LARGE CROWDS

Given for Improvement of the Church Property, the Response Should Be Generous.

The Catholic Fair opened yesterday noon under very favorable conditions—one of the most glorious days of the year, a large, enthusiastic crowd and a most excellent chicken dinner. What more could one ask? Mayor N. K. Mead made a very pleasing address in the evening, wishing the church and society the best of success in their undertaking. And there was an entertaining program of vocal and instrumental solos and duets by Mrs. Troy and the Misses Frances Hoare, Athlene Fisher and Marjory Weeks.

The large store room presented a very attractive appearance with its gaily bedecked booths and many pretty useful and ornamental articles for sale. The ladies have worked long and faithfully and are entitled to the best of success. It is their first call upon the public to assist them in the good work of improving their church property, and we are sure they will receive a most generous response. Father Albert Erkins is of a very progressive and enthusiastic temperament and will prove a help and stimulus not only to his church but to the public also. In addition to serving noon dinners, the ladies are prepared to serve ice cream and cake, also punch and cider, and have a variety of good, home-made candies. See their programs for each night's entertainment.

COME OUT TONIGHT AND HEAR 'EM YELL

Football game at the ball park tomorrow at 2:30. The High School team will again meet their old antagonists from Port Townsend.

There will be a torch-light procession on Front and First streets this, Friday, evening at 7:30. The football team will be there in their suits, followed by the High School pupils, with their brass lined throats and cold weather carburetors, giving the High School yells.

Everyone interested in the Angeles team, and who is not, should turn out Saturday afternoon and root for the boys.

GRAYS HARBOR INTERURBAN

That the Federal Light & Power Company, owners of the Grays Harbor Railway & Light Company, also identified with a large number of traction companies in the West, will build an interurban from Grays Harbor to Raymond on Willapa harbor and will also construct a line from here to Puget sound, was announced by C. K. Durbin, general superintendent of the New York company, today, says a dispatch to the Seattle P.-I., dated Aberdeen, Oct. 23. Both of these lines have already been surveyed.

The line between Grays harbor and Willapa harbor is a necessity, said Mr. Durbin, and the company intends to begin on the work as soon as possible.

"The line between Grays harbor and Puget sound will be taken up as soon as possible, but not until the Raymond line is completed."

FAIR CLEARED $300

The Olympia Peninsula Fair Association will have $296.35 to its credit after all bills are paid, according to statement of directors. A meeting of the stockholders will be held Dec. 15th, when the capital stock of the association will be raised to $20,000. The additional funds received from the sale of stock will be utilized for the extension of the work, and in the preparation of the grounds for future exhibits. We glean from the Port Townsend Leader.

Eight prizes have been donated for the next whist tournament. There are two for the highest scores won by the young ladies and two for the young men and the same for the married ladies and gentlemen. Prizes will be on display in Nailor's Drug store window and tickets can be procured there also.

Remember the corporate and saloon forces will see that every one of their supporters is registered. You cannot vote unless registered by the 6th.

ENCOURAGE FRUIT GROWING & CANNING

Senator Polhamus Tells of Success of Puyallup Valley Ranchers and Gives Key Thereto.

Senator W. H. Polhamus of Sumner gave the opening address at the Olympic Peninsula Fair. The Senator is a fluent speaker and always interests his hearers Among other things he urged the people of this section to aid the man already here, rather than spend all their time inducing others to come. It is up to you people to afford them incouragement by providing markets and showing them where it is profitable to plant more trees this year than they had last. In endeavoring to enlist the interest of the man in the East, the man at home is left to struggle along as best he can; no attention is paid to him or his prosperity, when in reality he is the man to whom you must look to develop your country. If half the money that is being spent in other sections to advertise the state of Washington and induce immigration were spent at home to assist and encourage the men who have already made a start, I believe it would be productive of ten times the amount of good.

Senator Paulhamus declared that the soil and climate of Western Washington are especially adapted to fruit growing. He mentioned Bartlett pears, cherries and blackberries as lines which could be profitcultivated here. He declared that the demand was constantly growing, and high prices can always be secured for these products. Cherries form probably the best line for cultivation in this region. The trees can be planted in logged-off lands, without removing the stumps, and will give a big yield with a little care. The cherry deteriorates with cultivation, and for this reason it can be made one of the big money producers of the section which has vast areas of logged-off land.

Here where it is so difficult to clear ground, we must look for intensive culture for profit, and this is supplied by fruit and berry raising. No other line is so profitable, and with a small cannery to look after your production, the counties of Jefferson and Clallam can be made with little effort to produce manyfold their present output. No other produce pays a railroad so well.

GAVE UNIQUE SOCIAL FUNCTION

One of the most delightful as well as unique social functions of the season was the Danish card party given on Tuesday afternoon by Mrs. J. P. Christiansen. The house decorations consisted of the Danish and Swedish flags united with the stars and stripes, and exquisite bouquets of roses from their own flower garden. Five hundred was the afternoon's entertainment, the score cards being designed by Mr. Christiansen, and made in his native country of Denmark. The emblem was the scarlet and white Danish flags crossed with a wreath of the native oak and beach leaves in gilt, the ladies carrying these cards, and the crepe paper napkins to match, home with them as souvenirs.

The playing cards were very dainty little affairs imported also for the occasion. The highest score was made by Mrs. E. B. Webster, who prizes very highly the pretty Danish souvenir spoon presented to her. Delicious refreshments and music closed this very pleasant afternoon.

Mrs. Christiansen entertained the ladies of the east end of town on Wednesday afternoon in the same charming manner, Mrs. Julius Kirschberg being rewarded with the Danish souvenir spoon for having the highest score.

A PLEASANT RECEPTION

Mrs. J. J. Nelson held a reception Tuesday afternoon and evening at her pleasant home on Front street in honor of her two daughters, Mrs. Hudson and Mrs. Jackson. The rooms were artistically decorated for the occasion, presenting a festive scene. Mrs. Nelson was assisted in receiving by her daughter, Mrs. Wright; little Marion Day answering the door bell. In the dining room assisting were Mrs. E. E. Day, Mrs. Gray, Miss Allen and Miss Lorna Smith. The severe rain storm in the evening kept many from calling who desired to do so, but those who went spent a most delightful evening and were entertained with an excellent musical program.

FRATERNAL BROTHERHOOD HOLD OPEN MEETING

Drill Team of Ten Beautiful Young Ladies Will Conduct Candidates November 2nd.

The Fraternal Brotherhood, true to the prophecy of organizer C. D. Stanley, has met with signal success in organizing a live lodge in Angeles. The local lodge was instituted Oct. 12th with twenty-four charter members, and officers were elected and installed for the current term.

It seems to be one of the plans of this order to make their social features an inspiring attraction, as evidenced by their open meeting last Thursday, at which the members and their friends enjoyed a very sociable evening at dancing and card playing. A delicious lunch was served shortly before 12 o'clock, after which the State Manager, Frank Lighthouse, made an interesting address.

Plans are being made to have a big class initiation on Nov. 2nd, at which time the state manager will come over from Seattle and help put on the work. There will be a drill team of ten beautiful young ladies to conduct the candidates upon their journey along the road of mysteries. Dancing and a good time generally will be the order after the ceremonies are concluded.

Officers are: C. S. Morey, prest.; Mrs. Lillie A. Grierson, vice-prest.; W. H. Peter, past prest.; Mrs. Lillian M. Belford, chaplain; Wm. M. Belford, sergeant; Mrs. Cathern B. Morey, mistress-at-arms; A. W. Grierson, inner door keeper.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS HAVE HOME COMING

Over 125 in Attendance, Enjoying Program, Dance, and Banquet. Sister Lodge Started.

The annual Home Coming of the Knights of Pythias was held in the opera house Wednesday evening. There were about 125 in attendance, including members of the organization from Port Crescent, Dungeness and Sequim. A short program opened the evening's entertainment, which consisted of an instrumental solo by Miss Wolverton, a reading by Miss Laureas and an address by Horace White, a charter member of the organization. His address was very interesting, being mostly reminicences of the order, told in a very pleasing manner. Reading of letters from absent members was next on the program, which was a very interesting feature also. The hall was then cleared of chairs and all who wished indulged in dancing, while others played cards or enjoyed social converse.

The affair was intended just for a home coming and social time and as such it was a great success, giving also renewed enthusiasm and stimulus to the lodge. Plans were made for the organizing of a Pythian Sisters lodge and about twenty-five have already signed for membership.

At exactly ten o'clock the first forty went over to the Merchants Hotel where a sumptuous banquet was served. It was near midnight when the last hungry dancers partook of this excellent repast, and all were unanimous in declaring the Pythian Home Coming to have been one of the most pleasant events in their lives.

GRAND ARMY AND CORPS HAVE SOCIAL EVENING

The meeting, Saturday night, at the G.A.R. Hall of members of Pacific Post and Corps and their friends, proved a most interesting and pleasant affair, between 75 and 100 persons being present, including 20 old veterans. State Commander F. H. Hurd and Mrs. Edith Harris, president of the W.R.C., were present and gave interesting addresses. Commander Hurd, although not what might be called a fluent speaker, is a good talker and mixer, and he gave an intensely interesting account of his trip to and from the National Encampment the past summer. If there is one thing above another that always interests an old soldier, it is an address of this nature. At the close of the literary and musical feast a sumptuous banquet was spread, to which all did ample justice. These social meetings of the Post and Corps tend to broaden one's conception of life and unite all in a closer and happier fraternal brotherhood.

