State Rescinds Order For Milk Inspection Under Seattle Office

Dairymen who ship milk to Port Angeles have won their campaign to have the Olympic Health District continue inspecting their milk products.

Dr. Philip Risser, district health officer, told the Evening News today that a visit from two state officials has resulted in an indefinite postponement of a proposed state order which would have put Seattle health office in charge of all milk inspection on the Olympic peninsula.

Cameron Adams, head of the dairy and livestock division of the department of agriculture, and L. O. Tucker, chief milk sanitation advisor in the state health department, conferred with Dr. Risser here Wednesday.

The chief factor in lifting the order, Dr. Risser reported, was the "unique situation" of 100 per cent of the milk shippers protesting the order.

A petition signed by every member of the Port Angeles Milk Shippers Association went to the state departments, also bearing the endorsement of the Port Angeles city commission, and verbal backing of county commissioners.

Adams said a delgation from the Port Angeles Milk Shippers' Association went to Olympia last week, taking their case directly to Sverre Omdahl, state agriculture director.

The milk shippers even offered to help underwrite the cost of inspection for the local health district if necessary, the state men said.

The Olympic Health District presently inspects all milk shipped to Port Angeles, while the Seattle health office inspects milk shipped to Seattle. Under the proposed order the Seattle inspector would inspect all milk shipments, regardless of their destination.

Dairymen shipping to Port Angeles protested that this would take away their contact with the local health office, compelling them to deal with Seattle authorities on Port Angeles milk problems.

Dr. Risser said the state officials will make a survey of producers and pasteurization plants covered by the Olympic Health District, prior to certifying this district as the permanent inspection agency.

Former County Agent A. W. Holland Retires

PULLMAN — (Special) — Retirement of A. W. Holland as associate extension agent in Lewis county has been announced here by E. V. Ellington, director of extension at Washington State College.

Holland's retirement, for reasons of ill health, marks the end of the career of one of Washington's veteran extension workers, Ellington said. Holland first joined the Washington extension service as Adams county agent in 1917 and has continued in the work with farm people since that time.

He was named extension agent for Clallam county in July, 1921 and held that position until March, 1938, during which time he had much to do with the early agricultural development which occurred in the Clallam county area at that time.

After leaving Clallam county he was named county agent for Lewis county and served there until 1946 when ill health forced him to take a leave of absence for a year. He returned as associate agent in Lewis county in 1947 and continued in that post until his retirement.

"The Washington extension service is losing one of its veteran workers who has proven in a long, successful career, his ability to help farm people work out the problems which they must meet," Ellington said in announcing the retirement.

Deer Park Lodge in Final Weekend Of Operation, 2 Races Planned Sunday

This will be the last weekend for operation of the lodge at Deer park.

Lodge Manager Claude Galloway said reservations are down from the pace which has kept the bunks filled most of the season, and plenty of space is available. Visitors reserving space for the weekend so far include a party from the University of Washington.

Galloway reminds all skiers to remove any equipment they may have in lockers, as this weekend will be the last the lodge is open.

Sunday also will be the last day for ski instruction. Cliff Schmidke, who has given basic ski lessons to hundreds of youngsters and adults this winter, will be going to Sun Valley the following week with a large delegation from Port Angeles and Port Townsend. But he will be on the Deer park slopes Sunday forenoon to give free instruction to all junior Olympic Ski Club members. Adults also can get ski instruction from the veteran Seattle expert.

The giant slalom race for men and women, postponed from last Sunday because of fog, will be a feature of this Sunday's skiing. Also on the schedule for the day is an obstacle race, a kind of follow-the-leader event in which skiers go through barrels, around trees, over benches and any other impediments the committee can contrive.

Park service crews today were battling three large slides which have blocked the road a half mile below Whistler point. The slides are 200, 70, and 80 feet wide. But the big cat which Ernest Byers uses on the road should have the slides cleared off easily by nightfall, park officials state.

Snow was falling this morning, whipped by a 20-mile wind. Total snow depth today is 97 inches, with four inches of new wet snow. Temperature at 10:30 a.m. was 31 degrees.

30 Foreign Exchange Students to Visit Port Angeles During Peninsula Tour

Thirty foreign exchange students from the University of Washington will tour the Olympic peninsula next week under sponsorship of the Business and Professional Women's Club. Beulah Archer, chairman of the local chapter's committee on international relations, is general chairman making arrangements for the tour.

The students will arrive at 11:30 Monday morning and in small groups will visit local schools, attend classes, participate in classroom discussions and lunch at the various school lunchrooms.

A tour of the Peninsula Plywood Corporation mill is scheduled for 2 p.m. Following this the foreign student group will visit Olympic National Park headquarters where Gunnar Fagerlund, park naturalist, will show slides of Olympic National Park and discuss its operation.

Soroptimist members have been invited to the buffet dinner at the Camp Fire clubhouse which BPW plans for members of the student tour. Mrs. Marian Adams is in charge of dinner arrangements. After dinner the students will speak informally to the groups and will be overnight guests at the homes of Business and Professional clubwomen of the city.

Tuesday morning the students' travels will take them to Sappho where they will observe logging operations and to Forks, where the American Legion Auxiliary has arranged a luncheon for them. From there they will tour to Aberdeen, Longview, Chehalis and Olympia before returning to the University of Washington.

Flood Control Group To Draw Up By-laws

The Dungeness River Flood Control Association has called a general meeting at Macleay comunity hall Thursday, March 23, at 8 p.m.

Purpose of the meeting, open to all petition signers and other interested persons, is to adopt by-laws. The name of the organization, previously called the East End Flood Control Association is now the Dungeness River Flood Control Association, John Lotzgesell, executive committee chairman, announces.

County Agent Melvin Michel will explain a proposed soil erosion program that may be instituted by the department of agriculture to protect farms adjacent to the Dungeness river. This program may protect areas where other agencies cannot expend funds. All owners of land adjoining the river are especially invited to the meeting, Lotzgesell said.

Irish March Today in Honor Of Their Patron St. Patrick

DUBLIN, Ireland —(AP)— Irishmen in their Sunday best, sporting shamrock sprigs in their hats, celebrated today their first St. Patrick's Day in the wholly independent republic of Ireland.

The weather turned bright and sunny for the anniversary of Ireland's patron saint and the streets of Dublin were choked with people in holiday mood.

All business premises, including pubs, were closed. President and Mrs. Sean O'Kelly drove through Dublin on their way to a solemn high mass at the pro cathedral with a military escort.

"Shawlies," old women with kerchiefs around their head, sold bunches of shamrock on O'Connell street, Dublin's wide main thoroughfare.

