Too much of good Ol' Sol inevitably creates the dreaded fire hazards—resulting in a four-year course which will lead the most attractive in the most attract to the D.D.S. degree in 1969.

So, it was quite a relief when Mr. Jupiter Pluvius made his appearance Monday and blessed us with a bit of liquid sunshine.

Did anything come out of the Hoh River oil drilling? Never heard nary a word on the subject. The search for oil has always been a risky, long-shot undertaking—the odds against the driller are trementiced.

To the Quileute Tribal Council of La Push wish to extend their appreciation to all the resort owners and the operators of the fish dock—for their fine cooperation in conserving water during the frightening water shortage last weekend.

They say that people like boats, toot loudest, when they are in a fog. Ouch!

To the Quileute Tribal Council of La Push will be refreshments and a surprise package.

Just as an example, I was reading about a project in Oregon where drillers are searching for oil off the rugged coast of that state. The heart of the search is a $5 million barge, costing the company $17,000 a day, regardless of the amount of drilling that is accomplished.—And in inclement weather, work must stop making the cost still $15,000.—