Minor Happenings of the Week

Rear Admiral William Alexander Marshall has been placed on the retired list of the navy under the operation of the law, having reached the age of 62 years.

A quarter of a million dollars is the cost of the new plant being erected by the Cincinnati Nationals, with a steel and concrete grandstand and 24,000 seating capacity.

Nathaniel Pitt Langford, pioneer resident of St. Paul, who was one of the discoverers of the Yellowstone park and its first superintendent, died last week, aged 79 years.

Cordova was visited again last week by an earthquake. The shock lasted several seconds, but was not so severe as that of September 21. The shock was felt all along the Southwestern coast.

Edward Marden, missionary with headquarters near Ketchikan, who was in Seattle last week, urged the establishment of more government schools and greater efficiency in school work for the natives.

Thirty thousand acres of fertile land along the Kootenai river, in Northern Idaho, will be reclaimed by owners of land and settlers in the Kootenai valley as soon as the county commissioners sanction the plan to create a drainage district.

The population of Canada, according to the census taken on the first of June is announced as 7,081,868, an increase in ten years of 1,710,554. Montreal leads Canadian cities with a population of 466,197, an increase in ten years of 198,467. Vancouver has 100,333.

ECONOMIC CAMPAIGN PLANNED FOR KENNEWICK.

Kennewick, Oct. 21.—"Keep the Dollar at Home" is the caption under which an economic campaign will be launched by the Commercial Club. The movement is to be started for the purposes of conserving the resources and promoting the industries of the valley by a scientific obedience to the law of supply and demand.

At present many commodities, which could be produced here, are shipped in while the local demand is not sufficient to encourage the production of other commodities which cannot be profitably disposed of in distant markets.

In order to accomplish this complete data will be compiled as to local production and corresponding data as to local consumption.

The need of some such plan has been emphasized by the arrival here within the last three weeks of two full carloads of eggs from Nebraska. The country tributary to this city is adapted in every way to successful poultry raising.

Some Victories Already Won

In the past years the local market has been entirely supplied by imported creamery butter and flour, notwithstanding the fact that the valley offiered great possibilities for dairying and the Horse Heaven wheat belt is only a few miles distant. The importation of butter and flour, however, has been ended by the opening of the Kennewick Grain & Milling Company's new plant and the operations of the Columbia River Creamery Company.

Another instance of "closing port" to imports that is soon to follow is that of live stock to supply the local meat demand.

S. P. Clerks Win Strike.

Sacramento, Oct. 21.—Check clerks in the local Southern Pacific freight sheds marched in a body to the office of General Freight Manager Ellis yesterday and demanded shorter hours. They threatened to quit if their demands were not acceded to. After a short parley the company and the men compromised and the men went back to work.

BROOKS WILL REMAIN IN ALASKA DIVISION.

Washington, Oct. 23.—Alfred H. Brooks, who recently was offered the position of chief of the United States geological survey, has requested Secretary of the Interior Fisher to allow him to remain as head of the Alaskan division of the survey and his wish has been granted. Frank B. Van Horn is acting chief geologist.

NO LOCAL OPTION ELECTIONS THIS YEAR.

Olympia, Oct. 23.—Assistant Attorney General John Thomas Stuart Lyle has advised the prosecuting attorney of Franklin county that local option elections can be held only at general county elections, every two years.

Washington State News Items

A movement looking to a municipally owned telephone system is being considered by the city utilities committee of the Seattle city council.

The new Chamber of Commerce at Seattle will celebrate Founders' day November 13, commemorating the 60th anniversary of the first white settlement of Seattle with a banquet.

The steamship Victoria, last of the Bering Sea fleet to sail this season, left Seattle Friday. The Victoria, earlier in the week, brought $1,000,000 in gold and nearly 700 passengers from Nome.

Several hundred fire insurance agents of the State of Washington are expected in Spokane, November 23 and 24, as delegates to the first convention of the Washington State Association of Fire Insurance Agents.

The name of former Senator George Turner, of Spokane, is among those which will be presented to President Taft for appointment to succeed the late Justice Harlan, of the supreme court bench.

Materials will be assembled at the Moran shipbuilding plant in Seattle in a few days for the construction of two modern steel whalers, to cost approximately $130,000. It is expected that the vessels will be ready for launching in about six months.

North Yakima's five entries for the $500 prize offered by the Northern Pacific for the best twenty-five boxes of apples displayed at the American Land and Irrigation Congress in Madison Square Garden, New York City, were sent East last week in a special express car.

Mrs. Clara A. Wright, 25 years of age, wife of H. C. Wright, a rural mail carrier at Davenport, has entered the mayoralty race in that city. The primaries will take place on November 7 and the election on December 5. George E. Craig, county superintendent of schools, is the other candidate for mayor.

So successful was the first exhibition of Snohomish county made goods, with its attendance of more than 11,000 interested spectators, that the Everett Business Men's Association is planning to make it an annual affair and build a hall adequate to care for the many exhibitors who were unable to obtain space this year.

U. OF W. PROGRAM FOR SEMI-CENTENNIAL.

Seattle, Oct. 23.—The program for the semi-centennial celebration of the University of Washington is announced as complete.

The festival will start on November 3 and end on the evening of November 7.

Friday will be devoted to receptions of delegates from all parts of the country, followed by the big football game on Saturday between Washington and the Oregon agricultural college.

Monday is given over to State day and the speakers will devote themselves chieby to topics concerning the state and the university.

"Fifteen Years of Development in Higher Education" will be the subject of Dr. Kendrick Charles Babcock, assistant United States commissioner of education. President Prince L. Campbell, of the University of Oregon, will speak on "Past Problems of Collegiate Education on the Pacific Coast," while President James MacLean, University of Idaho, will discuss "Future Problems in the Development of Collegiate Education on the Pacific Coast."

Governor and University.

In the evening of the same day Gov. Hay will speak on "The University as an Institution of the State;" Judge Stephen Chadwick on "Citizenship" and Henry B. Dewey, superintendent of schools, on "The Service of the University as Part of the School System."

On Tuesday, the last day of the elebration, Chancellor Samuel Avery, of the University of Nebraska, will talk on "The Development of the State University and the Instruction in the Sciences," while President James Baker, University of Colorado, has chosen for his topic "The Development of the State University and the Liberal Arts Curriculum."

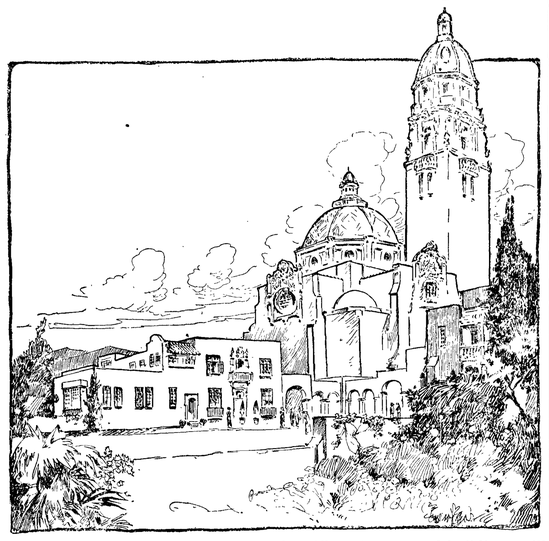
GOVERNMENT CLAIMS GAME IN PARK AS OWN.

Helena, Mont., Oct. 21.—Claiming as government property the animals in national parks, the United States government has brought charges of larceny against Thomas Shields and Archibald Patterson. The men were charged with killing an elk and a deer in the Glacier National park. This is said to be the first time the government has ever definitely asserted ownership of wild game.

Just a Few Speeches.

Washington, Oct. 22.—Senator La Follette said yesterday that no plans have been completed for a campaign speaking tour in November, although he still hopes to be able to make several progressive speeches before congress meets.

Administration and California Buildings at the Panama-California Exposition



San Diego, Oct. 23.—The two first buildings for the Panama-California Exposition will be begun before November 1, plans having been approved by Director General D. C. Collier.

The first building will be the administration offices. It will be built at the east end of the huge bridge spanning Cabrillo Canyon, forming the entrance to the exposition, and it will be a part of the architectural composition that has for its main feature the enormous California building, a structure of domes and towers.

Visitors to this exposition will see one of the most striking architectural pictures ever created in America. From a distance the exposition will have the appearance of an old European city, with the smaller buildings in the foreground and the cathedrals and palaces in detail back of them. Entrance to the exposition will be by the big bridge and progress through the different groups of buildings will be by prados and courts decorated with every beauty known to horticultural and architectural art.

Since the favorable action of congress in behalf of the Panama-California International Exposition and the friendship evinced by the President and cabinet officers for the project, the exposition has expanded from an affair covering 35 acres, as originally planned to one that will require no less than 350 acres for foundations, streets and plazas. Brazil alone will have a building costing close to a million. The California building, with its exhibits, will cost half a million.