But for many Irishmen, the joy and festivity of the day was dampened by the thought that authorities in northern Ireland had banned a celebration of the day by the Ancient Order of Hibernians at Moneymore, County Derry.

The northern government, which has its own parliament and premier, although retaining its allegiance to the British crown, said the ban was put down because "we fear a breach of the peace."

"A shocking and revolting spectacle," retorted the national board of the Hibernians.

They sent a message to Britain's Prime Minister Clement Attlee asking "when does your government propose to withdraw from the detestable role of catspaw for the ascendancy administration which you are maintaining in our country against our people's will?"

BUSY DAY IN ST. PATRICK

ST. PATRICK, Mo. —(AP)— Sure and they were wearing the green today in St. Patrick — all 53 of them.

This little village claims to be the only St. Patrick in the world. Atlases bear this out.

These have been busy times for the postmistress — Mrs. Laveta Logsdon, and the village priest — the Rev. Francis O'Duignan, no less. He's only 10 years out of Ireland himself.

Mrs. Logsdon estimates she has canceled between 40,000 and 45,000 letters from all over the world from persons who want the St. Patrick postmark.

Father O'Duignan adds a special touch to many of the letters — a shamrock with the legend, "St. Patrick, the only one in the world."

The village was founded about 1937 by Irish immigrants. Many of their descendants live here.

GREEN WHISKERS YET!

OLYMPIA —(AP)— Whiskers are not unusual here but when they start showing up in shades of green, oh brother!

Almost every male resident of the capital city is growing a mustache or beard for Olympia's centennial observance May 1-7.

Phil Fryer, an employe in the secretary of state's office, decided to be different.

His first opportunity came today, St. Patrick's Day. He showed up at work with a green Vandyke beard.

He said he would leave it that way, however, to carry out the slogan "Keep Washington Green."

IRISH OFFICIAL BANNED

NEW YORK—(AP)—Mayor William O'Dwyer served notice today that Sir Basil Brooks prime minister of northern Ireland will not be welcome at city hall during his forthcoming visit to this country.

O'Dwyer was reviewing the St. Patrick's Day parade. He said the prime minister's banning of a similar prade in northern Ireland is "the only bad note today," and added:

"He's coming here in a month and he'll be one official who will not be welcomed at city hall, and if he is it'll be because I'm dead."

Chinese Airmen Bomb Red Field South of Shanghai

By Spencer Moosa

TAIPEI, Formosa —(AP)— The nationalist Chinese air force today bombed its birthplace, Chienchiao field at Hangchow, 100 miles southwest of Shanghai.

An official report said the big railway bridge over the Chientang river at Hangchow also was attacked.

The big south China city of Canton was bombed as was the communist held Luichow peninsula.

The defense ministry said the communists were making feverish preparations for the invasion of two island guardians of Formosa—Chusan, the blockade base 100 miles southeast of Shanghai, and Quemoy, near Amoy.

At the same time the ministry claimed nationalist guerrillas on the mainland were gaining strength in the provinces of Kwangtung, Hunan, Szechwan and Kansu.

In Taipei the new cabinet under Premier Chen Cheng held its first formal meeting. Only one minister was absent. Harvard educated Gen. Yu Ta-Wei, who was given the defense post but has not yet accepted it. He is in the United States.

On the political front Chen Li-Fu, head of the most powerful faction of the kuomintange nationalist) party, gave Vice President Li Tsung-Jen a verbal walloping. Li is in the United States. Chen charged Li was trying to create dissention within the party and thus helping the interests of the Chinese reds.

Li was acting president for 13 months. Chiang Kai-Shek resumed the presidency on March 1 after Li flew to the states for medical attention.

Chiang's resumption of office was due to circumstances and the popular will, Chen said, adding there was no insidious plot behind it.

Chen said Li had been repudiated by all people of the country.

Superintendent at South Kitsap Resigns

PORT ORCHARD—(AP)—Kenneth Price, president of the South Kitsap school district, said last night that Joe C. Knowles will resign as district superintendent.

No immediate decision will be made as to his successor, Price said.

The resignation came two days before voters ballot on a bond issue to permit payment of teachers and other employes. They have not been paid since Jan. 6.

"We understood that voters were likely to vote against the fund measure Saturday unless Knowles resigned," Price explained. "We asked him to resign as superintendent, offering him instead of a one-year contract in the vocational school. This contract will enable him to complete service of 30 years, entitling him to retire."

WEA STUDIES KELSO

SEATTLE—(AP)—The Washington Education Association withheld action today on whether to join with the National Education Association in a probe of Kelso's strife-ridden school affairs.

Joe A. Chandler, WEA executive secretary, said no action could be taken pending a mail vote now being conducted.

More than 100 of Kelso's 120 teachers asked the probe when the school board notified 17 teachers their contracts would not be renewed and asked for the resignation of Kenneth Engman, junior high school principal.

COFFEE PRICES DROP

NEW YORK—(AP)—General Foods Corp., today trimmed prices of vacuum-packed and bag-packed coffee two cents a pound.

Hills Brothers, California Packing Corp., and most western roasters reduced their brands by similar amounts earlier this week.

An official of the National Coffee Association said the cuts reflected lower prices for green coffee beans.

Pressure Increases To End 52-Day UAW Chrysler Strike

By Glenn Engle

DETROIT — (AP) — The 52-day Chrysler strike brought action on far-flung fronts today.

Here in Detroit the CIO United Auto Workers boasted of a newly-signed pension agreement with Ford — and planned to use it as a wedge to try to get the same kind of a deal from Chrysler.

In New York, Chrysler executives were called into a secretive conference with federal mediation chief, Cyrus Ching.

These were the most direct moves aimed at getting 89,000 Chrysler strikers and thousands of workers idled indirectly back on the job.

At the same time a group of Detroit civic, religious and educational leaders went ahead with their plan for indirect "public pressure" for a settlement.

The New York parley followed by two days a similar one Ching held in Washington with CIO United Auto Workers President Walter Reuther.

Chrysler sent Herman L. Weckler, vice president and general manager, and Robert W. Conder, director of labor relations, to meet with the nation's top government mediator.

The Ford pension plan, based on a history-making agreement in principle reached last September, without a strike, is funded and jointly administered by company and union. It assures workers $100-a-month pensions, including social security, at age 65 after 30 years' service.

Reuther told the Detroit citizens group last night that the issues of funding and administration were the "guts" of the Chrysler pension dispute.

Late yesterday the UAW received a $100,000 contribution from the CIO steelworkers. It will be used for direct relief to Chrysler strikers and their families.

GIs Sentenced for Dealing With Russ

SALZBURG, Austria —(AP)— Two American soldiers were sentenced to long prison terms today after being convicted of kidnapping a Romanian-born mystery man and handing him over to the Russians for pay.

