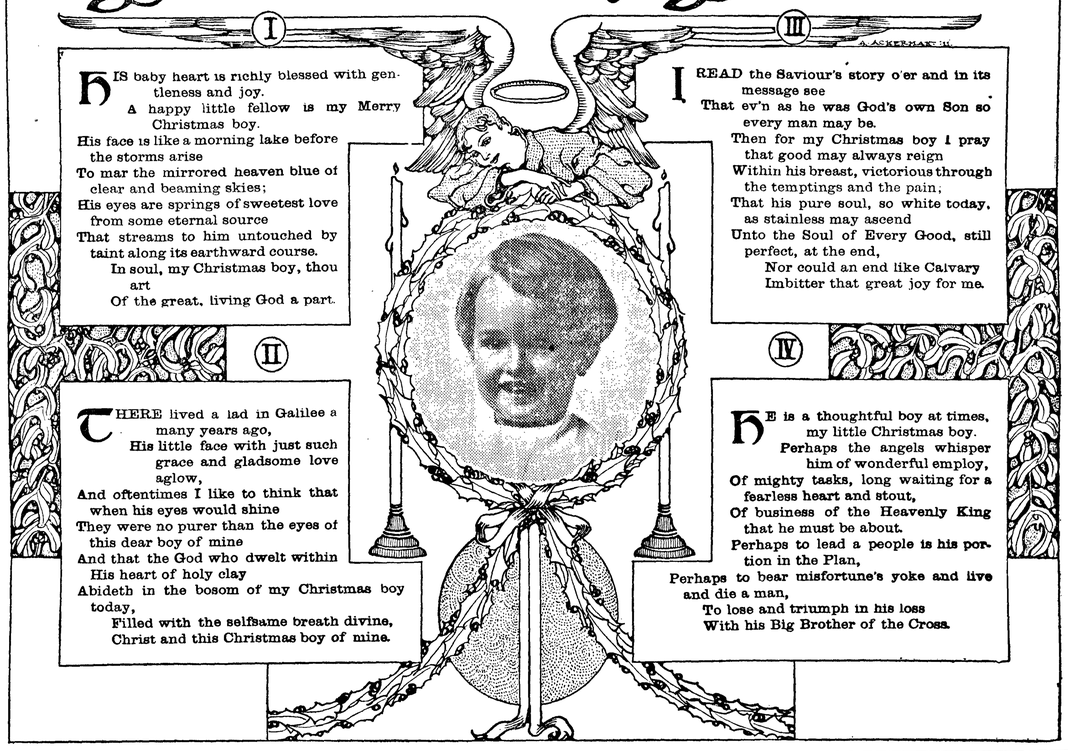
My Christmas Boy by Leonard H. Robbins.



I

HIS baby heart is richly blessed with gentleness and joy.
A happy little fellow is my Merry Christmas boy.
His face is like a morning lake before the storms arise
To mar the mirrored heaven blue of clear and beaming skies;
His eyes are springs of sweetest love from some eternal source
That streams to him untouched by taint along its earthward course.
In soul, my Christmas boy, thou art
Of the great, living God a part.

II

THERE lived a lad in Galilee a many years ago,
His little face with just such grace and gladsome love aglow,
And oftentimes I like to think that when his eyes would shine
They were no purer than the eyes of this dear boy of mine
And that the God who dwelt within His heart of holy clay
Abideth in the bosom of my Christmas boy today,
Filled with the selfsame breath divine,
Christ and this Christmas boy of mine.

III

I READ the Saviour's story o'er and in its message see
That ev'n as he was God's own Son so every man may be.
Then for my Christmas boy I pray that good may always reign
Within his breast, victorious through the temptings and the pain;
That his pure soul, so white today, as stainless may ascend
Unto the Soul of Every Good, still perfect, at the end,
Nor could an end like Calvary Imbitter that great joy for me.

IV

HE is a thoughtful boy at times, my little Christmas boy.
Perhaps the angels whisper him of wonderful employ,
Of mighty tasks, long waiting for a fearless heart and stout,
Of business of the Heavenly King that he must be about.
Perhaps to lead a people is his portion in the Plan,
Perhaps to bear misfortune's yoke and live and die a man,
To lose and triumph in his loss
With his Big Brother of the Cross.

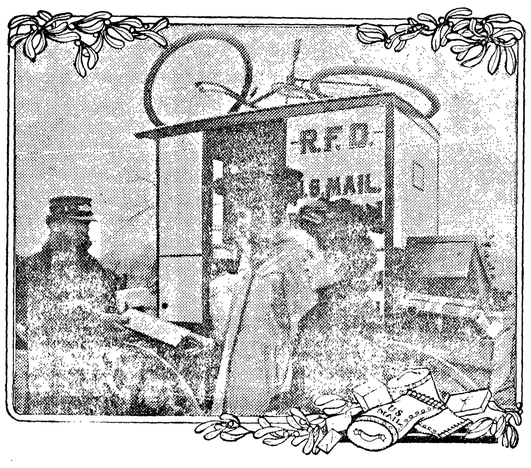
NEW conditions have developed a new sort of Santa Claus in the United States. His initials are R. F. D. He is the rural free delivery mail carrier. Mail hauler is the fitter way to describe him, for as a rule he hauls the mail in a light spring wagon. At Christmas time many rural carriers require an extra spring wagon or buggy and an extra driver to handle the rush of Santa Claus mail both going and coming.

The rural free delivery system, which started but a few years ago, has grown to great proportions. It is said that there are now in the United States half as many rural mail carriers as there were men in the regular army at the beginning of our war against Spain. But not all of these carriers are men. There are many women driving rural routes. Whether man or woman, the rural mail agent must serve as Santa Claus to scores of families at Christmas. Maybe he (or she) likes it, and maybe he doesn't. All that depends. Frequently the farmers and their wives and daughters become Santa Clauses to the carrier, and that helps the R. F. D. Santa Claus to get over his vexation when he finds that he has sixteen hours of delivery to do in eight hours' work.

A few days before Christmas the incoming bundles begin to pile up in the carrier's wagon bed. They are presents from the farmer's son who has gone to the city and grown rich or from the daughter who married the Hon. Mr. Blank and lives in the Clover Cliff mansion. Or perhaps Mary Susanna, who is teaching school in the next state and can't afford to come home for the holidays, has spent some of her little hoard of money for Christmas gifts for the home folks. Wherever they come from, all those packages and bundles must be delivered. The R. F. D. man or woman must be the general Santa Claus of the route traveled.

On the trip back to town bundles for the outgoing mails are gathered up. There is the pair of thick warm socks which mother has knit for the boy away at college or trying to become famous in the city. There are presents also for the schoolteaching daughter, for Brother John and Aunt Mary and for the little ones who must be remembered. The mail wagon is heaped with outgoing packages.