Director of Works Frank P. Allen Jr., and Bertram G. Goodhue, designer, are busy with designs and estimates for the other buildings and actual construction is beginning nearly four years in advance because most of the buildings are to be Class A, permanent structures.

ADVOCATES SPECIAL COURT TO HEAR DIVORCE CASES.

Seattle, Oct. 23.—Judge King Dykeman, of the superior court, believes that a court of domestic relations, to give its entire attention to divorce cases, would cut down the number of divorce decrees granted in King County at least one-third. Judge Dykeman yesterday announced his intention of presenting the matter to his brother judges, with the hope of having a judge detailed to the work under rules to be adopted by the bench.

It is believed by Judge Dykeman that the rule could be made without addition legislation, requiring the investigation of all divorce cases before trial. This would give the new court an opportunity to do its work and to heal domestic differences where the causes for divorce were trivial, as many of them are, and to stop in the incipiency the many cases where collusion of husband and wife is made plain.

Court Testimony Widens Breach

"I think a court of domestic relations should be established here on some general lines as the juvenile court. While it would involve the investigation of many cases that have no real merit, it would also enable unbiased and disinterested officials to conduct such investigation under the authority of the court, and to endeavor to keep the home intact, rather than to allow it to be broken up for selfish interests. I know of many cases where decrees have not been granted, and yet the parties were prevented from reuniting by the feeling engenderd over the testimony given in court. If these cases do not come to trial they will more surely result in reconciliation through the good offices of the court.

ROOSEVELT INTENDS TO BE SILENT DURING CAMPAIGN.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 23.—The part which former President Roosevelt will take in the coming national campaign will probably be one of silence. This has become publicly known through a letter which he wrote to Representative J. Hampton Moore, of Pennsylvania, president of the Atlantic Deep Waterways Association, declining an invitation to address the convention.

Col. Roosevelt declared emphatically:

"From now on I wish to avoid making any speech that I can possibly avoid."

Concluding his letter, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"I cannot undertake anything further of any kind or sort now."

These portions of the colonel's letter were interpreted to mean that he wished to refrain from giving utterance to any opinions which possibly might be misconstrued in the presidential campaign.

Young Catholics to Meet.

Washington, Oct. 23.—Cardinal Gibbons will preside today at the opening of the thirty-seventh annual convention of the Catholic Young Men's National Union, which begins a two days' session here.

TAFT TO RETURN TO WASHINGTON, NOV. 12.

Billings, Mont., Oct. 21.—The itinerary of President Taft's supplemental tour has been completed and the date of his return to Washington fixed for November 12. The original trip will end at Pittsburg, October 31. Mr. Taft will spend November 1 at Morgantown, W. Va., and from there will go to Hot Springs, Va., for five days. He will spend only one day in Cincinnati, November 7, when he will vote in the local election.

To Attend Lincoln Celebration

From Cincinnati the president will go to Louisville, Ky., to spend November 8. He will be at Frankfort, Ky., November 9, and at Hedgeville, Ky., to attend the Lincoln farm celebration, November 10. On November 11 Mr. Taft will pay hurried visits to Nashville, Tenn.; Suwanee, Tenn., to visit the University of the South, where Maj. "Archie" Butt once went to school, and to Chattanooga. From the latter city Mr. Taft will go direct to Washington.

COMPANIES WILL COMBAT STATE LIABILITY LAWS.

New York, Oct. 23.—The last step in uniting practically all the liability insurance companies of this country and Europe in one organization, was taken yesterday when the Liability Insurance Association, at its fifth annual meeting, voted to join the organization. The other organizations included are the Board of Casualty and Surety Underwriters and the International Association of Accident Underwriters.

The coalition will be known as the Interantional Casualty & Surety Underwriters' Association. The main purpose of the union, it was stated at the meeting, was to combat the agitation to have insurance handled by state governments.

It was claimed that the higher rates recently fixed were necessitated by employers' liability laws.

RUSSIA BREAKS U. S. PACT, SAYS SULZER.

New York, Oct. 23.—Russia's refusal to recognize American passports, because of race and religion is a clear violation of the treaty of 1832, and the remaining question is one of remedy only, said Cogressman Sulzer, chairman of the house committee on foreign affairs, addressing a meeting yesterday at the Pilgrim's church in Harlem.

No Ice Yet In Dawson.

Dawson, Oct. 21.—Although navigation is finished and the stages hereafter will give service, no ice has yet appeared in the Yukon, making this the most phenomenal late season in the history of this territory. Seattle temperatures prevail.

Zapata Forces Busy.

Mexico City, Oct. 22.—Two bridges blown up on the inter-oceanic railroad, one station burned, and two small battles with federal troops form the day's record of the Zapata campaign.

REBEL VICTORY NOW ADMITTED

CHINESE GOVERNMENT FEARFUL OF EFFECT ON IMPERIAL ARMY.

Believed by Legations That All Provinces South of Yangste Will Now Secede, Together With Some On North—Much Depends On Next Encounter.

Peking, Oct. 21.—It is apparent here that the imperial government knew the result of the battle at Hankow between its forces and the rebels more than twenty-four hours before it became public. Reports of the rebel victory gradually leaked out during the day, but the first positive account of the defeat of the imperial troops was delivered to the foreign legations last night by the Associated Press. It caused a profound impression.

Moral Effect Great.

The success of the revolution has been considered here to hinge upon the result of the first encounter, as its moral effect would be far-reaching. When the fugitive imperialists reach the main army, now mobilizing near Sinyangchow, knowledge of the repulse, it is believed, will utterly demoralize the troops, while as the news travels along the Yangste river it probably will cause important adhesions to the rebel cause.

The foreign legations here believe that the news from Hankow and Yunnan will mean that the provinces south of the Yangste and also some on the north side of the river will secede sooner or later.

Admits Situation Grave.

The government acknowledges that there is a serious situation in Changsha, province of Hunan, which it is believed in Peking means that Changsha has joined the revolt.

Consular dispatches received at Peking from the province of Yunnan report the troops there are threatening to mutiny.

Foreigners whose business it is to study China think the northern provinces, which are not deeply affected by sedition, may rally around the Manchus. Everything, however, seems to depend on an immediate and successful advance by Minister of War Yin Tchang, who now commands 20,000 men within 100 miles of Hankow, but only the foreign ministry pretends to enjoy confidence in his promised attack.

Already Yin Tchang is issuing proclamations offering pardons to all who desert the rebel standards, and it is believed he will rely on proclamation or negotiations, fearing or being unable to move his army.

Official Report Published.

At midnight the report from Yin Tchang was published in the Official Gazette. It does not refer to Wednesday's fight at Hankow. It says the twenty-second regiment arrived at Hankow Sunday, that the rebels attacked twice, but were repulsed, and that three rebels were captured. His spies report that the rebels are preparing for a defense of Wuchang and Hankow. Many desertions in the rebel ranks are reported.

Yin Tchang says he has made Sinyanchow his temporary headquarters and will proceed southward after the movement of the fourth division of troops.

An edict, which also is published, sanctions Yin Tchang's proposal, and hopes he will lose no time in suppressing the rebels. Another edict expresses compassion for the people in those provinces that are suffering from drought and rebellion and orders 200,000 taels from the late Empress Dowagers' hoard to be paid to Yuan Shi Kai, who will arrange for its distribution among the distressed people.

San Francisco, Oct. 22.—The main army of the Chinese government, under War Minister Yin Tchang, said to number 20,000 men, was totally defeated yesterday at Kwangshui, Hupeh province, says a cable received today by the Chinese Free Press, of this city. The rebel army of 15,000, under Li Yueng Huen, is stated to have captured the artillery, baggage train and ammunition of the imperials, who retreated to Shagot.

Supply Trains Abandoned.

Cables received by local Chinese newspapers indicate that the imperial forces were completely routed and abandoned their supply trains during the retreat. The mountain pass at Kwangshui, said to be of great strategic value, is now held by the revolutionists. This governs the effectiveness of the Hankow-Peking railroad, over which the imperial troops are being moved.

Gov. Sun Po Kee, of the province of Shantung, is reported to have narrowly escaped death yesterday and is now in hiding in Chingtao. Revolutionists burned the governor's residence at Tsinanfu, say cables to the Chinese Free Press, and the majority of the imperial troops went over to the revolutionists.

War News Suppressed.

The viceroy of Canton, say cables received here by the Chinese Free Press has ordered the suppression of all war news in provincial newspapers.

Following is a translation of the cable announcing the imperial defeat received by the Free Press.

"Shanghai, Oct. 22, 7 a. m.—Big engagement between revolutionary forces and imperial army. Fifteen thousand revolutionists attacked Gen Yin Tchang's army in mountain pass at Kwangshui, in the mountain range between Hupeh and Hunan provinces, where Gen. Yin made headquarters.

Control Mountain Passes.

"Imperial army retreated, great slaughter, twenty-one miles north. All stores, artillery and ammunition of Gen. Yin left behind and captured by revolutionists. Great victory for Commander-in-Chief Li Yuen Huen, who led rebel army. Revolutionists control every mountain pass."