Cpl. Paul Abel of Bolivar, Mo., was given 20 years at hard labor and Sgt. John Frankey of New York City 15 years. Both also were ordered dishonorable discharge from the army and to forfeit all pay and allowances.

The verdict and sentences were announced by Col. M. Tharr of San Antonio, Texas, president of the court martial which heard the case.

Earlier today a detailed confession by Abel, in which he described how their victim, Oswald Eder, was kidnapped, was read to the court.

The confession said Eder was taken from his home in an army jeep by Abel and Frankey and handed over to five Russians near an old factory outside Vienna. They were paid 7,000 Austrian shillings (about $700).

The prosecution has described Eder as a mysterious former soldier in the German army who has been suspected by several nations of spying.

Commissioners Ask Scenic Loop Route Along West Coast

TACOMA—(AP) —West-side county commissioners today demanded a revision of state laws exempting municipal power companies from county taxation.

The resolution was adopted at the close of a two-day conference of the Olympic District of the Washington State County Commissioners Association. Representative of 10 counties attended.

The commissioners' demand will be submitted to the state association at its annual convention at Bellingham in May.

The resolution proposes that power companies be required to pay taxes to counties through whose boundaries the transmission lines run. It was introduced by the Pomona Grange of Mason county.

Other resolutions urged that a county representative be named to the state employes retirement board and that a highway be constructed from Port Angeles to connect with the new Raymond-Tokeland road. It would serve as a coastal scenic loop.

Paul Newman of Pierce county was elected president of the district group; George Elder of Thurston county was named vice president; G. C. Nelson, Grays Harbor county, was named secretary-treasurer; H. W. Bolender, Thurston county, was elected executive committee member, state board, and Lyle O'Dell, Mason county, state nominating committee member.

Navy to Reduce Sand Point Base

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Navy Undersecretary Dan A. Kimball confirmed reports yesterday that the navy will reduce sharply its activities at the Sand Point air station in Seattle.

It will be turned over to reserve units before Jan. 1.

Kimball said personnel will be reduced gradually by 137 officers, 782 enlisted men and 1,355 civilian employes. The staff after the full cut is listed to be 45 officers, 400 enlisted men and 97 civilians.

Kimball said the transfer of the station to the reserve training command "focuses added interest on the need for the permanent development of the naval air station at Whidbey island."

Asked about Kimball's Whidbey comment, a navy officer explained that the station was built during the war on a temporary basis. He said the navy would like to improve it on a permanent basis.

Lewis Sent Secret Orders Defying Court, Miner Says

CANTON, Ill.—(AP)—The ousted president of a United Mine Workers local union said today John L. Lewis secretly ordered his miners not to heed the Feb. 11 court injunction which directed them to return to work.

Lloyd H. Sidener, 44, former president of local 7455, Canton, said in an interview that Lewis, while publicly ordering his miners to end the strike, used a system of secret signals down through the ranks which ordered them to continue the strike.

Sidener filed unfair labor practices in Chicago Wednesday against the UMW before the national labor relations board. He alleged the union fined him $50,000 for attempting to return to work Feb. 24, and fixed an additional penalty of $25 for each additional day he might try to work. He said he also was ousted as president of the local union.

He said Lewis sent telegrams ordering the miners to return to work four hours after he was served with a federal district court injunction.

But Sidener asserted Lewis also sent the secret signal orally down through his "chain of command."

This signal, "the whistle blew one," meant that the miners were to continue their walkout despite the telegrams, Sidener said.

He added that he, as local union president, received the signal in a telephone call from Bernard Beasley of Canton, chairman of sub-district 2 of the Illinois UMW district. Accordingly, he said, he passed the word on to the local union members.

John Lakin, Jr., who replaced Sidener as local 7455 president, told a reporter "I never know nothing about the signals if there were any. At that time I was vice president, and all orders were recevied by the president, Lloyd Sidener, or the secretary-treasurer of our local."

In Washington, Lewis himself was reachable. But in a March 3 interview with Arthur Krock of the New York Times, he was quoted as saying:

"I know it is said that between the local officers and members and myself there is a set of secret signals, that I phrase such urgings in a way which they will understand to mean the contrary.

"But how could there be such signals? And if there were, why has no one in the industry, with spies all about, been able to detect and expose them. It is nonsense."

On March 2, Federal District Judge Richmond K. Keech in Washington declined to cite the union for contempt of court.

If the signal had been "the whistle blew three," Sidener said, it would have meant the miners were to return to work in accordance with the telegrams.

FBI Fights Move to Judge Loyalty Cases

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The justice department today denounced a congressional proposal to require the federal bureau of investigation to pass judgment on the loyalty of some government employes.

It said the plan, already approved by the house, "is fraught with peril, not only to the bureau, but also to the country itself."

The department said the FBI is now solely an "investigative and fact-gathering agency." The proposal, it continued, would make "an extremely radical and undesirable change" in its responsibilities and functions.

The plan is included in amendments to the National Science Foundation bill now in conference between the senate and the house.

The amendments, adopted by the house, would require the FBI to make a definite finding concerning the loyalty of any person employed by the foundation or awarded one of its scholarships.

The department's views were set forth in letters to members of the house interstate commerce committee from Peyton Ford, assistant to the attorney general.

Fords said the letter reflected also the views of FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, and Secretary of Defense Johnson.

Rep. Priest (D-Tenn), who handled the science bill in the house at the time it was amended, told newsmen he believes senate-house conferees will agree to eliminate the changes to which the FBI objects.

Verdict Awaited in Madsen Murder Case

FRANKFURT, Germany —(AP)— The murder case against Mrs. Yvette Madsen, 22, Brooklyn-born mother of two children charged with shooting her soldier husband to death, went to a three-judge court today for decision.

The defense and prosecution waived final arguments and her fate was placed in the hands of the occupation court at 3:30 p.m. Presiding Judge Fred Cohn announced that the court will give its verdict tomorrow.

At the end of the seven-day trial Mrs. Madsen, who had been sobbing quietly during the afternoon proceedings, raised her head from the table on which she had been resting and left the court with her WAC guard.

Earlier, Mrs. Madsen's attorney had told the court she believed she had been tricked by her father Alfred Noack of Brooklyn, into talking to German psychiatrist Dr. Kar Kleist.

McCarthy Called 'Wisconsin Worm'

GLEN ROCK, N.J.—(AP)— Dorothy Kenyon last night called Senator McCarthy (R-Wis) "the worm from Wisconsin" and said he needed the limelight because he is beginning to slip in his own state.

Miss Kenyon, 62-year-old former state department employe, was accused last week by McCarthy of being affiliated with communist-front organizations.