But this is not all. Santa Claus, R. F. D., would be glad if it were. Nowadays the rural free deliverer is empowered to write money orders and to register letters. That means lots of work for the farmers' Santa Claus. Many persons send money through the mails as Christmas presents. Many also buy presents through the mail order houses in the big cities. The carrier must stop and write the money orders. Sometimes he may find in a rural delivery box tacked to the side of a tree a note to the effect that the folks up at the house want him to register a letter. The house may be a mile off the regular route. Up to the house this hard worked Santa Claus drives, or if the road is very bad he may have to walk. The same side trip must be taken when he has a registered letter to deliver to a farmer whose home is off the route. Registered letters must be delivered and "signed for," as the mail box nailed to the black oak tree at the roadside can't sign.



On Christmas day or perhaps the day before the carrier who has been a real good Santa Claus and hasn't grumbled because his work has taken him far into the night for some days back gets his reward. The farmers' boys or girls meet him at the gate as he drives along, presenting him with the choicest pumpkins raised during the season, with a big chicken or turkey or perhaps with a warm muffler made by the motherly housewife who has watched the R. F. D. man driving past day by day in the chilly air Thus Santa Claus, R. F. D., who may have children of his own at home, gets presents to carry down his own chimney.

A CHRISTMAS NIGHT IN CALABRIA.

By PAUL LOUIS COURIER.

[Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.]

ONE day I was traveling in Calabria. I had as companion a young man who had had less experience than I had in this little known part of Calabria. He was one of the most careless and happy persons in the world

In these mountains the roads seem to be precipices, down which our horses slid and plunged dangerously. My comrade went first, taking a path which seemed to him to be shorter and easier than the regular road, which, however, could not have been worse. In doing this we became lost, and night was fast approaching. We had hoped to reach the railroad which would take us to civilization, as I termed it, where we could spend our Christmas more pleasantly than we now expected to.

As long as it was light enough we struggled along, and suddenly, just as it grew too dark to see anything twenty feet away, we came to a hut black and low. It looked sinister to me, but Jules was so glad that he just shouted.

In answer to his shout the door opened, and we saw a whole family gathered around a table on which was a white cloth.

"Come in, come in," said the oldest man of the party, but his looks were far from being as inviting as his words. He was black with the penetrating blackness of dry charcoal, but as we were very weary and hungry and our horses worn out we accepted the invitation. There were fine cabbage soup, baked potatoes and a chicken fricassee, with home baked bread such as falls in one's hands but too rarely. For dessert we had some chocolate, while the children were hurried off to bed after having placed their little wooden shoes by the side of the chimney.

The horses were well taken care of, and Jules was laughing and singing with the children until they were taken out, and then he gave himself up to telling the men, of whom there were four, of our adventures. One man in particular struck me on account of his somber silence. He spoke to no one and eyed us in a sort of sullen enmity.

This was a charcoal burner's home, and the man who owned this house was the one who seemed so somber. The old man was his father. The woman finished her work and brought out a few cheap toys and some bonbons and a few other little things such as mothers manage to find no one knows where or how. The little shoes were filled, and we saw that all were sleepy. We, too, being so weary, were willing to retire, so the old man took us up a ladder to a loft above the room where we had been sitting.

To reach our sleeping room we climbed a ladder and there found a sort of pallet of straw, clean, and with sufficient covering.

In this attic I saw by the feeble light afforded by a homemade candle quantities of dimly outlined things hanging from the rafters, but could not make out exactly what they were. In the dimness I thought they looked like men hung along there. There were rats, for I saw one. I have a horror of rats, and the thought that one might run across my face kept me awake. Even had my mind been free from other fears I should still have lain awake long after Jules was sleeping heavily. I could not sleep, so filled was my mind with the recollection of the tales I had heard of the lawlessness of these charcoal burners, who were but brigands after all.

I lay close to the chimney, which made the place quite warm, and soon I found the voices of those below

Is There a Santa Claus?

Once a little girl wrote this letter to Charles A. Dana, the great editor of the New York Sun:

Dear Editor: I am eight years old. Some of my friends say there is no Santa Claus. Papa says: "If you see it in The Sun it is so." Please tell me the truth. Is there a Santa Claus?

Virginia O. Hanlon.

And the editor of The Sun, mighty man of invective and sarcasm, became "even as a little child," and wrote the following charming reply, than which in all the realm of childhood sentiment there is nothing sweeter:

Virginia: Your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They will not believe except they see.

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus.

He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give to your life its highest beauties and joy.

Alas, how dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus. It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias. There would be no childlike faith, no poetry, no romance to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.

You might get your papa to hire men to watch all the chimneys on Christmas eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down, what would that prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus. The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men see. Nobody can see or imagine all the wonders that are unseen and unseeable in this world.

You may tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest that ever lived can ever tear apart. Only faith, fancy, poetry love and romance can push aside that curtain and view the picture, supernal beauty and glory beyond.

It is all real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing so real and abiding.

No Santa Claus? Thank God, he lives and lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia—nay ten times ten thousand years from now—he will continue to make glad the hearts of childhood.

By trying to teach others you will learn a few things yourself.

Working on the Right-of-Way

W. F. Delabarre, Vice Pres. Citizen's National Bank, Willard Brumfield, abstractor and attorney, Lewis Levy, real estate, J. C. Hansen, merchant and county commissioner, W. B. Ritchie, county attorney, Maurice Fisher, abstractor, and J. W. Lindsay, Gen. Counsel Seattle, Port Angeles and Lake Crescent R.R., comprise the committee that has been selected to obtain right-of-way thru Clallam county for Mr. Morrow. Being representative business men, and men in whom the people of this section have confidence, they should experience no difficulty in the work cut out for them

The deeds for right-of-way are to be put in local banks, in escrow, and will not be turned over to the railroad people until a contract for grading has been let and the money actually secured for the entire line.

The building of this railroad will enhance the value of the lands thru which it will pass by one hundred per cent or more within the next year or two, and every resident landowner thus far seen, appreciating this fact, has been more than willing to grant free right-of-way.

Four crews of surveyors are now in the field and the full seventy miles will be selected and grade stakes driven by the first of February, ready for the contractors.

Solduck's Keel Laid Tuesday

The keel of the new steamer intended for the Seattle Straits route, was laid by workmen of the Moran company in Seattle Tuesday. The vessel, which is to be named the Solduck, will have a speed of sixteen knots and will be built at a cost of $250,000. She will be ready for service June 1st and will be at once placed on her regular route.