Th following was received today by the Young China, a Chinese paper of this city:

"Shanghai, Oct. 21.—Revolutionists control thirty-six mountain passes. Peking in panic."

REAL REPUBLIC WITH NO TRUSTS OR GRAFT IS PLAN.

New York, Oct. 22.—Jue Checkman, a leader of the Young Chinese in this country, who came from San Francisco to promote the revolutionary cause here, referred to Dr. Sun Yet Sen, at a Chinese meeting today, as "the George Washington of China, and soon to occupy the emperor's throne as president of the new empire."

"Dr. Sun has some new political ideas," he continued, "which will not only revolutionize China and the Chinese people, but will open the eyes of the world. He has taken the best of the American form of government and has accepted the best of socialism. First of all, there won't be any graft; there won't be any trusts like those in America, and no rich man will rule and own politicians. The new China is going to be a real republic."

ASKS FOR INVESTIGATION OF SOURCE OF REPORTS.

Spokane, Wash., Oct. 23.—Robert J. Maclean, secretary of the Spokane Chamber of Commerce, has forwarded a lengthy communication to James Wilson, secretary of the United States Department of Agriculture, urging him to ascertain the source of reports, sent broadcast from Washington, D. C., that deterioration is noted in western orchards where intensive methods are practiced, also to instruct the Bureau of Pomology and the Reclamation Service to issue official statements setting forth the fact that the reports are without foundation and were not authorized by the department.

Mr. Maclean says he has been authorized by prominent growers in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana and other western states to invite the most rigid investigation of the irrigated districts, to show there is no truth in the rumors that irrigated orchards are going back or declining in productivity and value.

PUBLIC SERVICE APPOINTMENT DELINED BY HAROLD PRESTON.

Olympia, Oct. 21.—Attorney Harold Preston, of Seattle, has declined to accept the apopintment to a place on the public service commission, tendered him by Gov. Hay, to succeed the late H. A. Fairchild. His letter reached Olympia last night, but as Gov. Hay is not in the city, it is not known who he has in mind for the place.

Mr. Preston's letter follows:

"My dear Governor:

"Yours of the 19th, tendering me appointment on the public service commission, came duly to hand. I thoroughly appreciate the honor conferred and am gratified by the expression of your confidence.

"I cannot see my way to accept the office and, therefore, decline the same.

"Yours very respectfully,
HAROLD PRESTON."

UNITED STATES STEEL TO CANCEL ORE LEASE.

New York, Oct. 23.—The United States Steel Corporation will cancel its lease of the Great Northern properties, one of the largest leases of the kind which the corporation holds.

The rumor, current in Wall street today, was confirmed after business hours from official sources.

When the lease will be terminated is undetermined. The contract stipulated that it should continue until all the ore is exhausted unless on January, 1915, the lease should be abrogated, under the option reserved by the lessee, and in case the lessee so determined, two years' notice should be given.

The Great Northern properties are estimated to include deposits of 300,000,000 tons of iron ore. Officials of the steel corporation refused to state the reason for the cancellation.

Successor to Mrs. Mason.

Olympia, Oct. 21.—It is announced bf Charles F. Hubbard, state labor commissioner, that he has appointed Mrs. A. E. Chantler, of Tacoma, as assistant. She will take up her new duties at once, succeeding Mrs. Blanche Mason.

Knees Became Stiff

Five Years of Severe Rheumatism

The cure of Henry J. Goldstein, 14 Barton Street, Boston, Mass., is another victory by Hood's Sarsaparilla. This great medicine has succeeded in many cases where others have utterly failed. Mr. Goldstein says: "I suffered from rheumatism five years, it kept me from business and caused excruciating pain. My knees would become as stiff as steel. I tried many medicines without relief, then took Hood's Sarsaparilla, soon felt much better, and now consider myself entirely cured. I recommend Hood's."

Originally Color Bearers.

Ensign is a word formed on the idea of the display of insignia, badge or device and was formerly much used where we now employ the word colors. The company officers in a regiment who were, until late years, termed ensigns were, at a still earlier period, more correctly termed "ensign bearers."

Coughs of Children

Especially night coughs. Nature needs a little help to quiet the irritation, control the inflammation, check the progress of the disease. Our advice is—give the children Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Ask your doctor if this is his advice also. He knows best. Do as he says.

Ayer's — We publish our formulas. We banish alcohol from our medicines. We urge you to consult your doctor

If you think constipation is of trifling consequence, just ask your doctor. He will disabuse you of that notion in short order. "Correct it, at once!" he will say. Then ask him about Ayer's Pills. A mild liver pill, all vegetable.

PLAYING A LOW GAME

PICKPOCKET TELLS HOW HE WAS "WORKED" BY VICTIM.

Neat Scheme by Which He Was Induced Not Only to Give Up $50 He Had Stolen, but $10 More.

"The most low-down trick ever played by one white man on another was played on me," said the man who admits he was not always so honest as he is now. "It was the diabolic invention of a man from whose pocket I one evening extracted a roll of bills. Along with the money which I did want, I secured a letter which I did not want, but which I could not return to the gentleman's pocket without appraising him of my former meddling with his financial affairs.

"When I got to my own room I read this letter. I wished a hundred times after that I hadn't. It was an appeal for assistance. The writer was a woman, she was living in a small Indiana town. Apparently she had some claim on the man. She told him of the death of two members of her family, of the sickness of another, and of her own overwrought condition. She was destitute, and she begged him to send her at once as much money as he could possibly spare.

"I don't mind saying that that letter made a powerful impression on me. I read it several times before going to bed, and in my sleep I dreamed about it. I saw that poor woman's tears, I heard her sobs and prayers, I pictured the dead and dying children. Along toward morning I sat up on the edge of the bed and called myself names.

"'You beast,' said I, 'you miserable brute, you—'

"But I won't repeat all the hard names I handed out to myself that morning. They don't sound well when you say them out loud.

"By and by I counted the money again that the man and I had swapped the night before. There was just $50 Since the money was wrapped in the woman's letter I had no doubt that he had scraped it together to send her. I could not return the money to the man, for I didn't know where to find him, but my sense of humanity forced me to do the next best thing. The woman's name and address were on the letter, and I resolved to forward it to her. I was hard up just then, devilishly hard up; but I knew that woman's need was greater than mine, and I added the last $10 I had in the world to the other man's $50 and sent it to her.

"That ought to have ended the incident, but it didn't. Two years later I met that man again. It doesn't matter where or how, but I met him, and it was what I learned then that killed my faith in human nature. That letter was a fake. The man always carried it for the benefit of gentlemen of my profession. A friend out west wrote it. She wrote a fresh letter every week, and the man carried it wrapped around whatever money he happened to have in his pocket. He figured that the most hard-hearted criminal alive would be melted by an appeal of that kind and would give up the boodle. He figured right in my case. It got me, and it got my $10, which of course, the man hadn't counted on; but I leave it to any unprejudiced witness if that wasn't playing just about as low a hand as it is possible for any man to play."

Rugged Memorial.

Near Bloomington, Ill., lies an immense boulder, which geologists believe to have been deposited there by some mighty glacial flow from the far north at least 10,000 years ago. It is picturesque and rugged, but of no use whatever to the owner of the land on which it rests. With his consent it is to be removed and put to an appropriate use.

Under the auspices of the Old Settlers' association that huge boulder will be taken to the town of Metamora and placed as a memorial to mark the spot where Lincoln and Douglas engaged in one of their great constitutional debates in 1858. With proper inscriptions commemorative of that struggle between two intellectual giants that old boulder will have given a worthy mission to posterity.—New York Evening Mail.

Twisting a Law.

A few weeks ago the Chinese of New Zealand were found to be doing a very great deal of the laundry work available, and had so thrown out of employment the women workers in some of the laundries.

In New Zealand a laundry is a factory within the meaning of the factories act, so it occurred to a lawmaker that he could settle the difficulty of this Chinese competition by a neat amendment in the interpretation clause of the act above mentioned.

An amendment was therefore drafted and printed and sent with the utmost seriousness and good faith to the crown law office for consideration; it contained a provision in these words: "For the purposes of this act (the factories act), a Chinaman shall be deemed to be a girl under 18 years of age."

WHAT I WENT THROUGH

Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Natick, Mass.—"I cannot express what I went through during the change of life before I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was in such a nervous condition I could not keep still. My limbs were cold, I had creepy sensations, and I could not sleep nights. I was finally told by two physicians that I also had a tumor. I read one day of the wonderful cures made by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it, and it has made me a well woman. My neighbors and friends declare it had worked a miracle for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth its weight in gold for women during this period of life. If it will help others you may publish my letter."—Mrs. NATHAN B. GREATON, 51 N. Main Street, Natick, Mass.

The Change of Life is the most critical period of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

WELCOME WORDS TO WOMEN

Women who suffer with disorders peculiar to their sex should write to Dr. Pierce and receive free the advice of a physician of over 40 years' experience—a skilled and successful specialist in the diseases of women. Every letter of this sort has the most careful consideration and is regarded as sacredly confidential. Many sensitively modest women write fully to Dr. Pierce what they would shrink from telling to their local physician. The local physician is pretty sure to say that he cannot do anything without "an examination." Dr. Pierce holds that these distasteful examinations are generally needless, and that no woman, except in rare cases, should submit to them.

