The Danish Girl by David Ebershoff will be discussed at 4pm on Wednesday, October 25, at the Sequim Branch of the North Olympic Library System (NOLS).

“This debut novel...offers the fictionalized telling of the first man to surgically become a woman. The novel is set in the 1920s and 1930s of Europe and California, where painters Einar Wegener and his wife, Greta, struggle to understand and cope with the emotional and physical impact of Einar's change into Lili. The novel is not about the shock of changing from male to female but about the struggle to transform one's life. More interesting than Einar's transformation into Lili is Greta, who is the emotional center of the story. Her development from a reactionary child of wealthy parents into a strong woman and successful painter is interwoven into her husband's development into a woman.” - Booklist Reviews