The Solduck has been designed especially for the Sound and Straits trade and will probably be the finest passenger steamer traveling these waters. Her construction has been found necessary to accommodate the rapidly growing travel of the lower Sound and Straits, and she has been given the name of the famous hot springs in the Solduck Valley, whose fame is having much to do with stimulating tourist travel toward the Olympic country. The Inland Navigation company, for whom the the vessel is being built, in anticipation of a heavy travel the coming summer and the Solduck will place the company in a good position to care for the trade.

Representative Humphrey urges before the house rules committee the adoption of his resolution creating joint committee to investigate the foreign shipping combine. Mr. Humphrey declared that 90 per cent of the $3,500,000,000, commerce of the United States was carried in foreign ships belonging to trusts and combines and that there was no competition between these ships.

Council Grants New Franchise

The principal business before the Council Tuesday evening was consideration of the Morrow railroad and wharf franchise. The ordinance committee reported back the purported ordinance granting to G. W. Morrow, the right to construct and operate a railroad upon certain streets in Port Angeles, with the recommendation that said substituted ordinance be passed without amendment. After some discussion, Councilman Grubb moved and the motion carried, that these words be added to Section 28 of ordinance: "One track on Francis, Lincoln, and Cedar streets" It is understood that an ordinance or resolution will be presented to the council at its next meeting, reserving docking privileges on these streets to the city.

The ordinance was then placed on its final passage, Councilman Myers, Dustman, Grubb, Gardner, Elliot, and Fitzgerald voting aye, and Councilman O'Brien, no.

In some respects the new grant is most unwise, but so convinced are the members of the council that we are going to get a road this time, that as they explained, they are willing to grant practically any thing that is asked to help along. According to the terms of the franchise work must continue along preliminary lines; after July first, at least $50,000 must be expended in actual construction work each month, and the railroad must be completed to a railroad connection and be at least 70 miles in length, extending from the west side of Puget Sound to or near Lake Crescent in two years. As the final vote was taken, Mr. Lindsay, attorney for the company, announced that the contract for the money to build the road would be signed up by the bonding house on the morrow, and that the council's wise action had brought about that result. The action of the council was taken after many conferences during the week, private and public, one with the electric people, one with Mr. Earles, one joint session with the city council and a committee from the Commercial Club, and finally the getting together of the two attorneys representing the city and the railroad. The citizens will now take up the work of getting the right of way and the belief is general that we are to get a railway shortly.

Smashing all records and going far beyond the wildest guesses and expectations of everybody in the business, the total pack of canned salmon put up on Puget sound during 1911 totaled 1,625,000 cases. Figures compiled by Secretary Crawford, of the Puget Sound Salmon Canners' Association, show that the 1911 pack was far ahead of the output of any previous year. The pack was twice as large as the most optimistic packers looked for at the beginning of the season. Packers say it is doubtful if any one expected 1,625,000 cases of salmon would ever be packed in one year by Puget sound cannerymen. The value of this pack will run close to $8,125,000.

It is the conviction of the government that the McNamaras were not the only ones implicated in the fiendish crime of blowing up the building of the Los Angeles Times, but that they were inspired by someone higher and greater and were furnished with means to accomplish their ends. The government has not abandoned the case but will follow it up and try to secure the conviction of the instigators. An instigator is just as guilty as the prepetrator and should have punishment as severe as a man who is convicted of committing the crime. Society and business demand this as a matter of protection

The senate on Tuesday, by a unanimous vote formally ratified President Taft's notification to Russia of the termination of the treaty of 1832. Senator Raynor of Maryland, made a stirring appeal for termination of treaty because of discriminations against American citizens of Jewish faith in connection with passport privileges. The house will concur.

"He that giveth unto the poor lendeth unto the Lord." Is that not sufficient endorsement for any man to loosen up and make some unfortunate happy at Christmas? Then think how good you will feel yourself!

Section 27. Beginning at a point on Broadway avenue, thence in a northeasterly direction along Valley street to the wharf, crossing Fifteenth, Fourteenth, Thirteenth, Twelfth, Eleventh, Tenth, Ninth, Eighth, Seventh, Sixth, Fifth, Fourth, Third, Second, First and Front streets, to end of dock.

Section 28. The construction and operation of a single track under this ordinance shall not be construed as a waiver of abandonment of the right to construct and operate additional tracks thereafter all of which rights, privileges and authorities are hereby granted, subject to all conditions, restrictions, specifications and requirements in the ordinance expressed. Provided, however, that said G. W. Morrow, his successors or assigns, shall not construct to exceed one track on Francis, Lincoln and Cedar streets and two such tracks on Front, First, Second and Third streets. And that the main line of said railroad that may be laid down on Front, First, Second and Third streets shall be, as near as may be, on the center lines of said streets.

Section 29. The grant in this ordinance contained is made expressly subject to the rights of the city of Port Angeles to retain the same control of the streets, avenues and alleys in, along and across which railway track shall be laid down as over other streets, avenues and alleys in said city, and shall have the right at all times by general ordinance to regulate the speed of locomotives and trains within the limits of the right of way herein granted, and the maximum period of time for which such locomotives, cars and trains shall be allowed to blockade travel along and across the streets embraced in this grant, or intersecting streets and shall have such further control and police power over such rights of way as the city ordinances now or hereafter permit, and the city reserves to itself and its grantees the right to carry all water mains, sewer mains, gas pipes, wires, conduits and other public utilities underneath or wires above any and all of the tracks herein authorized, which right shall be exercised however, so as to interfere as little as practicable with the use of said tracks and so as to leave the right of way occupied hereby restored to as good condition as prior to any exercise of such rights by said city.

Section 30 That said grantee, G. W. Morrow, his successors or assigns, in and by accepting the grants, privileges and benefits conferred by this ordinance, covenants for himself, his successors or assigns with the City of Port Angeles, that he will at all times keep and save harmless the said City of Port Angeles from and against all liability, loss, cost, damage, trouble or expense which may at any time arise or occur by reason of his appropriation of any real estate or other property for the right of way or other purposes, by reason of the construction, maintenance operation or running of the cars of said C. W. Morrow, his successors and assigns, along any of its streets, alleys and public places, or by reason of anything that may be done by said grantee, his successors or assigns and shall prosecute and defend in all actions arising in relation thereto.

Section 31. That whenever said City of Port Angeles shall cause any or all of the streets over which a right of way is herein granted to be graded, the said G. W. Morrow, his successors or assigns, shall change or alter his tracks and grade all of his right of way which shall then be in use, covered by said railway, and for one foot on either side thereof, so as to conform to the grade of said streets as established by the City, at the cost of said Morrow, his successors or assigns, and without any cost or expense to the City, provided, however, that such alterations shall interfere as little as possible with the practical operation of said railway and said G. W. Morrow, his successors or assigns, shall pave or plank as the case may be, the area above described, in the streets used by him, so as to conform to any paving or planking done by the city of the balance of the streets over which said road shall run, and no rails shall be elevated above the streets as so graded or paved as aforesaid.