It is the only medicine of its kind that is the product of a regularly graduated physician. The only one good enough that its makers dare to print its every ingredient on its outside wrapper. There's no secrecy. It will bear examination. No alcohol and no habit-forming drugs are found in it. Some unscrupulous medicine dealers may offer you a substitute. Don't take it. Don't trifle with your health. Write to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, President, Buffalo, N. Y.,—take the advice received and be well.

STALE PHRASES ARE NEEDED

Writer Who Expresses a Powerful Emotion Must Say What Has Been Said Countless Times.

Our dramatic critic, in his review of Sardou's play "Above Suspicion," said of one of the characters that "his lips were sealed," and remarked that such phrases necessarily accompany such plays. They do, indeed, and the use of them makes one understand the emotional quality of such plays better than the most elaborate analysis of them.

There are hundreds of phrases like this, containing metaphors both violent and stale, which are only used seriously by writers who snatch at the easiest means of expressing an emotion which they do not feel. For if a writer has a real emotion of his own to express he will either use a metaphor suggested to him by that particular emotion or none at all. This is a matter of instinct, not of literary art; for a fresh emotion will not be satisfied with stale phrases but will feel itself misrepresented by them. That is one reason why, when powerfully moved, we are often so inarticulate. We feel that commonplaces will not serve our turn, but we have nothing to put in their place. The writer's task is to be neither inarticulate nor commonplace. He must not be artless, nor must he give us bad art for good. If he has a new idea to express he is not tempted by stale phrases. For they are associated with emotions rather than with thoughts, since emotions are not discoveries, like new ideas, and when expressed in literature are valued, not for their novelty, but for the power with which they are expressed. Thus, a writer who expresses a new idea says what has never been said before, but a writer who wishes to express a powerful emotion has to say what has probably been said a thousand times, and by bad writers as well as good. These bad writers have burdened our memory with metaphors, some of them lifeless from the first, some killed by constant repetition, or in appropriate use; and their metaphors stay in our minds because they have been so often repeated. The good writer's mind is often infested with them, so that, before he can find the phrase he wants, he must reject half a dozen that he does not want. This is the penalty that he has to pay for living at a time when literature is old and language sophisticated. — London Times.

What might have been a serious accident happened one day recently while Jim Jacobs was out in the timber alone. As he was going through the thick brush, a bird hawk flew up and lit on a tree near by. He quickly took aim and pulled the trigger, but instead of the gun firing it exploded almost in his face and flew into nine pieces. A piece of the barrel and one spring he could not find. The gun was almost new and perfectly clean and the cause must have been a small stick or piece of dirt had dropped in the barrel as he was going thru the wood. Jim was lucky enough to receive only a few slight wounds on one hand, and some about the head and face. "O, lucky Jim."

GROWING CLEAN APPLES

Written for the Olympic-Leader.

As demonstrated by the county fairs at Bremerton and Port Townsend, large and clean apples can be produced on the west side of the Sound, and with less work than east of the mountains, where the orchards not only have to be irrigated, but continually cultivated as well, during the summer season. If the orchards of Clallam county were alternately disked and cultivated during the growing season every ten days up to August 15th, would go a long way toward solving the question of success against failure, and in a few years, with judicious spraying and thinning out surplus fruit on overbearing trees, scabby and misshaped fruits would belong to the past.

Extracts from the Horticulturist for October, by Prof. S. W. Sparks: Spraying experiments for the control of "black spot canker." Used commercial lime sulphur as winter spray about Nov. 1st. The solution was diluted to the 1 to 9 formula (5 gallons of solution to each 45 gallons of water). To this was added skimmed milk at the rate of 5 gallons to 50 gallons of spray. The object of the skimmed milk was to make the spray mixture stick. The result of this experiment was very satisfactory, a coating of the spray was still found on the twigs in July, and conclude that good results were obtained both for black spot canker and apple scab. Fruit growers of this vicinity are urged to try this cheap remedy this fall, but would recommend to use it stronger, by the 1 to 8 formula—5 gallons solution to 40 gallons water—adding the skimmed milk. The time to spray for preventation of black spot is now.

Yours for better fruit,
F. O. EKSTEDT,
Dist. Hort. Inspector.

The breeder of farm animals selects the best individuals of his stables or of his herd to reproduce his stock. The most successful farmer selects and saves the best ears of corn or the heaviest yielding wheat for his next years planting. How many of our potato growers pick out the best yielding hills of potatoes and save the tubers from these hills to grow their next years crop? The per cent of the growers who do this is very small. The average grower thinks life is too short to waste in such foolishness, yet life is long enough to grow small potatoes.

At the valley fair held at Puyallup a couple of weeks ago, much interest was shown in the potato display of the Experiment Station. About forty little piles of potatoes were shown, each being the entire product of one hill. The hills selected were from strong stalks, contained very few small potatoes and the tubers for the most part were smooth, even in shape and good size. The tubers from these hills will be used as our seed potatoes next year, and we will expect to have a much greater yield than if we picked our seed potatoes at random from the bin.

The grower who digs his crop by hand can easily make his hill selections when he harvests his potatoes, but if the crop is harvested with a potato digger or plowed out with a lister, the grower will be obliged to select and dig his vigorous hills just before harvesting. Generally, the hill which produces a great many stalks will also produce a great many potatoes. Select hills which produce good healthy stalks and smooth, even potatoes. The greater number of marketable tubers in each hill, the better, but a hill producing four tubers weighing eight ounces each should be preferred to one producing eight tubers weighing only four ounces each.

Just as the most desirable qualities may be produced in the horse or the hog, by careful selection, so may our yield of potatoes be increased by saving seed from the best producing hills.—J. L. Stahl, Horticulturist, Western Washington Experiment Station, Puyallup, Wash.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION IS FOR EVERYBODY

Of course if you are too young to read, or so old you have forgotten how, you may not enjoy the Youth's Companion. That is rather a sweeping statement, however, for hosts of children love to have the stories and jingles of the Children's Page read to them. There is many a grandfather and grandmother whose eyes are dim who like nothing better than to sit and listen to The Companion stories and articles. Many a blind person, and even those who in addition can neither speak nor hear have been cheered by The Companion, its contents having been communicated to them thru the fingertips of friends. The reading of The Youth's Companion is a pretty sure cure for all kinds of loneliness. Robinson Crusoe would have been a happier man if he could have had his Companion Thursday as well as his man Friday. Just send for the Prospectus for 1912 and sample copies of the paper.

We think you will agree, when you have read them, that no other paper gives quite so much of such a high quality as The Companion, and it costs only $1.75 now for the 52 weekly issues. On January 1, 1912, the subscription price will be advanced to $2.00.

The new subscriber receives a gift of The Companion's Calender for 1912, in ten colors and gold, and all the remaining issues of 1911 free from the time the subscription is received.

SMILE WHEN YOU LOSE.

Then Brace Up and Start Right In to Become a Winner.

Be as good a loser as you are a winner—a hard task to set a man, but not an impossible one. Many have met it. Those who have are those who win more than they lose, for nothing inspires success or victory like calmness in defeat or coolness under stress. It is true in business, in politics, in sports, in any sphere of competitive endeavor.

Not only that, but nothing is quite as disconcerting to one's opponent in one of life's contests as the ability to lose with a smile and well directed effort to regain the lost. Any man who has run a foot race or boxed or wrestled or played ball knows that.

But nobody has any time for the man who is forever lamenting his own loss or defeat. The world simply credits him with being what it terms a "grouch," which means a poor loser, and passes him by for a more agreeable man. Any one can be a good winner, but it takes a man to be a good loser.

The philosophy of life itself teaches that in all of its precepts. Some one has to lose. It may as well be you, perhaps, so far as the good of the world goes, as your neighbor. It makes for unselfishness to keep that in mind.—Omaha Bee.

FREEDOM OF THE CITY.

An Honor Which Had Its Birth In the Middle Ages.

The ceremony of presenting the freedom of the city as an honor arose in the middle ages, when such right was not acquired by mere domicile. No stranger could move into a medieval town and go into business, his own gainful occupation or the civic activities. First he must become enrolled in the guild of his trade, then he had to undergo an apprenticeship of full seven years before he could be admitted to its livery. Then only and thus only could he arrive at the freedom of his city.

As a reward for high deeds these medieval city republics sometimes conferred on such strangers as had served them well the freedom of the city by solemn act of the burgesses and liveries without the apprenticeship of servitude. Every such recipient of a city's freedom became at once a burgess, free to dwell, free to engage in trade, free to vote for the civic rulers and to aspire to the civic chair. The key was the visible sign of this freedom—the city gates, closed at sunset against the stranger and the foe, opened to the burgess' key at all hours, as the door of his own home.—Argonaut.

Wit "In Extremis."

Of the men of letters who lost their lives on the scaffold two at least died debonairly.

