MR. EARLES TENDERED RECEPTION

Very Much Pleased at Evidence of Hearty Appreciation. Covered Bridge a Detriment.

Upon the arrival of Mr. Earles and party from the Sol Duc Hot Springs on Tuesday he was tendered an informal reception at the Commercial Club rooms by a large number of the citizens and business men of the city. Mr. Ritchie presented the annexed resolution, largely signed, and it was unanimously adopted.

Mr. Earles feelingly responded to the presentation and told how unexpected was the gathering. This is most generous of the people of Port Angeles, he said, and expresses in a manner that nothing else could your kind wishes for the enterprise just about complete. Mr. Earles then introduced John Trumbull, whom he said could talk and liked to talk.

Mr. Trumbull spoke of the work accomplished at the springs and especially of the splendors of our natural resources for the playground of America, and as a most beautiful place to live. He would rather live in Clallam county than any place he had ever been in. It is superb in scenery, climate, and all that goes to make things most delightful, and a great future is in store for this place. When, depends on how soon the people awake to the fact that they have these things and can make this the garden spot of the world. Coming in from the springs, he said, one of the ladies of the party voiced a sentiment he had thought each time he had crossed the Elwha bridge at McDonald. Here was

INTERESTING, EVEN THO MIXED

Seattle Times Says Aldwell Family is Some Nifty when it Comes to Politics.

L. H. Darwin, reporter for the Seattle Times, was put next the political situation in Clallam county when down here last week and turned in a very interesting story — interesting, even tho he did get things political pretty well mixed up:

"Whether it be Taft or Roosevelt, so far as Clallam county republican politics are concerned, a member of the Aldwell family will superintend the division of the political jobs. .

Only in event of a compromise republican being nominated or a democrat being elected, will that industrious and apparently politically divided family find itself without a say regarding federal patronage.

"Really, there was no use in letting go their grasp on the local political situation. So when the present campaign between Taft and Roosevelt attained to real proportions, with the resulting bitterness, a time for a split in the Aldwell family had arrived.

"These astute gentlemen did not propose to permit the play to lack anything of the spectacular. It was carried right thru the primaries and the convention where a split was made to occur, down to the state convention, where finally two delegations, each headed by an Aldwell, sat in the different halls.

"Now T. T. Aldwell has long been the republican boss of Clallam. He is by far the wealthier of the two, and as the years have passed, has held whatever of political offices he deemed worthy of his notice. Recently he promoted a $1,000,000 electric water power company, which is build-

A fine program, under the direction of the Elks, will be given. Judge A. R. Coleman, of Port Townsend, one of the ablest orators of the Olympic Peninsula, will deliver the oration.

Our people generally are cordially invited to attend the exercises and everyone should make it a point to show their appreciation, and respect for the flag, by being present. Let us make Friday, June 14, a red letter day in the annals of Port Angeles by paying tribute to and honoring the flag of our country.

The Elks will meet at their hall at 2:45 and, led by the Band, will march to the Park.

BIG CELEBRATION AND FLOWER SHOW

July 3rd and 4th. Will Be First Time a Flower Parade Has Been Held in This Section.

The general committees in charge of the Rose Carnival and Fourth of July Celebration — Mesdames R. D. Willson, E. B. Webster, E.E. Hopkins and Herbert Baker for the Auxiliary, and J. L. Aldwell, Pres., L. Levy, Treas., and A. J. Cosser, Sec'y, for the Club — have been working on the program for the past week, and making other preliminary arrangements for the big festival. Instead of the old-time scheme of street decoration, the merchants will be asked to make individual displays, prizes being awarded for the best. The city council has agreed to provide a street illumination similar to that used by the Elks for their convention.

Sub-committes and detailed program will be announced later, the following being the outline program:

TUESDAY, 3rd

Band Concerts in the morning.

From 2:30 to 6:00 p. m. only, the Flower Show will be open in the opera house and judging will take place. Over $100 in prizes. Admission during above hours free. All flowers must be delivered at opera house before 10 a.m. of Tuesday, 3rd. The committee will not accept any offering after the hour.

CIVIC CLUB PICNIC

The ladies of the Civic Club had two men at work this week helping to get Civic Park in order; they will also have a picnic dinner there June 13th to finish up the work themselves, so the Park will be nice and clean for Flag Day and the Fourth of July. Everyone who is interested in this good work will please join the ladies next Thursday and give some assistance.

HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATION

Prof. Herbsman Delivered One of the Best Lectures Ever Given Here; a Commonsense Talk.

There is probably no event of social and civil life which appeals so strongly to the general public as the annual graduating exercises of the High School and eighth grade The seating capacity of the opera house is taxed to its utmost every year to accommodate the many who wish to see and hear the sweet girl graduate and her stalwart brother. The decorations of the opera house were both artistic and beautiful, and in spite of the fact that the season was late and the school closed earlier than usual, each graduate was showered with gorgeous bouquets of roses and other home-grown flowers, besides carnations from Seattle's greenhouses.

Friday night's program consisted of several pleasing musical numbers, a piano solo by Mrs. C. P. Brown, a duet by Miss Thomas and Mr. Edgar, and a quartet by the Misses Thomas, Hooker, Ritchie and Willson, the latter graciously responding to several encores. The closing number was a pretty farewell song, given by the thirteen seniors, whose school days in Angeles are over. The invocation and benediction were given by Rev. Stephen Smith.

The class of 1912 diverged from the customary exercises of Angeles High School and introduced in its place the custom now prevalent in the East, and many of the cities of the West also, of having a lecturer address the class and audience instead of each graduate delivering his own oration or essay. Prof. Herbsman of the State University was the man invited to lecture, and all who were fortunate enough to have heard him will agree that it was one of the best, most common sense and beneficial lectures ever listened to. His kindly words of greeting and congratulation to the class, followed by his excellent advice and counsel, could not fail to make a most desirable impression upon those young people, soon to shoulder the responsibilities of their life work and to assume the duties of citizenship. Prof. Herbsman is a reader of ability and his lecture was interspersed throughout with selections from the pens of some of our great poets of today, which added greatly to the enjoyment of the evening's program, and more clearly illustrated some of the points he was most desirous of impressing upon his audience. Angeles people will be glad to know that Prof. Herbsman will address us again next winter, as one of the numbers of an entertainment course he hopes will be adopted by our citizens.

There has been so much criticism of the way in which the graduates were seated Friday evening that we cannot pass it by without a word. Around where the writer was seated different ones were craning their necks to get a peek at the sweet girl graduate but all in vain, for all but three were hidden from view, and with disgust they settled back again, "who cares to see that array of men we see on our streets every day; it is the girl graduates we came to see, why are they put in the background?"

Wednesday's P.-I. announces from this on that paper will tell the truth in regard to the political situation. That's proper. Now if some of the smaller fry that have been drawing their inspiration from Seattle's great daily newspaper will do likewise, what a relief it will be to their readers.

FRIDAY, JUNE 7, 1912

"Everything comes to him who waits," not original, but adopted by W. J. B. Just wait and see.

Billy Sunday closed a five weeks' revival at Fargo, N. D., recently with a record of 3,679 conversions.

There is one thing certain, the democrats cannot this year accuse the republicans of resorting to gumshoe politics. So far they have been copper-toed and hobnailed.

According to a Chicago judge a wife is a regular employee of her husband and entitled to her wages. Better make it a partnership and you will be sure of better coffee and cakes.

