Sunday, October 5, is the opening day for Fire Prevention Week with its full schedule of activities devoted to making people conscious of the importance of fire prevention.

Mayor Fred Epperson today officially proclaims October 5 to 11 as Fire Prevention Week. In his proclamation the mayor says: "I earnestly request every citizen to do his part in eliminating all possible cause of fire in his home or in his business and urge that the school children of this community be given appropriate instructions to inspect their own residences and that the fire department assist them in this effort. I particularly direct the municipal agencies, fire department and schools to assist in arousing the public to the seriousness of the fire problem."

Sunday church services will emphasize fire prevention and on Monday, window displays will be opened, banners and posters will appear. Inspection blanks, handbills and other fire prevention material will be distributed to homes and offices. Also on Monday, the Boy Scouts will join with the fire and water departments in placing informative posters about the city.

Clean-up- today for homes and businesses is scheduled for Tuesday and talks on the importance of fire prevention will be made by the firemen to grade school children and the Kiwanis club.

Wednesday will continue with talks to school children and the Rotary club.

Thursday is inspection day when everybody will be expected to make complete inspection of buildings and premises, Fire Chief Clay Wolverton said today. Boy and Girl scouts, camp fire girls and school children will return to the fire department, information blanks which each had taken home. Talks and demonstration are also scheduled at the high school.

Clean-up day for the entire city will be held Friday.

Climax of the week will come Saturday, October 11, with a paper drive east of Laurel street at 1 p.m. A west side paper drive will be held later, Wolverton said.

The game is called for 8 p.m.

Saturday at 10 a.m. on Roosevelt Field the Roosevelt Junior High Teddies open their season against the Sequim Cubs.

Saturday night under the lights at Civic Field the Port Angeles Stags make their gridiron debut as they test their strength against the USS Princeton.

Saturday night at 8 o'clock KONP is back on the sports airlanes again with a coverage of the Port Angeles Stags-USS Princeton tussle.

Bad Weather Grounds CG Search Planes

Bad flying on the Washington and Oregon coast prevented the Ediz hook coast guard planes from joining the search for the missing fishing boat Zarembo III again today. The Zarembo is unreported at sea for 19 days

At noon today the Ediz hook coastguard said they had received no report on another boat reported missing from Grays Harbor. The second boat was supposed to be at Grays harbor on Wednesday, according to other reports.

In the meantime a local flight was made Thursday to locate a 14 foot fishing boat reported by the owner to be adrift at Sequim Bay. The man called while the plane was in the air and reported that the boat had been located.

Politician Killed When Car Blasted

ETOWAH, Tenn—(AP)—T. B. Ivins, McMinn county political figure was killed and his six-year old grandson, Danny Ivins, was injured today when their automobile was blown up.

They were taken to a hospital at Athens, and Ivins died there.

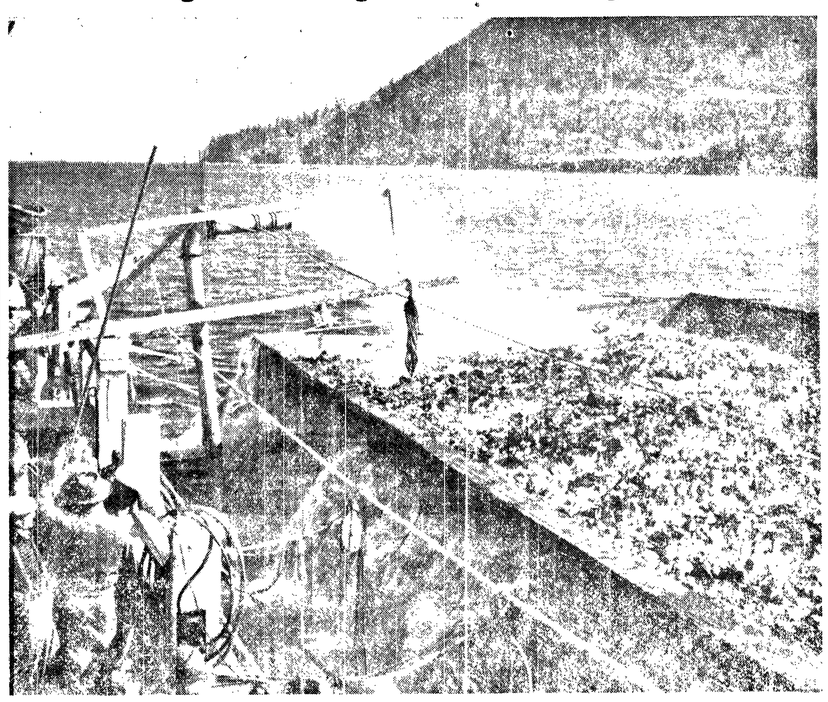
Ivins was tried several months ago on charges of slaying Charles Dunn, member of a well-known Etowah family. The case ended in a mistrial.

Athens, county seat of McMinn county, was the scene of a battle of bullets and ballots in a local primary election in August, 1946, in which a slate of non-partisan GI's overthrew a long-entrenched democratic political machine.

At Athens, Dr. W. Foree said Ivins' right leg had been blown off, his left arm badly mangled and his body was peppered with pieces of steel from the explosion.

The grandson apparently was not seriously hurt, Dr. Foree reported.

Seventh Bargeload Brings Salmon Salvage To 26%



This picture taken by diver D. E. O'Donnell shows canned salmon pouring from a suction pipe into a nearly filled barge off Port Crescent. The suction pipe rises from the wreck of the MS Diamond Knot where she sank in 104 feet of water on August 13 after a collision off Port Angeles.

This week a Foss tug towed the seventh scowload of canned salmon from the Diamond Knot to a Seattle cannery for inspection and recanning.

This makes the total cans raised by the gushing 12-inch salvage syphon around 40,000 cases or about 26 percent of the total aboard the Diamond Knot when she sank.

According to salvage officials this is a satisfactory return and everything at the salvage operation is going well. Walter Martignoni, in charge of the job, stresses the importance of the weather, however, in guessing the future success and the length of time needed to complete the salvage.

In the meantime the men at Port Crescent are taking advantage of every hour of favorable weather and are working day and night. Five power plants supply electricity for night searchlights. These play on the geyser of water bringing up the canned fish, and on the divers who work in day and night shifts and descend into the hull of the Diamond Knot to feed the cans of salmon toward the siphon with water jets.

Salvage officials agree with Foss tug officials this is by far the largest job of its kind attempted on the Pacific coast.

An agreement has been worked out between the original owners, who are still interested in the cargo, the insurance underwriters, and Foss Tug Company, who had a line on the Diamond Knot when it sank. All are cooperating to get the $3,500,000 worth of fish back on the food market. An estimated one-ninth of the Bristol bay pack for 1947 was on the Diamond Knot. The canneries that take the canned salmon for recanning employ 12 professional "smellers" in order to insure the quality of the recanned fish.

These girls, who are specially trained for their work, smell each can of fish as it is opened at the cannery to detect any spoilage.