There was Montrose, poet and king's man in Scotland's king versus kirk business. On the morning of his execution Warristown, the covenanter, went to his cell, doubtless to make himself unpleasant. Montrose was combing out his curls.

"Why is James Graham so careful of his locks?'

Montrose smiled and made answer:

"So long as my head is my own I mean to see to it. When Warristown gets it he may deal with it as he likes."

At the scaffold Sir Thomas More asked the lieutenant of the tower to see him safe up the steps.

"I'll shift for myself coming down," the poet promised.—Youth's Companion.

Cecil Rhodes' Grave.

Cecil Rhodes, the "diamond king" and famous South African statesman, is buried in Africa, in obedience to his own wish, as expressed in the following words left in his will: "I admire the grandeur and loneliness of the Matoppas, in Rhodesia, and therefore I desire to be buried in the Matoppas, on the hill which I used to call the 'View of the World,' in a square to be cut in the rock on the top of the hill, covered with a plain brass plate with these words thereon: 'Here lie the remains of Cecil John Rhodes.'" Rhodes died March 26, 1902, at the age of forty-seven.

Windows of the Soul.

Eyes are bold as lions, roving, running, leaping, here and there, far and near. They speak all languages; they wait for no introduction; they are no Englishmen; ask no leave of age or rank; they respect neither poverty nor riches, neither learning nor power, nor virtue, nor sex, but intrude, and come again, and go through and through you in a moment of time. What inundation of life and thought is discharged from one soul into another through them!—Emerson.

Remarkable Case.

"How much your little boy resembles your husband!" said the cunning politician.

"I've always heard," she replied, "that people grow to look like those they are much with, but this is quite a remarkable case. We only adopted the little fellow last week."

In His Interest.

Jack—You know when Mabel rejected me last week I told you my troubles, and you promised to help me. Well, she accepted me last night. Am I to thank you for interceding for me? Cousin Belle—Not exactly, dear boy. I simply intimated to Mabel that I was after you myself.

REBEL VICTORIES IN CHINA CONTINUE

CANTON REPORTED TO HAVE FALLEN AFTER GREAT SLAUGHTER.

Revolutionists Prepared to March on Peking, According to London Advices—Throne Surrenders to Assembly With Inconceivable Loss of Dignity.

Canton has fallen into rebel hands after great slaughter and the revolutionists are preparing to march on Peking, according to reports in London and Shanghai.

A dispatch from Hongkong says the imperial fleet of gunboats under Admiral Sah Kong Ping has surrendered to the revolutionists.

Troops at Chentu, capital of Szechuen province, have mutinied and killed Chao Erh Feng, their commander, another report states.

The American legation asks more warships to be sent to Chinese waters to afford protection to Americans.

Native newspapers say positively that the emperor and his family are preparing to start for Mukden, where protection has been guaranteed by the Japanese, and that later they will be conducted to the United States.

Shanghai, Oct. 28—Chinese official telegrams report that Foochow has fallen and that the customs have been seized by the rebels. .

Foochow is one of the treaty ports and the capital of the province of Fokien. The population is about 700,000.

Throne Surrenders to Assembly.

Peking, Oct. 28— The throne has surrendered to Tsu Cheng Tiuan, China's national assembly, and in compliance with its demands, dismissed Sheng Hsuan Huai, minister of posts and communications; ordered Prince Ching, president of the cabinet, before a board of inquiry, where he doubtless will be severely dealt with; released from custody the president of the Szechuen provincial assembly and other leaders in the riots at Chengtu, and in fact agreed to all that the assembly asked, with lack of dignity inconceivable to Western observers.

A year ago the throne treated the national assembly almost with contumacy. Until even a month ago the throne, defiant of the people, issued edicts embodying drastic measures.

Grants Humiliating Demands.

Now the resolution of the newly convened assembly, carrying consequences of irremediable character, has been granted without a day's consideration.

The edict repeats over the throne's seal the allegations and charges made against the minister of posts and communications and others made by a heated, radical and controlled assembly, but Chinese affairs cannot be judged by Western standards. It will be considered here, however, that the throne acted wisely, that it recognized its defeat and submitted to force. Even the degraded ministers are not likely to bear serious ill will.

The appointment of Tang Shao Yi to succeed Sheng Hsuan Huai is believed to forecast the appointment of Yuan Shi Kai to the second office in the cabinet, if not to the premiership.

It is reported that Yuan already is negotiating with the rebels. Members of the legations who are old in experience in Chinese affairs, would not be surprised is the revolution terminated practically without further fighting, through the government granting complete and immediate constitutional government.

Murdock Leaves for Shankhai.

Washington, Oct. 28—Rear Admiral Murdock, commander-in-chief of the Asiatic squadron, has sailed from Manila on the Rainbow for Shanghai, and he will be followed in a few days by his flagship, the Saratoga. He will give his undivided attention to directing the movements of the American war vessels in Chinese waters so as to obtain the greatest measure of protection for Americans and Europeans.

It was said at the navy department that it would not be possible to add to the American fleets in the Chinese rivers at present, because there are no vessels attached to the Pacific fleet of sufficient draft to navigate these streams.

Plan Public Rest Room.

Kelso, Oct. 28.—The information of a stock company, which will buy or lease property to be used as a rest room for farmers, loggers and their families, was planned at a meeting held in Kelso yesterday afternoon. The idea is to establish a place that can be used for reading rooms, smoking roms, restaurant, etc.

Carton for Each Apple.

Okanogan, Oct. 28—The directors of the Okanogan Valley Publicity League have shipped fifty boxes of apples to New York for exhibit at the big land show. The safe arrival of the shipment is assured, as each apple was packed separately in a corrugated cardboard carton.

DISTANCE GOVERNS DISTRIBUTIVE RATE

PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION ANNOUNCES PRINCIPLE IT WILL FOLLOW.

Rates to Apply Alike to all Jobbing Centers, Being the Same East from Puget Sount as West from Spokane —Details To Be Withheld for the Present.

Olympia, Oct. 28—"When the new distributive rates for Washington are made public they will apply alike to all jobbing centers, being the same east from Puget Sound as west from Spokane," is the announcement made by the public service commission.

This state has already had its hearings, and while the exact rates will not be announced until after the Oregon commission and the interstate commerce commission rates are fixed, so that all may be in harmony, the principle upon which they will be based is outlined.

On Distance Basis.

The Washington commission has reached the decision that distributive rates shall be on a distance tariff basis; not on the general tariff basis, but on what might be termed a merchandise distance tariff designed for the purpose of forming distributive rates in this state.

While this commission is not prepared to make public the exact rates which have been drawn, because of the necessity of having them in harmony with the other rates to be promulgated, and the effect they might have on the jobbing business of Washington, they will apply equally out of all jobbing centers.

Lower Than Class Rates.

They will be lower than the special class and commodity rates, except where affected by water competition.

The new rates will provide the maximum and not the minimum that may be charged and can be made lower by the railroads, provided there is no discrimination shown.

It is expected that there will be substantial reductions in the long hauls and less on the short hauls, as the hearings brought out little complaint against rates for distances up to 100 miles, but there was much protest against distances over 100 miles.

BOGUE WILL DESIGN HARBOR FOR TACOMA

Tacoma, Oct. 28—Trustees of the Commercial Club and Chamber of Commerce decided to retain Virgil Bogue to prepare a comprehensive scheme for harbor improvements in Tacoma.

Mr. Bogue already has been retained to prepare plans for the Wapato waterway project.

The expenses of the work will be defrayed by the club and a committee will raise by subscription the money for expenses.

Fraser River Timber Sold.

Vancouver, B. C., Oct. 28—J. M. Kellie, of Revelstoke, is given as authority for the announcement that a syndicate of Montreal and Ottawa capitalists have purchased for $1,000,000 the timber holdings of the British Columbia Timbers Limited, on the south fork of the Fraser river above Fort George. The right-of-way of the Grand Trunk Pacific is said to pass through the timber.

FIRST VISIT TO EUROPE

ON THEIR WAY TO EUROPE

EVERY summer thousands of Americans make their initial trips across the Atlantic to tour Europe. All bad sailors know the moment when it is best to seek a chair and keep still, if the situation is to be saved. The man in the picture has reached this stage. All would probably be well had not the woman with the baby dropped the feeding-bottle. Her maid, in the background, is past hope. The man's duty is clear. But, then if he moves?

One of the most interesting features of an American's first European tour is the comparison of transatlantic customs in hotel and railway with those of the land of the brave and the home of the free. Many things that to the seasoned traveler have become commonplace long ago strike the tourist on his initial trip as highly amusing.

Col. Brotherton of Kentucky, for instance, had been recommended to a quiet Italian hotel. Returning late from San Carlo, where almost every tourist goes on his first night in Naples, he was amazed in passing along the corridor to see outside nearly every door in addition to the boots on the floor sundry dress skirts and trousers hung upon large branching brass hooks. A garcon who was sitting in the corridor tried in broken English to explain it was the custom for travelers to leave the clothing they had worn during the day outside their doors to be brushed. But the colonel was incredulous. "Never saw anything like it in America," he said. "Likely as not it's some sort of skin game, and all those fools will wake up in the morning and find their clothes stolen. Not I! I'll brush my own."