In a recent issue of the Commoner, Mr. Bryan announces that he will not offer himself as a compromise candidate, and then goes on to show how much more preferable he is than any of the republican candidates. He will not offer himself but if he is called he will come a-running.

Louisiana stands out as the only state in the union without a recognized republican party. Under the law of that state a party that does not poll at least ten per cent of the entire vote of the state cast at the last previous election gets no standing. The republicans at the last election failed to cast the required number so it has been officially scratched off.

It would be an amusing coincidence if the democrats would nominate Senator Kern of Indiana, and the republicans should choose Charles E. Hughes as a leader. Both have luxuriant growths of whiskers. Two candidates for the presidency with whiskers is something that never before occurred in the United States.

Secretary Fisher testified today before the senate committee on public lands that not a single existing claim for mineral lands in Alaska could, under the present showing of facts be allowed by the interior department.

In some cases dummies had been used by claimants to acquire large areas, he said.

Mr. Fisher favored the Smoot bill to lease coal lands in Alaska and to provide a permanent coal supply for the navy.

The Ohio state convention, meeting at Columbus on Tuesday, gave the state's six delegates at large to President Taft. This, notwithstanding the people at the primary voted to the tune of 30,000 against Mr. Taft. The question arises, if Taft was so cock sure of the nomination—already had more than sufficient delegates to nominate—why this unseemly scramble to control the Ohio convention? Referring to the situation, Colonel Roosevelt said: "The Taft managers in Ohio are straining every nerve and using every means to upset the people's verdict and give the delegates-at-large of Ohio to the man whom Ohio by overwhelming majority declared ought not to have them."

The Northwestern Development Congress opened its sessions in Seattle Wednesday. Governors of six great states and prominent railroad men will meet to boost Northwestern development at the convention. The object of the convention is well stated in these words:

"To carry a personal message of the American Northwest to the thousands of men and women interested in this new zone of plenty, stretching from the Mississippi valley to the Pacific ocean, along the Canadian border. The message must be so plain, so graphic, that in the minds of each will arise the picture of a new subdivision of the United States, the American Northwest.

W. H. Paulhamus of Sumner, president of the senate, will be a candidate for governor this fall. This was vouched for today by some of Paulhamus' closest friends here and leaders in the Roosevelt fight. Paulhamus will enlist under the Roosevelt banner, whether it is the progressive republican banner or that of an entirely new party as the result of the Chicago convention. His formal announcement will probably not be made until after the convention. Paulhamus was one of the chief leaders in the progressive republican convention at Aberdeen recently. Almost coincidental with the announcement of the Paulhamus boom comes the positive denial on the part of State Senator Dan Landon, president of the King County Roosevelt league, that he is a candidate for governor.

In his memorial address at Gettysburg, Col. Roosevelt referred to this silly cry of imperialism as follows:

"In those days just after the war there were foolish people who talked of imperialism and of a dictatorship. They said the soldiers would tyrannize our country. One of the great lessons taught was that within six months after the war, soldiers could go back to the farm and shop and be absorbed in the common life of the people. The talk of imperialism was no more foolish than it is now.

"I have too much respect for you to tell you that you are in no danger of a dictatorship.

When any man tells you that, get him a nurse and a perambulator, for if he really believes it, he isn't fit to be at large."

The old saying that truth is stranger than fiction was never more applicable than to the Seattle Times story of the Aldwell Brothers, politicians, reprinted in another column. No one here will question that T. T. is sincere in his belief that this locality will enjoy a greater measure of prosperity the next four years if Taft be nominated and elected. Nor will they question J. L.'s sincerity in his belief that this or any other section cannot have prosperity as long as the moneyed interests, from city and county up to the nation as a whole, are in complete control. That the Aldwells were in collusion is preposterous to anyone who knows the true circumstances; but it's a good story for all that.

Church Unity is becoming more and more popular. At the fifty-fourth general assembly of the United Presbyterian Church of America, recently held in Seattle, the desirability of church union was clearly shown. The point was made that under present conditions, the missionary field is suffering because of the scattered efforts of the many religious organizations, which ought to work together. This same subject was taken up by the Methodists in their Minneapolis assembly recently. As a result of the Seattle convention, a committee was named to confer with other Presbyterian bodies.

One of the worthiest works in Washington is the State Conference of Charities and Correction, which has been holding its annual meeting in Spokane this week. Its efforts are directed in behalf of improving conditions for children and particularly dependent children. Mayor George F. Cotterill of Seattle, is president of the movement. The program contained many interesting subjects bearing on child-life and they were discussed by child-workers of National reputation.

The result of the primaries is South Dakota last Tuesday gave Theodore Roosevelt the solid delegation from that state, with a plurality of 10,000 to 12,000. Incomplete returns indicate that President Taft was third in the race.

Both Clark and Wilson managers claim the state's ten delegates to the national democratic convention.

The question of eliminating the restriction of cards, dancing and the theater from the Methodist church called out a great deal of discussion both pro and con. These restrictions were adopted in 1872 and have been in force since. The theory of eliminating was based upon the John Wesley idea of leaving it to the individual. The only restriction he placed was on cock fighting. That as an amusement has passed out of existance in most civilized countries. At New Orleans it is still indulged in to some extent. There is much in the three amusements to commend them. In themselves they are innocent. It is only the environment that is bad. Certain games of cards are helpful to the mind, they teach quickness of thought and action and some of them require active mental effort. Dancing improves the body, both in grace and physical development. The proper drama tells a story stronger than oratory or editorials. There was a time when the pipe organ was under the ban, but that has passed.

Local W. C. T. U. Column

Edited by the Local Union.

"It is not realized that the burden of caring for the insane, criminal and feeble-minded is increasing at a rate out of all proportion to the growth of other requirements of state government. With the census of 1910 showing a population of 1,141,990, the proportion of insane, criminal and feeble-minded to the total of inhabitants will have moved from one to every 316 in 1900 to one for every 272 in 1910."

Thus said our State Board of Control in their report of 1911. Does not this statement suggest to the thoughtful the wisdom of trying to ascertain the causes of this rapid increase, etc., and an honest effort to eliminate or at least reduce to a minimum these same causes?

"Insane, criminal and feeble-minded!" Dr. V. H. Podstata, former superintendent of the Northern Illinois Insane Assylum, said in a public address: "Alcohol has been found a direct, unquestionable cause of mental disease in from 10 to 40 per cent of all cases of insanity. * * * It is evident that out of about 9,000 insane now under public care, 1,800 has suffered mental collapse through alcohol alone."

The report of our Board of Control above referred to informs us that out of a total of 1,016 convicts on hand October 1st, 1908, there was not one total abstainer. A few years ago Hon. Carroll D. Wright, U. S. Commissioner of Labor, said that 90 per cent of crime was caused by strong drink.

Dr. Demme, the eminent scientist, selected two groups of parents of ten families each and carefully followed their history for twelve years. The first group were drinkers, the second total abstainers. The first group—the drinkers—had a total of 57 children, of which only 10, or 17½ per cent., were fully normal. Twenty-five of them died within the first few months of their life. The group of total abstainers had a total of 61 children. Of these only five died within the twelve years. Four suffered later from diseases of the nervous system, two showed evidences of mal-development, while 50, or 81.9 per cent., remained entirely healthy. Surely we need not go farther to find the prime factor in the rapid increase of defectives among us. Why not strike at the cause of all this suffering and relieve society of the vast burden of caring for a constantly increasing army of dependents? —Mrs. Margaret B. Platt, President West. Wash. W. C. T. U.