The fish that passes the smellers is then dumped out, reprocessed, and recanned. Each separate canning is marked as to time of day, and cans from each lot are picked by government inspectors to be tested. Every can tested must pass, or the entire lot is thrown out by the inspector.

Queen Wilhelmina Will Lay Down Her Powers Temporarily

THE HAGUE—(AP)—The Netherlands government announced today that Queen Wilhelmina would temporarily lay down her royal power in the near future for reasons of health and that Crown Princess Juliana 36, would act as princess regent.

The announcement said the legislation would be introduced shortly in parliament to permit transfer of the royal power.

The bulletin added that while the 67-year-old queen was not in the best of health there was no reason for alarm over her condition.

The queen was reported on Sept. 24 to be suffering from fatigue, and her secretariat said she was going to her summer palace, Het Loo, for a rest.

A communique issued at the time said in view of her health it was not certain whether Wilhelmina would be able to attend the ceremonies marking next year's 50th anniversary of her coronation.

Stricken with bronchitis, the queen was unable to open the current parliamentary session Sept. 16.

Wilhelmina was born Aug. 31, 1880, the daughter of the late King Willem III and succeeded to the throne on the death of her father, Nov. 23, 1890. She did not come of age until 1898, however, and was crowned Sept. 6 of that year.

She is the widow of Prince Henry of Mecklenburg-Schwerin who died in 1934.

TWO TO SURRENDER

HOLLYWOOD—(AP)—Counsel for Composer Hanns Eisler and his wife said today he will surrender them to federal authorities on deportation proceedings as soon as the U. S. immigration office here receives a warrant from Washington.

NEW TRANSFORMERS FOR GRAND COULEE

PORTLAND, Ore. — (AP)—Installation of four single phase transformers, which will enable routing of Grand Coulee power directly to Puget Sound, is underway at Bonneville's Snohomish, Wash., sub-station.

Bonneville said the transformers were the largest ever constructed, along with two 230,000-volt transmission lines from Grand Coulee to Snohomish, they will feed Grand Coulee power directly to Puget Sound. The present line through Vancouver, Wash., will eventually be released for delivery of power to Portland.

Winona Takes Up Permanent Station In Local Harbor

The coast guard cutter Winona tied up at the Angeles Gravel & Supply Co. dock Thursday. The vessel, which carries a complement of 112 men and 12 officers, is in Port Angeles on permanent assignment.

A 225-foot ship with a 42-foot beam, the Winona will be engaged in air sea rescue, patrol duties and Pacific weather patrol while based here. It will also be recruiting headquarters for the coast guard in this area.

Built in San Pedro in 1944, the Winona was launched in 1945 and commissioned in August 15, 1946 Commander J. R. Stewart is the captain of the boat, which has been stationed in Honolulu and Seattle since 1946. Three officers, Lt. Cmdr. B. P. Clark, executive officer, Ensign Boguckl, gunnery officer, and Ensign D. P. Bates commissory officer, have been aboard the ship since before it was commissioned Considered one of the newest and fastest ships of its class, the 18-knot Winona is one of six electric drive cutters based on the Pacific coast. All of the cutters are being used by the coast guard for the same type of air and sea rescue work.

Equipped with the most modern engineering and electronic equipment, including radar, the Winona comes to Port Angeles to succeed the Haida, which was decommissioned early this year. Commander Stewart estimates that the Winona will bring a payroll of about $20,000 per month to the city.

SOME MEN GET HOMES

During a preliminary four day visit here on September 12, about 18 of the crew seeking housing were able to locate homes. According to Lt. Comdr. Clark, about ten men aboard the ship are still looking for one, two, an dthree bedroom homes

Other officers aboard include Lt. J. P. Latimer, who will be replaced sometime next week by Lt. Comdr. E. C. Thompson, Lt. H. T. Hendrickson, Lt M. L. McGregor and Lt. J. A Ford Pay and supply officer is C. Mathewson.

No definite schedule has been set up for the Winona, but officers aboard do not expect that she will be assigned to weather patrol until sometime in November. In the meantime the Winona will work in connection with the Ediz hook air rescue station and will receive assignments from district coast guard headquarters in Seattle.

Sequim District Gets $42,000 for School

OLYMPIA —(AP)— Mrs. Pearl A. Wanamker, state superintendent of public instruction, today announced state school building fund grants amounting to $1,413,405 among school districts in 10 counties of the state.

The school districts will use the funds together with local appropriations for the construction of new buildings, she said.

(Among the grants was to Sequim District No. 323, $42,000 for a new elementary school unit.)

Taft Undecided About Personal Results of Trip

By Jack Bell

ENROUTE EAST WITH TAFT—(AP)—Senator Robert A. Taft headed home for Ohio today satisfied he has succeeded in dramatizing to the west the record of the republican congress but still publicly undecided about the personal political results involved.

Capping a 12,00-mile stumping tour with a stinging attack in Casper, Wyo., on President Truman's democratic administration, Taft set out by train for Cincinnati and conferences with Rep. Clarence Brown (R-Ohio) which will determine the Ohio senator's future political course.

Brown, as campaign manager for Taft in the latter's role as Ohio's "favorite son," has been canvassing the rest of the country while Taft was making appearances in Wyoming, Idaho, Nevada, Washington, Oregon and California.

What Brown has to report, plus what Taft has learned at first hand, is expected to add up to a formal announcement soon that the Ohio senator will seek the 1948 republican presidential nomination.

With this objective obviously in mind, Taft already has laid the foundation for a vigorous attack on the democratic administration. He also has written in speeches what friends say is the framework of a republican program of his own.

Taft summed this up for his Casper audience last night in reciting the record of the republican congress.

He said this consisted of "carrying out the mandate of the people in four important policies—the reduction of expenses, the reduction of taxes. The elimination of war powers and federal regulation and the restoration of equality and freedom in labor management relations."

He tore into what he called "the wavering uncertainty and lack of principle" of the Truman administration in handling domestic and foreign affairs.

Picture the state department as "disorganized and working at cross-purposes within itself," the Ohioan said that people he met all over the west wanted to know if this country is heading for war or peace with Russia.

(NEA Telephoto)

Housewifely Mrs. Martha Taft laid down her knitting needles and spoke before a capacity crowd at Seattle, Wash., pouring forth a flood of wit and invective to show why the Truman administration should be ousted in 1948 and a Republican—preferably her husband, Senator Robert A. Taft—should be installed.

SOVIET PAPER SAYS AMERICANS STARVING

BERLIN — (AP) — The Soviet-licensed newspaper Vorwaerts, commenting on appeals to the American people to save on food, said today:

"Even in rich America, in the midst of plenty, there are millions of persons who hunger because they do not have enough money to buy sufficient food. One could not ask an additional sacrifice from them."

Longmire Isolated When Flood Wrecks Nisqually Bridge

TACOMA, Wash. — (AP)—A sudden flood destroyed a mile of highway in Mount Rainier National Park near the Nisqually entrance early today, isolating an estimated 150 persons at Longmire and Paradise resorts.

(First news of the flood was sent to the Associated Press this morning by the Port Angeles Evening News who received the information from Olympic National Park headquarters here after it had been received there by radio.)