Section 32. That nothing herein shall be construed to prevent the extension of any streets, or wharves, onto, over or across the right of way hereinbefore described, including that portion between Oak and E streets.

Section 33. That in the use of the tracks authorized by this ordinance said grantee, his successors and assigns, shall have the right to use electric, steam or other power, as it or they may deem suitable, subject to the lawful and reasonable control and regulation of the City of Port Angeles.

Section 34 That the right of way and all the rights, privileges and authorities granted by this ordinance, and all benefits hereof, shall be assignable by said grantee, his successors or assigns, as he or they may at any time see fit, either as an entirety or as respects any one or more of the tracks or parts of the tracks embraced within the scope of such grants, provided that written notice of any or all of such assignments shall be filed with the City Clerk within ten (10) days thereafter.

Section 35. This ordinance and the franchise herein granted is upon the further conditions:

That the said grantee, his successors or assigns, shall continue the survey of his line of railroad and shall commence the actual construction of said railroad by July 1, 1912, and shall thereafter continuously prosecute said construction, expending not less than fifty thousand dollars per month thereafter until said railroad shall be fully completed. Excepting, however, the Act of God and the arising of conditions rendering such expenditure unreasonable and unconscionable.

Section 36. That said grantee, his successors or assigns, shall within two years from the date of passage of this ordinance have fully completed a line of standard gauge railroad of at least seventy miles in length, extending from a point on Puget Sound in a northwesterly direction through the city of Port Angeles on one of the streets herein granted on west at or near Lake Crescent.

Section 37. That the said grantee, his successors or assigns, shall within two years from the date of the passage of this ordinance have established terminal facilities with connecting transportation railroad line or lines for general traffic purposes.

Section 38. Failure upon the part of said grantee, his successors or assigns, in the full performance of any of the conditions above specified or in the performance of any other condition of this ordinance, shall work an absolute forfeiture of all the franchise, rights and privileges herein and hereby granted, and it shall hereby be lawful for the city council of said city to declare by ordinance the forfeiture of the rights and privileges herein and hereby granted and to repeal this ordinance.

Section 39. If the said grantee shall have complied with the foregoing conditions within the times above specified, then and not otherwise, shall he have three years additional time within which to occupy and construct tracks on the remaining streets and wharves covered by this ordinance.

Section 40. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force on and after its passage, approval and publication as required by law and after its written acceptance within sixty days after its passage by said grantee.

Section 41. That ordinance Number 382 is hereby repealed.

An Unfortunate Ablution.

It is an authentic anecdote of Hogarth that he was wont to make certain miniature sketches on his thumb nail to be elaborated at an after time A certain dramatist followed the practice. He would write a plot in the same limited space in shorthand. He was once consulted on a new drama by a manager.

"I have it!" the writer exclaimed And he immediately marked the plot upon his thumbnail. Weeks passed, but no play was presented. The manager consulted the author.

"Now, about the piece! It's done, of course. You took it on your thumbnail!"

"To be sure," replied the author, "and there it was for some time, but, as ill luck would have it, I one morning unfortunately washed my hands!"

Proof Positive.

Arthur Lefevre, the author, told this story of a happening at the University of Virginia during his student days in 1884:

There was a Baltimore freshman at the university whose father got several letters about his boy's wild ways —about his fondness for peach and honey and such-like heavy drinks These letters grieved the old man to the heart. He wrote to the freshman and in reply got a general denial of all the charges.

Evidence, however, continued to pour in, and finally the father decided on a secret journey to Charlottesville He timed himself to arrive late at night. It was, in fact, 2 o'clock in the morning when he rang the bell of his son's boarding house.

In response to his ring a woman in a yellow bath robe appeared, lamp in hand.

"What do you want?" she demanded, peering suspiciously forth into the darkness.

"Madam," said the amateur detective, "is this the residence of ——?" And he mentioned his son's name.

The woman's grim look relaxed, and she answered indifferently:

"Yes, he lives here. You can carry him right in."

The Mule's Error.

One one occasion, writes Attorney Earl B. Smith of Somerton, Yuma county, Ariz., I was obliged to remain at a primitive southern Arizona ranch over night, and at about dusk I was given a quilt, a clean sheet and a pillow and told to take them to the top of a twenty foot alfalfa stack and make up my bed. Knowing the conditions of the country, I did not murmur and climbed the pole ladder to spend the night. I never enjoyed a better night's rest at any hotel. At early dawn I raised my head and saw two yearling mule colts feeding at the edge of the stack. We exchanged glances for a few moments, while the mules' ears showed keen astonishment. Suddenly I rose to my feet, and in doing so the white sheet clung to my shoulders, whereupon the colts "lit out" down the lane as if the Angel Gabriel were descending to take them to celestial pasturage. While at the breakfast table I related the incident, which was much enjoyed, but no remarks were made at the time As one of the ranch hands was passing out of the door he said in a subdued but distinctly audible voice that it was the first time he had ever heard of a lawyer being mistaken for an angel, and nobody but a mule would have made such an error.—Case and Comment.

A Sight Unseen.

Mr. Heyburn of Idaho sometimes has trouble in getting a large audience of his fellows when he speaks on the floor of the senate. One day last July he rose to make a speech, and, seeing that there were only three men besides himself in their places, he moved to adjourn. This was prevented by the assembling of a quorum of senators who had been sitting in the cloakrooms In beginning his delayed speech he said: "I do not understand the conduct of senators. I have seen them under all phases. I have seen a senator leave this chamber when he should stay here to receive good advice. I have seen him leave this chamber when by remaining he could have given good advice. The only thing I never saw a senator do was to back out of the door in the middle of his own speech."

The Foot Astray.

William F Cody was once relating a story which concerned an Indian who had met with an accident in a Buffalo Bill show It was necessary to amputate the Indian's leg, and in the description of this operation Cody was interrupted frequently by a young doctor who injected technical and medical terms into the straight vernacular of the scout. He was irritated, but ignored the doctor. "A few days after the operation," continued the narrator "the Indian learned that his leg had been buried With a whoop he leaped from his bed and jumped upon the doctor with both feet."

"Jumped with both feet after an operation?" shouted the doctor, exulting in his exposure of the great scout's absurd story

"I said upon the 'doctor with both feet,'" explained Cody, "in order to distinguish him from the other hospital physician, who had only one foot, having put the other into people's affairs so often that he lost it."

DEVELOPMENT OF THE NORTHWEST

Seattle Chamber of Commerce Will Exploit Northwest in Systematic Manner Hereafter.