The West W. C. T. U. met at the home of Mrs. D. B. Merrill, cor. 4th and Laurel streets, Thursday afternoon, it being the fourth anniversary, also the election of officers. A lively meeting took place and then all enjoyed the delicious refreshments that Mrs. Merrill delights in serving. Friends and strangers are always made welcome.

One thing is apparent to the most casual observer. However its members may differ as to methods, the heart of the great Methodist Episcopal Church beats true to the principles of temperance and prohibition. No other subject brings so overwhelming a response. The Episcopal address dealt sledge hammer blows against the legalized liquor traffic and every resolution presented received a practically unanimous support. We quote from the Christian Advocate:

"Could our representatives in Congress have seen that splendid body of men rising as one to their feet on the question of adopting the report of the committee on temperance they would no doubt have been tremendously impressed. Not a man of all the eight hundred and odd remained in his seat. It was an impressive sight, worthy of our best traditions. Let the enemies of the cross take notice. No quarter is asked or will be granted. Methodism, the ancient and consistent foe of the iniquitous liquor traffic, is girding herself anew for the war. Enthused, united, inspired, invincible, she goes forth to do battle for her Lord. Nor will she order a halt until the last battle is fought, the last victory won, and the white flag of temperance flung to the breeze from the last redoubt of this arch enemy of all that is right and pure and good."

God speed the day!

The board adjourned to meet Tuesday, June 4, 1912 at 9:00 a. m.

Tuesday, June 4, 1912, at 9:00 a. m

The board met pursuant to adjournment, all members being present, and proceeded to the Westphal County Home and the Ennis Creek Bridge on tour of investigation

At 1:30 p. m., the board again met at the Court house.

After due consideration of the advisability of insuring certain bridges, etc. against loss by fire, the board instructed Fisher & Hickok to write insurance to the amount of $5000.00 on the new Ennis Creek Bridge, $2500.00 on the new Siebert's creek Bridge and $1500.-00 on the barn to be built at the County home.

Upon petition of about thirty people in the neighborhood of Port Williams, the board created a new voting precinct to be known as "Port Williams precinct" and to include the following territory:

Commencing at a point on Sequim Bay between sections 27 and 34, thence west on section line to west line of section 33, thence North on Section line to a point on the Straits of Juan de Fuca between section 4 and 5, all in Township 30 north, range 3 west.

The board adopted the following resolution:

Whereas, by reason of the fact that there has been practically no repair work done upon the roads in district No. 1 during the past year on account of lack of funds, and

"Whereas, certain roads of said district are becoming almost impassible, and any further neglect will cause the necessity of a much greater expense later on, and

"Whereas, the laws make it obligatory upon the Commissioners to keep the roads safe and passable,

"Therefore, Be It Resolved that an emergency be declared, and repairs be made on the roads of said district where absolutely necessary, not exceeding the sum of $1000.00"

The above resolution having been presented to the County Attorney, with a request for his opinon as to whether the board could legally make such necessary repairs and pay for same by issuing warrant upon the funds of Road and bridge District No. 1, said funds being at present overdrawn, and the Attorney having filed his written opinion that the board could legally do so, the board proceeded to examine the following claims on said District, which had heretofore been held up, and ordered the auditor to issue warrants for same:

THE GROWTH OF THE PLAYGROUNDS

Remarkable Development of the Movement In America.

ITS FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES

Herbert H. Weir, Field Secretary of the Playground Association of America For the Pacific Coast, Tells of the Birth and Life of This Movement.

The playground movement had its origin in the various social, educational, economic and civic problems growing out of the change from country to urban life, in an awakened conscience relative to the welfare of children and in a keener, more intelligent and sympathetic appreciation of young life in its right to be healthy, vigorous and happy.

Historically the movement began in Boston about 1886 and was concerned only with the needs and pleasures of little children. During the years intervening between that date and the last years of the last century the movement lay dormant. This was a period of tremendous city and town growth, of a wonderful increase in the intricacies and complexities of social, industrial, educational and civic problems. One great fact among many others borne up from the depths of the turmoil of conflicting forces of that time was that the children and the young people were finding themselves hard put to survive. The abnormal conditions of almost instantaneous city growth had come upon them unawares.

No age has, however, been without its visionaries who saw the light and led the way, so luckily there were men and women, especially women, who saw and understood and acted. The people of Chicago were the first to see that it was as important to provide for the play needs of the children and young people and for the recreational needs of all the people as it was to have efficient departments of public service, far more important also than to have efficient departments of public safety, for the safety of the people lies not in repression of the wrongdoer and in curing the maimed, the halt, the blind, but in preventing him from ever becoming a wrongdoer, from ever becoming diseased and inefficient, by giving him a better chance of being a healthy, vigorous and happy minded citizen.

Although in the beginning playgrounds were generally originated and managed under private auspices, and this still remains true in a large percentage of communities today, nevertheless the importance of the movement is such that it is now a settled principle that the organization, management and maintenance of playgrounds and other forms of recreation shall be under some regularly organized municipal authority and that the work should be supported by public funds.

The second principle is that there shall be provision made for all year round activity, otherwise it will be impossible to secure and keep a corps of efficient, well trained leaders and directors. This kind of work can be developed through use of school buildings for evening recreation purposes and through the construction of municipal recreation buildings, or through the use of other public buildings, or by utilizing all these agencies, as in the case of Columbus, O. The most economical, and perhaps the most effective, way is to utilize school buildings for this purpose, although there will always be need for special buildings in large cities at least, and in the case of school buildings there will have to be certain architectural changes in order to make the buildings very practical.

The third principle is that playground and recreation work must be in charge of trained leaders, directors and supervisors—men and women—skilled in calisthenics, gymnastics, athletics, plays and games, folk dancing, music, child hygiene, first aid to the injured, child psychology perhaps, having a knowledge of social conditions and relations, and, above everything else, filled with the spirit of childhood and possessing a wide social and spiritual vision. This type of man and woman is the great need of the movement today.

However, with the interest now being shown by universities, normal schools and colleges, inspired by the growing demand on the part of communities that teachers in the public schools should have some knowledge of play activities, as well as the demand for professional leaders and directors, the next half decade will find this weakness of the movement much lessened.—Herbert H. Weir in American City.

THE GERMS OF WEAKENED GOVERNMENT IN OUR TOWNS.

Free Municipalities of the Things That Attract Them.

Microbes of diseased and of weakened administration appear in American municipalities, whatever the form of government may be.

What attracts these microbes to enter the municipal circulation unless it be municipal contracts, supplies, franchises, licenses, law and regulation enforcement and what patronage remains over and above civil service laws? These we may call municipal riches and, when used for politics, municipal plunder.

It is proposed to take these attractions out of politics.

To prepare a safe place to put the control of municipal contracts, etc., we should bring about—

The complete separation of the political policy determining functions from the expert administrative functions, placing each in the hands of a different set of persons.

Tenure during good behavior and efficiency for the expert administrators and short terms for the policy determining officials.

Selection of the experts through high grade civil service tests; investigating education, training and achievements by the aid of independent experts, appointing as a rule to the lower expert positions with promotion to the higher, though making original appointments to the higher where necessary.

Removal only after the publicity of an open hearing.

The right of the expert administrators, both individually and acting as a board, to have their proposed policies and budgets made public.

The final determination of appropriations and policies by the political side of the municipal government.