Wouldn't Leave Her Key.

Miss Clarissa Blythe of Vermont was perfectly astounded at having her chambermaid rush after her as she carefully deposited the key of her room in her beaded reticule, and exclaimed:

"But, madam! Please leave your key beside the door. I must have it to go in and do your room."

"But where is your passkey?" she demanded.

"I have none," the maid replied. "See," she said, pointing to the hook at the side of the door, the same hook dedicated to skirts and trousers, "you must hang your key here when you go out."

An Englishman who was sailing from Boston not long ago was reduced to one pair of really comfortable boots. These he placed outside his door to be polished on the eve of his departure, and he woke in the cold gray dawn to find his boots gone and not a porter in the hotel who could trace them. He was forced to descend in his slippers and buy a new pair of stiff, uncomfortable boots to wear to the steamer, and to this day he has not ceased to curse American hotels.

In Germany one of the up to date hotels has a little locker in every guest room between the bedroom and the corridor, with a door on either side. He opens the door in his room, puts in his trousers and boots or whatever clothing needs attention. The valet passes along the corridor, opens each door with his own pass key, and removes the clothing to brush it, returning it and locking the door carefully upon it, and when the owner awakes he has only to open his little door, and there are his clothes all ready for him.

The European bed always strikes the uninitiated American traveler as a huge joke. In France they commence to impress him with their height and narrowness and he looks dubiously at the enormous Turkey-red cotton "couvre-pied" of eiderdown which looks something like a mountain; and he wonders how he is ever going to bear all that extra weight on his person. But when he has slipped between the sheets and the grateful warmth communicates itself to his cold bones—if it is winter they are sure to be like icicles—he discovers that it is deceptively light and deliciously comfortable. In Switzerland the beds attain a little more height, but it is in Germany that they become of such an altitude as to necessitate a pair of steps to mount them.

Tricks Played on the Traveler.

Sometimes in European hotels the tourist is taken solemnly to one side and told that by paying a few francs or lire more he can have the royal bedchamber. A certain hotel in Sorrento, where a dozen or more royal heads have lain in one season, is even more generous, for if the rooms are empty they make no extra charge. And the traveler lives to recount when he is back on his native heath how his cheek pressed the same pillow that had been used by the little queen of Holland or the king of Saxony. But that is not a purely European custom, for to this day in a certain Boston hotel the sacred chamber occupied by Prince Henry of Prussia is listed at about $10 a day more than any other room in the house.

Most American travelers on their first trips abroad are astounded when upon the day of their departure from a hotel they are presented with their bill by the head waiter instead of by the landlord or by his chief clerk. But it is the custom and this important individual is thus assured of his tip.

The traveler thinks it a little strange that coffee is always extra at luncheon and dinner, but when he orders coffee, at an average of 5 or 6 cents extra, the cup, it is freshly made expressly for him and is not the coffee that has stood for hours in the pot. Another thing that strikes him as funny is the fact that there are elevators to go up, but that he cannot use them to go down. One European sign in a small hotel reads: "No one is allowed to descend in the elevator but invalids and the aged." In the larger hotels the lifts are used as they are in America, but so leisurely are they that one usually prefers to run downstairs on shank's mare.

Economy in lights is another trait, and where, as usual, there are two electric lights in the room, one over the bed to read by and another in the ceiling, one cannot be turned on without turning the other off. But a young American engineer solved the difficulty by unscrewing the porcelain cap of the switch and sticking in a hairpin to make the connection. He had two lights, and no one was ever the wiser. And his conscience? It never troubled him at all; it was one of those elastic ones you read about.

It does not take long to remember, after you once know, that if you want to buy salt in Italy you must go to a tobacco shop to get it; for both salt and tobacco are government monopolies. And it is a pleasure to learn that in France you can buy stamps and postcards at tobacco shops, which are under government jurisdiction there as well. Also that in both countries you can send telegrams at as low a rate as 14 cents for ten words, and that special delivery letters will go for 6 cents in Paris if you remember to write across your envelope "Pneumatique," which means that the letter will be shunted through a pneumatic tube in no time at all, and delivered almost as soon as a telegram.

Hard Luck.

"I hear the play you wrote was a failure."

"Yes. I always was unlucky."

"Do you think it was merely a case of luck?"

"Certainly it was. It happened that the leading critic of the town in which the play was produced wore a pair of new shoes to the opening performance. How was it possible in the circumstances for us to get a fair write up?"

One Man's Way

By KATE CLEVES

Ann Rose looked at Dick Foster from innocent gray eyes. "And is it as bad as all that?" she asked lightly when he had concluded his tale of love with a hint that life would be unbearable without her.

"As bad as what?" he asked quickly, resenting the half-hidden raillery in her voice.

"That life will be empty without poor little me?"

"Oh—that! Why, Miss Ann, you know we always add that—for good measure." There was a hurt look in her eyes as he arose from the bench and looked down at her.

Ann bit her lip and hung her head. She hated to dismiss Dick Foster, but after this, of course, he would join the train of the other disconsolates. "I am very sorry," she began with just the right degree of pathos in her voice when his laugh cut her words short.

"Well?" she asked haughtily, rising and facing him.

"I beg your pardon, Ann, but I will spare you further pain. You were about to say that you are sorry that you cannot love me in return but that you will ever be my life-long friend."

There was a curious hesitation in her voice when she answered. "Why—yes—I believe I was about to make that remark. How clever you are, Mr. Foster, but I suppose you've had lots of experience," she smiled ironically.

"Heaps," he answered with more cheerfulness than Ann Rose deemed proper under the circumstances. Indeed, Dick Foster's proposal of marriage had gone off in an entirely different manner from what Ann had planned for. Ann Rose was a most thoroughgoing little flirt and the list of her disconsolate suitors would have made a long voting list.

"I'm rather popular that way, you know."

"What way?"

"Oh, being refused; you see I am easily flattered and if a girl acts as if she were interested in me I up (or down, if you please) and propose to her on the spot! Witness this evening."

"And so I acted as if I were interested in you?" stormed Ann turning on him like a small whirlwind.

"Yes," he said, looking her steadily in the eyes; "you did."

Ann Rose laughed softly, but only a loving eye would have discerned the trembling pulse in her pretty white throat and heard the tiniest suspicion of a quaver in her voice when she spoke again.

"Then you were merely flattered by my interest? And the rest of it—was false? You didn't mean it?"

He hesitated a moment. "What part do you refer to?" He had folded his arms across his broad chest and was looking down at her from sparkling dark eyes.

She flushed rosily. "You know—about your—regard for me." And the pulse in her throat fluttered more widely.

"Regard? Was that the word?"

"Love then," she flashed. "What difference does it make when you didn't mean any of it?"

Foster was silent. His eyes seemed to be reading her face, now slightly turned from him. He scanned the crown of golden brown hair, the delicate arch of dark brows, the curling sweep of long lashes against her cheek and he did not overlook the pulse at her throat. His eyes grew tender, but his lips did not lose their decision.

He held out his hand. "Perhaps you will say good-bye and wish me God-speed," he said quietly.

She turned quickly. "You are not going away?"

"Merely for a few months. My newspaper has ordered me to the Mexican border."

"Will there be fighting and danger?"

"I'm afraid not," taking her hand. "Good-bye."

"Good-bye and good luck," returned Ann, wondering why he did not respond to the friendly pressure of her hand.

There was a vague little chill at her heart as she furtively watched him striding down the street, his tall form towering above the other men. "I hate him—how I hate him!" she cried with sudden passion as she turned back to the room.

So it was whispered about that the invulnerable Dick Foster had succumbed to the wiles of Ann Rose and that she had sent him to join the great army of the rejected. People shook their heads and prophesied disaster for witching Ann.

"She'll meet her match some day," they told each other and finally the remark reached Ann's ears. When she reached home she locked herself in her room and drenched her pillow with tears.

Several months afterward Dick Foster came home, browner, graver, bigger than ever, but he did not go to see Ann Rose until she sent for him.

"I want to hear about the war," she said as she shook hands with him.

"There wasn't a real war, so there is nothing to relate," he smiled down at her.

Ann didn't like that detached smile. It savored of indifference to her own charms and she had noted it before in other old suitors when they had come to announce their engagement to another girl.

"I suppose you will stay home now," she suggested as she gave him a cup of tea.

"I must," he said frankly. "I'm going to be married, you know, and there's a lot to do beforehand."

"Congratulations," returned Ann Rose without an instant's hesitation. "Is it to be soon?"

"Thanks. On the nineteenth of next month," answered Foster promptly.

He arose and set his cup and saucer on the table. Again he was looking down at Ann in that curious, detached way and she was conscious that he saw her paleness and that he noted she had grown thinner during his absence. This vexed her proud spirit and she spoke with added vivacity.

"You will give up your nomadic life now and become a staid reporter—or an editor—or something like that?"

He laughed uneasily. "Oh, no, I think not. We shall travel wherever my paper sends me. I believe I am to be ordered to Turkey before long."

She drew a sharp breath. "Turkey! The most fascinating country in the world. How I long—" she paused and bit her lip angrily.