Rainfall totalling two and three-eighths inches in 24 hours caused the flood. No one was injured, and supplies for the isolated persons was adequate, officials said.

They reported most tourists were turned back at the park entrance yesterday when the Nisqually river started flooding, and only about a dozen visitors were among those cut off by the flood. The rest were park employes and their families.

Telephone communications with the park were disrupted by the flood, and first word was dispatched by radio to the Olympic National Park headquarters in Port Angeles.

Fred J. Overy, of Port Angeles, acting superintendent of the Olympic Park, wired the national park director in Washington that the flood, on Kautz creek a short distance inside the Nisqually entrance, sent tons of rocks, trees and mud over the highway. Nisqually river also was flooding, Overly reported, and there was considerable damage along its course.

Mount Rainier Park officials advised Overly that two trucks and a power shovel were lost in the flood.

The Nisqually entrance was closed to tourists until further notice.

A park employe said unofficial estimates would place damage in the hundreds of thousands of dollars, possibly much more.

At Fort Lewis, army officers said they believed a number of second division soldiers in training for Alaska maneuvers were probably marooned and that help would have to be sent them.

Russians Barred From Exhibition Of New Weapons

WASHINGTON — (AP)—The army said today that Russian military attaches were not invited to an ordnance demonstration at the Aberdeen, Md., proving grounds yesterday because American attaches have been barred from similar showings in Russia.

The Aberdeen demonstration is staged annually by the Army Ordnance Association to show new weapons in operation.

Military attaches of other foreign powers attended yesterday's demonstration along with more than 2,500 United States industrialists, army, navy and air force officers, and newspapermen.

But Soviet military attaches and newsmen, who were invited a year ago, were missing.

Persons familiar with the work of intelligence officers here and in Russia told a reporter that the Americans operate at a distinct disadvantage compared with the Russians.

In the United States, Rusisans are free to move about the country without reporting to any government agency. On the other hand, these officials said, Americans in Moscow are subject to strict government policy controlling military attaches and also to tight restrictions imposed through travel permits and hotel accommodations.

Palestine Arabs In General Strike

By Carter L. Davidson

JERUSALEM — (AP) — A general strike of Palestine Arabs, beginning at dawn in protest against the proposed partition of the Holy Land, paralyzed all Arab sections today and sent hundreds of thousands pouring into mosques for prayer.

The streets were crowded with Arab pedestrians, since all Arab buses stayed in garages and pickets ranged around bus stops to prevent Arabs from riding in Jewish buses.

Palastin, Christian-Arab newspaper in Jaffa, appeared with a heavy black border around its front page and carried headlines reading: "Palestine day today is funeral of all enemies of Arab world."

Emile Ghoury, member of the Arab higher executive committee, addressed Moslems in the mosque El Aksa at midmorning and read a message from the exiled grand mufti, Haj Amin El Husseini. Several other speakers also exhorted Arabs to unity against Jewish political aspirations.

Palestine police, on the alert since dawn, had tommy gunners replacing the usual riflemen on foot patrol. Rolls of barbed wire were hauled to position at all seven gates of the old walled city for use in case the Arabs tried to demonstrate in modern Jerusalem.

Witness Testifies He Was Solicited To Donate Money to Club

SPOKANE —(AP)—A state senate committee dug deeper today in its probe of private liquor and slot machine clubs after hearing a witness testify yesterday that a proposed $5,000 fee for licensing a Spokane Club would include a $2,000 donation to the Capitol Club of Olympia.

The witness, Horton Herman, attorney for the Wandermere Golf and Country Club, said that after an early application for a license was turned down because of insufficient "community necessity," he was told it would be "necessary to go through Edward J. Reilly, Levy Johnson of Olympia or a man by the name of Heil in Seattle."

Reilly, a Spokane attorney, and Johnson both are former democratic state representatives. Johnson is a former member of the prosecuting attorney's office in Thurston county.

Herman said when he later saw Johnson he was told that it probably would take $5,000 to get a license.

"He said I'd get $1,500 and he'd get $1,500 and $2,000 would go to the Capitol Club, Herman testified.

"I asked him what the Capitol Club was and how it operated. He said 'of course you know it costs money for the governor to be in Washington (D. C.) He's only allowed $6 a day when he's out of the state. Now he's in Washington trying to do something for the people of this state. He's planning a governor's conference on Vashon island and that costs money.'"

Herman said Wandermere did not have that kind of money and that later when he went to Olympia and talked to a member of the liquor control board, it was suggested that he resubmit the application. It was granted, he said, without any such payment.

(Capitol Club finances were the subject of a republican-directed probe during the legislative session when GOP members charged that state employes were under pressure to subscribe to the club funds and that they were used for political purposes.

(Both charges, were denied by Jack Ballew, director of the finance, budget and business department and an officer in the club, who cited use of funds for special expenses incumbent upon the governor and his office for which no state appropriations are available.)

Earlier in the hearing, Reilly, one of those who Herman testified it was suggested he "go through" in obtaining a license, told the senate committee he had paid no money to politicians to secure licenses for clubs.

Asked by Attorney Thomas A. E. Lally, who questioned witnesses, whether he had paid anything to any other person in behalf of the Greek-American Social Club's application, Reilly replied:

"Not one penny—except to my law partner."

"I mean did you pay anything to any politician?"

"No," replied Reilly. "I don't belong to the Capitol Club. I don't contribute to it. I never asked anybody to contribute to it.'

Reilly said he received $850 for securing the Greek-American Club's license and that it required three trips to Olympia and several months to complete the work.

PORTLAND SHOW STARTS

PORTLAND, Ore. — (AP) — Livestock stalls at the Pacific international livestock exposition building were crowded today as the annual show prepared to open at 5 p.m.

Walter A. Holt, general manager, said an annex was taking care of some of the animals and others were being placed in scattered sections of the big barn.

Dairy and beef cattle are here from Canada, South Dakota, Wyoming, California, Utah, Montana, Washington and Oregon, he said.

Judging in most classes starts Monday but 4-H and collegiate competitions open tomorrow.

A horse show and rodeo will be held nightly through Oct. 11.

Dodgers, With One Hit, Win From Yankees, 3-2, to Tie Up Series

By Jack Hand

EBBETS FIELD, BROOKLYN —(AP)— Cookie Lavagatto's pinch double off the right field wall, the only Dodger base hit off Bill Bevens, gave Brooklyn a 3-2 victory over the New York Yankees today in a thrill-soaked ball game that squared the world series at two games apiece.

With Bevens reaching for a world series mark and already past the best previous no-hit record, Lavagetto struck the dramatic wallop that scored both pinch runners Al Gionfriddo and Eddie Miksis to end one of the most exciting games in the long string of world series since 1903.

Ebbets Field assemblage, 33,443 strong, hummed with excitement throughout the climatic ninth inning as Bevens made his big bid. Three times catches by Yankee outfielders had saved him but there was no chance on the last one.

Lavagetto, sent up to bat for Ed Stanky, came through with this big blow that ended the ball game in one split second.