Where policies, either detailed or general, of the political side differ from those of the expert the publication of the political policies before the expert is overridden.

With these preparations made it is proposed to place in the hands of the permanent experts the control of municipal contracts, supplies, franchises, licenses, the enforcement of law and regulations, what patronage there may be and all administrative details and discipline.

Where the separation of these wholly different functions is complete, as in England, Germany and France, we see efficiency and honesty. Where these functions are mixed, as in America, we see waste and corruption.

By such a plan of separation we should secure—

A career for experts in municipal administration.

Attraction for experienced men of high character and training.

A chance for promotion that will draw capable young men into the lower expert service.

Expert chiefs who would believe in enforcing the merit system.

Municipal contracts honestly and efficiently made and strictly enforced.

Clean streets and better security for the public health.

More independent supervision and investigation by those in the political branch than if the appointees were their own friends.

A better system of public accounting.

All of which would tend to more orderly, efficient and honest administration.

UNIFORM GARBAGE CAN.

Waycross, Ga., Takes Summary Action to Preserve Sanitary Conditions.

Merchants and others having stores within a certain district of Waycross, Ga., must provide a uniform garbage can, covered, or face trial in mayor's court.

The ordinance on garbage cans will be rigidly enforced, and the chief of police has given due warning to all concerned. The uniform cans will replace boxes, barrels and the like.

Watch Vacant Lots.

On vacant lots we will soon see a vegetable growth of weeds that will hide tin cans, antiquated bed springs, deceased cats and all manner of evil. It has been observed that on vacant lots where the weeds are kept down few of such objects are thrown, so that property owners close about could well afford, if only from a sanitary standpoint, to keep the weeds cut down or plowed under.

To Prosecute Expectorators.

Chief of Police John W. Ryan of Dallas, Tex., has instructed the patrolmen to enforce the ordinance prohibiting spitting on sidewalks and in public places. This was done at the instance of Fred W. Bartlett, commissioner of fire and police. He said several had suggested to him the advisability of commanding respect for this law of the city and that he was glad to do it.

Value of Advertising.

Advertising is today the mightiest factor in the business world as well as a great home trade boomer. It is an evolution of modern industrial competition. It is a business builder, with a potency that gives beyond human desire. It is more than a "drummer" knocking at the door of the customer, something more than mere salesmanship on paper.

The Man He Licked

By OSCAR COX

Johnny Atherton was intellectual rather than muscular. He led his class in college, while his elder brother, Tom Atherton, led the football team. Johnny was a demure little chap. Everybody liked him, and nobody ever thought of calling him anything but Johnny, while his brother was spoken of as Tom Atherton, with a resonance denoting respect for his bulldog strength.

Mildred Twining met Johnny away from his home and conceived a great liking for him. Johnny fell deeply in love with her and proposed to her. But there was one thing wanting in him that Mildred wished in a husband, and on this account his case hung fire. She wanted a man with Johnny's intellect and delectable gentleness, but with a latent strength that might be aroused on occasion. Johnny begged hard for a favorable answer to his suit, but could not induce the girl to give it to him. However, she had a friend in the town where he lived whom she had promised to visit and told Johnny that when she arrived he might come to see her. This gave him a faint hope that she might relent.

But when Mildred appeared and Johnny renewed his pleadings he received the same reply, and she told him frankly that he was everything she required save that courage and strength that a woman craves in her protector. Johnny went home and poured his disappointment into his brother's sympathetic ear. Tom, who did not at all value his vigor and would have gladly exchanged it for his brother's intellectual and winning qualifications, sympathized with him deeply. The two talked the matter over, and Tom wished he could transfer enough of his blacksmithian traits to Johnny to enable him to win the prize he coveted. However, he said something to the latter that put an idea into his head.

One morning Johnny and Mildred were strolling idly together through the suburban town in which the former lived, Johnny pleading, Mildred putting him off for the same reason as before. Approaching a house where a man sat smoking and looking out through an open window, he glanced at the coming couple, arose from his chair and emerged from the front door in time to meet them. As he passed he looked impudently at Mildred and said:

The blood rushed into Mildred's cheeks. But before she could show any further resentment Johnny jumped for the insulter and landed a blow on his chin. The man who received it was large and strong, but he cowered before Johnny.

"A man who will insult a lady," said Johnny with a ring of courage in his voice that had never been heard there before, "is a coward, and if I am a measly chap I can whip even as big a coward as you."

With that Johnny went at the fellow like a fury. His enemy seemed to lose all sense of advantage of his steel muscles and was so slow in his movements that Johnny got in three blows to his one. And whenever he aimed one that would have finished Johnny the latter sprang nimbly aside.

Mildred looked on this singular encounter astonished. As she gazed Johnny planted a blow on her insulter's jaw that sent him sprawling. Johnny jumped on him and held him down glaring at him like a demon.

"Hand me that stone, please," Johnny said to Mildred, "and I'll mash his head to a jelly."

"I'll do no such thing," was the reply, "Do you want to be hanged for murder?"

"Murder! Is it murder to kill a dog? I'm going to gouge his eyes out!" And Johnny put his thumbs to the sides of his enemy's eyes. The man seemed to have lost all power to save himself and looked up at his little enemy in terror. Mildred, dreading to see his eyes gouged out and to save her lover from such a horrid crime, took him by the collar and dragged him off his enemy. The craven slunk away, Johnny calling after him:

"You keep out of my way after this if you don't want to get killed. The next time I run across you I'm going to finish the job. I'd do it now if it weren't for the intercession of the young lady you insulted."

The man said nothing, apparently desirous of putting distance between him and his fierce little enemy as quickly as possible.

The episode made Johnny Atherton a perfect man in the eyes of Mildred Twining, and within two hours after it occurred the two were engaged, but only after Johnny's solemn promise that if he again met the fellow who had given the insult he would let him alone.

When preparations were being made for the wedding, Johnny made an appointment to bring his best man to call upon his fiancee. The friend was a big, burly man, strong as an ox, and Mildred was astonished to recognize in him her insulter.

"My brother!" Johnny announced.

That the fight had been a putup job was evident, but the bride had gone too far to withdraw.

Johnny hurried up the wedding, for now that Mildred knew which was the strong man he feared his brother would cut him out, such is woman's admiration for manly strength.

WONDERS OF ETHER.

This Mysterious Agent Permeates All Material Bodies.

Even more wonderful than light itself is the medium by which its waves are carried. And what is this medium? It is not air, it is not gas, it is not liquid. Is it matter? In order to be matter, as we understand it, a thing must possess two characteristic properties. One of these is inertia; the other is weight. Inertia means the active resistance shown by all matter to a change in its condition of rest or motion. Weight is the measure of the attraction one body has for another, whether they be atoms or suns. The medium that bears light from star to star, or from a candle to the eye, so far as we know, has only one of the properties of matter—inertia.

Are we not justified, therefore, in saying, with our present knowledge of the subject, that the light bearing medium, called by scientists the luminiferous ether, is probably not a material thing? The various properties it must possess and without which it could not do all the wonderful things that are claimed for it, are more or less contradictory in their nature. Nevertheless, the luminiferous ether is believed in by a majority of scientists even though they do not pretend to understand its nature.

It is supposed to be everywhere, not only filling the interplanetary spaces and the vast abysses between the stars, but also entering into the very heart and between the very molecules and atoms of what is known as matter. As Young said of it, "It pervades the substance of all material bodies with little or no resistance, as freely, perhaps, as the wind passes through a grove of trees." The stars and planets and all other matter are riddled through and through by this wonderful, mysterious thing. It has been likened to a jelly in which are imbedded a few grains of sand which correspond to the matter in the universe.