When the Olympic Peninsula Development League meets in Olympia, the latter part of next month, there will be a conference of farmers to consider the proposals of how to increase the farmed area of Western Washington. The league has arranged a program that will interest the workers of the soil. Authorities of the Washington State College and the experiment station will be on hand to give practical demonstrations. One day will be devoted to the use of artificial fertilizers. Where there is so much moisture as on the West Side it is coming to be recognized more and more that something should be added to conserve the natural fertility. The use of nitrate of soda will be carefully investigated, as one of the best replenishers.

A publicity department has been organized by the newSeattle Chamber of Commerce, for exploiting systematically the whole Pacific Northwest. It will be conducted by Robert Mattison, a local newspaper man of considerable experience, under direct supervision of the Chamber's Committee on Exploitation, of which Col. A. J. Blethen, of the Seattle Times is chairman. Besides working for more settlers, this department will devote considerable time to directing tourist travel this way.

Gov. Walter E. Clark of Alaska, has made an appeal for the friends of the Northern Territory, to get together. He regrets that there are two organizations in Seattle, ostensibly trying to advance its interests, for the reason that they are pulling apart. This has been what always kept Alaska Back—the fact that opinion as to what is best for it has always been too far apart. Alaska's needs are very simple and might be relieved easily, if the quarreling could only stop. The Governor pointed out that politics has always been the bane of Alaska's existence. His appeal was well directed, and should help to straighten out the situation.

With the return of winter, the police departments in all the larger cities of the Northwest are finding it a problem to cope with incipient criminals. Men being out of work resort to preying on their fellow beings for the wherewithal to live. Spokane, Seattle and Portland have gone through a carnival of thievery and brigandage of late. How to break it up is a great problem.

The month of December has seen three new weekly news papers started in Washington —at Arlington, at Wilkeson, and at Duvall, a new town in Cherry Valley. Miss Mabel Dufford, formerly connected with the Tacoma headquarters of the National Council of Women, is editor and publisher of the Citizen at the latter place.

That the Pacific Northwest is an ideal place for fattening livestock is shown by the recent killing of a 2100-pound steer at the Portland plant of Swift & Co. that dressed out 72.14 per cent of its live weight. So far as known this is the best percentage ever shown anywhere. The steer was raised at Wapato, Washington. The champion steer at the recent National Livestock Show at Chicago dressed out 66.2 per cent.

About People of Local Interest

George Posey of Butte, Mont., was in Port Angeles a couple of days last week on his way home from California. While Mr. Posey has kept tab on Angeles, first through the columns of the Democrat-Leader, and later through the Olympic-Leader. he was much surprised at the growth and transformation that our city has undergone since he was first here eighteen years ago. Mr. Posey has traveled extensively and says that the townsite of Port Angeles is the most charmingly situated of any he has visited and that our harbor is one of the best on either coast He expected to have remained here for a time to enjoy our mild winter climate, but business called him home.

All having the best interests of the city at heart will turn out to the Commercial Club election of officers next Wednesday night. A president, vice-president, treasurer and board of six directors are to be elected to conduct the affairs of the Club the coming year—a year fraught with great possibilities. Though not so apparent on the surface, the Club has been a great factor in the progress made in the past year, and our indefinite future depends largely upon the degree we "get together" the coming year.

J. H. Stephenson and J. W. Watts, with other members of the tranmission line crew, spent Christmas at home, returning to the east end of the county Tuesday. They are now working in the vicinity of the Clallam-Jefferson line, coming this way at the rate of about a mile a day, and expect to reach this city February 1st.

Lewis Mutty, one of the members of the basket ball team from Townsend, remained in the city until today and enjoyed the parties given by the young people Wednesday and Thursday evenings.

Don't forget to attend the fruit growers meeting at the Commercial Club rooms Saturday, Dec. 30. The success of the movement means much to this community. Do your part.

Some people know a good thing when they see it. Some take a bargain when they can get it. The greatest bargain is now at C. L. Baker & Co.'s, in Ranges. Go see them.

Miss Florence Elliott returned Saturday from Sequim where she has had the care of the Main children for some months, since the death of her sister, Mrs. Main.

TOP WORKING OLD APPLE TREES

Pointers by State Horticulturist at Experiment Station, Puyallup, which Are of Special Interest to People Here.

There are many orchards in Western Washington which are set with apple trees of an undesirable variety. The grower does not care to cut them down because they furnish him each year with a few winter apples and enough to make his cider and vinegar. Still they are not a paying proposition.

These trees may be top-worked by budding or grafting with more desirable varieties. Cleft grafting is the most common method of changing the variety, especially with old trees. Limbs best adapted to this sort of work are those which caliper 1-1-2 or 2 inches,as the scions of the new variety do better in such branches and the wounds heal more quickly than when larger limbs are used.

The stock is cut off squarely and split, and into the split a scion with a wedge shaped base is inserted. The end of the stock or "stub" is large enough to hold two scions, as they double the chances of success and also hasten the healing of the stub.

The split in the stub can be made with a cleft grafting tool or a smooth iron wedge. It should extend across the center of the stub and two or three inches deep.

The best scions for cleft-grafting are made from whips of the new growth, which will caliper 1-4 or 3-8 inch in diameter. They may be cut in pieces six or eight inches in length, allowing three buds to the scion. If the base of each scion is cut about two inches below the lowest bud, this will allow the base to be made wedge shaped, with the lowest bud just above the wedge. To form a good wedge at the base of the scion, make two sloping cuts on opposite sides of the scion, about 1 1-2 inches in length and just below the lowest bud. The cuts should be made so that this bud will be on the outside when the scion is inserted into the base of the stub. The outer edge of the wedge should be a little thicker than the inner one, so that the stock will bind upon it and hold it firm at the point where the union first takes place.

As soon as a scion is inserted on each side of the stock or stub, the wounds should be covered with wax. A good wax can be made by melting together, by weight,one part tallow, two parts beeswax, four parts resin. When completely melted, pour into a pail of cold water, then work it with the hands, which should be greased, until it becomes straw colored. Linseed oil may be used instead of tallow. The wax should be worked well into the wounds and on the tips of the scions.

The entire top of an old tree should not be reworked at the same time. Part of the leaf bearing surface may be left and top-worked the following year

The best time of year to top-work an orchard is during the late winter or early spring, while the trees are still dormant and before the buds have opened. Branches which have been re-worked should be marked that they will not be pruned when the trees are pruned.

Been Waiting for Roads for Twenty Years

Gettysburg, Dec. 15, 1911.