Conflict Starting Over Immediate European Relief

WASHINGTON — (AP)—A sharp conflict has developed among top administration officials over whether the government should step up immediately its purchases of wheat for export to shortage areas.

The agriculture department says no. The state, commerce and war departments say yes. The controversy is expected to be laid before President Truman for settlement.

Secretary of Agriculture Anderson wants to go slow on government buying until it can be determined whether the public is cooperating with Mr. Truman's "waste less" food program.

In other words, Anderson wants to hold export buying to a rate of 470,000,000 bushels this crop year for the time being. This is the quantity of grain which the cabinet food committee has said the United States could safely spare at present rates of consumption.

Mr. Truman has asked the public to reduce domestic use of grain by 100,000,000 bushels so that exports might be increased to the rate of $570,000,000 bushels this year.

The state, commerce and war department officials are insisting that purchases for export be stepped up immediately to the 570,000,000-bushel level. Anderson argues that such action might push grain prices far above present levels.

Both the president and his citizens emergency food committee have recommended that savings be made by feeding less grain to livestock and by more consumer care in waste of bread and other direct wheat products.

Anderson holds the view that grain prices could be held near present levels if any setup in government buying followed actual showing of a corresponding reduction in grain usage.

Officials who declined to be identified said Anderson had turned down requests by the state and war departments to increase grain buying now.

FRIENDLY DEER

DOYLESTOWN, Pa.—(AP)—Naturalist George MacReynolds took a stroll to view the wonders of nature and had the thrill of his 88 years lifetime.

A spike-buck deer popped up beside him and stepped up boldly to nibble at a piece of candy in his outstretched hand.

Deer and naturalist walked leisurely toward town as motorists stopped to watch in amazement. MacReynolds had to hide in the bushes to lose his friend.

Russians Renew UN Attacks on U S

LAKE SUCCESS—(AP)—Russia renewed her attacks on the United States today with a charge by Dmitri Manuilsky, foreign minister of the Soviet Ukraine, that the American government was trying to throw a smoke-screen to cover "intervention" in Greece.

The shaggy-haired Ukrainian, who has delivered some of Russia's main speeches on the Balkan dispute, made his charges before the 57-nation political committee of the general assembly in a 53-minute speech.

He kept on the line laid down yesterday by Albania and Bulgaria—two of Russia's Balkan satellites. They said the United States and Britain were primary responsible for the Balkan troubles, and not Greece's northern neighbors.

Manuilsky figured in the Balkan dispute a year ago by filing a complain with the security council demanding immediate withdrawal of British troops from Greece. At that time he flew to New York with two suitcases full of documents and took part personally in 10 long council sessions.

This week Manuilsky was the center of another major fight—the continuing deadlock between the Ukraine and Indian in the contest for the security council seat which Poland will vacate Dec. 31. Manuilsky probably would represent the Ukraine on the council if the Ukraine defeats India when the assembly attempts to end the impasse sometime next week in plenary session at Flushing Meadow Park, New York.

Are Eire - England Going to Bury Hatchet?

By Dewitt Mackenzie
(AP Foreign Afafirs Analyst)

From Dublin comes news that Eire finally has decided to remove the bitterly disliked statue of Queen Victoria which through many decades of hostile relationship between Southern Ireland and England has stood in front of Leinster House—now the dail, or parliament, of an independent Eire.

The announced reason for the removal is that the room it occupies is needed for parking space—poor Victoria! But everybody knows there are few reminders of Britain that stir the fightin' Irishman to greater wrath than sight of the queen who ruled in days which Southern Ireland like to forget.

The famous queen-empress sits in grand state on a huge pedestal, with the billowing skirts of her day so spread out that she looks for all the world like an enormous broody hen. The statue is so big that it almost blocks a view of the building as one stands in front of it. I know, because when I was in Dublin in '45 I tried to take a snapshot of the parliament house and couldn't find any place to avoid Victoria. However, I snapped a picture and had it taken away from me by a minor government employe who said:

"We can't have a picture of the parliament building taken with the queen in front of it."

However, despite this barrier between Eire and England—a barrier which was responsible in no small degree for Eire's much criticized neutrality in the late World War—recent developments have set observers to speculating whether perhaps the two old enemies might be on the way to a burying of the hatchet. The past few weeks have seen events which might portend better times.

First was the trip by Prime Minister De Valera to London to consult with Prime Minister Attlee on the economic situation as relating to the two countries. That was a highly important gesture for the proud and stern De Valera to make—he who a generation ago was condemned to death by the British as one of the leaders of the Easter week rebellion. I am acquainted with Mr. De Valera and take this to be a friendly move on his part.

Then the other day when Eire's name came up for membership in the United Nations, British Minister of State Hector McNeil went out of his way to make a striking defense of Eire who was being opposed by Russia for the second time. Said McNeil:

"Can anyone possibly justify the rejection of Eire as a member of the United Nations. Here is a reputable and stable government whose relations with members of this organization are good and cordial. She is, above all, a peaceful nation, seeking by legitimate means to improve at all times her relationship with powers similarly stable and legal. There is not one argument that can be offered against her admission."

That's what you call reciprocity. Russia vetoed the Irish application, but Britain did her best for Eire.

Government May Buy Its Grain Direct

WASHINGTON — (AP)—Secretary of Agriculture Anderson today disclosed that the agriculture department is considering purchases of grain direct from farmers.

This by-passing of the grain exchanges would be aimed to curb the inflationary upswing of wheat and corn prices and minimize speculation resulting from the European aid program.

Anderson told of this possible step after a cabinet meeting at the White House which was reported to have been concerned largely with possible effects of the European aid program on prices.

He told reporters the government would "prefer to continue buying through normal channels of grain trade."

CHEERLEADER PRACTICE RESULTS IN INJURY

SILVER SPRING, Md. -- (AP)- A 16-year-old girl leaped into the air to lead cheering schoolmates—and paralyzed both legs.

Dr. G. B. Queen said today the girl, Hope Henderson, injured her spine when she arched her back in the leap while practicing cheerleading stunts yesterday at Montgomery Blair high school.

After the jump, she walked 200 yards, then fell to the ground.

Dr. Queen said there is a "good chance" that Hope will recover.

Fairbanks Has Snow; Two Lost Airplanes

FAIRBANKS, Alaska—(AP)—Blanketed by the season's first heavy snowfall, Fairbanks gave a chill reception Wednesday night to 54 unexpected guests.

The 54 were passengers aboard two Northwest Airlines planes on the Orient route, which were forced to land here because of bad weather at Anchorage.

Because the city, which lays claim to being one of North America's most over-crowded, had no accommodations, the passengers spent the night in the planes.

Both planes continued to Anchorage yesterday.

The coast of Colombia was one of the first parts of the American continent visited by the early Spanish navigators.

Widow Battles To Hold Tenants in Her Home

SEATTLE —(AP)— An aroused 71-year-old widow has served an ultimatum on her community club critics that her palatial 27-room home in the restricted Mt. Baker district will remain a housing beachhead for four veterans' families, despite the neighborhood complaints.