Gold, for example, one of the densest substances known to man, is permeated completely by this strange, space filling ether, and platinum, another extremely dense substance, is as the lightest, filmiest mist when compared with the vast density of the ether itself. It has been estimated that the density of the light bearing ether is 50,000,000,000 times greater than that of platinum, and yet a rareness so extreme is claimed for this ether that none of the heavenly bodies is impeded in the slightest degree—that the earth's orbital velocity of nearly nineteen miles a second, hundreds of times the cannon ball's velocity, is not slackened by a second in a million years through any resistanee it might meet with from this almost incredible substance, if it really is a substance at all. It could not serve as a medium by which light may be transmitted with the enormous velocity of over 186,000 miles per second, unless it is absolutely rigid and elastic, far more so than if it were composed of solid steel!—J. Gordon Ogden in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

A Many Fingered Family.

In the village of Koshilovo (Grodno government), Russia, there are over fifty peasants who have more than the usual number of fingers. According to particulars published in the Novoe Vremya, they are all descendants of a peasant who married in the first half of the last century and who had extra fingers on one of his hands. In the present generation this abnormality is reproduced to the extent of two, three, four or even five additional fingers. Some cases simply show a thumb duplicated from the first joint. As a result of intermarriage the deformity is spreading to neighboring villages. It dispenses the young men from military service, however sound they may be constitutionally.

Killing the Goose.

The young lawyer had succeeded to his father's practice. Many of his methods had marked his lack of sophistication in the ways of the lawyer. One evening he called on his father, highly elated.

"Hurrah, hurrah!" he shouted, as he bounded into the library. "I've settled that old chancery suit at last!"

"Settled it!" cried his father in blank astonishment. "Why, you young ingrate, I gave you that as an annuity for life!"—New York Tribune.

Eccentric People.

"I understand," said Mrs. Smith, "that young Mr. and Mrs. Adair have not got on very well together since their marriage. Some people take her part and others side with him."

"And I suppose," said Mr. Smith, "there are a few eccentric people who mind their own business?"—

POPULAR SONG WRITING.

Fitting the Melody to the Words and Marketing the Product.

Popular song writing is said to be about as highly a commercialized undertaking as one finds nowadays, and the glowing amateur might feel very isolated in the cold, business-like atmosphere that prevails in the production department of some of the large music publishing concerns.

It is in this department that all of the lyric writers and composers connected with the staff of the house congregate daily to compose the melodies which the public may be singing a few months later.

A music publishing house is likely to be a perfect bedlam of melodic noises. Five or six piano rooms (little square partitioned boxes, just large enough to contain a piano and a stool) can be found in large concerns. In some departments composing has reached such a rapid fire state that even ten and twelve of these piano rooms are found insufficient for the demand.

In one of these little rooms a lyricist and a composer may be trying to "compose a new one." The lyric of most of our popular songs is written first. That is, the title and poem are already completed before the words are set to music, for, although few realize it, the lyric of a song is considered of greater importance than the melody.

The lyric writer places his new poem on the piano before the man who is to evolve the melody. The composer scans the lyric intently, studying it from every angle until he has mastered the various tricks of meter which the lyric writer has put in to give his composition a greater selling value. Although the lyric is considered the most important factor by many publishers, the melody is the thing which eventually sells the song.

After a new song is completed and ready to leave the hands of its author and composer the question of marketing is considered. Publishers have come to the conclusion that it does not always pay to advertise a song as one would a book. The publishers cannot announce that on such and such a day a new song will be on sale in the music stores entitled "so-and-so." The publisher must hear it sung, and one way that this can be accomplished is through the medium of the stage. Therefore large publishers advertise in the theatrical journals, and by impressing the different vaudeville actors and actresses that they have a new wonderful song they plan to reach the public at large who buy music.—New York Sun.

The Evil Eye.

Belief in the evil eye exists in all lands, but especially in Italy. It existed in ancient Egypt. The "eye" is seen on the prows of Spanish and Italian ships and on Mexican bucklers. It is seen on amulets taken from the ashes of Herculaneum and Pompeii. In some places it is surrounded by elephants, serpents and scorpions, animals that were supposed to hold a talismanic power against it. Many celebrities of history—Napoleon among others—believed in the evil eye and feared it. Among the masses of the eastern and European nations the belief is almost universal. It is one of the superstitions that persist despite the progress of science and reason. —Exchange.

Quaint Signposts.

In the neighborhood of Warmbrunn, in the Silesian mountains, there are to be found some very curious signposts. One seen by a writer in the Wide World represents a farm laborer sharpening his scythe, on which is inscribed in the old Silesian dialect, "To Giers village, one hour." The signpost is well carved and painted in natural colors, so that it appears very lifelike. Another signpost in the same district represents a schoolboy carrying a slate bearing the name of the nearest village, toward which the boy is pointing.

Very Young.

A new member of the harbor board in a New Zealand town was attending its meetings for the first time, and the board was discussing a proposal to place two buoys at the entrance to the harbor. "I beg to propose an amendment," said the new member, "that one man should be placed there instead of two boys, as the latter are too young for such a responsible position!"

His Old Home.

"Now that you are famous, Mr. Rimer, we propose to place a tablet on your former home in this city."

"Well?"

"What would you wish us to say?"

"You might say that I was evicted for nonpayment of rent," replied the somewhat imbittered poet.—

BREAKING THE RULES.

It's the Wise Man Who Knows When to Jump the Track.

"You trumped my ace," said the engineer accusingly when the game was finished and the postmortems were on.

"Well, what of it?" truculently demanded the oracle. "Didn't we win?"

"Yes, but according to all the rules of which"—

"We didn't break any of the rules regulating what you can and can't do. We broke only one regulating what you should do. There's a difference."

"Nevertheless, according to all the rules of the best authorities"—

"According to the rules of the best authorities," the oracle declared, "we didn't have the ghost of a show to win that hand. It was my trumping your ace that made it possible—our winning. I broke the rules, if you wish, but I played fair, and we won.

"In life it's exactly the same as in cards. Stick to the rules and you'll stick in one place. It's the wise man who knows when to break them. I don't mean breaking the rules of fairness and honesty. I mean the rules set up by the so called authorities. I'll bet you when Alexander conquered the world all the old wiseacres shook their heads and remarked that he wasn't observing the time honored rules of warfare. We know what they said about Napoleon when he fought in winter, and we also know how vexed Braddock's men were with the red men who wouldn't stand up and be shot in the open, but insisted on getting behind trees.

"When you stick by the rules you're like everybody else and you'll never get you name in the papers. When you know when to bust the rules you begin to climb. There never was a successful writer or adventurer or soldier or lawyer who didn't leave whole wastes of broken rules behind him in his progress. And when the conventional old wiseacres got a new set made to fit the new situation somebody else came along and spoiled them all over again.

"Suppose you have a job where you don't need to think. Tradition has made it a rule that a man in that place shouldn't think. You break that rule—you think. By and by you rise. If you'd stuck to that rule you'd stick in the nonthinking job. The men who do the impossible, the men who give us light and gas and printing presses and trolley cars and phonographs and such like things, are all rule breakers. They broke the rule of precedent, of tradition, of doubt, of fear. They wouldn't be stopped by what others had decided were limitations. They went ahead, and if the rules didn't fit the thing they were seeking to accomplish the rules went by the board."—New York Press.