Olympic Leader: I do not think any honest man will deny that the road proposition in this Second District is the most rotten and unjust, if not corrupt, ever handed out to the farmers of any country. Here we have a valley of logged off land of twelve square miles, level and good, the easiest irrigation proposition in Clallam county The population is about seventy-five, of whom twenty-six are farmers, the others employees of the Gettysburg shingle mill. This valley has been waiting for roads for twenty years. Land never sold for more than $6.00 an acre here. I am assessed about $20 a year for road purposes, and have lived here for fifteen years, and we never had less roads than now. The more land we clear, and the more taxes we pay, the more impossible it is to use a wagon or even a sled.

There is a gang of freebooters in this second district that have banded together for no other purpose than to flim-flam the farmers out of their road taxes It is the Lake trade, the tourist and automobile travel—the tin horns can't see that one good farmer is better than a thousand tourists for this county. The tourist will come about four months in the year if the times are good, but the farmer is with you all the time. For seven years this gang have used up the taxes for their own pet schemes. Meantime we have to build roads for nothing if we want any work done.

I have been packing farm produce till I am nearly worn out trying to make a living and scrape together enough for taxes and then to be robbed by a lot of schemers that are too good to earn an honest living. All we want are the taxes that are raised here; we want our rights. The Commissioners and frauds know that it is not more legal than highway robbery to put a heavy tax on this valley to build roads in the mountains; to take one's taxes for nine years and proposing a heavy bonded indebtedness for the same purpose. We have word from the Commissioners that they will do nothing between Pysht and Port Crescent, not even surveying a road so that we can know where to build our homes and fences.

Yours for Clallam county,
O. N.

THE EAST END

From the Press.

Dice's camp of railroad surveyors comprising 18 men is at Rena about four miles west of Sequim working this way. They will bring their survey to Johnson creek a few miles east of Sequim where the survey will tie on to Engineer Potter's survey which began at that point Potter is working east to Port Ludlow with his crew. Engineer Dice will about finish this end by January 5th and will move his camp west of Angeles to help out on the survey between Angeles and Crescent.

Mr. May of the Olympic Power Co. was here this week getting facts and figures on irrigation. The company wants to know about how much water per acre the land hereabouts requires to grow good crops. They will then know the kind of pumps required and the amount of power needed in pumping water for irrigating the soil of this county wherever a pump is wanted for irrigation.

About People of Local Interest

Saving His Son.

In the "Life and Works of Winslow Homer," by William Howe Downs, is this quaint anecdote:

Winslow Homer's relations with his father were always ideal and became more devoted as the father's life drew toward its end. But the father was a strong temperance man. He did not approve of Winslow's habit of taking what the New England folks call an "11 o'clocker." When he was at Prout's Neck, Winslow tried to induce his father to take a little something for his stomach's sake. At 11 o'clock he would bring him a cocktail, and the two regularly went through with the following dialogue:

"Now, father, don't you think you'd better take this? It will do you good."

"Is there any alcoholic liquor in that, Winslow?"

"Yes, father."

"Well, I won't touch it, then."

"Father, if you don't take it I'll drink it myself."

"Well, Winslow, rather than have you destroy the tissues of your stomach by drinking this alcoholic beverage I'll drink it."

SOCIALISTS BREAK LOOSE

Their Vials of Wrath at Capitalist System Poured Forth on Post Cards.

The Socialists are going to send us post cards. These gentle dreamers of good times to come, who usually approach us with books a foot thick or lectures a mile long, are now handing us gobs of philosophy on post cards! What are we coming to, anyhow? Are the "comrades" running out of words?

The very latest thing in Socialism is that we are to have a lecture course on the subject in this city and that three million post cards have been printed to advertise the course—not that they are all to be used, here, since the socialists are putting on lecture course, in six hundred other towns.

So if you get a post card asking you how you are gouged, don't hesitate to answer without delay. Eugene Wood of New York, Socialist lecturer and writer, wants to know At any rate, he is going to speak on "How We are Gouged" at the opera house on Monday, January 8th, at 8 p. m. It is extremely fortunate that Mr. Wood is a genuine humorist There is nothing particularly cheerful about his subject, and he is indeed an artist if, as the newspaper notices assure us, he can make us laugh over the high cost of living.

Mr. and Mrs. Witbeck of the Grand Union Tea Co. desire to express their appreciation to the people of city and county for the splendid business they have been able to build up in the six months they have been in business in Angeles. The number of tickets brought in and the many premiums given out the week before Christmas was truly astonishing and is conclusive proof of the excellent satisfaction the Grand Union Tea Company's goods are giving. Get the habit. Save your tickets. We thank you and extend our best wishes for a Happy and Prosperous New Year to all.

Mrs. C. E. Stocklen and sister, Mrs. S. J. Lutz, Port Angeles, Washington, were in Columbus Thursday to see the Great Northern train bearing the party of 15 governors, lieutenant governors and state representatives from the West and Northwest.

The train was made up of five exhibition cars of fruits, vegetables, grain and mineral products from the states represented by the governors.—Circleville, Ohio, Herald.

Suggestions for costumes for the fancy dress ball can be gathered from the dainty gowns seen on the calendars put out this year by the Citizen's National Bank, a scene representing Christmas eve at Mt. Vernon.

The calendars sent out by them for a number of years have been historical scenes dear to the hearts of all Americans and the one this year is particularly pleasing.

We feel very much encouraged over the success of our business the few months we have been with you and wish to thank one and all for the favors and courtesies extended to us. We hope we will merit your further patronage the coming year and wish to all a very Happy and Successful New Year. The Hat Shop.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Machenheimer of Port Crescent are enjoying the happy holiday season with relatives and friends in the East End.

On Lincoln Heights

The school on Lincoln Heights closed on Friday for the holidays. Interesting programs and Christmas trees were the closing exercise in the primary and intermediate rooms.

Among those who came to the Heights for the holiday season we note, Laurena Ester from Bellingham, Louise Higgins, from Tacoma, Emma McMillen from Sequim, Clare Fleming and his friend, Mr. Peterson, from Seattle and Mr. Morton.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Fleming, had their family reunion the day preceding Christmas, that being the anniversary of their daughter's, Mrs. Burgman's, marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. Harding, as is their custom, had all their family who are here on Christmas day.

Mr. and Mrs. Bowman follow the same custom. Family reunions were the rule rather than the exception, on the Heights.

Fred Epperson is enjoying a well earned visit with old time friends near Lynd, Washington.

Mr. Epperson is now able to use his hands to some extent, he has lost several fingernails but no fingers.

Mrs. Gran is slowly recovering from her recent severe illness. Her daughter, Mrs. Larson, is caring for her; the sick children are all better.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Stepp almost received a Christmas gift. It arrived the day following—a boy weighing ten pounds.

