Re: Exotic Animal Conservation at the Forks Branch Library

Tiger World Endangered Wildlife Preserve is a non-profit animal conservation and educational facility dedicated to the rescue, rehabilitation and preservation of tigers and other exotic animals. Learn about their efforts by taking a digital behind-the-scenes tour at a unique all-ages program at the Forks Branch Library on Wednesday, April 25 at 2:30pm.

Director of Wildlife Erin Carey will be available via video chat to lead a remote tour of Tiger World. She will answer questions about the animals and the work being done at this special facility. Local Forks resident Berlinda James will also discuss her experiences as a Tiger World volunteer.

About Tiger World Endangered Wildlife Preserve

Tiger World was founded in 2007 with a dream to participate globally in conservation and education of endangered and threatened animals. Tiger World purchased a closed down zoo and opened to the public July 1, 2008 in Rockwell, North Carolina. Tiger World began with just a few species of cats and primates and has expanded to include over fifty-four various species, including fourteen endangered animals. Reaching over 100,000 visitors annually, including over 30,000 school kids, teaching people about endangered animals is a passion of Tiger World. To learn about the work of Tiger World Endangered Wildlife Preserve visit www.tigerworld.us. For more information about this and other events happening at the Library, visit www.nols.org, call 360.374.6402, or email Discover@nols.org. The Forks Branch Library is located at 171 South Forks Avenue.