Mrs. John J. Connell, who said the long-vacant house had a reputation of being haunted before she and her late husband took it over several years ago, said she opened it to servicemen during the war at housing agency request, and now "I simply refuse to put them out and I won't be kicked around."

The issue of keeping tenants—seven adults and three children—in the No. 1 class residential area in violation of zoning restrictions was raised by the new president of the Mt. Baker Community Club, Cecil Gohlson, who commented: "The war has been over two years now, and the emergency was declared off a year ago. . . . If anyone has to move, that's their personal misfortune."

But Mrs. Connell assured her housing brood that she wouldn't contribute to any "personal misfortune" as long as they couldn't find other homes.

"I've never had a soul in my house except veterans," she explained. "It has been hectic at times, but it has been one of the grandest experiences of my life."

SLIGHT ERROR

MINNEAPOLIS —(AP)— A man identifying himself as sales manager for a steel firm called from Philadelphia Thursday regarding a salesman's car he said had been tagged and, through oversight, allowed to lapse to a point where a warrant was threatened in a letter the firm received.

Sgt. Fred Burnsted consulted the records, informing the caller that no such charges were pending against the company in Minneapolis.

"Minneapolis," fairly shouted the caller, "I called for the police department at Annapolis."

English women, whose clothes ration makes it almost impossible to buy more than one daytime costume a year, are up in arms over the Paris-New York "long skirt" edict. Realizing this, British designers have effected a compromise skirt length. Typical is this Victor Steibel creation, featuring a skirt just a shade longer than last year's models.

Community Concert Monday at Olympian

At the Olympian theatre Monday evening the first Community Concert for this season will be presented at 8:15. The entire series of concerts will be held at the theater instead of at the high school auditorium.

First attraction is Igor Gorin, baritone, who gained his first musical experience as boy soprano soloist in Vienna. Born in the Ukraine, he was taken to the Austrian capital at the age of six.

After studying at the Vienna Conservatory of Music, Gorin spent three years with a small Czechoslovakian opera company, then came to the United States. With two words of English—"hello" and "ok," he found the going tough but finally landed on the Roxy Music Hall program. Since then he has sung on national radio broadcasts, appeared in the movies and given concert performances from coast to coast.

In addition to performing, he composes music and has a dozen songs to his credit. One of these, "Caucasian Melody" is included on his Port Angeles program.

Fritz Kramer, his accompanist, will play a piano group.

Booklets Available To Farmers, Breeders

Two extension circulars of interest to farmers and rabbit breeders are available at the county extension agent's office.

Extension circular 115 entitled "Your Farm House, Make it Work," gives house plans which show three basic ideas, the front door facing the drive, the central back hall and the work room. These ideas can be incorporated into any set of plans to be used. It also includes the plan used for the farmhouse in the State College of Washington exhibit at the Western Washington fair. Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Patterson of Mount Pleasant assisted for a period in explaining this exhibit to the crowds who viewed the exhibit every hour.

Extension bulleting 295 entitled "Backyard Rabbit Raising for Meat Production" is a revised addition of this book. It deals entirely with the small unit operated for producing rabbit meat as economically as possible for home consumption. It discusses selection of breeding stock, hutches, equipment, feed and disease.

About 50 million acres in the western part of the United States are highly fertile, but cannot produce crops because of lack of water.

Ten students of the PORT ANGELES BUSINESS COLLEGE accompanied by William Florence, head of the school, went to Agate beach Wednesday for a picnic. The group spent their time hunting for agates exploring the cave and roasting weiners over a campfire.

The state regent, Mrs. Alexander Hay, will be guest of honor at the DAR meeting Tuesday, October 7, at the golf club. Mrs. F. T. Hyde and Mrs. W. E. Samuelson are hostesses for the one o'clock luncheon. This is Michael Trebert chapter's first fall meeting and is held on Tuesday, instead of the usual Monday, because of the state regent's visit.

Clothing, shoes and blankets are still being accepted at the fire hall or churches for shipment overseas by CARE, Fire Chief Clay Wolverton said today, adding that the fire department had shipped a ton and a half of donated clothing this week. Rev. James Albertson and Rev. Carl Fischer will give any information on CARE to those who may wish to send clothing or food.

The nutritious value of food from the viewpoint of a dentist was the topic studied by the JUNIOR MOTHERS club when Dr. Gail White addressed the Wednesday evening meeting of the group at the home of Mrs. Ernest Byers. A large part of the people in this county eat food which is not nutritious and the teeth of these patients prove difficult to straighten, Dr. White said. He also stressed bad chewing and bad sleeping habits as contributing to poor teeth. Two new members joined the group, Mesdames R. R. McFadden and W. T. Belford. Three guests present were Mesdames M. Sturdevant, W. James, and E. Carlson. Mrs. John Cosser assisted the hostess in serving refreshments.

Leaders of Girl Scouts Meet At Quilcene Recently

Girl Scout council members, troop leaders and troop committee members from the Olympic peninsula attended a two-day conference with scout executives at Quilcene September 29-30 at the Log Cabin Inn. Hostess to the group was Mrs. C. Rudey, owner of the inn and regional director of the Girl Scouts at Quilcene.

Attending were 28 scout leaders from Port Angeles, Port Townsend, Sequim and Quilcene. Those from Port Angeles included Mrs. Harry Taylor, Mrs. Percy Maloney, Mrs. Clarence Byrd, Mrs. Gordon McDonald, Mrs. Mike Priebe, Mrs. Lenore Bergmeister, Mrs. S. Sandberg, Mrs. Robert Gross and Mrs. Charles Homer.

Dorothy Petrol of Seattle, member of the national field staff and Washington state advisor, opened the session with an account of the history of Girl Scouting in this country and the aims and purposes of the organization. Assisting Miss Petron were Mary Lou Berry, executive director of Evergreen council, Longview, and Rita Farnan, executive director of Kitsap county, Bremerton.

The session was then divided into two groups with Miss Petron instructing council committee members and council officers on job descriptions and the many phases of committee work.

Troup leaders and troup committee members composed the second group instructed by Miss Berry and Miss Farnan in troup organization, program building and mechanics.

Closing the conference was a general discussion on troop budgets headed by Miss Petron. She also reminded those attending of the national convention to be held in Long Beach, California, November 4-7. As this is first time in 12 years that this affair has been held on the west coast it is expected that the northwest will be well represented, she said.

Finds Canadian Taverns Are Serious Places, With No Amusement Machines

By Jack Hiertz

II

VANCOUVER, B. C. (Tuesday)—Fog puts brakes on all traffic, reads the banner line of this city's morning newspaper. For the second morning it is too thick for comfort. Yesterday there was fog in the downtown district all day.

Monday morning's banner line told of the Chinook and a Swedish freighter crashing "midway between Seattle and Victoria," but an inquiry at the Canadian Press office failed to get the exact location. Of course, I was interested. The story carried page one in the afternoon editions.

Yes, licensed premises" are beer parlors. Just in case some of them might be something different, visited five yesterday afternoon and evening and it was the same in all of them—beer and only beer was being sold.