She was "case No. 1" in a long list of alleged communist sympathizers in the state department submitted by McCarthy to the senate foreign relations committee. She denied all the charges.

"It is appalling that under the cloak of congressional immunity a congressman may destroy the work of a lifetime in assassinating a person's character when that person has no regress," she said.

"This sort of thing was practiced by Hitler."

Miss Kenyon is a former New York City judge.

90-YEAR-OLD VET WANTS IN BUSINESS

DENVER — (AP) — Ex-navy man Ambrose Ramsey, who this year turned a spry 90, decided to take advantage of privilges extended former servicemen and go into business for himself. He showed up at the federal land office here to ask about a certain parcel of land near Alkali Bend, Colo.

"Plan to build me a filling station over there," said Ramsey. Then he dug into a travel-weary suitcase and hauled out a document stating that the navy had issued an honorable discharge in 1877 to "Third Class Boy Ramsey." He also produced a tintype picture of himself as a youngster in uniform.

But the land board had disappointing news—the parcel he had an eye on is reserved by the reclamation bureau. Ramsey said he'd try something else.

PUMP CATCHES FISH

SAN PEDRO, Calif. —(AP)— H. J. Kimmerle invented a machine that pumps sardines from the sea. The fish are normally caught in nets. The Los Angeles inventor says he tested the device aboard a purse seiner and that it picked up sardines at the rate of from 50 to 200 tons an hour.

Kimmerle's unit consists of a vacuum pump hooked to an eight inch hose with a 10-inch funnel entrance. The funnel is dropped into a closely packed school. The fish are sucked up and discharged on a conveyor belt which carries them to the hold. The inventor hopes his system will be adopted by the local sardine fleet.

MULES ARE GOOD MINERS

MORLEY, Colo. — (AP) — Morley mine has 134 on its work list which eat heartily every day whether the mine operates or not. But when they do work, these 134 mules earn their 16 pounds of oats daily plus all the hay they can shove down. This is one of the few coal mines in the country where mules are used to haul coal cars, because of gaseous conditions underground.

Rhodda Floyd, a former cowboy, is the stable boss. "Mules are a lot nicer to work with than people," he says. "Mules can't argue with you."

Research on radar, war-developed detection device, actually began as far back as 1932.

SCORING RECORD SOUGHT

CINCINNATI—(AP)—George King's try to crack the 1,000-point mark for the 1949-50 college basketball season will take most of the spotlight today as the Cincinnati invitational tourney gets under way.

Jefferson PTA Lets Hair Down

Jefferson Parent Teachers Association members got away from serious business last night and had a program of fun, with PTA Dads and Roosevelt PTA members presenting programs.

Lowell Jaeger was in charge of the program for the dads, which included a skit in which he was joined by Hugh Macaulay, George Ellis, Don Burwell and Jack Davis to portray a ladies' bridge game.

The Roosevelt PTA, headed by President Mrs. A. W. Tinkham, presented several skits. A group of square dancers included Mr. and Mrs. Ray Warren, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hoare, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Shideler, and Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Wrench, with Roy Hadley as caller. Fred Miletich and George Ellis also presented a skit, while Mrs. Donald Sleeper gave a humorous reading.

Oscar Erickson presented the high school string quartet in three selections. Eddie Hendrickson, Wayne Shields, Jack Venables and Ronald Durham comprised the quartet.

During the business meeting the PTA voted an honorary life membership to Mrs. O. L. Perry, City Council president. Members elected a nominating committee consisting of Jack Davis, chairman, Mrs. James T. Albertson and Caroline Sharnbroich to draw up a slate of officers for the coming election. The PTA also voted a letter of commendation to the school board and Supt. John D. Glann for incorporating the "Human Growth" study into the school curriculum.

Following the program, refreshments were served by the following dads: Jack Woodson, Wilbur Earl, Norman Estes, Charles Willson, Jack Davis and Palmer Swenson.

Spastic Society To Vote Monday

The local chapter of the Washington Spastic Children's Society has important business on its program for next Monday night's meeting at 8 in the Eagles hall.

Members will take a final vote on affiliation with the United Cerebral Palsy Associations, Inc., and will hold further discussion of plans for a local clinic for cerebral palsied children.

Nomination of officers also is on the agenda, and a nominating board will be set up.

Grange News

Fairview Grange initiated two new members, Mr. and Mrs. John Schoettler, at their meeting Wednesday night at the grange hall. Members discussed participation in the Clallam County Medical Bureau, with Howard Hill, Sterling Bailey and Mrs. Duncan Campbell forming a committee to report on the plan of the grange's next regular meeting.

Mrs. Erline Jacobs, home economics chairman, arranged a musical program during which Chetta Winters entertained with dancing. George King, Teddy Herman and Herman Pelikan as "The Three Musketeers" sang musical selections accompanied by Mrs. R. F. Welcome. Teddy Herman, also accompanied by Mrs. Welcome, sang a group of solos.

Warren McDonald also entertained with a reading entitled "Mr. Hold My Baby."

Under the direction of Robert Powells the boys octet of Roosevelt high school presented several numbers, after which Joe Clark, their accompanist, played a piano solo.

Erline Jacobs baked the birthday cake for March, which honored Herman Pelikan. Refreshments were served in potluck style.

Forum Studies Emotion and Daily Living

At the Parents Forum meeting Tuesday evening Mrs. Oscar Taper reported on the book, "Little Boys Make Lousy Husbands" by Lawrence Galton. And Galton concluded that being married to a bobby-soxer is no bed of roses either, Mrs. Taper reported.

She explained Galton says that in the thousands of problems in personal and family relationships which come to family service agencies each year, the main underlying factor is emotional immaturity. They find there is some remnant, small or large, of the child in every adult. Particularly when people are under strain, hidden childhood emotions tend to come to the fore to confuse and complicate their lives, she said.

Money has become a cause of dissension in family life because money has emotional as well as practical value. It can stand for power, authority over others, a feeling of importance, personal safety and superiority. How we feel about money is sometimes more important than how much money we have, Mrs. Taper declared.

"Scratch an adult and you find a child. And scratch beneath the difficulties between parents and children and often you find the fault lies in the emotional childishness of the parents. Parents want to create a child of whom they can approve, and apply their own standards to guide the child." She explained sometimes these standards spring from the parents' own dissatisfactions and take on a rigid, fear-tinged quality.

It is becoming clear, too, she continued, that in many cases what the adult seeks in his work is the specific shortage in his family relationships as a child.

"Emotional immaturity can stand in the way of solving every kind of problem because it prevents us from even defining our problems," the speaker said.