"It's likely to be hot at this season." Foster covered her embarrassment.

Ann Rose stood there, a brave smile on her face, telling herself that all the tortures she was undergoing were merely the justly deserved punishment of a coquette. She remembered the stern warnings of a maiden aunt who made her home with the Roses and she knew that the prophecy had been fulfilled.

"You'll suffer yet, Ann," Miss Laidlaw had groaned dismally. "Just think of all the estimable young men whom you have driven to drink or suicide."

"Why should I think of them?" Ann retorted indignantly. "Not one man has ever been driven to ruin through love of me nor has one ever committed suicide."

"Ann Rose, you are shocking—it is almost er—sacrilegious to speak of marriage in that manner!"

But Ann had wickedly laughed and flitted away out of earshot, but not soon enough to miss hearing her aunt's prophecy that one day the flirt would fall in love with some man who would break her heart.

"Fiddle-de-dee, I have no heart," muttered Ann Rose over her shoulder and had promptly forgotten all about the incident until it came back to her this evening as she faced Dick Foster and heard him say that he was going to be married.

The door opened suddenly and Mr. Rose thrust in an excited red face framed in white hair.

"Did you ask to see me, Foster?" he demanded hurriedly.

For answer Dick reached forth a long arm and dragged the astonished banker into the room.

"Yes, sir," he said respectfully. "Ann and I love each other and want to get married. What do you say, sir?"

Like a flash his arm was about Ann's swaying form and he caught her close to his heart as he faced Mr. Rose's surprised, but not displeased face. Ann clung to his arm.

"What do I say, eh? Well, I say that any respectable young chap who can catch my butterfly deserves to keep her. Now I've just ten minutes to make that Chicago train and the car is at the door." He wrung Dick's hand, patted his shoulder and then kissed his daughter hurriedly. He dashed from the room to once more thrust his head into the room.

"I forgot—bless you, my children," he shouted and disappeared.

Rousing Response.

At a provincial theater not long since the curtain rose on an empty stage in the second act,, and by and by a meek looking young man with a dust coat slung over his arm came on and loudly called: "Uncle, uncle!"

According to the book of the play he should have received no answer to his call, and after an appropriate pause he should have gone on with the monologue. But a graceless "god" in the gallery took upon himself to answer the actor.

"All right, I'm coming in a moment; how much do you want on it?" he shouted.

The effect on the audience may be imagined.—Tit-Bits.

FRIDAY, NOV. 1, 1911

The Port Townsend people are waging a hard fight to retain the custom house at that port instead of having it transferred to Seattle.

Mayor Mead has appointed W. F. Delabarre, E.E. Seevers, L. M.Campbell, Jno. Hansen and Frank Fisher delegates to the 19th National Irrigation Congress, meeting at Chicago December 5th to 9th.

Lumbermen of the Northwest in session in Seattle last Friday favored the closing of all mills on the Pacific coast for a period of thirty days, beginning Dec. 15, in order to reduce the lumber output and thereby bring about an improvement in the present low price of lumber.

Samuel Hadlock, one of the pioneer millmen of the Sound country, was here from Hadlock the last of the week on a visit to the power plant. At a little impromptu gathering to meet him, he promised his hearty support to the electric line, saying that we must not lose sight of the fact that the main thoroughfare will eventually be on this side of the sound.

The ladies of the Reading Club have had a garbage can installed at the school grounds in hopes that the children will be trained to throw their waste papers in it instead of scattering them broadcast. A better civic work cannot be done than to train the children to take a pride and interest in keeping the school buildings and grounds neat and attractive.

The Aberdeen Chamber of Commerce has served notice on the Southwest Washington Development League that its assessments are not satisfactory. At a meeting of the Chamber a resolution was adopted declaring it to be the sense of that body that the assessment levied against Aberdeen is out of proportion to the business received and that the chamber will not affiliate further with the association unless an adjustment can be made.

If you are in doubt about whom to vote for councilman of the Fourth ward, don't forget Mr. Elliott. He is a Port Angeles man, is one of our oldest residents, has a home here and pays taxes, and he will stand without hitching. You can't vote for a better man that Councilman Elliott. He has served faithfully and well one term and, in all fairness, is entitled to a second term. He ought to get a big vote because he is a good man for the job, and for the people—honest, conservative and intelligent—as well as because his home is here and he expects that this shall be his permanent home, and is more familiar with the needs of the ward that any other candidate. Get busy, analyze the foregoing, and vote intelligently.

The city registry books will be closed Monday evening, November 6, until after the primary election, or until Wednesday morning, Nov. 8th, when they will again be opened for registration until November 15th, when they will be closed permanently until after the city election, December 5. If you have not already registered, and expect to vote at the primary election next Tuesday, you must register before Monday night. The total number registered when our reporter visited the clerk's office yesterday was 787, of these 280 were women. This is only about three-fourths of those entitled to register.

At Davenport, this state, where a woman is a candidate for mayor, the registration is nearly equal as between the men and women voters, showing that the women of that place are deeply interested in the approaching election when one of their number comes before the voters as a candidate. Every woman in Angeles who wishes to vote at the primary and has not registered should lose no time in doing so, as there is always a rush of men voters at the last hour to register.

T. T. Aldwell entertained General Maus, his aide de camp, Mr. Whitney, Colonel Bailey, and Captain Hilton, who came to Angeles in a government steamer Thursday from Townsend to visit the Olympic Power plant. Mr. Aldwell also took them to the lakes.

We notice in the Port Townsend Leader that a Patron's Association is to be formed there to awaken a greater interest in the public schools.

MADE PROGRESS A POSSIBILITY

Councilman after councilman has been elected on the platform of progression only to find themselves helpless misfits in a position requiring ability and common sense. The exceptions are so few that, like the man who built our present electric light plant, they become landmarks in the progress of the city.

Among these exceptions, Councilman Elliott of the Fourth ward is conceded high rank. He is spoken of in the highest terms by the other city officials, who are familiar with his record, and by everyone in the city who has been benefitted by the improvements he has made possible—everyone except a few misguided individuals who are working for certain of the special privilege and corporate interests.

The progressive man is the man who does things—the man who makes improvement possible by providing increased revenues. The conservative man's first thought would be to see those revenues well expended.

Prior to Councilman Elliott's time it was the custom to appropriate certain amounts for expenditure on certain streets. The money spent, no man save the street commissioner himself could tell how wisely. One of Mr. Elliott's first moves was to require the commissioner to return an itemized report — and the day of wasted funds on city streets was at an end. No future commissioner can neglect his work; he must make good for his records show for themselves and he holds his position only at the pleasure of the mayor and council. Had this common,ordinary, practical business method been in use by the city in years past, hundreds if not thousands of dollars might have been saved. This is cited as one instance in point of the value of conservatism.

During Councilman Elliott's first term, now coming to a close, more sidewalks have been built in Port Angeles than for years prior thereto, and the Fourth ward, owing to Mr. Elliott's progressiveness, has secured more miles of new sidewalk than it had of old sidewalk, all taken together, at the beginning of his term. The fact is self-evident that people will not build walks, good walks, unless they be laid continuously along the block and street. To do this the city must make and pay for the survey, it must build the crossings, and it must advance the money to lay sidewalk for those property owners who can't, or won't.

Over twelve hundred dollars has been expended by the city to build sidewalks in front of private property, and this expense, together with that for surveys and crossings, could not have been incurred had Elliott not been elected councilman. Had it not been for his progressiveness, which caused him to find ways and means of doing things, these miles of sidewalks would not have been built. The only reason why the city did not make greater progress in this direction was because it had to wait until some of this money could be returned to the treasury along with other taxes against the property. Some of the very men who are howling progress today owe the city for the building of sidewalks in front of their property, and by not paying their debts are clods in the path of progress.

While other cities have been creating assessment districts for the improvement of streets, and becoming attractive to people in search of homes in a more congenial climate, Angeles has done little or nothing. It costs several hundred dollars to get an assessment district under way and the money may be practically lost to the city if the project fails in consummation. Angeles has been unable to create assessment districts because there have been no funds for preliminary expenses.

Between eight and twelve months must elapse between the time of taking the first step toward forming an assessment district, and the actual beginning of work on the street, and every step entails its expense. The Francis street project was started in June, and work cannot be commenced until January or February. The council is on record as favoring the improvement of Lincoln street, as soon as there is money available for the preliminary expense. The cost of this improvement has been taken into consideration in making the estimates for next year.

Neither of these projects could have been undertaken without crippling other equally necessary lines of work had Mr. Elliott not been elected councilman.

Mr. Elliott, believing that in the improvement of Front street lies the foundation for the improvement of the rest of the city, has been the leader in the effort that has been made to accomplish something in the Second ward. He has failed only thru lack of sufficient support.

As a direct result of Mr. Elliott's election, and by virtue of his own ordinance introduced by himself and forced thru the council, the city's receipts will be increased by nearly ten thousand dollars during the four years of his two terms. Yet there are many of us who believe that this sum, with all that its expenditure means for the advancement of the city, will be of lesser value than the total of his other services. It is a burning shame and a disgrace to the people of the ward and the town that such service is not to receive the approbation of a unanimous nomination.