Beer drinking here is serious business. One walks into the place and finds a place to sit at a table (there are no bars). Almost before adjustment to the seat (usually an armed chair) is made, here is a chap with a tray of filled glasses. Without a word, two of them, not one, is before you.

Of course a customer can refuse to take two, but I noticed that few did, and I'm in a foreign country, so I refused.

The eight-ounce glasses are marked with a faint line an inch from the top. The amber fluid must reach this line (from the bottom) and the "head may occupy that space above the line, even into overflowing. I would presume a qualification of a good beer-drawer is to hit the line without exceeding it. The stuff is supposed to be in excess of eight percent and confidentially, after my tour of inspection, awoke this morning at six feeling as though I had ben "tasting" milk all afternoon and night before. I heartily endorse the product which I understand is made locally.

Missing are juke boxes, pinball machines, sausage, popcorn, candy, cigars, punchboards, wine, in fact everything but cigarettes and beer, in bottles and by the glass. Missing also is any wall decorations except an occasional sign warning minors of a "heavy penalty" for entering the place and warning that no music or dancing is permitted in the beer parlor, under order of the liquor commission. There are plenty of waiters, all jacketed in white even in the "tenderloin" district. There must be a whale of a percentage of profit in beer in Canada. Males alone occupy one side of the premises; couples and ladies another and the two groups do not mingle.

The world series opens today and visiting arbund one finds as much if not more interest here than in many comparable U. S. cities I have visited during the past years.

Writes the Vancouver Sun editorially last night: "Tens of thousands of us who never look at a box score from one series' end to another's beginning, who don't know the names of the players and probably couldn't pronounce them if we did, will begin to talk learnedly of base hits and the rule about infield flies. We will cluster around radios (when we should be working), and groan with the bleachers and thirst for the umpire's blood.

(Failed to contact the night clerk-baseball player, the one who declares the Yanks have not enough good "chuckers" to win the series, so can't get his version on the opener later today. Elaborate radio facilities are provided in my hotel lobby and I have my big leather chair ready, so 'batter up'.

(I'm disagreeing with the night clerk. It's going to be Them Bums in five or six, and I think the Wandering Scribe and I have a bit of a wager to that effect, if memory serves me.)

Made and cancelled plane reservation to Seattle for Thursday morning. Too much flight cancellation, due to fog. Will go by train and on Saturday, shall go to Cashmere, over Wenatchee way to look into the apple harvest. Probably back in Port Angeles Wednesday, then if not back to the news desk, will spend a day or so with Ernie Stone and family at their resort on the Elwha. Scribe sold me on that one.

Two other little items—the little commercial building and the smorgasbord.

That building, housing several Chinese businesses, is located at Pender and Carrall streets, just across the street from the Chinese Times, a well-printed, but to me, unreadable daily newspaper.

Tenants listed are J. Wong, watchmaker; Shoo Lee, shoe repairing; Hop Woo Co., employment agency; World Taxi Co.; Shan Dock, cleaning and pressing and How Ling, confectionary with adjacent living quarters.

Only mailbox to living quarters above signed: Mr. Chan, and in basement a couple of bathtubs, rented by the hour. All this is soused in a building a short block long and six feet, that's right, six feet wide. How Ling told me he paid "twenty doll, too much," when I asked the rental per month on his confectionary and living quarters combination. Then he sold me six American cigars for 45 cents that would have cost me 54 cents in the U. S. A. Didn't argue the point, but I think he made a mistake. Cigars are mighty expensive here.

Henri's grill and smorgasbord was on the list as I promised. Up has gone the price from $1 two years ago to $1.35 now, but, believe it or not, the charming waitress insisted that I go 'round the board again and again.

Served in a great variety of cold meats, salads, fish, cold cuts, etc., and the good looking gal presiding with a carving knife felt insulted, I believe, when I declined a second helping of sliced turkey.

It is amusing to watch "first nighters" as they swarm around the circular contraption holding all this delicious food. They heap their plates with a little of everything, often some dishes they never heard of before, then just can't go back for second helpings of the things they discovered they liked best. (I was a third nighter, but I ranked with a first nighter in that respect.)

I am being interrupted momentarily by a lot of chatter from a couple of American women at the desk giving the good looking clerk the business. Some Americans seem to feel these Canadians should bow all over the place when they approach.

They are fine people, and accommodating as the dickens, but they have their pride, and rightly so. I never have trouble getting what I want when I want it.

This piece for the Evening News is being written in the lobby. (Too early to bang this old threshing machine in my room.)

Two men are scheduled to hang at New Westminster tomorrow at dawn. Newspaper friends of mine told me yesterday they could arrange for me to be present, if I desired, but I declined. One hanging and two electrocutions in my "career" are sufficient. New evidence yesterday may stall one of the executions, says the morning paper.

In convention here is the Canadian Amputee Association and the larger hotels are well filled with the veterans who lost limbs in the two great wars, as they are termed here.

Noted signs all over town seeking blood donors. The Red Cross is fostering the drive; in Port Angeles it is the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Today I'm going to courts—police this morning and assize (comparable to our superior court) later in the day.

Oh, yes, there is a man with a monkey riding his shoulder. He mooched some French fries from me—some for the monkey, most of them for himself.

UMBRELLAS HOISTED

VANCOUVER, B. C., October 1—Umbrellas are being worn with raincoats this morning.

Two mornings of dense fog that has ruined the press in the trousers and sports jacket which is current attire for me, gave way early this morning to a downpour, the like of which Vancouvernites haven't experienced in almost 90 days, my friend the hotel clerk says. At dawn the rain had diminished to a drizzle, so that's what we have this morning.

From the front page of The News-Herald I read: "Port Angeles—(AP)—An orange glow in the sky, appearing to be from a forest fire, was visible on Vancouver Island, a considerable distance to the west. It appeared to be the worst fire seen in this region this year." It is a little early in the morning to get all this straight in my mind, but nowhere in the paper do I see a news story from Victoria reporting a forest fire.

MONKEY HUNGER

More about the man with the baby monkey. The nine-months-old creature rides on his master's shoulder, his beady black eyes missing nothing.

In a restaurant Sunday evening the man and the monk created quite a stir. People who attempted to pet the animal were greeted with a showing of teeth on the latter's part.

I was enjoying some mushrooms on toast with French fries when the chap with animal approached and asked for one of the pieces of potato.

"Help yourself," I replied, in my best American manner.

"No, you pick it up, please, my fingers aren't too clean, the monkey, you know—," he replied.

All of this is not conducive to accentuated appetite, but I handed a chunk of potato to the man. He pinched off a small bit of it and fed it to his palsy-walsy, which did its best to smear the man's jacket collar with the grease-starch combination.

"Looks so good, think I'll eat the rest of the potato myself," the chap said, and that he did.

Last seen he was mingling with some of the booth customers, probably mooching something for the monk.

MEETS NEWFOUNDLANDER

Newfoundland wants to become a part of the United States, explains a young fellow from there, who is out here between jobs as a "cat" driver on construction work.