A REAL COMPLIMENT

Eugene Wood, famous humorist who has been secured by the Socialist party of this city to lecture here on "How We Are Gouged," is a serious minded agitator as well as a writer of funny stories. He once addressed a large crowd of strikers from a street corner rostrum, his platform being a rickety soap box, and, after he had spoken for an hour, announced that he would be glad to answer any questions put to him. A young miner in the audience thereupon said: "Mister, I'd like to ask a question." "Go ahead," said Mr. Wood. "Please, sir" came the plaintive request, "Won't you talk some more? I like to hear you." Mr. Wood considers that the finest tribute ever paid him.

More land clearing is under way in Lewis county than ever before, which is largely due to the exploitation of the char-pit method by the citizen's club of Chehalis. No matter in what direction from town one may drive, smouldering fires are seen burning out stumps.

Invitations are out for a fancy dress ball to be given at the opera house New Years night by the Women's Auxiliary. Get out grandmother's and grandfather's clothes and turn out and have a good old fashioned time.

The season's greetings and all good wishes for the New Year, extended to my friends and patrons of the past, with many thanks.

Mrs. Amelia Goldwater.

CARD OF THANKS.

We desire to extend our heartfelt thanks to the many kind friends, and members of Eastern Star for their sympathy and assistance in our bereavement.

For the generous patronage I have received, especially during the holiday season, I wish to thank one and all, and to wish for you a most happy, prosperous New Year.

WHY LONG TAILED COATS.

Eugene Wood, the well known humorous writer, who is booked to lecture in this city on Socialism, when undertaking to answer questions at a meeting he addressed in Brookfield, Ohio, had this query submitted to him by a wag in the audience: "Why does the speaker wear a long tailed coat?" Loud laughter greeted this sally, but still louder laughter rang through the hall when Mr. Wood wittily replied: "To cover the patches on the seat of my pants!"

Ten years of successful business in any line of endeavor is something to look back over with justifiable pride, and the management of the Citizens National Bank of Port Angeles may well "point with pride" to the past record of that sound financial institution over which they have control. The people of Port Angeles and vicinity have an abiding faith in the sagacity, integrity and business ability of the officials of this banking institution and have lent their patronage accordingly. Not a little of this prosperity and popularity is due to the present efficient and affable cashier, Mr. J. P. Christensen. See the bank ad elsewhere in this issue.

PEOPLE DETERMINED TO CONTROL

Government Of Office Holders, By the Bosses, for the Corporations, Must Give Way--- Eventually.

"We are just awakening to the fact that we have a government of office holders by the bosses for the corporations," writes Wm. Daly in Everybody's.

The people of this country are determined at last to take over control of their own politics. The commission plan is an attempt to make the theory of representative government a fact.

Commission government has two objects: administrative responsibility and popular control.

The first is obtained by the election of a small board of commissioners. They are elected at large, making ward lines useless. No party designations are allowed on the ballot. The commissioners make all appointments. The work of the city is divided among them, although the whole board is collectively accountable for the conduct of each. Thus it becomes a sort of responsible cabinet. One of the board may be called mayor but he is really only the chairman.

We have found that a division of authority among mayor, council, and alderman is merely a device for evading responsibility.

The second object—popular control—is obtained through the initiative, referendum and recall.

Whenever fifteen or twenty per cent of the voterrs feel that a certain ordinance should be passed, they may present their petition to the commissioners; these then must either pass the ordinance or submit it to the vote of the whole city. That's the initiative.

Whenever the commissioners pass an ordinance—except one that concerns public health or safety,—it must not go into opperation until after a certain period of time. If, during that period, fifteen or twenty per cent of the voters protest, the commissioners must either rescind the ordinance or submit it to the vote of the whole city. That's the referendum.

If fifteeen or twenty per cent of the voters feel that a commissioner is incompetent or dishonest, they may ask that the whole city ask for his removal. A special election is called just as if his office were vacant, and unless he received the highest number of votes, he is automatically removed. That's the recall.

These three measures are the devices to give back to the people the control of their city government.

The idea of running a city by a small board of commissioners originated in Galveston in 1903. But it was not until 1907 that the most democratic and representative form was tried out, in Des Moines, Iowa. This "Des Moines Plan," as it is popularly known, has served as a model—with slight modifications—for a hundred cities throughout the country.

The fight the poeple have had to wage to get better city administration reallyexposes the failure of representative government, as we have it, to carry out a clearly expressed popular wish. Our state legislatures are opposing the people's demand for this new scheme of home rule.

There are two ways by which a city may get the new form of government: either by special act, or by virtue of a general "enabling" act. The latter means, simply, that the legislature passes an act to permit any town or city to adopt commission government merely by voting to do so at a regular or special election, to be called upon the petition of a certain percentage of voters. So far the following states have passed general acts:

Iowa, Wisconsin, Illinois, Kentucky, Kansas, Mississippi, NewMexico, Texas, North Dakota, Louisiana, South Dakota, South Carolina.

The following states allow the municipalities, under certain conditions, to construct their own charters:

Michigan, Washington, Minnesota, California, and Oregon.

In all other states, each municipality must go to the legislature and plead for a special act. Since commisssion government is proving an unwieldy weapon for the bosses and the corrupting corporations, a single city has a hard time of it at the state capitol. It stands alone. But the bosses—there you have a shining example of "community of interest," of perfect team-work. The bill the city wants passed is, of course, referred to a committee--a few men, easy to handle sometimes — often bills get no farther than such committees. This is the well-known bit of legerdemain known as "shelving." In some states the politicians adopted the scheme of amending the charter so that it looked like commission government, but was in reality very different.

But despite all opposition from legislatures, and political machines, the movement for commission government will grow. The people want it and they will get it — eventually.

Manual Arts Course is Complete

That the schools of Port Angeles are in the front rank in the adoption of progressive ideas is shown by the following letter received by Mr. Singer, supervisor of our manual arts department:

"I notice that in your report to the Manual Arts Section of the work you are doing in the Port Angeles schools, you mention pattern making, cabinet work, moulding, and cement construction, I am much interested in the latter phase and am trying to get our board to introduce some concrete work into the course. It would help me greatly if you would answer the following questions so that I can give them a clear idea of what is being done in another school near at hand. I think there is a great future for cement work in the school if it can be reduced to a pedagogical basis. I wish to thank you in advance for this favor, and if I can be of any assistance to you at any time in any way, do not hesitate to command me.

Very truly yours,
Chas. D. Webster.

Mr. Webster is the Supervisor of M. T. at Tacoma, also secretary of the Manual Arts Association of Washington. A list of the questions is not published but from their texture we gather that the Tacoma man is much interested in the work here as it is being conducted by our able supervisor. H. G. says, when asked about it, that we can show them every time that they will have to come to the peninsula for expert advice.