She explained the qualities considered necessary to be judged fully mature emotionally. These are to find greater satisfaction in giving than receiving, and having the capacity to form satisfying and permanent loyalties to people. To be creative in daily and leisure time is another step in emotional maturity as well as to contribute to the improvement of ones family, job and community.

Other attributes she listed as the ability to learn and profit from making mistakes and achieving success, to be free from fears, anxieties and tensions, and the ability to ride over rough spots in life and go on to one's destination.

At its business meeting the club named a committee to make arrangements for a joint meeting with Junior Mothers Club, March 28. Committee members are Mrs. G. Palmer Swenson, Mrs. Hart Smith and Mrs. Everett Bellinger.

Mrs. Melvin Reidle was hostess for Tuesday's meeting.

Art Group Hears Talk on Watercolors

Watercolor painting, its techniques, materials and methods were topics Mrs. Jess Taylor discussed at Monday night's meeting of the local chapter of Washington Artists Association. Stressing the fact that freedom is the charm of watercolor work and that the most successful watercolors are painted quickly and lightly, Mrs. Taylor illustrated her talk with colored prints and several originals by northwest artists.

And although he paints in oils, she reviewed "Painting as a Pastime" by Winston Churchill, recommending it for amateurs and professionals who work in any medium. Excerpts which Mrs. Taylor read from his book expressed an amateur's satisfaction in customarily rounded Churchillian prose.

At the meeting at KONP studios Ellen Quam, chairman for the American Association of University Women sponsoring group, discussed plans for the 35th annual exhibit of northwest artists which is coming to Port Angeles March 26. Members of the local WAA will assist in morning tours of visiting schoolchildren. John Lewis, president, will act as master of ceremonies at the floor show planned for March 27.

Mrs. Paul Flint was a guest at Monday night's meeting.

For the chair officers the election was a "move up," they having served in subordinate positions for the past year. Kish was elevated from the position of esquire. Glenn, Cosser and Epperson were reelected and Dailey takes the trusteeship made vacant with the expiration of Dan Robertson's term. All were elected without opposition.

A visit of Grand Exalted Ruler Emmett Anderson of Tacoma, scheduled for March 23, has been postponed to an indefinite date, Exalted Ruler Walter Gedelman announced.

Yup, Dynamite Can Shake Earth

WOBURN, Mass. —(AP)— A large "don't-do-it-again" sign was out today for the somewhat unpopular gents who touched off an earthquake that shook up sections of two Boston suburbs: Woburn and Winchester.

It established on thing, definitely. Seven tons of dynamite can make a real earthquake. The Harvard University seismograph station, many miles away, established that, scientifically, after the 14 thousand-pound succession blasts were let loose in a crushed stone quarry here yesterday.

But seismograph recordings weren't necessary to prove it to residents here. A thousand children at a church lenten service were terrified. Women became hysterical in their homes.

Angry residents who marched on city hall and threatened to march to the state house in Boston had additional evidence: cracked ceilings, walls, chimneys, and a damaged hot water boiler.

Kaiser Empire Includes 44 Big Plants

By Ralph H. Heppe

OAKLAND, Calif.—(AP) — Kaiser industries, making 140 products from aluminum to xylol, has decided to tell of its niche in the national economy.

In a pictorial booklet issued Thursday, it puts together for the first time the story of the war-nurtured industrial empire of Henry J. Kaiser and associates.

Here are some of the claims of the industrial group:

It produces and sells annually a half billion dollars worth of products and services.

Payrolls exceed $128,000,000.

Annual purchases are in excess of $60,000,000.

Employes number more than 46,000.

The 44 Kaiser plants are scattered from Baton Rouge to Spokane, and from Oakland to Bristol, Pa. They include, the booklet says:

The west's largest cement plant.

One of the nation's three largest producers of aluminum.

The Pacific Coast's only integrated steel plant, with a capacity of 1,130,000 tons of ingots annually.

The only aluminum foil rolling mill west of the Mississippi.

Products, to name a few, are: Aluminum and automobiles, brick and bathtubs, cement and creosote, gypsum and gravel, garage doors, kitchen sinks, sand and steel and chemicals such as toluol and tyll.

There are other activities, too, such as: Eleven hospitals and clinics, home building, engineering, heavy construction and mining.

Then there is a steamship company to transport bulk cement and a 52-mile standard guage, private railroad to haul iron ore for the steel plant at Fontana, Calif.

In heavy construction, the group points to work on Grand Coulee dam, Bonneville dam, the Long Beach and Los Angeles breakwaters, the Hoover dam and other projects of similar scope.

Kaiser, founding genius back of the organization, is the son of a German immigrant family, one of four children. Born at Sprout Brook, N.Y., on May 9, 1882, he left school at the age of 13 to go to work.

He started out as a cash boy and salesman for a New York dry goods store. At a restless age he turned to the Pacific northwest to enter the hardware selling field.

By 1914 he had formed his first company, engaged in paving operations in British Columbia.

The great western dams, products of the 1930's, found Kaiser joining with other construction companies to build these immense works—Hoover dam, Bonneville dam and Grand Coulee.

Jefferson County

(Port Townsend Leader)

Courthouse Insured

Jefferson county commissioners have insured the county court house for $160,000, the first time the structure has been insured in 20 years. The decision to place the insurance was made because fliers take a dive at the building with airplanes, evidently to see what time it is by the big clock in the tower.

Child Shot

Eight-year-old Lexie Anciaux of Hadlock was badly wounded early this week when shot by a gun over which she and her 11-year-old brother were scuffling. The bullet penetrated her stomach.

Amphib Maneuvers

Plans are underway for extensive amphibious maneuvers in the Puget sound area next September. Among troops participating will be those from Fort Worder. The exercise will continue about 10 days. The exact location has not yet been determined.

Troops Complimented

Units of Fort Worden's 532nd engineer boat and shore regiment and Fort Casey's 56th amphibious tank and tractor battalion were credited with outstanding performances in the actual landing on the island of Vieques which brought operations "Portex" to a close early this week. The troops from the two Jefferson county forts made up the beach party for the large scale combined operation in the Caribbean area. March 8 was "D-Day." Before the men return home they will visit Caribbean ports.

Bridge Hearing

The district engineer of the corps of engineers, U. S. army, will have a hearing in his Seattle office Tuesday, April 11, in connection with a proposal to build a bridge on Portage canal to connect the Jefferson county mainland with Indian island.

More Housing Needed

Transfer of several hundred troops from Fort Casey to Fort Worden soon will create a new demand for housing in Port Townsend.

Sales Tax Needed To Finance Welfare, Olzendam Declares

TACOMA—(AP)—State Social Security Director Roderic Olzendam said yesterday that if a special legislative session is called he will ask for a one-cent increase in the sales tax to finance the welfare program.