He was in his native country a few weeks ago and said that governmental agitation to make Newfoundland part of Canada was not too popular with the citizenry. Polls taken here and there in the country showed a 3 to 1 majority favoring the U. S. A. over Canada, he said.

Newfoundlanders got to know the Yanks pretty well during the war. Those airfields the U. S. constructed did much to make Newfoundlanders like us. The chap with whom I talked had been to Gander.

NEXT A MOVIE VILLAIN

The fog having lifted yesterday morning, went for a stroll and wound up in Victory square, a little park surrounding a wreath-bedecked monument dedicated to the war dead of the country. Kokomo Kelly, America's No. 1 "suspicious character," was sitting on a bench and I overheard him say he was waiting to be "picked up."

Well, so they sit around here and invite the law, huh, thinks I. So, as best possible I edged over toward the four or five loungers surrounding Kelly and got in on the fact he was willing to bet he had been in more jails than any other man alive. "The only offenses I ever committed were jay-walking and hitting the bottle too hard," he declared.

Kokomo Kelly is anything but a prepossessing person. He has a broken nose, two cauliflower ears and a livid scar on his right cheek. He is a former movie villain and first world war Canadian veteran.

"I'm not in town five minutes before the cops pick me up, fingerprint and mug me and hold me 72 hours to see if they can't pin something on me," the former American said to growing audience. "As the chief of police of Berkeley, California, once said: "'You may not be a criminal but you sure look like the worst one I ever saw.'"

Kokomo Kelly said it was his looks that got him into the movies back in the silent days.

"That was before I enlisted in the Canadian army," he explained. "In pictures I was what they called in those days a 'brute heavy.' I played in all those old thrillers.

"I tied Pearl White to the railroad tracks. In one movie I threw an old lady off a 50-foot water tower and another time I burned down an orphanage."

Kelly said he was in his acting heyday during the pie-throwing era in Hollywood. He came to Canada after the outbreak of the first war and went overseas with an infantry regiment. When he came back after the war he found pictures had changed and he couldn't get a "break."

"That's when I began getting in trouble with the cops. I'm waiting to get picked up now," he said.

DISCLOSES VICE

A weekly paper published in Toronto declared in its feature section there was a "square mile of vice" in Vancouver and that prompted me to hunt it up. I roamed all around the area defined, but the worst vice I discovered was a couple of rum-dums drinking freely from a large bottle of a well-known American after-shaving lotion. Some alleys disclosed bottles emptied of the stuff. Of course there was squalor, dirt and none-too-clean air, but any city has that.

British Columbia restaurant owners assembled here in convention and the papers say the cost of eating in cafes is going to rise.

The popular dinners are going out, and a la carte service is coming in. Too much waste in the dinners due to different appetite fancies, one excuse.

Price hike is necessary due to higher food costs and ever-rising labor costs, it is explained. Then, too, I note that shoe repairmen hiked their prices 25 percent as of Monday.

Haircuts are still half a buck, however. Inflation, have you crossed the border?

Speaking of hair, have observed how much the younger male set here cares for its crowning glory. Most of the lads are light, and marcelled hair is quite common. Another thing noticeable: Seldom do you see a male with unshine shoes. Twenty cents at the bootblack for that service.

My plan to listen to the first world series game from a leather chair in the lobby of my hotel fell through. The owner of the radio that was in the lobby took it to his room and didn't include me on his guest list. So I sat in the basement of the hotel on a broken desk and heard New York steal the opener over a portable radio, with a bellboy, the hotel engineer and occasionally the elevator operator as companions.

It is now 90 minutes before the second game starts and my ball-playing clerk friend here predicts it will be New York again today.

At 8:10 a.m. Thursday I depart via the Great Northern for Seattle and on Saturday, over Stevens Pass on the same railroad for Cashmere and a week end with friends in the apple ranch country.

TWINS HAVE EXACT REACTIONS EVEN TO HAVING APPENDICITIS

SEATTLE— (AP) —Those Yocum twins have done it together again.

The 15-year-old girls, Jimmie and Jackie (that's right), had stitches and aches in the same places as they recuperated in twin beds of a Seattle hospital. It wasn't enough that they should go through measles, mumps, chickenpox, and whooping cough together—Jimmie got a pain in her abdomen a week ago. Three days later Jackie complained: "Me too." Both had their appendixes removed two days ago.

"Start with the babies" is theory of kindly Sgt. Al Ketchum, whose job with Washington State Patrol, at Seattle, is to teach them safety. Starting by coaching the careful "do's and don'ts" to kindergarten children, the 210-pound officer then follows right through the grades to high school, where he teaches safe driving . . . with resultant reduction of child traffic fatalities in his area during recent years. Ketchum, shown here with admiring Larry Robertson, points to National Safety Week, Sept. 21-27, but warns that safety is 52-weeks-a-year job . . . and it's everybody's business!

WOMAN DELIVERS HER OWN BABY WITHOUT ANY HELP

LOS ANGELES—(AP)—Her husband was at work and the phone was disconnected, so Mrs. Wilma Neideringhaus, 30, did the job unassisted.

While her four other children slept yesterday, she delivered the baby—Mary Jean, her first girl—herself.

When husband, Fred Neideringhaus, Jr., a night detective, came home, he summoned a physician. Doctor's report: Mother and daughter doing just fine.

Farmers May Have Seed Tested At College Laboratory

Any farmers who have some crop or garden seed that they would like to have tested for purity and ability to germinate are invited to send samples to the seed laboratory at Washington State College, Melvin Michel, county extension agent announces.

The laboratory will make four purity and germination tests free of charge to any Washington farmer and seed company on any kinds of seed, such as wheat, alfalfa, clover, peas, beans, tree seeds, vegetable seeds, and others, he said.

This free service is especially handy for farmers who aren't using certified seed according to E. J. Kreizinger, extension agronomist, Washington State College. The need is particularly urgent for testing seed which farmers buy from one another, as well as that which has been held over for a year and which may have lost some of its viability—or vitality.

A farmer who has some seed he wants tested should go through the following procedure:

First, get a representative sample of the seed—using approved methods. If there is any question as to how to select the sample, he may write to the WSC seed laboratory for for directions.

Second, the seed should be sent in a bag or sack that will not tear. The sample should be addressed to the Washington State Seed Laboratory, Washington State College, Pullman, Washington.

Last year the WSC laboratory handled 3,071 samples.

CIRCULARS

New Appropriations For Power Probable, Northwest Hopes

PORTLAND, Ore. - (AP)—The Pacific Northwest was left today with a hope that new power appropriations will be forthcoming from congress, if it can prove that Bonneville rates pay off.

Rep. Ben F. Jensen (R-Iowa), who conducted a congressional hearing here yesterday, told witnesses asking more dams that:

"We want to loan the money on a repayment basis. The law says the money must be paid back in 50 years If we can be assured this is possible, I can assure you this argument is about over."

Jensen, who battled against larger Bonneville appropriations in congress and contended that Bonneville rates were too low, heard a parade of witnesses from government, power, labor, agriculture, and industrial groups assert that the present rate was sufficient to pay off costs.

