Re: Using Online Tools to Get that Job!

Looking for a new job, or a better job? The library is a good place to start your search! Beginning Thursday, January 12, the Port Angeles Main Library will offer a free series of hands-on computer workshops focused on teaching participants how to effectively use online tools and apply basic computer skills for productive job seeking.

Dr. Betty Marcoux, recently retired University of Washington Information School faculty member, will facilitate the workshops, which will feature hands-on computer instruction using the Library's public computers. "Creating a good resume and cover letter and knowing where to look online, can make a big difference in your job search," states Marcoux.

Job Seeking Online will be offered Thursday, January 12, from 9am to 10am.

Resume Writing will be offered Wednesday, January 18, from 9am to 10am.

Developing a Cover Letter will be offered Thursday, February 9, from 9am to 10am.

Marketing Yourself via the Computer will be offered Thursday, February 16, from 9am to 10am.

Participants can elect to attend any or all of the workshops, but space is limited to 15 computers, so pre-registration is required. Two people may elect to share a computer; please indicate this preference when you register.

To register, or for more information, call the Port Angeles Library at 360.417.8500, or email LCorder@nols.org. The Port Angeles Library is located at 2210 South Peabody Street. For more information go to www.nols.org and click on “Events.”
