About Javaka Steptoe

Steptoe won the 2017 Caldecott Medal and the Coretta Scott King Illustrator Award for his book Radiant Child: The Story of Young Artist Jean-Michel Basquiat, published by Little, Brown & Company. Other work by Steptoe include In Daddy's Arms I am Tall: African Americans Celebrating Fathers, Do You Know What I'll Do?, The Jones Family Express, and Amiri and Odette: A Love Story.

Steptoe was inspired in part by his father, award-winning author and children's book illustrator, John Steptoe (Mufaro's Beautiful Daughters, The Story of Jumping Mouse, Stevie). Utilizing everyday objects from aluminum plates to pocket lint, and sometimes illustrating with a jigsaw and paint, he delivers reflective and thoughtful collage creations filled with vitality, playful energy, and strength. Through the use of family as a recurring theme, Steptoe creates artwork that celebrates the richness of our collective past and memory. His artistry is a reflection of his commitment to children's education. As Steptoe explains, art is survival, it is ingenuity, critical thinking, and self-expression and fosters self-esteem and empathy.

His Caldecott Award winning work, Radiant Child: The Story of Young Artist Jean-Michel Basquiat focuses on the life of renowned artist Jean-Michel Basquiat and explores the creative process. Steptoe blended his style with his interpretations of Basquiat's work, creating a unique and powerful tribute. The book was also awarded the Coretta Scott King Illustrator Award. Basquiat, who died at the age of 27 in 1988 made headlines recently after the sale of one of his paintings, Untitled, sold for $111 million. Steptoe currently lives in New York City.

Prior to the all ages-art class, Steptoe will speak to local elementary school students visiting the Port Angeles Main Library about art and his career.

Funding for this program has been generously provided by the Port Angeles Friends of the Library.