He added that he did not think the people of Washington are in any mood to pay more taxes.

Olzendam spoke at a meeting of commissioners from seven counties They were attending a session of the peninsula district of their state association.

The director's sales tax comment was made after several commissioners urged that a special session be called. They expressed the belief that it is the only way to assure financing of initiative 172 for the rest of the biennium.

Olzendam said that any income tax law which the legislature might enact would not be of much immediate help because of a certainty that it would be challenged in the courts. That could mean that it wouldn't do any good until the legal issues were settled.

Olzendam also replied to critics of the governor on the special session issue. He said the governor had been turned down by the 1949 legislature when he asked for a 2 per cent income tax to finance the welfare program under intitiative 172, and to provide funds for educational needs.

Olzendam told the county officials that on April 1 the social security department will have approximately $4,200,000 left in the general assistance fund.

"The money will be exhausted not later than July 1," he said, "and probably closer to June 1."

OLYMPIA —(AP)— Governor Langlie said yesterday he has not yet decided whether he will call a special session of the legislature.

And, he added, he has not formulated any policy to present to the legislature if it were called into special session.

Langlie made the statement in response to a request for comment on an address in Tacoma by his social security director, Roderic Olzendam.

DOUGLAS BACK TO WORK

Douglas, who came to Tucson several months ago to recuperate from injuries received when rolled on by a horse, is apparently in greatly improved health.

6 Die in Jail Fire In North Carolina

SPRAY, N. C.—(AP)—Six prisoners—five men and a woman—perished in the Spray jail early today after a mattress caught fire. Three were white and three Negroes.

The fire was found by Desk Sgt. P. L. McBride when he went to the second floor of the city hall building to lock up another prisoner.

All of the six who died had been charged with public drunkenness.

Police said there was a possibility that one of the six—all faced trial this morning—had deliberately set fire. The jail was only slightly damaged.

The victims were Lucille Wimbush, 30; Junior Yarborough, 22; and Marion Morrison, 25; all white; and Harvey Cole, 34; Joe W. Willis, 21 and Bonie Martin, 34; Negroes.

THIEF HAS DOUBLE TAKE

BUTTE, Mont.—(AP)—Robert Jones had this double hard luck story for police.

A portable radio and a shirt were stolen from his room while he slept. He traced the property to the operator of a boarding house who had purchased it, innocently. But, said the boarding house keeper sadly, just before Jones arrived the radio and shirt had been stolen again—apparently by the man who lifted them from the room.

CANARY SIGNALS SUCCESS

LONDON —(AP)— "Tosh has laid one egg."

This message brought comfort today to the admiralty. It came, after two weeks of silence, from a naval party making cold weather survival tests in the Arctic. Tosh is a canary being used in the tests. The admiralty commented:

"From the signal it is concluded that the canaries and the remainder of the party are in good spirits."

Laurel and Hardy Head for France

HOLLYWOOD — (AP) — Neglected by Hollywood, Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy will go to Paris to make their first picture after a five year screen absence.

"The deal sounds like the best we've had in years," Hardy said yesterday. "We have a good story, and that's important.

"We've had many Hollywood offers, but none have included good stories."

The comedians will leave next month for Paris, where the film will be made in English and French.

YAKIMA PLANT BURNS

YAKIMA —(AP)— The American Products Company rendering plant was destroyed by flames early today when fire fighters were hampered by lack of water. The loss has been estimated in excess of $175,000 by L. D. Krum, superintendent of the plant. Fat in the fire accelerated the rate of destruction.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Handy and Easy Are Both Wrong

Handy Peterson and Easy Roberts got in quite an argument the other day over at Fred's Garage talking about the best spot to fish up at Green Lake.

"Opposite the old sawmill is the best spot," says Handy. But Easy "pooh-pooh's" him. "I've seen the biggest fish caught off Cedar Point," says Easy. "I've been catching them there for years."

Then Fred goes into his office and brings out the biggest mounted rainbow trout you ever saw. "Bet that was caught at the sawmill," comments Handy. "Cedar Point," says Easy. "Well," says Fred, "you're both wrong. I caught this baby right out in the middle!"

From where I sit, there are always two (or more) sides to every story. Let's live and let live in the true American tradition of toleration. Your opinion is worth a lot, but so is the other fellow's—whether it's on politics, the best fishing spots, or whether he likes a temperate glass of beer and you like buttermilk.

Smoke Blamed for 5-Car Collision

TACOMA—(AP)—A five-car collision, which sent five persons to the hospital and caused damages estimated at $1,000, was blamed today on smoke clouds originating with chemical warefare maneuvers.

The multiple accident occurred yesterday afternoon on the Olympia-Tacoma highway paralleling Fort Lewis.

State Patrolmen Riley Bryant and Gordon Hendry said the thick smoke blanketed the highway and caused the cars to come to an abrupt stop. The five machines piled up end-to-end.

Three of the injured were held at the hospital for further treatment. Margaret Decraene, 74, of Centralia, suffered a broken nose, head injuries and lacerations. Enid Decraene received head injuries. C. F. Brady, 48, Tacoma, suffered a possible neck fracture.

Treated and released were Leola North, 50, of Bremerton, knee injuries, and Charles L. Decraene, 18, shock, cuts and bruises.

All Kinds of Scenes and People Go To Make Up a Lecture Tour

By Lois Crisler

There's just one thing my mind is full of this week. It's all the human stories we cannot tell.

For a sample I can indicate just this much of one story.

Last year when we passed this way, we called on a young couple expecting their first baby. The girl was grave and game.

This year she met us at the door with her dimpling son on her arm. She was nimble and gay.

Last year she and her husband were dreaming that some day they would have a boat and cruise the world's seas.

This year they bowled us over with the announcement that the boat was theirs—a 36-foot, ocean-worthy craft. It's name? "Some Day."

"Lots of people say they would like to do this, but they won't pay the price," the girl said.

Next October they're taking the baby and starting to see the world. The only thing they have to figure out between now and October—aside from learning navigation—is what to use for money for the next two years.

Anyway, they plan to live now, while they have the knee joints and hearts to do it. When they get old, they will retire and earn money.

But certainly the price they are game to pay for living now is too high for the prestige-and-luxury seekers.

Just the same, right now they are living in unexampled luxury. They live in a low building on a mountain top. All New England rolls away below them, shining with snow—off to the blue Presidential range on the horizon. Silence, wind, peace and beauty surround them.

Two of their rooms are filled with the big quiet machines the man has the skill to tend.

There's not a carpet, a rug, an easy chair or a davenport in the entire place. Just kitchen chairs, concrete floors and skis or the baby buggy.