Sewing Room Sayings.

Dressmakers' superstitions are as numerous in the sewing room as the pins and needles about which they circulate. Some of them sound as if they might have originated out of the need of placating the powers that be in case of accident. For instance, if a new gown slips out of the operator's hands and falls to the floor "it is a sign" that the gown will be sold quickly. Still another saw that carries placation on the face of it is the one that promises that if you spill a box of pins "it is a sign" that customers are coming.—New York Post.

How a Woman Strikes a Match.

There are differences in these days between men and women. But have you noticed the small differences? It was a domestic servant who pointed it out to me when she struck a match. Note a woman striking a match. She strikes it outward. And that observant girl could always detect the sex of the striker upon the stage by the way the matches were struck. A man scrapes the match to himself, the woman the other way.—London Chronicle.

Missed the Moral.

Hoping to impress a lesson of reverence upon the mind of his young pupil, the Sunday school teacher led Tommy past a house with crape on the door, and said he:

"Tommy, do you know why those blinds are all down?"

Tommy, reasoning from the domestic makeshifts in his own home, replied:

"Yes, sir; they're washing the lace curtains."—New York Press.

He Realized.

"Did you realize quickly on that investment of yours?"

"Quickly? I should say I did! It took me about ten days to realize that I was a verdant come-on, who ought to have a guardian appointed before some hypnotizer takes my watch away from me."—Milwaukee

The Reading Club

Mrs.C. Luppen was hostess to the Port Angeles Reading Club on Monday afternoon at the last regular meeting of the year. She also had charge of the program and most delightfully entertained with letters and descriptions of famous places and people visited during her three years' life abroad. Many interesting pictures and souvenirs were also displayed. A special treat, which added greatly to the afternoon's pleasure, were the piano solos by Mrs. Rogers. A motion was carried that a set of books on Child Life, highly recommended by Prof. Herbsman of the University, be purchased by the club and presented to the juvenile department of the public library.

A business meeting of the club for election of officers, etc., will be called later at the convenience of the president, Mrs. R. D. Willson.

Prof. and Mrs. Geisness went last Friday evening, going direct to Irvington, Ind., where Mrs. Geisness visits while he attends the Republican national convention as a Roosevelt delegate from Washington. He also attends the National Educational Association to be held in Chicago July 6th to 12th. This is what attracted Prof. Geisness east, as he is always looking for advancement along educational lines. At the close of this association they go to Duluth Minn., to visit, expecting to be away six weeks.

About People of Local Interest

In honor of Children's Day at the Congregational church last Sunday, Rev. Smith preached a very interesting sermon to the children in the morning. In the evening the Sunday school children, under the leadership of Mrs. Luppen and Mrs. Campbell, gave a very pleasing concert. The church was prettily decorated and all the seats were filled. In addition to the recitations dialogues and solos by the children a very entertaining and instructive chart lesson was given by Mrs. Stephen Smith, who chose for her subject the human hand.

Does it not seem a pity to let the flowers and rose bushes in the school yard die of drouth and neglect? There are some really choice roses and special prizes have been offered the school children for a display at the Flower Show, but who is to take the matter in hand and see that they are watered and cared for?

Prof. I. L. Ullery left Wednesday for Willows, Calif., to look at irrigated land in Sacramento valley. He considers seriously purchasing a farm and improving it. His many friends here are sorry to see him give up teaching as a profession, for he did excellent work and left the schools here in the very best condition. He was a man of broad views and high ideals, though his diffidence and reticence prevented him from becoming very well known to the public in general. The best wishes of all go with him. —Sedro Woolley Courier.

MARRIAGES IN SERVIA.

A Land Where Every Father Chooses a Wife For His Son.

A humorous plaint often goes up on behalf of the bridegroom, whose presence at a modern wedding seems merely to be tolerated. But the bridegroom's case is sometimes even worse, for in certain parts of the globe he may not be present even at his own betrothal. The following passage is from Chedo Mijatovich's interesting account of the customs of his countrymen in "Servia of the Servians."

It is the duty and privilege of every Servian to choose a wife for his son. As soon as the boy has reached his eighteenth year, the Servian peasant asks his friends, confidentially, to help him find a proper wife. He himself visits assiduously all the fairs in his own and neighboring districts, dressing better than usual, and watches the girls dancing. He makes careful inquiries about the families that have marriageable daughters.

In some parts of Servia the young unmarried women carry a special mark in their headgear, generally a red feather, to indicate that they are open to proposals.

When the father has chosen a promising girl, he ascertains, through a friend, whether the parents would consent to give her to his son. If he receives an encouraging answer he invites relatives or friends to go with him on the "requesting errand." They start out, dressed as well as can be. The father carries a flat wheat cake and a bunch of flowers. One of the company must carry a pistol, for it is customary in Servia to announce every joyous event by firing rifles or pistols. They arrive at the girl's house before supper.

After eating and drinking, in which the men alone of the two houses participate, and some preliminary conversation, the father of the prospective bridegroom draws from his bag the wheaten cake, puts the flowers upon it and places the whole upon the table. He then takes from his money bag some gold or silver coins and places those, too, upon the cake.

"Brother, let us not precipitate the matter," the girl's father will then say. "Let me first find out what my daughter says."

He then goes out to consult his wife. This is only for appearances, as the matter was practically settled when the father was encouraged to come to "beg" the girl.

After more or less suspense the door opens and a male relative brings the girl in. He leads her to the father of her prospective husband, before whom she bends deeply and kisses his right hand.

The ring is finally brought to the engaged girl on the appointed day by a company of the bridegroom's male friends and female relatives. It is chiefly a pretext for the bridegroom's relatives to make the girl's acquaintance. The bridegroom is not present even on that occasion.

Origin of the Four Post Bedstead.

In mediaeval times, when life was very insecure, it was usual for people to sleep on a bed which was surrounded by sides of boards with strong posts at the four corners. These sides contained sliding doors, which could be fastened inside. When men retired to rest they took a weapon with them. If attacked in the night they were aroused by the noise made by the crashing in of their wooden defenses and were able to defend themselves. When the law became strong enough to protect human life the sides of the bedstead were gradually dispensed with, but the four posts remained.

His Nose For News.

An English reporter was sent to report the wedding of a musical comedy actress the other day. The reporter, on his return from the church, sat down at his desk, lit his pipe and began to read a novel.

"Here," said a subeditor—"here, why don't you write that wedding story?"

"Nothing doing," the reporter answered, with a yawn. "Bride never turned up. So there's nothing to write."

An Eye to Business.

Jimmy had been to church for the first time. When he was going to bed that evening his father asked him how he liked it.

"Oh, I thought it was bully," was his answer.

"Well, what part did you enjoy best?"

"Oh, I liked it when they passed the plate. I got a dime; how much did you get?"—National Monthly.

Making It Worse.

Partner—That is my brother, madam.

Lady (in confusion)—Ah, I beg your pardon! I had not noticed the resemblance.—Dundee Advertiser.

CHRONIC DYSPEPSIA.

Its Symptoms Very Often Resemble Those of Heart Trouble.

The stomach is a patient organ. It usually does its duty without complaint, even when outrageously abused. But once its patience is tried too far and it acquires the querulous habit no amount of placating will quiet it.