The supreme court of the state holds gifts of intoxicating liquor within a dry unit is a violation of law, unless it come within the exception made in the act—a gift within a private dwelling or apartment. This decision reverses the superior court of Whatcom county, in a case where one Jones was arrested in Ferndale, a dry town, for giving away liquor or treating a friend on the public streets.

A Pane of Glass

By MARY HOADLEY GRISWOLD

THERE was no reason why John Dorman should not have replaced the pane of glass as soon as it became broken. Especially was there no valid reason why he should have postponed it until holiday time. It would have saved him some labor and Mrs. Dorman much annoyance had he been more prompt, and there would have been no story to tell.

John Dorman was the village undertaker. In the house of mourning he was sympathetic, tactful and considerate. In the social circle he was witty and a teller of good anecdotes. At home he governed his children discreetly, cherished his wife tenderly and lost no chance to have fun. That was the true reason for his neglect of the broken windowpane.

Who broke the window glass or how does not matter. It was the library window, and that did matter to Mrs. Dorman when John tacked a square of pasteboard into the sash to stop the draft till such time as he should attend to it properly. Mrs. Dorman had her own views as to propriety of appearance, and a pasteboard pane in a front window of an otherwise artistic dwelling on the main traveled road was distinctly out of harmony. In vain John begged her to remember that a thing is beautiful according to its usefulness; that the pasteboard pane kept out the cold and no doubt was at that moment the preserver of their lives by preventing the entire family from taking pneumonia. The missing pane of glass continued to be a favorite topic of conversation with Mrs. Dorman, or, rather, of monologue, since John after awhile became merely a listener. However, the pressure which Mrs. Dorman brought to bear by means of language impelled the dallying John to move in the matter.

He selected as his opportunity the afternoon before New Year's day, when Mrs. Dorman was out shopping. Expertly he cut and fitted the pane of glass, puttied it in place, tacked the pasteboard back outside the new glass and removed all traces of his labor. He found time also before Mrs. Dorman's return to step into Neighbor Allen's a moment. It seemed that such an event as the replacing of that oft sung pane of glass should be celebrated in all neighborliness. The Allens quite agreed with Mr. Dorman, and the little surprise prepared for Mrs. Dorman seemed quite complete.

That evening John Dorman sank into his easy chair before the grate and picked up the evening paper with a view to reading. Mrs. Dorman, however, forestalled him, having something on her mind.

"That missing pane of glass is no credit to the house, John. I had not realized how disreputable that bit of pasteboard looks stuck into that window. It may stay there tonight, for the wind is on that side of the house, but tomorrow morning, glass or no glass, that pasteboard shall go into the stove. There has been delay enough." Mrs. Dorman spoke as one determined.

"I'll see to it first thing in the morning," promised John.

A little later the Allens came in and sat down with Mr. and Mrs. Dorman to a game of whist. As the second hand was being dealt Mr. Allen shivered slightly. A moment later Mrs. Allen, also seeming to feel the draft, asked permission to throw a wrap across her shoulders. As the hand progressed Mr. Allen shivered again and unconsciously turned up his coat collar, consciously turning it down again when his wife remonstrated.

It was evident that the room was too cool for comfort. John Dorman could understand that, but could not speak consistently since it was due to his own negligence. Mrs. Dorman, however, was governed by no such restriction. She laid down her cards and took up the window subject.

"It is cold here, and I know it is cold. Why shouldn't it be with a pane of glass broken in that west window, as it has been for a month? I have asked John to repair it time and again, and yet nothing but a sheet of pasteboard keeps out the weather. I expect no less than pneumonia for the entire family and for every one else who has the courage to venture in to sit with us for an evening. Perhaps, John, you will find it more convenient to bury us all than to set one little pane of glass."

"Really, my dear," he apologized, "I do mean to attend to it. It should have been done long ago. I give you my word of honor I will have that glass set tomorrow morning."

The words, intended to soothe Mrs. Dorman's mind, did divert her thoughts, but in a manner entirely foreign to the plan of John.

She sprang up with an air of determination and seized the brass handled poker from the fire set on the hearth.

"I will see to it now that you keep your promise tomorrow morning," she cried. "That miserable sheet of pasteboard shall not be your excuse another moment."

With a thrust of the poker Mrs. Dorman attempted to annihilate the pasteboard pane. There was a crash of shattered glass, a tearing of pasteboard, and then indeed the west wind penetrated the room. Mrs. Dorman masterfully concealed her surprise at finding the glass had been set. She saw at once the joke; she saw also that the joke was not entirely upon herself. Tomorrow morning John would reset that glass, and it would not be a task to his liking either.

With perfect composure Mrs. Dorman restored the brass handled poker to its place on the hearth and remarked hospitably:

"As the glass cannot be replaced until morning, let us adjourn to the sitting room and finish the rubber there. Afterward, John, I am sure you will be glad to step over to Hilton's and bring us vanilla and chocolate mixed."

THE CALL OF THE HEART

family, was a man of warm heart, but with an intense pride and an imperious will.

Ten years before the time of which this story tells the eldest daughter of the house had clandestinely married a man to whose patient and faithful court paternal consent with unreasoning prejudice was refused. The father, in his wrath, forbade her ever to cross the home threshold again.

The girl's heart had not misled her. The man was in every way worthy. Happiness and prosperity had been their portion.

The holidays at Graham House, though still the occasion of hospitality and mirth, were days on which memory was sadly busy. The loving mother felt more keenly on these festal days the estrangement of which she might not even speak.

Always when New Year's eve came Mr. Graham would slip away from the family and guests and spend an hour alone in thought of the daughter who had disobeyed him. From these retrospections he had always come harder and more unrelenting than ever.

On the New Year's eve of which this story tells a merry company was gathered in Graham House.

As usual, a little before midnight Mr. Graham slipped away for his tryst with bitter memories, but when just a moment before the time for opening the door he came down the grand staircase there was a new look on his face. "Dear friends," he said gently, "will not all who love us wish with me that peace, love and charity may enter Graham House this blessed New Year's eve and abide forevermore?"

The dear mother, with a sob of joy in her voice, the brothers and sisters and all the guests said softly, "Peace, love and charity to Graham House for evermore." Then, as the midnight bell rang out, the door swung open to the starlit sky, the snow white world, and each one welcomed the New Year, making the wish dearest to his heart.

Now, this is what happened next. There on the porch they stood as if cure of a welcome, the daughter and the husband and two smiling fur clad little children. The youngest lifted up his voice gleefully, saying: "We've comed, grandfather. Muvver says she heard your voice. Did you call?"

The old man stooped and gathered the little ones in his arms. "Yes, I called you," he said. "She heard aright the call of my heart."

Best Wishes to All