ARTIST IN NEW YORK

Then there is Frans, the beloved artist friend of Cris, down in Brooklyn.

Frans dutifully made his money first, in the export-import business. Then he retired and became a painter, one who exhibits in important places and has one-man shows in the galleries.

In Frans' apartment the chairs are not drawn up before a fireplace. In fact, there is no fireplace.

Instead, the chairs are ranged before the wide windows. A pair of binoculars lies on the table. For it's the Port of New York that you look down on when you sit in one of Fran's chairs.

Down there at the left lies Governor's island, crowded with buildings.

Across the channel from it rises a rather well-known piece of sculpture. A darkish, robed figure holding up a torch. It shows up pretty good-sized even from here.

Next come stacks and banks of buildings and towers shooting up from there—the lower end of Manhattan.

Today is Saturday. "A bad day," Frans says. Most vessels try to leave port by Friday and they try not to come in before Monday.

This is because dock workers must be paid time and a half on Saturday and double time on Sunday.

Evidently one ship failed to get away on Friday though. "Here comes the Queen Elizabeth," Frans said quietly.

A big prow poked out from behind Manhattan. Two red smokestacks slanted sharply backward.

Cris commented, "Her flag is at half mast."

"They're taking it down," Frans replied. "Saluting some one in those buildings over there. Maybe in the Cunard offices."

The big dark blue flag slid down an angling rope at the rear of the boat. I wondered what men were standing behind plate glass windows somewhere over there, looking with pride or experienced indifference as the conventional courtesy was offered to them. Tangled human threads we would never know.

The whole length of the vessel glided into sight. The blue flag ascended. Two other smaller pennons flew from the mast tips—the courtesy flag of the country of destination and the house flag of the liner.

I felt as excited as if I were fulfilling my own childhood dream of "going abroad."

In the quiet room around us, where we watched, hung Frans' oils.

I got myself a good lesson in art criticism that ought to teach me to keep my mouth shut after this.

I looked around at the canvasses as delicately as if walking on eggs. I knew it wasn't safe for an outsider to comment on paintings. But I did think of one apparently simple, safe remark to make. I made it. "The other pictures are nice," I said, "but I like this one best."

"I bought that one," Frans replied.

LIFE ON THE SUBWAY

From Frans' place we drove straight to the home of a former student of mine. A big house in 60 acres of woods. Forest, they call it, here near New York.

I don't know how big the living room was but Cris paced off the front porch and reported that it was 100 feet long and 16 feet wide. A little bigger to sweep off than the back porch at Humes ranch.

When we went up the great stairway to bed, a fire blazed in the fireplace in our bedroom. On a stand beside it stood a big glass bowl with a candle burning inside and forsythia in water around the base of the candle.

The room was at the end of one wing of the house. On three sides of it, windows four feet wide looked out into the "forest."

Just for contrast, in New York city our hotel room was on the 23rd floor of a residence hotel on Broadway itself.

Our window here looked out above sunlit towers and over the Hudson river.

The river was half full of ice, which commuted up and down with the tides. In the morning the white floes moved down. In the afternoon they flowed upstream.

Cris had a great time with the subway systems. From his point of view they were a game and puzzle to solve. He felt victorious when he licked them.

He has never given a glance at a newspaper crossword puzzle. But this crosstown puzzle was on a scale and of a kind that interested him.

He was pleased to find that he kept his sense of direction even underground.

He also enjoyed my total bewilderment. He towed me in and out and up and down, and fought my inclination to ask passing strangers which way to go. He considered it cheating to ask directions. I cheated. This hurt his pride.

When he successfully dished me out at our destination, his eyes glittered dark with pleasure. "It's fun finding your way around in the rat-holes," he said.

There is not just one subway system. There are three. They interlace underground. Also there is not just one level. There is layer excavated below layer.

All New Yorkers lead a double life. Their surface life and their subterranean life. The horrifying thing is that they take the latter just as much for granted as the former.

All over town are rat-holes leading down into the windy bowels of the solid rock. You drop a dime into a turnstile, lunge against the dirty worn wooden barrier and burst through into the convenient horror of subterranean caverns, where you can travel the rest of your life if you want, without paying another cent. Like a motorized angleworm darting around unfed, at 60 miles per hour, in roaring, chilly, electric-lighted tunnels.

You stand on a concrete reef. Below you are tracks. A roar begins far off. Then a whole train shoots past you, apparently without slacking speed.

It halts instantaneously. Doors fling open all along its length. No visible brain is in charge. No conductor. You and the other people enter like filings sucked by a magnet and with equal courtesy.

When the doors take a notion, they snap shut. If you are lucky, all of you is inside.

However the doors are compelled to play by girls' rules. Their jaws are lined with rubber flaps. This takes some of the sport out of it. Like muzzling a cougar hound.

The mentality of the people who like it here puzzles me. I keep trying to figure it out.

When we were leaving our hotel, I stood by the bellhop with our bags, waiting for the elevator. I asked him, "How do you like it here in New York?"

He replied, "I've lived here all my life. Too busy for you?"

It was useless to tell him that I myself lived in paradise. He had no standard for comparison.

It sounds egregious but it is a simple fact that to a westerner, New Yorkers seem inexperienced and ignorant.

FRIENDS SEND FRIENDS

Our showing in the First Congregational church of Hyde Park, Boston, was a Port Angeles homecoming.

The mother of Captain Eastman of the coast guard cutter Winona drove down from Derry, Mass., to see the pictures.

The parents of Lt. Gould of the coast guard base on Ediz hook were there. That night we were guests in their hospitable home.

Others from Port Angeles who sent friends or relatives to this or recent showings are Mrs. and Miss Schernek, Graham Coolidge, Charles Webster, Frances Tait, Herman Swanson and Mrs. Florence Johnson, also the Irvins and Mrs. Adams.

In Bridgeport, Conn., we stopped by to call on the parents of Lt.-Cmdr. John McCubbin. His father was in Florida on business. We located Mrs. McCubbin attending a women voters' meeting at the big beautiful plant of the Methodist church.

Down in Stamford, Conn., we stayed overnight with the Ben Crislers.

Last year we admired their artful Victorian living room. This year they proudly escorted us down to see their new game room.

Just as an antidote for the living room, they made an African jungle of the game room, with zebra skins on the floor. The "throne room" was done in gold. Even to the toilet seat.

The evening we showed at the Westchester country club, we set up our equipment the first thing. Then we looked up the room that had been assigned for our use till showing time, at 9 p.m.

We gave each other a wicked glance when the "room" turned out to be not one but two elegant rooms, with a bath off the little connecting hall between them.

Cris naturally got dressed first and sprawled on one of the twin beds in one of the rooms. Instantly he told me to try a bed too.