No patient is so dreaded by the doctor as the chronic dyspeptic. In the first place, he does not always find it easy to determine just where the fault lies. On the one hand, the symptoms may not suggest stomach trouble at all. The patient may be convinced that his heart is at fault, and even the doctor may be deceived at first into the same belief by the palpitations, shortness of breath, giddiness and pain in the left side, although these are not infrequent signs of a rebellious stomach. On the other hand, the symptoms of indigestion may be due not to any fault in the stomach itself, but to a reflex disturbance excited by eye strain, spinal disease or some other trouble in a part remote from the digestive apparatus.

In a case of chronic indigestion the first thing to do is to make sure that it is not due to any of these causes. The next thing is to determine whether there is serious disease of the stomach—such as ulcer or tumor. In most cases of "heartburn" or "acidity" there is no organic trouble—merely a failure on the part of the stomach to empty itself promptly and perhaps a defect in the gastric juice that allows the contents of the stomach to ferment.

Very simple measures often suffice to give relief, such as the sipping of a glass of water half an hour or so after meals or a gentle rubbing of the abdomen just below the ribs on the left side, which causes the stomach to contract and empty its contents into the intestines.

The diet should be regulated, foods hard to digest should be avoided, and the meals should be taken at the same time each day and at not too frequent intervals. Of course constipation, if present, should be corrected, and some simple stomachic may be necessary. But if the heartburn does not yield to the treatment suggested the physician had better be consulted, for the condition may be serious.—Youth's Companion.

A Colossal Idol.

Two miles from Kamakura and about twenty from Yokohama, in Japan, on a terrace near the temple sits the most gigantic idol in the world. It is the brazen image of a deity and dates from the reign of the Emperor Shomu, who died A. D. 748. The dimensions of this idol are colossal. His height from the base of the lotus flower upon which he sits to the top of his head is sixty-three and a half feet. The face is sixteen feet in length and nine and a half feet wide, the eyes are three feet nine inches from corner to corner, the eyebrows five and a half feet and the ears eight and a half feet. The chest is twenty feet in depth, and the middle finger is exactly five feet long. The fifty-six leaves of the lotus throne are each ten feet long and six feet wide.

An Actor's Epitaph.

"Sacred to the memory of Thomas Jackson, comedian, who was engaged December 21st, to play a comic cast of characters in this Great Theater, the World, for many of which he was prompted by Nature to excel. The season being ended, his benefit over, the charges all paid, and his account closed, he made his exit in the Tragedy of Death on the 17th of March, 1791, in full assurance of being called once more to a rehearsal, where he hopes to find his forfeits all cleared, his cast of parts bettered and his situation made agreeable by Him who paid the great stock debt for the love He bore to Performers in general."

Chance For More Sleep.

A farmer roused his new harvest hand from slumber in the haymow promptly at 3 a. m.

"You can slip down and cut that little patch of oats before breakfast," he ordered.

"Wild? Why, no; they're tame oats."

A Mean Man.

"Kindly return my lock of hair."

"All right. Do you mean the dark lock or the one you gave me when you were a blond?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Simple Liniment.

A simple liniment that is good for a strained back after a siege of housework calls for four tablespoonfuls of strong ammonia, four tablespoonfuls of alcohol, two large tablespoonfuls of salt and about a quart of rainwater. Put these ingredients into a bottle and shake well. As soon as the salt is dissolved it is ready for use. When needed rub the back with the liniment and continue the rubbing until the surface is warm with the friction.—New York Tribune.

VOLCANO ERUPTION IN ALASKA

Kodiak, Alaska, June 9.—Kodiak and Woody island villages are buried under a foot of ashes as a result of the eruption of Katma volcano beginning Thursday afternoon and lasting forty-eight hours. No lives have been lost here, but many other settlements nearer the volcano must have suffered indescribably.

The scenes when the eruption was at its height were indescribable. As soon as the hail of ashes, sand and hot pumice stone began the officers of the Manning ordered every one to board the ship. For more than forty hours the people were huddled together in the darkness of midnight. Saturday morning it grew lighter and the Manning worked her way out of the narrow channel and headed for the open sea. When the pall lifted it was decided to return to Kodiak. The scene here is one of utter desolation. The only water that is fit to drink is that supplied by the Manning. The captain has appointed a relief committee to afford assistance until relief arrives from Seward. The people on the island are weary and heartbroken.

Seward, June 9. — The Dora steamed into the harbor early today, the white covering of ashes giving her the appearance of a phantom ship. The people on the steamer had a thrilling experience as they steamed through the falling ashes, at the time nearly suffocating from the poisonous gases which filled the air.

The Dora was in sight of Katamai when the eruption began, and those on the vessel witnessed a brilliant spectacle. The first evidence that the volcano was preparing to free itself of the rocks and lava that choked its throat after long years of inactivity came early Thursday, when the Alaska peninsula was rocked by a violent earthquake.

It was 1 o'clock in the afternoon and the mountain was in view. Frequent earthquakes disturbed the water of the strait, when suddenly a terrific explosion occurred in the distant mountain and a great mass of rocks was thrown into the air. The first explosion was followed by others in quick succession, each seemingly more terrific than the one before, and in a short time a steady stream of rocks and ashes was pouring out of the peak and spreading far over the surrounding country, obscuring the sun and shutting off from view the troubled mountain.

At four o'clock in the afternoon when the Dora was seventy miles from the volcano, total darkness came and ashes began to fall in thick clouds upon the deck, covering it in a short time with a white layer, that increased in thickness until it was three inches deep

The stifling atmosphere gave the passengers violent headaches and the whole ship's company was in misery, while all night long the Dora steamed through the dust-laden air and was rocked by the earthquakes that lashed the water while the mountain thundered in the distance.

At 5 o'clock Friday morning, the Dora having steamed fifty miles out of her course, clear air was reached and the passengers were able to breathe freely again. Looking back they could see the column of smoke and ashes still pouring out of the volcano.

The volcanic disturbance is the most violent ever recorded in Alaska. It is estimated that an area of 300 square miles, much of it fertile territory, has been covered to a depth of several inches by the volcanic ash.

WILL RUN A DISTILLERY

After giving the French process of manufacturing non-poisonous alcohol from saw dust a nine months' trial, says the Irondale News, the management of the Classen Chemical company has decided the article could not be made commercially profitable and the process will be discontinued. This does not mean the plant will be abandoned but it will be operated as a distillery, producing alcohol from Hawaiian molasses. The change in apparatus will be trifling and it is announced the plant will be operating under its new methods by about July first.

TAXPAYERS' LEAGUE ORGANIZED AT SEQUIM

The Clallam County Taxpayers League was organized in the Sequim opera house last Saturday. Speaking of the meeting, the Sequim Press says:

The Clallam County Taxpayers League was organized in the Sequim opera house Saturday afternoon of last week.

The hall was filled with people from Sequim, Dungeness, Blyn, Happy Valley, Port Williams, and in fact from all East End communities.

J. A. Adams was elected president, John Lauridson treasurer, and J. M. Grant, secretary.

Fifteen trustees were chosen as follows: Jacob Mapes, J. A. Adams, P. S. Govan, James Dick, Donald McInnes, Thad Wagner, J. M. Grant, Thomas Miller, R. F. Taylor, J. L. Keeler, James Pettett, J. Laurenson, J. J. Backus, Bert Ward and W. K. Clark.

Next meeting will be held at Dungeness on Saturday afternoon at two o'clock.