Saying that experts were now studying the matter for the subcommittee, Jensen predicted that "if the rates are raised, it will be by such a small amount you won't notice it." He mentioned an increase from the present 2 mills to 2½ mills per kilowatt hour as a possibility.

D. L. Marlett, assistant Bonneville administrator, told the interior department appropriations sub-committee that present power facilities will enable the Pacific northwest to "barely squeak through" the winter. Marlett came to the stand after many witnesses had urged the construction of more dams for power

Jensen promised that the committee would consider the northwest's demands "on the merits of the project." He scoffed at reports that eastern interests have influenced a cut in Bonneville appropriations. "We have to do the best we can to divide up the American 'dollar pie' in the fairest way possible," he said. "We have no axes to grind; we have no chips on our shoulders."

O'Connell Wins King County Club Election

SEATTLE—(AP)—Jerry O'Connell, former chairman of the state democratic central committee, headed the King County Young Democratic Club today after a turbulent five-hour meeting last night in which county chairman Ed Munro and Dick Watson of Olympia, state president of the Young Democrats, issued floral appeals for unity.

O'Connell defeated Irving Clark, Jr., young Seattle attorney, by a vote of 88-69 in balloting that saw virtually the entire O'Connell slate carried into office. Marjorie Rabbitt, wife of former State Senator Tom Rabbitt, was elected vice president.

In pre-voting speeches, O'Connell opposed the Marshall plan for Europe and the Truman doctrine, and favored United Nations security council control of the atomic bomb. Clark favored the Marshall plan.

Earlier, O'Connell lead a successful fight for a motion approving the proposed recall movement against democratic state Sen. Keiron W. Reardon of Snohomish county and condemning the state executive board for not approving the recall move at a recent Yakima meeting.

Aviation — And — Shipping

The porpoise reported by the New England Fish Company earlier in the week turned out to be a small blackfish. After fish company employees discovered that the 100 pound piscatorial oddity had teeth, Les Miller, inspector for the state department of fisheries, affirmed their suspicions that it was a blackfish instead of a porpoise. The fish was on display downtown Wednesday and Thursday.

The troller Mode O'Day brought in 500 pounds of silver salmon early this morning. As the trolling season nears an end catches of silvers are getting more scarce, according to fish companies.

Puget Sound Pilots guided the following boats into Puget Sound during the last two days: John W. Weeks, Bremerton; Silver Teak, Seattle; Tidewater Associated, Bremerton; Georgia R. Holmes, Seattle, and the General Omar Bundy, a troop transport from Japan.

Outbound boats included Francis Marian, Taranger and John H. Payne.

A surprised eight foot octopus was unceremoniously siphoned up out of the hold of the Diamond Knot and dumped along with a lot of canned salmon and cardboard boxes onto the deck of the scow one day this week.

By far the strangest bit of salvage to come out of the hold of the sunken ship, the octopus was put in a bathtub where he posed for numerous pictures before he was dumped back into the ocean.

HIGHWAY OUT

PORTLAND, Ore.—(AP)—A section of the Mount Hood loop highway was washed out today by a sudden freshet and the state highway department said the route probably would be closed several days.

Movement of the White river glacier was believed responsible for the freshet, highway officials said.

The washout is at the southerly end of the White river bridge and rocks were strewn over the road at the northerly bridge approach.

The washout is northeast of the Wapinitia junction and does not affect travel on that route to Portland.

STANWOOD MEN SOUGHT

EVERETT — (AP)—Two Stanwood men were sought today for questioning in connection with death of Army Sgt. Ben E. Norris, 28, of Colfax, found dead on the highway north of here late Tuesday.

Tom Warnock, Snohomish county sheriff, said he held grand larceny and robbery warrants for the pair.

Warnock said the two men, who have been traced to Seattle, were seen in company with Norris Tuesday night at Sylvana. He said the trio left a tavern about half an hour before Norris' body was run over by two automobiles.

Scout Activity Is Scheduled For This Weekend in County

First Clallam district activity of the new school year will be an overnnight outing for boy scouts this weekend, according to W. C. Brazel, camping and activities chairman. The outing has been planned by the scoutmasters and commissioners, Brazel reports, and scoutmasters or their representatives will supervise the activities of each troop at the Soleduck Hot Springs camp ground.

Transportation for the scout group is being furnished by the Kiwanis Sunday School bus system, with Clay Wolverton in charge of the arrangements. Sequim and Agnew scouts will be picked up at 8:30 Saturday morning, Wolverton reports, with Port Angeles boys meeting at each of the three grade schools at 9:00 a.m. Angeles scouts who are playing in the junior high football game Saturday may participate in the outing by reporting to the Roosevelt gymnasium at 4:00 p.m., Saturday afternoon, when a second bus will meet them. Other boys who must come later Saturday evening will have to make their own arrangements for transportation, Wolverton said. Buses will return the scouts to town about 6:00 p.m. Sunday, according to plans of the scout leaders.

Rev. MacKenzie Murray of the Presbyterian Church will join the scout group at the hot springs Sunday morning, at which time he will conduct worship services for the boys and their leaders.

Four periods of swimming are scheduled for the scout outing, with swimming fees for the boys being paid by the Naval Lodge of Elks, according to field executive Maurice Powers. Powers reports that each patrol of scouts will be responsible for their own shelter and cooking arrangements, and requested that parents see that boys have warm jackets and extra blankets in their sleeping bags for the trip. Saturday afternoon's program calls for a demonstration of camp construction, tent erection and bedding arrangements by Assistant Scoutmaster Bill Heckman of troop 476. Sunday morning Scoutmasters Irwin Edwards and Bob Seat will conduct a cooking demonstration, and a packing demonstration and clothing lecture will be given the group Sunday after lunch by neighborhood commissioner Bob Chamberlain. It is planned that the group will leave the hot springs Sunday afternoon at 4:00 p.m., according to Powers.

Parents are invited to visit the outing Sunday. Regulations for the outing require that scouts will swim only at scheduled times for the entire group, at which time leaders will supervise the activity, Powers said. Boys are to take sack lunches from home for the Saturday noon meal, and the buying of pop and candy is limited to each boy, he reports.

In addition to the Sequim and Agnew troops, Port Angeles scouts will be joined by representatives from the Forks and Beaver troops at the fall jamboree.

RIFLE CLUB BUILDING CLUBHOUSE; TO HOLD SHOOT OCTOBER 5

Several acres of land a mile west of the county fairgrounds on the cemetery road has been secured by the Peninsula Rifle and Pistol club for a clubhouse and indoor range. Work on the 30x80 foot clubhouse is already underway and club members, who are donating their labor, are hoping to have it completed this fall. Inside the building will be divided into a range room and class room with storage lockers.

Glenn Gordon, member and one of the club instructors, reports the club is expecting a good season this winter and hopes to have matches with the newly organized Quilcene club.

Turkey and merchandise shoots are planned for this fall and the first will be held Sunday, October 5.

Any persons planning to visit the club range are requested to follow the cemetery road and not drive across Clallam county airport property, Gordon said.