I don't know how they did it, but it was the most luxurious bed I ever lay on. Not soft, not hard, just luscious and receptive.

We were dinner guests of the chairman and his wife in the club grill. A balcony furnished with red chairs surrounded a dining pit below.

It was one of those dinners where you begin with blue-point oysters raw on the half shell and wind up an hour and a half later with petits fours and coffee.

There was nothing inflexible about the serving. You order, say, creamed cauliflower. Do you get an arbitrary little dish of cauliflower slapped down by your plate, take it or leave it?

Not at all. A man bends over beside you with a steaming little silver casserole holding about two generous servings. "Would you like cauliflower?" he inquires delicately, as if the whole affair were still subject to your whim. He spoons out as much as you want.

After this service I realize that most restaurants where Cris and I eat are simply automats with velvet gloves over the steel trap.

The difference between this swank club and the South Shore country club in Chicago was interesting. This had not the vast vista and the satiny patina of the Chicago club. It seemed older, with richer, quieter, more abundant and expensive furnishings.

SOCIETY BY THE LAYER

Thinking things over that night, Cris said, "There are more layers in society back east and they are thinner layers than out west."

"Like a French pastry," I inserted helpfully.

Cris went on. "Out west, there used to be only a few layers. Maybe only two or three altogether. They were thick layers. Of course they're getting thinner out west all the time. Here in the east the layers are thin and hard."

We felt with interest the sharp edges and pressures of the layers as we glided up and down among them.

Sometimes the pressures showed up in very tiny details.

For instance, at the Westchester country club, we mentioned to a woman that we drove our panel truck on the parkways.

Her face turned red. "Commercial vehicles are not allowed on the parkways," she said, keeping her voice under control. "Surely you saw the signs everywhere."

To her it was evidently not a matter of mere law enforcement but of her own social status.

Far off in another zone of the financial and social scale, we met the editor of a magazine for lecturers.

He had attended our lecture at Columbia university.

"I saw your enclosed station wagon outside," he said with elegant euphemism.

"Truck," I snapped. He looked at me speechlessly. He had been trying to give us status.

That night when we were alone, Cris chuckled. "I got all the status I want right now. If I want any more status, I'll go out an' dig some. I'll dig just enough status for one meal. That way I'll always have fresh status."

Some 20,000 pioneers pushed through Cumberland Gap in one season shortly after it was opened.

Noted Piano Duo of Bartlett and Robinson To Appear Here in Tuesday Night Concert

The Community Concerts Association will present a noted piano duo as the final attraction of the 1949-50 season, in a concert at the Olympian Theatre Tuesday at 8:15 p.m.

In this concert local music lovers will hear Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson, whose Columbia recordings have made their name familiar to music lovers everywhere.

Touring with their own pianos, the two give over a hundred concerts a year. They have appeared before audiences in Latin America, South Africa, all of Europe, the United States and Canada. In addition to their own concerts they have been guest artists with Arturo Toscanini and such orchestras as the New York Philharmonic, Cincinnati Symphony, Chicago Symphony and Rochester Philharmonic.

Ethel Bartlett was born in England, and began her study at the age of ten. Noted as one of England's most beautiful women, her portrait hangs in many a British art gallery. Rae Robertson was born in Scotland, receiving his M.A. at Edinburgh University.

As students under Tobias Matthay at the Royal Academy of Music in London they met, fell in love, and were married. The rising young pianists solved the problem of their individual careers by combining their talents in two-piano recitals. Their rise to fame was based on a unique repertoire ranging from original music for two keyboards through the best transcribed works to new scores by leading composers written especially for them.

In the words of the Boston Herald, they are "the best beloved piano duettists in the world."

Admission to Tuesday night's concert is limited to holders of season tickets.

Senate Postpones Price Control Debate

WASHINGTON —(AP)— A senate argument over tightening up government price supports on potatoes and liberalizing controls on cotton and peanuts was put off today until Monday.

Chairman Elmer Thomas (D-Okla) of the agriculture committee said many senators who could not be present today had urged him to delay debate on the house-passed compromise farm bill.

The legislation is expected to draw heavy fire in the senate.

Senator Anderson (D-NM) already has urged the senate to show "great caution" before approving the compromise affecting price supports for three major crops.

'Paul Bunyan' Gives Forestry Bookshelf To School Library

Paul Bunyan, with a packboard full of books, stormed into the Roosevelt high school assembly this morning and gave a 12-volume forest products book shelf to the Roosevelt high school library.

Paul Bunyan, the great logging character, was impersonated by Glendon Loftus of the Crown Zellerbach Corporation, and was greeted by Charles H. Willison of the CZ timber department. The two men delivered the books to Milan Erwin, student body president.

The act was carried on with gruff Paul Bunyan, Willison and Erwin exchanging much chatter about the use of the books by the students. Erwin admitted he can not read but will enjoy the illustrations.

Forester Willison explained that the books are a gift from the Crown Zellerbach Corporation in cooperation with the West Coast Lumbermen's Association. More than 250 Oregon, Washington and California schools have received the books from nearby forest products companies.

He explained that the books have been carefully selected by northwest educators and forest experts to afford a wide range of authentic information on the forest products industry. The books, the forester said, will be helpful to students preparing for essay and oratorical contests.

Included in the book shelf are writings of northwest authors, "Burning An Empire" and "Tall Timber" by Stewart Holbrook. James Stevens has "Paul Bunyan Stories" and "Timber";; Paul Hosmer, "Now We're Logging'" and Alfred Powers, "Redwood Country."

Other volumes are two by the American Forestry Association; a textbook on Pacific Coast trees and on the Cascade mountains; "This Fascinating Lumber Business" by Stanley Horn and "The Lost Woods," a natural history of the forests.

A thirteenth book, "Trees," annual publication of the department of agriculture, has been added to the shelf by Crown Zellerbach Corporation.

Local Youth to Show Ceramic Sculpture

Credited for "creating something new in ceramics" is Don Hyde, Roosevelt high school graduate and son of Capt. and Mrs. Loring Hyde.

Don, student at Central Washington College of Education, has devised a type of ceramic sculpture to express movement and line which art critics in Seattle refer to as "Ballerinas Mobiles." Enthusiasm for his work has spread to the University of Washington, and 10 pieces of his sculpture will go on display at the Henry Art Gallery March 29.

Hyde got his idea for this type of sculpture by studying pictures of dancers. His work is fashioned in such a way that parts of the figures may be moved to suit the taste of the individuals and to capture the movement of the dance.

The body of the figures, of clay and terra cotta, are baked in an electric oven. Heavy brass wire holds the parts together. His one-man show at Seattle will last for two weeks.