The purpose of the league is to learn if the money raised by taxation is expended judiciously and to determine the best use to which the revenues of the county can be applied. Also to discuss the most equitable method of distributing the burden of taxation. The league also proposes to lend assistance to the county officials in determining the many questions of expenditure which they are frequently called upon to decide.

The Clallam County Commercial club with a membership of about 40 men was also organized at the opera house Saturday afternoon. J. A. Adams was elected president; R. W. Schumacher, treasurer and John Laurenson, secretary. A committee was appointed to get by-laws ready and when completed the organization will be completed. The club will arrange for the reception and entertainment of the Olympic Peninsula Development League which holds its next meeting at Sequim on a date to be set by the people here.

THE TENT CATERPILLAR

"What shall I do for the tent caterpillar?"

This destructive insect winters in the egg state, the egg mass being often found in a circle around a small twig. The larvae or worms hatch in early spring and soon form peculiar tents, upon the nearest fork of a twig. The worms feed on the foliage during the day time and go into the tent at night.

As a means of control spray the trees thoroughly with an arsenical, such as arsenate of lead (two pounds diluted in fifty gallons of water). Also burn the tents with a torch. A good torch can be easily made by forming a cone of fine screen wire and nailing it point downward to a long pole. Fill the cone with rags soaked in kerosene; light the torch and hold it to the tent. The insects as they become hot will leave the tent and drop into the burning cone and be destroyed. A burning rag on the end of a pole without the wire cone will burn out the tents but will not catch the worms as they drop and many of them crawl up other trees.

"Is it too late to spray for apple scab?"

Apple scab has been forming on the young fruits and leaves for some time but if the grower has not sprayed for this disease or has only made the cluster bud spraying he should not neglect to make another application as soon as possible.

Lime of sulphur solution is the most desirable material to use as a spray for apple scab. At this time of year it should be diluted to a strength of about one and a half gallons to every fifty gallons of water.

U. S. POLICING CUBA

Trouble in eastern Cuba has resulted in the policing of that part of the island republic by the United States. Marines have been sent to various ports from the battleships and cruisers now in Cuban ports. Marines engaged in guarding the El Cuero mines were attacked by the insurgents Monday. It is believed that Uncle Sam has a long task before him and colliers are being made ready to carry several weeks supplies. 12,600 marines can be landed from the ships of the Atlantic fleet if necessary.

The local Order of Elks, B. P. O. E., according to their custom will observe Flag Day, Friday, June 14. This year the exercises will be public, and held in Civic Park, weather permitting.

A fine program, under the direction of the Elks, will be given. Judge A. R. Coleman, of Port Townsend, one of the ablest orators of the Olympic Peninsula, will deliver the oration.

PREPARING FOR HARVEST TIME AT THE CAPE

A fleet of one hundred gasoline power seine boats will operate from Neah bay the coming salmon season. In addition to this great number of power boats, hundreds of smaller craft will make headquarters there and a force of 1000 trollers will conduct hand line fishing in the neighborhood of Cape Flattery. The season promises to be a busy one and the catch undoubtedly will be enormous.

Many thousands of cases of salmon will be packed at Neah bay, and the Gorman Fish Company of Seattle is pushing construction work on their wharf and plant as rapidly as possible Fresh water is being piped from a stream back of the reservation and this will be carried to the cannery and wharf, where fresh water will be supplied to power boats and steamers. The floating canneries will be stationed at Neah bay and mild curing plants will be operated. Cannery work and mild curing are expected to commence about the middle of June. With the great numbers of power boats and hand fisherman working, the canneries and mild curing plants are looking for a record take of salmon, and there is every reason to believe the early summer will find Neah bay a place of unusual hustle and activity.

Twelve canneries will be represented at the place and it is possible some keen competition will develop when the fishing is actively under way.

The little Indian town is preparing for the rush of fishermen and cannerymen, and a new hotel is being built by Post Trader Washburn of the reservation.

Mild cured salmon is rapidly becoming a recognized product of merit and the markets of the east are increasing their call for it. The output for Neah bay alone this season will be large, but every pound is said to have been engaged by eastern buyers. It will be shipped as rapidly as prepared and constitute a considerable tonnage of transcontinental freight this summer and fall.

The E. A. Sims Co. will operate its two canneries in Port Townsend this season, and a heavy pack is anticipated.

The Friday Harbor Packing Co. will be represented in the Neah bay district with a fleet of five purse seine boats and the tender Neraid, which will bring a share of the catch from that district to the Friday Harbor cannery.—Friday Harbor Journal.

HARDING-FLEMING

Miss Hattie Fleming and Earnest Harding, two of Lincoln Heights favorite young people, were married at the Congregational parsonage by Rev. Stephen Smith on Monday afternoon, leaving on the evening boat for up sound for a short wedding trip. The bride is a very lovable and attractive young lady and was one of the sweet girl graduates of this year's class. Her husband is a faithful, industrious young man, well worthy of the fair bride he has won, and their many friends, including the Olympic-Leader, extend to them hearty congratulations and best wishes. Mr. Harding has a nice little home built for his bride on Lincoln Heights, but he is at present working on the Tatoosh and will be at Neah Bay most of the summer, so they will live there for the present.

Fairview Folks

Mrs. Oscar Winters and children went out to the Elwah last Saturday to spend a week at the Bradshaw home.

Mr. and Mrs. Corning and family were visitors at the J. Winters' home last Sunday.

Mrs. Pike was a one day visitor last week.

Jno. Warnberg, a rancher on the Danz road, shot and killed himself last Tuesday morning. Early in the morning he phoned to a neighbor who was going to town to be sure and bring his mail. Later another neighbor went to his home on an errand and found him dead. The cause is not yet known.

Mrs. Fossett and her sister, Mrs. Hardman, who has been visiting here, were called to Seattle by telegram last week to see their father, Mr. Berry, who is quite sick.

Willis Chambers was an up sound visitor last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Forest, of Blue Mountain, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. Winters on Sunday and Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harlow were guests at the Luke home one day last week.

Seemingly without cause, one of Mr. Land's big horses dropped dead in his harness one day last week. It was a shock to the family and they have the sympathy of all.

On Thursday, June 6, Mrs. Pearl Harbaugh McCumber, ex-president of the F. L. C., of Fairview, entertained the club at her beautiful home at the end of Chuckhole road. The meeting was a howling success in every way. There were eight active members and six visitors present. Our former president gave up the chair to Mrs. Chambers who will preside (gracefully of course) for the next six months. Mrs. F. W. Sutter also relieved the former secretary, Mrs. O'Brien, of her many and important duties. Miss Alfreda Harbaugh very pleasantly surprised us with a comic recitation. Mrs. Oscar Winters brought along her new hand organ (minus the monkey) and gave us some fine classical music and it was indeed a rare treat when Mrs. Chambers, of "The Wayside," displayed her wonderful ability in the art of elocution when she recited the first few lines of the first verse of the well known and fascinating recitation, "Old Mother Hubbard." Mrs. O'Brien did equally as well when she arose and recited the famous and never to be forgotten recitation of the wonderful "Bettie Botter."

The Fairview buss (as it has been named), stopped at the different stations and took in eight women folks who were on their way to the McCumber home.

Last but not least Sister Cary, in her modest and lady like way, suggested that we give a basket social and dance on Saturday, June 29, upon which every member and guest agreed. All Clallam county is invited. So laddies bring the lassies and lassies bring your baskets and we will have a jolly time. "Waltz Me Around Again, Willie."
